The three following Letters are written about the Diſorders caus'd in the Church of York by the Archbiſhop: He commits the Care and Reformation of that Church to Simon Dean of the Chapter; and foraſmuch as the Archbiſhop had appeal'd to the holy See, before the Biſhop of Lincoln exhibited an Information againſt him, he allows him Time to come to Rome till the Feſtival of St. Martin; but in caſe he do not then appear, he orders the Biſhop of Lincoln to proceed againſt him, and in the mean While ſuſpends him from the Government of his Province.

In the fourteenth, he orders Hubert Archbiſhop of Canterbury, to oblige thoſe who had taken upon them the Croſs for the Expedition to the Holy-Land, to ſet forward on their Journey, at leaſt, unleſs they were prevented by a lawful Impediment.

This Letter is follow'd by that of Philip Biſhop of Beauvais, written to Pope Celeſtin; in which that Prelate complains, That the King of England enter'd the Territories of Beauvaiſis with his Forces in a hoſtile Manner, and took him Priſoner. The Pope return'd an Anſwer in the following Letter, That he had no Reaſon to make a Complaint of the Misfortune that befel him, ſince he preſum'd to take up Arms contrary to the Duty of his Profeſſion; beſides, that the Conduct of the King of England ought not to be blam'd, in regard that the King of France had unjuſtly taken from him divers Towns, contrary to the ſolemn Promiſe that he had made to that Prince not to commit any Hoſtilities againſt him, till his return to his Dominions: That inſtead of performing that Promiſe, he determin'd to take the Advantage of his Confinement: And that the King of England being at laſt ſet at Liberty, had good Reaſon to oppoſe the Enterprizes of the King of France.

In the ſixteenth, he enjoyns the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Biſhop of Lincoln, and the Abbot of St. Edmund, to re-eſtabliſh in one of the Churches of England, the Monks that were turn'd out under Colour of the Pope's Bull got by Surprize, upon a falſe Exhibition.

In the laſt, directed to William King of Scotland, he confirms the Rights and Privileges of the Churches of that Kingdom.

CHAP. X.

A Relation of the ſeveral Conteſts that Thomas Becket Archbiſhop of Canterbury, had with Henry II. King of England.

Conteſts between Thomas Becket and Henry II. King of England.

His Life before he was Archbiſhop.

THomas Becket was a Native of the City of London, the Capital of England: His Father was nam'd Gilbert and his Mother Matilda. Gilbert, in his Youth, took upon him the Croſs for the Holy War, but upon his Arrival at Jeruſalem, he was taken Priſoner and made a Slave by the Saracens. During his Impriſonment, he found Means to obtain the Favour of the Admiral's Daughter, in whoſe Houſe he was confin'd, and ſhe conceiv'd ſo great an Affection for him, that Gilbert having at laſt made his Eſcape, ſhe travell'd to London on purpoſe to meet him; was baptiz'd there, and afterwards marry'd to Gilbert, by whom ſhe had our Thomas, who was born A. D. 1119. Before his Birth, Gilbert return'd to the Holy-Land, where he continu'd three Years and a half, having left his Wife in England: This Gentlewoman took great Care of the Education of her Son, who in the very firſt blooming of his Youth, ſhew'd the Marks of what might be expected from him in a riper Age. He began his Studies at London, and after having loſt both his Father and Mother, compleated them at Paris. Upon his return to England, he was employ'd in the Management of Affairs, and put himſelf into the Service of Theobald Archbiſhop of Canterbury. At that Time, Henry Biſhop of Winchester, Brother to King Stephen, was Legate in England, who abus'd his Quality and Authority, treating the other Biſhops, and even his Metropolitan, with intolerable Arrogancy. Thomas adviſ'd Theobald to ſhake off the Yoke, and was ſent by him to Pope Celeſtin II. to obtain a Revocation of Henry's Commiſſion; inſomuch, that being arriv'd at Rome, he negotiated that Affair ſo ſucceſsfully, that the Pope depriv'd Henry of his Dignity, and conferr'd it on the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. Thomas was no ſooner return'd to England, but Theobald entruſted him with the Management of the Affairs of his Church, made him Archdeacon of it ſome time after, and beſtow'd on him many Benefices. Afterwards King Stephen dying, and Henry II. Duke of Normandy ſucceeding him, Thomas was conſtituted Chancellor of England, A. D. 1158. and obtain'd the Adminiſtration of the publick Affairs of the whole Kingdom.

His Election to the Archbiſhoprick of Canterbury.

At laſt he was nominated by the King to the Archbiſhoprick of Canterbury in 1161. After the Death of Theobald, and was ordain'd on Whitſunday in the ſame Year. This Prelate was no ſooner advanc'd to that high Station, but he vigorouſly apply'd himſelf to the maintaining of the Intereſts and Liberties of the Church. In the Beginning of his Government, he found Means to wreſt the Eccleſiaſtical Revenues out of the Hands of the Noblemen who had uſurp'd them, and perſuaded the King to fill up the Epiſcopal Sees of Hereford and Worceſter, which had been vacant for a long Time. But it was difficult for him who had undertaken ſtifly to maintain the Rights of the Church, to avoid falling out with his Prince about particular Intereſts; upon which Account, he was obliged to reſign the Office of Chancellor. After that Step, he made a Demand again, with much Reſolution, of the Revenues and Rights which he pretended to belong to the Church of Canterbury, and which were in the Poſſeſſion of the King and of the Nobility: He vehemently oppos'd the Outrages and Exactions, with which the great Lords were wont to oppreſs the People and the Clergy: He endeavour'd to aboliſh the Cuſtom that was introduc'd in England, of adjudging to Princes the Revenues of vacant Churches, and of deferring to ſupply thoſe Churches with Miniſters, in order to enjoy them longer; and he aſſerted, That Clergymen, guilty of Miſdemeanours, were not under the Juriſdiction of Civil Magiſtrates; but that they ought to be brought before the Biſhop, to be degraded and condemned to Eccleſiaſtical Penalties, without delivering them up to the Secular Power; nevertheleſs, if in Proceſs of Time they committed new Crimes, the Secular Juſtice might then apprehend them, becauſe they were no longer to be look'd upon as Clergymen.

The Original of the Conteſts between the King and him.

The obſtinate Defence of the laſt Article, chiefly caus'd Thomas to incur the King's Diſpleaſure, and gave Occaſion to the Quarrel: For a Canon of Bedford, nam'd Philip Brock, having abus'd one of the King's Officers, before whom he was ſummon'd, that Prince determin'd to bring him to condign Puniſhment. The Archbiſhop ſuſpended the Canon from his Eccleſiaſtical Functions and Benefice for ſeveral Years, but the King not being ſatisfied with thoſe Proceedings, requir'd that he might be put into the Hands of the Secular Juſtice: Upon the Archbiſhop's Refuſal to do it, the King held an Aſſembly of the Biſhops of his Kingdom, in the Abby of Weſtminſter; where he made a Remonſtrance, that it was expedient for the publick Benefit, that Clergymen ſhould be try'd by the Civil Magiſtrates, and condemned to afflictive Puniſhments, by reaſon that the Scandal of Degradation did not at all move thoſe, whom the Sanctity of their Function could not reſtrain from the committing of Crimes. Thomas, who was at the Head of that Aſſembly, after having debated with the other Biſhops, reply'd to the King, That the Biſhops could not relinquiſh a Right, which was granted to them by Henry I. his Grand-Father, and confirm'd by the ſolemn Promiſe of King Stephen; and that they entreated his Majeſty to call to mind the Oath that he took on the Day of his Coronation, to maintain the Church in its Liberty and Rights. Whereupon the King demanded whether they were diſpoſed to obſerve the Cuſtoms and Conſtitutions of his Kingdom? Thomas reply'd, that they were ready to do it, provided their Rights were ſecur'd, Salvo ordine ſuo, and all the Prelates made the ſame Anſwer, except the Biſhop of Chicheſter, nam'd Henry, who chang'd the laſt Words, and ſaid, that he would punctually obſerve thoſe Cuſtoms.

Conteſts between Thomas Becket and Henry II. King of England.

King Henry was extremely incens'd at the Reſtriction they put on their Promiſe, after he had ſo often preſs'd them to no Purpoſe, to engage abſolutely to obſerve the Cuſtoms of the Kingdom without any Limitation, and left the Aſſembly, quite tranſported with Anger. The next Day, he ſent to demand of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Grants for all the Governments that were conferr'd on him, whilſt he was Chancellor of England, and ſpeedily departed from London, ſhewing evident Marks of his high Diſpleaſure againſt the Biſhops. Inſomuch that their Dread of his Anger and of the ill Effects that it might produce, and the Sollicitations which that Prince caus'd to be made, induc'd many of them to yield to give Satisfaction to his Majeſty, and theſe us'd their utmoſt Endeavours to bring the others to the ſame Temper. Thomas ſtood to his Reſolution for a long Time, but being at laſt overcome by the frequent and preſſing Entreaties of the Prelates and of his beſt Friends, he ſuffer'd himſelf to be prevail'd upon; went to meet the King at Oxford, and promis'd to obſerve the Cuſtoms of the Kingdom for the Future, without any Manner of Reſtriction.

An Aſſembly at Clarendon.

The King to render this Declaration more authentick, call'd an Aſſembly of the Biſhops and Noblemen of the Kingdom at Clarendon, A. D. 1164. in which he oblig'd the Archbiſhop of Canterbury and the other Prelates to take an Oath, that they would carefully obſerve the Cuſtoms of the Kingdom, and at the ſame Time, caus'd a verbal Proceſs to be drawn up containing the Articles of thoſe Cuſtoms that were to be acknowledg'd by the Biſhops, and which were ſixteen in Number. The firſt imports, That when any Conteſts ariſe between the Laity and Clergy, about the Preſentation to Benefices, they ought to be regulated in the King's Court: The ſecond, That the Revenues of Mannors depending on the King's Demeans cannot be made over to Churches, without his Majeſty's Conceſſion: The third, that the Clergymen accuſed or impeached by the King's Officers, ſhall be oblig'd to repair to his Court, to the end that Enquiry may be made, whether they ought to be tried there, or whether they ought to be ſent back to the Eccleſiaſtical Courts of Judicature; and that being thus ſent back, the King's Chief Juſtice ſhall depute a Perſon to be Witneſs of the Proceedings of that Court: That if the Clergyman be convicted, or confeſs his Crime, the Church cannot have a Right any longer to protect him. The fourth Article declares, That the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, and the King's other Subjects cannot depart the Kingdom, without his Majeſty's Leave, and in caſe it be granted, they ſhall give him good Aſſurance, that they will not act contrary to his Intereſt: The fifth, That excommunicated Perſons ſhall not be obliged to give Security, for their continuing in the Country, but only to ſtand to the Judgment of the Church, when it ſhall be thought fit to grant them Abſolution: The ſixth, That no other Informers or Witneſſes ſhall be admitted againſt Laicks but ſuch as are allow'd by the Laws. The ſeventh, That all thoſe who hold any Lands of the King, or are of the Number of his Officers, cannot be excommunicated, nor their Territories ſuſpended from Divine Service, unleſs due

Conteſts between Thomas Becket and Henry II. King of England.

due Notice be firſt given to the King or to his Chief Juſtice, to the end that that which belongs to the Juriſdiction of the King's Court, may be tried there, and that which ought to be tried in the Eccleſiaſtical, may be referr'd to it; The eighth, That an Appeal may be brought from the Archdeacon's Court to the Biſhop's, and from the latter to that of the Archbiſhop, and if the Archbiſhop has not done Juſtice, Application may be made to the King, to the end that the Cauſe may be decided in the Archbiſhop's Court, without Liberty to enter an Appeal, unleſs by his Majeſty's ſpecial allowance: The ninth, That in caſe a Conteſt ariſe, between a Clerk and a Layman, about an Eſtate, which one aſſerts to depend on the Church, and the other on a temporal Lordſhip, the Chief Juſtice ſhall ſend for twelve Aſſiſtants, to examine to what Juriſdiction it ought to be appropriated; that if they judge it to belong to the Church, the Cauſe ſhall be tried in the Eccleſiaſtical Court, but if they find it to belong to the Lay-Fee, it ſhall be referr'd to the Cognizance of the Lord of the Manor. The tenth, That if any Perſon be cited by his Archdeacon or his Biſhop to anſwer to an Accuſation, and he refuſe to appear, he may be ſuſpended, but cannot be excommunicated, till the Chief Juſtice of the Place has ſummon'd him to make his Appearance; and that if that Judge ſhould neglect to do his Duty, the King ſhall take the Matter in Hand: The eleventh does not relate to Eccleſiaſtical Affairs: The twelfth ordains, That the King ſhall enjoy the Revenues of the Archbiſhopricks, Biſhopricks, Abbies and Priories during a Vacancy; that to fill it up the King ſhall iſſue out a Conge d' Elire to the moſt eminent Men of the Place, who ſhall carry on the Election in his Chappel, with the King's Conſent, and by the Advice of the Lords, who ſhall be conven'd for that Purpoſe, and that the Perſon elected ſhall do Homage to the King before he be ordain'd: The thirteenth Article imports, That the King ſhall cauſe Juſtice to be done to the Biſhops, and the Biſhops to the King: The fourteenth, That Cattle ſeiz'd on for a Treſpaſs ſhall not be detain'd by the Clergy, but put into the Cuſtody of the Officers of the Royal Court: The fifteenth, That Courts of Judicature ſhall be kept by the King's Juſtices: The ſixteenth, That the Sons of the Peaſants ſhall not be ordain'd, but with the Conſent of their Lords. Theſe Articles were not ſign'd by the Biſhops, but were acknowledg'd in the Aſſembly, and three Copies of them were taken, viz. one for the King, the ſecond for the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the third for the Archbiſhop of York.

The Archbiſhop of Canterbury repents of having ſigned the Articles.

The Archbiſhop of Canterbury being retir'd, his Friends and Domeſticks began to murmur: Some of them excus'd him, in regard that he could not act otherwiſe, by reaſon of ſo unhappy a Conjuncture of Affairs, and others complain'd on the contrary, That all the Immunities of the Church of England were ruin'd by that Compliance. His Croſs-bearer who was more bold than the reſt, preſum'd to make a Remonſtrance to that Effect, and the Archbiſhop being perſuaded that he had done ill, was affected with a ſenſible Grief, took a Reſolution to do Penance, and abſtain'd from celebrating Divine Service, till Pope Alexander III, who then reſided at Sens, wrote to him not to do it any longer, and gave him Abſolution for the Offence he might have committed, upon Condition that he ſhould confeſs it to a Prieſt.

His Retreat

Aſſoon as the King underſtood, that the Archbiſhop repented of what he had done, he fell into a ſtrange Paſſion againſt him. In the mean While Thomas being inform'd thereof, retir'd to his Abby of Alintere ſituated near the Sea-ſhore, and embark'd twice to paſs over into France; but the Wind continuing contrary, he return'd to Canterbury, and preſum'd even to preſent himſelf before the King, by whom, he was very ill treated. At laſt that Prince deſpairing to bring over the Archbiſhop to his Intereſt, made Application to the Pope, to compaſs his Deſign; to which Purpoſe, he ſent the Biſhop of Liſieux and the Archdeacon of Poitiers to prevail with him to conſtitute the Archbiſhop of York his Legate in England, and to order Thomas and the other Prelates to obſerve the Cuſtoms of his Kingdom. The Pope having refus'd to do both, the King ſent new Deputies to demand the ſame Thing again with greater Importunity, and to entreat him to confirm the Cuſtoms and Privileges of his Kingdom, by the Authority of the Holy See. The Pope abſolutely deny'd the latter Requeſt, but to amuſe him, he confer'd the Dignity of Legate on the Archbiſhop of York, nevertheleſs upon Condition, that he ſhould not have any Juriſdiction over the Perſon or Archbiſhoprick of Thomas, and without exempting the Biſhops of England from the Obedience they ow'd to their Primate. Foraſmuch as this Reſtriction render'd the Authority of the Archbiſhop of York uſeleſs with reſpect to the King's Deſign, which was to depoſe Thomas, he ſent back the Letter to the Pope, with Indignation.

Negotiations between the King and the Pope.

The Pope wrote another Letter to divert him from making any further Attempts on the Rights of the Churches of his Kingdom; but that Prince inſtead of ſubmitting to his Admonitions, caus'd the Archbiſhop of Canterbury to be ſummon'd to appear in Perſon before his Majeſty, to anſwer to divers Informations that were brought againſt him. Thomas on the other ſide, entreated the King not to take it ill, that he ſtood to the Privileges of his Dignity, which exempted him from appearing before Secular Judges. The King being much more exaſperated by that Excuſe, gave Orders to the Biſhops and Temporal Lords of his Kingdom to meet together in his royal Caſtle at Northampton, and compell'd the Archbiſhop of Canterbury to repair thither in Quality of a Criminal rather than of a Judge. The firſt Thing done in the Aſſembly, was to pronounce Sentence againſt him for neglecting to make a perſonal Appearance, when he receiv'd a Summons from the King, and his Eſtate, Goods and Chattels were confiſcated, upon Condition nevertheleſs, that the Execution of that Sentence ſhould depend on his Majeſty's Pleaſure. Afterwards he was convey'd into one of the Halls of the Court, where he being lock'd in, an Account was demanded of him of the Revenues of the vacant Biſhopricks and Abbies, that he had enjoy'd for ſeveral Years, when he was Chancellor. He reply'd, That he would take Advice about the Matter. Henry Biſhop of Wincheſter ſaid, that he remember'd, that when Thomas Becket was choſen Archbiſhop, he had a general Diſcharge. Gilbert Biſhop of London propos'd that he ſhould reſign his Archbiſhoprick to appeaſe the King's Anger, and the other Prelates, except the Biſhop of Wincheſter, were of the ſame Opinion. Thomas would not hearken to that Propoſal, but to be ſet at Liberty, he expreſs'd his Deſire to ſpeak with two Lords, who were with the King; when they were come, he deſir'd that he might be allow'd Time till the next Day, and ſaid, that then he would make ſuch an Anſwer as God ſhould direct him. Whereupon the Aſſembly deputed the Biſhops of London and Rocheſter to deliver that Meſſage to the King; but the former ſaid, that the Archbiſhop was deſirous to have Time, in order to look over his Papers, and to prepare to give an Account to his Majeſty. The King being ſatisfy'd with that Declaration, ſent him Word by the two Lords, with whom he deſir'd to ſpeak, That he was willing to grant him the Time he ſued for, provided that he kept his Word, in giving an Account of the Things that were committed to his Charge. Thomas forthwith declar'd that he never made ſuch a Promiſe: However, he was permitted to depart, and that very Night he was ſeiz'd with a violent fit of the Colick, which hindred him from riſing the next Morning.

Conteſts between Thomas Becket and Henry II. King of England.

An Aſſembly at Northampton againſt Thomas Becket.

The King ſent two Lords of his Court to enquire whether he were ſick, and at the ſame time to give him a Summons. He excus'd himſelf for the preſent, by reaſon of his Indiſpoſition, of which they were Witneſſes, and promis'd to appear the next Day. In the mean While a Report was ſpread abroad, that if he went to the Royal Palace, he would be aſſaſſinated or arreſted, the next Day ſeveral Biſhops us'd their utmoſt Endeavours to perſuade him to make a Reſignation of his Archbiſhoprick and of all his Poſſeſſions to the King, in regard that they were much afraid leſt he ſhould loſe his Life if he did not ſubmit. He did not ſeem to be at all concern'd at their Remonſtrance, but forbid all the Biſhops to aſſiſt at the Proceedings that were to be carry'd on againſt him, and declar'd that he appeal'd to the Holy See. The Biſhop of London proteſted againſt the Prohibition he then made, and retir'd with all the Biſhops, except thoſe of Wincheſter and Salisbury, who continu'd with Thomas Becket. However that Prelate, after having celebrated Maſs, went to the Palace bearing his Croſier Staff himſelf. The King refus'd to admit him into his Preſence, and retiring into a private Chamber, ſent for the other Biſhops, and made great Complaints to them againſt Thomas Becket. The Biſhops approv'd the King's Reſentments, avouching that that Archbiſhop was a perjur'd Traitor, and that it was requiſite to proceed againſt him as guilty of High Treaſon. However they durſt not bring him to a formal Trial, but only ſent him Word by Hilary Biſhop of Chicheſter, That foraſmuch as after having promis'd Obedience to the King, and ſworn to obſerve the Cuſtoms of the Kingdom, he acted contrary to his Oath, they did not take themſelves to be any longer obliged to obey him, that therefore they put their Perſons and Churches under the Pope's Protection, and cited him to his Tribunal.

His Retreat to France.

The King likewiſe ſent him Word by Robert Earl of Leiceſter, that he expected an Account of the Things committed to his Charge. Thomas proteſted that he was diſcharg'd by the King's Son, when he was made Archbiſhop of Canterbury. Afterwards he refus'd to ſubmit to the Judgment of the King, Biſhops and other Lords of the Kingdom; declar'd that he would acknowledge no other Judge but the Pope; and cited the Biſhops before him. After having made this Declaration, he went out of the Palace, the Doors of which he open'd, with the Keys that were found hanging on the Wall, and was accompanied to his Houſe by a Crowd of poor People. On that very Night he took a Reſolution to retire, and to the end that it might be done more ſecretly, he feign'd an Inclination to lie in the Church, and made his Eſcape, having chang'd his Cloaths and Name, but before he embark'd he took ſome turns about the Coaſts of England to avoid being apprehended: Then he paſs'd over into Flanders, arriv'd at Graveline, and retir'd from thence to the Abby of St. Bertbin, where he diſcover'd himſelf and ſent Deputies to Lewis VII. King of France, to inform him of his preſent Diſtreſs, and to entreat his Majeſty to permit him to ſtay in his Kingdom. They were prevented by the Deputies of the King of England; but the French King did not receive them favourably, and declar'd on Behalf of Thomas Becket, even before the Arrival of his Deputies. Theſe laſt were kindly entertain'd, and the King promis'd all Manner of Protection to the Archbiſhop, in his Kingdom, and ſaid that in that Point, he only follow'd the Cuſtom of the Kings his Predeceſſors, who by a very peculiar Privilege, were always in a Capacity to afford a Sanctuary in their Dominions, to perſecuted Biſhops, and to defend them againſt all their Enemies.

Conteſts between Thomas Becket and Henry II. King of England.

The Pope's Declaration in his Favour.

The Deputies of the King of England, and thoſe of the Archbiſhop, went to the Pope, who was then at Sens: The former brought over ſome of the Cardinals to their ſide, but the Pope ſtood for the Archbiſhop, nevertheleſs he gave Audience to the Deputies of the King of England, who preſs'd him to oblige the Archbiſhop to return to England, and entreated him to ſend a Legate à latere to take Cognizance of that Affair, and to accommodate it, or to determine it without Appeal. The Pope refus'd to do any Thing till the Archbiſhop arriv'd in Perſon; and having declar'd his Reſolution to the Deputies, they departed very much diſſatisfy'd. A little after, Thomas Becket accompanied by the Archbiſhop of Trier, and the Abbot of Bertbin came to Soiſſons, where King Lewis admitted him into his Preſence, and reiterated the Promiſes he had made to his Deputies. Afterwards he went to Sens to meet the Pope, whom he ſoon made ſenſible of the Juſtice of his Cauſe, by ſhewing him the Articles that were drawn up at Clarendon, which with common Conſent were found contrary to the Intereſt and Liberty of the Church. The next Day, he profer'd to quit his Metropolitical Dignity, and entreated his Holineſs to nominate another Perſon to ſupply his Place. But the Pope would by no Means allow it, order'd him to keep his Archbiſhoprick, and recommended him to the Abbot of Pontigny, into whoſe Monaſtery he retir'd.

The King of England being inform'd of the Pope's Anſwer by his Deputies, confiſcated the whole Eſtate and Goods of the Archbiſhoprick of Canterbury, with thoſe of his Relations and Friends; baniſh'd them from his Kingdom, and publiſh'd new Ordinances more prejudicial to the Liberty of the Church, than the former. Thomas Becket wrote to him, as alſo to ſome Biſhops of England about that Matter; but thoſe Remonſtrances prov'd ineffectual. However he propos'd a Conference in which the Pope was to aſſiſt; but his Holineſs being return'd to Rome, the King ſent Deputies to him, whom he caus'd to paſs through Germany, where they aſſiſted in the Aſſembly of Wurtzburg againſt Pope Alexander, and bound themſelves by an Oath, with the Biſhops of Germany, to ſtand for Paſchal the Antipope; nevertheleſs they did not forbear to continue their Journey, and to meet Alexander, to whom they deliver'd the Letter of their Prince, who threaten'd to withdraw himſelf from his Obedience, if he did not give him ſatisfaction as to the Affair of Thomas Becket.

He is made Legate of the Holy See in England.

The Pope to advance a Perſon, whom the King thought fit to depreſs, conſtituted him Legate of the Holy See throughout the whole Kingdom of England, except the Province of York. Thomas being inveſted with this new Dignity, thought himſelf obliged to ſhew the Effects of it. Therefore he condemn'd and aboliſh'd the Cuſtoms, that were publiſh'd at Clarendon; excommunicated all thoſe who obſerv'd 'em, or caus'd 'em to be obſerv'd by others; ſent Word to the Biſhops, that they were by no Means oblig'd to the Oath they had taken, and threaten'd the King of England with an Anathema. On the other ſide, the King to prevent him, appeal'd to the Holy See, by the Advice of the Prelates of Normandy, and diſpatch'd John of Oxford to Rome, to entreat the Pope to ſend a Legate à latere into England, to the end that they might determine or make up the Buſineſs. However, he threatn'd the Monks of Ciſteaux to deſtroy all the Monaſteries that they had in his Dominions, if they entertain'd the Archbiſhop any longer at Pontigny. Therefore he was forc'd to depart from thence, and made Choice of the Monaſtery of St. Columba in the City of Sens for the Place of his Abode. He excommunicated many Perſons in the Kingdom of England and ſome Biſhops, more eſpecially the Biſhop of London his greateſt Enemy.

Conteſts between Thomas Becket and Henry II. King of England.

In the mean while John of Oxford having gain'd the favour of part of the Court of Rome, by his Preſents, aſſur'd the Pope, that the King of England, would no longer inſiſt upon the Cuſtoms that he caus'd to be receiv'd in the Aſſembly of Clarendon, and procur'd William Cardinal Biſhop of Pavia, to be nominated Legate, to determine the Affair of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; but in regard, that he might be ſurpriz'd, by reaſon of the intimate Correſpondence that there was between him and the King of England, the Pope appointed Cardinal Otho to be his Collegue. He alſo gave Abſolution in particular to John of Oxford, whom Thomas Becket had excommunicated, granted him the Deanry of Salisbury, and ſuſpended Thomas's Authority, till the Arrival of his Legates. Theſe advantages, which it ſeems, the King of England obtain'd at the Court of Rome, ſtartled the Archbiſhop of Canterbury and his Friends; inſomuch that Peter Lombard wrote about it to the Pope, as well as Thomas Becket, who excepted againſt the Judgment of the Cardinal of Pavia. Theſe two Legates being arriv'd in France, inform'd the Archbiſhop of the occaſion of their being ſent by the Pope, and the Cardinal of Pavia told him, that he came to put an end to the Difference between him and the King of England. Thomas had prepar'd a very ſharp Anſwer, but he ſuppreſs'd it by the Advice of William of Salisbury, and wrote to him with greater Moderation.

John of Oxford's Negotiation at Rome.

Negotiation of the Pope's Legates in England.

The two Legates could not immediately execute their Commiſſion, by reaſon that they were oblig'd to mediate a Peace between the Kings of England and France. The Cardinal of Pavia openly maintain'd the Intereſt of the former, and gave occaſion of Complaint to the other; nay the Pope upon his Sollicitation prohibited Thomas to pronounce any Sentence of Excommunication againſt the Perſon of the King of England, or of Suſpenſion againſt his Dominions. At laſt the Legate gave notice to the Archbiſhop, to make his appearance on Novem. 10th. A. D. 1168. on the Frontiers of the two Kingdoms; but he deſir'd and obtain'd a delay for ſeven Days, to get together again the Companions of his Exile. At laſt he appear'd with a numerous Retinue at Giſors, the place appointed for the Conference, and there met with the two Legates, accompanied by the Archbiſhop of Rouen, who repreſented to him the inflexibility of the King of England, and the Calamities that the Church endur'd by the Perſecution, of which he was the Cauſe. Afterwards they inſiſted upon the Grandeur and Power of that Prince, the Kindneſs and Reſpect that he always expreſs'd for the Holy See, and the extraordinary Favours that he had conferr'd on the Archbiſhop of Canterbury: They related with exaggeration the Complaints that he made againſt him, accuſing him of having induc'd the King of France and the Count of Flanders to make War with his Majeſty. Laſtly they exhorted the Archbiſhop to humble himſelf, and to teſtifie his Obedience to his Sovereign, by making a voluntary Submiſſion, and by ſuppreſſing his Anger, and the fierceneſs of his natural Diſpoſition.

Thomas Becket reſolutely made his defence, and clear'd himſelf from the Suſpicions, that the King of England had conceiv'd againſt him, and more eſpecially, as to the particular Accuſation, that he had excited the War between that Prince and the King of France, who condeſcended ſo far as to give Teſtimony to his Innocence, by declaring upon Oath, that it was not true, that he ſollicited him to undertake that War. The Archbiſhop of Canterbury added that he was well perſuaded, that a Biſhop ought not to have recourſe to thoſe Sorts of Means; That he was ready to ſhew to the King all manner of Submiſſion and Deference, provided that the Glory of God, the Honour of the Apoſtolick See, the Liberty of the Church, the Dignity of the Prieſthood, and the Church-Revenues might receive no detriment. They propos'd that he ſhould promiſe the King to obſerve all the Cuſtoms that were in Uſe in the time of the Archbiſhops his Predeceſſors, or at leaſt that he ſhould tolerate them, and conceal his reſentments: But he would not engage to do either, no not ſo much as to keep ſilence. Then they inſiſted that he ſhould reſign his Archbiſhoprick, in caſe the King could be prevail'd with to renounce the Cuſtoms that were conteſted. but he likewiſe rejected that Propoſal. Laſtly the Legates asked him, whether he were willing to acknowledge them as competent Judges for the deciding of the Differences between him and the King or not. He was ſomewhat perplex'd at this Demand; for on the one ſide, he was unwilling openly to diſown their Authority, and on the other ſide, he did not look upon it as ſafe, that he ſhould be tryed in any other Tribunal but that of the Pope himſelf. Therefore he reply'd; That when the Goods and Chattels, of which he was depriv'd, were reſtored to him, he would readily ſubmit to the Judgment of the Pope, or to that of any other Perſons to whom he ſhould grant a Commiſſion to be his Judges. Thus ended this Conference, which had no effect.

Thomas

Conteſts between Thomas Becket and Henry II. King of England.

Thomas Becket gave an Account of all theſe particular Circumſtances to the Pope in a Letter, and the two Legates went to communicate them to the King of England: Whereupon that Prince and the Prelates of his Kingdom demanded of the Legates, whether they had not receiv'd Orders from the Pope to bring Thomas Becket to his Tryal, or whether they were not impower'd to do it, by Virtue of their Office? They declar'd that they had no ſuch Power, and that all that they could do, was only to cauſe the Pope's Letters to be read publickly; by which he prohibited the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, to excommunicate the King, or to paſs any Sentence of Suſpenſion on his Kingdom; as alſo to inform him of the purport of them, with a prohibition to attempt any thing to the prejudice of that Order; and to confirm the Abſolutions that were given to the Biſhops, and other excommunicated Perſons, under pretence, that the Pope allow'd that ſuch Abſolution ſhould be granted them, in caſe they were in danger of Death, and that thoſe Perſons being conſtrain'd by the King's Orders to paſs over the Sea, ran the hazard of loſing their Lives. But the Pope having permitted it only upon Condition, that they ſhould reſtore the Church-Revenues, and the greateſt part of them not having done it, Thomas Becket wrote to the Legates, that they ought to oblige them to make reſtitution, if they were deſirous that their Abſolution ſhould be ratify'd. The Pope himſelf likewiſe wrote to the ſame Effect; but the Cardinal of Pavia eluded that Order; alledging, that he could not put it in execution without offending the King.

In the mean while Thomas Becket made great complaints againſt thoſe Proceedings, and ſent word to the Court of Rome at the ſame time, entreating the Pope to recall thoſe two Legates, who ſhewed too much partiality; inſomuch that his Holineſs not being able to withſtand the importunity, of thoſe who adher'd to the Intereſt of that Archbiſhop at Rome, immediately ſent for the Legates and depriv'd them of all Manner of Authority. Cardinal Otho before his departure us'd his utmoſt Endeavours to induce the King of England to do Juſtice to the Archbiſhop, whereupon his Majeſty reply'd that he would conſent that that Prelate ſhould return to Canterbury, and poſſeſs his Church in Peace, and that he for his part would renounce the Cuſtoms, that were not in uſe in the time of his Predeceſſors; but that he would not hear talk of doing him Juſtice, and thoſe of his Party, as to the Eſtates they enjoy'd for a long Time, pretending that they had put them to a good Uſe. The Cardinal in like manner ſpoke to the King much to the ſame effect, but all their Remonſtrances ſerv'd only to draw upon them the diſpleaſure of that Prince, who complain'd when they came to take leave of him, that he was betray'd by the Pope and threatn'd to yield him Obedience no longer, if he did not take care to do him Juſtice with reſpect to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

An Interview between Thomas Becket and King Henry I. in the preſence of the King of France.

Afterwards, the King of France interceded at the Solicitation of the Pope to accommodate that Buſineſs with the King of England, and procur'd an Interview, during which the Archbiſhop of Canterbury threw himſelf at King Henry's Feet, and after having implor'd his Clemency, declar'd that he would reſign to him, every thing that had occaſion'd the Differences between them, provided that the Glory of God might be indemnify'd. His Majeſty receiv'd that Reſtriction, with a great deal of Diſſatisfaction, and propos'd to the King of France, that he would leave Thomas in the quiet poſſeſſion of the See of Canterbury, ſaying, That he expected to enjoy the Rights that were enjoy'd by the Kings his Predeceſſors in the time of the Predeceſſors of the Archbiſhop; who ſhould likewiſe enjoy the Immunities that his Predeceſſors had actually enjoy'd. This propoſal ſeem'd reaſonable to the Aſſiſtants, and even to the King of France; nevertheleſs Thomas Becket, would not accept of it, alledging, that his Predeceſſors had tolerated ſome Abuſes, which his Adverſaries would fain compel him to approve againſt his Conſcience. This refuſal caus'd a murmuring among the Lords of both Nations, and gave no manner of Satisfaction to the two Kings. The Enemies of the Archbiſhop accus'd him of Arrogancy, and even many of his Friends did not approve his Inflexibility. However the King of France ſoon alter'd his Mind, commended the Conſtancy of that Prelate, and inſtead of Baniſhing him out of his Dominions, as it was expected, he admitted him into his Preſence, ſuffer'd him to reſide at Sens, and continu'd to aſſiſt him. King Henry ſent Envoys to complain to that Prince, that he treated a Rebel ſo kindly, who had refus'd to accept of Peace upon reaſonable Terms; but perceiving that the French King, was reſolv'd not to abandon him, he ſollicited the Pope again by two Deputations, and prevail'd with the King of Sicily, and the Eſtates of Italy to joyn their Entreaties to his againſt the Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

However all that could be obtain'd of the Pope, was, that he would ſend two other Legates to endeavour again to procure a Reconciliation between them. Gratian the the Nephew of Pope Eugenius III. and Vivian Advocate of the Church of Rome, were choſen for that Purpoſe. The Pope deliver'd to them the Articles of the Agreement ready drawn up, and oblig'd them to take an Oath, not to go beyond the Orders he had given them. He prohibited them to receive any Thing of the King of England, till the Concluſion of the Treaty, and order'd them to declare to that Prince, that if he neglected to make Peace upon the Conditions preſcribed by him, he would enjoyn the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, to make uſe of the Authority of the Church againſt him. Theſe Legates manag'd divers Negotiations in the Year 1169. but none of them took Effect. King Henry offer'd to permit Thomas Becket to return to England, and to re-eſtabliſh him in his Archbiſhoprick, and in the Poſſeſſion of his Eſtate, but would have this Condition annexed, Provided always that the Rights of the Kingdom be maintain'd; but the Legates refus'd to admit that Clauſe, unleſs this were alſo inſerted, Provided that the Liberties of the Church be not infringed. There was alſo an Interview at St. Denis between the two Kings, the Legates, and the Archbiſhop, which prov'd ineffectual. So that the Legates return'd without coming to any Manner of Agreement. The King of England, who was not well ſatisfy'd with theſe Legates, demanded others of the Pope, with much Importunity, and even with Menaces. His Holineſs was not of Opinion that his Requeſt ought to be deny'd; and even ſuſpended the Archbiſhop's Authority till the Differences were finally determin'd. He nominated Simon Prior of Mont Dieu and Bernard de Corila, to be his Legates, on that Occaſion, and gave them two Letters for King Henry, viz. one full of Exhortations and gentle Admonitions, and the other of ſevere Reprimands and Threats, with Orders to deliver the former at firſt; and in caſe he obſtinately perſiſted in his Reſolution, to add the ſecond. Theſe two Legates conducted the Archbiſhop to the Place appointed for the Interview, where the two Kings were preſent, and admoniſh'd him to humble himſelf before his Sovereign: He followed their Advice, and only inſiſted that the Glory of God might be ſecur'd in theſe Terms, Ad honorem Dei. King Henry was offended at that Expreſſion, and requir'd, That the Archbiſhop ſhould promiſe and bind himſelf by Oath, as a Prieſt, and a Biſhop in the Preſence of the whole Aſſembly, ſincerely to obſerve the Cuſtoms, that were follow'd by the reverend Archbiſhops, under the Kings his Predeceſſors, which he had alſo engag'd to do upon another Occaſion. The Archbiſhop promis'd to be faithful to him in every particular, as far as it was poſſible, Salvo ordine ſuo, and added, That for Peace ſake, he would engage to obſerve, as far as his Dignity would allow, ſuch Cuſtoms as were in uſe amongſt his reverend Predeceſſors. The King peremptorily inſiſted, That he ſhould promiſe to obſerve the Cuſtoms of his Kingdom, without any Manner of Reſtriction; but the Archbiſhop would by no means conſent to it, and upon that Refuſal his Majeſty departed out of the Aſſembly. The Legates having exhorted him to re-admit the Archbiſhop to his Favour, and to reſtore him to his Church, he reply'd, That perhaps he might one Day be prevail'd upon to do the latter, but that he would take care never to make him his Confident. During a ſecond Interview between the two Princes, they preſented to King Henry, the Pope's menacing Letter, but he was not at all concern'd at it, and always inſiſted upon the Promiſe that the Archbiſhop of Canterbury had made to act conformably to the Cuſtoms of the Kingdom, which the Archbiſhops his Predeceſſors had obſerv'd before him: Thomas Becket made Anſwer, That he was ready to obey his Majeſty, as far as it could be done, without infringing the Privileges of his Dignity, and thus this Negotiation took no more Effect than the others; inſomuch, that the Pope being wearied with the Delays of the King of England, revok'd the Suſpenſion of the Archbiſhop's Authority, and left him at Liberty to act as he ſhould think fit.

Conteſts between Thomas Becket and Henry II. King of England.

Other Legates ſent into England, and their Negotiations.

Some Time after, King Henry deſigning to crown his eldeſt Son, appointed the Archbiſhop of York to perform that Ceremony; but the Pope being inform'd of his Intention, prohibited that Archbiſhop and all others, under Pain of Suſpenſion, to make any Attempt upon a Right that apparently belong'd to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. Thomas Becket likewiſe wrote to the Archbiſhop of York and to his Collegues to notifie to them the ſame Prohibition; whereupon the King was ſo extremely incens'd, that he took a Reſolution to oblige his Subjects to take an Oath, That they would not obey the Pope, nor the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and caus'd his Son to be actually crown'd by the Archbiſhop of York at Weſtminſter, in a Church belonging to the Juriſdiction of Canterbury. The young King in like manner took an Oath, to obſerve the Cuſtoms of the Kingdom, that were publiſh'd at Clarendon: In the mean while the Pope being preſs'd by the Remonſtrances ſtrances of the King of France, of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and of William Archbiſhop of Sens, declar'd the Archbiſhop of York ſuſpended from all Manner of Eccleſiaſtical Functions, and pronounc'd the ſame Sentence againſt all the Biſhops who aſſiſted at that Ceremony. He ſent Word at the ſame Time to Rotron Archbiſhop of Rouen, and to Bertrand Biſhop of Nevers to meet the King of England, in order to admoniſh him the laſt Time in his Name to make Peace; and in caſe he refus'd to do it, to ſuſpend all his Dominions from Divine Service, that were ſituated on the hither ſide, or beyond the Sea. At the ſame Time, he diſpatch'd a ſmart Reprimand to the King of England, requiring him in the Name of God, and by Virtue of the Apoſtolick authority, to be reconciled with the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and to give Peace to the Church, if he deſign'd to avoid an Anathema, like to that which was pronounc'd againſt the Emperor Frederick; inſomuch, that thoſe urgent Threats oblig'd King Henry to bethink himſelf ſeriouſly of an Accommodation, and perſonally to entreat the Legates to uſe their utmoſt Endeavours to procure it.

Conteſts between Thomas Becket and Henry II. King of England.

The King of England reconciled to Thomas Becket.

Whereupon Thomas Becket went to meet the King, accompanied with the Archbiſhop of Sens; and his Majeſty receiv'd him with ſuch particular Marks of Kindneſs, as he never ſhew'd him ſince their falling out. The Archbiſhop demanded Juſtice for the Indignities put upon the Church of Canterbury, and more eſpecially for the Injury he had lately done him, by the Coronation of his Son: The King promis'd to give Orders that that Prince ſhould be crown'd again, and then Thomas Becket caus'd Interceſſion to be made by the Archbiſhop of Sens (who began to ſpeak,) that his Majeſty would vouchſafe to reſtore to him the Church of Canterbury, with all the Revenues belonging to it, and to do him Juſtice, as to what relates to the Coronation of the Prince his Son; he for his part, engaging at the ſame Time, to yield to his Majeſty, all the Reſpect, Obedience and Submiſſion, that is due from an Archbiſhop to his Sovereign Prince, according to the Ordinance of God. The King accepted of thoſe Terms, and thus the Peace was at laſt effectually concluded. Afterwards the Archbiſhop of Canterbury humbly entreated the King his Maſter, that he might have Liberty to take Leave of the King of France, to return Thanks for the many ſignal Favours he had receiv'd from him. He alſo continu'd ſome Time longer in France, with a Deſign not to paſs over into England, till he had receiv'd Information, that thoſe Perſons were actually put in Poſſeſſion of the Revenues of the Church of Canterbury, whom he ſent thither for that Purpoſe. In the mean While, the Archbiſhop of York and the Biſhops of London and Salisbury, us'd all poſſible Means to break off the Agreement, and further to incenſe King Henry againſt the Archbiſhop. At that Time, one Reunlphus, who was the Miniſter of the Archbiſhop of York's Fury, made no Difficulty to pillage the Revenues of the Church of Canterbury; but neither that Injury, nor the Coldneſs with which the King then treated Thomas Becket, were ſufficient to divert him from the Reſolution he had taken to return to England, notwithſtanding the Advice of his Friends to the contrary, and the Threats of his Enemies.

Thomas Becket's Return to England.

Therefore he embarked at Calice in the End of the Year 1170. and arriv'd at Sandwich; but before his Departure, he ſent into England, the Letter that the Pope had directed to him, and which he kept till that Time. By Vertue of that Letter, his Holineſs ſuſpended the Archbiſhop of York with the Biſhops, who aſſiſted at the Coronation of the young King, and excommunicated or ſuſpended for divers Cauſes, a great Part of the Prelates of the Kingdom. The Publication of that Sentence extremely exaſperated the Minds of the Prelates and Engliſh Nobility. The Archbiſhop upon his Arrival, met with divers Perſons who attempted to take away his Life; and he was no ſooner at Canterbury, but ſome of the King's Officers accompanied with Reunlphus and three Clergymen, came (according to the Order they had receiv'd from the Archbiſhop of York and two other Prelates) to require him in his Majeſty's Name to abſolve all the Biſhops who were ſuſpended or excommunicated; alledging, That what he had done againſt them, was prejudicial to the King himſelf, ruin'd the Cuſtoms of the Kingdom, and was contrary to the Tranquility of the State. They promis'd at the ſame Time, That when the Suffragan Biſhops of the Metropolitan See of Canterbury were abſolved, they would readily ſubmit to his Injunctions, as far as they could do it, without impairing the Dignity of the Crown. The Archbiſhop reply'd, That it did not lie in his Power to repeal a Sentence paſſed by the Holy Apoſtolick See; but they perſiſted in preſſing him more earneſtly, and threaten'd that if he refus'd to do it, the King would revenge the Indignity on the whole Church. Thomas Becket proffer'd, That if the excommunicated or ſuſpended Biſhops would take an Oath in his Preſence, in due Form, to ſubmit to what he ſhould think fit to ordain, for the Sake of Peace and upon Account of the Reſpect that he bore to his Majeſty, he would do all that he could in their Favour. But they could by no Means be perſuaded to take ſuch an Oath, without informing the King of its purport, nor to ſubmit in ſuch a Manner to the Will and Pleaſure of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

Conteſts between Thomas Becket and Henry II. King of England.

Then the three Prelates above-mention'd, went to meet the King, implor'd his Aſſiſtance, and repreſented to him, that the Archbiſhop of Canterbury had diſturb'd the Peace of the Kingdom by his Arrival, openly accuſing him of Arrogancy and Tyranny. The King being highly provoked by that Diſcourſe, ſaid in a Paſſion, That he was unfortunate in meeting with none that could take Vengeance of one ſingle Prelate, who created him more Trouble, than all his other Subjects, and endeavour'd by all Manner of Means to make void his Royal Authority. The letting fall of theſe Words, gave Occaſion to four of his Courtiers to form a Conſpiracy againſt the Archbiſhop's Life: For they immediately ſet out, and being arriv'd in England, ſhew'd him an Order from the King, to abſolve the excommunicated or ſuſpended Biſhops, and to take an Oath of Allegiance. But the Archbiſhop having refus'd it, they took up Arms, enter'd the Cathedral Church of Canterbury, where he was officiating, and aſſaſſinated him at the Altar, one of the laſt Days of the Year, 1170. which was the 52 of his Age, and the 9th ſince his Promotion to the Metropolitan Dignity. Aſſoon as the News of that baſe Act was brought to King Henry, he expreſs'd a great deal of Trouble for his Death, and ſent Deputies to Rome to aſſure the Pope, That he was by no means conſenting to the Fact. The Pope was tranſported with Grief and Indignation; but the King's Deputies having depos'd upon Oath, that their Maſter was not at all acceſſory to that Murder, and that he was ready to clear himſelf by Oath; his Holineſs contented himſelf only to excommunicate the Aſſaſſins and their Accomplices, and ſent the Cardinals Theodin of St. Vitalis, and Albert of St. Laurence, to receive the King's Oath, and to oblige him to give Satisfaction to the Church.

A Conſpiracy againſt Thomas Becker, His Death.

Theſe two Legates being arriv'd in Normandy, found the King altogether diſpos'd to ſubmit to every thing that the Church ſhould enjoyn him. He took an Oath upon the Holy Goſpels, That he neither commanded nor was deſirous, that the Archbiſhop of Canterbury ſhould be kill'd, and that he was more ſenſible of Grief at his Death, than at that of the King his Father; but he confeſs'd, that he had been in ſome Meaſure the Cauſe of it, by reaſon of the Animoſity which he ſo often expreſs'd againſt his Perſon, and that therefore he was ready to undergo ſuch Penance, as the Legates ſhould think fit to impoſe on him. The two Cardinals order'd him, 1. To maintain 200 Soldiers during a whole Year, for the Defence of the Holy Land. 2. To revoke all Cuſtoms and Ordinances introduc'd under his Reign to the Prejudice of the Church, and to reform by the Pope's Advice, ſuch as were eſtabliſh'd. 3. To reſtore to the Church of Canterbury all its Revenues and Territories, and to make the ſame Reſtitution to all others that were pillaged. 4. And laſtly, To deliver Spain from the Oppreſſion of the Infidels, in caſe it were requir'd by his Holineſs. They likewiſe privately enjoyn'd him, Faſting, Alms-giving and ſome other particular Penances. The King accepted of all thoſe Conditions, with the Marks of an extraordinary Humility, and the Legates gave him Abſolution at the Church-door. The young King took an Oath to obſerve the ſame Things, obliging himſelf, that if his Father died without fulfilling his Penance, to perform, what was ordain'd, in his ſtead.

New Broils

The Canonization of Thomas Becket.

Afterwards Thomas Becket was canoniz'd for a Saint, A. D. 1173. and King Henry being attack'd by his unnatural Son, who rebell'd againſt him, implor'd his Aſſiſtance, going bare-footed to his Tomb, as it were an humble Suppliant.

His Letters

There are ſtill extant ſix Books of the Letters of this Prelate, and of thoſe that were written to him during his Troubles, which were collected by John of Salisbury, publiſhed by Chriſtianus Lupus, and printed at Bruxelis in 4to, A. D. 1682. with a Relation of his Life, taken out of four contemporary Authors, viz. Herbert his Clerk, William of Canterbury, the Abbot Alanus and John of Salisbury. The Life and Actions of that famous Man, ſufficiently ſhew his Character, viz. That he was reſolute, of an undaunted Courage, and inflexible to the higheſt Degree; and his Letters, that he was eloquent, had the Art of ſtirring up the Affections, and was endu'd with pious and generous Principles.

CHAP.

CHAP. XI.

An Account of the Lives and Writings of the principal Authors who flouriſh'd in the Twelfth Century.

Geffrey Abbot of Vendome.

Of the principal Authors. Geffrey Abbot of Vendome.

GEffrey was a Native of Angers, deſcended of a noble Family, was educated by Garnier Archdeacon of that City, and enter'd very young into the Monaſtery of Vendome, which was founded A. D. 1050. by Godfrey Martel Count of Angers. A little While after, he was made Abbot in 1093. being as yet only a Deacon. Ives of Chartres gave him the Benediction, and exacted of him an Acknowledgment, that he ſhould be ſubject to the Juriſdiction of the Biſhop of Chartres. However, that Abbot ſoon repented of what he had done, and caus'd himſelf to be freed from that Engagement by the Pope; neither could his Succeſſors be induc'd to renew it, becauſe the Monaſtery of Vendome depended immediately on the Holy See. To diſcharge that Obligation to his Holineſs, Geffrey took a Journey to Rome, the ſame Year that he was conſtituted Abbot, where he did Pope Urban II. a very notable Piece of Service, in ſupplying him with Means for the Recovery of the Palace of Lateran, out of the Poſſeſſion of Ferrucius, who kept it for Guibert the Antipope: He receiv'd the Order of Prieſthood from the Hands of that Pope, who made him Cardinal of St. Priſca. Afterwards returning to France, in 1094. laden with Honour, he took upon him the Government of his Monaſtery of Vendome, and was employ'd in the Adminiſtration of the moſt important Affairs of the Church and State. He was invited by the Popes to divers Councils, and was choſen by Lewis the Groſs, King of France, to be Arbitrator of a Difference that aroſe between that Prince and the Count of Angers. He vigorouſly maintain'd the Intereſts of the See of Rome; paſs'd over the Alps twelve times for the Service of the Popes; was taken thrice by his Enemies, and at laſt for his own Part, was involv'd in many Lawſuits, with Biſhops, Abbots and ſecular Lords, about the Rights and Poſſeſſions of his Monaſtery, which he preſerv'd entire, and even augmented conſiderably. 'Tis not preciſely known in what Year he died, but he was ſtill living in the Time of Pope Honorius II. A. D. 1129.

The firſt Book of the Letters of this Abbot contain 31. directed to the Popes Urban II. Paſchal II. Calixtus II. and Honorius II. and to the Legates of the See of Rome. They are almoſt all written for the Preſervation of the Immunities and Poſſeſſions of his Abby, demanding the Protection of it of the Popes, as a Right unqueſtionably belonging to him; in regard that all the Revenues of his Monaſtery by its Foundation, were an allodial Tenure of the Holy See, for which he paid a certain Duty.

In the ſecond Book are compris'd 32 Letters, directed to Ives Biſhop of Chartres, and to Geffrey his Succeſſor, in the greateſt Part of which he vindicates the Exemption of his Monaſtery, avouching that it depends ſolely on the Holy See; that the Biſhop of Chartres has no Right either over their Perſons or Poſſeſſions; that they are not to be look'd upon as † Acephala, becauſe they have Jeſus Chriſt for their Head, and after him the Pope; that the Promiſe he made to Ives Biſhop of Chartres, was extorted by Surprize, and afterwards declar'd null by Pope Urban. Some of thoſe Letters relate to the Conteſts that he had with the Monks of Marmoutier, and the Counteſs of Vendome. In the nineteenth, he diſcuſſes the Queſtion concerning the Reiteration of Extreme Unction, and concludes with Ives of Chartres, that it ought not to be reiterated, by reaſon that it is a Sacrament.

† Deſtitute of a Head.

The third Book comprehends 43 Letters written to ſeveral Biſhops, more eſpecially to thoſe of Angers and Mans: Some of them purely relate to Morality, others to the Monaſtical Diſcipline, and many others to particular Affairs. 'Tis aſſerted therein, that a Monk accuſed by his Abbot, ought not to be left to his arbitrary Proceedings. This Author likewiſe vigorouſly oppoſes the Inveſtitures; ſhews that Biſhops are forbidden to exact a yearly Salary, for the uſe of the Altars, which they grant to Monks; and laſtly obſerves, that 'tis reaſonable, that thoſe Churches which have Poſſeſſions in the Territories of other Churches, ſhould pay the Tithes of them to the latter.

The fourth Book contains fifty Letters directed to Abbots or Monks, which for the moſt part relate either to Morality, or to particular Affairs; among which the 47th directed to Robert d' Arbriſſelles has been much talk'd of. It is written to adviertiſe that Abbot Founder of the Order of Fontevrault, that there was a Report concerning him, about a Buſineſs, which did not tend to his Credit, and which he ought ſpeedily to reform, if that Report were really true, viz. That he convers'd ſo familiarly with Women, that he permitted them to cohabit with him; that he kept private Correſpondence with them; and that he was not aſhamed even to lye with them, under Pretence of mortifying himſelf by enduring the Stings of the Fleſh, which is a new Kind of unheard of Martyrdom, but very dangerous, and of a very bad Example. We have alſo in our Poſſeſſion another Letter written by Marbodus Biſhop of Rennes, which paſſes the ſame Cenſure on Robert d' Arbriſſelles. Indeed theſe two Letters plainly prove, that the Enemies of Robert had caus'd thoſe falſe Reports to be ſpread abroad againſt him; but they are no Proof that he was guilty of ſuch Enormities as were laid to his Charge, and his Conduct is ſufficiently juſtify'd, by the advantageous Teſtimonies that are given of him by the Writers of that Time, who look'd upon him as a Man of great Sanctity.

Of the principal Authors.

However, the Monks of Fontevrault imagin'd, that the better to vindicate the Memory of their Founder, it was requiſite to call in Queſtion the Truth of thoſe two Monuments, and to make them paſs for ſpurious Pieces. Father Mainferme has exhibited this Charge againſt them in the Name of his Collegues, and has made it a Part of the Subject of his Book, call'd, The Buckler of the Order of Fontevrault. Amongſt all the Conjectures alledged by him againſt Geffrey's Letter, there is only one direct, that deſerves any Conſideration, viz. That Abaelard in one of his Letters ſays, that Roſcelin, of whom we have made mention in the preceding Century, wrote an invective Epiſtle againſt that excellent Preacher of Jeſus Chriſt Robert d' Arbriſſelles whence Father Mainferme concludes it to be that of Geffrey, or that of Marbodus, or perhaps both; but he has miſtaken Abaelard's meaning: For that Author does not ſay, that Roſcelin compos'd one or two Letters under the Name of another Perſon, to declaim againſt Robert d' Arbriſſelles, but that he wrote a Letter againſt him and St. Anſelm, ſo that this has no relation to thoſe of Geffrey and Marbodus. As for that of Geffrey now in Queſtion, it cannot be denied but it belongs to him; for, 1. 'Tis apparently his Style, and if it be never ſo little compar'd with the others, we ſhall ſoon be perſuaded, that it was written by the ſame Author. 2. It is not only extant in the Manuſcript of Mans, which Father Sirmond made uſe of; but alſo in two other Manuſcripts, viz. one in the Library of Chriſtina Queen of Sweden, and the other in that of Santa Croce at Florence, which are refer'd to the Time of Robert d' Arbriſſelles; Father Mabillon having alſo ſeen and cited the latter in the Relation of his Voyage to Italy.

In the fifth Book are contain'd 28 Letters directed to divers particular Perſons, which are full of moral Diſcourſes and Compliments. In the fixteenth, he aſſerts the Neceſſity of making Confeſſion of all Sorts of Sins; and in the laſt, he maintains, that a Man, who has once aſſum'd the Monaſtick Habit, and liv'd for ſome Time in a Monaſtery, cannot return to a ſecular Courſe of Life, altho' he made no expreſs Profeſſion, nor receiv'd the Benediction.

Theſe Letters are follow'd by ſeveral Tracts about divers Eccleſiaſtical Affairs; the firſt of which is a Treatiſe of the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, in which he endeavours to prove the changing of the Bread and Wine into our Saviour's Body and Blood in the Euchariſt; ſo that after the Conſecration, nothing remains of the Matter or Subſtance of the Bread and Wine, but only the owtward Appearances, and that 'tis really the very ſame Body of Jeſus Chriſt, that was born of the Virgin Mary, and which ſuffer'd on the Croſs. He adds, That the Wicked receive it in the Sacrament, but do not receive the Effects nor Graces of it, which are only beſtow'd on thoſe, who are in a State of Righteouſneſs.

Of the principal Authors.

The ſecond is made about the Election of Biſhops and againſt the Inveſtitures: He maintains in the former, that as Baptiſm makes a Chriſtian, ſo Election and Conſecration conſtitute a Biſhop; and as it is impoſſible to be a Chriſtian without receiving Baptiſm, ſo it is likewiſe impoſſible to be a Biſhop without Election and Conſecration. That thoſe two Qualifications are ſo abſolutely neceſſary, that Conſecration without Election, and Election without Conſecration, are not ſufficient to make a Biſhop: That Conſecration ſuppoſes a Canonical Election, and that whoſoever receives it without being canonically choſen, is rather curſed than conſecrated; by reaſon that nothing can diſannul the Order of Election and Conſecration eſtabliſh'd by Jeſus Chriſt, who himſelf choſe and conſecrated his Apoſtles: That the Clergy ſupply our Saviour's Place in the Election, and the Biſhops in the Conſecration: That all the other Chriſtians have a Right to demand a Biſhop, but they cannot elect nor conſecrate him: That upon that Account, all thoſe who aſpire to Eccleſiaſtical Preferments, by any other Means, than Canonical Election, ſubvert the Order of the Church: That the Church of Rome cannot diſpenſe with that Inſtitution, or permit it to be done otherwiſe; becauſe the Pope cannot do that, which St. Peter himſelf had no Power to do. Now Jeſus Chriſt only impower'd St. Peter to bind that which ought to be bound, and to looſe that which was of neceſſity to be looſed, and not to looſe that which ought to be bound, or to bind that which ought to be looſed; and when St. Peter was about to act otherwiſe, St. Paul, tho' a Novice in the Faith, withſtood him to the Face: Laſtly, that the Church of Rome ought not to repeal the Laws eſtabliſhed in the Holy Scripture, but to maintain them, nor to make uſe of the Power given by Jeſus Chriſt, according to a capricious Humour, but according to our Saviour's Tradition.

Afterwards he paſſes to the Inveſtitures, and ſays, That to know the Doctrine of the Catholick and Apoſtolick Church, as to that Point, 'tis requiſite only to peruſe the firſt Article of the Council, held under Gregory VII. in which that Pope excommunicates and treats as Hereticks all thoſe Clergymen, who ſhall preſume to receive the Inveſtiture from the Hand of Laicks: That that ſort of Hereſy is a more heinous Crime than Simony, in regard that Simony is only practis'd in Secret, but the Inveſtitures are always made publickly: That the Apoſtles forbid Laicks to aſſume the Power of conferring Eccleſiaſtical Orders, and that therefore the Inveſtiture, which is a Sacrament or ſacred Sign, by which the Biſhop is diſtinguiſh'd from other Men, and put in Poſſeſſion of the Government of the Church, ought not to be receiv'd from the Hands of Laicks, but from that of the Clerk, who perform'd the Conſecration: And in fine, that Laymen, who cannot adminiſter the Sacraments of the Church, ought not to deliver the Ring and the Paſtoral Staff, which are Sacraments, ſuch as the Salt and Water, the Chriſm and the conſecrated Oils, when they are adminiſter'd by thoſe who have a rightful Power, and with the requiſite Ceremonies.

The third Tract is written in like Manner againſt the Inveſtitures, in which he repeats the ſame Arguments, and concludes, that they are to be reputed no leſs Hereſie, than Simony.

He continues to handle the ſame Matter in the fourth Tract, and proves that Kings cannot confer the Inveſtiture even of ſpiritual Benefices, with the Ring and Staff; becauſe it is an Eccleſiaſtical Ceremony, and that to ſpeak properly they cannot beſtow the Inveſtiture of Eccleſiaſtical Poſſeſſions, by reaſon that they already belong to the Church. But he acknowledges that after a canonical Election and Conſecration, they may grant the royal Inveſtiture of Church Revenues, and put him that has the Title in Poſſeſſion of them, affording him their Aſſiſtance and Protection, which may be done by certain outward Signs, that are not at all prejudicial to the Rights of the Church: And laſtly, that it is not expedient to excommunicate Princes upon that Account, in regard that ſuch Proceedings, would occaſion a greater Miſchief.

In the following Tract, he lays down a Principle, which alſo has relation to the Buſineſs of Inveſtitures, viz. That Condeſcenſion may be ſometimes allow'd, and the granting of Diſpenſations; but 'tis requiſite that it be done with a good Intention for the Benefit of the Church, or in caſe of Neceſſity, and not for Money or Favour; and that that which is abſolutely evil, ought never to be tolerated or permitted. Of the principal Authors.

In the ſixth, he maintains three Principles, viz. That the Church ought to be catholick, free and chaſte: That Quatenus Catholick, it can neither be bought nor ſold; that as 'tis free, it ought not to be brought into Subjection to any ſecular Power; and that as 'tis chaſte, it ought not to be corrupted with Preſents.

The ſeventh Tract contains certain allegorical Explications of the Ark of the Covenant, and of the Tabernacle with Reference to the Church.

In the eighth he explains, what are the Effects of Baptiſm, Confirmation, Extreme Unction, and the Euchariſt. He ſays, That Baptiſm remits Sins by the Vertue of the Holy Ghoſt, That in Confirmation the Holy Ghoſt is invoked, that he would vouchſafe to take up his Abode in the Habitation which he has ſanctified; that he would alſo defend and protect it: That that Sacrament is adminiſter'd by the Biſhops to ſhew, that it gives the higheſt Perfection: That the Extreme Unction of ſick Perſons confers on them Remiſſion of Sins; to the end that Chriſtians may obtain Mercy both in their Life-time, and at the Hour of Death: And laſtly, That in the Communion of the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, the Chriſtian Soul is healed of all the Diſeaſes of its Vices, re-eſtabliſh'd in a State of everlaſting Salvation, and made one Body with Jeſus Chriſt.

In the ninth, he treats of the Reiteration of the Sacraments, and ſays, That thoſe are not reiterated, in which it ſeems, as if there were an Intention to begin again that which was already done; but the ſame Ceremony may be reiterated when 'tis perform'd for a different End, and has another Effect: That therefore the holy Chriſm is put on the Fore-head, after having anointed the Top of the Head with it; becauſe thoſe ſeveral unctions produce different Effects: But that Extreme Unction cannot be reiterated by reaſon that it is a Sacrament.

In the tenth he proves, That the Biſhops ought not to exact any Thing for Benedictions and Ordinations, and aſſerts it to be a kind of Simony in a Biſhop, not only to receive Money for the Benediction of an Abbot, but alſo to exact of him an Acknowledgment, by which he binds himſelf by Promiſe to his Dioceſan.

The eleventh is a Conſtitution about the Manner how Monks ought to proceed in accuſing others, and in defending themſelves in their Chapter.

In the twelfth, he explains in a few Words, three Vertues neceſſary for Paſtors of the Church, viz. Juſtice, Diſcretion and Fore-ſight.

The thirteenth and fourteenth, are certain Dialogues between God, who upbraids the Sinner with his Ingratitude, and the Sinner, who acknowledges his Offences, and implores the Mercy of God.

The fifteenth and ſixteenth, are Prayers made by a Sinner to God, in which he humbly ſues for his Mercy, and begs Pardon for his Tranſgreſſions.

Theſe Tracts are concluded with four Hymns or Proſes, viz. one directed to the Virgin Mary, and the three others on the Repentance of Mary Magdalene.

All theſe Works are follow'd by eleven Sermons on the Nativity, Reſurrection and Aſcenſion of Jeſus Chriſt; On the Purification and Feſtivals of the Virgin Mary; On Mary Magdalene, whom he confounds with the Sinner; On the penitent Thief; and on St. Benedict. Theſe Sermons are dry and barren, containing nothing that is eloquent; and indeed, generally ſpeaking, all the Pieces of this Author are not written with much Elegancy or Politeneſs. However his Compoſitions are very natural, and his Explications eaſy and familiar. Father Sirmond caus'd them to be printed at Paris, A. D. 1610. from two Manuſcript Copies, and annex'd Annotations on the Letters, which are very ſerviceable to make known the Perſons, and to illuſtrate many hiſtorical Matters of Fact that are mentioned therein.

HIL-

HILDEBERT.

Bishop of Mans and afterwards Archbishop of Tours.

Of the principal Authors.

Hildebert.

Hildebert Born at Lavardin in the Diocese of Mans, of Parents of mean Condition, joyn'd the Study of the Liberal Sciences to that of Divinity, and was chosen Bishop of Mans, A. D. 1098. His first Exercises of the Episcopal Functions were disturbed by the War that broke forth between William II. sirnam'd Rufus King of England, and Helie Count of Mans, who being taken Prisoner by that Prince, the City of Mans fell into the Hands of Foulques Count of Angers. The King of England was marching at the Head of an Army to take it, when the Bishop and Inhabitants, fearing lest the Count of Angers should make an Agreement at their Cost, surrendred it to him, on Condition that their Count should be set at Liberty. Afterwards the Count having got together some fresh Troops, re-enter'd the City of Mans, and besieg'd the Forts that were possess'd by King William's Forces; but he was repuls'd, and the King remain'd Master of the City. Hildebert was accused of having been concern'd in that Enterprize, and oblig'd to pass over into England to clear himself. The King enjoyn'd him to cause the Towers of his Church to be pull'd down, and Hildebert returning with that Order, found his Church laid waste by the Outrages that were committed against the Clergy, by the pillaging of its Revenues and the burning of the City. But the King of England dying a little while after, A. D. 1100. Count Helie re-took the City, granted a Composition to the King's Soldiers, who were in the Forts, and re-establish'd Order and Peace in those Parts. When Hildebert saw his native Country restor'd to its former Tranquility, he undertook a Journey to Rome, and went to visit Pope Paschal II. by whom he was very kindly entertain'd, and returned from Rome laden with Honours and Preferments. Some Time after, he was apprehended at Nogent le Rotrou, where he went to bear the Last-Will and Testament of the Count of Rotrou, who was detain'd Prisoner at Mans. At last having procur'd his Liberty, he solemniz'd the Consecration of the Cathedral Church of Mans newly re-built, and continu'd to govern his Diocess in Peace, till the Year 1125. when he was translated to the Archbishoprick of Tours after the Death of Guillebert.

Hildebert, not long after his Promotion to that Dignity, fell out with Lewis the Gross, King of France, having refus'd to dispose of the Benefices belonging to that Church, more especially the Deanry and Archdeaconry at the Pleasure of his Prince, who caus'd the Revenues to be seiz'd on, and prohibited him to enter his Dominions. The Person who was nominated Dean, was at Variance with the Canons, who were maintain'd by the Court, which gave Occasion to Disturbances in the Church of Tours. At last these Dissensions being appeas'd, he was restor'd to the King's Favour, and died, A. D. 1132. after having possess'd the Episcopal See of Mans 27 Years, and the Metropolitan of Tours, six Years and as many Months.

The Letters of this Author are the most valuable Pieces amongst his Works. They are written in a fine Epistolary Style, after a very natural Manner, and contain divers important Points of Morality, Church-Discipline and History. We shall here produce the Extracts of those that treat of these Matters, omitting the others which relate to meer Compliments, or to particular Affairs, such as the six first.

Therefore we shall begin with the seventh, in which the Author determines, That a Virgin betrothed before she was marriageable, whose Husband died without knowing her carnally, cannot marry the Brother of her former Husband; because Marriage does not consist in Carnal Copulation, but in the Consent of the Parties. The seventeenth is likewise written on the same Subject.

In the ninth he declares, That he refus'd to assist at the Consecration of one who was chosen Bishop of Angers; because he was a young Man, and not as yet in Orders, and was not canonically elected by the Clergy, but proclaim'd in a popular Tumult, against whose Election, the Dean, the Chanter, the Archdeacons, and the greatest Part of the Chapter had protested. He declares the same Thing to that elected Person in the twelfth and thirteenth Letter, and exhorts him not to suffer himself to be consecrated.

By the fourteenth, he deposes a certain Person, who had given Money, to be ordain'd a Deacon.

The eighteenth, is a Letter directed to Paschal II. and compos'd with a great deal of Art, to excuse the Canons of St. Martin at Tours, who had given Offence to the Pope, by insisting too much on their Privileges.

Of the principal Authors.

In the nineteenth, he excuses himself for not being able to be present in a certain Council, by reason that his Church and City were pillag'd and oppress'd by the Tyranny of the Councils; alledging also, that he was oblig'd to pass over into England, to give an Account why he refus'd to demolish the Towers of his Church; and that he was ready to undertake another Voyage to Rome, which would put him out of a Capacity of defraying the Charges, that were requisite for a Journey to the Council.

In the twenty first, he entreats a certain Bishop of England to furnish him with St. Anselm's Disputation against the Greeks in the Council of Bari concerning the Procession of the Holy Ghost, and returns thanks to that Prelate, in the following Letter, for sending it to him.

In the twenty third, he intercedes with an Abbot, in behalf of a Monk who return'd to his Monastery, after he had left it, to treat him favourably.

In the thirtieth, he sharply reproves a Priest, who caus'd a Person to be put to the Rack, whom he suspected to have committed a Robbery.

In the thirty first, he gives excellent Instructions to a Lady who had forsaken the Vanities of the World, and in the thirty third, he reprehends a certain rich Lord for his Pride and Covetousness.

In the thirty fourth, he declares that he refus'd to approve the intended Marriage of a Count with one of his Kinswomen; altho' it might put an end to a War that was carry'd on between him and his future Father-in-Law.

In the thirty sixth, he represents to a Christian Virgin the advantages of a single Life, and gives her wholesome Advice, more especially relating to the Vertue of Humility.

In the thirty seventh, he comforts a certain Person who was much troubled, in regard that he was diverted from the Contemplative Life, to take upon him the Pastoral Charge, and shews, by Examples taken out of Holy Scriptures, that it is profitable to joyn the Active to the Contemplative Life.

In the thirty eight, he acquaints the Bishop of Angouleme the Pope's Legate, with the Irregularities of the Monks of St. Evron, to the end that he might send him Word, after what manner he ought to proceed against them.

The thirty ninth, is a Circular Letter written to the Bishops and Priests, and in general to all Christians concerning his Imprisonment. He was sent for by the Count of Rotrou, who was then a Prisoner; and having receiv'd his Confession, with his last Will and Testament by which that Noble-man bequeath'd his Estate to the Church, carry'd that Will to his Mother, who gave him good Entertainment. But the next day, Hildebert himself was taken Prisoner by Count Hubert Chancellor of Rotrou, who detain'd him, notwithstanding the Entreaties of the Inhabitants of the Country and the Sentence of Excommunication publish'd by the Bishop of Chartres, and would not release him till he paid his Ransom. He declares that such an Act is unworthy of a Bishop, and that he chose rather to lose his Life, than to redeem it with Money.

In the fortieth, he exhorts Serlo Bishop of Seez to excommunicate Hubert, who kept him in Prison.

The forty first contains wholesome Instructions to a Young Widow, who after having lead a disorderly Life for some time, devoted her self to God. He furnishes her with proper Remedies against Temptations.

In the forty second, he advertises a Bishop, that Lisiard ought not to be excommunicated for committing Sacrilege and a Rape; since the Virgin whom he took to Wife, was only put in a Monastery, to be instructed, and in regard that she left it to marry him, by the Order of her Mother and Aunt.

In the forty fourth, he determines, that a Priest, who offer'd the Sacrifice of the Mass, with ordinary Bread, having no other at Hand, ought to be punish'd, rather upon the scandal he had given, than for the Fault, which was not great.

In the forty ninth, he commends the Action of a Bishop, who had hinder'd the removing of certain Persons out of the Church, who had taken Sanctuary therein.

The fifty first, is a large Confutation of a certain Person, who reviv'd the Error of Vigilantius, and maintain'd, that the Invocation of Saints was unprofitable, because they do not hear our Prayers, and have no knowledge of Tranſactions on Earth. This Man gave it out, that Hildebert was of his mind; which oblig'd him not only to diſown that Opinion, but alſo to ſhew, by the Teſtimony of the Fathers, that the Saints hear our Prayers, and that they make Interceſſion for us with God.

Of the principle Authors.

In the fifty third, he excuſes himſelf to Clarembaldus Canon of Oxford, for not having ſent to him ſooner, the Hiſtory of the Miracles which happen'd in that City, becauſe they had ſlipt out of his Mind: He gives him to underſtand, that the ſecond Memorandum, which he directed to him, contain'd ſome of the ſame Miracles, with different Circumſtances; but nevertheleſs, he did not judge it expedient to alter his firſt Relation, yet he left him at liberty, either to correct or to ſuppreſs it according to his Diſcretion.

In the fifty fifth, he congratulates the Biſhop of Clermont, for beſtowing an Archdeaconry, on one of the Subdeacons of the Church of Mans, a Perſon very worthy to be promoted to that Dignity, upon account of his Learning and Virtue; and declaims againſt the Cuſtom that was introduced to retain Spiritual Livings in a Family, as it were by right of Succeſſion; citing divers Paſſages againſt that Abuſe.

The fifty ſixth, is a conſolatory Letter to a King, upon occaſion of the Death of his Son. It contains divers excellent Moral and Chriſtian Maxims, touching the Conſtancy, with which Wiſe and Chriſtian People ought to bear Afflictions.

In the fifty ninth, he diſſuades a certain Count, from undertaking a Voyage to St. James of Compoſtella, becauſe his Duty oblig'd him to continue in the Country, where his Preſence was neceſſary.

In the ſixtieth, he writes to the Biſhop of Chartres, with reference to a Prieſt, who having been attack'd by a Robber, knock'd him on the Head with a Stone, ſo that he died of the Wound. His Biſhop after having ſuſpended him for ſeven Years from the Celebration of Divine Service; at laſt conſulted Hildebert, to know whether he ought to reſtore him to his Functions. The latter declares, That it ſeem'd to him, that a Prieſt who has committed Man-ſlaughter, ought no longer to offer the Holy Sacrifice, although he did it in his own defence. He maintains with St. Ambroſe, that it is not lawful for one Man to kill another, even in defending his own Life; and although it were permitted, yet it ought not to be done. He concludes, that if the like caſe had happen'd to one of his Dioceſans, he would have refer'd the Matter to the Holy See.

In the ſixty firſt, he reproves certain Monks, who refus'd to entertain the Biſhop of Chartres at their Table: He ſhews, that the Perfection of the Monaſtick Life does not conſiſt in performing the outward Duties, but in the Practice of Humility and Charity: As for what thoſe Monks alledg'd as an Excuſe for their neglect, viz. That they were not able to give Entertainment to the Biſhop, by reaſon of their Poverty; he aſſerts, That they ought to ſell or pawn the Ornaments of their Church, to exerciſe Hoſpitality towards their Dioceſan.

In the ſixty ſecond, he recommends to a Widow, who had devoted her ſelf to God, the giving of Alms to the Poor.

In the ſixty third, he commends the Counteſs Adela, in regard that after her Converſion, inſtead of undertaking a Pilgrimage to the Holy Land, ſhe had embrac'd the Monaſtick Life.

In the ſixty fourth, he cenſures the Cuſtom of a Monaſtery, where both the Species of the Euchariſt were not adminiſter'd ſeparately; but that of the Bread ſteept in the other of the Wine. He maintains, that the ſopt Bread which our Saviour gave to Judas was not the Euchariſt.

In the ſixty fifth, written by Hildebert, as well as the next, after his Tranſlation from the Biſhoprick of Mans to the Archbiſhoprick of Tours; he acquaints the Pope, that he had taken a Journey to Bretagne, where he held a Synod at Nantes, A. D. 1127. for the Reformation of the Church, chiefly as to what concerns inceſtuous Marriages, and the Succeſſion of Relations to Eccleſiaſtical Preferments: That the Prince had remitted in that Synod, the Right which was claim'd by the Lords to ſeize on the moveable Goods of deceaſed Perſons, and even his own Royal Prerogative, by Virtue of which all manner of Wracks at Sea belong to his Demeans: That it was alſo ordain'd, that the Biſhops ſhould publiſh in their Synods, and the Prieſts in their Churches, that thoſe who preſume to contract unlawful Marriages, for the future, ſhall be excommunicated; and that the Children born in ſuch Wedlock were declar'd Illegitimate: That the Eccleſiaſtical Conſtitutions were reviv'd, concerning the Qualities requiſite in Perſons, who deſign to receive Orders: That it was prohibited to ordain the Sons of Prieſts, unleſs they turn'd Regular Canons or Monks; and that as for thoſe who were already ordain'd, they were not allow'd to ſerve their Fathers Pariſhes in that Quality, leſt they ſhould find means to ſucceed them: And laſtly, That very ſtrict Prohibitions were made that Benefices ſhould be tranſmitted, as it were by Succeſſion. He entreats the Pope to confirm what they had done, more eſpecially the Reſignation that the Prince had made of his Right to the Shipwracks. Pope Honorius II. grants him this Confirmation in the Letter which immediately follows that of which we have but now made Mention.

Of the principle Authors.

In the ſixty ſeventh, he complains to that Pope, that the King of France had confiſcated the Revenues belonging to his Church, and would not ſuffer him to enter the Territories of his Kingdom, becauſe he refus'd to diſpoſe of the Benefices according to the pleaſure of that Prince. He likewiſe wrote to him about the Conteſts that happen'd in the Church of Tours, between the Dean and ſome of the Canons, which was carry'd on to that height, that one of the Canons was maimed, by one of the Collegues and by the Dean's Friends. The latter was accuſed of being acceſſory to the Fact, but he deny'd it, and no Proof being brought againſt him, he clear'd himſelf by his own Oath, and by that of ſeven other Prieſts.

In the ſixty eighth, he tells the Pope, that he had done what his Holineſs requir'd of him, having reſtor'd Bracerius to his Prebend, which he deſerv'd to loſe, by reaſon of the enormity of his Crimes, and in ſending to him Radulphus Dean of St. Maurice, of whom mention is made in the preceding Letter. He juſtifies the Innocence of that Dean, and acquaints the Pope with the Judgment paſſed in his favour.

In the ſixty ninth, he entreats the Pope to confirm a Donation, that the King of England made to the Church of Fontevrault.

In the ſeventieth, he comforts the Queen of England for her Barrenneſs, and gives her to underſtand, that ſhe ought not to look upon it as a diſgrace, but as the means of procuring her Salvation, by adopting the Poor for her Children.

In the ſeventy firſt, he exhorts to perſeverance, a Counteſs, who had quitted worldly Affairs to embrace the Monaſtick Life.

The ſeventy fourth, is a Reprimand given to a Clergyman, who did not lead a regular Courſe of Life.

In the ſeventy fifth, he complains that none of his Friends undertook to maintain the Intereſts of his Church, in the Court of the King of France.

In the ſeventy ninth, he determines, that Nuns who live in a Monaſtery, ought not to go out of it alone, but accompanied with one of their Matrons: He reproves thoſe who act otherwiſe on Holy-days; and obſerves, that about thirty Years were paſs'd ſince he wrote a Treatiſe of Virginity. Laſtly, he declaims againſt ſome Nuns, who dwell in private Houſes, to lead a more diſſolute Courſe of Life.

The eightieth, is a Letter by Marbodus Biſhop of Rennes, which we ſhall mention in its proper place.

The eighty ſecond is an excellent Letter directed to Pope Honorius, in which he expreſſes himſelf with Submiſſion and Freedom, againſt the Appeals made to the See of Rome, which were ſo frequent in that Age. He entreats him at firſt not to be offended at his Letter, nor to attribute that to Preſumption, which he was oblig'd to do by Neceſſity, and leſt the Church ſhould be oppreſs'd by force of Arms, the effects of which he himſelf knew by Experience. He adds, that he has reaſon to hope that his Remonſtrance will not be unacceptable to him, becauſe it is written for the ſake of Juſtice. Afterwards he declares, That that Cuſtom was never approv'd on the hither ſide of the Alpes, and that it is not an Article grounded on the Eccleſiaſtical Laws that all ſorts of Appeals ſhould be receiv'd at Rome: That if that Innovation prevail, the Authority of the Popes will be diſannull'd, and the whole vigour of Church-Diſcipline will be ſubverted: 'For (ſays he) where is the Oppreſſor 'that does not enter an Appeal, as ſoon as he is threatn'd 'with an Anathema? Where is the Clerk who will not 'continue in his exorbitant Courſes, defending himſelf by 'a declinatory Appeal? Or by what means can the Biſhops 'inflict any Puniſhment for the leaſt Act of Diſobedience? 'An Appeal will certainly put a ſtop to his Cenſure, 'weaken his Conſtancy, baffle his Reſoluteneſs, impoſe 'Silence upon him, and cauſe all manner of Crimes to 'go unpuniſhed. However, Hildebert owns, that the Church on the hither ſide of the Alpes has acknowledg'd ſome Appeals, and 'tis but reaſonable that thoſe who have lawful Grievances, ſhould get them redreſs'd by that means, as alſo that thoſe Perſons, whoſe Judges are their Enemies, or ſuſpected, or who fear the Outragiouſneſs of the People, ſhould have the ſame Liberty to ſecure themſelves: But he maintains, that Appeals which are only enter'd on purpoſe to

Of the principal Authors.

to put a ſtop to the Courſe of Juſtice, and to procraſtinate Affairs, ought not to be authoriz'd; and therefore he entreats the Pope no longer to admit any of that Nature.

The eighty third Letter, which is the laſt of this Collection, does not belong to Hildebert but is part of the Preface written by Ives of Chartres on his Decree. Therefore that Piece was only inſerted amongſt Hildebert's Letters by a Miſtake.

Father Dachery publiſh'd in the fourth Tome of his Spicilegium, nine Letters of Hildebert, among which are three very eloquent ones about the Impriſonment of Pope Paſchal II. and afterwards the ſame Author ſet forth fifteen others, which are annexed in the End of the thirteenth Tome. There are ſome amongſt theſe laſt, that relate to the Perſecution which Hildebert ſuffer'd by reaſon of the Diſpleaſure of the King of France, and the Quarrel that aroſe between the Dean of Tours and his Canons. In the ninth, he entreats the Pope not to grant the Pall to the Biſhop of Dol.

Hildebert's other Pieces, are two Hymns on our Saviour's Nativity; A Paraphraſe on the Canon of the Maſs in Verſe; A Sermon on theſe Words of Iſaiah, Chap. 35. Then the Eyes of the Blind ſhall be opened; Another on theſe Words of Jeſus Chriſt in St. Luke, Chap. 12. Unto whomſoever much is given, of him ſhall be much requir'd; A Synodical Diſcourſe to his Curates. All theſe Works and Letters are extant in the Collections call'd Bibliotheca Patrum.

Of the principal Authors.

There are alſo to be ſeen in different places, ſome other Works attributed to Hildebert, viz. The Life of St. Hugh Abbot of Cluny, in the Bibliotheca Cluniacenſis, publiſh'd by Du-Cheſne; The Epitaph of Berenger, refer'd to by William of Malmesbury; A Letter written to Reginald the Monk, and the Preface to the Life of St. Radegonda, ſet forth by Father Mabillon in the firſt Tome of his Analecta, with the beginning of that Life, of which that Father has a Manuſcript Copy in his Poſſeſſion. Roſweida makes mention of the Life of St. Mary the Egyptian, in Verſe by Hildebert, which (as they ſay) is kept in the Library of Lipſick. There are alſo in the Libraries, ſeveral Tracts aſcribed to Hildebert, but we have loſt his Treatiſe of Virginity. Beſides theſe Works, Father Hommey has likewiſe publiſhed ſome in his Collection, which he attributes to Hildebert, but it is not probable, that they belong to that Author.

The other Works of Hildebert, fall very much ſhort of the Elegancy and Politeneſs of his Letters. His Poetical pieces are groſs; neither has he obſerv'd the Rules of Quantity. His Sermons are written in like manner, in a weak and very mean Style. However he was a noted Prelate, who ſhew'd a great deal of Prudence, Diſcretion and Conſtancy in the Management of Affairs, during the whole Courſe of his Life.

GUIBERT Abbot of Nogent.

Guibert Abbot of Nogent.

Guibert Abbot of Nogent ſous Coucy, was born in a Village belonging to the Dioceſs of Beauvais, of a rich and noble Family. He loſt his Father Evrard in his Youth, and was brought up by his Mother, who took a particular care of his Education, but having afterwards retir'd to a Monaſtery, and being inform'd, that her Son did not follow the Inſtructions ſhe had given him, ſhe oblig'd him to take Lodgings in the Abby of St. Germain in the Dioceſs of Beauvais, to live under the conduct of his old Tutor, who became a Monk in that Abby. Guibert did not continue long there, before he had an inclination to aſſume the Monaſtick Habit, and actually put that Deſign in execution, contrary to the Advice of his Mother and Tutor. After having turn'd Monk, he was afflicted with many Temptations, but at laſt was deliver'd from them, by the means of Prayer and Study, and was choſen Abbot of Nogent ſous Coucy in the moſt remote part of the Dioceſs of Laon, where he died in 1124.

A certain ſmall Tract about Preaching, is uſually prefix'd to Guibert's Works, being the Preface to his Moral Commentaries on the Holy Scripture, which is full of Inſtructions, and very methodical. He begins with obſerving, that it is very dangerous for a Perſon obliged to Preach by the Duty of his Function, to neglect the performance of that Duty, by reaſon that as it is a matter of pernicious Conſequence to ſhew bad Examples; ſo it is a very great Offence, not to endeavour to contribute ſomewhat to the reclaiming of Sinners by wholſom Inſtructions. He adds, That Men have different Motives to abſtain from Preaching; that ſome are induc'd to do it by Pride, for fear of paſſing for Preachers, a Quality commonly reputed contemptible in the World; others by Envy, not to communicate their Knowledge to others, and others by Diſguſt or or Slothfulneſs, in regard that they do not think themſelves to lie under any Obligation, becauſe they have no cure of Souls. He maintains, that all Chriſtians, who have attain'd to any Knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, are oblig'd to Preach the Word of God, and that they ought to propoſe no other End of their Preaching, but God himſelf, who is the Subject of it: That Biſhops, Abbots, Curates and all Chriſtians in general, are not only obliged to abſtain from doing Evil, and from giving bad Examples, but are alſo under an obligation to do all manner of Good that lies in their Power, both by their Example and Doctrine. He concludes from that Principle, that the practice of Virtues and the Inſtruction of others ought to be joyn'd together: Thus a Preacher ought to lead an innocent Life, and he who lives well, ought to apply himſelf to the Inſtructing of others.

This Author adviſes that Preaching be preceded by Prayer, to the end that the Soul inſpir'd with the Love of God, may ardently expreſs the Sentiments it has of God, to inflame the Hearts of the Auditors with the ſame Zeal, with which it is tranſported it ſelf. 'For (ſays he) a Diſcourſe 'pronounced in a luke-warm and languid Manner, not 'being agreeable even to him that pronounces it, cannot 'give Satisfaction to the Hearers; and it would be wonderful, that a Diſcourſe deliver'd by a Perſon who is 'not animated himſelf, ſhould be capable of animating o-

Guibert Abbot of Nogent.

'thers. Care ought alſo to be taken (continues he) ſince 'the Word is ſpread abroad according to the effuſion of 'the Heart, that the Diſcourſe be not too tedious by reaſon of its length, and do not clog the Auditors: Therefore how fervent ſoever the Zeal of the Preacher may be, how copious ſoever his Subject, how ſtrong ſoever his Memory, and how extraordinary ſoever his fluency of Diſcourſe, yet he ought to have regard to the Weakneſs of his Auditors, and to conſider, that 'tis more commendable to lay down a few Truths, which will be receiv'd attentively, than to deliver an infinite number of Things, that cannot be retain'd; and that 'tis expedient to leave off before his Auditors be tir'd, to the end when there 'ſhall be an occaſion to Preach to them at another time, they may be diſpoſed to hearken to his Doctrine. He likewiſe admoniſhes Preachers, that they ought to render their Sermons profitable both to the Ignorant and to the Learned, and to explain the Matters they handle in ſuch a manner, as may be intelligible to all ſorts of Capacities; and that it is requiſite, to intermix ſome Sentences taken out of the Old Teſtament in their Diſcourſes, becauſe they appear new, and ſerve to ſtir up the Affections of their Auditors.

Afterwards he treats of the Subjects that ought to be choſen by Preachers, and refers them to the four Senſes of Scripture, viz. the Literal, the Allegorical, the Tropological and Anagogical. He obſerves, that altho' Allegories mingled in the connection of a Diſcourſe be agreeable, and it be ſometimes convenient to explain the literal Senſe of ſome Paſſages of Scripture; nevertheleſs the principal aim of a Preacher ought to be, to diſcover the inward diſpoſition of the Man; that is to ſay, his Thoughts, Affections and Paſſions, and to make ſo natural repreſentations of them, that every one may acknowledge therein the ſecret impulſes of his own Mind. 'Furthermore, (ſays he) Ad'monitions ought not only to be given concerning the 'practice of Virtues, but alſo with reference to the con'nection of Vices, and the means of ſhunning them---- Sometimes a Diſcourſe on the Nature of Vice is no leſs profitable than one on Virtue: For how can a Man take delight in the beauty of Virtue, if he be not ſenſible of the deformity of Vice? Or how can he avoid the latter, if he have no Knowledge of the former? Therefore 'tis requiſite to make known both, to cauſe a Man to be acquainted with himſelf, and to repreſent to him the inward Diſpoſition of his Mind.

This inward Diſpoſition of a Man is perfectly deſcrib'd according to Guibert in St. Gregory's Treatiſes of Morality and in Caſſian's Conferences, but it cannot be well learnt, but by Experience and the Exerciſes of a Spiritual Life. He would not adviſe thoſe that are not accuſtomed to the practice of it, to venture upon new Allegories, and he gives Rules to thoſe who have attain'd to Perfection in ſpiritual Exerciſes, to walk ſafely in a Path, from whence without due circumſpection they may eaſily go aſtray.

He admoniſhes Preachers, to deliver their Sermons after ſuch a Manner, as it may appear that they have no other Intention, but to inſtruct, and to promote the Salvation of their Auditors, and that they do not ſeek for vain Glory by their Eloquence: 'For nothing, ſays he, gives greater 'Offence to an Auditor, than when he is perſuaded that 'the Preacher is only induc'd to ſpeak by Oſtentation or 'private Intereſt; ſo that a Preacher, that has ſuch a Cha'racter, exaſperates rather than inſtructs, and by how much 'the more his Diſcourſes abound with Rhetorical Orna'ments, he renders himſelf ſo much the more contemp'tible to his Auditors.

Of the principle Authors.

Laſtly, he treats of the principal Matters, that ought to ſerve as a Subject for Preachers, and adviſes them not only to repreſent to Sinners the everlaſting Puniſhments that they ſhall undergo hereafter in the future State, but alſo the Troubles, Torments, Vexations and other Calamities, to which they are obnoxious in this Life. This is the Subject of the Preface, which he apparently made to ſerve in ſtead of an Apology againſt the Opinion of his Abbot, who was unwilling to permit him either to preach or to write. It is followed by ten Books of moral Commentaries upon Geneſis, written in Imitation of thoſe of St. Gregory on Job, and by ten other Books of Commentaries of the ſame Nature on the Prophecies of Hoſea and Amos, and on the Lamentations of Jeremiah, on which he impos'd the Title of Tropologiæ.

Guibert's Treatiſe againſt the Jews is a Confutation of a certain Piece full of Blaſphemies againſt Jeſus Chriſt. He diſcourſes particularly of our Saviour's Conception in the Womb of a Virgin, and upon occaſion of that Queſtion, proceeds to treat of Original Sin and Concupiſcence. There is a remarkable Paſſage about Images, in which he ſays, 'That we honour the inviſible Things in the viſible 'Signs; or rather, that we fix our wandering Mind on the 'Contemplation of ſpiritual Things, by looking upon 'Pictures, which ſerve as it were to admoniſh us of our 'Duty.

In his Treatiſe of the Reality of the Body of Jeſus Chriſt, he debates two Queſtions, viz. one on the Sop that was given by him to Judas, and the other about the Reality of our Saviour's Body in the Euchariſt. As to the firſt, he determines, that Judas receiv'd the Sacrament with the other Apoſtles, but that the Sop which our Lord gave him, was not a Sacrament, or ſacred Sign, but the Sign of his Treaſon. In diſcuſſing the ſecond Queſtion, he confutes the Opinion of thoſe, that deny the real Preſence, and who believe, that the Body of Jeſus Chriſt is only a Figure in the Euchariſt.

The Treatiſe of the Praiſes of the Virgin Mary, contains many Encomiums on the bleſſed Mother of our Lord, and the Hiſtory of ſome Miracles wrought by her Interceſſion. He concludes with a Proſe or Hymn in her Honour.

In the Tract about Virginity, he does not only treat of its Excellency, but alſo of the Means of preſerving it; of the Vertues that ought to accompany it, and of the Vices that are deſtructive of it.

In the Treatiſe of the Pledges or Relicks of the Saints, Guibert after having juſtified himſelf in the Preface, as to the Expreſſion utter'd by him that the Euchariſt ſupplies the Place of Jeſus Chriſt, he proceeds to treat of the Honour due to Saints, of their Relicks, and of the Abuſes committed upon that Account; alledging, 1. That the Cuſtoms of Churches may be different, as to Matters of Diſcipline, as about Faſts, the Manner of Singing, &c. 2. That it is neceſſary to receive the Sacrament of Baptiſm and of the Lord's Supper; in ſuch Manner nevertheleſs, that one cannot be ſav'd without being baptiz'd, and yet one may attain to Salvation without actually receiving the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, as it appears by the Examples of ſome Martyrs, who never receiv'd the Communion, and of ſome Hermits, who receiv'd it very ſeldom. 3. That there are ſome Cuſtoms, which are not neceſſary for Salvation, and yet are obſerv'd in the Churches, as the Relicks of Saints, and certain Things that ſerv'd for their Uſe, which we reſpect and honour to follow their Example, and to obtain their Protection. 4. That they only ought to be taken for Saints, who are acknowledged as ſuch either by an ancient Tradition, or by authentick Records, and not thoſe to whom that Quality is attributed by Fancy or in ſome fabulous Relations. 5. He cenſures thoſe who invent falſe Tales, and requires that the Hiſtories of the Lives and Actions of the Saints be carefully examined, and that thoſe only be honour'd of whoſe Holineſs we have a certain Account, and who undoubtedly died the Death of the Righteous. 6. He diſtinguiſhes ſeveral Sorts of Perſons, by whom God thinks fit to work Miracles; ſome of them being as it were the Canals or Inſtruments that he makes uſe of in the performing of preternatural Operations, which tend to the Advantage of others, and are unprofitable to themſelves: God beſtows ſpecial Graces on others, which they never deſerv'd, and makes them worthy by his meer Mercy: Sometimes he affords them to the Faithful, as a Recompence for their Faith and Uprightneſs. 7. He inſiſts, that ſevere Puniſhments ought to be inflicted on thoſe who forge falſe Miracles. 8. He enquires who they are that ought to be honour'd as Saints; of theſe the Martyrs are the firſt, but it ought to be certainly prov'd, that they ſuffer'd for the Chriſtian Faith. As for Confeſſors, he determines, that they only are to be reſpected in that Quality, who were eminent for their extraordinary Sanctity, and of whoſe Salvation we are morally certain: For when there are grounds to doubt of it, he would by no Means have them invok'd. Upon that Occaſion, he propoſes the Example of the Church, which would not avouch that the Body of the Virgin Mary was raiſed from the Dead and glorified, altho' there are many Reaſons that induce us to believe it. 9. He obſerves, in reference to the acknowledged and avouched Saints, that there are many Errors concerning their Relicks; in regard that the Body, Head and other Members of the ſame Saint are to be found in different Places, and every one pretends to have the true Relick. 10. He maintains, That foraſmuch as the Bodies of the Saints are made of Earth, as thoſe of other Men; it were more expedient to leave them in their Tombs, than to ſet them in Shrines of Gold and Silver, to carry them about; and to divide them, as it is uſually done. 'Indeed, ſays he, if the Bodies of the Saints 'had continu'd in the Places where they were, according 'to the Order of Nature, that is to ſay, in their Tombs; 'there would have been no Miſtake nor Conteſt about 'the Reality of their Relicks: For that happens, only be'cauſe they are taken out of their Tombs; cut in Pieces; 'and carried about from one Place to another. 'Tis true, 'that Piety gave Occaſion to the removing of them, but 'Curioſity, in proceſs of Time, corrupted that which was 'done at firſt with Simplicity———Let others Judge as 'they ſhall think fit; for my Part, I make no Scruple to 'aſſert, that they have not done a Thing acceptable to 'God or his Saints, in opening their Tombs, or in divid'ing their Members after ſuch a Manner; ſince the Hea'thens themſelves had a Reſpect for the Sepulchres of the 'Dead. St. Gregory return'd for Anſwer to an Empreſs 'who importun'd him upon the like Occaſion, that he 'durſt not ſend her St. Peter's Head, and the Saints have 'often ſhewn notable Marks of their Indignation againſt 'thoſe, who have preſum'd thus to diſmember their Bo'dies.' 11. He acknowledges nevertheleſs, that thoſe, who honour falſe Relicks without knowing them to be ſo, and ſuppoſing them to belong to ſome Saint, do not ſin, and that he that invokes a Perſon, who is no Saint, believing him to be really ſo, may be heard of God, who knows his good Intention. Laſtly, he condemns the filthy Lucre that is made of thoſe Relicks, by ſelling them, or by exacting Money for ſhewing them; carrying them in Proceſſion; expoſing them, &c. Theſe are the principal Points decided by Guibert in his firſt Book of the Pledges of the Saints, and they are accompany'd with great Variety of Examples of real and counterfeit Miracles, of true and falſe Saints, and of genuine and ſuppoſititious Relicks, which are capable of affording much Satisfaction and Delight to the Reader.

In the ſecond Book, to confute thoſe, who ſet a great Value on certain Relicks, which they aſſerted to belong to our Saviour, as his Teeth, Fore-skin, &c. our Author treats of the Myſtery in which he has really left us his Body: He maintains, That Jeſus Chriſt left no Relicks of his Body, but that he has given it us entire in the Euchariſt: That that Body is not divided and diſtributed to the Faithful by Parcels, but that it is given altogether entire under every Hoſt: That this Sacrament is receiv'd by the Unworthy, as well as by the Worthy, altho' the former do not receive the Grace of the Sacrament: That it may perhaps be devour'd by Rats and other Animals, and paſs thro' their Belly, yet nothing unworthy can befal the Body of Jeſus Chriſt; ſo that the Corruption and other Alterations that appear to our Senſes happen only to the Species, and not to the real Body of our Saviour: Laſtly, That that Body is not in the Euchariſt in the State of a dead or crucified Perſon, but in that of a living and glorified Redeemer. He ſtarts another Queſtion by the way, viz. Whether the Bread that remain'd in the Pyx on the Altar, during the Conſecration, unknown to the Prieſt, were conſecrated; He determines in the negative, and that if an Hoſt were put under the Pale, or a Drop of Wine in the Chalice, without the Knowledge of the Prieſt; they would not be conſecrated.

After having diſcourſed of the true Relick of Jeſus Chriſt in the ſecond Book, Guibert proceeds in the third, to confute the falſe ones, which ſome Perſons pretended to have in their Poſſeſſion. He begins with this fine Maxim, 'Tis 'requiſite to approve the Devotion and Reſpect that Peo'ple have for God and the Saints, but only as far as that 'Devotion does not deviate from the Bounds of true Re'ligion; otherwiſe it happens, that the devout Perſon, in'ſtead of receiving the Recompence of his Action, becomes 'culpable by his Error: For when any Thing is ſaid of 'God,

Of the principal Authors.

'God, or a Worſhip is render'd to him, contrary to the 'Teſtimonies of Truth, the Party ſins ſo much the more 'dangerouſly, in regard that Piety is made uſe of for a 'Pretence; ſince nothing is more pernicious, than to do 'Evil, and at the ſame Time to imagine it to be a good 'Action; For how can any Man correct a Fault, if he 'do not only not believe it to be an Error, but is alſo 'perſuaded, that it is an Action which deſerves to be 'well rewarded?' Afterwards he vigorouſly oppoſes the Opinion of the Monks of St. Medard, who boaſted, that they had a Tooth of Jeſus Chriſt, and grounds his Aſſertions chiefly on this Argument, that our Saviour being raiſed from the Dead, all his Members and Parts ought to be re-united to his glorified Body. 'Tis true indeed, that thoſe Monks might object, that it may reaſonably be ſuppos'd, that our Saviour's firſt Teeth were ſhed, as thoſe of other Children, and that which they had was one of thoſe. Guibert in like Manner propoſes this very Objection in their Name, and eludes it, by averring, that there are many other Reaſons to diſprove their Argument, and that they had none to eſtabliſh it. The Principal that he alledges is, that 'tis not probable, that the Hair, Teeth, Fore-skin and other Things that fell from the Body of the Child Jeſus, were kept at that Time, and that there are no Grounds to believe, that they were preſerved by the Virgin Mary. He likewiſe derides the pretended Milk of the bleſſed Virgin, which was kept in the Church of Laon, and in ſome other Places. The Monks of St. Medard having alledged divers Miracles in Vindication of their Relick, Guibert replies, that that Tooth perhaps might be the Tooth of ſome Saint, or that thoſe Miracles were wrought, upon account of the Faith of thoſe Perſons, who came thither to honour a Relick, which they ſuppos'd to belong to Jeſus Chriſt.

In the laſt Book that bears this Title, Of the Internal World, he treats of Viſions, and of the Apparitions of Demons or Souls, and ſhews that the Viſions of the Prophets, were Viſions of Corporal Things: He acknowledges that Demons are diſpers'd in ſeveral Places, and that they are preſent in this viſible World. He maintains, That the Happineſs of the Elect, and the Puniſhments of the Reprobates, are not corporeal, for the preſent, but ſpiritual; and is of Opinion that Hell-fire, with which the Devils are tormented, is not a material and corporeal Fire, but the extreme Anguiſh they have, to ſee themſelves depriv'd for ever of the bliſsful State, and of the beatifick Viſion; as the Happineſs of the bleſſed Spirits conſiſts, in the Delight they take in beholding the Glory of God. Laſtly, he proves that Souls are of a Spiritual Nature; that they have no Figure; that they are only capable of ſpiritual Sympathies, and that Bodies cannot act on them.

His Piece call'd, Geſta Dei per Francos, or an Account of the Actions that God perform'd by the French, is divided into eight Books, and dedicated to Liſiard Biſhop of Soiſſons. It contains a large and accurate Hiſtory of the firſt Cruſade undertaken by the French, and of the Conqueſts they made in the Levant, and in the Holy-Land, more eſpecially under the Conduct of Boemond Duke of Apulia, and of Godfrey of Bouillon King of Jeruſalem. This Work is written in a ſwelling Style, ſome Verſes being intermixed with the Proſe; but the Author has every where acted as a very faithful Hiſtorian, and has ever declin'd to inſert ſuch Narratives, as had no other Grounds but popular Reports. Of the principal Authors.

The Life of Guibert written by himſelf, is not a ſimple Relation of what befel him, but a Work partly moral, in Imitation of St. Auguſtine's Confeſſions, and partly hiſtorical. He makes long Digreſſions on different Subjects, relating to the Hiſtory of the Abbies of St. Germane, and Nogent ſus Couey, with that of the Churches of Laon, Soiſſons, &c. There are alſo divers Narrations, as a great number of Miracles, Viſions and Apparitions, and of other hiſtorical Matters of Fact that happen'd in his Time.

Among the Works of St. Bernard is likewiſe to be found a Sermon on theſe Words of the laſt Verſe of the XI. Chapter of the Wiſdom of Solomon. Vice ſhall not prevail againſt Wiſdom; ſhe reacheth from one End to another mightily, and ſweetly doth ſhe order all Things; which is attributed to Guibert of Nogent; becauſe he intimates in the XVI. Chapter of the firſt Book of his Life, that he made a Sermon on that Text.

Beſides theſe Works Guibert wrote a Treatiſe on the Sentences taken out of the Goſpels, and the Books of the Prophets, of which he makes mention in the XVI. Chapter of the firſt Book of his Life; but this Work was not brought to Light, and perhaps was never compleated. Father Oudin informs us, that he found in the Library of the Abbies of Vauclair and Igny, certain Commentaries written by Guibert on the Prophecies of Obadiah, Jonah, Micah, Zachariah, Joel, Nahum, Habbakuk and Zephaniah.

This Author having ſpent much Time in the Study of Grammar and Poetry, wrote in a very clear Style, and compos'd indifferent good Verſes. He argues with a great deal of Judgment in his dogmatical Treatiſes, and handles the Matters methodically. He gives a very natural Deſcription of the inward Diſpoſitions and Paſſions of Men, in his Treatiſes of Morality, but is too florid and prolix in the hiſtorical.

His Works were publiſh'd by Father Luke Dachery, in Folio, by Billaine at Paris, A. D. 1651. He has illuſtrated them with learned Notes and large Obſervations, in which he refers to a great Number of ancient Monuments, and produces the Hiſtory of divers Abbies. He has likewiſe inſerted in the ſame Volume, to render it of a competent Largeneſs, the Lives of St. Germane. St. Simon, Count of Crepy, and St. Salberga the firſt Abbeſs of St. John at Laon, who founded that Monaſtery, A. C. 640. as alſo three Books of Hugh Archbiſhop of Rouen againſt the Hereticks of his Time, and the Continuation of Sigebert's Chronicle by Robert of Torigny Abbot of St. Michael's Mount, with a Treatiſe of the ſame Author about the Reformation of divers Abbies, and ſeveral Liſts of the Deans of the Cathedral Church of Laon, and of the Abbots of St. John and St. Martins in the ſame City. Guibert's Hiſtory of the Cruſade was already ſet forth by Jacobus Bongarſius in his Collection of Hiſtorians, printed in 1611. under the ſame Title that Guibert impos'd on his Work, viz. Geſta Dei per Francos.

Sigebert a Monk of Gemblours.

Sigebert.

SIgebert a Monk of Gemblours, after having been publick Profeſſor of Divinity in the Monaſtery of St. Vincent at Metz, return'd to his own Convent, where he apply'd himſelf entirely to Study, and to the compoſing of Books. He vigorouſly maintain'd the Intereſt of the Emperors Henry IV. and Henry V. againſt the Popes, and died A. D. 1113. The following Catalogue of his Works was made by himſelf.

He compos'd during his Abode at St. Vincent at Metz, the Life of St. Thierry, Biſhop of the ſame City, and Founder of the Abby, with an Encomium on that Saint in Heroick Verſe. The Paſſion of St. Lucia in Alcaick Verſe: An Anſwer to thoſe, who cenſur'd the Prophecy of that Saint, in which (as it is reported) ſhe foretold that the Perſecution would ceaſe within a little while, upon the Expulſion of Diocleſian and the Death of Maximilian: A Sermon in Commendation of the ſame Saint, in which he relates the Hiſtory of the ſeveral Tranſlations of her Body from Sicily to Corfu, and from thence to Metz: And the Life of St. Sigebert King of France, who founded the Church and Abby of St. Martin near Metz.

Sigebert after his Return to the Monaſtery of Gemblours, compos'd the following Works, viz.

The Hiſtory of the Paſſion of the Theban Martyrs in Heroick Verſe, and the Life of St. Guibert Founder of the Church of Gemblours: He likewiſe corrected the old Relation of the Life of St. Lambert, and made a new one illuſtrated with Compariſons taken out of the ancient Writers, as alſo an Anſwer to a Letter that Pope Gregory VII. wrote to Herman Biſhop of Metz. To theſe Pieces are to be added, an Apology for the Emperor Henry, againſt thoſe who inveigh againſt Maſſes ſaid by married Prieſts: A Letter written in the Name of the Churches of Liege and Cambray, againſt Paſchal IId's Letter, in which that Pope excites the Count of Flanders to make War with the People of thoſe Territories: An Anſwer to the Inhabitants of Trier concerning the Faſt of the Ember-Weeks. The Book of Eccleſiaſtes in Heroick Verſe, according to the literal, allegorical and mythological Senſes: The Continuation of Euſebius's Chronicle after St. Jerome to the Year 1111. A Treatiſe about the Reformation of the Cycles, and another of the illuſtrious Perſonages, in Imitation of St. Jerome and Gennadius. Sigebert.

Of all theſe Works there only remain in our Poſſeſſion, the Continuation of St. Jerome's Chronicle from A. C. 381. to 1112. The Treatiſe of Eccleſiaſtical Writers: The Letter written in the Name of the Clergy of Liege and Cambray: And the Lives of St. Sigebert, St. Guibert and St. Maclou, referr'd to by Surius.

This Author is very accurate in his Writing, and attain'd to conſiderable Proficiency in the Study of the Liberal Sciences, and in all Sorts of Humane Learning.

Honorius Solitarius, a Scholaſtick Divine of the Church of Autun.

Of the principle Authors.

Honorius.

HOnorius, a Prieſt and Scholaſtick Divine of the Church of Autun, firnam'd the Solitary, flouriſh'd under the Emperor Henry V. A. D. 1120. We have little Account of his Life, but many of his Works are ſtill extant.

The moſt conſiderable, is his Treatiſe of the Lights of the Church, or of the Eccleſiaſtical Writers, firſt publiſhed by Suffridus, and afterwards by Aubertus Miræus in their Collections of Authors, who wrote thoſe that treated of Eccleſiaſtical Affairs. Honorius has divided this Work into four Books, the three firſt of which are only an Abridgment of the Treatiſes on the Eccleſiaſtical Writers by St. Jerome, Gennadius and Iſidorius. He gives an Account, in the laſt, of ſome Authors ſince venerable Bede to his Time. This Treatiſe contains almoſt nothing elſe but the Names and Characters of the Authors, and the Titles of their Works: It is follow'd by another Treatiſe of the ſame Nature, containing the Names of the ancient Hereticks and their principal Doctrines, printed at Baſil in 1544. To theſe two Treatiſes may be added a Chronological Table of the Popes, from St. Peter to Innocent II. which is extant among the other Works of this Author.

The Treatiſe call'd, The Pearl of the Soul; or, Of the Divine Offices, is divided into four Books. In the firſt, he treats of the Sacrifice of the Maſs; of its Ceremonies and Prayers; of the Church; of its Parts and Ornaments; of the Miniſters of the Altar and their Habits, &c. In the ſecond, he diſcourſes of the Canonical Hours, and of the Eccleſiaſtical Offices for the Day and Night. In the third, of the principal Feſtivals of the Year; and in the fourth, of the Concord or Agreement of the Offices of the whole Year, with the particular Days and Times on which they are celebrated. Theſe Books are full of a great Number of Arguments and myſtical Explications that have no other Grounds but the Author's Imagination. They were printed at Leipſick, A. D. 1514. and in the Collections of the Writers who have treated of Eccleſiaſtical Offices.

The Treatiſe of the Image of the World is divided into three Books: In the firſt of theſe, he treats of the World and of its Parts: In the ſecond, of Time and its Parts; and the third is a Chronological Series of Emperors, Kings and other Sovereign Princes, from the Creation of the World to the Emperor Frederick Barberoſſa.

The Piece that bears the Title of The Philoſophy of the World, divided into four Books, is a Treatiſe of the Syſtem of the World, and of its principal Parts: It is follow'd by another Tract of the ſame Nature, touching the Motion of the Sun and Planets.

The Treatiſe of Predeſtination and of Free-will, is written in Form of a Dialogue, and has for its Subject the Explication of that common Queſtion, How can Free-will be reconciled with the Certainty of Predeſtination? He defines Predeſtination to be an eternal Preparation to Happineſs, or Miſery of thoſe that have done Good or Evil, he affirms, that it impoſes no Neceſſity of doing either; becauſe God does not predeſtinate to Happineſs or Miſery, but with reſpect to the Merits of the Perſon: He rejects the Opinion of thoſe who aſſert, that Free-will conſiſts in the Power of doing Good or Evil, and defines it to be a Capacity of performing Righteouſneſs voluntarily and without conſtraint: He maintains, That Man by his Nature, is endued with a Power to act according to the Rule of Righteouſneſs, although he ſtands in need of Grace to do it, and is capable of reſiſting that Grace: He ſays, That God made all reaſonable Creatures for his Glory, but that he left them free to do either Good or Evil by their own Will, and that he would have all Men to be ſav'd, but that 'tis their Free-will, which is the Cauſe of their Damnation. Afterwards he explains, why God made Creatures, when he foreknew that they would ſin againſt him, and that they would be damned: Why the Word was incarnate: Upon what account, Mankind having deſerved nothing but Puniſhment, after the committing of Sin, God leaves ſome in the Maſs of Perdition, who are damned by their Free-will, and ſaves others by his ſpecial Grace, which they by no Means deſerv'd: And how Salvation ought rather to be attributed to Grace than to Free-will, although Free-will co-operates with Grace. He obſerves, That Children, that incur Damnation, are juſtly condemn'd to that Puniſhment; and that thoſe who attain to Salvation, are ſav'd by Grace, which they never merited: And as for adult Perſons, that they are ſav'd by Grace and Free-will, and that thoſe who are damned, are doom'd to that Sentence by Juſtice, and by their Free-will: That Predeſtination neither ſaves nor damns any Perſon by Force; although all the Elect are infallibly ſav'd, and the Reprobates infallibly damned: But foraſmuch as 'tis not known, whether one be of the Number of the Elect or of the Reprobates, that 'tis requiſite to uſe all poſſible Endeavours for the attaining to Salvation: And that the Number of the Elect is certainly determined, becauſe God from all Eternity, knew thoſe who would die in that State. He adds, That Man ſince Adam's Tranſgreſſion, may fall by his Free-will, but that he cannot riſe again but by Grace; and that God ſometimes denies that Grace to thoſe who are too Preſumptuous: That every Thing which happens in the World, ought to be referr'd to God; either becauſe he does it, or becauſe he permits it, or in regard that he does not prevent it; that he cauſes all Things to tend to the Promoting of his own Glory; that he ſhews Mercy on whomſoever he thinks fit, by affording them his Grace; that he hardens others at his Pleaſure, by leaving them in their Wickedneſs and in the State of Reprobation. Laſtly, after having made ſome moral Reflections, our Author concludes this Work, with a Recapitulation of the Principles that he had already eſtabliſh'd.

Of the principle Authors.

In the Catalogue of the Works of Honorius of Autun, no mention is made of certain Queſtions relating to the Books of Proverbs and Eccleſiaſtes, but they come very near his particular Style and Genius.

His Commentary on the Canticles is preceded by a Preface, concerning the different Senſes of Holy Scripture, the Diviſion of the ſacred Books, and the general Queſtions which relate to that Book in particular. He explains the Text of it according to the four Senſes expreſſed in his Preface, viz. the Hiſtorical, the Allegorical, the Tropological and the Anagogical.

This Treatiſe is follow'd by another call'd, The Seal of the bleſſed Virgin Mary; in which he applies to Jeſus Chriſt and to the bleſſed Virgin, what is expreſs'd in the Book of Canticles, concerning the Bridegroom and the Spouſe.

All theſe Works were collected by Andreas Scotus and Joan Covenius, and printed in the twelfth Tome of the Bibliotheca Patrum of the Colen Edition, and in the twentieth of that of Lyons.

The following Works compos'd by the ſame Author are loſt, viz. An Illuſtration divided into three Books, the firſt of which treats of Jeſus Chriſt; the ſecond of the Church, and the third of Eternal Life. It cannot be that which is attributed to St. Anſelm, and which is extant amongſt his Works, becauſe the Subject of the three Books written by the latter, is altogether different: The Mirror of the Church conſiſting of moral Diſcourſes: A Treatiſe call'd, The Scandal raiſed by the Incontinency of Prieſts: An Hiſtorical Abridgment: A Treatiſe of the Euchariſt: The Knowledge of Life; or a Treatiſe of God, and of Eternal Life: The Ladder of Heaven, or the Degrees of Viſion: Some Extracts out of St. Auguſtine, in Form of a Dialogue between God and the Soul: A Treatiſe of the Pope and the Emperor: A Commentary on the Books of Pſalms and Canticles: Certain Homilies on thoſe Goſpels that were not explain'd by St. Gregory: The Key of natural Philoſophy, concerning the Nature of Things: The ſpiritual Nutriment, about the Feſtivals of our Saviour and the Saints, and ſome Letters. Mention is made of theſe Works, and of thoſe that are ſtill extant, in the End of his Treatiſe of Eccleſiaſtical Writers, and in Trithemius.

In the End of the Works of Honorius of Autun, is annexed a certain Commentary on the Canticles, that is more moral than myſtical, and which ſome attribute to him; but it is not his genuine Commentary. This Author is not of good Eſteem, upon account of his Style or Accuracy, but for his Induſtry, and the Pains he has taken in making Enquiries.

ERNUL-

ERNULPHUS or ARNULPHUS

Biſhop of Rocheſter.

Of the principal Authors. Ernulphus

Ernulphus or Arnulphus, a Monk of St. Lucian at Beauvais, left his Monaſtery by Reaſon of the Diſorders that happen'd therein, and made Application to Lanfrank Archbiſhop of Canterbury, under whom he had ſtudy'd in the Abby of Bec. He continu'd for a long time in the Quality of a ſimple Monk in his Monaſtery at Canterbury, was made Prior of it by St. Anſelm, and afterwards Abbot of Burck. At laſt he was ordain'd Biſhop of Rocheſter in 1115. and govern'd that Church during nine Years and ſome Days. He died, A. D. 1124. in the 84th Year of his Age.

Father Dachery publiſh'd two Letters written by this Prelate in the ſecond Tome of his Spicilegium, which are two ſmall Tracts. The firſt is directed to Waquelin Biſhop of Windſor, as an Anſwer to a Queſtion, which that Biſhop propos'd to him in a Conference they had together at Canterbury; viz. Whether a Woman, who has committed Adultery with her Husband's Son, whom he had by another Wife, ought to be divorced from her Husband? He maintain'd the Affirmative, and the Biſhop to whom he wrote, aſſerted the Negative. In this Treatiſe Ernulphus anſwers the Objections of that Prelate; ſhewing, that all the Paſſages of Holy Scripture, in which 'tis forbidden to part Man and Wife, ought only to be underſtood of a voluntary Separation, between Perſons who are not guilty of Adultery, and afterwards confirms his Opinion, by making it appear, that the Biſhops, to prevent Diſorders, have often condemn'd Adulterers, to abſtain for ever from the Uſe of Marriage; that it is the uſual Cuſtom of the Church; that this Puniſhment is ordain'd in the Penitential Books; and that a Divorce is juſtly allow'd upon account of Spiritual Alliance, although it be not expreſs'd in the Scripture as Adultery. He adds, that 'tis not unjuſt, that a Husband ſhould be divorced from his Wife, although he be Innocent of the Crime committed by her, and that there are many other Cauſes, for which a Husband is obliged to put away his Wife.

The ſecond Letter of the ſame Author, is directed to a certain Perſon nam'd Lambert, who had propos'd five Queſtions, although he was unknown to him. The firſt is to know why the Euchariſt is adminiſter'd at preſent after a different and almoſt contrary manner, to that which was obſerv'd by Jeſus Chriſt; becauſe it was cuſtomary at that time, to diſtribute an Hoſt ſteept in Wine to the Communicants; whereas Jeſus Chriſt gave his Body and Blood ſeparately? Ernulphus replies to that Queſtion, that our Saviour, being come into the World, for the Salvation of Men, preſcrib'd to them what was neceſſary to be done in order to obtain it, without expreſſing the manner in particular: That therefore, he did not tell them, Baptize in this or that manner; let the baptized Perſon be plunged three ſeveral times in the Water; do not permit the Catechumens to be conſecrated at firſt with Holy Chriſm, &c. but only ſaid ſimply, Baptize them: That by this means, the Things which are abſolutely neceſſary may be eaſily known, and thoſe that may be ſometimes omitted or alter'd: That upon that very account, ſome Cuſtoms, which were in uſe in the Primitive Church, were not long obſerv'd: That it is certain, for Example, that the Apoſtles receiv'd the Communion after Supper, although it be now receiv'd Faſting: That they celebrated it on a wooden Table, although at preſent it is offer'd on a Stone-Altar; that the Bread they made uſe of was ordinary Bread, and that that which is now us'd is finer and more looſe: That therefore 'tis not to be admir'd, if this Bread be given ſteept; although there was no ſuch Cuſtom heretofore, that the Prieſt ſhould mingle ſome part of the Species of Bread with the Wine: That this manner of Adminiſtration is obſerv'd, leſt any ill Accidents ſhould happen in the diſtribution of the Wine alone, and leſt it ſhould ſtick on the Hairs of the Beard or Whiskers, or ſhould be ſpilt by the Miniſter.

Of the principal Authors.

The ſecond Queſtion is, Why a fourth part of the Hoſt is put into the Chalice? He anſwers, that it is not cuſtomary to divide the Hoſt into four Parts, but only into three; yet that third part, which is put into the Chalice, is as large as the fourth part of the Hoſt; although care be taken in ſome Churches, to make it exactly of the bigneſs of the third part. He affirms that this Cuſtom was introduc'd, becauſe the Prieſt or Biſhop who Officiates, ought to communicate with that part which is put into the Chalice, and to diſtribute the two others to the Deacon and Sub-deacon, who are Aſſiſtants. He produces another myſtical Reaſon of the ſame Cuſtom, viz. That the Body of Jeſus Chriſt which is offer'd upon the Altar, is the Sacrament or the Figure of his Myſtical Body, which is the Church, compos'd of three Orders; that is to ſay, Superiours, Virgins and married Perſons; or elſe that it is done to be a Figure of the Myſtery of the Trinity, or to denote the three States of Jeſus Chriſt, viz. the Mortal, the Dead and the Raiſed.

The third Queſtion is, Why the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt is receiv'd ſeparately from his Body, and why it is receiv'd in his Body? He returns for Anſwer, that they who receive the two Species ſeparately, do it in imitation of Jeſus Chriſt; and although his Body be receiv'd entire, under each Species, nevertheleſs each Species is receiv'd ſeparately, becauſe our Saviour has diſtinguiſh'd thoſe two Things; deſigning to expreſs to us by his Body, his Fleſh and Members, ſuch as they appear'd, ſolid and entire, and by his Blood, that which was ſhed by him on the Croſs.

The fourth, is to know, Whether the Body of Jeſus Chriſt be received with, or without a Soul? He anſwers at firſt, that theſe ſorts of Queſtions are uſually ſtarted by Perſons who affect to ſeem learned, and who endeavour to lay Snares for the Faith of weak Chriſtians, who humbly believe what the Holy Ghoſt teaches them: That 'tis moſt expedient not to enter upon the debate of ſuch Queſtions: That although one cannot comprehend how the Bread and Wine are made the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt; nevertheleſs it cannot be doubted, ſince our Saviour ſaid, This is my Body, this is my Blood: That it argues Fooliſhneſs to endeavour to penetrate into the incomprehenſible Secrets of the Myſteries of Chriſtianity, and into that in particular, which is a Myſtery of Faith: That it is certain, that the Subſtance of the Bread and Wine is chang'd into the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt; although it ſtill appears to the Senſes to be Bread and Wine, and that it retains all the Qualities of them: Laſtly, that as the Qualities of the Bread and Wine are to be found, although the Subſtance does not appear; ſo it may be ſaid after the ſame manner, that the Qualities of the Body, are not to be found therein, although its Subſtance remains: And that therefore 'tis impertinent, to ask whether the Body of Jeſus Chriſt, in the Euchariſt, be dead or immortal, or whether it be endu'd with a Soul or not.

The laſt Queſtion is about the Senſe of theſe Words of the Prophet Joel, Chap. 2. verſe 14. Who knoweth if God will turn and repent, and leave a Bleſſing behind him? He ſays that the turning of God conſiſts in the remiſſion of Sins, which he grants to thoſe who are converted; and that when it is ſaid, That he leaves the Bleſſing behind him, the meaning is, to thoſe who follow him.

St. BRUNO and GUIGUE,

Priors of the Carthuſian Monaſtery at Grenoble.

Of the principal Authors.

ST. Bruno, Founder of the Carthuſian Order, was born in the City of Colen, and his Parents, tho' of mean Condition, took care that he ſhould apply himſelf to ſtudy; in which he ſoon made a conſiderable Progreſs, and attained to much skill both in Divinity and Humane Learning: After having officiated for ſome time in Quality of Canon of St. Cunebert at Colen, he was invited to Rheims, made Canon and Scholaſtick Divine or Prebend of that Church, and nominated publick Profeſſor of Divinity. He had ſome Conteſts with Manaſſes his Metropolitan whoſe Irregularities he could not endure, and was one of his Accuſers. Whereupon he was oblig'd to leave the City of Rheims, and took a reſolution to retire entirely from worldly Buſineſs. He had for his Aſſiſtants in carrying on that Deſign, Lauduin, two Canons of St. Rufus, both nam'd Stephen, one of Burgos and the other of Die; Hugh whom they call'd their Chaplain, becauſe he was the only Prieſt among them, and two Lay-men nam'd Andrew and Guarin. Theſe ſeven Perſons, who were excited by an earneſt deſire to promote their own Salvation, ſeeking for a place convenient to lead a ſolitary Life, ſeparated from all manner of Commerce with other Men, went to Grenoble, and made Application to Hugh Biſhop of that City, a Prelate of great Sanctity, who receiv'd them with all the Marks of Charity, that they could wiſh for, and appointed the ſolitude of La Chartreuſe for their Habitation, where they ſettled, A. D. 1086. St. Bruno, who was the moſt able Divine among them, was choſen their firſt Prior; but he was ſent for to Italy, in 1090. by Pope Urban II. and retir'd with his Permiſſion to a ſolitude of Calabria, call'd La Torre, where he died October 6. 1101. Lauduin ſucceeded him in the Priory of La Grand Chartreuſe, and one Peter ſupplied his Place; after whom John was promoted to that Dignity, whoſe ſucceſſor was Guigue de Caſtre a Native of Valence in Dauphine the fifth Prior of that famous Monaſtery, who committed the Statutes of the Order to Writing, and govern'd it during 27 Years, that is to ſay, from A. D. 1110 to 1137.

The Works of Bruno Biſhop of Segni, are commonly attributed to this St. Bruno, and among thoſe that bear his Name, printed at Colen in 1611. and publiſh'd by Theodore de Camp a Carthuſian Monk of that City; there are only two Letters that really belong to St. Bruno which were written concerning his ſolitude in Calabria; one of them being directed to Radulphe le Verd, Provoſt of the Church of Rheims, whom he exhorts to retire from the World, and the other to his Monks of La Chartreuſe.

Of the principal Authors.

Guigue in the like manner compos'd divers Works, beſides the Statutes of his Order, lately printed in the firſt Tome of the Annals of the Carthuſian Monks, viz. the Life of St. Hugh Biſhop of Grenoble, referr'd to by Surius in April 1. Certain Meditations, or rather Moral Notions, printed in the Bibliotheca Patrum: A Treatiſe of the contemplative Life, or the Ladder of the Cloiſter; or of the four Exerciſes of the Monaſtick Cell, which are annexed to St. Bernard's Works: A Treatiſe of Truth and Peace, a Manuſcript Copy which is kept in the Library of the Carthuſians at Colen; And divers Letters, four of which are ſtill extant, and were ſet forth by Father Mabillon, in the ſecond Tome of St. Bernard's Works.

The firſt is directed to Haimeric Chancellor of the Church of Rome; in which he inveighs againſt the Pride and Luxury of the Clergymen of his time, eſpecially thoſe of the Church of Rome; and aſſerts, that recourſe ought not to be had to Arms or to the Secular Power, to maintain the Intereſt of the Church, or to augment its Grandeur.

In the ſecond, written to Hugh Prior of the Knights Templars, he declares, That he does not exhort him to make War with the viſible Enemies of the Church, but to oppoſe its inviſible Enemies, and that he would adviſe him to ſubdue Vice, rather than to attack the Infidels.

In the third, he comforts Pope Innocent II. and exhorts him, not to be ſurpriz'd at the Efforts made againſt him by the Schiſmaticks; avouching at the ſame time, that there can be but one Pope, and that the whole World ought, in a manner, to be look'd upon as his Dioceſs.

In the laſt, he writes to the Monks of the Carthuſian Convent at Durbon near Marſeilles, that he had caus'd a Collection to be made of St. Jerom's Letters, and had corrected a great Number of Faults which had crept into them; declaring alſo, that he retrench'd from that Collection thoſe Letters, which the meanneſs of the Style, or the difference of the Conceptions, made it appear to be unworthy of that great Man. He likewiſe makes a Catalogue of the latter, and paſſes a very judicious Cenſure upon them; which ſhews that Solitude and the Practice of Piety, do not hinder a Man from applying himſelf to Study, and that the Art of Critique is not incompatible with Morality and Spiritual Exerciſes.

St. NORBERT.

St. Norbert.

ST. Norbert, a Native of Santen, a Village of the Country of Cleves; the Son of Herbert and Hatwiga, was educated in the Palace of Frederick Archbiſhop of Colen, and afterwards brought to the Court of the Emperor Henry V. He was admitted among the Clergy, and receiv'd the Orders of a Deacon and Prieſt on the ſame Day. He was made a Canon in his native Country, and enjoy'd divers other Spiritual Livings: But being afterwards tranſported with an extraordinary Zeal, he addicted himſelf to Preaching, with the Permiſſion of Pope Geleſus II. and having quitted his Benefices, and diſtributed his whole Eſtate to the Poor, he embrac'd a more regular Life. He converted by his Preaching, many Hereticks and a great Number of Sinners. Upon his Arrival at Laon, being entreated by Bartholomew Biſhop of that City, not to leave his Dioceſs, he was prevail'd upon, by the requeſt of that Prelate, and choſe for the Place of his Abode, a diſmal Solitude call'd Premontre, where he retir'd A. D. 1120. and there founded the Order of Regular Canons which bears that Name, and which was confirm'd five Years after, by Pope Honorius II. in 1126. Some time after, St. Norbert was ſent for to Antwerp to confute Tanchelin or Tanchelm, accus'd of Hereſie, and was conſtrain'd the next Year to accept of the Archbiſhoprick of Magdeburg. He aſſiſted in the Council held at Rheims, A. D. 1131. in favour of Innocent II. took a Journey to Rome, when that Pope was re-eſtabliſh'd by the Emperor Lotharius, and died in 1134. There is only extant a ſmall moral Diſcourſe written by him in form of an Exhortation, and directed to the Monks of his Order.

St. Norbert.

STEPHEN HARDING Abbot of Ciſteaux.

Stephen Harding.

ROBERT, Abbot of Moleſme, who firſt founded the Monaſtery of Ciſteaux, A. D. 1098. with 21 Monks of his Abby, whom he brought into that Solitude, had not long the Government of it; for the next Year, he was oblig'd by the Pope's ſpecial Order, to return to his own Monaſtery. Alberic, who ſucceeded him, and govern'd Ciſteaux during nine Years and a half, gave no other Rule to his Monks but his Example. Afterwards Stephen Harding deſcended of a noble Family in England, one of the 21 Monks who came from Moleſme with Robert, being choſe Abbot of Ciſteaux, apply'd himſelf to the compleating of that Order, and may juſtly be reputed the Founder of it: For he was the firſt that held general Chapters of the Convents of the Ciſtercian Monks, and made a kind of Rule, which was common to all thoſe Monaſteries. He call'd it the Charter of Charity,

Stephen Harding.

Of the principal Authors.

Charity, and publish'd it in 1119. It was approv'd by Pope Calixtus II. It is divided into thirty Chapters, which contain the particular Rules to be obſerv'd by thoſe Monks, and is compriz'd in the Monologia Ordinis Ciſtercienſis, printed at Antwerp in 1635. and in the Annals of the ſame Order, printed at Lyons in 1642. There are alſo extant in the Bibliotheca Ciſtercienſis, a Treatiſe call'd, The ſmall Beginning of the Ciſtercian Order: A Sermon on the Death of Alberic: And a Diſcourſe made to St. Bernard, when he receiv'd the Monaſtick Habit, which bear the Name of that Abbot of Ciſteaux.

Of the principal Authors.

BRUNO Biſhop of Segni.

Bruno.

BRuno of Aſti, Canon of the Cathedral Church of that City, and afterwards of that of Sienna, went to Rome in the Time of Pope Gregory VII. in whoſe Preſence he diſputed againſt Berengarius, and by way of Recompence, was made Biſhop of Segni: He retir'd to Mount Caſſin under Paſchal II. who was offended at his Retreat, and drew him out of that Monaſtery, to ſend him in Quality of his Legate into France and Sicily. He govern'd the Abby of Mount Caſſin for ſome Time, but afterwards return'd to his Biſhoprick, and died there, A. D. 1123.

The Works of this Author were publiſh'd by Maurus Marcheſius, a Monk of Mount Caſſin, who caus'd them to be printed in two Tomes at Venice in 1651.

The firſt contains his Commentaries on the Pentateuch, on the Books of Job, Pſalms and Canticles, and on the Revelation of St. John; in which he adheres more to the Moral, than to the other Senſes of the Text.

In the ſecond, are compris'd forty five Sermons on the Goſpels of the whole Year, the greateſt Part of which were printed under the Name of Euſebius of Emiſa and St. Eucherius: A Treatiſe on the Song of Zachariah: Another of the Incarnation and Burial of Jeſus Chriſt, in which he enquires how long our Saviour continued in the Sepulchre: A Tract to prove the Uſe of unleaven'd Bread againſt the Greeks: An Explication of certain Ceremonies of the Church: The Life of Pope Leo IX. A Treatiſe about the Corruption of the Age, proceeding, as he ſays, from Simoniacal Practices; in which he diſcourſes of the Invalidity of Ordinations made by Simoniſts, and of thoſe of Perſons guilty of that Crime: The Life of St. Peter of Anagnia: Two Letters, viz. One directed to the Biſhop of Porto, and the other to Pope Paſchal: Six Books of Sentences or Moral Diſcourſes on divers Subjects, which ſome have attributed to St. Bruno Founder of the Carthuſian Order, and which Marcheſius reſtor'd to Bruno of Segni upon the Credit of Petrus Diaconus, by reaſon of the Conformity of the Style, and in regard that the Author of theſe Diſcourſes makes it appear, that he obſerv'd St. Benedict's Rule, and that he wrote on the Apocalypſe.

Bruno.

To theſe Works are annexed a Commentary on the Book of Pſalms, by Odo a Benedictin Monk of Acti, dedicated to Bruno of Segni.

The Treatiſe of the Sacraments or Rights of the Church, by Bruno Biſhop of Segni, was publiſhed by Father Luke Dachery, in the twelfth Tome of the Spicilegium, as a new Piece, although it was printed in the Venice Edition.

MARBODUS Biſhop of Rennes.

Marbodus

Marbodus, flouriſh'd at Angers in the End of the preceding Century in Quality of Canon, Archdeacon and principal Maſter of the Schools of that Church. Afterwards he was nominated for the Biſhoprick of Rennes by Pope Urban II. was ordain'd in the Council of Tours, A. D. 1096. and govern'd that Church during twenty eight Years. When he perceiv'd himſelf to draw near his End, he left his Biſhoprick, and retir'd to the Monaſtery of St. Aubin at Angers, where he aſſum'd the Habit of St. Benedict, and died in the Beginning of the Month of September A. D. 1123. Sigebert aſſures us that he wrote a Commentary on the Book of Canticles, but it is no longer extant.

Marbodus compos'd divers Poetical Works printed at Rennes, in 1524. in which Edition are to be found certain Hymns on Mary Magdalen: Three Prayers to God: One to the Virgin Mary: Several Epigrams and Letters in Verſe: Divers moral Poems: A Piece on the caſting away of Jonas: Another on the Martyrdom of the Maccabees: The Paſſions of divers Martyrs in Verſe: The Life of St. Maurillus of Angers in Verſe: Sixty Poetical Pieces on the precious Stones, and on other Subjects: Ten other Poetical Pieces on the following Subjects, viz. on the Manner of Writing; on Time; on Eternity; againſt leud Women; in Commendation of vertuous Women, on old Age; againſt thoſe who imagine that the Stars have any Influence over the Bodies of Men; againſt Voluptuouſneſs; on true Friendſhip, and on the Advantages of Death and of the Reſurrection.

These Poems are follow'd by ſix Letters, in the firſt of which directed to Renaud Biſhop of Angers, Marbodus complains, That that Prelate after having perſecuted and traduc'd him, publickly condemn'd him, for writing to the Pope, that the Diſturbances raiſed by the Biſhop of Angers hinder'd him from going to Rome. He upbraids him with the Services he did him, in cauſing him to be choſen Biſhop, and the Aſſiſtance he gave him in expediting his Journey to Rome, to get his Election confirmed; that in ſtead of a grateful Acknowledgment of that Kindneſs, he was no ſooner return'd from Rome, but he depriv'd him of thoſe Favours and Privileges, which were granted to him by his Predeceſſors, without ſo much as allowing him ſix Months Reſpit, to make an honourable Retreat; and, that after having made Complaint of his being treated ſo unworthily, the Biſhop of Angers cited him to Rome, knowing that he was not in a Condition to go thither; obtain'd Power to condemn him, and actually pronounc'd Sentence againſt him under colour, that he had receiv'd Induction into two Churches. After having thus ſmartly reprehended Renaud, he adviſes him to moderate his Anger; not to be too far tranſported with the Heat of his Youth; to have a greater Reſpect for his Elders; and to take Care leſt his irregular Conduct ſhould verifie the Report given out by ſome Perſons, viz. that Proſperity and the high Station to which he aſpir'd, had ſufficiently diſcover'd the Corruption of his Manners. Marbodus adds, that he does not give him this Admonition to the end that he might be more favourable to him, but leſt he ſhould abuſe his Authority in treating others after the ſame Manner.

Marbodus

The ſecond Letter is directed to Robert d' Arbriſelles, whom he reproves, as Geffrey of Vendome had done, for keeping too familiar a Correſpondence with Women, and for ſuffering Men and Women to cohabit together. He repreſents to him the Danger of that intimate Converſe, and the Scandal that it might occaſion. He likewiſe blames him for wearing a torn Garment, as not being ſuitable to the Profeſſion of a Regular Canon, which he imbrac'd at firſt, or to the Sacerdotal Dignity, to which he was afterwards advanced. He accuſes him of affecting ſingularity in that particular, and adviſes him to reſume the Habit of a Regular Canon, and to return to his former Courſe of Life. But he is much more offended at him for taking upon him to reprove the Vices of abſent Clergymen in his Sermons, and for inveighing againſt certain Orders and Perſons of great Eminency: He affirms, that that ſerves only to bring Superiors into Contempt, to ſubvert the Order of the Church, and even to induce many to believe, that his Deſign in declaiming againſt others, was only to gain popular Applauſe. He declares at the ſame Time, that altho' he had a better Opinion of him, yet it cannot be deny'd that his Preaching has the ſame Effect, and that many of his Hearers abandon their Curates, and refuſe to receive the Sacraments from them, or to pay them Tithes; whereas they run after him inceſſantly, being excited by Curioſity and an Inclination to Novelty rather than a true principle of Piety; ſince it does not appear, that there is any Manner of Reformation in their Lives and Converſations: Laſtly, he rebukes him, for giving the Monaſtick Habit, to all thoſe who being mov'd by his Sermons, were deſirous to receive it, without making any Trial of their Integrity and Conſtancy, as alſo in regard that he took no Care, that they ſhould be thoroughly converted, provided the number of his Followers were encreas'd: That after they had once given in their Names, he took no farther Cognizance of their Affairs, but left them at liberty to act as they thought fit: That ſome of them met together, and ran about the Towns and Countries, cloathed with Habits of ſeveral Colours, wearing long Beards, and walking bare-footed: And that when they were ask'd who they were, they made Anſwer, That they belong'd to their Maſter. Our Author is unwilling to impute to him the Extravagances committed by thoſe People, but obſerves it to be a Matter of dangerous Conſequence, that they ſhould thus make uſe of his Authority for a Cloke to their Folly, and call themſelves his Diſciples.

Of the principal Authors.

As for the Nuns which Robert d' Arbriſelles in like Manner caus'd to be ſhut up in Cells; without any Probation, he ſays, that ſome of them broke thro' the Paſſages to make their Eſcape, and that others were brought to Bed in their Appartments, which would not have happen'd, continues he, if the Prudence of the Governor, had made a Trial of their Strength. He concludes with remonſtrating to him, that he was cenſur'd for quitting the Canonical Life which he had imbrac'd, and for leaving the Monaſtery, where he had made a Vow of Conſtancy, and where he was conſtituted Superior of his Collegues, to lead an extraordinary Kind of Life, and to take upon him the Government of a Nunnery. Therefore Marbodus demands of him a ſatisfactory Anſwer, as to thoſe particular Articles, otherwiſe he declares that he ſhould have very good Reaſon to doubt of his Salvation. 'Tis probable, that Robert d' Arbiſelles clear'd himſelf from theſe Imputations that were laid upon him, even to our Author's Satisfaction; but there is no likelihood, that this Letter was forged, as Father Mabillon has aſſerted. In a certain Manuſcript of the Abby of St. Victor, it is attributed to Hildebert Archbiſhop of Tours, nevertheleſs the Style comes nearer to Marbodus's Manner of Expreſſion than to that of the former.

In the third Letter, he reproves a certain Hermit nam'd Ingilquier, and thoſe of his Congregation for their indiſcreet Zeal againſt unworthy Prieſts, with which they were tranſported too far; inſomuch that they not only refus'd to aſſiſt at their Oblations, but alſo forbid the Laicks to receive the Sacraments from their Hands. He ſhews by many Paſſages of St. Auguſtine, that the Sacraments may be duly adminiſter'd by unworthy Prieſts, and that they ought not to be depis'd by reaſon of the Unworthineſs of thoſe who adminiſter them. The Hermit having return'd for Anſwer, that he did by no means recede from the Doctrine of the Church relating to the Validity of the Sacraments adminiſter'd by unworthy Prieſts, but that he was perſuaded that Hereticks ought to be ſhun'd, and that Prieſts guilty of Fornication ought to be depos'd; Marbodus replies in his fourth Letter, that he is of his Opinion, but that he conceives that it does not belong to every one to try or condemn them, and that it ought only to be done according to the Rules of the Church. Therefore he adviſes thoſe Hermits, to reprehend ſuch Offenders with Gentleneſs; to pray for them; and to accuſe them (if they ſhall think fit) before competent Judges who have a Right to bring them to their Trial; to the end that they may be depos'd if they be convicted, or confeſs their Crime.

Of the principal Authors.

The fifth is a Requeſt that he makes to Vitalis, the Founder of a Nunnery, to receive a certain poor Orphan, who altho' ſhe was well inſtructed in Matters of Religion, yet could have no Hopes of being admitted into the old Monaſteries, where, by an ill Cuſtom, that was then too common, Money was prefer'd before Learning and Piety.

The laſt Letter is directed to a Nun nam'd Agenorida, to whom he gives a great deal of wholſome Advice, for her Inſtruction in the Chriſtian Courſe of Life and religious Exerciſes.

Theſe are all the Works that are contain'd in the old Edition of Marbodus, which is become very ſcarce. His Copies of Verſes are not very elegant, nor of a very Poetical Strain, but comprie many judicious and ſolid Notions. His Letters are accurately written, and full of good Maxims and Paſſages of the Holy Scripture and the Fathers, admirably well apply'd. The Monks of St. Aubin at Angers, wrote a Circular Letter, to give Notice of his Death, according to the Cuſtom of the Order of St. Benedict, in which they celebrate his Praiſe, and Ulger Biſhop of Angers likewiſe wrote a Copy of Verſes in his Commendation. Theſe two Monuments are prefix'd to Marbodus's Works.

ARNULPHUS Biſhop of Liſieux.

Arnulphus

Arnoul or Arnulphus, Biſhop of Liſieux, Archdeacon of Seez, was inſtall'd in the Biſhoprick of Liſieux, A. D. 1141. and in 1147. accompany'd Lewis ſirnam'd the Young, King of France, in his Expedition to the Holy Land. In 1160 he was ſent into England by Pope Alexander III. in Quality of his Legate, and afterwards employ'd in the Negotiations between King Henry II. and Thomas Becket Archbiſhop of Canterbury; but having too obſtinately taken part with the latter, he incurr'd the King's Diſpleaſure, and was oblig'd to retire in 1180. to the Monaſtery of St. Victor near Paris, where he died Auguſt 11. A. D. 1182.

This Arnulphus made a Collection of his own Letters at the Requeſt of Gilles Archbiſhop of Roan, to whom he dedicates them by his firſt Letter. Theſe are written in a fine Style, being full of ingenious Notions and moral Sentences, which render them both uſeful and delightful. There are many that contain only Compliments, or relate to certain private Concerns; but there are others about Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, comprehending divers Points of Diſcipline, particularly, thoſe directed to Pope Adrian IV. in the firſt of which, this Biſhop recommends to him the doing Juſtice to a certain Perſon, who had recourſe to the See of Rome, to get Satisfaction for the ill Treatment he had receiv'd in his own Country, where he could not obtain any Relief of his Dioceſan. Arnulphus obſerves in that Letter, that People began not to have the ſame Reſpect for the Holy See as formerly, and that thoſe who appeal'd to it, were ſo far from getting their Grievances redreſs'd, that they were more injuriouſly treated than before, which befel him in whoſe Favour he wrote, who had no ſooner enter'd an Appeal, but he was put in Priſon; neither could he procure his Liberty, but by paying a Sum of Money to his Perſecutor, and by ſubmitting to the Biſhop's Sentence. Therefore he exhorts the Pope to revenge the Indignity, by reaſon that if they were ſuffer'd thus to elude the Deciſions of the Holy See, its Protection would become altogether unprofitable.

In another Letter directed to the ſame Pope, he entreats him to ſend back the Biſhop of Baieux, whoſe Preſence was much wanted in his Dioceſs, where he had done a great deal of good.

He wrote again to that Pope, about the Conteſts that aroſe between the Abbot and the Monks of Jumieges. Thoſe Monks had accus'd their Abbot of many Crimes, and more eſpecially of Incontinency, and divers Witneſſes had made Depoſitions againſt him, but they gave their Teſtimony about different Matters of Fact, ſo that there was not any compleat poſitive Proof againſt him, becauſe every Fact was prov'd only by one ſingle Witneſs. Whereupon Arnulphus admitted him to clear himſelf by his own Oath, and by that of three Abbots and three Monks of known Probity. The Monks appeal'd from his Court to the See of Rome, and demanded Letters of Reference, which he calls Apoſtolos (this is the firſt Time I met with this Term in that Signification.) He acquaints Pope Adrian, that he had granted their Requeſt, and that in the mean while, he order'd both Parties to do nothing, that might tend to the Prejudice of the Appeal.

Arnulphus

He likewiſe wrote to the Abbot of St. Evroul, that he was oblig'd to diſcharge the Debts that were actually contracted by his Predeceſſors, and threatens to ſuſpend him, unleſs he gives Satisfaction to his Creditors before Whitſuntide. He enjoyns that Abbot by another Letter, under Pain of Suſpenſion, to re-admit a certain Monk, whom he had turn'd out of his Monaſtery, without hearing what he alledg'd in his own Defence.

In another Letter to William Biſhop of Mans, he deſires him to appoint another Place in ſtead of Poitiers, for the Trial of the Treaſurer of Rouen; becauſe he would be oblig'd to take a much longer Journey thither, than his Adverſary, who was nearer that City.

Arnulphus being at Variance with a certain Lord, who refus'd to acknowledge his Juriſdiction, it was order'd by the Legates of the See of Rome, That the ſaid Lord ſhould reſtore what he had taken from him; that he ſhould cauſe Satisfaction to be made by thoſe of his Vaſſals, who were excommunicated; that he ſhould make a due Preſentation of a Prieſt to govern that Church and People, under his Authority, as belonging to his Dioceſs. The Nobleman offer'd Arnulphus to preſent a Prieſt to him by the Hands of Hugh Archbiſhop of Rouen; but Arnulphus reply'd to that Archbiſhop, who made him the Propoſal, That if Matters were ſo order'd, it might be taken for granted, that the Poſſeſſion of that Place was not adjudg'd to him, but only reſign'd by way of Sequeſtration, which would be prejudicial to his Right, when the † Claim ſhould come to be debated: Beſides that 'twas not ſufficient to preſent a Prieſt to him, but that 'twas requiſite that every Thing which was ordain'd, ſhould be effectually put in Execution: Laſtly, as for the reſt, that if they were willing to come to ſuch an Agreement, as would entirely put an End to the Difference, he would readily take take such Measures, as should be judg'd most expedient; but that 'twas not reasonable, for him to supply his Adversary with Arms, who was preparing with all his might for the Encounter.

† Petitoire

Of the principal Authors.

The Schism that happen'd in the Church of Rome after the Death of Pope Adrian IV. between Alexander III. and Octavian, gave Occasion to Arnulphus to write many Letters; the first of which is directed to Alexander III. to congratulate his Election. He assures him in that Letter, That God, who never abandons his Church, altho' he suffers it to be sometimes persecuted; would give him the Victory over his Enemies, and put him in the peaceable Possession of the Holy See, as he had done Pope Innocent, altho' he had a more formidable and a more potent Antagonist than Octavian: He expresses the great Joy he had at his Promotion, and gives him to understand, that he had taken Care to prepossess the King his Master (meaning Henry II. King of England) with respect to that Affair, and to make him sensible of the Validity of his Election, and of the Deficiency of that of his Adversary; That upon his Testimony that Prince had declar'd for him, and had promis'd with a great deal of Satisfaction, that he would not acknowledge any other Pope; That having afterwards receiv'd a Letter from the Emperor, who entreated him to defer the declaring in his Favour, he had superseded the publishing of his Declaration; but that he still persisted in his former Resolution, and that whatever Course the Emperor might take, he would not follow him, if he did not find it expedient.

Pope Alexander reply'd to Arnulphus, That he was very sensible of the Affection that he express'd towards him in his Letter; that he had caus'd it to be read publickly as a Proof of the Sincerity of his Intentions and of his Eloquence; that he was not ignorant by what Means an End was put to the Schism which arose in the Time of Pope Innocent; that he hop'd that thro' the divine Assistance, the Storm which at present disturb'd the Tranquility of the Church of Rome, would ere long be dispers'd; that he gave Thanks to God, that King Henry continu'd strenuously to maintain the Unity of the Church; that he entreated him to use his best Interests with his Majesty to hinder the frequent Sollicitations of the Emperor from obliging him to alter his Mind; and that to that Purpose he thought fit to nominate him his Nuncio in the Court of that Prince, with Authority over the Bishops of his Dominions. He acquaints him, That the Emperor Frederick never ceas'd, since his Accession to the Imperial Crown, to persecute and oppress the Church of Rome; that in Adrian's Life-time he caused the Prelates, who were returning from Rome, to be taken Prisoners; that he miss'd the Legates of the Holy See; that he seiz'd on the Revenues belonging to the Church of Rome; and that he us'd his utmost Efforts to expel Adrian, and to cause Octavian to be made Pope in his stead: That what he was not able to put in Execution, whilst that Pope was yet living, he endeavour'd to compass, after his Death, by favouring the Intrusion of that Man, who attempted to get Possession of the Holy See, and whose Usurpation was abetted only by three Prelates, to the Prejudice of the Canonical Election of himself, which was carry'd on by the others in due Form: That to maintain it, he call'd an Assembly of the Prelates at Pavia, and that Octavian resign'd the Marks of the Papal Dignity in his Presence: That the Emperor afterwards restor'd 'em to him, invested him with the Pontifical Habits and Ornaments, particularly with the Ring and Crosier-staff, and by Force constrain'd the Bishops of that Council to own him as Pope. Lastly, he further informs Arnulphus, that he had actually excommunicated Frederick and his Adherents.

Arnulphus having receiv'd this Letter, wrote one to the Archbishops and Bishops of England, to make 'em sensible of the Justice of Alexander's Cause. He says, That if the Persons of the two Competitors be compar'd, it will appear, that Alexander is endu'd with all the Accomplishments of Learning and Vertue, that can be wish'd for in a Prelate; whereas his Adversary has no other personal Merits to recommend him but his Quality; and if the two Elections be duely examin'd, one may be soon convinc'd, that that of Alexander is regular, solemn and reasonable, and that that of the other, on the contrary, is rash and altogether unreasonable. 'For can it be affirm'd '(says he) that an Election manag'd by a single Bishop 'and two Cardinals, ought to be set up in opposition to 'the Authority of the whole Church? Or that a precarious Consecration made by a few private Persons, ought 'to be preferr'd to that which was perform'd with the 'requisite Solemnities, and with the general Approbation of all the People? Can Octavian's Proceedings be 'justify'd, who assum'd the Pontifical Habits, who by an 'unheard of Rashness plac'd himself in St. Peter's Chair, 'and seiz'd on the Palace, whilst Alexander chosen with 'an unanimous Consent refus'd, thro' Humility and Modesty, to accept of that Dignity? Or can the Violence 'that Octavian afterwards offer'd, in besieging Alexander 'and his Electors with armed Men give him any Manner 'of Right or Title? Or could he under that Pretence averr, 'that he was in Possession of the Holy See nine Days be'fore Alexander? Indeed the latter was chosen by the Se'nate, and conducted to the Wardrobe, where the Pon'tifical Habits were kept: He was also ordain'd by the 'Bishop of Ostia, to whom the Right of consecrating the 'Popes legally belongs; he was acknowledg'd by the Le'gates, who resided in different Countries; and the whole 'Church would have continu'd in Peace; if his Adver'sary had not fled for Refuge to the Emperor, whom he 'knew to be ready to afford him his Assistance.' He adds, That that Prince was glad to meet with so fair an Opportunity, which he sought for after the Example of his Predecessors, who had long ago form'd a Design to bring the Church of Rome under Subjection to their Dominion, and upon that account favour'd the Schismaticks, and excited Divisions in that City: That Octavian had absolutely made him the Master of his Fortune; that he laid the Marks of the Pontifical Dignity at his Feet; and that he afterwards receiv'd from him the Investiture of the Church of Rome, by the Ring and Staff, causing the Imperial secular Power to triumph over the Priesthood: That the Emperor call'd a Council to confirm that Choice, and compell'd the Bishops by Force to sign a Writing, by which they own'd Octavian as lawful Pope: That that Writing was full of manifest Untruths, and that the Bishops could not by their definitive Sentence render an Election valid, that was null in its Original. Besides that the Gallician Church which always had the good Fortune to maintain Justice and Truth, and to afford a Sanctuary to the Popes when persecuted by the German Princes, after having examin'd the Elections of Alexander and Octavian in a Council call'd by the King's Order, for that Purpose, had determin'd in Favour of the former; but that the King had prudently defer'd the Publication of that Resolution, by reason of the Union between him and the King of England, to the end that they might act jointly together: That the latter had in like manner sufficiently declar'd on Alexander's Behalf, in regard that he receiv'd his Letters, and more especially protested, that he would not own any other Pope, having also rejected those of Octavian. In the mean while, he admonish'd them to take care that Injustice might not prevail over the Truth, through the sinister Practices of some English Noblemen, who gave it out, that they were related to Octavian, and exhorted them, whenever they met together, strenuously to maintain the Truth without Fear of offending those Opponents.

Of the principal Authors.

In another Letter written to the Cardinals, he gives a particular Account of divers remarkable Circumstances of the Elections of Alexander and Octavian, viz. That the Bishop of Frescati, who was the first of the three Electors of the latter, being a voluptuous Man, took great Delight in Feasting, and soon retir'd from the Conclave because Dinner-time drew near: That one of the two others took it it ill, that he was deny'd the Office of Chancellor, and that the third was Octavian's Kinsman: That assoon as those three had given their Votes for him, he himself took the Cope, and threw it over his Shoulders with so great Precipitation, that that Part which ought to lie on the Neck, fell to the Ground; that he got upon the Papal Throne in that Equipage; and that having caus'd the Doors of the Church to be set open, it was immediately fill'd with his Guards, who conducted him to the Palace: That the King of France call'd an Assembly of the Estates of the Realm, as well of the Clergy as of the Nobility, to determine which of the two Elections ought to be ratify'd: That some were of Opinion, that nothing should be done in a hurry about an Affair of that Importance, and that it ought to be deferr'd for some time longer, because it was dangerous to excite a Mis-understanding between the King and the Emperor upon that Account: That they also added, that the Church of Rome was always burdensome to Princes; that 'twas requisite to shake off the Yoke, since so fair an Occasion offer'd it self to that Purpose; that the Death of the two Competitors would put an End to the Contest; and that the Government of the Bishops might be sufficient, till God should more clearly make known his Will: Lastly, that the Respect due to the Emperor's Ambassadors, who were present, and to the King of England, whose Sentiments the King of France declar'd himself ready to follow, caus'd those Measures to be taken in the Assembly. Arnulphus, in the End of this Letter, advises the Cardinals not to exasperate the King of England by their Threats, but to pacifie him, since the Obedience of the Kingdoms of England, France, Spain, Ireland and Norway depended on his Declaration.

Of the principal Authors.

Although Arnulphus had done ſuch notable Services to Alexander III. nevertheleſs that Pope, upon the Accuſations brought againſt him by Sylveſter, Treaſurer of his Church, and by John, Nephew to the Biſhop of Seez, did not forbear to nominate the Biſhops of Mans and Avranches Commiſſioners, to take Cognizance of that Cauſe. Arnulphus appear'd before them, and William Biſhop of Paris and Cardinal, was preſent at the Trial. The Treaſurer own'd before the Judges, the Falſhood of the Complaints that he had made againſt his Dioceſan, and promis'd that he would not renew them for the future. John ſtill maintain'd what he had averr'd, but the Sentence not being favourable to him, he appeal'd from that Court to the See of Rome, although the Pope gave Commiſſion to the two Biſhops to paſs Judgment without any Appeal. However Arnulphus, who upon that Account might have exempted himſelf from going to Rome, and might have refus'd to ſuffer his Cauſe to be tried again there, after having inform'd the Pope of the Manner of the Proceedings, aſſur'd his Holineſs, that he would repair to Rome, aſſoon as it was poſſible, and entreated him to detain John till he arriv'd, to ſhew how that Perſon and the Biſhop of Seez his Uncle, have committed a Treſpaſs againſt the Church and the Holy See.

He explains this in the following Letter directed to Alexander. One of his Relations was ſometime Biſhop of Seez, who ſubſtituted Regular Canons in that Church in the room of Secular. This Reformation was approv'd by the Popes Honorius II. Eugenius III, and Adrian III. and by Henry II. King of England, who made them a Donation. Theſe Canons were to have all their Goods in Common, according to their original Inſtitution, and the Biſhops his Succeſſors were likewiſe oblig'd, before they were inſtall'd, to maintain that Settlement. The Biſhop then incumbent, deſign'd to ruine it, or at leaſt to obtain a Licenſe of the Pope, to confer the Archdeaconries on Laymen, that he might have wherewithal to beſtow on his Nephews and Relations. Arnulphus ſent Word to the Pope, That that Biſhop palliated his carnal Affections with the Pretence of Piety; giving it out, That there was not any Perſon in that Dioceſs, capable of performing thoſe Functions; as if the Simplicity of the Canons were not to be preferr'd to the worldly Wiſdom of others; or in caſe there were none to be found at Seez, worthy of poſſeſſing thoſe Benefices, ſome might not be taken out of the Church of St. Victor and St. Rufus. He adds, that having been Archdeacon of Seez, and educated in that Church, he thought himſelf oblig'd to maintain its Rights and Privileges, and that for that Reaſon, he judg'd it expedient to certifie his Holineſs thereof by a Letter.

Notwithſtanding this Information, the Pope granted to the Biſhop of Seez a Licenſe to ſecularize his Archdeaconry; but Arnulphus wrote a very ſmart Letter to him on that Subject, in which he remonſtrates, That he had no Authority thus to aboliſh an Inſtitution made by his Predeceſſors, under colour that they could not impoſe Laws on their Succeſſors: He maintains, that that Maxim is falſe, and that it tends to the Ruin of all the Eſtabliſhments of the Saints: That the Privileges of the Popes of Rome, are as it were Teſtaments, which are not made void, but rather confirm'd by the Death of the Teſtators: That 'tis true indeed, that the Errors of Predeceſſors may be corrected by their Succeſſors, and that the latter may make ſome Alteration for the better in the Sanctions of the others, when 'tis requiſite for the publick Advantage, and when it may be done without any Detriment to Religion: That for that very Reaſon, Secular Canons may be chang'd into Regular, becauſe the Order of the latter is more perfect; but a more ſtrict Inſtitution cannot be chang'd into one leſs perfect; by which means Remiſsneſs in Diſcipline would be authoriz'd: And laſtly, that there are ſome Perſons ſo prodigal of Diſpenſations, that they retain nothing as an unalterable Law, and ſacrifice every Thing to the Intereſts and inordinate Paſſions of private Men. He reproves the Pope for not ſhewing ſufficient Conſtancy in maintaining the Rights of the Church; and gives him to underſtand, that he had ſcandaliz'd it by revoking the Sentence of Excommunication, denounc'd by his Predeceſſors againſt Laicks who ſhall attempt to get themſelves admitted into the Chapter of Seez; by adjudging to a Layman all the Revenues of the Archdeaconry that the Regular Canons enjoy'd in Common, and part of which they diſtributed to the Poor; and by permitting a Man, adorn'd with gorgeous Apparel to take Place amongſt the Canons cloath'd in Sackcloth. He adds, That 'tis further to be fear'd, leſt the Archdeaconry ſhould be left vacant, by reaſon that it is already appointed for another young Nephew, when he ſhall be of Age: That in the mean while, the Biſhop has turn'd out the Prior of the Canons, and ſubſtituted a Perſon of no Repute in his Place, to the end that he might make himſelf Maſter of the Church-Revenues. Therefore he exhorts the Pope to revoke what was extorted from him by Surprize, in order to re-eſtabliſh the Rule in that Chapter, and to put an End to the Complaints and Murmurings occaſion'd by that Innovation.

Of the principal Authors.

The four following Letters are directed to the ſame Pope, and contain an Account of particular Affairs. In the laſt he acquaints him, That the King of England was diſſatisfied with his Holineſs, becauſe he deny'd him thoſe Favours he ſu'd for at Rome.

He congratulates in another, Gilbert Biſhop of London, in regard that the Pope had ordain'd, that his Cauſe ſhould be decided without an Appeal, and obſerves that Appeals to Rome often put falſe Accuſers in a Capacity to oppreſs innocent Perſons, and give them an Opportunity to avoid the Puniſhment due to their Crimes.

In another Letter, he reproves a certain Abbot for leaving his Monaſtery to ſollicit Law-ſuits at Court, and enjoyns him to return thither.

In a Letter that he wrote to Henry Cardinal Biſhop of Piſa, ſending him the Works of Ennodius; he paſſes a very diſadvantageous Judgment on that Author.

In his Letter to the Biſhop of Angouleſme, he determines that the Engagements that a certain Child was under, whom his Uncle had bound to a Clerk, upon Payment of a Sum of Money, ought not to be ratify'd, and that that Biſhop cannot ſuffer the ſaid Child to be detain'd by him.

In a Letter written to Arnold Abbot of Bonneval, he treats of the Uſefulneſs of the Sacrifice of the Maſs. 'Nothing, ſays he, can be offer'd up more precious than 'Jeſus Chriſt; nothing more efficacious than this Sacri'fice; nothing more advantageous both to him who of'fers it, and to him for whom 'tis offer'd, if the Unwor'thineſs of the Perſons doth not render it unprofitable: 'Tis requiſite that he who offers it have pure Hands, 'and that he, for whom it is offer'd, ſhould know the 'Value of it by Faith; that he ſhould earneſtly deſire it; 'and that he ſhould embrace it with a perfect Charity. 'Oh, how great is this Benefit, which is ſufficient for 'the Perſon who receives it, and for him that adminiſters 'it! For how extenſive ſoever the Prieſt's Charity may 'be towards certain Perſons, this Sacrifice remains alto'gether entire for every one in particular. It is commu'nicated to many, ſo as its Efficacy is not diminiſh'd, 'with reſpect to every Individual; and altho' different 'Perſons partake of it, yet it does not ſuffer any Diviſion. Quoſcunque enim Sacerdos effuſa charitatis latitudine complectatur, totum ſimul omnium, totum uniuſcujuſque eſt Sigillatim, nec integritatem dividit communicatio plurium, nec ſoliditatem minuit participatio diverſorum.

He has alſo inſerted amongſt his Letters, a Diſcourſe that he made in the Council of Tours, A. D. 1163. in the Preſence, and by the Order of Pope Alexander III. In the Beginning of it he ſays, That there are three Qualities requiſite in a Preacher, viz. Sanctity of Life, to procure Reſpect for what he delivers; a perfect Knowledge, to be capable of teaching the neceſſary Truths; and Eloquence to cauſe them to be approv'd, to the end that his Sermons may be holy, learned and ſublime. In the Body of this Sermon, he treats of the Unity and Liberty of the Church, ſhewing that thoſe two Qualities are neceſſary therein, and that the Miniſters ought to uſe their utmoſt Endeavours to maintain them, more eſpecially at a Time when both are attack'd; that is to ſay, the former by the Ambition of Schiſmaticks, and the other by the Oppreſſion of Tyrants: That nevertheleſs, 'tis impoſſible that either ſhould compaſs their Deſign: For although the former ſeparate themſelves from the Communion of the Church, yet it is not divided by that means, but the Chaff is only ſeparated from the Wheat; and although the latter ſeizes on the temporal Revenues of the Church, nevertheleſs it does not ceaſe to be free, and to exerciſe its Power with ſpiritual Authority. However, that the Biſhops ought to make uſe of all poſſible Means to reunite the former to the Communion of the Church, and to oblige the others to quit their unjuſt Claim to the Eccleſiaſtical Revenues. This is the Subject of a long and very pathetical Exhortation made by him to the Biſhops of the Council; and in the Sequel of the ſame Diſcourſe, he wiſhes that the Emperor would humble himſelf under the Almighty Hand of God; that he would acknowledge that the Dominion of the Church is above his, and that he would ſubmit to the See of Rome, which conferr'd the Empire on his Predeceſſors. He obſerves that Biſhops may poſſeſs large Revenues, provided they do not take themſelves to be the Proprietors, but only the Diſpenſers of them, and are perſuaded that the Patrimony of Jeſus Chriſt is the Inheritance of the Poor, which ought to be diſtributed to them, and that they who put it to another Uſe are to be look'd upon as Robbers.

This

Of the principal Authors.

This Diſcourſe is follow'd by another, pronounc'd in a Synod held for the Ordination of a Biſhop. He begins with the Commendation of the Church, and afterwards rejects the Perſon of Girard, who was propos'd, alledging, That although there was a Form of Election in his Favour, nevertheleſs he ought not to be ordain'd, by reaſon that it is not to be endur'd that the Liberty of Elections, which was introduc'd for the Benefit of the Churches, ſhould be made prejudicial to them, and therefore that the Election of Girard was null, as having been carry'd on only by ſome few Perſons devoted to his Intereſt.

He acquaints that Pope in another Letter, That he had paſs'd Sentence in Favour of Hugh Abbot of Senlis, in a Cauſe that was depending between that Abbot and Garnier a Prieſt, concerning the Church of Marine, for the Trial of which he was nominated a Commiſſioner with Henry Biſhop of Senlis. He likewiſe gave him Notice in the following Letter, that the King of England had favourably receiv'd his Letters and Nuncio's, and that he had re-inſtated the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; but he complains that the Nuncio's did not promote the making of Peace, and entreats the Pope to do it.

In another Letter, he informs the ſame Pope, That he had put an End to the Conteſt between the Abbot of La Couture and Hermier the Prieſt, about the Church of Breule.

In one of the Letters directed to the Pope's Legates, Albert and Theodin, he determines, That it is not expedient to beſtow Altars, that is to ſay, Benefices on the Sons of Prieſts, leſt it ſhould occaſion Diſorders.

Afterwards he writes to Pope Alexander againſt thoſe Monks, who refuſe to obey their Biſhop, and claim a Right to retain Cures and Tithes.

He complains in particular of the Abbot of St. Evrou, who preſum'd to celebrate Divine Service; notwithſtanding the Sentence of Suſpenſion he had pronounc'd againſt him.

Of the principal Authors.

The Poems of this Author are not very conſiderable as to the Subjects, but they are exact in reference to the Rules of Poetry, and the Verſes are very fine. The firſt is on the Nativity of Jeſus Chriſt, the ſecond is an Encomium of the Biſhop of Windſor; and the reſt on the Alteration of the Seaſons, and on ſome other profane Subjects. There are alſo two Epitaphs of Queen Mathilda, one of Algarus Biſhop of Coutances, and another of Hugh Archbiſhop of Roan.

Father Dachery has publiſh'd in the ſecond Tome of his Spicilegium, an excellent Diſcourſe dedicated to Geffrey Biſhop of Chartres, and compos'd by Arnulphus, when as yet Archdeacon of Seez, againſt Peter de Leon the Antipope, and Gerard Biſhop of Angouleſme his Legate. It is written with a great deal of Earneſtneſs and Energy, ſo that the Author gives us a very lively Deſcription of the Irregularities and Vices of that Antipope and of his Legate; maintains the Election and Proceedings of Innocent II. and makes it appear that the latter is the true Pope.

Father Dachery has likewiſe ſet forth in the End of the thirteenth Tome of the Spicilegium, a Sermon upon the Annunciation of the Virgin Mary, and five Letters by the ſame Author.

The other Works of Arnulphus, Biſhop of Liſieux, were printed at Paris, from a Manuſcript of Adrian Turnebius's Library, A. D. 1585: and afterwards in the Bibliotheca Patrum.

Peter de Celles Biſhop of Chartres.

Peter de Celles.

PEter, ſirnam'd de Celles, from the Name of his firſt Abby, commonly call'd Monſtier-la-Celle, in the Suburbs of the City of Troyes, was deſcended of an honourable Family of Champagne. He apply'd himſelf to Study at Paris, and was apparently a Novice in the Monaſtery of St. Martin des Champs. He was choſen Abbot of Celles, A. D. 1150. tranſlated from thence to the Abby of St. Remy at Rheims in 1162. and at laſt made Biſhop of Chartres in 1182. in the place of John of Salisbury. After having govern'd that Church during five Years, he died Feb. 17. 1187.

The following Works of this Author were collected and publiſh'd by Father Ambroſius Januarius, of the Congregation of St. Maur, and printed by Lewis Ballaine in 1671. But the firſt of his Works is a Courſe of Sermons on all the Feſtivals of the Year, which were never as yet printed. However, notwithſtanding the Reputation they might have in his Time, Father Januarius obſerves, that they are weak, and that Peter de Celles is not very ſollicitous to prove a Truth thoroughly, but paſſes lightly over from one Subject to another; although his Writings are full of pious Conceptions, Flowers of Scripture and very uſeful Inſtructions. He might alſo take notice, that they are full of Puns, affected Antitheſes, ſorry Alluſions, mean Deſcriptions and Notions, which have not all the Gravity that is requiſite in Diſcourſes of that Nature. In his eighth Sermon on the Lord's Supper, we find the Term of Tranſubſtantiation, which is alſo in Stephen Biſhop of Autun, who liv'd in the ſame Century: And indeed, thoſe two Authors are the firſt that made uſe of it. The three Books of Bread, dedicated to John of Salisbury, contain a great number of myſtical Reflections on all the ſorts of Bread mention'd in the Holy Scripture. The myſtical and moral Expoſition of the Tabernacle is a Work almoſt of the ſame Nature. The Treatiſe of Conſcience, dedicated to Aliber the Monk, relates altogether to Piety, and that of the Diſcipline of the Cloiſter, comprehends many moral Inſtructions in the Exerciſes of the Monaſtick Life, which he follow'd above thirty Years. This Piece was ſet forth by Father Dachery, in the third Tome of his Spicilegium.

Peter de Celles.

The laſt Work in this Edition, is a Collection of the Letters of Peter de Celles, which were already publiſh'd with Notes by Father Sirmondus, A. D. 1613. They are divided into nine Books, and relate either to pious Subjects or to certain particular Affairs, or are merely complimental. Indeed, they are written with greater Accuracy than his other Works, being of a more natural and leſs affected Style; nevertheleſs they are full of verbal Quibbles and Puns. In this Collection are three Letters on the Feſtival of the Conception of the Virgin Mary, in which Peter de Celles ſtrenuouſly maintains St. Bernard's Sentiments on that Subject. Nicholas, a Monk of St. Alban, was of a contrary Opinion, and averr'd, That the bleſſed Virgin was never obnoxious to Sin. This is the Subject of the twenty third Letter of the ſixth Book; but the Monk vindicates his Opinion in the ninth Letter of the laſt Book, and confutes that of St. Bernard, yet not without expreſſing a great deal of Reſpect for the Perſon of that Saint. However, he does not treat Peter de Celles with the ſame Moderation, who being nettled, returns him a ſomewhat ſharp Anſwer in the tenth Letter of the ſame Book. Peter was then Biſhop of Chartres.

JOHN of SALISBURY Biſhop of Chartres.

Of the principal Authors.

John of Salisbury

JOHN of Salisbury the intimate Friend of Thomas Becket Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and his Companion during his Exile, was at laſt made Biſhop of Chartres, A. D. 1179. and died three Years after. He was one of the moſt ingenious, moſt polite and moſt learned Men of that Age, as is evident from his Book call'd Policraticon; or, A Diſcovery of the Fopperies of the Lords of the Court. Juſtus Lipſius aſſures us, that many conſiderable pieces of Purple and Fragments of a better Age, are to be found in that Work: Peter of Blois in like manner declares that he was even charm'd with it, having diſcover'd therein a well regulated ſort of Learning and abundance of Things, the Variety of which renders them extremely delightful. And indeed, 'tis an excellent Work, treating of the Employments, Occupations, Functions, Virtues and Vices of the Men of the World, but more eſpecially of Princes, Potentates and great Lords; in which is contain'd a vaſt Treaſure of Moral Notions, Sentences, fine Paſſages of Authors, Examples, Apologues, Extracts of Hiſtory, common Places, &c. 'Tis divided into Eight Books, and compos'd in a plain and conciſe Style.

But this Style is more proper for the numerous Letters which the ſame Author wrote to the Popes Adrian and Alexander; to the Kings of England and divers other Princes; to Thomas Becket Archbiſhop of Canterbury; to ſeveral Engliſh Biſhops; and to many other Perſons; either about general Occurrences and Tranſactions, as the Schiſm of Octavian the Antipope, and the Election of Alexander III. the conteſt between the Pope and the Emperor Frederick; and that between the King of England and the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; or relating to particular Affairs of the Churches of England; or to certain Points of Doctrine and Dicipline: As the 172d Letter concerning the Number of Writers of the Canonical Books of the Old and New Teſtament; the 67th about the Nullity of a ſecond Marriage which a certain Woman had contracted after ſhe was divorc'd from her former Husband who was a Prieſt; the 68th about the Cohabitation of Women with Clerks; and the 69th about the Sums of Mony that were exacted of the Vicars of Churches. In theſe Letters he appears to be much addicted to the Intereſt of Thomas of Canterbury, whoſe Conduct nevertheleſs he ſometimes cenſures, and ſeems likewiſe to be much devoted to the Pope's Service. although he does not always approve every thing that is done at Rome, and condemns the Vices of the Cardinals on certain Occaſions. He openly approves the depoſing of the Emperor Frederick, and the Proceedings of Pope Alexander againſt him. His Letters are full of Alluſions to the Sacred Hiſtory, and of Examples taken out of Holy Scripture; in which he alſo intermixes many Paſſages of Profane Authors. The number of theſe Letters amounts to 301. and they were Printed at Paris, A. D. 1611. with the Life of Thomas Becket Arch-biſhop of Canterbury, by the ſame Author; to whom are likewiſe attributed certain Commentaries on the Epiſtles of St. Paul, Printed at Amſterdam in the Year 1656.

Of the principal Authors.

Peter of Blois Archdeacon of Bath.

Peter of Blois

PETER, firnam'd of Blois, from the Place of his Nativity, deriving his extraction from Bretagne, ſtudy'd the Liberal Sciences at Paris; the Civil and Canon Law at Bononia, and after having attain'd to a profound skill in all ſorts of Humane Learning, apply'd himſelf entirely to the Study of Divinity, under the Tuition of John of Salisbury Biſhop of Chartres. It is alſo probable that Peter of Blois was Canon of that City; however, having paſs'd into Sicily, A. D. 1167. with Stephen the Son of the Count of Perche, and the Couſin of the Queen of Sicily, he was choſen Tutor and afterwards Secretary to William II. King of Sicily, but he was ſoon oblig'd to leave that Country, when Stephen Count of Perche, who was made Chancellor of the Kingdom and Archbiſhop of Palermo, was baniſh'd from thence. Upon his return to France, he was invited over into England by King Henry II. and after having ſpent ſome time at Court, he retir'd to the Palace of Richard Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and became his Chancellor. He was ſent by that Archbiſhop to King Henry II. and to the Popes Alexander III. and Urban III. to negotiate Affairs relating to the Church of Canterbury, and after the Death of King Henry, he continued for ſome time in the Court of Queen Eleonora. In the end of his Life, he was depriv'd of the Arch-Deaconry of Bath, which was confer'd on him at his arrival in England, but ſome time after, he obtain'd that of London; in the diſcharging of which Duty, he took a great deal of Pains, and enjoy'd only a ſmall Revenue. He died in England A. D. 1200.

Peter de Blois himſelf made a Collection of his Letters, by the Order of Henry II. King of England, as he intimates in his firſt Letter directed to that Prince, in which he obſerves, That they are not all alike; that ſometimes the great Number of urgent Affairs oblig'd him to write with leſs accuracy; that ſometimes the Subject did not allow him to enlarge; and that ſometimes the meanneſs of the Capacity of thoſe Perſons to whom he wrote, conſtrain'd him to make uſe of a more plain Style. He excuſes himſelf for citing Prophane Authors, as alſo, for ſpeaking freely, and even for preſuming to reprove his Prince. He proteſts, that to the beſt of his remembrance, he never wrote any thing with a Deſign to Flatter, but that Integrity and an unfeigned Zeal for maintaining the Truth, always excited him to ſet Pen to Paper.

The ſecond is a Letter of Conſolation directed to the ſame King on the Death of his Son Henry III. in which he induces him to hope for the Salvation of that young Prince, who died in a courſe of Repentance.

In the third, he ſeverely reprehends a certain great Lord, who had reproach'd his Chaplain with the meanneſs of his Birth, and gives him to underſtand, that none ought to be puff'd up, either upon account of Nobility or Riches.

In the fourth he congratulates the Prior of Ciſteaux, upon the Tranquility he enjoy'd in his Solitude, proteſting that he even envy'd his Condition, and entreats the ſame Prior to remember him in his Prayers and Oblations.

Peter of Blois

In the fifth, he reproves Richard the Succeſſor of Thomas Becket in the Arch-biſhoprick of Canterbury, for applying himſelf with greater earneſtneſs to the Maintenance of the Temporal Intereſts of his Church, than to the Spiritual Government of his Dioceſs; remonſtrating, that his Dioceſans and Prince are very much ſcandaliz'd at thoſe Proceedings.

In the ſixth, to wipe off the reproaches that a certain School-Maſter who undertook to teach the Liberal Sciences, had put upon the Clerks, who live in the Palaces of Biſhops; he aſſerts, That his Profeſſion was more contrary to the Eccleſiaſtical Function, than the Conduct of thoſe Clergy-men.

In the ſeventh, he rebukes a Profeſſor, who was addicted to Drunkenneſs.

In the eighth, he vindicates the Compariſon he made of the different States of the Church, to the various Phaſes or Apparitions of the Moon, and maintains that Terms and Maxims of Philoſophy and of the Civil Law, may be us'd in treating of matters of Religion, when it can be done conveniently.

In the ninth, he reproves one of his Pupils, who after having compleated his Philological Studies, determin'd to reſt for two Years, before he apply'd himſelf to that of Divinity; and ſhews, That that negligence would be extreamly prejudicial to him.

In the tenth, written to one of the Chaplains of the King of Sicily, againſt the Deſign which that Prince had, to cauſe to be inſtall'd in the Biſhoprick of Agrigento, a certain young Lord, who was by no means capable of performing the Functions of the Epiſcopal Dignity, he admoniſhes the ſaid Chaplain, that his Office obliges him to continue to make Remonſtrances to the King, to hinder him from diſpoſing of the Biſhoprick after ſuch a manner.

In the eleventh, he exhorts a Clergy-man, who had ſolemnly engag'd to embrace the Monaſtick Life, to perform his Vow.

The twelfth, is a conſolatory Letter directed to one of his Nephews afflicted with the Death of his Uncle, the burning of his Houſe, and a Wound he receiv'd in his Foot.

In the thirteenth, he reprehends a Young Monk, who endeavour'd to get a Priory, under pretence, that he ſhould thereby have an opportunity of converting more Souls, and makes it appear, That a Monk ought not to covet Secular Employments, nor to aſpire to Dignities, nor to affect to inſtruct others.

Of the principal Authors.

In the fourteenth, directed to the Chaplains of the King of England, he communicates to them certain Reflections that a Fit of Sickneſs caus'd him to make on the miſerable Condition of thoſe Clergymen, who are oblig'd to reſide in the Courts of Princes; of which he gives a very lively Deſcription, and exhorts them to follow his Example in quitting that courſe of Life.

The fifteenth is an Inſtruction to Rainaud newly choſen Biſhop of Chartres, concerning the Epiſcopal Qualities and Functions. He ſays, That the firſt Thing that is ſometimes done, is to make enquiry into the Revenues belonging to the Biſhoprick, and not into the preſent Condition of it: He cenſures the Luxury and Magnificence of ſome Biſhops of his time, the Pains that they took to heap up Riches and to gratifie Princes, and the Secular Courſe of Life that they led.

In the ſixteenth, he exhorts a certain Biſhop immers'd in the Management of many Affairs to make choice of a more quiet manner of Living, in order to promote his own Salvation.

In the ſeventeenth, he ſhews, that a Clerk who drives a Trade, is no leſs culpable than one that follows Uſury, and that all manner of inordinate Endeavours to get and heap up Riches are unworthy of a Clergyman.

In the eighteenth, he gives us a lively Deſcription of the Irregularities of a certain Biſhop, who was addicted to that Vice.

In the nineteenth, he reſolves two Queſtions, which were propos'd to him by one of his Friends who ſtudied the Law at Paris, viz. Firſt, whether a Woman, who turn'd Nun, upon a ſuppoſition that her Husband was dead, be oblig'd to leave the Convent, if he return? And ſecondly, in caſe ſhe be oblig'd to follow her Husband, whether ſhe ought to aſſume the Veil again after his Death? He anſwers, that the Vow of Chaſtity made by her, being in the Husband's Power, is not obligatory; and that ſhe ought to return with her Husband, and may marry again after his Deceaſe. In that Letter, there is a remark very Advantageous to the Schools of Paris, of which he ſays, that as there was formerly a Proverbial ſaying, that thoſe who had any Queſtion to propoſe ought to repair to Avila; ſo in like manner at preſent it paſs'd into a Proverb, that thoſe who were deſirous to have any Queſtion decided need only go to Paris, where the greateſt Difficulties are fairly reſolvd.

In the twentieth he complains, that the domeſtick Servants of Rainaud Biſhop of Charters remov'd him from the Palace of that Prelate, whom he blames for his too great Liberality.

In the twenty firſt, he reprehends the haughtineſs and arrogancy of a Canon, who was formerly one of his particular Friends.

In the twenty ſecond, directed to John of Salisbury, he commends his Conſtancy, and that of Thomas Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and adviſes them to perſevere, and not to ſuffer themſelves to be mov'd by any manner of Adverſity or Perſecutions.

In the twenty third, written to Octavian the Pope's Legate, he declames againſt the Abuſe that was then predominant, to fill up the vacant Biſhopricks with unworthy and uncapable Perſons, who obtain'd them by the means of ſiniſter Practices or purchas'd them with Money.

In the twenty fourth, he entreates the Friends of Thomas Archbiſhop of Canterbury to prevail upon that Prelate, to forgive the Archdeacon of Salisbury, who was deſirous to be reconcil'd with him.

In the twenty fifth, he exhorts an Official to quit that Employment, which he looks upon as very dangerous. 'I am apt to believe (ſays he) that the Officials were ſo 'call'd, not from the Name of their Office, but from 'the Verb Officio, which ſignifies to be to hurtful, or to 'do Miſchief: For the whole Function of an Official is 'to ſheer and flea at the pleaſure of the Biſhop the poor 'Sheep that are under his Juriſdiction: They are the Bi-'Biſhop's Horſe-leeches, that caſt up the Blood they have 'ſuck'd out, and which as it were ſo many Spunges, 'that being ſqueez'd reſtore the Water wherein they were 'ſoak'd, pour into their Maſters Boſom the Treaſure that 'they have extorted; inſomuch that of all thoſe execrable 'Purchaſes they have only left the ſtain of Sin: For that 'which is thus hoarded up by oppreſſing the Poor, ſerves 'to gratify the unruly Appetite of the Biſhops, and draws 'Puniſhments on the Officials; who may be well com-'par'd to thoſe private Doors, thro' which the Prieſts of 'Bel, were wont ſecretly to convey the Sacrifices that 'were laid on the Altar of that Falſe God; ſince the Bi-'ſhops make uſe of their Hands to pillage the Eſtates of 'other Men, caſting upon them all the marks of Infamy 'and the whole guilt of thoſe Crimes, of which they 'make the ſole Advantage.—The Office of the Officials 'at preſent, is to confound Right, to create Law-ſuits, 'to diſannul Agreements, to prolong Trials, to ſuppreſs 'the Truth, to maintain Falſhood, to ſeek for nothing 'but filthy Lucre, to ſell Juſtice, to commit all manner 'of unjuſt Actions, and to deviſe Cheats and Artifices 'to deceive the People. Theſe are the Men, who over-'load their Landlords with a numerous Retinue of At-'tendants and coſtly Equipages; who hunt after dainty 'Diſhes; being very prodigal of the Eſtates of other Per-'ſons, and as covetous of their own: They are very 'critical in ſearching out the etymology and ſignificati-'on of Words, and make Gloſſes upon all manner of 'Syllables, on purpoſe to lay Snares for others, in order 'to drain their Purſes: They take upon them to interpret 'the Laws according to their own capricious Humour, 'admitting ſome, and rejecting others at their Pleaſure; 'they corrupt that which is ſound, over-rule juſt Allega-'tions, foment Diviſions, conceal Crimes, make void 'lawful Marriages, penetrate into the Secrets of Families; 'defame innocent Perſons, abſolve the Guilty, and in a 'Word, leave no Stone unturn'd to get Money. This is the Charracter that Peter of Blois gives us of the Officials of his time, very different (as 'tis to be hop'd) from that of thoſe Gentlemen, who now diſcharge thoſe Functions in our Churches.

Of the principal Authors.

In the twenty ſixth, he adviſes a Friend of his to enter upon a Courſe of Divinity at Paris, after having left the Study of the Civil-Law, to which he apply'd himſelf at Bononia; becauſe a Clergyman ought not to be entirely immers'd therein. He cenſures, by the way, the ſiniſter Practices of the Advocates of his Time, who made it their whole buſineſs to get Money and to enrich themſelves.

In the twenty ſeventh, he acquaints the Canons of Beauvior with the Death of Thomas Becket Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and tells them that there was reaſon to be ſo far from bewailing his Death, that they ought to rejoice at his Happineſs. He likewiſe makes mention of the Diſſenſions that happen'd in his Church, about the Election of a Succeſſor.

The twenty eighth, is written in the Name of Rotron Archbiſhop of Rouen, to William Archbiſhop of Sens and the Pope's Legate, whom he exhorts to uſe his utmoſt endeavours to divert thoſe Calamities, which were ready to break forth in the Territories belonging to the Church of Roan by reaſon of the War that was carry'd on by the two Kings.

In the twenty ninth, directed to the Abbot and Monks of St. Alban, he complains that one of their Priors had refus'd to entertain him at his Table, and ſhews how much Hoſpitality is recommendable, more eſpecially in Monks.

In the thirtieth, he communicates to his Friend Rainand choſen Biſhop of Bath, the Dream that he had upon his promotion to the Epiſcopal Dignity.

The thirty firſt is written to the Abbot of Fontaines, concerning a Diſtemper with which Peter of Blois was afflicted.

The thirty ſecond is a recommendatory Letter directed to the Prior of Canterbury.

The thirty third is written in the Name of Rotrou Archbiſhop of Roan to Henry III. the Son of Henry II. King of England, who was preparing to make War with his Father, to entreat him to take into his Protection, Audely and the other Territories of the Church of Roan.

In the thirty fourth, he excuſes himſelf to the Biſhop of Perigueux, who had offer'd him his Houſe; for not accepting of his Propoſal, becauſe he was detain'd by the Promiſes of his old Patron.

The thirty fifth and thirty ſixth, are Exhortations to a certain Nun.

The thirty ſeventh, is a Letter of Excuſe to the Prior of Jumieges for neglecting to ſend back a Book he had borrow'd of him.

The thirty eighth, is an Apology directed to Albert Cardinal of the Church of Rome, for the Conduct of the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury, who was accuſed of being ignorant of the Laws, covetous and too much inclin'd to raiſe his Family.

The thirty ninth, is a Letter written by way of a ſecret Truſt to one of his Friends, in which he ſends him word, That the Court of Rome according to the uſual Cuſtom had charged him with many Debts, and that if he could once find means to diſcharge them, he would take care not to fall into that Abyſs for the future.

In the fortieth, he condemns the Deportment of a certain Biſhop who ſpoke ill of his Prince.

In the forty firſt, he entreats Henry II. King of England to give him notice of the Place where he was, to the end that he might wait on him, and acquaints him that his Majeſties Envoys are return'd from Rome, clear'd of their Silver and loaded with Lead, without being honour'd with any conſiderable Preſents, and that the Ambaſſadors of the King of Spain were come to meet him to conſtitute him Mediator of the Peace between them.

Of the principal Authors.

The forty ſecond, is written to Robert Provoſt of Aire in Flanders elected Biſhop of Cambray, to whom he gives a ſmart Reprimand for contenting himſelf to enjoy the Revenues of his Biſhoprick, without taking care to perform the Epiſcopal Functions, and for leading a Secular and Scandalous courſe of Life.

The forty third, is a very appoſite Conſolation compos'd by him upon occaſion of the Sickneſs of a certain Perſon, in which he ſufficiently makes it appear that he had ſtudy'd the Art of Phyſick.

In the forty fourth, he adviſes Arnulphus Biſhop of Liſieux not to leave his Biſhoprick, by reaſon of any oppoſition that might be made by his Prince, his Chapter or the People of his Dioceſs; but he would perſuade him to reſign it, in caſe he aſpir'd to that Dignity by underhand dealings.

In the forty fifth, he vindicates Raimund Biſhop of Bath, from the Imputation of having perſecuted or occaſion'd the Death of St. Thomas of Canterbury, and obſerves, that if he made ſomewhat too ſevere a Reflection upon him, at the time when that Archbiſhop excommunicated the Biſhop of Salisbury, it ought to be forgiven him, as well as what he might have done againſt him thro' Ignorance, and ſo much the rather, in regard that he had expiated that Fault by a very rigorous Penance.

In the forty ſixth, directed to Richard Biſhop of Syracuſe, after having excus'd himſelf for returning to Sicily, he enlarges on the Commendation of Thomas Becket Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

The forty ſeventh is written in the Name of Richard Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who exhorts Henry the Son of Henry II. King of England to deſiſt from making War with his Father, and threatens to excommunicate him, unleſs he ſubmit to his Remonſtrances.

In the forty eighth, he congratulates William Cardinal Biſhop of Pavia, upon account that at laſt an End was put to the Quarrel between Pope Alexander and the Emperor Frederick, by his Mediation, and declames againſt Octavian and his Electors.

In the forty ninth, he complains, That ſome of the Canons of Chartres, whom he took for his Friends, had brought an Information againſt him in a Trial depending between him and Robert of Salisbury, for a Prebend of Chartres, and that not being able to ſully his Reputation, they had ſlanderouſly traduc'd the Memory of his Father.

In the fiftieth, he entreats the Biſhop of Bayeux to abſolve a certain Perſon, who had committed Manſlaughter in his own Defence, and who being afflicted with a very ſenſible Grief for that unfortunate Accident, had done Penance in due Form.

In the fifty firſt, he admoniſhes Jocelin Biſhop of Salisbury to pay his Debts, and not to beſtow too great Favours upon his Nephews.

In the fifty ſecond, he acquaints the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who had ſent him to the King of England, That he met with a furious Storm, during his Paſſage into Normandy, and aſſures him, that he was ready to undertake every Thing, and to endure all manner of hardſhip in his Service.

The fifty third, is a Circular Letter to all the Biſhops of England, written in the Name of Richard Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and Primate of the Kingdom, in which he enjoyns them, not to ſuffer Perſons, whoſe Ordination is not valid, to exerciſe the Epiſcopal Functions in their Dioceſſes, and to denounce a Sentence of Excommunication againſt thoſe who forge the Pope's Bulls or counterfeit the Seals of the Biſhops.

In the fifty fourth, he adviſes the Archdeacon of Poitiers, not to compel Adelicia his Niece, to become a Nun; becauſe the Monaſtick State, ought not to be embrac'd with leſs freedom than that of Marriage.

In the fifty fifth, he congratulates Adelicia, upon the deſire ſhe expreſs'd to take the Vail, and in regard that ſhe had Actually made a Vow to that Purpoſe, and exhorts her to put ſo laudable a Deſign in Execution with all convenient Speed.

In the fifty ſixth, he endeavours to divert Walter Biſhop of Rocheſter from the ſtrong Inclination he had to Hunting.

In the fifty ſeventh Letter, directed to one of his Friends a Monk of the Abby of Aulnay in Normandy, who expected to be deliver'd from Temptations immediately after his admittance into a Religious Order; he treats of the continual Conflict between the Fleſh and the Spirit, and ſends him a Proſe or Sermon on that Subject.

In the fifty eighth, he complains to Renaud Biſhop of Bath, by reaſon that the latter had ſuſpended his Vice-Archdeacon, without diſpatching any Canonical Monitions beforehand, and to the prejudice of a Privilege that was granted him in the Council of Lateran, that he ſhould not be excommunicated nor any Perſon that belong'd to him by any Biſhop, and declares that he had ſo much the greater reaſon to take it ill, in regard that that which gave occaſion to thoſe rigorous Proceedings, was only a ſmall ſum of Money that was due to the Biſhop, and that he had already given Orders for the Payment of it.

Of the principal Authors.

In the fifty ninth, he exhorts that Biſhop to be reconciled with a certain Perſon nam'd Henry and to turn one Simon out of his Company, who was a dangerous Flatterer and a Sycophant.

In the ſixtieth, he approves the Complaints made by one of his Friends, who was much offended that the Biſhops ſhould enrich their Nephews with the Church-Revenues, inſtead of maintaining the Poor. He obſerves that that was no new Diſorder, and that Poverty ought to be preferr'd before Riches.

In the ſixty firſt, he diſſuades an Archdeacon from the exerciſe of Hunting.

In the ſixty ſecond, he writes in the Name of Geffery Biſhop of Lincoln to one Le blond, whom he reproves for his Diſobedience in leaving that Biſhop to follow divers Employments, and forbids him to oppoſe the Intereſt of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

The ſixty third, is a Letter of Thanks to Peter Biſhop of Arras.

The ſixty fourth, is written in the Name of Gautier Archbiſhop of Roan and of the Biſhops of Normandy, to Pope Celeſtin III. to entreat his Holineſs to uſe his utmoſt Endeavours to procure the Deliverance of Richard King of England, who was taken Priſoner at his return from the Holy-Land by the Duke of Auſtria.

The ſixty fifth, is written againſt the Superſtitions of thoſe, who pretend to foretell future Events by Dreams, or by other Means of the like nature.

In the ſixty ſixth, he congratulates Gautier Archbiſhop of Palermo upon his Promotion to that Dignity: He gives that Prelate a Character of Henry II. King of England, and clears him from the Murder of Thomas Becket Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

In the ſixty ſeventh, he proves by many Reaſons to King Henry II. that he ought to cauſe his Son to apply himſelf to Study.

The ſixty eighth, is written in the Name of Richard Archbiſhop of Canterbury to Pope Alexander III. againſt the Abbot of Malmesbury, who endeavour'd to withdraw himſelf from the Juriſdiction of his Biſhop. He declames in that Letter, againſt the Privileges that are granted at Rome to the Abbots for Money, which gives them occaſion to inſult over their Primates and Dioceſans, to loſe the Reſpect they ought to have for them, and by degrees to ſhake off the Yoke of Obedience, which was formerly the only Means to reclaim them, and to reſtrain their Ambition. "The Abbots (ſays he) cannot endure to have a Superi" or ſet over them, to reform the Abuſes committed by " them; They would willingly have an abſolute Power
" to do every Thing with impunity, and neglect the Mo-
" naſtical Diſcipline to gratify their unruly Paſſions. Up-
" on which account it is, that almoſt all the Revenues
" of the Monaſteries are left at Rack and Manger, and
" are liable to be pillag'd by every Invader: For on the " one ſide, the Abbots mind nothing elſe but following
" their Pleaſures, and are intent only on making good
" Cheer; and on the other ſide, the Monks being as it
" were deſtitute of a Head, ſpend their Life in Idleneſs
" and continual Quarrels. The Miſchief (adds he) re" quires a ſpeedy remedy; for if it be not timely apply'd,
" 'tis to be fear'd leaſt as the Abbots ſhake off the Yoke
" of the Biſhops, ſo the latter ſhould throw off that of the " Archbiſhops, and the Deans and Archdeacons ſhould
" likewiſe find Means to exempt themſelves from the " Juriſdiction of their Dioceſans. Alas what form of
" of Juſtice is this! or rather, what manner of deformi-
" ty of the Law! to hinder the Pupils fron hearkening to " their Tutors; Children from obeying their Parents;
" Soldiers from ſerving their Prince; and Servants from
" ſubmitting to their Maſters! What is it to free Abbots
" from the Juriſdiction of their Biſhop, unleſs it be to Au-
" thorize Diſobedience and Rebellion, and to arm Child" ren againſt their Father? 'Tis their Office, who ſit as " ſupreme Judges, to determine this Caſe, and to take " care leſt unjuſt Actions ſhould take their riſe from the " Courts of Judicature, where application is made for the " redreſſing of Grievances.

In the ſixty ninth Letter, directed to Radulphus Biſhop of Angers, he laments the Failings of the Inhabitants of that City, who had abandon'd King Henry II. in the War that he maintain'd againſt his Son.

In the ſeventieth, he adviſes John Biſhop of Chartres, rather to beſtow Benefices on his Nephews who were upright right and poor Men, than on Foreigners, who are not ſo worthy of them.

Of the principal Authors.

The two following Letters contain nothing remarkable.

The ſeventy third, written in the Name of Richard Archbiſhop of Canterbury to all the Biſhops of England, is againſt a Cuſtom that prevail'd in that Kingdom, only to puniſh with Excommunication, thoſe who aſſaſſinated Biſhops and other Clergymen, whereas capital Puniſhments were inflicted on other Murderers.

The following Letters to the eighty ſecond, comprehend nothing very remarkable relating to Church-Diſcipline.

In the eighty ſecond, directed under the Name of Richard Archbiſhop of Canterbury, to the Ciſtercian Monks, after having commended that Order, he takes notice of one Fault committed by them, which is their refuſing to pay Tithes to Clerks and Monks: He gives them to underſtand, that it is an Act of Injuſtice; that altho' they might enjoy that Immunity, whilſt they were Poor, yet they had no Right to it at preſent, ſince they were become Rich; and that what Privileges ſoever they might obtain from Rome, they could not in Conſcience make uſe of them to uſurp the Eſtates of others: Laſtly, he threatens to excommunicate them if they continue to retain thoſe Tithes.

In the eighty third, written in the Name of Walter Archbiſhop of Oxford to Bartholomew Biſhop of Exeter, he adviſes him to declare the Marriage null, that was contracted between Robert and Iſmenia his Kinſ-woman; according to the expreſs Order that he had receiv'd from the Pope.

The eighty fourth, is directed to Pope Alexander III. under the Name of Richard Archbiſhop of Canterbury to vindicate the Conduct of the Biſhops, who reſide in the King's Court, in order to maintain the Intereſt and Rights of the Church. 'For (ſays he) if there were no Biſhops 'in the Council, nor in favour with the Prince; the 'Wicked would ſoon find Means to harraſs the Church, 'and the Preſumption of Laicks would oppreſs the Clergy 'after an intolerable manner: But at preſent, if any 'Thing be attempted to the Prejudice of the Church, the 'Biſhops are ready to oppoſe it; and if the King ſhould 'be exaſperated againſt Innocent Perſons, his Anger is 'appeas'd by their Entreaties. By this means, the rigor 'of Juſtice is moderated; the Cries of the Poor reach the 'Princes Ear; the Dignity of the Church is maintain'd; 'the Indigence of diſtreſſed People is reliev'd; the Devo'tion of Lay-men is encreas'd; Religion is protected; 'the Sentences in Courts of Judicature are directed; the 'Laws are ſubmitted to; the Decrees of Rome are re'ceiv'd, and the Revenues of the Churches are augmented: 'He adds, That the Archbiſhops and Biſhops of Sicily 'were wont in like manner to reſide in the Court of their 'Prince, and that there was a Deſign on foot in England 'to abrogate that Cuſtom, but that divers prudent and ju'dicious Perſons had determin'd that it was abſolutely 'neceſſary for them to continue there, and that if they 'were hinder'd from having acceſs to the Prince; at the 'ſame time the Monaſteries would be depriv'd of their 'Tranquility, the afflicted of Conſolation, and the Church 'of its Liberty. Therefore our Author concludes, That although the Biſhops were very deſirous to leave the Court, by reaſon of the Inconveniences they ſuffer in that Station, nevertheleſs they are detain'd, as it were by force, upon account of the Publick Advantage.

The eighty fifth Letter, contains a ſharp Reprimand made to Robert Biſhop of Salisbury, for taking too great delight in Feaſting, and for laying out ſo vaſt Expences in furniſhing his Table, that he let the Buildings of his Church fall to Ruin.

In the eighty ſixth, he diverts a Carthuſian Monk nam'd Alexander, from the Deſign he had to quit his Order, under pretence that Maſs was not ſaid every day in the Monaſtery; and ſhews, That St. Benedict never was a Prieſt, and that he ſpent a great deal of time without hearing Maſs, even not knowing one Eaſter day, that it was that great Feſtival: That St. Paul and St. Anthony, the firſt Hermits, paſs'd many days without hearing Maſs, and that we do not read that ſome great Saints Offer'd up the Holy-Sacrifice daily: That ſuch a frequent Adminiſtration of the Sacraments might render them contemptible, and that the Seldomneſs of it, encreaſes the Reſpect due to them: That indeed we ſin inceſſantly, and that a continual Remedy is requiſite for the expiation of our Guilt; but that nevertheleſs this Hoſt, of an infinite Value, ought not to be offer'd up, but with a Spirit of Humility and a contrite Heart. To that purpoſe, he quotes many Paſſages of the Fathers, and at laſt affirms, That the ſecret Motive which induc'd that Monk to think of quitting his Order, was to lead a leſs auſtere, and a more free Courſe of Life.

Of the principal Authors.

In the eighty ſeventh Letter, he comforts William Biſhop of Ely, who was diſcharg'd from the Management of the affairs of State in England, by the treachery of certain Noble-men, who had miſ-repreſented him to King Richard; which gave an occaſion to Peter of Blois to declaim againſt thoſe Counſellors who give bad Advice to Princes. The eighty ninth is written on the ſame Subject to a Biſhop, who had contributed to the ſaid William's diſgrace at Court.

In the eighty eighth, he entreats an Abbot to receive a certain Monk, who was deſirous to return to his Monaſtery.

In the ninetieth, he gives an account to his Brother William Abbot of Mani, of the reaſons of his Departure from Sicily, and takes notice at the ſame time of the News that was ſpread abroad, That that Abbot had obtain'd a Licence of the Pope, to wear the Mitre, Ring and Sandals. He maintains, That the uſe of thoſe Ornaments in any other Perſon but a Biſhop, is an arrogant Vanity, and a preſumptuous Oſtentation; That they ought only to be us'd on ſome extraordinary Occaſions; ſuch as the Dedication of Churches, the Conſecration of Virgins, and the Ordination of Clerks, and that therefore they can be of no uſe to an Abbot, who has no Right to perform thoſe Functions; That they are actually more chargeable to him than profitable, and that they do him a greater Diſhonour than Credit; That that Abuſe has no Grounds neither in the Goſpel, nor in St. Benedict's Rule; That it foments the Refractorineſs of the Abbots and the Conteſts they have with the Biſhops, and that no Man ought to flatter himſelf, that the Privilege of Rome can be a ſufficient excuſe for ſuch Acts of Diſobedience before God, Therefore he conjures him by the Salvation of their common Father, and by the Breaſts of their Mother, to lay aſide thoſe Pontifical Ornaments, or if it cannot be done without Scandal, to chooſe rather to quit his Dignity. William being mov'd with this Remonſtrance, reſign'd his Abby into the Pope's Hands, as it appears by the 93d Letter, in which Peter of Blois congratulates him; That he preferr'd the Humility of a ſimple Monk to the Dignity of an Abbot, and a place of abode in France to one in Sicily.

In the ninety firſt, he taxes Radulphus Biſhop of Liſieux with Covetouſneſs, and the practice of Uſury, more eſpecially in regard that he did not open his Granaries in a time of ſcarcity and dearneſs of Proviſions.

The following Letters contain nothing very remarkable.

The ninety ſeventh directed to the Abbot of Eveſham, he ſhews that the diverſity of Monaſtick Orders is advantageous to the Church, but that none ought to paſs lightly from one Order to another, He obſerves in the end, that ſinging of Pſalms for a conſiderable time, is very uſeful, if it could be continu'd with Devotion, and that although it be accompany'd with wearineſs, yet it does not ceaſe to be a good Employment. As for Handy-work, he neither blames, nor commends it in a Monk, Labores autem manuales in Monacho nec arguere, nec laudare præſumo.

The ninety eighth and the ninety ninth, are written in the Name of Richard Archbiſhop of Canterbury; viz. the former to his ſuffragans about the Neceſſity of relieving the Holy-Land, and the ſecond to Pope Urban III. to congratulate his Promotion to the Pontifical Dignity, and to thank his Holineſs for the Pall, which he had ſent to him.

In the hundredth Letter, he vindicates an Archbiſhop who was accus'd of being too meek and moderate.

The hundred and firſt, directed to Robert Archdeacon of Nantes, is a Judgment that he paſſes on the Diſpoſition of two of his Nephews, whom he had put under his Tuition.

The hundred and ſecond, contains a long Complaint made by the Abbot of Redding who was deſirous to renounce his Dignity, with Peter of Blois's Anſwer, in which he adviſes him not to do it.

The following Letters contain nothing of any great moment as to Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline.

In the hundred and twelfth, ſent to the Biſhop of Orleans, he maintains the Immunities of the Church, and aſſerts that the King of France ought to exact no other Supplies of the Clergy, than their Prayers to carry on the War, that he was preparing to manage againſt the Saracens in the Holy-Land.

In the hundred and thirteenth, he exhorts Geffrey Archbiſhop of York, to oppoſe the new Hereticks who appear'd

Of the principal Authors.

in his Dioceſs, and to publiſh ſo ſtrict an Ordinance againſt them, that the others might be terrify'd with the Severity of their Puniſhment.

In the hundred and fourteenth, he congratulates John of Salisbury upon his Inſtalment in the Biſhoprick of Chartres, and commends the Relation that he wrote of the Life of Thomas Becket Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

In the hundred and fifteenth, after having ſhewn in what Degrees of Conſanguinity Robert and Adelecia were related one to another, he produces the ſeveral Impediments of their Marriage, and comprehends them in ſix Verſes.

The hundred and ſixteenth, is written to Hugh Abbot of St. Denis, to whom he ſends one of his Books to be examin'd, and comforts him for the Indignity that was put upon him by the King of France.

In the hundred and ſeventeenth, he reprehends Geffrey Abbot of Marmoutier, by reaſon that he had caus'd an Action to be commenc'd againſt the Prior of St. Come, for certain Lands which he claim'd, as belonging to his Juriſdiction.

There is nothing remarkable in the following Letters to the 123. in which he refuſes to accept of the Sacerdotal Dignity, not through Contempt, but an extraordinary Reſpect for that Function.

In the hundred twenty fourth, he comforts Gautier Archbiſhop of Roan, baniſh'd from his Church, and juſtifies his Retreat.

In the hundred twenty fifth, he admoniſhes the ſame Prelate, to avoid Slothfulneſs during his Exile, and to apply himſelf to the reading of the Holy Scriptures.

In the hundred twenty ſixth, directed to the Abbot of Gloceſter, he gives an Encomium of Odo Chanter of Bourges choſen Biſhop of Paris; to whom he writes the hundred twenty ſeventh, to renew their old Friendſhip and the Correſpondence that formerly paſs'd between them.

In the hundred twenty eighth, Peter of Blois complains to William Archbiſhop of Sens, that he had not as yet perform'd the Promiſe that he made to entertain him in his Houſe, and to confer a Benefice upon him.

In the hundred twenty ninth, he writes againſt the Archdeacon of Orleans, who had introduc'd Simoniacal Practices into his Church.

In the hundred and thirtieth, directed to John Biſhop of Chartres, he clears himſelf from the Charge brought againſt him, that he made uſe of the Recommendation of the King of England, of divers Lords, and of the Pope, to procure a Prebend in the Church of Chartres.

In the hundred thirty firſt, he reproves one of his Nephews, the Prior of a Monaſtery, by reaſon that neglecting the Study of the Liberal Sciences, and abandoning his Solitude, he frequented publick Places, and endeavour'd to curry Favour with Noblemen.

The hundred thirty ſecond and the hundred thirty fourth, directed to Perſons newly made Abbots, contain very uſeful Inſtructions for the Conduct of Superiors.

In the hundred thirty third, written to the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury, he maintains that he is not oblig'd to reſide in his Prebend in that City, in regard of the ſmalneſs of the Revenue, which was not ſufficient for defraying the Charge of a Journey thither.

The hundred thirty fifth, is a Diſpenſation for Non-reſidence granted by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury to a Canon of Salisbury.

The hundred thirty ſixth, is a Letter from Henry II. King of England to Alexander III. in which he complains of the Rebellion of his Children, and implores the Aſſiſtance of that Pope.

In the hundred thirty ſeventh, he congratulates a Novice Monk, and gives him wholſome Advice.

In the hundred thirty eighth, he expreſſes to Gautier Archbiſhop of Roan, the Joy that he had upon his return from his Exile.

In the hundred thirty ninth, he entreats the Abbot and Monks of Ciſteaux to put up their Prayers to God, that he would vouchſafe to grant him his Grace, to enable him worthily to perform the Functions of the Prieſthood, to which Dignity he was lately rais'd, and explains the reaſons why he deferr'd the receiving of that Order till that Time.

In the hundred and fortieth, he exhorts Petrus Diaconus to quit the Study of the Law, and to apply himſelf altogether to that of the Holy Scriptures and of Divinity. In this Letter, he makes uſe of the Term of Tranſubſtantiation in treating of the Euchariſt. 'Thus you ſee, ſays 'he, in one ſingle Sacrament a deep Abyſs impenetrable 'to Humane Reaſon; I mean, in the Bread and Wine 'tranſubſtantiated by Vertue of the Heavenly Words, in-'to the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, the Accidents 'that were therein, remaining without a Subject; and 'although the Body of Jeſus Chriſt be Fleſh and not Spi-'rit, nevertheleſs it nouriſhes the Soul rather than the 'Body. The ſame Body is to be found in ſeveral Places 'and on divers Altars, againſt the Nature of Bodies, 'without ceaſing to be in Heaven: For although by its 'Nature it can only be in one Place after a circumſcrip-'tible Manner, yet it is in many Places by its omnipo-'tent Vertue and Energy, and after a ſpiritual Man-'ner.

Of the principal Authors.

In the hundred forty firſt, he complains to Gautier Archbiſhop of Roan, that a certain private Perſon had detain'd the Revenues of a Prebend that belong'd to him, and entreats that Prelate to cauſe Reſtitution to be made.

In the hundred forty ſecond, he comforts the Prior and Monks of Eveſham, who were in great Trouble, and exhorts them to bear it with Patience.

The four following Letters relate to the Confinement of Richard I. King of England, and were written to procure his Liberty.

In the hundred forty ſeventh, he reproves Robert Biſhop of Bangor, who determin'd to retain a certain Benefice, which he had conferr'd on another Clerk.

In the hundred forty eighth, he exhorts Savaric Biſhop of Bath to return to his Dioceſs, and not to leave his Church with a Deſign to travel.

In the hundred forty ninth, he complains, that they were about to deprive him of his Archdeaconry in the End of his Life.

In the hundred and fiftieth, he mollifies what he had ſaid in the fourteenth Letter, againſt thoſe Clergymen, who reſide in the Courts of Princes.

In the hundred fifty firſt, he entreats Pope Innocent III. to augment the Revenues of the Archdeaconry of London, which was lately conferr'd upon him. He gives his Holineſs to underſtand, that there were about forty thouſand Men within the Juriſdiction of his Archdeaconry, and above one hundred and twenty Churches; nevertheleſs that he was not able to collect any of the Duties that are cuſtomably paid to the Archdeacons.

In the hundred fifty ſecond, he entreats that Pope, to change a Chapter of which he was Dean, into a Monaſtery of the Ciſtercian Order.

The hundred fifty third, is written in the Name of Rotron Archbiſhop of Roan, and of Arnulphus Biſhop of Lifieux, to Henry II. King of England; in which they give him an Account of the Negotiations in the Court of the King of France, where they were ſent by that Prince.

The hundred fifty fourth, is likewiſe written in the Name of the ſame Archbiſhop, who entreats Eleonora Queen of England, and her Sons, to be reconcil'd with King Henry II.

In the hundred fifty fifth Letter, that Archbiſhop excuſes himſelf to the Prior and Monks of La Charite, for not retiring to their Convent, by reaſon that he could not leave his Flock during the War.

The following Letters to the hundred eighty third, and laſt, contain nothing very remarkable as to Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, and many of them are Conſolatory.

There is no Author, who has fill'd his Letters with a greater number of Quotations, out of the Holy Scriptures and Eccleſiaſtical and Profane Writings, than Peter of Blois; inſomuch, that they are ſcarce any thing elſe but a Contexture of ſuch Paſſages. That which is properly his own Matter, is full of Antitheſes and Puns: However, he diſcourſes with much freedom, ſharply reproves Vices, and maintains Church Diſcipline and the Eccleſiaſtical Conſtitutions.

His Sermons are written almoſt after the ſame Manner as his Letters, in a conciſe and ſententious Style, to the number of ſixty five; neither does he explain therein the Points of Morality in their utmoſt extent, but he fills them with divers Maxims and Notions, which are accompanied with no other Ornaments, but Antitheſes and nice Compariſons of Words: But he handles Matters more at large in his Tracts, which are ſeventeen in Number.

The firſt is a Moral Diſcourſe on the Transfiguration of Jeſus Chriſt.

The ſecond, is another Diſcourſe of the ſame Nature on St. Paul's Converſion.

The third, is a compendious Chronicle on the Beginning and the End of the Book of Job.

The fourth, is a very pathetical Exhortation to induce the Chriſtian Princes to ſend Succours to the Holy Land.

The fifth, is an Inſtruction written in the Name of Pope Alexander III. to the Sultan of Iconium.

The ſixth, is a Treatiſe of Sacramental Confeſſion and Penance.

The ſeventh, is a Tract concerning the Functions and Qualities of a Confeſſor, and the Manner how he ought to demean himſelf in the Adminiſtration of the Sacrament of Penance.

The

Of the principal Authors.

The eighth Piece, call'd the Episcopal Canon, contains Instructions for Bishops.

The ninth, is an Invective against one who pass'd a Censure on his Works, and charg'd him with being a Flatterer of Princes, and a false Accuser of Clergymen and Monks: He clears himself from both Imputations, by producing a Catalogue of his Writings; in which he asserts, that there is nothing to be found that can convict him of what was laid to his Charge, and several Particulars to the contrary. He enlarges in Commendation of the Monastick Life, and explains some Passages of his Works, that were objected against him; and amongst others, what he had laid down concerning Free-will, which he was accus'd of having confounded with Grace: He maintains, That the former is supported by, and depends on the latter, after such a manner, that the Mercy of God is not prejudicial to Merit, nor Grace to Free-will.

The tenth, is a Treatise against the Jews, in which he has accurately collected all the Prophecies that relate to Jesus Christ.

The eleventh, is a large Treatise of Christian Friendship, of the Love of God, and Charity to our Neighbour; in which he insists on the Causes, Duties, Parts and Effects of those Vertues.

The twelfth, is of the Usefulness of Afflictions, of which he shews the several Advantages.

The thirteenth, call'd, What are they, quales sunt? is a Satyr against unworthy Pastors. He justifies at first, what he is about to write against them, and declares that 'tis not his design to attack the Worthy Pastors, but only the Unworthy, who have no Faith; who have not enter'd the Sheep-fold through the Gate; who do not deserve the Names of Pastor, Pope, Bishop or Prelate; because they have not any of the Qualities signified by those Terms; who enrich their Relations with the Church-Revenues; who confer Canonries and other spiritual Livings upon them; or who being of mean Extraction, and of an unknown Family, are endu'd with no generous Principles, but with a great deal of sordid Baseness without Humility, whose Dignity soon corrupts their Manners. He shews, that these sorts of Bishops ought not to be flatter'd, but that their Faults ought to be expos'd, to the end that those Persons who present themselves to be admitted into Holy Orders, may be duely examin'd, and that a considerable Time may be taken, to be well assur'd of their Demeanour, and of their Course of Life.

Of the principal Authors.

The fourteenth, is a Fragment of a Letter, that he wrote about Silence.

The fifteenth, is a Fragment of his Book, of the Changes of Fortune.

The sixteenth, is a Tract concerning the Sacred Books and Writers of the Old and New Testament.

The seventeenth, is a Poetical Piece on the Eucharist.

The first Edition of Peter of Blois's Works, was printed at Mentz; the second at Paris, A. D. 1519. the third at Mentz in 1600. by Busæus, who annex'd an Addition of some Tracts in 1605. This Edition was copied out in the Bibliotheca Patrum, printed at Colen; but in all these Editions, the Sermons of Peter Comestor, were inserted instead of those of Peter of Blois: At last M. de Goussainville, publish'd a new Edition of all Peter of Blois's Works, in which are to found the genuine Sermons of that Author, printed at Paris in 1667. This was follow'd in the last Bibliotheca Patrum, set forth at Lyons.

Stephen Bishop of Tournay.

Stephen.

Stephen, Abbot of St. Genevieve, and afterwards Bishop of Tournay, was born at Orleans, A. D. 1135. and compleated his Studies in the Schools of the Cathedral Churches of that City and of Chartres: He apply'd himself more especially to that of the Canon-Law, and became a Regular Canon in 1165. in the Monastery of St. Everte, where St. Victor's Rule was establish'd in 1158. by Roger, who was the first Abbot since the Reformation. Stephen succeeded him in that Office, but the Abby of Genevieve being vacant in 1177. by the Death of the Abbot Aubert, he was chosen in his Place. He was promoted to the Bishoprick of Tournay in 1192. and govern'd it to the Year 1203. which was that of his Death.

This Author wrote a Commentary on Gratian's Decretal, with divers Sermons and Letters. All his Works are extant in Manuscript; but Father du Moulinet did not judge, that the Commentary on the Decretal, and the Sermons were worthy to be brought to Light, and therefore he only publish'd the Preface to that Commentary, the first Sermon and the Texts of Scripture, on which the thirty others were compos'd, with his Letters, which he divided into three Parts; the first of which contain the Letters which he wrote being as yet Abbot of St. Everte, from A. D. 1163. to 1177.

The first, is a very pathetical Complaint, which he recited in the Synod of the Bishops of the Province held at Sens, concerning the Murder committed on the Person of John Dean of Orleans, by a certain Lord, out of whose Hands, he endeavour'd to wrest some Revenues belonging to the Chapter of Orleans, which he had usurp'd.

He was enjoyn'd by the same Assembly, to write to the King, to demand Justice for that execrable Fact. He did it after such a manner, as was capable of exciting him to take Vengeance for so heinous a Crime. However, the King did not approve that Letter, and conceiv'd much Displeasure against Stephen upon that Account; which gave occasion to his Enemies to persecute him, and to threaten to pillage his Estate, and to cause him to be put to Death, unless he desisted from the Prosecution of that Suit. Whereupon he had Recourse to William Bishop of Chartres, the Son of Thibaud or Theobald Count of Champagne, who appeas'd the King's Anger, and restor'd Stephen to his Favour, as the latter had entreated him to do in his second Letter.

The third is a Letter written by Ponce Bishop of Clermont, in which he desires Maurice Bishop of Paris, and Stephen Abbot of St. Everte to give a Resolution of a Case of Conscience touching the Validity of the Baptism of Infants that are dipt in the Water, these Words being recited, viz. In the Name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, without expressing the Action by these Terms, I baptize thee. A certain Father had baptiz'd his Child after that Manner, and it was customary to do so, in Case of Necessity.

Stephen.

Maurice returns an Answer in the fourth Letter, That that Baptism is null, and determines the Matter with a great deal of Assurance, in a few Words. Stephen replies on the contrary, in the fifth Letter, that that Baptism is valid, provided the Three Persons of the Trinity be invok'd, and that 'tis not absolutely necessary to add these Words, I baptize thee; because it is not said in the Gospel, Go and baptize the Nations, saying, I baptize you in the Name of the Father, &c. but only, Baptize them in the Name of the Father, &c. He confirms his Opinion by divers Passages of the Fathers, which only require the Invocation of the Holy Trinity, for the Validity of Baptism. He affirms, that these Terms, I baptize thee, are added by the Church, that they have only regard to the Solemnity of the Action, and do not belong to the Substance of the Sacrament: de solemnitate Ministerii, non de substantia Sacramenti. He adds, that if a different Opinion were admitted, an infinite number of Children must unavoidably be damned, who were baptiz'd by Laicks in Case of Necessity; by reason that the greatest part of those ignorant People, were wont to baptize only saying, En nome Patres & Files, & Espirites Sanctos. However he declares, that those Priests ought to be censur'd and put to Penance, who thro' Negligence or Ignorance omit any Thing that relates to the Solemnity of the Administration of Baptism. But he maintains, that a Child which was once baptiz'd in the Name of the Trinity, ought not to be baptiz'd again, altho' the Father did not express the Action by these Words, I baptize thee. Lastly, he says that he who baptizes a Child, contracts a spiritual Affinity with the Mother, which renders him uncapable of marrying her; or of co-habiting with her as his Wife, if they were marry'd before.

The other Letters contain'd in this first Part, are either recommendatory in favour of divers Persons, or relate to particular Affairs; as the rebuilding of the Church of St. Everte, which was burnt by the Normans, to which purpose, he desires Supplies of the Chapter of St. Martin at Tours, and of his Friends: The Restoration of a Prior who had wasted the Revenues of his Monastery: The Contest between the Church of St. Sampson, and the Chapter of St. Croix, &c.

In the second Part, are comprehended the Letters written by Stephen of Tournay whilst he govern'd the Abby of St. Genevieve, from A. D. 1177. to 1192. The greatest part of these Letters are complimental or recommendatory, and contain nothing very remarkable. There are several written in favour of the Archbishop of Tours, about the Contest that he had with the Bishop of Dol, as the

Of the principal Authors.

in his Dioceſs, and to publiſh ſo ſtrict an Ordinance againſt them, that the others might be terrify'd with the Severity of their Puniſhment.

In the hundred and fourteenth, he congratulates John of Salisbury upon his Inſtalment in the Biſhoprick of Chartres, and commends the Relation that he wrote of the Life of Thomas Becket Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

In the hundred and fifteenth, after having ſhewn in what Degrees of Conſanguinity Robert and Adelecia were related one to another, he produces the ſeveral Impediments of their Marriage, and comprehends them in ſix Verſes.

The hundred and ſixteenth, is written to Hugh Abbot of St. Denis, to whom he ſends one of his Books to be examin'd, and comforts him for the Indignity that was put upon him by the King of France.

In the hundred and ſeventeenth, he reprehends Geffrey Abbot of Marmoutier, by reaſon that he had caus'd an Action to be commenc'd againſt the Prior of St. Come, for certain Lands which he claim'd, as belonging to his Juriſdiction.

There is nothing remarkable in the following Letters to the 123. in which he refuſes to accept of the Sacerdotal Dignity, not through Contempt, but an extraordinary Reſpect for that Function.

In the hundred twenty fourth, he comforts Gautier Archbiſhop of Roan, baniſh'd from his Church, and juſtifies his Retreat.

In the hundred twenty fifth, he admoniſhes the ſame Prelate, to avoid Slothfulneſs during his Exile, and to apply himſelf to the reading of the Holy Scriptures.

In the hundred twenty ſixth, directed to the Abbot of Gloceſter, he gives an Encomium of Odo Chanter of Bourges choſen Biſhop of Paris; to whom he writes the hundred twenty ſeventh, to renew their old Friendſhip and the Correſpondence that formerly paſs'd between them.

In the hundred twenty eighth, Peter of Blois complains to William Archbiſhop of Sens, that he had not as yet perform'd the Promiſe that he made to entertain him in his Houſe, and to confer a Benefice upon him.

In the hundred twenty ninth, he writes againſt the Archdeacon of Orleans, who had introduc'd Simoniacal Practices into his Church.

In the hundred and thirtieth, directed to John Biſhop of Chartres, he clears himſelf from the Charge brought againſt him, that he made uſe of the Recommendation of the King of England, of divers Lords, and of the Pope, to procure a Prebend in the Church of Chartres.

In the hundred thirty firſt, he reproves one of his Nephews, the Prior of a Monaſtery, by reaſon that neglecting the Study of the Liberal Sciences, and abandoning his Solitude, he frequented publick Places, and endeavour'd to curry Favour with Noblemen.

The hundred thirty ſecond and the hundred thirty fourth, directed to Perſons newly made Abbots, contain very uſeful Inſtructions for the Conduct of Superiors.

In the hundred thirty third, written to the Dean and Chapter of Salisbury, he maintains that he is not oblig'd to reſide in his Prebend in that City, in regard of the ſmalneſs of the Revenue, which was not ſufficient for defraying the Charge of a Journey thither.

The hundred thirty fifth, is a Diſpenſation for Non-reſidence granted by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury to a Canon of Salisbury.

The hundred thirty ſixth, is a Letter from Henry II. King of England to Alexander III. in which he complains of the Rebellion of his Children, and implores the Aſſiſtance of that Pope.

In the hundred thirty ſeventh, he congratulates a Novice Monk, and gives him wholſome Advice.

In the hundred thirty eighth, he expreſſes to Gautier Archbiſhop of Roan, the Joy that he had upon his return from his Exile.

In the hundred thirty ninth, he entreats the Abbot and Monks of Ciſteaux to put up their Prayers to God, that he would vouchſafe to grant him his Grace, to enable him worthily to perform the Functions of the Prieſthood, to which Dignity he was lately rais'd, and explains the reaſons why he deferr'd the receiving of that Order till that Time.

In the hundred and fortieth, he exhorts Petrus Diaconus to quit the Study of the Law, and to apply himſelf altogether to that of the Holy Scriptures and of Divinity. In this Letter, he makes uſe of the Term of Tranſubſtantiation in treating of the Euchariſt. 'Thus you ſee, ſays 'he, in one ſingle Sacrament a deep Abyſs impenetrable 'to Humane Reaſon; I mean, in the Bread and Wine 'tranſubſtantiated by Vertue of the Heavenly Words, in-'to the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, the Accidents 'that were therein, remaining without a Subject; and 'although the Body of Jeſus Chriſt be Fleſh and not Spi-'rit, nevertheleſs it nouriſhes the Soul rather than the 'Body. The ſame Body is to be found in ſeveral Places 'and on divers Altars, againſt the Nature of Bodies, 'without ceaſing to be in Heaven: For although by its 'Nature it can only be in one Place after a circumſcrip-'tible Manner, yet it is in many Places by its omnipo-'tent Vertue and Energy, and after a ſpiritual Man-'ner.

Of the principal Authors.

In the hundred forty firſt, he complains to Gautier Archbiſhop of Roan, that a certain private Perſon had detain'd the Revenues of a Prebend that belong'd to him, and entreats that Prelate to cauſe Reſtitution to be made.

In the hundred forty ſecond, he comforts the Prior and Monks of Eveſham, who were in great Trouble, and exhorts them to bear it with Patience.

The four following Letters relate to the Confinement of Richard I. King of England, and were written to procure his Liberty.

In the hundred forty ſeventh, he reproves Robert Biſhop of Bangor, who determin'd to retain a certain Benefice, which he had conferr'd on another Clerk.

In the hundred forty eighth, he exhorts Savaric Biſhop of Bath to return to his Dioceſs, and not to leave his Church with a Deſign to travel.

In the hundred forty ninth, he complains, that they were about to deprive him of his Archdeaconry in the End of his Life.

In the hundred and fiftieth, he mollifies what he had ſaid in the fourteenth Letter, againſt thoſe Clergymen, who reſide in the Courts of Princes.

In the hundred fifty firſt, he entreats Pope Innocent III. to augment the Revenues of the Archdeaconry of London, which was lately conferr'd upon him. He gives his Holineſs to underſtand, that there were about forty thouſand Men within the Juriſdiction of his Archdeaconry, and above one hundred and twenty Churches; nevertheleſs that he was not able to collect any of the Duties that are cuſtomably paid to the Archdeacons.

In the hundred fifty ſecond, he entreats that Pope, to change a Chapter of which he was Dean, into a Monaſtery of the Ciſtercian Order.

The hundred fifty third, is written in the Name of Rotron Archbiſhop of Roan, and of Arnulphus Biſhop of Liſieux, to Henry II. King of England; in which they give him an Account of the Negotiations in the Court of the King of France, where they were ſent by that Prince.

The hundred fifty fourth, is likewiſe written in the Name of the ſame Archbiſhop, who entreats Eleonora Queen of England, and her Sons, to be reconcil'd with King Henry II.

In the hundred fifty fifth Letter, that Archbiſhop excuſes himſelf to the Prior and Monks of La Charite, for not retiring to their Convent, by reaſon that he could not leave his Flock during the War.

The following Letters to the hundred eighty third, and laſt, contain nothing very remarkable as to Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, and many of them are Conſolatory.

There is no Author, who has fill'd his Letters with a greater number of Quotations, out of the Holy Scriptures and Eccleſiaſtical and Profane Writings, than Peter of Blois; inſomuch, that they are ſcarce any thing elſe but a Contexture of ſuch Paſſages. That which is properly his own Matter, is full of Antitheſes and Puns: However, he diſcourſes with much freedom, ſharply reproves Vices, and maintains Church Diſcipline and the Eccleſiaſtical Conſtitutions.

His Sermons are written almoſt after the ſame Manner as his Letters, in a conciſe and ſententious Style, to the number of ſixty five; neither does he explain therein the Points of Morality in their utmoſt extent, but he fills them with divers Maxims and Notions, which are accompanied with no other Ornaments, but Antitheſes and nice Compariſons of Words: But he handles Matters more at large in his Tracts, which are ſeventeen in Number.

The firſt is a Moral Diſcourſe on the Transfiguration of Jeſus Chriſt.

The ſecond, is another Diſcourſe of the ſame Nature on St. Paul's Converſion.

The third, is a compendious Chronicle on the Beginning and the End of the Book of Job.

The fourth, is a very pathetical Exhortation to induce the Chriſtian Princes to ſend Succours to the Holy Land.

The fifth, is an Inſtruction written in the Name of Pope Alexander III. to the Sultan of Iconium.

The ſixth, is a Treatiſe of Sacramental Confeſſion and Penance.

The ſeventh, is a Tract concerning the Functions and Qualities of a Confeſſor, and the Manner how he ought to demean himſelf in the Adminiſtration of the Sacrament of Penance.

The

Of the principal Authors.

The eighth Piece, call'd the Epiſcopal Canon, contains Inſtructions for Biſhops.

The ninth, is an Invective againſt one who paſs'd a Cenſure on his Works, and charg'd him with being a Flatterer of Princes, and a falſe Accuſer of Clergymen and Monks: He clears himſelf from both Imputations, by producing a Catalogue of his Writings; in which he aſſerts, that there is nothing to be found that can convict him of what was laid to his Charge, and ſeveral Particulars to the contrary. He enlarges in Commendation of the Monaſtick Life, and explains ſome Paſſages of his Works, that were objected againſt him; and amongſt others, what he had laid down concerning Free-will, which he was accus'd of having confounded with Grace: He maintains, That the former is ſupported by, and depends on the latter, after ſuch a manner, that the Mercy of God is not prejudicial to Merit, nor Grace to Free-will.

The tenth, is a Treatiſe againſt the Jews, in which he has accurately collected all the Prophecies that relate to Jeſus Chriſt.

The eleventh, is a large Treatiſe of Chriſtian Friendſhip, of the Love of God, and Charity to our Neighbour; in which he inſiſts on the Cauſes, Duties, Parts and Effects of thoſe Vertues.

The twelfth, is of the Uſefulneſs of Afflictions, of which he ſhews the ſeveral Advantages.

The thirteenth, call'd, What are they, quales ſunt? is a Satyr againſt unworthy Paſtors. He juſtifies at firſt, what he is about to write againſt them, and declares that 'tis not his deſign to attack the Worthy Paſtors, but only the Unworthy, who have no Faith; who have not enter'd the Sheep-fold through the Gate; who do not deſerve the Names of Paſtor, Pope, Biſhop or Prelate; becauſe they have not any of the Qualities ſignified by thoſe Terms; who enrich their Relations with the Church-Revenues; who confer Canonries and other ſpiritual Livings upon them; or who being of mean Extraction, and of an unknown Family, are endu'd with no generous Principles, but with a great deal of ſordid Baſeneſs without Humility, whoſe Dignity ſoon corrupts their Manners. He ſhews, that theſe ſorts of Biſhops ought not to be flatter'd, but that their Faults ought to be expos'd, to the end that thoſe Perſons who preſent themſelves to be admitted into Holy Orders, may be duely examin'd, and that a conſiderable Time may be taken, to be well aſſur'd of their Demeanour, and of their Courſe of Life.

Of the principal Authors.

The fourteenth, is a Fragment of a Letter, that he wrote about Silence.

The fifteenth, is a Fragment of his Book, of the Changes of Fortune.

The ſixteenth, is a Tract concerning the Sacred Books and Writers of the Old and New Teſtament.

The ſeventeenth, is a Poetical Piece on the Euchariſt.

The firſt Edition of Peter of Blois's Works, was printed at Mentz; the ſecond at Paris, A. D. 1519. the third at Mentz in 1600. by Buſæus, who annex'd an Addition of ſome Tracts in 1605. This Edition was copied out in the Bibliotheca Patrum, printed at Colen; but in all theſe Editions, the Sermons of Peter Comeſtor, were inſerted inſtead of thoſe of Peter of Blois: At laſt M. de Gouſſainville, publiſh'd a new Edition of all Peter of Blois's Works, in which are to found the genuine Sermons of that Author, printed at Paris in 1667. This was follow'd in the laſt Bibliotheca Patrum, ſet forth at Lyons.

Stephen Biſhop of Tournay.

Stephen.

Stephen, Abbot of St. Genevieve, and afterwards Biſhop of Tournay, was born at Orleans, A. D. 1135. and compleated his Studies in the Schools of the Cathedral Churches of that City and of Chartres: He apply'd himſelf more eſpecially to that of the Canon-Law, and became a Regular Canon in 1165. in the Monaſtery of St. Everte, where St. Victor's Rule was eſtabliſh'd in 1158. by Roger, who was the firſt Abbot ſince the Reformation. Stephen ſucceeded him in that Office, but the Abby of Genevieve being vacant in 1177. by the Death of the Abbot Aubert, he was choſen in his Place. He was promoted to the Biſhoprick of Tournay in 1192. and govern'd it to the Year 1203. which was that of his Death.

This Author wrote a Commentary on Gratian's Decretal, with divers Sermons and Letters. All his Works are extant in Manuſcript; but Father du Moulinet did not judge, that the Commentary on the Decretal, and the Sermons were worthy to be brought to Light, and therefore he only publiſh'd the Preface to that Commentary, the firſt Sermon and the Texts of Scripture, on which the thirty others were compos'd, with his Letters, which he divided into three Parts; the firſt of which contain the Letters which he wrote being as yet Abbot of St. Everte, from A. D. 1163. to 1177.

The firſt, is a very pathetical Complaint, which he recited in the Synod of the Biſhops of the Province held at Sens, concerning the Murder committed on the Perſon of John Dean of Orleans, by a certain Lord, out of whoſe Hands, he endeavour'd to wreſt ſome Revenues belonging to the Chapter of Orleans, which he had uſurp'd.

He was enjoyn'd by the ſame Aſſembly, to write to the King, to demand Juſtice for that execrable Fact. He did it after ſuch a manner, as was capable of exciting him to take Vengeance for ſo heinous a Crime. However, the King did not approve that Letter, and conceiv'd much Diſpleaſure againſt Stephen upon that Account; which gave occaſion to his Enemies to perſecute him, and to threaten to pillage his Eſtate, and to cauſe him to be put to Death, unleſs he deſiſted from the Proſecution of that Suit. Whereupon he had Recourſe to William Biſhop of Chartres, the Son of Thibaud or Theobald Count of Champagne, who appeas'd the King's Anger, and reſtor'd Stephen to his Favour, as the latter had entreated him to do in his ſecond Letter.

The third is a Letter written by Ponce Biſhop of Clermont, in which he deſires Maurice Biſhop of Paris, and Stephen Abbot of St. Everte to give a Reſolution of a Caſe of Conſcience touching the Validity of the Baptiſm of Infants that are dipt in the Water, theſe Words being recited, viz. In the Name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt, without expreſſing the Action by theſe Terms, I baptize thee. A certain Father had baptiz'd his Child after that Manner, and it was cuſtomary to do ſo, in Caſe of Neceſſity.

Stephen.

Maurice returns an Anſwer in the fourth Letter, That that Baptiſm is null, and determines the Matter with a great deal of Aſſurance, in a few Words. Stephen replies on the contrary, in the fifth Letter, that that Baptiſm is valid, provided the Three Perſons of the Trinity be invok'd, and that 'tis not abſolutely neceſſary to add theſe Words, I baptize thee; becauſe it is not ſaid in the Goſpel, Go and baptize the Nations, ſaying, I baptize you in the Name of the Father, &c. but only, Baptize them in the Name of the Father, &c. He confirms his Opinion by divers Paſſages of the Fathers, which only require the Invocation of the Holy Trinity, for the Validity of Baptiſm. He affirms, that theſe Terms, I baptize thee, are added by the Church, that they have only regard to the Solemnity of the Action, and do not belong to the Subſtance of the Sacrament: de ſolemnitate Miniſterii, non de ſubſtantia Sacramenti. He adds, that if a different Opinion were admitted, an infinite number of Children muſt unavoidably be damned, who were baptiz'd by Laicks in Caſe of Neceſſity; by reaſon that the greateſt part of thoſe ignorant People, were wont to baptize only ſaying, En nome Patres & Files, & Eſpirites Sanctos. However he declares, that thoſe Prieſts ought to be cenſur'd and put to Penance, who thro' Negligence or Ignorance omit any Thing that relates to the Solemnity of the Adminiſtration of Baptiſm. But he maintains, that a Child which was once baptiz'd in the Name of the Trinity, ought not to be baptiz'd again, altho' the Father did not expreſs the Action by theſe Words, I baptize thee. Laſtly, he ſays that he who baptizes a Child, contracts a ſpiritual Affinity with the Mother, which renders him uncapable of marrying her; or of co-habiting with her as his Wife, if they were marry'd before.

The other Letters contain'd in this firſt Part, are either recommendatory in favour of divers Perſons, or relate to particular Affairs; as the rebuilding of the Church of St. Everte, which was burnt by the Normans, to which purpoſe, he deſires Supplies of the Chapter of St. Martin at Tours, and of his Friends: The Reſtoration of a Prior who had waſted the Revenues of his Monaſtery: The Conteſt between the Church of St. Sampſon, and the Chapter of St. Croix, &c.

In the ſecond Part, are comprehended the Letters written by Stephen of Tournay whilſt he govern'd the Abby of St. Genevieve, from A. D. 1177. to 1192. The greateſt part of theſe Letters are complimental or recommendatory, and contain nothing very remarkable. There are ſeveral written in favour of the Archbiſhop of Tours, about the Conteſt that he had with the Biſhop of Dol, as the fortieth, the hundred and ſeventh, the hundred and eighth, the hundred and tenth, and the hundred and fortieth: Others againſt the Regular Canons of St. John des Vignes, who were deſirous to enjoy their private Eſtates, and who being provided of good Livings, endeavour'd to withdraw themſelves from their Obedience to the Abbot, to depend only on the Juriſdiction of the Biſhop. He maintains, That they ought always to be ſubject to the Abbot, and to ſubmit to his Will, according to the Cuſtom, which (as he ſays) was always put in practice; otherwiſe all manner of regular Diſcipline would be entirely aboliſh'd, and there would be as many Abbots as Curates: See the ſixty firſt, the ninety fifth, and the hundred ſixty ſecond Letters.

Of the principal Authors.

In the ſeventy firſt, he proves, That thoſe who have made a Vow to paſs from the Order of Grandmont to that of Ciſteaux, ought to perform that Vow, and in general, that Tranſlations from a remiſs Order to a more auſtere are lawful and expedient. In the hundred forty third, he relates a Sentence paſs'd by the King, in favour of certain Clerks of the Order of Grandmont againſt the Prior and ſome Lay-brothers of the ſame Order, and writes to the Pope in his own Name, in that of the Abbots of St. Germain des Prez and of St. Victor; and even in that of his Clergy; to confirm that Sentence. In the hundred forty firſt, he adviſes the Dean of the Church of Rheims to hinder the Canons of that Cathedral from abrogating what was left of their ancient Rule, viz. to eat always in common in the ſame Refectory, and to live together in the ſame Cloiſter.

The hundred forty ſixth, the hundred forty ſeventh, the hundred forty eighth, the hundred forty ninth, and the hundred fifty third are written to the King of Denmark, and to ſome Biſhops of that Kingdom and of Sweden, to induce them to procure Lead in England to cover the Church of St. Genevieve, which was burnt and pillaged by the Normans. He makes by the way, a very ingenious Antitheſis, between the Lead that is purchaſed at Rome for Bulls, and that which is bought in England; ſaying, That one ſerves to impoveriſh the Churches, and the other to cover them: Anglico Plumbo teguntur Eccleſiæ, undantur Romano. He entreats the Pope to grant two Diſpenſations, viz. one in the eighty ſecond Letter for the Chancellor of France, who was denied Admittance into Holy Orders, becauſe he was not born in lawful Wedlock, and the other in the hundred and thirteenth upon the ſame Occaſion, in Favour of a certain Perſon who had exerciſ'd the Office of an † Attorney General: He obſerves in the former, that the Canon of not admitting baſe born Perſons among the Clergy, was not generally receiv'd in all the Churches. He likewiſe makes a Requeſt to the Pope, to confirm the Immunity of the Abby of St. Everte at Orleans, in the fifty eighth and fifty ninth Letters; and in the hundred fifty fifth, to maintain the Revenues belonging to the Prebends of the Cathedral of Paris, appropriated to the Church of St. Victor.

† Procureur Fiſcal.

The hundred fifty ninth, is concerning the Difficulty of leading a ſolitary Courſe of Life, and of the Means of attaining to it. Evrard of Aveſnes Biſhop of Tournay dying, A. D. 1191. the Clergy at firſt choſe Peter Chanter of the Church of Paris, to ſupply his Place, and Stephen wrote the hundred ſeventy fifth and laſt Letter of the ſecond Part, in his Behalf, but that Election being adjudged to be null, he himſelf was inſtall'd in the Biſhoprick of Tournay, and caus'd his Nephew to be choſen Abbot of St. Genevieve in his ſtead.

The firſt Letters of the third Part, relate to his Promotion to that Dignity. In the two hundred and ſecond, he determines, That the Marriage of a Novice who has left his Convent for that Purpoſe, is valid. In the two hundred and eighth, he gives a particular Account of his Life and Converſation, to juſtifie himſelf againſt Bertier Archdeacon of Cambray, who accus'd him of not leading a Life conformable to that of a Biſhop. 'I very ſeldom 'go, ſays he, out of the City: I aſſiſt as often as is poſ-'ſible, at the Celebration of all the Divine Offices; I 'preach the Word of God to my Dioceſans, after the beſt 'Manner that I can; I declaim againſt the modern He-'reſies: I freely adminiſter the Sacraments, which I have 'freely receiv'd. I deteſt Simoniacal Practices: I do not 'receive Bribes or unlawful Preſents: I give wholſome 'Advice to all thoſe, who make Confeſſion to me; and 'impoſe on them profitable Penances: I comfort the Af-'flicted as far as it lies in my Power: I ſpend my ſpare 'Hours in reading and meditating on the Holy Scripture: 'I exerciſe Hoſpitality in entertaining my Gueſts cheer-'fully, and keeping a good Table, never eating my Bread 'alone; yet I do not rioutouſly waſt the Patrimony of 'Jeſus Chriſt in maintaining Stage-players and Farce-actors. 'Such is my outward Demeanour, and as for the inward 'Diſpoſition of my Mind, it is known to none but God.

The two hundred twenty fourth, two hundred twenty fifth, and the two hundred twenty ſixth Letters have Reference to the Abbot of St. Martin at Tournay, whom he ſuſpended for leading a diſorderly Life, and re-eſtabliſh'd him at the Requeſt of the Biſhop of Arras, on condition that he ſhould obſerve the Rules, that were preſcribed to him, and which are ſpecified in the two hundred twenty fourth Letter. The two hundred thirty firſt and the following are written againſt the Sentence of Suſpenſion, which Melior the Pope's Legate was about to denounce againſt the Country of Flanders: In the two hundred forty third, and the next, he puts up Complaints againſt the Inhabitants of Tournay, who refus'd to ſubmit to his Authority. In the two hundred forty eighth and two hundred forty ninth, he complains, that the Archbiſhop of Arras conferr'd Orders on the Monks of St. Amand without his Leave. The two hundred fifty firſt is a Declamation directed to the Pope, on this Subject, viz. That the Study of the Fathers was then generally neglected to follow that of Scholaſtick Divinity, and of the Decretals. 'The Stu-'dents, ſays he, having a Reliſh for nothing but Novel-'ties, and the Tutors endeavouring to enhance their own 'Reputation, rather than to promote the Inſtruction of 'others, compile every Day new Sums or Syſtems of 'Divinity, and new Theological Works, on purpoſe to 'amuſe and deceive their Auditors; as if the Writings 'of the Fathers were not ſufficient, who have explain'd 'the Holy Scriptures, by the ſame Spirit with which the 'Prophets and Apoſtles were inſpir'd when they wrote 'them. But theſe modern Doctors bring in new, un-'known and ſtrange ſorts of Meſſes, when the King's 'Wedding Feaſts are quite made ready, when the Oxen 'and Fowl are kill'd, and when it only remains that the 'Gueſts ſhould ſit down at Table to eat: Publick Diſpu-'tations are ſet on foot againſt the Deciſions of the Church, 'touching the incomprehenſible Godhead: Fleſh and Blood 'take upon them irreverently to diſpute about the Incar-'nation of the Word: The Holy Indiviſible Trinity, is 'as it were divided and torn in Pieces (with Reverence 'be it ſpoken) in the Publick Places; inſomuch, that 'there are almoſt as many Errors as Doctors, as many 'Scandals as Auditories, and as many Blaſphemies as 'Places. If there be occaſion to paſs from Theological 'Diſputes to the Trial of Cauſes that are uſually decided 'by the Canon Law, aſſoon as the Judges-delegate are 'appointed, or when the Ordinaries have taken Cogni-'zance of the Matter; a prodigious Labyrinth of Decre-'tal Letters is immediately produc'd, under the Name of 'Alexander of happy Memory, from whence 'tis impoſ-'ſible for any Man to extricate himſelf; neither is any 'regard had to the ancient Canons, but on the contrary, 'they are rejected and contemned. During which Con-'fuſion, it ſo falls out, that the wholſome Ordinances of 'the ancient Councils are not follow'd in the Modern, 'and Matters are not debated according to their natural 'Order, with reſpect to the true Merit of the Cauſe, by 'reaſon that the Decretal Letters have the Pre-eminence, 'which perhaps are forged under the Name of divers Popes 'of Rome by modern Canoniſts. Theſe are collected in-'to an entire Volume, which is read in the Schools, and 'publickly ſold to the great Profit of the Writers, who by 'that means take leſs Pains, and get more Money, by co-'pying out thoſe ſuſpected Works. The third Objection 'that may be made againſt the preſent manner of Studying, 'is, that the Liberal Arts and Sciences have loſt their an-'cient Liberty, and are brought under ſo great Subjection, 'that the Profeſſors Chairs are fill'd with young Perſons, 'and the Quality of Tutors is attributed to ſuch as do not 'deſerve to be look'd upon as Pupils, who without adhe-'ring to the Rules of Art, employ themſelves in ſetting 'Words in order and deviſing Sophiſms, with which they 'ſurprize ignorant and unthinking People; after the ſame 'manner as ſilly Flies are ſoon catch'd in a Cobweb. 'Philoſophy may well cry out, that her Garments are 'ſnatch'd away and that her Body is torn in Pieces; ſo 'that there is no Elder left to comfort her; neither is ſhe 'any longer capable of adminiſtring Comfort to an Elder. 'Theſe abuſes, moſt Holy Father, require your power-'ful Hand to reform them, and that you ſhould eſtabliſh 'by your ſovereign Authority an Uniformity of Teach-'ing, Learning and Diſputing, leſt the moſt noble Science 'of Divinity ſhould become contemptible; leſt it ſhould 'be ſaid that Jeſus Chriſt is here, or there; or leſt Holy 'Things ſhould be thrown to Dogs, and Pearls caſt be-'fore Swine.

Of the principal Authors.

In the two hundred fifty fifth Letter, he inveighs againſt another Abuſe, that is to ſay, Appeals made to the Holy See by Inferiors, to avoid the Correction of their Superiors, and requires that Prelates and Abbots ſhould be inveſted with an abſolute Power to correct their Inferiors, and to change the Officers that depend on their Juriſdiction, with-without any manner of Obstruction made by the Means of Appeals to the Court of Rome. In the two hundred sixty second Letter, he enlarges on the Commendation of Queen Ingelburga, the Wife of Philip King of France, and advises her in the following, not to suffer her Marriage to be dissolv'd. The other Letters do not contain any Thing very remarkable. The whole Number of them amounts to two hundred eighty and seven in the last Edition set forth by Father du Moulinet, and printed at Paris, A. D. 1689. altho' there were only two hundred and forty in that of Masson in 1611. The Style of these Letters is concise and close, but the Terms are not always pure, nor well chosen; nevertheless they afford much Satisfaction to the Reader, by reason that the Conceptions are regular and natural.

Of the principal Authors.

Of the principal Authors.

The Authors who wrote against the Albigeois and Vaudois.

GRetser brought to light, A. D. 1614. three Authors who wrote against the Albigeois and Vaudois in the End of the Twelfth Century: These three Writers are Ebrard of Bethune in the Province of Artois, Bernard Abbot of Fontcaud and Ermengard or Ermengaud.

Ebrard of Bethune.

Ebrard of Bethune, confutes in his Work, 1. The Error of the Manichees, concerning the Law of Moses, and the Prophets; by shewing, That the Law ought not to be rejected; that the Patriarchs and the Prophets were saved; and that it is the true God, who gave the Law, and created the World. Afterwards he passes to other Errors common to all the Hereticks of that Time, about the Sacraments, and the Customs of the Church; and establishes against them the following Doctrines, viz. That Children ought to be baptiz'd; that it is lawful to marry; that the Sacrifice of the Eucharist, contains the Body of Jesus Christ; that none but Priests have the Power or Right of offering, and that they ought to do it in the Churches: That the Unction of the Sick is profitable; that Pilgrimages upon account of Devotion, are commendable; that it is lawful to take a true Oath; that Malefactors may be punished and even put to Death; that we shall rise again in the future State with the same Body that we now have; that Faith ought to be preferr'd to good Works; that Crosses ought to be honour'd; that Women shall be saved, and rise again with the Distinction of their Sex; that Salvation may be obtain'd by different Means, and in different States; and that it is lawful to eat Flesh: Lastly, he shews that those Hereticks are culpable, in regard that they conceal themselves, and that altho' they boast of renouncing the Possessions of this World, yet they endeavour to enrich themselves by other Means; that they mistake the Meaning of Holy Scripture; and that all the Characters of Hereticks agree with them. He adds, That some of them call themselves Valois, and others Xabatates; that they are wont to tear off their Shoes, and that they continually expose themselves during the whole Day to the Heat of the Sun, till Supper-time, when they appear in the publick Places. He concludes this Treatise with a Catalogue of all the Hereticks taken out of Isidorus, and with the Resolution of divers Questions propos'd by him.

Bernard Abbot of Fontcaud.

The second Author, who is Bernard Abbot of Fontcaud, dedicated his Book to Pope Lucius III. and confutes the Vaudois, whom Bernard Archbishop of Narbonne had twice condemned after having heard their several Pleas. He makes particular mention of the Obedience due to the Popes and Prelates: He declaims against the Permission that those People allow Laymen and even Women to preach; against their Assertion that the Alms, Fastings, Sacrifices and Prayers of the Living do not avail any Thing with respect to the Dead; against those who deny Purgatory, and maintain that Humane Souls are neither in Heaven nor Hell till the Day of Judgment; and against their Asseverations, that the People ought not to meet in the Churches to pray. Thus this Author positively opposes none but the Vaudois.

Ermengard.

The third nam'd Ermengard, at first impugns the Errors of the Manichees about the old Law, Matriage, the Incarnation, Passion, Death and Resurrection of Jesus Christ, and afterwards passes to other Errors concerning the Sacraments and Church-Discipline. He proves, that it is requisite to have Churches and Altars; That the singing of the Praises of God is useful and reasonable: That the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ ought to be celebrated in the Church, and that the Words of its Institution, ought to be understood in a proper and not in a figurative Sense; That Baptism is necessary for Salvation, and that it ought even to be administer'd to young Children: That Repentance is likewise necessary for those who have fallen into Sin, and that it is composed of three Parts, viz. Contrition, Confession and Satisfaction, and that it is requisite to make Confession to a Priest. He refutes in particular the Custom that was in use among those Hereticks in the Imposition of Hands, which they call Consolation, and which they administer'd in the following Manner:

The Superior amongst those People, after having wash'd his Hands, took the Book of the Gospels, and exhorted those, who came to receive the Consolation, to put their whole Trust and Hope of their Salvation therein, and afterwards laying the Book of the Gospels on their Head, repeated seven times the Lord's Prayer, and the Beginning of St. John's Gospel, from In principio, to these Words, Gratia & Veritas per Jesum Christum facta est. i. e. Grace and Truth came by Jesus Christ. Thus ended the Ceremony of their Consolation; but if it should happen that no Superior is present, then one of the Comforted performs the same Ceremony, and even Women do it to sick Persons in the Absence of Men: They believe that this Consolation remits Sins, even mortal ones, and that without it 'tis impossible to be saved: Lastly, they maintain, that those who have actually committed a mortal Sin, are uncapable of administring it effectually. Afterwards Ermengard proves against them, that 'tis lawful to eat Flesh, and to take an Oath, and establishes the Doctrines of the Resurrection of the Dead, the Invocation of Saints, and Prayers for deceased Persons.

These three Authors scarce make use of any other Proofs but Passages of the Holy Scripture to confute the Errors they oppose, and to establish the Truths they maintain; nay they produce a great Number of them, amongst which there are some which do not clearly prove, what they assert.

CHAP. XII.

Of the Ecclesiastical Authors of less note, who flourish'd in the Western Countries in the Twelfth Centuty.

Of the Authors of less note.

AFTER having treated in the preceding Chapter of the most noted Ecclesiastical Writers, whose Works are more numerous, or more considerable, we shall now give some Account in this, of a great Number of others less known, who have compos'd divers small Tracts, reserving the particular Enumeration of the Historians and Greek Authors, for the following Chapters.

Anselm Dean of Laon.

Anselm, Dean of the Church of Laon, flourish'd in the Beginning of the Century, and made publick Divinity-Lectures at Chalons, in which he gave Explications of the Holy Scripture. He is also supposed to be in part the Author of the Ordinary Gloss. Some attribute to him the Commentaries on the Book of Canticles, on St. Matthew's Gospel, on St. Paul's Epistles, and on the Revelation of St. John, which were printed under the Name of St. Anselm Archbishop of Canterbury, but they really belong to Hervæus a Monk of Bourg near Dol, whose Name they bear in the Manuscripts.

Gisilebert or Gilbert Crispin, Abbot of Westminster.

Gisilebert or Gilbert, firnam'd Crispin, St. Anselm's Pupil, after having follow'd his Study in the Abby of Bec, took a Journey to Rome, and upon his return, had a Conference with a certain Jew of Mentz. Afterwards he was made Abbot of Westminster, A. D. 1106. He wrote a Relation of that Conference, and dedicated it to St. Anselm, amongst whose Works it is inserted in the last Edition by Father Gerberon. Dr. Cave assures us, That there are still extant in the Libraries of England, divers Manuscript Homilies written by Gilbert Crispin on the Book of Canticles, and several Discourses on St. Jerome's Prefaces to the Bible, with a particular Treatise against the Sins of Thought, Word and Deed. The Relation of the Conference made by this Author, is different from that which is annexed to St. Augustine's Works, under the Title of, The Contest between the Synagogue and the Church, and is much more accurate. He died A. D. 1114. as some Writers averr, or according to others in 1115.

Petrus Alphonsus, a Spanish Jew converted.

Petrus Alphonsus, a Spanish Jew, who formerly bore the Name of Moses, was converted A. D. 1106. was baptiz'd at Huesca, and had Alphonsus King of Portugal for his Godfather. He compos'd a Treatise by way of Dialogue between a Jew and a Christian, concerning the Truth of the Christian Religion, divided into twelve Chapters; in the first of which he shews, That the Jews explain the Writings of the Prophets too carnally, and that they mistake their meaning: In the second, he makes it appear, that the Cause of the Captivity of the Jews, is the putting of the Messiah to death; that it was foretold by the Prophets, and that it will not cease till the End of the World. In the third, he confutes the Opinion of the Jews, who believe, that their Dead shall be raised again one Day to dwell on the Earth, and that they shall multiply therein. In the fourth, he proves that the Jews do no longer observe the principal Articles of the Law of Moses, and that what they do observe, is not acceptable to God. In the fifth Chapter, which is written against the Mahometan Superstitions; he shews, that Mahomet was a false Prophet, who wrought no Miracles, and was destitute of Learning, Religion and Probity. In the sixth, he proves the Doctrine of the Trinity, by Passages of the Old Testament. In the seventh, he demonstrates by the Writings of the Prophets, That the Messiah was to be born of a Virgin, and conceiv'd by the Operation of the Holy Ghost. In the eighth, That the Word of God was made Man, and that Christ is God and Man. In the ninth, That Jesus Christ came at the Time foretold by the Prophets, and that the Prophecies concerning the Messiah are accomplish'd in him. In the tenth, That he died voluntarily to redeem Mankind, according to the Prediction of the Prophets. In the eleventh, That he arose again from the Dead, and ascended into Heaven. And in the twelfth, That the Law of the Christians is not contrary to that of the Jews. This Treatise is one of the best that we have of that kind, and the Author handles these Matters very methodically, with a great deal of Clearness and Solidity of Argument.

Theobald Clerk of the Church of Etampes.

Thibaud or Theobald, Clerk of the Church of Etampes, and afterwards Professor of Divinity in the Schools of Caen and Oxford, flourish'd in the Beginning of the Century, and wrote several Letters, which were publish'd by Father Dachery in the third Tome of his Spicilegium. Of the Authors of less note.

The first is written to the Bishop of Lincoln, about certain Persons who were doubtful of the Mercy of God: He shews, That a Sinner may have recourse to Repentance at all Times; That he may obtain the Remission of his Sins, and that a good Disposition is sufficient for an entire Conversion.

In the second, directed to Faricius Abbot of Abbington; he proves, That Children who die without receiving Baptism are damned.

The third, is a Complimental Letter to Margaret Queen of England.

The fourth, is a Consolatory Letter to one of his Friends, who was unjustly slandered.

The last Letter is written against Roscelin; in which he shews, That the Sons of Priests are uncapable of being admitted into Holy Orders.

Radulphus Ardens.

Radulphus firnam'd Ardens, a Native of Poitiers, and Chaplain to William III. Duke of Aquitaine, flourish'd in the Beginning of this Century. He compos'd a great Number of Sermons on the Sundays and Festivals of the Year, printed at Paris, A. D. 1568. and 1583. at Antwerp in 1576. and at Colen in 1604.

Odo Bishop of Cambray.

Odo, Abbot of St. Martin at Tournay, was ordain'd Bishop of Cambray, A. D. 1105. and expell'd for refusing to receive the Investiture from the Emperor Henry IV. He retir'd to Douay and died there in 1113. He wrote a Commentary upon the Canon of the Mass, in which he explains the Text literally, with a kind of Paraphrase: Three very Scholastick Books concerning Original Sin: A Treatise in form of a Dialogue against a Jew, touching the Necessity of the Incarnation of the Son of God, and of the Grace of Jesus Christ: Another of the Sin against the Holy Ghost: A Tract to explain the Harmony of the Evangelists, and a Sermon on the Parable of the unjust Steward. There is a great deal of Philosophy in these Treatises.

Gilbert Bishop of Limerick.

Gilbert, Bishop of Limerick in Ireland, and the Pope's Legate in that Country, held a Council there A. D. 1110. to regulate the Limits of the Bishopricks of that Kingdom, and assisted in 1115. at the Ordination of Bernard Bishop of St. David's, which was perform'd at Westminster. But being no longer able to discharge the Functions of his Legateship, he resign'd it to the Pope in 1139. and died a little while after. He wrote a small Tract about the State of the Church, and two Letters, viz. one to the Bishops and Priests of Ireland, and the other to St. Anselm Archbishop of Canterbury, which are inserted in the Collection of the Letters of Ireland, publish'd by Archbishop Usher.

Franco Abbot of Afflighem.

Franco, the second Abbot of the Monastery of Afflighem near Bruxels, compos'd in the Beginning of the Century, twelve Books concerning the Grace and Mercy of God, which contain an History of the principal Benefices that God has bestow'd on Men from the Creation of the World, to the Day of everlasting Happiness: A Letter in which he shews, That a Monk, who has quitted his Habit and Profession cannot be saved: Another Letter directed to certain Nuns, to serve them instead of a Consolation and Exhortation. The Poetical Piece about the Glory of the future State, apparently is not different from certain Copies of Verses on that Subject, which are to be found at the End of his twelfth Book of the Grace of God; but his Sermons on the Virgin Mary, mention'd by Trithemius, are no longer extant. This Author was made Abbot, A. D. 1111. and died under Pope Innocent II. He began these Works being as yet a simple Monk, and compleated them when advanc'd to the Dignity of an Abbot.

William de Champeaux.

William de Champeaux, so call'd from the Name of the Village of Champeaux near Melun in the Province of Brie, after having apply'd himself to study at Laon under Anselm Dean of the Cathedral Church of that City, was ordain'd Archdeacon of Paris, and appointed to read Lectures of Logick in the Schools of that Church. Some time after, he retir'd with some of his Pupils to a Monastery, in which was St Victor's Chappel near Paris, and there founded the Abby of Regular Canons. He continu'd tinu'd to teach in that Convent, and (as it is generally believ'd) was the firſt publick Profeſſor of Scholaſtick Divinity. He was made Biſhop of Chalons, A. D. 1113. and died in the end of the Month of January, 1121. 'Tis very probable, that being a Perſon of ſo great Learning, he wrote ſome Works, yet we have none of them in our Poſſeſſion: For the Dialogue between a Chriſtian and a Jew, which was publiſh'd under his Name in the Bibliotheca Patrum of the laſt Edition at Lyons, belongs to Gilbert of Weſtminſter. However 'tis reported that he wrote a Book of Sentences before Peter Lombard, of which a Manuſcript Copy is ſtill kept in the Library of Notre Dame at Paris.

Of the Authors of leſs note

Stephen Biſhop of Autun.

Stephen, ordain'd Biſhop of Autun in the Year 1113. left that Biſhoprick in 1129. to turn Monk in the Abby of Cluny, and ſpent the reſt of his Life there. He is the Author of a Treatiſe concerning the Prayers and Ceremonies of the Maſs, and about the Functions of the Miniſters of the Altar, ſet forth by John de Montalon, Canon and Chanter of Autun, and inſerted in the Bibliotheca Patrum.

Gautier Biſhop of Maguelone.

Gautier or Gauterius, Biſhop of Maguelone in Languedoc and the Pope's Legate, govern'd that Biſhoprick from A. D. 1103. to 1129. He publiſh'd in the beginning of the Century a Treatiſe call'd Flowers on the Pſalms, compos'd by Letbert or Lietbert Abbot of St. Rufus, and dedicated it to Robert Provoſt of Liſle, his Kinſman, and to the Chapter of that Church, by an Epiſtle which Father Mabillon has ſet forth in the firſt Tome of his Analecta.

Drogo Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia.

Drogo or Dreux, Prior of St. Nicatius at Rheims, was conſtituted the firſt Abbot of St. John at Laon by Bartholomew Biſhop of that City, A. D. 1128. and afterwards invited to Rome in 1136. by Pope Innocent II. who made him a Cardinal and Biſhop of Oſtia. He wrote the following Tracts, viz. a Sermon on the Paſſion of Jeſus Chriſt: A Treatiſe of the Creation and Redemption of the firſt Man: Another of the ſeven Gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, and a third on the Divine Offices. This Author died in 1138.

Peter Library keeper of Mount Caſſin

Peter the Library keeper of Mount Caſſin, was put into that Monaſtery, A. D. 1115. being then aged only eleven Years, by his Father nam'd Giles, who was deſcended of a noble Family at Rome. After having compleated his Studies under the Abbot Girard, from whom he receiv'd the Monaſtick Habit, he was made Deacon of the Church of Oſtia, and Library keeper of Mount Caſſin. He was turn'd out of that Monaſtery in 1128. through the Envy of his Collegues; and afterwards employ'd in ſeveral Negotiations by the Emperor Lotharius, who gave him good Entertainment in his Court, and conſtituted him his Chaplain and Secretary of State: He compos'd a Treatiſe of the Illuſtrious Perſonages of Mount Caſſin, printed at Rome in 1655. and inſerted in the laſt Bibliotheca Patrum. He is likewiſe the Author of the fourth Book of the Chronicle of Mount Caſſin, and of another Tract about the Roman Letters, dedicated to the Emperor Conrad, which was printed at Venice in 1525. In the laſt Chapter of his Treatiſe of Illuſtrious Perſonages, he gives us a Catalogue of his Works; in which are reckon'd up, the Lives of divers Saints; ſeveral Sermons; the Hiſtory of the Famous Men of Mount Caſſin; an Expoſition of St. Benedict's Rule; certain Scholia or Notes on the Old Teſtament; and Hymns; divers Books relating to Hiſtory or Humane Learning, and ſome Letters.

Richard Abbot of Mount Caſſin.

His Book of the Illuſtrious Perſonages of Mount Caſſin, was continu'd by Richard Abbot of that Monaſtery, who died in the following Century. Theſe two Writers (after St. Jerom's Example) uſually produce a Catalogue of the Works of thoſe Authors who are mention'd by them.

Anſelm Biſhop Havelberg.

Anſelm, Biſhop of Havelberg, in the Marquiſate of Brandenburg, flouriſh'd under the Emperor Lotharius II. who ſent him in quality of his Ambaſſador to the Court of the Greek Emperor at Conſtantinople. He had divers Conferences there, about Matters of Religion, which were afterwards collected by him, and committed to Writing in three Books, dedicated to Pope Eugenius III. This Work was publiſh'd by Father Luke Dacbery in the thirteenth Tome of his Spicilegium. In the firſt Book, he ſhews, That Faith was always the ſame even from the Creation of the World, although Cuſtoms and the particular manner of Living were different. He applys to the ſeven States of the Church, what is expreſs'd in the Apocalypſe, concerning the opening of the ſeven Seals, and the Horſes that went out as they were open'd. The firſt is of the Primitive Church, famous for its Miracles, and the Purity of the Faith and Manners of the Believers: The ſecond is that of the Church, perſecuted by the Jews and Gentiles: The third is that of the Church, infeſted by Hereſies: The fourth is that of the Church, full of falſe Brethren and Hypocrites; to whom he oppoſes the Orders of Monks and Regular Canons: The fifth is the State of the Souls of the Righteous, who are at reſt, waiting for the Reſurrection: The ſixth is the Perſecution raiſed by Antichriſt; and the laſt is the State of everlaſting Happineſs. In the ſecond Book, compos'd by way of Dialogue, between himſelf and an Archbiſhop, of Nicomedia; he confutes the Opinion of the Greeks, touching the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, and diſcuſſes divers Queſtions relating to the Myſtery of the Trinity. The third is likewiſe written in form of a Conference with the ſame Archbiſhop, about the other Controverſies that were on foot, between the Greeks and the Latins; more eſpecially as to what concerns the Uſe of unleaven'd Bread, in the ſacred Myſteries, Primacy, and the Authority of the Church of Rome, which he vigorouſly maintains. In like manner, he inveighs againſt the Cuſtom of the Greeks, who were wont to put no Water in the Chalice, till after the Conſecration, and cenſures another Cuſtom that prevail'd among them, viz. to make uſe of Unction, upon the Reception of thoſe Latins, who were admitted into their Communion. Laſtly, a general Council is propos'd on both ſides to procure the Re-union of the two Churches. This Treatiſe is learned and very accurately written.

Of the Authors of leſs note

Hervæus a Benedictin Monk of Dol

Hervæus, a Benedictin Monk of Dol, flouriſh'd in the Year of our Lord 1130. He wrote a Commentary on St. Paul's Epiſtles, which is annex'd to St. Anſelm's Works of the Colen Edition. Father Labbe aſſures us, that there is alſo extant a large Manuſcript Commentary on the Prophecy of Iſaiah by this Author, in the Library of the College of Clermont. An account of his Life is contain'd in a circulatory Letter written by the Monks of that Monaſtery after his Death.

They alſo produce a Catalogue of his Works; which are an Expoſition of the Book call'd, The Hierarchy of the Angels, attributed to St. Dionyſius the Areopagite: certain Commentaries on the Book of Iſaiah, on the Lamentations of Jeremiah, on the end of the Prophecy of Ezekiel, on the Books of Deuteronomy, Eccleſiaſtes, Judges, Ruth and Tobit; in which he applys himſelf to illuſtrate the literal Senſe, for the benefit of Perſons of a mean Capacity: A large Commentary on St. Paul's Epiſtles: Another on the twelve leſſer Prophets, and on the Book of Geneſis: Divers Sermons on the Goſpels, and on ſome of the Canticles: A Treatiſe of the Leſſons, that are read in the Churches, in which he ſhews the different readings of thoſe Leſſons from the Sacred Text: A Book of the Miracles of the Virgin Mary; and an Explication of the Treatiſe of the Lord's Supper, attributed to St. Cyprian.

Hugh de Foliet a Monk of Corby

Hugh de Foliet, a Monk of Corby, flouriſh'd A. D. 1130. and compos'd divers Treatiſes, which are aſcrib'd to Hugh of St. Victor, viz. The four Books of the Cloiſter of the Soul: That of the Phyſick of the Soul: The two firſt Books of Birds, dedicated to Rainier: Two Books of the carnal and ſpiritual Wedding: A Treatiſe of the ſhunning of Marriage: And a Piece call'd, The Sinner's Mirrour, printed among the ſuppoſititious Works of St. Auguſtin.

Stephen Biſhop of Paris.

Stephen, Biſhop of Paris, had a Conteſt in the Year 1132. with an Archdeacon of his Dioceſs, who had unadviſedly ſuſpended the People of his Archdeaconry from Divine Service, and with Stephen de Guarlande his Adverſary. Theſe Quarrels are the Subject of divers Letters writen by this Prelate, by Henry Archbiſhop of Sens, by Geffery Biſhop of Chartres, by the Clergy of Paris, and by ſome others, which are inſerted in the third Tome of Father Dachery's Spicilegium, page 153. &c. ſequ.

Hugh Archbiſhop of Roan.

Hugh paſs'd over from Amiens, the place of his Nativity, into England, and was made Abbot of Redding in that Kingdom. Afterwards he was choſen Archbiſhop of Roan, and conſecrated A. D. 1130. He was one of the greateſt, moſt pious, and moſt learned Prelates of his time, and govern'd the Church of Roan with a great deal of Reputation, to the Year 1164. which was that of his Death. He wrote three Books to ſerve as an Inſtruction for the Clergy of his Dioceſs, againſt the Hereticks of his time. In the firſt, after having explain'd in a few Words, what ought to be belive'd concerning the Trinity and the Incarnation; he treats of the Sacraments of Baptiſm, Confirmation, and the Lords-Supper, and confutes the Errors of thoſe Hereticks, who deny the neceſſity of Baptiſm, more eſpecially of that of Infants, and the Uſefulneſs and Neceſſity of the Euchariſt. In the ſecond, he treats of Holy Orders, and of Eccleſiaſtical Functions. In the laſt, he diſcourſes of the Dignity of the Clergy; Of the Manners of Clerks; Of the Celibacy which they are oblig'd to obſerve; Of the Vow of Chaſtity; Of Unity, and of other Marks of the Catholick Church. There are alſo two Letters written by this Archbiſhop, viz. one dedicated to Thierry or Theodoric Bishop of Amiens, concerning the Absolution that was granted to Penitents, who took care of the Building of the Church, provided they made Confession of their Sins, did Penance, and were reconcil'd with their Enemies: The second is a complimental Letter to the Count of Toulouse. These Pieces were publish'd by Father Luke Dachery, at the end of the Works of Guibert of Nogent.

Of the Authors of less note.

Hugh Metellus a Regular Canon.

Hugo Mettellus, a Regular Canon of the Abby of St. Leon in the Diocess of Toul, and the Pupil of St. Anselm at Laon, flourish'd in the beginning of this Century, and wrote divers Letters which are to be found in Manuscript, in the Library of the Jesuits College at Clermont. Father Mabillon caus'd one of them to be printed in the third Tome of his Analecta, which was directed to a certain Monk nam'd Gerard or Gerland; and in which he proves the real Presence of the Body of Jesus Christ in the Eucharist, and answers the Passages of St. Augustin, on which that Monk grounded his Doubts, as to that Article.

Thomas Abbot of Maurigny

Thomas Abbot of Maurigny, wrote a Letter to St. Bernard, which is contain'd in the Miscellaneous Works by M. Baluzius, Tom. 4. p. 459.

Bernard Monk of Cluny.

Under the Tuition of Peter, Abbot of Cluny, there was a certain English Monk of that Convent, nam'd Bernard, who dedicated to him three Books on the Contempt of the World, in riming Verse. This Work was printed at several times in Germany, particularly at Breme in 1597. and at Luneburg in 1640.

Ulger Bishop of Angers.

Ulger, Bishop of Angers, sent a Letter to Pope Innocent II. on behalf of the Abby of St. Mary at Roe, which was at variance with that of Vendome, about the Right they claim'd to a certain Church. This Prelate not only obtain'd his Request of the Pope, but also a peculiar Privilege in favour of the Abby of Roe, and another for his own Church at Angers. This Letter and a Copy of those two Privileges were set forth by M. Baluzius in the second Tome of his Miscellaneous Works. Ulger likewise made an Encomium in Verse on Marbodus Bishop of Rennes, which is prefix'd to the Works of that Author.

Rodulphus Abbot of St. Trudo.

Rodulphus, a Native of Munster, after having follow'd his Studies for some time at Liege, travell'd into Germany, during which Journey, he took a Resolution to embrace the Monastick Life, and enter'd divers Monasteries: But finding none that were well regulated, he retir'd at last to that of St. Trudo or St. Tron in the Diocess of Liege, which was less Irregular than the others, and the Instruction of the young Monks was committed to his Care. Thierry, who was then Abbot, chose him for Prior; and they both us'd their utmost Endeavours jointly to bring about an entire Reformation of that Monastery. Upon the Death of Thierry, Rodulphus was elected Abbot in his place, A. D. 1108. but his Monastery was pillag'd and burnt a little while after. However, he restor'd it to its former State, yet was expell'd from thence, and took two Journies to Rome. He in like manner reform'd the Monastery of St. Pantaleon at Colen, made Sibert one of the Monks of his Abby, Prior of it, and died after the Year 1136.

Rodulphus compos'd a Chronicle of the Abby of St. Trudo, from its first Foundation to the Year 1136. which was publish'd by Father Dachery, in the seventh Tome of the Spicilegium. It is very large, and divided into thirteen Books, the five last of which contain a Relation of the Affairs that were transacted in his time in that Abby.

He is likewise the Author of the Life of St. Lietbert, Bishop of Cambray, which is annex'd at the end of the seventh Tome of the Spicilegium. Besides, these Pieces, he compil'd several other Works, more especially a Treatise against Simonists, divided into seven Books, which Father Mabillon found in Manuscript in the Library of Gemblours, with a Letrer written by Sibert, Prior of St. Pantaleon, to Rodulphus, and the Answer that was made to it by the latter.

We shall here subjoin the Arguments of the Books, of Simony, as they are related by Father Mabillon. Rodulphus shews in the first Book, that Simony is the first and greatest Heresie. In the second, he complains of an Abuse that was then predominant viz. that there was nothing that belong'd to the House of God, that was not expos'd to Sale. In the third, he gives an Account, after what Manner spiritual Livings are dispos'd of in the Country: In the fourth, he describes the Manner of Trading for Prebends, and other more considerable Benefices. In the fifth, he says, that perhaps it might be objected against him, that he endeavour'd to conceal the Simoniacal Practices that were committed by the Monks, and relates the Censures that were pass'd frequently upon them. In the last, he returns an Answer to the Objections, and clears them from that Imputation.

Of the Authors of less note.

Sibert Prior of Pantaleon

Father Mabillon has publish'd a certain Letter written by Sibert, of whom we have already made mention, and Rodulphus's Answer. Sibert is desirous to be inform'd by that Prelate, what Answer ought to be made to a certain rich and covetous Person, who design'd to put his Son into the Monastery of St. Pantaleon, without giving him his Portion; that is to say, whether the Monks ought to exact any Thing of the Party, or to receive him Gratis, Rodulphus does two Things in his Reply: On the one side, he condemns the Avarice of that rich Man, and accuses him of a kind of Sacrilege, in regard that having determin'd to dedicate his Son to God, he denies him that share of his Estate, which belongs to him by Right of Inheritance: He observes also, that the Monasteries are not establish'd for the benefit of opulent Families, but to receive and maintain the Poor, who are devoted to the Service of God. On the other side, Rodulphus does not allow the Monks to exact any Thing for the Reception of Children, and says, that they would do well to admonish their Parents, that 'tis their Duty to offer part of the Hereditary Portion of their Children, but that they ought not to be constrain'd to do it by force: That as the Monastery may either admit or reject a Monk according to Discretion; so the Parents ought to be left at Liberty, either to bestow Children in such a manner, or to retain them, and that nothing can be exacted for the Admission of a Monk, without incurring the Guilt of Simony, For (says he) every Thing that is exacted, or is demanded, or even every Thing that is done in hopes of getting a Recompence, as for what relates to Ecclesiastical Affairs, is Simony, and altho' it does not appear so to the Eyes of Men, nevertheless 'tis look'd upon as such by God. At the end of this Letter, a Discourse is subjoin'd, in which he advises those who take upon them the Monastick Vows, to divide their Estate into three Parts; to the end, that one may be given to the Poor, another to the Monastery where they retire, and the third to be left to their Families. He likewise exhorts Parents who would make their Sons Monks, to allow them some part of their Hereditary Portion to be brought along with them into the Monastery, where they are admitted.

Rodulphus wrote in an indifferent good Style, was well vers'd in the Canon Law and Ecclesiastical Constitutions, and had perus'd the Writings of the Latin Fathers.

Waselinus Momalius Prior of Laurence at Liege.

Waselinus, sirnam'd Momalius, Prior of the Monastery of St Laurence, in the Suburbs of Liege, who died A. D. 1147. wrote a Letter directed to Gaufelin, Abbot of St. Florin, in the same Diocess, in which he debates this Question, viz. Whether a Man and his Wife, who have coupl'd together carnally in the Night preceding a Festival, may receive the Communion the next Day? He makes it appear by many Arguments and Authorties cited to that Purpose, that Continency is enjoyn'd those Persons who are desirous to partake of the Holy Sacraments; nevertheless, he is of Opinion that those, who having fallen in the Night into that Inconveniency thro' frailty, may be admitted to the Communion, provided they beg Pardon of God the next Day, make Confession of their Offence; and do Penance for it. Lastly, he leaves it to the Discretion of the Priest, either to permit them to comunicate or to deny them that Privilege. This Letter was publish'd by Father Mabillon, in the first Tome of his Analecta.

Amedius, Bishop of Lausanna.

Amedeus, Abbot of Haute-Combe, a Monastery of the Cistercian Order, and sometime Bishop of Lausanna, viz. from A. D. 1144. to 1149. is reputed to be the Author of eight Sermons, in Commendation of the Virgin Mary, which were printed at first at Basil, in 1537. afterwards publish'd by Richard Gibson, Jesuit, printed at Antwerp, in 1600, and inserted in the Collection of Sermons written by St. Leo, and other Fathers, as also in the Bibliotheca Patrum.

Potho Monk of Prom.

Potho, a Monk of Prom, flourish'd under the Emperor Conrad, and wrote five very Mystical Books, on the State of the House of God, that is to say, of the Church Militant and Triumphant, in which he produces a great Number of very abstruse Notions, as well as in another Treatise call'd, The Palace of Wisdom.

Philip, Bishop of Taranto.

Philip, Bishop of Taranto, the Favourer of Leo the Antipope, was depos'd upon that account in the Council of Lateran, held A. D. 1139. and retir'd to the Monastery of Clairvaux, where he receiv'd the Habit of a Monk from St. Bernard. He was made Prior of that Convent in 1150, and six Years after, Abbot of the Alms-Monastery of the Cistercian Order, in the Diocess of Chartres. Some time before the End of his Life, he return'd to Clairvaux, and died there. Charles de Visch, has annex'd at the End of his Collection of the Authors of the Cistercian cian Order, twenty five Letters, which (as he says) belong to this Philip.

Of the Authors of less note.

Serlo Monk of Ceriſy.

Serlo, a Monk of Ceriſy, choſen Abbot of Savigny, A. D. 1146. compos'd divers Sermons which were publiſh'd by Father Triſſier, in the ſixth Tome of the Bibliotheca Ciſtercienſis. He retir'd to Ciſteaux, not long before his Death, which happen'd in 1158. There is alſo to be ſeen in M. Colbert's Library, a certain Manuſcript, which contains a Treatiſe by Serlo on the Lord's Prayer.

Gauterius of Mauritania, Biſhop of Laon.

Gautier, or Gauterius, of Mauritania, Biſhop of Laon, flouriſh'd in the Year 1150. and wrote ſeveral Letters publiſh'd by Father Dachery, in the ſecond Tome of his Spicilegium.

The firſt is directed to a certain Monk nam'd William, who doubted whether Children baptiz'd by Hereticks, receiv'd the ſpiritual Grace appropriated to that Sacrament: He proves the Affirmative, becauſe it is Jeſus Chriſt, who effectually adminiſters Baptiſm.

In the ſecond, he explains the Myſtery of the Incarnation.

In the third, he confutes the Opinion of a certain Doctor nam'd Thierry, who maintain'd, That God was Omnipreſent by his Power, but not by his Eſſence.

In the fourth, he oppoſes the Opinion of another Doctor call'd Albericus, who aſſerted, That Jeſus Chriſt was not afraid to die, and was not ſenſible of any Grief or Trouble before his Paſſion. Gauterius explains, in what Senſe Death might be formidable to our Saviour, and of what ſort of Fear and Sorrow he was capable.

In the fifth, he reproves Peter Abaelard, for going about to give a Definitive Explanation of the Myſtery of the Trinity, and to demonſtrate it by Reaſon, and oppoſes in particular, ſome of the Propoſitions that he aſſerted, or which were maintain'd by his Followers.

The laſt is a Letter directed to Hugh of St. Victor, and publiſh'd by Father Maton, in his Notes on Robert Pullus.

Wolbero, Abbot of St. Pantaleon at Colen.

Wolbero, Abbot of St. Pantaleon at Colen, compos'd in the Year 1150. a Commentary on the Book of Canticles divided into four Books, and printed at Golen in 1650. This Author died in 1167.

Luke, Abbot of St. Cornelius.

Luke, Abbot of St. Cornelius, of the Order of Premontre near Liege, in like manner wrote a Commentary on the Song of Solomon which was extracted out of that of Aponius, and dedicated to Milo, Biſhop of Terouane. This Abbot died in 1157. and his Book was printed at Friburg in 1538. as alſo in the Bibliotheca Patrum.

Bartholomew de Foigny, Biſhop of Laon.

Bartholomew de Foigny, Biſhop of Laon, was ſuſpended, A. D. 1142. by Ives, Cardinal and Pope Innocent II's Legate, for Authorizing the unlawful Divorce of Rodulphus, Count of Vermandois from his Wife. Afterwards he made an entire Reſignation of his Biſhoprick, and enter'd into a Monaſtery of the Ciſtercian Order. He wrote a Letter to Sampſon, Archbiſhop of Rheims, to clear himſelf from an Accuſation that was brought againſt him, for waſting the Revenues of the Biſhoprick of Laon; by ſhewing, that what he had beſtow'd on the Cathedral and on the other Churches of his Dioceſs, that ſtood in need of ſome Supplies, was but a very ſmall Matter, and that his Succeſſor would be to blame if he depriv'd them of it. This Letter is to be found in the laſt Collection of the Councils, Tom. 10. p. 1184.

Radulphus Niger, a Monk of St. Germer.

Radulphus Niger, a Monk of St. Germer, in the Dioceſs of Beauvais, flouriſh'd A. D. 1157. and compos'd twenty Books of Commentaries on that of Leviticus, printed in the ſeventeenth Tome of the laſt Bibliotheca Patrum. Another Commentary on the Book of Canticles is likewiſe attributed to him, which was inſerted among St. Gregory's Works; and 'tis alſo reported, that he wrote a Commentary on St. Paul's Epiſtles, an Hiſtory of France, and a Chronicle; but we have no knowledge of theſe Works.

St. Ælred Abbot of Reverby.

S. Ælred, or S. Etheldred, of the Ciſtercian Order, Abbot of Reverby, in the Province of York in England, flouriſh'd in the middle of the twelfth Century, and died A. D. 1166. He addicted himſelf to a ſpiritual Life, and affected to imitate St. Bernard in his manner of writing. The following Works written by him are ſtill Extant, viz. thirty Sermons on the thirteenth Chapter of Iſaiah, concerning the Calamities of Babylon, and of the Philiſtins, and Moabites; A Treatiſe call'd The Mirror of Charity, divided into three Books, with the Abridgment of that Treatiſe: Three Books of the ſpiritual Friendſhip, and a Diſcourſe on theſe Words of St. Luke, Jeſus Chriſt being aged twelve Years: A Fragment of his Hiſtory of England, and twenty five Sermons printed in the Bibliotheca Ciſtercienſis. His Mirrour of Charity is a very fine Piece, full of ſolid Maxims on the Love of God, and on other Chriſtian Virtues. In the Treatiſe of Friendſhip, which is compos'd in form of a Dialogue, he ſhews, That there can be no true Amity, but amongſt Chriſtian and Virtuous Perſons. Surius has publiſh'd divers Lives of Engliſh Saints under the Name of this Author, but he wrote them himſelf in his Style. We have alſo among the Hiſtorians of England the Life of St. Edward, written by St. Ælred, and ſome other Hiſtorical Tracts relating to the Affairs of that Kingdom. His other Works were ſet forth by Gilbo the Jeſuit, and printed at Douay, A. D. 1631. as alſo in the Bibliotheca Ciſtercienſis, and in the laſt Bibliotheca Patrum. The Rule for Nuns falſly attributed to St. Auguſtin, is inſerted under the Name of St. Elred, in the Collection of Rules publiſh'd by Holſtenius; and Gilbert of Hoiland, has made an Encomium on the ſame Saint, in the Continuation of St. Auguſtin's Commentary on the Book of Pſalms.

Of the Authors of less note.

St. Hildegarda Abbeſs of St. Rupert's Mount.

St. Hildegarda, born at Spanheim in Germany, A. D. 1098. was the Daughter of Hildebert and Mathilda; ſhe receiv'd the Vail at the Age of eight Years, and in proceſs of time was choſen Abbeſs of St. Rupert's Mount near Binghen on the Rhine. The Fame of her Revelations and Miracles, procur'd her ſo great Reputation, that when Pope Eugenius III. came to Trier in 1148. Henry Archbiſhop of Mentz, and St. Bernard took an opportunity to acquaint him with the wonderful Operations that God perform'd by his Servant Hildegarda; inſomuch that the Pope being much ſurpriz'd at the Relation, ſent Albert Biſhop of Verdun with ſome other Perſons worthy of Credit, privately to make an Enquiry into the Truth of what was reported concerning that Nun. Theſe Perſons having interrogated her, ſhe gave them a plain Account of her Condition, and deliver'd to them ſeveral Books, which ſhe avouch'd to have written by Divine Inſpiration. The Pope caus'd them to be read publickly in the preſence of all the Prelates, and perus'd a conſiderable part of them himſelf: Whereupon all the Aſſiſtants were ſurpriz'd, and entreated his Holineſs not to ſuffer ſo great a Light to be extinguiſh'd. Then the Pope wrote a Letter to Hildegarda, to congratulate her upon Account of thoſe tranſcendent Graces which God had beſtow'd on her, and to exhort her to preſerve them; granting her at the ſame time a Permiſſion to reſide in the Place that ſhe had choſen, to lead a regular Courſe of Life with the other Nuns, according to St. Benedict's Rule. The Popes who ſucceeded Eugenius viz. Anaſtaſius IV. Adrian IV. and Alexander III. honour'd her in like manner with their Letters and Admonitions, as well as the Archbiſhops of Mentz, Colen, Trier, Saltsburg, and many other Prelates of Germany, not to mention the Emperors Conrad and Frederick: She return'd an Anſwer to their Letters without deviating from her Character, that is to ſay, in a Myſtical and Prophetical Style. The Collection of all theſe Letters is extant, with divers Viſions directed to particular Perſons; Anſwers to ſeveral Queſtions about the Holy Scriptures, and certain Explications of St. Benedict's Rule, and of St. Athanaſius's Creed. Theſe Works were printed at Colen A. D. 1566. and in the Bibliotheca Patrum. There are alſo three Books of Revelations which bear the Name of this Saint, printed with thoſe of St. Brigit at Paris, in 1533. and at Colen, in 1628. St. Hildegarda died in 1180. and her Life was written in 1200. by Thierry or Theodoric, an Abbot of the ſame Order of St. Benedict.

Thierry, Abbot of the Order of St. Benedict.

St. Elizabeth Abbeſs of Schonaw.

St. Elizabeth, Abbeſs of Schonaw, in the Dioceſs of Trier, near the Monaſtery of St. Florin, which her Brother Ecbert govern'd in Quality of Abbot, was likewiſe famous for her Revelations. She flouriſh'd A. D. 1155 and died in 1165. aged 36 Years. There are three Books of Viſions or Revelations, written by this Saint, and a Volume of Letters printed at Colen, in 1628. Her Brother Ecbert compos'd, beſides the thirteen Diſcourſes, againſt the Cathari, of which we have already made mention, the Life of his Siſter, which is prefix'd to her Revelations: 'Tis alſo reported that he was the Author of ſome other Letters.

Ecbert Abbot of St. Florin.

Odo, a Regular Canon of St. Auguſtin, wrote A. D. 1160. ſeven Letters about the Duties and Functions of Regular Canons, which are inſerted in the ſecond Tome of the Spicilegium, by Father Luke Dachery.

Odo, a regular Canon.

John of Cornwall, had Peter Lombard for his Tutor, but afterwards fell at variance with him upon ſeveral occaſions. He ſtudied for a long time at Rome, and obtained a great ſhare of the Favours of Pope Alexander III. We have not any of his Works printed, but Dr. Cave, mentions two Manuſcript Treatiſes of this Author, viz. one dedicated to Pope Alexander, under the Title of A Diſcuſſion to Humane Philoſophy, and of Hereſies; and the other call'd A Summary of the Manner how the Sacrament of the Altar is made by the Vertue of the Croſs, and of the ſeven Canons, or Orders of the Maſs.

John of Cornwall.

In the Time of Pope Alexander III. Folmar, Provoſt of Trieffenſtein, near Wurtzburg in Franconia, was accus'd of maintaining the Errors of Neſtorius and Elipandus, concerning cerning the Perſon and Adoption of Jeſus Chriſt, and of ſpreading them abroad in Bavaria. Two Monks of that Country, viz. Gerochus, Provoſt of the Abby of Reicherſperg, and another who was Dean of the ſame Monaſtery, wrote againſt him; the former in a Treatiſe of Antichriſt, and the other in a Book written on purpoſe. Their Works are ſtill extant in the Libraries of Germany, according to the Report of Stevart, who aſſures us, that they are worthy to be brought to Light; altho' thoſe Authors ſeem to have fallen into an Error directly oppoſite to that of the Eutychians, or Ubiquitarians, in maintaining, That the Divine Perfections paſs'd into the Humane Nature of Jeſus Chriſt, and that the latter is become equal to the Godhead. Stevart has produc'd in his Collection the Epiſtle Dedicatory of the Dean of Reicherſperg's Treatiſe, directed to Henry, Dean of the Church of Wurtzburg, and it is alſo inſerted in the twenty third Tome of the laſt Edition of the Bibliotheca Patrum.

Folmar, Provoſt of Trieffenſtin.

Of the Authors of leſs note.

Gerochus Provoſt of Reicherſperg.

A nameleſs Dean of Reicherſperg.

Gilbert Foliot, Biſhop of London.

Gilbert Foliot, an Engliſhman by Nation, and Abbot of Leiceſter, was tranſlated A. D. 1161. from the Biſhoprick of Hereford, which he obtain'd in 1149. to that of London, and was one of the principal Adverſaries of Thomas Becket, Archbiſhop of Canterbury. He wrote a Commentary on the Book of Canticles, which was publiſh'd by Junius, and printed in 4to. at London, in 1638. There are alſo ſeven of his Letters in the Collection of thoſe of Thomas Becket. He died in 1187.

Philip of Harvenge, Abbot of Bonne Eſperance.

Philip of Harvenge, Abbot of Bonne Eſperance, of the Order of Premontre in Hainaut, firnam'd the Alms-giver, by reaſon of his extraordinary Liberality to the Poor, flouriſh'd A. D. 1150. and died in 1180. His Works were publiſhed by Nicholas Chamart, Abbot of Bonne Eſperance, and printed at Douay, in 1621. according to the following Catalogue, viz. Twenty one Letters: A Commentary on the Canticles: Moral Obſervations on the ſame Book. Several Diſcourſes on King Nebuchadnezzar's Dream, on Adam's Fall, and on the Damnation of King Solomon: Six Treatiſes of the Dignity, Learning, Uprightneſs, Continency, Obedience, and Silence of Clergymen. A Relation of the Lives of St. Auguſtine, Biſhop of Hippon, and of St. Amand, Abbot of Tongres: The Paſſion of Cyricius, and St. Julitta, with that of St. Salvius: The Lives of St. Foillan, St. Giſlen, St. Landelin, St. Ida, and St. Valtruda: The Paſſion of St. Agnes in Elegiack Verſe, with divers other Poetical Pieces, and ſome Epitaphs.

Adamus Scotus, a Regular Canon.

Adamus Scotus, a Regular Canon of St. Auguſtine, of the Order of Premontre, flouriſh'd A. D. 1160. and died in 1180. He compos'd a Commentary on St. Auguſtine's Rule: A Treatiſe of the triple Tabernacle of Moſes: Another of the three kinds of Contemplation, and forty ſeven Sermons. Thoſe Works were printed at Antwerp in 1695. and Father Ouden ſays, That he ſaw fifty three other Sermons, and a Soliloquy of the Soul, by the ſame Author, in the Library of the Celeſtine Fathers of Mante.

Joannes Burgundus, a Magiſtrate of Piſa.

Joannes Burgundus, a Magiſtrate and Citizen of Piſa, was ſent to Conſtantinople, to negotiate certain Affairs for that Republick at the Court of the Emperor Manuel Comnenus, where he met with ſome Copies of St. Chryſoſtom's Homilies, on St. John and St. Matthew, and tranſlated them into Latin. He likewiſe tranſlated St. John Damaſcenus's Treatiſe of the Orthodox Faith, and Nemeſius's eight Books of Philoſophy. The latter of thoſe Works was printed at Strasburg, in 1512. This Author flouriſh'd in 1150. and died in 1184. His Tranſlations are not very polite, but extremely faithful.

Peter of Riga, Canon of Rheims.

Peter of Riga, Chanter and Canon of the Church of Rheims, flouriſh'd A. D. 1170. He compos'd ſeven Books under the Title of Aurora, which contain the two Books of Kings, and the four Goſpels in Verſe, according to the literal and allegorical Senſe. This Piece is ſtill to be found in the Libraries; and Father Oudin aſſures us, That he had them all ready to be printed. However the Publick may well excuſe him from taking that Pains, without ſuffering much detriment; in regard that ſuch ſort of Works are of no great uſefulneſs.

Henry Archbiſhop of Rheims.

Henry, Archbiſhop of Rheims, diſpatch'd two Letters, A. D 1170. in favour of Dreux, Chancellor of the Church of Noyon, whom Pope Alexander III. determin'd to condemn, viz. one to the Cardinals, and the other to the Pope himſelf: They are both written with a great deal of Freedom, and he complains, that notwithſtanding the ſignal Services he had done to the Holy See, ſo little Regard was had to Perſons, for whom he had a particular Eſteem. However the Pope, return'd a very civil Anſwer, without granting his Requeſt, ſhewing, That if he did not do what was expected, it ought not to be inferr'd from thence, that he was not deſirous by all means to give him Satisfaction; but that the preſent Conjuncture of Affairs, would not admit of ſuch a Compliance. Both the Letters written by this Archbiſhop, were publiſh'd by M. Baluſius, in the ſecond Tome of his Miſcellaneous Works.

Robertus Paululus, a Prieſt of Amiens, compos'd A. D. 1178. three Books of the Offices of the Church, which were printed ſeparately, and under the Name of Hugh of St. Victor, among the Works of that Author. The Treatiſe call'd the Canon of the Myſtical Purification, which is alſo inſerted among the Works of Hugh of St. Victor, ought in like manner to be reſtor'd to the ſame Robert of Amiens.

Of the Authors of leſs note.

Robertus Paululus, Prieſt of Amiens.

Maurice, ſirnam'd de Sully, from a ſmall Town of that Name, ſituated on the River Loire, (which was the Place of his Nativity) was born of mean Parentage, nevertheleſs upon account of his ſingular Merits and extraordinary Learning, he was promoted to the Biſhoprick of Paris, A. D. 1164 after the Death of Peter Lombard. Henricus Gandavenſis aſſures us, that he compos'd Sermons for all the Sundays and Feſtivals of the Year, and certain Inſtructions for the Prieſts of his Dioceſs; the Manuſcript Copies of which are kept in the French King's Library, and in that of St. Victor. He died, A. D. 1196. and was bury'd in the Abby of St. Victor

Maurice de Sully, Biſhop of Paris.

Gervaſe a Prieſt of Chicheſter

Gervaſe, a Prieſt of Chicheſter, one of the Favourers of Thomas Becket Archbiſhop of Canterbury, was in good repute for his Learning, and wrote a Commentary on the Prophet Malachy, which (as we are informed by M. James) was kept in the Lomley Library.

Odo Abbot of Bel.

Odo, of the County of Kent, Prior of the Monaſtery of Canterbury, and afterwards Abbot of Bel, was likewiſe the Friend and Protector of Thomas Becket. He wrote divers Works, but we have none left, except a certain Letter directed to his Brother, a Novice in the Abby of Igny, in which he exhorts him ſpeedily to aſſume the Monaſtick Habit. This Letter was publiſh'd by Father Mabillon in the firſt Tome of his Analecta.

Laborantius Cardinal.

Laborantius, Cardinal with the Title of St. Mary, who flouriſh'd in the Year 1180. compos'd a Collection of Canons: A Treatiſe of Juſtice and Equity divided into four Parts, and dedicated to the Governor of Sicily: Another to Hugh Archbiſhop of Palermo: A Letter directed to the ſame Hugh againſt the Sabellians: And another Letter to Vivian Cardinal of St. Stephen concerning Appeals. All theſe Pieces are contain'd in a certain Manuſcript of St. Peter's Church at Rome, cited by Baronius and Poſſevinus.

Aluiphus Monk of St. Martin at Tournay.

Aluiphus, a Monk of St. Martin at Tournay, compil'd a Collection of Sentences and Maxims, taken out of the Works of St. Gregory, and call'd it The Gregorial. It is extant in Manuſcript in ſeveral Libraries, and Father Mabillon has produced the Preface to it in the firſt Tome of his Analecta.

Baldwin Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

Baldwin, a Native of Exeter, in the County of Devon; of a School-Maſter, became an Archdeacon, afterwards turn'd Monk, and was made Abbot of Ferden: From that Abby he was tranſlated to the Biſhoprick of Winchester, A. D. 1181. and at laſt advanc'd to the Dignity of Archbiſhop of Canterbury in 1185. He accompany'd King Richard I. in his Expedition to the Holy Land, and died there in 1191. or 1192. 'Tis reported that Pope Urban ſent him a Letter, the Superſcription of which was to this Effect: To Baldwin, a moſt zealous Monk, a fervent Abbot, a luke-warm Biſhop, and an effeminate Archbiſhop. The following Works written by this Prelate are contain'd in the fifth Tome of the Bibliotheca Ciſtercienſis ſet forth by Father Triſſier, viz. ſixteen Treatiſes of Piety on different Subjects, particularly, on the Love of God, the twofold Reſurrection, the Efficacy of the Word of God, the Angelical Salutation, &c. A Treatiſe of the Recommendation of Faith: And another of the Sacrament of the Altar dedicated to Bartholomew Biſhop of Exeter.

Iſaac Abbot of L'Etoille.

Iſaac, Abbot of L'Etoile, of the Ciſtercian Order in the Dioceſs of Poitiers, flouriſh'd in the End of the Century: He compos'd divers Sermons publiſh'd in the ſixth Tome of the Bibliotheca Ciſtercienſis, with a Treatiſe of the Spirit and the Soul, attributed to St. Auguſtine: He is alſo reputed to be the Author of a certain Letter on the Canon of the Maſs, which is contain'd in the firſt Tome of the Spicilegium.

Henry, Peter and Garnier Abbots of Clairvaux.

The Abby of Clairvaux, has produc'd in the End of this Century three Abbots, who may be reckon'd amongſt the Eccleſiaſtical Writers, viz. Henry the ſeventh Abbot, who wrote a Treatiſe call'd, De peregrinante Civitate Dei, and ſome Letters. Peter the eighth Abbot, who was the Author of ſome Letters, and Garnier his Succeſſor, who compos'd divers Sermons. If any Perſons are deſirous to conſult thoſe Works, they may have Recourſe to the third Tome of the Bibliotheca Ciſtercienſis.

Gilbert of Sempringham.

Gilbert of Sempringham, an Engliſhman, and Founder of the Order of the Canons call'd Gilbertines in England, flouriſh'd in the End of this Century. He compil'd two Books of Conſtitutions for his Order, which are to be found in the Monaſticon Anglicanum.

In the Library of St. Germain des Prez is to be ſeen, a Manuſcript Collection of divers Sermons, which bear the Name

Chriſtian

Of the Authors of less note.

Name of Christian: Some are of Opinion, that this Author was Abbot of St. Peter au Val, in the Dioceſs of Chartres: Others attribute this Piece to Christian Archbiſhop of Mentz, who died, A. D. 1183. and who wrote (as it is generally believ'd) an Hiſtory of the Emperor Frederick's Expedition to the Holy Land: But others with greater Probability aſcribe it to one of the two Chriſtians, Monks of Clairvaux, and the Pupils of St. Bernard, who were made Abbots and Biſhops in Ireland, and of whom mention is made in Chap. 8. of the ſecond Book of St. Bernard's Life. Let the Caſe be how it will, this Author has apparently taken many Notions out of the Works of that Saint.

Gautier de Chatillon.

Gautier, firnam'd de Chatillon, a Native of Liſle in Flanders, was the Author of the Alexandreis, or Poem on the Actions of Alexander, printed at Strasburg, A. D. 1531. and at Lyons in 1558. He alſo compos'd three Books in Form of Dialogues againſt the Jews, which Father Oudin ſays he has ſeen in Manuſcript in the Library of the Monaſtery of Premontre at Braine.

Garnier of St. Victor.

Garnier, a Canon and Superior of the Abby of St. Victor at Paris, compil'd in the End of the Century, a Treatiſe call'd The Gregorian, containing certain Allegorical Explications on the Bible, taken out of the Writings of St. Gregory Pope. This Work was printed at Paris, A. D. 1608.

Thomas Monk of Ciſteaux.

Thomas, a Monk of Ciſteaux, is the Author of a Commentary on the Canticles, divided into twelve Books, and dedicated to Pontius Biſhop of Clermont; altho' ſome Perſons have attributed it to other Authors of the ſame Name, and Paul de Reatino a Cordelier took the Boldneſs to cauſe it to be printed at Rome, A. D. 1655. under the Name of John Duns firnam'd Scotus; but he was ſoon oppos'd by the Sollicitor General of the Ciſtercian Order, who obtain'd a Decree of the Maſter of the Sacred Palace, by which it was declar'd, that that Commentary was unadviſedly printed under the Name of Scotus, and a Prohibition was made at the ſame Time, to ſell or publiſh it for the future under that Name, but only under that of Thomas of Ciſteaux. Charles de Wiſch, who caus'd this Work to be printed in the Bibliotheca Præmonſtratenſis attributed it to divers Thomas's, and afterwards John le Page the Collector of the Library of Premontre, aſcrib'd it to one Thomas Canon of that Order in the Monaſtery of Queſnoy; but the true Author of it is Thomas Monk of Ciſteaux, as it appears from the ancient Manuſcripts which are extant in the Libraries of the ſame Order. It likewiſe bears his Name in the firſt Editions ſet forth by Badius at Paris, A. D. 1521. and at Lyons in 1571. This Author flouriſh'd in the End of the Century.

Petrus Comeſtor Dean of St. Peter at Troyes.

Peter, firnam'd Comeſtor, or the Eater, a Native of Troyes in Champagne, Prieſt and Dean of the Church of St. Peter in that City, acquir'd ſo great Reputation, that he was invited to Paris, and made Chancellor of the Univerſity. He retir'd near the End of his Life to the Monaſtery of St. Victor, and died there A. D. 1198. His principal Work, is a Scholaſtical Hiſtory divided into ſixteen Books, which comprehends an Abridgment of all manner of Sacred Hiſtory, from the Beginning of Geneſis to the End of the Acts of the Apoſtles; but he intermixes therein divers Paſſages of profane Hiſtory, and ſome fabulous Narrations. This Work was printed at Rutlingen A. D. 1473. and afterwards at Strasburg in 1483. as alſo at Baſil in 1486. and at Lyons in 1543. The Sermons, which Buſæus caus'd to be printed under the Name of Peter of Blois, belong to this Author, as well as ſome others which are extant in the Libraries.

Of the Authors of less note.

Robert of Flameſbury.

Robert of Flamesbury, a Regular Canon of St. Auguſtine, and Penitentiary in the Abby of St. Victor, was in good Repute for his Learning. He compos'd a large Penitential, which is kept in Manuſcript in the Library of St. Victor, and in that of the College Des Cholets.

Bartholomew Biſhop of Oxford. Odo of Chirton.

The Engliſh were always very accurate in their penitential Books, and two Authors were more eſpecially famous for writing on that Subject in the End of the Twelfth Century. The firſt is Bartholomew Biſhop of Oxford, a Manuſcript Copy of whoſe Work is to be ſeen in the Library of St. Victor; and the other is Odo of Chirton, whoſe Piece call'd The Summary of Repentance, is extant in divers Libraries of England, with ſeveral Homilies by the ſame Author.

Elie of Coxie Abbot of Dunes.

Elie of Coxie, ſo call'd from the Name of a Village in the Territory of Furnes in Flanders, the Place of his Nativity, was at firſt a Monk of Ciſteaux, and afterwards Abbot of Dunes. He has left us two large Diſcourſes made by him in the Chapter of Ciſteaux, which are contain'd in the Bibliotheca Ordinis Ciſtercienſis. He died A. D. 1203.

John a Carthuſian Monk of des Portes.

John, a Carthuſian Friar of the Monaſtery of Des Portes, flouriſh'd in the End of this Century, and compos'd five Letters on pious Subjects, viz. the firſt about ſhunning of the World; the ſecond and third of Prayer, the fourth of the Care that ought to be taken to obſerve the Inclinations of the Heart; and the fifth of Perſeverance in the State that one has once embrac'd, dedicated to Bernard his Nephew, a Carthuſian Monk, who was tempted to quit that Order.

Stephen de Chaulmet a Carthuſian Monk.

There is alſo a Letter written by another Monk of the ſame Carthuſian Convent, nam'd Stephen de Chaulmet, about continuing in the Order into which one has been admitted, which was dedicated to the Novices of the Monaſtery of St. Sulpicius of the Ciſtercian Order. Theſe two Authors wrote in the End of the Century.

Zachary Biſhop of Chryſopolis.

Zachary, a Regular Canon (as ſome ſay) of the Order of Premontre in the Monaſtery of St. Martin at Laon, or according to others, Biſhop of Chryſopolis, wrote a Commentary on Ammonius's Evangelical Concord, which was printed at Colen, A. D. 1535. and in the nineteenth Tome of the Bibliotheca Patrum. We have no certain Account of the Life and Character of this Author, or of the time when he flouriſh'd.

CHAP. XIII.

Of the Writers of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory of the Twelfth Century.

Of the Writers of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory.

THE Twelfth Century has produc'd ſo great a Number of Hiſtorians, and hiſtorical Works, as well Eccleſiaſtical as Prophane, that 'tis in a manner impoſſible to give a particular Account of every one of them; nevertheleſs we have endeavour'd to make a Catalogue of them, and at leaſt to repreſent the Authors, and their Works in general: In order to do which more conveniently, and more methodically, we have diſtributed them under ſeveral Articles and Diviſions.

Of the Writers of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory.

The Writers of General History.

Of the principal Authors.

Florentius Bravo Monk of Winch.

FLorentius Bravo, an English Monk of Winchester, wrote a Chronicle from the Creation of the World to the Year of our Lord 1118. taken in part from that of Marianus Scotus, printed at London A. D. 1595. and at Francfort in 1601. as also a Genealogical Account of the Kings of England, which is likewise annex'd to the London Edition. He died A. D. 1119.

Eckard, Abbot of Urangen.

Eckard, Abbot of Urangen, in the Diocess of Wurtzburg, flourish'd A. D. 1130. and left a Chronicle to Posterity. Trithemius makes mention of a Work of this Author, call'd, The Lantern of Monks, there are also extant certain Letters and Sermons written by him.

Hugh, Monk of Fleury.

Hugh, a Monk of Fleury, compos'd A. D. 1120. a Chronicle from the Creation of the World to the Year 840. which was printed at Munster in 1638. The same Author wrote two Books concerning the Royal Authority and the Sacerdotal Dignity, which were dedicated to Henry I. King of England, and publish'd by M. Baluzius, in the fourth Tome of his Miscellaneous Works.

Ordericus Vitalis Monk of St Evrou.

Ordericus Vitalis, born in England at Attingesham on the River Severn, A. D. 1075. was sent at the Age of eleven Years to Normandy, and plac'd in the Abby of St. Evroul, where he assum'd the Habit of a Monk, and compleated his Studies. He likewise enter'd into Holy Orders, and spent his whole Life in that Monastery; leaving 13 Books of Ecclesiastical History, from the Nativity of Jesus Christ to the Year 1142. which were publish'd by M. du Chesne, in the Volume of the Historiographers of Normandy.

Anselm Abbot of Gemb.

Anselm, Abbot of Gembloux in Brabant, continu'd Sigebert's Chronicle from the Year 1112. to 1137. This Continuation, with two others, the first of which is extended to the Year 1149. and the second to 1225. was set forth by Albertus Moreus, and printed at Antwerp, A. D. 1608.

Otho, Bishop of Frising.

The Birth of Otho, Bishop of Frisingben, is no less illustrious than the Reputation he acquir'd by writing his History: For he was the Son of Leopold Marquis of Austria, and of Agnes the Daughter of the Emperor Henry IV. That Princess was twice marry'd, viz. at first to Frederick Duke of Suevia or Schwaben, to whom she brought forth two Sons, namely, Conrad the Emperor, and Frederick Duke of Suevia: But by her second Marriage with Leopold, she had Leopold Duke of Bavaria, Henry Duke of Austria, Gertrude Dutchess of Bohemia, Bertha Dutchess of Poland, Ita Marchioness of Montferat, Otho and Conrad. These two last being design'd by their Father for the Ecclesiastical Functions, Otho obtain'd the Government of a College, which his Father had founded at Newburg, and where he order'd himself to be bury'd: But Otho soon resign'd his Office to Opoldus, and being incited with an ardent Desire of becoming Master of the Liberal Sciences, went to Paris, where he compleated his Studies: Some Years after he turned Cistercian Monk, in the Abby of Morimond, with fifteen of his Companions. In 1138. the Emperor Conrad, his Brother, conferr'd on him the Bishopriek of Frisingben in Bavaria, and honour'd him with the Dignities of Chancellor and Secretary of State. He accompanied that Prince in his Expedition to the Holy Land, A. D. 1147. and at last in 1156. leaving his Bishoprick, retir'd to the Abby of Morimond, where he died in the Month of September in the same Year.

This Prelate compos'd a Chronological History from the Creation of the World to his Time, divided into seven Books, and annex'd an eighth concerning the Persecution to be raised by Antichrist, and the Resurrection of the Dead. He wrote a very fine Style, with respect to the Age in which he liv'd, and much more politely than the other Historians of those Times. He was well versed in Scholastical Divinity, as also in Aristotle's Philosophy; and was one of the first, who (as Radwic has observ'd) introduced that Science into Germany. Upon which Account, 'tis not to be admir'd that he has been very favourable to Gillebert de la Porree, in the Dissertation prefix'd before his History: It was first published by John Cuspinian, and printed at Strasbourg, A. D. 1515. afterwards at Basil in 1569. and among the German Historiographers at Francfort in 1585. and 1670. Otho, in like manner, wrote two Books containing the History of the Actions of Frederick Barberossa, which are subjoyn'd at the End of his Chronicle. Moreover Wolfgangus Lazius says, that he saw an History of Austria compos'd by the same Otho, but there has been no talk of it since; neither has it as yet appear'd any where in Print.

Of the principal Authors.

Godfrey of Viterbo

Godfrey of Viterbo, so call'd from the Name of his Native Country, who was a Priest, Almoner, and Secretary of State to the Emperors Conrad III. Frederick I. and Henry VI. wrote an Universal Chronicle, dedicated to Pope Urban III. and call'd Pantheon, by reason of the great Variety of Occurrences contain'd therein: It ends at the Year 1186. and is inserted among the Works of the German Historians collected by Pistorius, and printed at Francfort in 1584. It is reported that this Writer spent forty Years in travelling; that he made a prodigious Collection of all sorts of Observations during his Voyages; and that he understood the Hebrew, Chaldaick, Greek, and Latin Tongues. Lambecius makes mention of another Work by the same Author, which is to be seen in Manuscript in the Emperor's Library, bearing this Title, The Mirror of Kings, or Genealogies of all the Kings and Emperors from the universal Flood to the Time of Henry VI.

Robert of Torigny Abbot of Mount St. Michael.

Robert of Torigny, a Monk, afterwards Prior of Bec Abby, and at last Abbot of St. Michael's Mount, compos'd a Supplement of Sigebert's Chronicle, and a Continuation to the Year 1184. as also a Treatise of the Monasteries and Abbies of Normandy; the History of that of St. Michael's Mount; a Commentary on St. Paul's Epistles taken from St. Augustine; and the History of the Reign of Henry II. King of England. Father Luke Dachery has caused to be printed at the End of Guibert's Works, the Supplement and Continuation of Sigebert's Chronicle, and the Treatise of the Abbies of Normandy, with a Letter written by the said Robert, and his Preface to the Commentary on St. Paul's Epistles.

Otho of St. Blasius

Otho of St. Blasius, continu'd the Chronicle of Otho of Frisingben to the Year 1190.

John Brompton Abbot of Jorval.

John Brompton, an English Monk of the Cistercian Order, and Abbot of Jorval in the Diocess of York, is the reputed Author of a certain Chronicle from the Year 588. to 1198. but the learned Mr. Selden assures us, that it was not written by him; that he only caus'd it to be transcrib'd, and that he did not live in this Century.

Historians

Historians of England.

Of the Writers of Ecclesiastical History.

THE Kingdom of England has brought forth so many approved Authors, who have employ'd their Pens in writing the History of their native Country, that they well deserve to be referr'd to a particular Article.

Henry Archdeacon of Huntington.

Henry of Huntington, the Son of a marry'd Priest named Nicholas, and the Pupil of Albinus Andegavius Canon of Lincoln, was made Canon of the same Church, and afterwards Archdeacon of Huntington, by Alexander Bishop of Lincoln, whom he accompanied in his Journey to Rome. He wrote the History of the English Monarchy from its first Foundation till the Death of King Stephen, which happen'd in 1154. It is dedicated to the said Bishop Alexander, and divided into eight or ten Books, being contain'd among the Works of the English Writers in Sir Henry Savil's Collection, printed at London A. D. 1596. and at Francfort in 1601. Father Luke Dachery has likewise publish'd in the eighth Tome of his Spicilegium, a small Tract of this Author, concerning the Contempt of the World, dedicated to Gauterius. He there shews how the Things of this sublunary World ought to be contemned, relating many Examples of Misfortunes that happen'd to the great Personages of his Age, and the miserable Death of divers profligate Wretches: He declares, in the Preface to this Tract, that he had before made a Dedication to the same Person of a Collection of Epigrams, and of a Poem about Love. There are also in the Libraries of Oxford and Cambridge several other Manuscript Works of this Author, particularly a Letter concerning the British Kings, dedicated to Warinus: a Treatise of the Counties of Great Britain; another of the Image of the World; and a third of the English Saints.

Gulielmus Neubrigensis.

William Little, known by the Name of Gulielmus Neubrigensis, was born at Bridlington near York, A. D. 1136. and educated in the Convent of the Regular Canons of Newtbridge, where he embrac'd the Monastick Life: He compos'd a large History of England, divided into five Books, from the Year 1066. to 1197. This History is written with much Fidelity, and in a smooth and intelligible Style. It was printed at Antwerp, A. D. 1567. at Heidelberg in 1587. and lastly at Paris with John Picard's Notes in 1610. It is believ'd that he died A. D. 1208.

Walter, Archdeacon of Oxford.

Walter, born in the Principality of Wales, Archdeacon, and even (as some say) Bishop of Oxford, translated out of English into Latin the History of England, composed by Geffrey of Monmouth, and continued to his Time.

John Pyke

John Pyke, wrote an History of the English, Saxon, and Danish Kings of England, and flourished with the former Historian under King Henry I.

Gervase, Monk of Canterbury.

Gervase, a Monk of Canterbury, compos'd several Treatises relating to the History of England, which are contain'd in Mr. Selden's Collection of the English Historiographers; particularly a Relation of the burning and repairing of the Cathedral Church of Canterbury; an Account of the Contests between the Monks of Canterbury, and Baldwin their Archbishop; a Chronicle from the Year 1122. to 1199. and the Lives of the Archbishops of Canterbury.

Geffrey Arthur, Bishop of St. Asaph.

Geffrey Arthur, Arch-deacon of St. Asaph, was chosen Bishop of that Diocess, A. D. 1151. He left his Bishoprick by reason of certain Commotions which happened in Wales, and retir'd to the Court of Henry II. King of England, who gave him the Abby of Abbington in Commendam. Afterwards in a Council held at London, A. D. 1175. the Clergy of St. Asaph caus'd a Proposal to be made to Geffrey by the Archbishop of Canterbury, either to return to his Bishoprick, or to admit another Bishop to be substituted in his room: He refus'd to return, designing to keep his Abby; but both the Abby and the Bishoprick were dispos'd of, and he was left destitute of any Ecclesiastical Preferment. He wrote, or rather translated out of English into Latin, an History of Great Britain from the Beginning to his Time; which is full of Fables, dedicated to Robert Duke of Gloceſter, and divided into twelve Books. It was printed at Paris A. D. 1517. at Lyons by Potelier in 1587. and by Commelin in the same Year; it is also inserted among the Works of the English Historians printed that Year at Heidelberg. It is reported that he, in like manner, translated out of English into Latin, the ancient Prophecies of Merlin, which were printed at Francfort with Alanus's Observations, A. D. 1603.

Of the Writers of English Ecclesiastical History.

The History of the Church of Durham was written by several Authors, the first of whom is Turgot, a Monk of that Diocess, who compos'd one from its first Foundation to the Year 1096.

Turgot, Monk of Durham.

Simeon of Durham, copied out Turgot's History almost word for word, from the Year 625. to 1096. and continu'd to 1154. He likewise wrote an History of the Kings of England and Denmark, from the Year 731. to 1130. A Letter to Hugh Dean of York, about the Archbishops of that City; and a Relation of the Siege of Durham. These three last Pieces were published by Father Labbé, in the first Tome of his Library of Manuscripts. The Historians of the Church of Durham, by Turgot and Simeon, were printed at London, with the Works of the other English Historiographers, A. D. 1652.

Simeon of Durham.

William of Somerset, a Monk of Malmesbury, is justly preferr'd before all the other English Historians. His History of England, divided into five Books, contains the most remarkable Transactions in this Kingdom, since the Arrival of the Saxons to the 28th Year of King Henry I. that is to say, from A. D. 449. to 1127. He afterwards added two Books, continuing the History to A. D. 1143. and anexed to the whole Work four Books continuing the History of the Bishops of England, from Augustine the Monk, who first planted Christianity in these Parts, to his Time. These Works were printed at London, and published by Sir Henry Savil, A. D. 1596. and at Francfort in 1601. Father Mabillon has likewise set forth, in the first Tome of his Benedictin Centuries, the Life of St. Adelm Bishop of Salisbury, compos'd by this Author, who died A. D. 1143.

William of Somerset, Monk of Malmesbury.

John of Hexam, a Native of the County of Northumberland, Monk and Provost of the Monastery of Hagulstadt, flourished about the Year 1160. He made a Continuation of Simeon of Durham's History of the Kings of England and Denmark, from A. D. 1130. to 1154. This Work is extant among those of the other English Historians, printed at London in 1652.

John of Hexam, Provost of Hagulstadt.

Sylvester Girald, born in Wales, flourished in the End of the Reign of King Henry II. to whom he dedicated a Natural History, a Topography of Ireland, and a History, in form of a Prediction of the Conquest of Ireland by that Monarch, printed at Antwerp. These Works were published by Mr. Camden, and printed at Francfort in 1602. He also wrote an Itinerary of Wales, upon a Visitation there made by him, with Baldwin Archbishop of Canterbury, to excite the People of that Country to undertake a Voyage to the Holy Land. This last Work is extant among the others, and was likewise printed at London in 1585. with a Description of the same Country of Wales. Besides these Pieces, he wrote the Lives of several Saints, and died Bishop of St. Davids in the Beginning of the following Century. One of his Letters is contain'd in Archbishop Usher's Collection of the Letters of Ireland, and divers other Works of this Author are found among the Manuscripts of the publick Libraries of England.

Sylvester Girald, Bishop of St. Davids.

Roger of Hoveden, an Officer under King Henry II. and afterwards Regius Professor of Divinity in the University of Oxford, compos'd the Annals of England from the Year 731. where venerable Bede ends to 1202. This Work is among those of the English Historians published by Sir Henry Savil, and printed at London A. D. 1595. as also at Frankfort in 1601.

Roger Hoveden, Regius Professor of Divinity.

Historiographers of the Crusade.

THE History of the famous Crusade, instituted under Pope Urban II. and the Conquests which the Western People made in the Levant, from the Year 1095. to 1099. have afforded Matter to many contemporary Historians, the greater Part of whom were Eye-witnesses of the Transactions related by them.

Petrus Theutbodus.

The first of these Historiographers is Petrus Theutbodus, who saw the most part of the memorable Actions which he has committed to Writing; and from whom those that wrote after him, took a considerable Part of their Relations.

The second is a nameless Italian Author, who accompanied Boamond King of Sicily in the Expedition to the Holy Land. His Work is known by the Title of, The notable Exploits of the French, and other Christians of Jerusalem, and divided into four Books.

A nameless Italian Author.

Of the Writers of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory.

The third is Robert, a Monk of St. Remy at Rheims, who aſſiſted in the Council of Clermont in the Year 1095. and afterwards made a Voyage to the Holy Land. At his return, he wrote the Hiſtory of the War of Jeruſalem, divided into eight or nine very ſhort Books: He excuſes himſelf in the Preface, upon account of the Roughneſs of his Style.

Robert Monk of St. Remy at Rheims.

The fourth is Baudry, Abbot of Bourgueil, who was afterwards ordain'd Biſhop of Dol, A. D. 1114 and died January 27. 1131. His Hiſtory is divided into four Books; but he was not an Eye-witneſs of what he relates, although he aſſiſted in the Council of Clermont: Therefore he contents himſelf only to follow, and to ſupply the Defects of an ancient nameleſs Hiſtory, which was ill written, inſerting ſuch Accounts as he had receiv'd from others. This Author likewiſe wrote the Life of St. Hugh Archbiſhop of Rouen, and a Tract concerning the Monaſtery of Feſcamp, publiſhed in the Book called Neuſtria Pia. To him alſo is attributed the Life of Robert d' Arbriſſelles, which is in Surius, and the Hiſtory of the Tranſlation of St. Valentin's Head, which is extant in Bollandus's Collection in Febr. 14. Moreover it is obſerv'd that he is the Author of the Life of St. Sampſon, and that he promiſes certain Notes on the Pentateuch, in the Preface to his Hiſtory. Laſtly, 'tis reported that there is a ſmall Manuſcript Tract of the ſame Biſhop Baudry, concerning the Viſitation of the ſick, in the Library of Vienna in Auſtria. He was employ'd in writing his Hiſtory near the End of his Life.

Baudry, Biſhop of Dol.

The fifth is Raimond d' Agiles, Canon of Puy, and Chaplain to the Count of Thoulouſe, who was an Eye-witneſs. He wrote this Hiſtory at the Requeſt of Peter Ponce de Baladin, a particular Friend of the ſaid Count, who was kill'd in the Siege of Arache, and dedicated it to the Biſhop of Viviers.

Raimond d'Agiles.

The ſixth is Albert, or Alberic, Canon of Aix in Provence, who compos'd his Hiſtory from the Relations of others: It is extended to the ſecond Year of the Reign of Baldwin II. that is to ſay, to A. D. 1120.

Albert, or Alberic, Canon of Aix.

The ſeventh is Foucher, a Monk of Chartres, who accompanied Robert Duke of Normandy in the Expedition to the Holy Land, A. D. 1095. His Hiſtory is carried on to the Year 1124. But Guibert of Nogent accuſes him of having written fabulous Narrations.

Foucher, Monk of Chartres.

Gautier, or Gauterius, who aſſumes the Quality of Chancellor, is the eighth: He publiſhed an Hiſtory of the Advantages obtain'd by the Weſtern Chriſtians at Antioch, A. D. 1115. and of the Misfortunes that befel them in 1119. He was an Eye-witneſs of thoſe Occurrences, and was taken Priſoner in the War; but his Hiſtory is not very accurate.

Gautier, the Chancellor.

The ninth is Guibert, Abbot of Nogent, an Author of great Note, whoſe Works deſerve to be ſpecified in a ſeparate Article.

Guibert Abbot of Nogent.

The tenth is a nameleſs Writer, who has only made an Abridgment of Foucher's Hiſtory, to the Year 1106. where he ended.

A nameleſs Author.

The eleventh is another anonymous Author, who compos'd a Relation of the ſame Tranſactions, under the Title of the Hiſtory of Jeruſalem: It was divided into two Parts, but the ſecond is only extant, which begins at the Year 1110. and ends in 1124. This Author has in like manner only follow'd Foucher.

Another Nameleſs Writer.

The twelfth, and moſt conſiderable of the Writers of this Hiſtory, is William Archbiſhop of Tyre, who has deduc'd it from the Beginning of the Cruſade to the Year 1183. in 23. Books. It is probable that this Author was a Native of Syria; however he paſſed very young into the Weſtern Countries, and having compleated his Studies, return'd to the Levant, where he was ordain'd Archdeacon of the Church of Tyre, A. D. 1167. Afterwards he was employ'd in the Negotiations that were tranſacted between the Kings of Jeruſalem, and the Greek Emperors; and at laſt was advanc'd to the Dignity of Archbiſhop of Tyre, in the Month of May 1174. In 1179. he aſſiſted in the Council of Lateran, the Acts of which were drawn up by him: He return'd from Italy by Conſtantinople, and after having reſided ſome time at the Court of the Emperor Manuel Comnenus, arriv'd at Tyre twenty Months after his Departure. The Patriarchal See of Jeruſalem being then vacant, William of Tyre was nominated to fill it up; but a certain Clerk of Auvergne, named Heraclius, Archbiſhop of Cæſarea, was preferr'd before him; nevertheleſs William refus'd to acknowledge his Election, and cited him to Rome; where he went incontinently, and was kindly entertain'd by the Pope. In the mean while Heraclius, before he came thither, ſent a Phyſician, who poyſon'd William of Tyre: But the later foretold before his Death, that the Chriſtians ſhould loſe the City of Jeruſalem, and the real Croſs, under the Government of Heraclius, which happen'd a little while after.

Raimond d'Agiles.

Albert, or Alberic, Canon of Aix.

Foucher, Monk of Chartres.

Gautier, the Chancellor.

Guibert Abbot of Nogent.

A nameleſs Author.

Another Nameleſs Writer.

William, Archbiſhop of Tyre.

William of Tyre wrote his Hiſtory by the Order of Amaury King of Jeruſalem: He makes uſe of the Memoirs of other Hiſtorians to the Reign of Baldwin III. and afterward relates ſuch Matters as fell within the Compaſs of his own Knowledge, but the twenty third Book is not finiſhed. His Style is plain and natural, ſhewing much Sagacity of Judgment, Modeſty, and Learning, with reſpect to the Time when he liv'd. He likewiſe compos'd the Hiſtory of the Levantine Princes, from the Year 614. to 1184. but this Work is not as yet come to our Hands.

The thirteenth Hiſtoriographer is James de Vitry, who did not flouriſh till the following Century. This Author, after having been Curate of Argenteuil, became a Regular Canon in the Monaſtery of Oignies, in the Dioceſs of Namur. He preached up the Cruſade againſt the Albigeois, and afterwards againſt the Saracens, and took upon him the Croſs for the Holy War in Paleſtine: He was ordain'd Archbiſhop of Ptolemais, and at laſt, by way of Recompence for the Services he had done the See of Rome, was invited thither by Pope Honorius III. and created Cardinal: He was alſo ſent into France in Quality of Legate, to preach up a new Cruſade againſt the Albigeois, and at his return to Rome died there A. D. 1244. after having order'd his Body to be convey'd to Oignies. His Hiſtory is divided into three Books; in the firſt of which, he gives an Account of the State of the Eaſtern Churches; in the ſecond, of that of the Weſtern; and in the laſt, of the Occurrences which happen'd in the Levant in his Time. There is alſo extant a Letter by the ſame Author about the taking of Damietta, which follows his Hiſtory; and another Letter, containing a Relation of the Tranſactions before Damietta, which was written in 1219. to Pope Honorius III. and publiſhed by Father Dachery in the eighth Tome of his Spicilegium.

James de Vitry, Cardinal.

The fourteenth is a nameleſs Author, who liv'd at that Time, and wrote the Hiſtory of Jeruſalem from the Year 1177. to 1190.

A nameleſs Author.

To theſe Hiſtorians may be added divers Letters written by ſeveral Kings, Princes and Prelates, to Lewis the Young, King of France; as alſo a Relation of the taking of Damietta by Oliver of Colen, and ſome other Monuments gather'd together by Bongarſius, in his Collection of the Hiſtoriographers of the Cruſade, call'd Geſta Dei per Francos, printed at Hanaw A. D. 1611. in which all the Works but now recited are contain'd. Some of them were printed ſeparately, as the Hiſtory by Robert Monk of St. Remy, of which there is an old Edition without the Printer's Name, or the Date of the Year; and another at Baſil in 1533. There is only one Part of Foucher's Hiſtory in this Collection, but M. du Cheſne has publiſh'd it entire among the Works of the French Hiſtoriographers. Alberic's Hiſtory was printed at Helmſtadt in 1589. under the Title of The Chronicle of Jeruſalem; that of William of Tyre was publiſhed by Poiſnot, and printed at Baſil in 1546. and afterward by Henry de Pantaleon, printed at the ſame Place in 1560. And laſtly, James de Vitry's Hiſtory was printed at Doway in 1597.

Oliver of Colen.

Writers of Chronicles, and particular Hiſtories.

Hugh, Abbot of Flavigny.

Hugh, a Monk of Verdun, and afterwards Abbot of Flavigny in the Dutchy of Burgundy, compoſed a Chronicle of Verdun divided into two Parts, one of which begins at the Nativity of Jeſus Chriſt, and ends in the Year 1002. and the other contains the Hiſtory to 1102. This Work was publiſhed by Father Labbe, who gives a very great Character of it, in the firſt Tome of his new Library of Manuſcripts; but the ſecond Part is much more valuable than the firſt.

Baudry, Biſhop of Noyon, and Terouane.

Baudry, Secretary to Gerard I. Liethert and Gerard II. Biſhops of Cambray, afterwards Chanter and Canon of Terouane, and at laſt Biſhop of Noyon and Terouane, wrote the Hiſtory of the Churches of Cambray and Arras, under the Title of the Chronicle of Cambray, publiſhed by Colvenerius, and printed at Doway A. D. 1615. This Author was ordain'd Biſhop in the Year of our Lord 1097. and died in 1112.

Leo, Cardinal.

Leo of Marſi, a Monk and Library-Keeper of Mount Caſſin, was made Biſhop of Seſſa, and Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia, by Pope Paſchal II. A. D. 1101. He eſcap'd by Flight from Rome, with John Biſhop of Freſcati, when that Pope was apprehended by the Emperor Henry V. and run all about Italy to excite the People to take up Arms in his Defence: He alſo ſign'd a Bull of the ſame Pope

Paſchal

Of the Authors of leſs note.

Paſchal II. in 1115. and died a little while after. He wrote a Chronicle of the Abby of Mount Caſſin divided into three Books, which begins at the time of St. Benedict, and ends in that of the Abbot Deſiderius, who was choſen Pope under the Name of Victor III. This Chronicle was printed at Venice A. D. 1513. at Paris with that of Aimoin in 1603. at Naples in 1616. and again at Paris in 1668. It tis reported that there are ſome other Manuſcript Tracts of this Author, particularly certain Sermons, and Lives of the Saints, &c. In the Vatican Library are to be ſeen ſeveral Letters of another Leo, in like manner Cardinal Deacon, who was promoted to that Dignity by Urban II. and who made a Regiſter of the Letters written by the ſame Pope.

Another Cardinal Leo,

Hariulphus, a Monk of St. Riquier, compos'd a Chronicle of his Abby, printed in the fourth Tome of Father Dachery's Spicilegium; the Life of St. Arnoul of Soiſſons, publiſh'd by Surius; a Treatiſe of the Miracles of St. Riquier; and the Life of St. Maldegiſilus, ſet forth by Father Mabillon in his Benedictin Centuries. This Author wrote in the beginning of the twelfth Century.

Hariulphus, Monk of St. Riquier

Rainerius, a Monk of St. Laurence at Liege, who flouriſh'd A. D. 1130. is the Author of a Treatiſe of the Illuſtrious Perſonages of his Monaſtery, and of the Biſhoprick of Liege, publiſh'd by Chapeauville, in his Collection of Monuments relating to the Church of Liege.

Rainerius, Monk of St. Laurence at Liege.

Herman, a Monk of St. Vincent at Laon, and afterwards Abbot of St. Martin at Tournay, flouriſh'd in the beginning of this Century. He wrote a large Narrative of the Reſtauration of the Church of St. Martin at Tournay, which contains the Hiſtory of that Abby, from the Reign of Philip I. King of France, to his time; that is to ſay, to the Year 1150. being inſerted in the twelfth Tome of Father Dachery's Spicilegium. He likewiſe compil'd three Books of the Miracles of St. Mary of Laon, printed with the Works of Guibert of Nogent, and another Manuſcript Treatiſe about the Incarnation of Jeſus Chriſt, dedicated to Stephen Archbiſhop of Vienna.

Herman, Abbot of St. Martin at Tournay.

Falco of Beneventum, who was created Magiſtrate of that City by Pope Innocent II. left a Chronicle in Hiſtory from the Year 1102. to 1140. in which he gives a particular Account of Matters relating to his native Country. This Work was publiſh'd by Father Caracioli of the Theatine Order, and printed at Naples A. D. 1626

Falco of Beneventum.

Udaſcalchus, a Monk, compos'd a Relation of the Controverſies between Herman Biſhop of Augsburg; and Egino Abbot of St. Ulric, with a Poem concerning the Voyage and Death of the ſaid Egino, publiſh'd by Caniſius in the ſecond Tome of his Collection. This Author wrote in the time of Pope Paſchal II. and of Arnulphus Archbiſhop of Mentz, ſome of whoſe Letters are inſerted by him in his Relation.

Udaſcalchus, a Monk.

Alexander, an Abbot in Sicily, compil'd four Books of the Life and Reign of Roger King of Sicily, which were printed at Saragoſſa, A. D. 1578. and the Book call'd, Hiſpania Illuſtrata. This Author wrote after the Death of King Roger, which happen'd in 1154.

Alexander, Abbot in Sicily.

John, a Monk or Marmoutier, wrote the Hiſtory of the Actions of Geffrey Plantagenet Count of Angers and Duke of Normandy, publiſh'd by M. du Bouchel, and printed at Paris A. D. 1610. as alſo in M. du Cheſn's Collection of the Hiſtorians of Normandy.

John Monk of Marmoutier.

Geffrey, or Walter de Vineſauf, of Norman Extraction, but born in England, after having run through a courſe of Learning in his native Country, travell'd beyond Sea, and acquir'd a great deal of Reputation. He compos'd a Work in Herameter Verſe, dedicated to Pope Innocent III. under the Title of The new Poeſy, or the Art of Speaking; and another Treatiſe about the planting and improving of Trees. Both theſe Works are only in Manuſcript; but in the ſecond Tome of the Engliſh Hiſtorians, printed at Oxford in 1687. is contain'd his Hiſtory, or the Itinerary of King Richard I. to the Holy-Land, which was attributed to other Authors; in the ſame Place are alſo found certain Copies of Verſes on King Richard.

Geffrey, or Walter de Vineſauf.

Odo of Deuil, Abbot of St. Cornelius at Compeigne, and afterward Succeſſor to Suger in the Abby of St. Denis, wrote a Relation of the Voyage of Lewis VII. King of France to the Levant, publiſh'd by Father Chifflet in his Treatiſe of the Nobility of S. Bernard, printed at Paris A. D. 1660. This Author died in 1168.

Odo, Abbot of St. Cornelius at Compeigne.

Laurence, a Monk of Liege, being ſent to Verdun reſided in the Monaſtery of St. Vito, and was employ'd in writing a Chronicle of all the Biſhops of that Dioceſs to the Year 1148. printed in the twelfth Tome of his Spicilegium: It is reported that he liv'd till A. D. 1179.

Laurence, a Monk of Liege.

Suger, Abbot of St. Denis, famous as well for his Learning and Zeal in maintaining the Rights of the Church, as on account of the Nobleneſs of his Birth, and the conſiderable Employments he obtain'd in the State, wrote the Life of Lewis the Groſs King of France; divers Letters relating to the publick Affairs of the Kingdom, during his Adminiſtration of the Government; a Treatiſe of his Tranſactions in the Abby of St. Denis; a Narrative of the Conſecration of that Church; with certain Conſtitutions, and his laſt Will and Teſtament. Theſe Monuments are no extant in the fourth Tome of the Hiſtorians by du Cheſne; except the Account of the Conſecration of the Church, which is not there entire, and to which Father Mabillon added a Supplement, in the firſt Tome of his Analecta. Suger was choſen Abbot of St. Denis A. D. 1122. during his reſidence at Rome, and conſecrated in 1123 He died in 1153.

Suger, Abbot of St. Denis.

Of the Authors of leſs note.

Aldebert, or Albert, Abbot of Hildeſheim, flouriſh'd in the Year 1160. He wrote a Relation of the Reſtauration of his Monaſtery to the Benedictins under Pope Eugenius III. which was publiſh'd by Gretſer, and printed at Ingolſtadt A. D. 1117.

Aldebert, or, Albert Abbot of Hildeſheim.

Teulphus, a Monk of Maurigny, compos'd in the Year 1150. a Chronicle of his Monaſtery, from A. D. 1008. to 1147. which is to be found in the three Tomes of the Hiſtorians by M. du Cheſne.

Teulphus, Monk of Maurigny

Hugh of Poitiers, a Benedictin Monk, Secretary to the Abby of Vezelay, began in the Year 1156. by Order of Ponce Abbot of Vezelay, the Hiſtory of that Monaſtery, and compleated it in 1167. under William Abbot of the ſame Abby. It is divided into four Books, and was publiſh'd by Father Dachery in the third Tome of his Spicilegium. Richard, an Engliſh Man of the County of Northumberland, Monk and Prior of the Monaſtery of Hagulſtadt, flouriſh'd A. D. 1180. and died in 1190. His Works were publiſh'd among thoſe of the Engliſh Hiſtorians, printed at London in 1652. They are, an Hiſtory of the Church and Biſhops of Hagulſtadt; that of the Actions of King Stephen; and that of the War manag'd by Standardius from A. D. 1135. to 1139.

Hugh, of Poitiers, Monk of Vezelay.

Richard, Prior of Hagulſtadt.

Thierry, or Theodoric, a Monk, wrote about the Year 1180. a compendious Hiſtory of Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, and of the Kings of Norway, publiſh'd with another Peice of a Nameleſs Author, concerning the Expedition which the Danes undertook to the Holy Land, A. D. 1185. which was ſet forth by Gaſper Kirkman, from the Memoirs of John Kirkman of Lubec his Uncle, and printed at Amſterdam 1684

Thierry, or Theodoric, a Monk.

Geffrey, a French Monk of the Monaſtery of St. Martial at Limoges, and afterward Prior of Vigeois in the ſame Dioceſs, who was ordain'd Prieſt in 1167. by Gerard Biſhop of Cahors, wrote a Chronicle or Hiſtory of France from the Year 996. to 1184. which was publiſh'd by Father Labbé in the ſecond Tome of his new Library of Manuſcripts.

Geffrey, Prior, of Vigeois.

Gonthier, or Gontherius, a Monk of the Abby of St. Amand, had the Reputation of being a good Poet, and compos'd a Poem of the Exploits of the Emperor Frederick Barberoſſa in Lombardy and Liguria which on that account was call'd the Ligurine, and was printed at Strasburg, A. D. 1531. as alſo at Baſil in 1569. at Francfort in 1584 among the German Hiſtorians, He likewiſe wrote a Treatiſe of Prayer, Faſting and Almſ-giving printed at Baſil in 1504. and 1507. The Lives of St. Cyrinus, and St. Julia in Verſe, are alſo attributed to the ſame Author.

Gonthier, Monk of St. Amand

Saxo, ſirnam'd the Grammarian, by reaſon of the Purity of his Style, was a Dane by Nation, of the Iſle of Seeland. He was Provoſt of the Church of Roſchild, and Chaplain to Abſalon Archbiſhop of Lunden, who ſent him to Paris, A. D. 1177. to conduct the Monks of St. Genevieve into Denmark. He wrote the Hiſtory of his native Country to the Year 1186. Eraſmus extols the Vivacity of of his Conceptions, the Nobleneſs of his Expreſſions, the Fluency of his Rhetorick, and the admirable Variety of his Figures, and wonders much, by what means a Dane could arrive at ſuch a height of Eloquence in that Age. He chiefly affected to imitate Valerius Maximus. His Hiſtory was publiſh'd by Chriſtian Petri, Canon of Lunden, and printed at Paris A. D. 1514. John Bebelius caus'd it to be printed at Baſil in 1534. as alſo did Philip Leonicier, and John Fichard at Francfort in 1576. Laſtly, Johannes Stephanius ſet forth a more large and correct Edition of it, with Prolegomena and Annotations, at Sora in 1644. This Author died in 1204.

Saxo Grammaticus Provoſt of Roſchild.

Ralph de Diceto, an Engliſh Man by Nation, and Dean of St. Paul's at London, a Perſon well known on account of his Learning and Travels into foreign Countries, wrote a compendious Chronicle from the Creation of the World to the Year 1198. The firſt Part of it ending at the time of Pope Gregory the Great was never publiſh'd, becauſe it only contain'd trivial Matters, He alſo compos'd certain Hiſtorical Tracts call'd Portraitures, from A. D. 1148. to 1200. Theſe Works are among thoſe of the Engliſh Hiſtorians printed at London in 1652.

Ralph de Diceto.

†

Writers of Relations of the Lives and Miracles of Saints.

Of the Writers of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory.

Anſcherus Abbot of St. Riquier

ANſcherus Abbot of St. Riquier compos'd in the Year 1110. a Relation of the Life and Miracles of St. Angilbert Abbot of the ſame Monaſtery, which was publiſh'd by Father Mabillon in the firſt Tome of his Benedictin Centuries.

Theofredus. Abbot of Epternach.

Theofredus, Abbot of Epternach in the Dutchy of Luxemburg, wrote a large Account of the Life of St. Willbrod the firſt Biſhop of Utrecht; four Books of Epitaphs of Saints, printed at Luxemburg A. D. 1619. and certain Sermons, which are inſerted in the Book call'd Bibliotheca Patrum.

Rainaud of Semur, Archbiſhop of Lyons.

Rainaud, or Rainoldus of Semur, the Son of Dalmace de Semur and Aremberge du Vergey, of an illuſtrious Family in Burgundy, being the Brother of Hugh Abbot of Cluny, was choſen Abbot of Vezelay, and aſſiſted in that Quality in the Council of Troyes A. D. 1104. He was afterwards promoted to the Archbiſhoprick of Lyons, and died in 1109. in the 85th Year of his Age, leaving a Narration of the Life of Hugh his Brother Abbot of Cluny, which is extant in the Bibliotheca Cluniacenſis publiſh'd by M. du Cheſne.

Nicolas, Monk of Soiſſons.

Nicolas, a Monk of Soiſſons, wrote in the Year 1120. the Life of St. Godfrey Biſhop of Amiens, dedicated to Robard Biſhop of Soiſſons, and referr'd to by Surius in November 8.

Domniſo Prieſt.

Domniſo, an Italian Prieſt, liv'd in the end of the preceding Century, in and the beginning of the preſent, under the Emperors Henry IV. and Henry V. He wrote in Heroick Verſe, the Life of the Princeſs Mathilda printed by Sebaſtian Tengnagelius at Ingolſtodt A. D. 1612. with the Letters of Gebehard of Saltzburg, Sigefred of Mentz, and Stephen of Halberſtadt, relating to the Conteſt between the Emperor and Pope Gregory; as alſo the Treaty of Bertholdus of Conſtance about excommunicated Perſons; the Lives of St. Altman of Paſſaw, Thiemo, of Satzburg, and Anſelm of Lucca, written by nameleſs Authors. and Heſſo's Treatiſe concerning the Tranſactions between the Emperor Henry V. and Pope Calixtus II. in 1119.

Ælnoth, Monk of Canterbury.

Ælnoth, a Monk of St Auguſtin at Canterbury, flouriſh'd in the beginning of this Century, and ſpent a conſiderable part of his Life in Denmark, where (as 'tis reported) he reſided 24 Years. He wrote about A. D. 1120. an Hiſtorical Account of the Life and Paſſion of Canut King of that Country, which was publiſh'd by Arnold Whitfield. A. D. 1602. and afterward printed with Meurſius's Notes at Hanaw in 1631.

Gualbert, Monk of Marchiennes.

Gualbert, a Monk of the Abby of Marchiennes, compos'd in the Year 1125. or 1126. two Books, concerning the Miracles wrought by St. Rictruda.

Pandulphus of Piſa.

Pandulphus of Piſa flouriſh'd A. D. 1130. and wrote the Life of Pope Gelaſius II. who died at Cluny in 1119. It was printed at Rome in 1638.

Fabricius Tuſcus, Abbot of Abbington.

Fabricius Tuſcus Abbot of Abbington in England, wrote a Relation of the Life and Actions of St. Adelm an Abbot in Scotland. He flouriſh'd in the beginning of the preſent Century.

Auctus, Abbot of Vall'Ombroſa.

Auctus, a Native of Florence, and Abbot of the Monaſtery of Valombra, or Vall'Ombroſa, in the Territories of that City, who flouriſh'd in the beginning of the Century, has left us the Life of St. John Gualbert, and that of Bernard Hubert Cardinal, with a Narrative of the Tranſlation of the Head of St. James the Apoſtle.

Odo, Abbot of St. Remy at Rheims

Odo, Abbot of St. Remy at Rheims, ſent a Letter to Count Thomas Lord of Coucy, which is ſtill extant, and contains the Relation of a Miracle, which he heard at Rome from the Mouth of a certain Archbiſhop of India concerning the Body of St. Thomas the Apoſtle, which was interr'd in his Church. This Letter was written about A. D. 1135. for the next Year, Odo return'd from Rome to France, and gave Lands to the Houſe of Mont-Dieu belonging to the Carthuſians.

Geffrey the Groſs, Monk of Tiron.

Geffrey the Groſs, a Monk of Tiron, wrote in the Year 1135. the Life of St. Bernard Abbot of that Monaſtery, referr'd to by the Bollandiſts in April 14.

Ulric, Biſhop of Conſtance

Ulric, a Monk of St. Blaſius in the Black Foreſt, who was afterwards promoted to the Biſhoprick of Conſtance A. D. 1120. wrote the Life of St. Gebehard Biſhop of Augsburg cited by Caniſius, and that of St. Conrad, Biſhop of the ſame City, whoſe Canonization he had obtain'd of the Pope. In the end of his Life he left his Biſhoprick, and return'd to the Monaſtery of St. Blaſius in 1138. where he died in 1140.

Of the Writers of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory.

Archard, Monk of Clairvaux.

Archard, a Ciſtercian Monk, and Tutor to the Novices in the Abby of Clairvaux, in St. Bernard's time, compos'd a Relation of the Life of St. Geſelin a Hermit, which was publiſh'd by Arnoldus Raiſius and printed at Douay A. D. 1626. It is alſo reported, that he made certain Sermons for the Uſe of the Novices. He flouriſh'd in 1140.

Sifred, Ebbo, Thimo, and Herbord.

At the ſame time Sifred, Ebo, Thimo, and Herbord, wrote the Life of St. Otho, who firſt planted Chriſtianity in Pomerania, and died A. D. 1139. This Piece is inſerted by Caniſius in his Antiquities.

Robert, Arch-Deacon of Oſtervandt a nameleſs Author.

To theſe Writers may be added Robert, Archdeacon of Oſtervandt in Haynaut, who compos'd a Narrative of the Life of St. Aibert, a Monk and Prieſt of the Monaſtery of Creſpin, referr'd to by Surius, and a nameleſs Author, who wrote the Life of St. Ludger in Verſe.

Turſtin, Archbiſhop of York.

Turſtin, Archbiſhop of York, who near the End of his Life retir'd to a Monaſtery of his Dioceſs call'd Rippon-Springs of the Ciſtercian Order, wrote a ſmall Tract concerning the Original of that Monaſtery.

Thibaud, Monk of St. Peter at Beze.

Thibaud, or Theobald, a Benedictin Monk of Peter at Beze in Burgundy, compil'd in the middle of the Century four Books, concerning the Acts, Tranſlation, and Miracles of St. Prudentius Martyr, publiſh'd by Father Labbé in his new Library of Manuſcripts.

Hugh, Monk of Cluny.

Hugh, a Monk of Cluny, wrote in the Year 1160 a Letter giving an Account of the excellent Endowments of St. Hugh, ſometime Abbot of the ſame Monaſtery, and afterwards the entire Life of that Saint, which is inſerted in the Bibliotheca Cluniacenſis, and in Surius.

Gautier, Canon of Terouane.

Gautier, or Gauterius, a Canon of Terouane, compos'd a Narration of the Life and Martyrdom of Charles ſir-nam'd the Good Count of Flanders, which was ſet forth by Father Sirmond, A. D. 1615.

Nicolas, Canon of Liege.

Nicolas, a Canon of Liege, wrote the Life of St. Lambert, publiſh'd by Chapeaville in his Collection of Pieces relating to the ſaid Church of Liege.

Alanus, Biſhop of Auxerre.

Alanus, a Native of Liſle in Flanders, a Monk of Clairvaux, and afterwards Abbot of Larivoir, a Monaſtery of the Order of Clairvaux in the Dioceſs of Trier, was made Biſhop of Auxerre A.D. 1153. and compos'd an Abridgment of the Life of St. Bernard, publiſh'd by Father Mabillon. He left his Biſhoprick to return to Clairvaux. in 1161. and died in 1182.

Sibrand, Abbot of Marieg.

Sibrand, Abbot of Mariegard in Frieſeland, is the Author of an Account of the Life of St. Frederick, Founder of that Abby, who died A. D. 1175. Sibrand wrote ſome time after.

Bertrand, Abbot of LaChaiſe-Dieu

Bertrand, Abbot of La Chaiſe-Dieu, compil'd the Hiſtory of the Life and Miracles of Robert the firſt Founder of that Abby, which is divided into three Parts, and was publiſh'd by Father Labbé in the ſecond Tome of his new Library of Manuſcripts.

Ladulphus Tortarius.

Roul, or Radulphus, ſir-nam'd Tortarius, wrote a Book concerning the Miracles of St. Benedict, ſet forth by Father Mabillon in the fourth Benedictin Century.

Stephen, Abbot of St James's at Liege.

Stephen, Abbot of St. James at Liege, wrote in the beginning of the Century the Life of St. Modoaldus Archbiſhop of Trier, divided into three Books, and the Hiſtory of the Tranſlation of that Saint, publiſh'd by Surius and the Bollandiſts.

Hugh, Monk of St Saviour. at Lodeve.

Hugh, a Monk of St. Saviour at Lodeve, compos'd a Relation of the Converſion of Ponce de Laraze, Founder of that Monaſtery, which was ſet forth by M. Baluzius in the third Tome of his Miſcellaneous Works.

Herman a convert Jew of Colen.

Herman, a Jew of Colen, being converted by the Sermons of Egbert Biſhop of Munſter, and by the Conferences he had with Abbot Rupert, retir'd to a Monaſtery of Regular Canons in his native Country. He wrote a ſmall Tract about his Converſion, publiſh'd by Carpzovius in the laſt Edition of Raimond, printed at Leipſick in 1687.

Thomas, Monk of Ely.

Thomas, a Monk of Ely in England, wrote an Account of the Life and Tranſlation of St. Etheldrith the firſt Abbeſs of Ely, who died A. C. 679. This Piece was publiſh'd by Father Mabillon in the ſecond Benedictin Century.

CHAP.

CHAP. XIV.

An Account of the Lives and Writings of the Eccleſiaſtical Authors of the Levant in the Twelfth Century.

Of the Writers of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory.

THE County of Greece has produc'd in this Century a great number of Writers of good Note, who attain'd to much Skill as well in Divinity, as in the Canon and Civil Law. Of the chief of theſe we ſhall give a particular Account in this Chapter.

Euthymius Zygabenus, a Greek Monk of the Order St. Baſil, flouriſh'd in the beginning of this Century, under the Emperor Alexis Comnenus, by whom he was highly eſteem'd. He apply'd himſelf very much to the reading of the Writings of the antient Greek Fathers, and compos'd the following Works. Viz.

Euthimius Zygabenus, a Greek Monk.

A Collection of Paſſages taken out of the Fathers on divers Points of Religion againſt the Errors of the Hereticks, which is divided into two Parts, and call'd Panoplia Dogmatica, or the Defence of the Orthodox Faith againſt all Hereſies. The Greek Text of this Work never as yet came to our hands, only a Latin Verſion made by Zinus, printed at Lyons A. D. 1536. at Paris in 1556. at Venice in 1575. and in the Bibliotheca Patrum. A large Commentary on the 150 Pſalms, and the 10 Canticles, taken out of the Works of the Fathers, which was printed in Greek at Verona A. D. 1530. and in Latin of Saulius's Tranſlation at Paris in 1543. and 1547. as alſo at Venice in 1568. M. le Moine has publiſh'd in the firſt Tome of his Collection of Monuments the Preface to this Commentary, in which the Author treats of ſeveral Queſtions relating to the Pſalms. A Commentary on the four Goſpels, printed in Greek at Verona in 1530. and in Latin of Henteninus's Verſion at Louvain in 1544. as alſo at Paris in 1560. Simlerus aſſures us, that there is a Manuſcript Copy in Sambucus's Library, of a Commentary by this Author on the Catholick Epiſtles; and ſome Eccleſiaſtical Writers make mention of his Commentary on St. Paul's Epiſtles. The Commentaries of Euthymius Zygabenus are Literal, Moral, and Allegorical; in the Literal, he makes it his Buſineſs to explain the proper ſignification of the Terms; his moral Diſcourſes are ſolid, and his Allegories natural, and fitly adapted to the Matter in debate.

Philip the Solitary, a Greek Monk.

Philip ſirnam'd the Solitary, a Greek Monk, compos'd in the Year 1105. a Work call'd Dioptron, or The Rule of Chriſtian Life, dedicated to Callinicus, and divided into four Books, a Verſion of which made by Jacobus Pontanus was printed at Ingolſtadt A. D. 1604. and afterwards inſerted in the Bibliotheca Patrum. It is written by way of Dialogue between the Soul and the Body, the Author introducing the former as a Tutreſs or Guardian, and the other as the Pupil: The Soul gives many moral Inſtructions to the Body, who acknowledges and approves the Truths laid down, owns her natural Infirmities, and even ſometimes gives Advice to the Soul. The Author in this Diſcourſe produces great Variety of fine Paſſages out of the Greek Fathers, and takes an Occaſion to diſcuſs ſome doctrinal Points, amongſt others, the Neceſſity of Confeſſion is more particularly inculcated. He alſo proves, that the Souls of the Righteous, after their Death, are tranſlated to Heaven, and there enjoy everlaſting Happineſs; and explains ſeveral Queſtions about the Reſurrection; but he chiefly treats of Points relating to Morality, and the State of humane Nature.

Petrus Chryſolanus

Petrus Croſolanus, or Chryſolanus, being tranſlated from a certain Biſhoprick to the Metropolitan See of Milan, in the beginning of this Century, was ſent in Quality of Legate by Pope Paſchal II. to the Court of Alexis Comnenus Emperor of Conſtantinople; where he diſputed with much earneſtneſs, both by word of Mouth and Writing againſt the Opinion of the Greeks, concerning the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt. Upon his return, the Archbiſhoprick of Milan was conteſted with him by Jordanes, and he was condemn'd in a Council held at Lateran in 1116 to leave it, and to return to his Biſhoprick. The Diſcourſe is ſtill extant which he made to Alexis Comnenus about the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt: It is in Latin in Baronius, under the Year 1119. and in Greek and Latin in the firſt Tome of Allatius's Book, call'd Græcia Orthodoxa.

Euſtratius, Archbiſhop of Nice, was one of thoſe Perſons who reply'd to Chryſolanus: He was a Man of profound Learning and Skill, as well in Eccleſiaſtical as Civil Affairs. His Treatiſe againſt Chryſolanus is extant in Manuſcript in ſeveral Libraries, and Leo Allatius makes mention of five other Treatiſes of this Author; but we have none printed, except certain Greek Commentaries on Ariſtotle's Analyticks publiſh'd at Venice A. D. 1536. and in Latin at Paris in 1543.

Of the Writers of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory.

Euſtratius, Archbiſhop of Nice.

At the ſame time Nicetas Seidus wrote a Treatiſe againſt the Latins, the Deſign of which was to prove, that Antiquity is not always moſt Venerable, and therefore that greater Honour is not due upon that account to Old Rome than to the New. Leo Allatius produces a great number of Fragments taken out of this Treatiſe, in his Books of the Concord between the Greek and Latin Churches. L. 1. c. 14. §. 1, 2. L. 2. c. 1. §. 2. L. 3. c. 12. §. 4.

Nicetas Seidus.

Iſaac, an Armenian Biſhop, being ſeparated from the Communion of his Country-men, and turn'd out of their Society, compos'd againſt them in the Year 1133. divers Works, in which he confutes their Errors. In the firſt and chief of theſe Writings, he accuſes them of being addicted to the Hereſy of the Aphtartodocites, that is to ſay, of beliveing that the Body of Jeſus Chriſt was not like ours, but impaſſible, immortal, uncreated, and naturally inviſible; that by the Incarnation it was chang'd into the Divine Nature, which abſorb'd it, as a drop of Honey thrown into the Sea, is ſo far intermix'd with the Water that it entirely diſappears. He adds, that by reaſon of this Error, they did not attribute to the Holy Myſteries of the Euchariſt the Name of the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, but that of his Divinity or Godhead. Iſaac confutes his Adverſaries by ſeveral Paſſages of Holy Scripture, and Teſtimonies of St. Athanaſius, and St. Cyril of Alexandria. Afterwards he reproves them upon account of divers Matters which relate only to Diſcipline, although he makes as many Errors of them as Hereſies. Viz.

Iſaac, an Armenian Biſhop.

1 That they neglected to celebrate the Feſtival of the Annunciation in any Month of the Year, under pretence that the Virgin Mary did not conceive in March: Iſaac maintains that ſhe conceiv'd on the 25. Day of that Month, and endeavours to prove it by the Teſtimonies of Euſebius, St. Athanaſius, and St. Chryſoſtom; but they are taken out of ſuppoſititious Pieces.

2. That they do not celebrate the Nativity of Jeſus Chriſt with due Solemnity, contenting themſelves only to commemorate in a mournful manner, without any Ceremony, the Annunciation of our Saviour's Nativity and Baptiſm in one Day.

3. That they do not mingle Water with the Wine in the Chalice in order to the Conſecration.

4. That in the Adminiſtration of the Sacrament of the Lord's-Supper, they make uſe of unleavened Bread. Iſaac confutes this Cuſtom, and affirms, that Jeſus Chriſt us'd leaven'd Bread in the Inſtitution of the Euchariſt; and that although it were granted, that he made uſe of unleaven'd, yet that would not infer a Neceſſity of imitating him, in regard that the Church obſerves many Things in the Celebration of the Holy Myſteries, which are not conformable to what our Saviour did at that time. He produces ſeveral Examples in the eighth Chapter to that purpoſe.

5. That they were wont to make an Oblation of Oxen, Sheep, and Lambs, at the Altar.

6. That they have not a due Veneration for the Sign of the Croſs.

7. That they ſometimes join three Croſſes together, and impoſe on them the Name of the Trinity.

8. That they uſually ſing the Triſagion, with Petrus Fullo's Addition; that is to ſay, in adding to theſe Words, Holy God, Almighty God, Immortal God, theſe, who waſt crucify'd for us.

9. That they do not receive Ordination from the Archbiſhop of Cæſarea.

10. That they do obſerve a very rigorous Faſt call'd Artoburia, in the Week proceeding Tyrophagia; that is to ſay, ſay, the Week before the beginning of Lent, during which the Greeks abſtain from eating Fleſh, and live on White-meats. Iſaac condemns this Cuſtom as ſuperſtitious, and the Original of that Faſt, refuting the Reaſons alledg'd in vindication of it. Afterwards he makes an Exhortation to the Armenians to renounce their Errors, and abſur'd Cuſtoms contrary to the Faith and Diſcipline of the Church eſtabliſh'd in the Councils, and by the Biſhops of Rome.

Of the Writers of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory.

Biſhop Iſaac's ſecond Treatiſe againſt the Armenians is not ſo large as the former: He there reckons up 29 Articles of heretical or erroneous Opinions to be imputed to them, the moſt part of which may be referr'd to thoſe we have but now obſerv'd; adding,

11. That they do not ſolemnize the Feſtival of * Lumieres, on the fifth day of January, in Commemoration of the Baptiſm of Jeſus Chriſt.

* Lights,

12. That they uſually make their conſecrated Oils of Rape-ſeed, and not of Olives, and that they do not adminiſter Unction at the Sacrament of Baptiſm.

13. That they permit none but thoſe Perſons who officiate to ſay the Lords Prayer.

14. That they do not blow upon baptis'd Perſons.

15. That they do not ſhew due reſpect to the Images.

16. That during the time of Lent they do not reſort to the Church, nor adore the Croſſes.

17. That they were wont to eat Cheeſe on Saturdays and Sundays in Lent.

18. That they do not rightly honour the Saints.

19. That they do not obſerve the Week Tyrophagia.

20. That they appear before the Altar with their ordinary Habits, and that they keep their Hats on during the Celebration of Divine Service.

21. That they do not adminiſter the Communion on Holy Thurſday.

22. That they imitate the Jews in eating a Paſchal-Lamb on Eaſter-day, with the Blood of which they ſprinkle their Door-poſts, and keep the reſt to ſerve for Benedictions, cauſing a Victim painted red to be brought to the Church-door, where they ſacrifice it with a great deal of Ceremony.

About that time the Armenians ſent Legates to Rome to Pope Eugenius III. to enter into a Union with the Latin Church, whoſe Cuſtom they follow'd in the uſe of unleaven'd Bread, and in ſome other Matters. This Embaſſy is referr'd to by Otho of Friſingben.

Michael Glycas, a Sicilian, compos'd in the beginning of this Century his Annals, divided into four Parts: which is not only an hiſtorical Work, but alſo has ſome relation to Divinity, and natural Philoſophy. In the firſt Part he treats of the Creation of the World: The ſecond contains an Hiſtory from the Creation of the World to the Nativity of Jeſus Chriſt; The third continues the Hiſtory from our Saviour to Conſtantine the Great: And in the fourth it is brought down to the Death of Alexis Comnenus. Theſe Annals were printed in Latin, of Lewenclavius's Verſion at Baſil A. D. 1572. But they were publiſh'd in Greek and Latin by Father Labbé, and printed at Paris in 1660. Jacobus Pontanus likewiſe ſet forth two Diſcourſes of the ſame Author, with the Dioptron of Philip the Solitary, printed at Ingolſtadt in 1604. Leo Allatius produces ſeveral Fragments of divers Letters written by Michael Glycas, and cites a Treatiſe which he compos'd about the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, dedicated to Maximus Semeniota; another Piece concerning the Queſtion, Whether Jeſus Chriſt made uſe of unleaven'd Bread at his laſt Supper? And a Tract of the State of Souls ſeparated from the Body. Laſtly, Poſſevinus obſerves, that there are certain Treatiſes of this Author on the Holy Scripture, in the Emperor's Library at Vienna.

Michael Glycas, a Sicilian.

At the ſame time Nicetas, a Philoſopher or Monk of Conſtantinople, wrote an Apologetical Treatiſe for the Council of Chalcedon againſt a certain Prince of Armenia, which was publiſh'd by Allatius in the firſt Tome of his Græcia Orthodoxa.

Nicetas of Conſtantinople.

Conſtantine Manaſſes flouriſh'd in Greece A. D. 1150. and wrote an Epitome of Hiſtory, dedicated to Irene the Siſter of the Emperor Manuel Comnenus, from the Creation of the World to the Reign of Alexis Comnenus, that is to ſay, to the Year 1081. The Latin Verſion of this Chronicle by Lewenclavius was printed at Baſil in 1573. The Greek Text was publiſh'd ſeparately by Meurſius at Amſterdam, in 1616. but it was printed in Greek and Latin with the Notes of Lewenclavius, Meurſius, Allatius, and Fabrottus in Folio at Paris A. D. 1655.

Conſtantine Manaſſes.

Conſtantinus Harmenopulus, a Judge of Theſſalonica, flouriſh'd A. D. 1150. at the time when the Hereſie of the Bogomiles began to appear: He was an able Lawyer, and compil'd a Dictionary of the Civil Law, which was printed in Greek at Paris in 1540. in Latin at Lyons in 1556. and in Greek and Latin with the Notes of John Mercerus, and Dionyſius Gothofredus at Geneva in 1587. as alſo a Collection of Canons divided into ſix Titles or Articles, and publiſh'd in Greek and Latin by Lewenclavius in the firſt Tome of his Jus Græco-Romanum, or Collection of Greek and Roman Laws. To theſe Works may be added his Treatiſe of the Sects of Hereticks, with a Confeſſion of Faith, which is inſerted in the firſt Tome of Fronto Ducæus's Supplement to the Bibliotheca Patrum.

Conſtantinus Harmenopulus.

Of the Writers of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory.

John, a Monk of the Iſland of Oxia, and Patriarch of the Greek Church of Antioch, A. D. 1150. is the Author of a ſmall Treatiſe againſt the Cuſtom that was then introduced of conferring Monaſteries on Noblemen or Laicks. This Tract is mention'd by Balſamon and Blaſtares, and was publiſh'd by Cotelerius in the firſt Tome of his Monuments of the Greek Church. Perhaps it may not be improper here to ſhew after what manner he treats of the Original and Progreſs of the Monaſtick Life.

John Patriarch of Antioch.

'Our Lord Jeſus Chriſt (ſays he) having deſcended 'from Heaven to Earth for the Salvation of Mankind, 'having alſo actually redeem'd us by his Death, and eſta-'bliſh'd his Religion throughout the whole World; the 'Devil us'd his utmoſt Efforts to cauſe Men to return to 'their former exorbitant Courſes: To which purpoſe 'he at firſt excited the Emperors and Potentates to raiſe 'cruel Perſecutions againſt the Chriſtians: Afterwards, 'when the Chriſtian Religion was embraced by Kings and 'Princes, he cauſ'd Hereſies to ſucceed Superſtitions; but 'when theſe Means in like manner prov'd ineffectual, he 'made uſe of another Method, which was to induce the 'Chriſtians to defer the Adminiſtration of Baptiſm: But 'our Anceſtors the Succeſſors of the Apoſtles, perceiving 'the Damnage ſuch Procraſtinations brought to the Catho-'lick Church, and that many Perſons died without Bap-'tiſm, ordain'd that all Infants ſhould be baptis'd and 'educated in the Chriſtian Religion by their Parents, or 'by their God-fathers and God-mothers. The Devil be-'ing thus defeated, had recourſe to another Artifice; 'which was to corrupt the Manners of baptis'd Perſons, 'well knowing that Faith without good Works is un-'profitable to Salvation: Whereupon the Church enjoyn'd 'Penance as an Antidote againſt theſe Diſorders; but 'the Devil often cauſ'd the Penitents to fall again into 'the ſame vicious Courſes, before the time of their Pe-'nance was expir'd. This difficulty of living virtuouſly 'and ſoberly in the World, cauſ'd many Perſons to take 'a Reſolution to retire to ſolitary Places there to lead an 'aſcetick Life; inſomuch that their Reputation drew 'many People thither, who imitated their manner of Li-'ving; and their Number being thus encreaſed, they for-'med regular Societies, and erected Monaſteries.

'This Inſtitution began in Egypt, and from thence was 'ſpread abroad throughout the whole World, as St. A-'thanaſius and Theodorus Studita have obſerv'd. The Bi-'ſhops, to render the Monaſtick Life more commendable, 'thought fit to confer on the Monks a kind of Conſecra-'tion, or Benediction, which is as it were renewing the 'Baptiſmal Vows. There were among the Monks a great 'Number of Saints who wrote excellent Books relating 'to the Monaſtick Diſcipline, and by that means brought it 'to perfection. In the mean while the Devil not being 'able to endure their Proceedings, at firſt attack'd them by 'Leo the Image-breaker, who endeavour'd to extirpate 'their Order; but this Emperor was deſtroy'd, and 'after his Reign the Monks obtain'd ſo great Reputation, 'that they were permitted to receive Confeſſions, to im-'poſe Penances, and to give Abſolution. How many 'Attempts has the Devil made to ruin an Order ſo well 'eſtabliſh'd? He has cauſ'd Monaſteries and Hoſpitals 'to be made over by Princes and Patriarchs to Lay-men: 'Indeed at firſt they were not conſign'd to ſuch Perſons, 'to the end that they might make any Advantage of them, 'but that they might be re-eſtabliſh'd and improved. Af-'terwards Covetouſneſs being cloked with this ſpecious 'Shew, the Emperors and Patriarchs began to grant Mo-'naſteries and Hoſpitals to Laicks, to gain profit by them. 'The Patriarch Siſinnius oppos'd this Abuſe, which pre-'vail'd from time to time, and which is at preſent ſo great, 'that almoſt all the Monaſteries of Monks and Nuns are 'in the poſſeſſion of Lay-men, nay even of thoſe that are 'married.

The Patriarch of Antioch condemns the ſaid Cuſtom in the remaining Part of this Treatiſe, alledging the following Reaſons: viz. 1. That the very Title of Donation imports a kind of Blaſphemy; in regard that a Monaſtery, or Church, which bears the Name of our Saviour, of the Virgin Mary, or of the Saints, is given to a meer Man. 2. That the Donor has no Propriety in ſuch Poſſeſſions. 3. That the Monaſteries are Places of Retreat for Perſons who are deſirous to ſerve God, where his Praiſes are ſung, and the Revenues of which are appointed for the Maintenance of the Saints, and of the Poor. 4. That the Government of the Church is subverted by such irregular Proceedings, when Secular Persons are substituted in the room of Monks. 5. That Monasteries, which are thus made over to Laymen, are soon ruin'd or demolish'd; and that under Pretence of enfranchising them under the Protection of some Lord, they are made subject to the Jurisdiction of such as are ready to pillage and ruin them; treating the Priors and Monks as Slaves, and allowing them only a very small Portion of the Revenues, and that too grudgingly, and as it were out of pure Charity. Besides that these Patrons cannot be perswaded to keep their Monasteries in Repair, nor to give Alms, neither do they take care that Divine Service be celebrated therein, nor that a regular Course of Discipline be duly observ'd: But, on the contrary, they apply the Revenues altogether to prophane Uses. That without having any regard to the Monastick Rules and Constitutions, which import, that whoever presents himself in order to be admitted to the Profession, shall undergo a Probation of three Years; they usually nominate Monks at their Pleasure, and enjoin the Priors to admit them by Vertue of their Mandamus. Lastly, that the Monks who are placed there, after so irregular a Manner, generally make no Scruple to live as dissolutely, eating Flesh inordinately, committing Outrages upon the Laicks, setting forth publick Shews, driving Trades, haunting Ale-houses or Taverns, and making their Monasteries common Receptacles for all sorts of Secular Persons.

vernment

Of the Writers of Ecclesiastical History.

6. That greater Disorders were occasion'd on that Account in the Convents of Nuns; the Ladies to whom they are consign'd often usurping their Revenues: That they take up their Abode, and cause Houses to be built within the Bounds of the Monasteries; and that they introduce Secular Persons, and entirely subvert the Monastick Discipline. From all these Arguments he concludes, that it is a very high Misdemeanour, and a kind of Impiety equal to Heresy, to put Monasteries into the Hands of Laicks; and that 'tis a mortal Sin for such Persons to take Possession of them; and that they who die in that State, without doing Penance for their Offence, (which frequently happens) incur Damnation. The Name of Charistochairi was then usually impos'd among the Greeks on those Laymen, who had any Abbies consign'd to them. Theodorus Balsamon, in his Remarks on the 13th. Canon of the seventh Synod, and Matthæus Blastares, are of a different Opinion from this Author, and approve the Donations of Monasteries which are made by Bishops, provided they be done on good Grounds.

Germanus Patriarch of Constantinople.

There are extant two Homilies of Germanus Patriarch of Constantinople, viz. one published by Gretser, on the Reformation of Image-worship, under the Empress Irene, an annual Commemoration of which was made on the first Sunday in Lent, and the other by Father Combefis, on the Burial of the Body of Jesus Christ.

Arsenius.

Arsenius, a Monk of Mount Athos, compos'd in the Year 1150. a compendious Collection of Canons, which is inserted in M. Justel's Library of the ancient Canon Law.

Andronicus Camaterus.

Andronicus Camaterus, Governor of the City of Constantinople, and the Kinsman of the Emperor Manuel Comnenus, wrote at the same time a Treatise against the Latins, in form of a Dialogue, between the Emperor Manuel and certain Cardinals of Rome, concerning the Procession of the Holy Ghost. This Book was afterwards refuted by Veccus. Andronicus is also the Author of another Tract, written by way of Conference between the same Emperor, and Peter Patriarch of the Armenians; and of a Treatise of the two Natures in Jesus Christ. These Works are not as yet printed, but 'tis reported that they are in the Library of Bavaria.

George Archbishop of Corfu.

George, Archbishop of Corfu, was sent into Italy by the Emperor Manuel Comnenus, to assist in a Council held at Rome; but he did not pass beyond Brundusium, where he fell sick. However being recall'd by the Emperor, he was present in a Patriarchal Council conven'd at Constantinople. He wrote a Treatise of Purgatory, and another against the Latins, in Vindication of the use of leaven'd Bread in the Eucharist. Allatius makes mention of both these Works, which are in Manuscript in the Library of Barberino. Baronius has also published in Latin a Monodia, compos'd by this Archbishop in Honour of the Abbot Nectarius, with several Letters in his Annals.

Antonius Mcliffus.

Antonius, sirnam'd Melissus, by reason of his singular Eloquence, a Greek Monk, apparently liv'd in this Century: He compil'd a Collection of Common Places, or Maxims, taken out of the Writings of the Greek Fathers, on the Vertues and Vices, which are divided into two Books, and were printed in Greek and Latin at Basil A. D. 1546. as also at Geneva in 1609. and in Latin at Paris in 1575. and 1589. They are likewise inserted in Latin in the Bibliotheca Patrum.

Basil of Acris, Archbishop of Thessalonica, being importun'd by Adrian IV. to come to an Accommodation with the Church of Rome, wrote a Letter to that Pope, to shew that the Greek Church is not Schismatical, and that the Roman is not superiour to it. Baronius published this Letter with that of Adrian in Anno 1155. of his Annals. It is also extant, but somewhat different, in Greek and Latin, in the Collection of the Greek and Roman Law, with an Answer by the same Archbishop to certain Questions about Marriage.

Basil of Arcis, Archbishop of Thessalonica.

Lucas, sirnam'd Chrysobergius, promoted to the Patriarchal See of Constantinople A. D. 1148. or 1155. held a Council in that City in 1166. and died the Year following. In the Collection of the Greek and Roman Laws are contain'd thirteen Statutes by this Patriarch, relating to Ecclesiastical Matters; among others, one to prohibit Marriages between Relations to the seventh Degree of Consanguinity; another against Clerks who intermeddle with Secular Affairs; as also to forbid the performing of rash Oaths, with a Discourse about the Baptism of captive Children.

Lucas Chrysobergius, Patriarch of Constantinople.

Michael of Thessalonica, Master of the Rhetoricians, and principal Defender of the Church of Constantinople, being condemn'd in the Year 1160. for maintaining the Heresy of the Bogomiles, retracted his Errors, and made a Confession of Faith, referr'd to by Allatius in the second Tome of his Concordia Ecclesiæ Orientalis & Occidentalis. L. 2. c. 12.

Michael Thessalonica,

Alexis Aristenes, Oeconomus, or Steward of the Church of Constantinople, assisted in a Council held in that City A. D. 1166. and there cited the 37th Canon of the Council in Trullo, against Nicephorus Patriarch of Jerusalem. He wrote Annotations on a Collection of Canons printed in Dr. Beverege's Pandects.

Alexis Aristenes, Steward of the Church of Constantinople.

Simeon Logotheta, who liv'd at the same time, in like manner compos'd Notes on the same Collection of Canons, but they are lost. He is also reputed to be the Author of a Piece concerning the Creation of the World, a Manuscript Copy of which M. du Cange had in his Possession.

Simeon Logotheta

Joannes Cinnamus, sirnam'd the Grammarian, Secretary to the Emperor Manuel Comnenus, under whom he likewise serv'd in the Army, compos'd a History of the Reigns of the two Emperors nam'd Comneni, viz. John and Manuel, from the Year 1118. to 1176. Leo Allatius gives us this Character of the Author: 'His Style is fine, (says 'he) although he often makes use of foreign Terms, 'and Figures, taken out of the Sophisters Store-house; 'his Periods are concise and full; but the new Method 'of their Composition, renders them somewhat harsh and 'obscure.' This Author every where affects to imitate Procopius, and highly extols Manuel Comnenus: He was still living when Andronicus Comnenus usurped the Imperial Throne, by causing Alexis to be put to Death. His History, divided into four Books, was published in Greek and Latin by Cornelius Tollius, and printed at Utrecht A. D. 1652. M. du Cange in like manner caus'd it to be printed at the Louvre, divided into six Books, and illustrated with Annotations.

Joannes Cinnamus.

Theorianus was sent into Armenia by Manuel Comnenus to endeavour to procure a Re-union between that and the Greek Church. Upon his Arrival there, May 15. 1170. he acquainted Nanuesius their Patriarch with the Design of his Embassy, and deliver'd to him the Emperor's Letter: The Patriarch receiv'd it with due Acknowledgments of his Imperial Majesty's Favour, and agree'd to enter into Conference with Theorianus about the Opinions and Customs in which the Armenians differ'd from the Greeks. Their first Conferences were concerning the Error of the Armenians, with respect to our Saviour's Incarnation. Theorianus endeavour'd to convince them by a great Number of Testimonies of the Fathers, that there were two Natures in Jesus Christ; and after having discoursed largely of that Doctrine, he discussed the other Questions of less Consequence, which were in debate between the Greeks and Armenians, relating to the Festival of Christmas-day, the Trisagion, the Confection of consecrated Oils with Olives, and not with Rape-seed; and the Custom of singing the Divine Office without the Church, which was disapproved by the Greeks. Theorianus vindicated the Practice of the later in those Points, and oblig'd the Armenian Patriarch to acknowledge that they were not blame-worthy, and that these different Customs ought not to be insisted on, provided they were agree'd as to the same Matters of Faith. In order to fix his Judgment, Theorianus produc'd the Decree of the fourth General Council, and shew'd that it was conformable to St. Cyril's Doctrine. The Armenian Patriarch approv'd it, and engag'd to use his utmost Endeavours to get the Consent of those of his Nation, and to cause the Bishops to sign a Confession of Faith, by Virtue of which they should acknowledge the Theorianus.

Council of Chalcedon, and anathematize Eutychius, Dioscorus, Severus, Timotheus, Ælurus, and other Adversaries of that Council; and lastly, that for his part, he wou'd always adhere to the Faith of the Greek Church, and continue in its Communion. Theorianus wrote, with his own Hand, a faithful Relation of these Conferences, and of every thing that was said and propos'd on both sides. He solidly confutes, and in a very methodical manner, the Error of the Monophysites, and discourses with a great deal of Moderation, of those Points that relate to the different Customs in use among the Armenians and Greeks. This Work was published by Lewenclavius, and printed at Basil A. D. 1578. as also afterwards in the Greek and Latin Edition of the Bibliotheca Patrum, by Fronto Ducæus.

Of the Writers of Ecclesiastical History.

Hugh Etherianus.

Hugh Etherianus flourished at the same time, and under the same Emperor Manuel, being a Native of Tuscany, from whence he passed to Constantinople, and resided in the Court of that Emperor, who had a very great Respect for him. However he did not forbear to write a Treatise in vindication of the Latins against the Greeks, in which he proves, that the Holy Ghost proceeds both from the Father and the Son. It is divided into three Books, and dedicated to Pope Alexander III. He is also the Author of another Piece, concerning the State of the Soul separated from the Body, in which he treats of the Original and Nature of the Soul; of its Union with the Body, and Separation from it, of its Sentiments and Functions in the future State; of the Resurrection of the Body; and of the Day of Judgment. These Works were printed at Basil A. D. 1543. and are also contain'd in the Bibliotheca Patrum.

Nicephorus Bryennius.

Nicephorus Bryennius, a Macedonian, the Grandson of that Nicephorus, whose Eyes the Emperor Nicephorus Botaniata caus'd to be put out, for aspiring to the Empire, and the Son-in-Law of Alexis Comnenus, had the greatest share in the Administration of State Affairs under that Emperor. He improv'd his Skill in Politicks by an assiduous Application to the Study of the Liberal Sciences, and has left us a Byzantine History from the Year 1057. to 1081. which was printed in Greek with Father Poussin's Version and Notes at Paris A. D. 1661. and with those of M. du Cange at the End of Cinnamus, in the Volume of the Byzantine History set forth in 1670.

Anna Comnena.

In the same Place is likewise to be found the Alexias of Anna Comnena, the Wife of Nicephorus, and the Daughter of the said Emperor Alexis Comnenus; she relates therein the History of her Father's Reign, from the Year 1069 to 1118. All learned Men generally give great Encomiums of this Work, by reason of its Elegancy, and extol the Genius and Learning of that Princess. The Alexias is divided into fifteen Books; the eight first of these were published in Greek with Hæschelius's Version and Notes at Augsburg A. D. 1610. and the entire Work was afterwards printed with the Translation and Notes of the same Author at Paris in 1651. This last Edition was follow'd with that of M. du Cange, who likewise illustrated it with excellent Annotations.

Joannes Zonaras, Secretary of State at Constantinople.

At the same time liv'd Joannes Zonaras, Secretary of State to the Emperor Alexis Comnenus, who having lost his Wife and Children embraced the Monastick Life, and to mitigate his Grief apply'd himself to study, and to the compiling of Books; insomuch that we are indebted to his learned Lucubrations for a great number of very useful Works, viz.

His Annals, or a compendious History from the Creation of the World to the Death of Alexis Comnenus, which happen'd A. D. 1118. This Work was taken out of divers Authors, by way of Extracts, and divided into three Tomes. It was printed in Greek with Wolfius's Latin Version at Basil A. D. 1557. and afterwards M. du Cange set forth a new Edition at the Louvre in 1686. which he divided into eighteen Books.

Commentaries on the Canons of the Apostles, as also on those of the Councils, and of the Canonical Epistles of the Greek Fathers; which were printed in Greek and Latin at Paris A. D. 1618. and 1622. and in Dr. Beverege's Collection at Oxford in 1672.

A Discourse of Impurity, inserted in the fifth Book of the Jus Græco-Romanum.

A Canon of the Virgin Mary, or a kind of Hymn, containing certain Collects, or short Prayers, made to the blessed Virgin against all Hereticks. Some part of this Work was published in Latin in the Bibliotheca Patrum, and was afterwards set forth entire in Greek and Latin, in the third Tome of Cotelerius's Monuments of the Greek Church.

A Preface to St. Gregory Nazienzen's Poetical Pieces, printed at Venice A. D. 1563. and a Treatise to prove that a Widow cannot marry her Husband's Cousin German.

Fifty six Letters, that are in the Emperor's Library at Vienna, and some of which were published by Vulcanius in his Notes on the Treatise of St. Cyril of Alexandria, concerning the Anthropomorphites.

Of the Writers of Ecclesiastical History.

Besides these Works, Lambecius makes mention of an Explication of the Canons relating to the Festival of Easter, some Fragments of which were published by Gretser. Allatius likewise cites his Discourse on the Adoration of the Cross; the Life of St. Sylvester; a Discourse about the Presentation of Jesus Christ in the Temple; and a Panegyrick on Sophronius Patriarch of Jerusalem. Pontanus makes mention of some of his Poems on the Procession of the Holy Ghost; and lastly, Henry Stephen had a Lexicon suppos'd to be written by the same Zonaras.

Joannes Phocas, a Greek Monk.

Joannes Phocas, a Native of Crete, after having serv'd in the Wars under the Emperor Manuel Comnenus, embraced the Monastick Life, and made a Journey to the Holy Land, A. D. 1185. Upon his return, he wrote a Relation of what he had seen and heard, which was published by Allatius, in his Collection of Miscellaneous Works, and bears the Title of, A brief Description of the Places from Antioch to Jerusalem, and those of Syria and Phœnicia.

Neophytus, a Recluse.

Neophytus, a Greek Priest, and Recluse Monk, flourished A. D. 1190. M. Cotelerius set forth a Piece written by this Monk, containing a Relation of the Calamities that befel the Island of Cyprus, when taken by the English A. D. 1191.

John, Bishop of Lydda.

John Bishop of Lydda, flourished in the Year 1194. and M. Baluzius has published a Letter by this Author to Michael chosen Patriarch of Jerusalem.

George Xiphylin, Patriarch of Constantinople.

George Xiphylin, elected Patriarch of Constantinople in the Year 1193. besides an Ordinance about the Jurisdiction of Territories, which is extant in the Collection of the Greek and Roman Laws; two Synodical Statutes, concerning the Right of consecrating Churches by setting up Crosses in them; of which Custom Allatius makes mention of the Treatise of the George's, and of their Writings. This Author died A. D. 1199.

Demetrius Tornicius.

Demetrius Tornicius wrote in the Year 1193. under the Name of the Emperor Isaac, a Treatise of the Procession of the Holy Ghost, which is extant in the French King's Library. Allatius has likewise produc'd the Beginning of it, in his Book call'd Concordia Ecclesiæ Orientalis ac Occidentalis.

Lupus Protospatus.

Lupus Protospatus, Captain of the Eastern Emperor's Life-Guards, and a Native of Apulia, compos'd a Chronicle of Occurrences in the Kingdom of Naples, from the Year 860. to 1102. This History was published by Antonio Caraccioli, a Theatin Monk, who caus'd it to be printed at Naples in 1626. with a Continuation to the Year 1519.

Michael Anchialus, Patriarch of Constantinople.

Michael Anchialus, who was promoted to the Patriarchal See of Constantinople in the Year 1167. and honour'd by Balsamon, with the Title of most excellent of the Sages, compil'd certain Synodical Statutes, prohibiting Clergymen to take upon them any secular Employments, or to ordain Clerks in another Diocess, &c. which are contain'd in the Collection of the Roman Laws, L. 3. p. 227. He also wrote an Account of the Conference he had with the Emperor Manuel Comnenus, when the Pope's Legates came to Constantinople to negotiate an Union between the two Churches; some Fragments of which are produced by Allatius.

Theodorus Balsamon, Patriarch of Antioch.

Theodorus Balsamon, Chancellor and Library-keeper of the Church of Constantinople, and Provost of that of Blachern, was nominated Patriarch of Antioch; but in regard that that City was taken up by the Latins, he was never able to get himself actually install'd, and was also flatter'd by the means of the Emperor Isaac Comnenus, with the vain Hopes of being advanced to the Patriarchal See of Constantinople. He flourished from the Year 1180. to 1203. and during that time compos'd divers excellent and very useful Books, relating to the Canon Law of the Eastern Countries: The chief of which are his Commentaries on the Apostolical Canons; the General and Particular Councils; and the Canonical Letters of the Greek Fathers. He undertook this Work by the special Order of the Emperor Manuel Comnenus, and of Michael Anchialus Patriarch of Constantinople, and compleated it under the Patriarch George Xiphylin, to whom he dedicated it. It was printed in Greek and Latin at Paris A. D. 1620. and in Dr. Beverege's Pandects of Canons, printed at Oxford in 1672.

Balsamon in like manner wrote a Commentary on Photius's Nomo-canon, and a Collection of Ecclesiastical Constitutions, printed in the second Tome of the Bibliotheca Juris Canonici by Justellus; as also Answers to divers Questions relating to the Canon Law, particularly, of the Erection of Bishopricks into Metropolitan Sees; of such Persons as are chosen Bishops of the Eastern Churches; of the Right of the Patriarchs over the Monasteries; of Festivals, &c. These last Works are to be found with an

Answer

Of the Writers of Ecclesiastical History.

Answer to certain Questions propos'd by Mark Patriarch of Alexandria, and Resolutions to several others in the second, fifth, and seventh Book of Lewenclavius's Collection of the Greek and Roman Laws. M. Cotelerius has likewise furnished us with two Letters of this Author, viz. One written to the People of Antioch, about the Fasts they ought to observe; and the other to Theodosius, Superior of Papicius's Monasteries, concerning the Custom of Shaving, Admitting, and Investing with the Habit, such Persons as present themselves to embrace the Monastick Life, a little while after their Appearance, without obliging them to submit to a Probation of three Years. The first of these Letters is inserted in the End of the second Tome of the Monuments of the Greek Church; and the second, in the third Tome of the same Work. Balsamon without doubt is the most able Canonist that appear'd among the Greeks in these later Times.

Of the Writers of Ecclesiastical History.

Joannes Camaterus, Chartophylax, and afterward Patriarch of Constantinople, in the End of this Century, wrote in the Year 1199. a Letter to Pope Innocent, in which he declares that he cannot but admire that the Church of Rome shou'd assume the Title of the Catholick or Universal Church. There is also in the Collection call'd Jus Græco-Romanum, a Statute of this Patriarch about the Marriages of Cousin Germans: He died A. D. 1206.

CHAP. XV.

Of the Original of Scholastical Divinity, and of the first Divines of that Faculty who flourished in the Twelfth Century.

Of the Original of Scholastical Divinity.

THE Manner of treating of the Christian Religion, and of its Mysteries, has not been always uniform in the several Ages of the Church; but has been chang'd at several times, according to the various Occasions, or the different Inclinations of Men. The Apostles contented themselves only to teach with much Simplicity, the Doctrine they receiv'd from Jesus Christ; to propose it to Believers as the Object of their Faith; and to render it credible by the Means of Authority, by the Testimony of the Prophets, by our Saviour's Resurrection, and by Miracles. They never observ'd the difficult Points that might be form'd from the sacred Mysteries; neither did they take any Pains to make a thorough search into them, nor to discover all the Consequences arising from them, much less to explain them according to the Principles of Philosophy and human Reason. Neither were the holy Fathers, nor Ecclesiastical Writers, who liv'd in the first Ages of the Church, more careful to insist on the Explication of these Mysteries; nor did they make use of Philosophy, but only to extirpate the Errors of the Pagans, relating to their Gods, Idols, and false Worship, which might be easily confuted by the Light of Reason, and the Authority of the Philosophers. As for the Jews, and primitive Hereticks, they only alledg'd to convince them, the Authority of the holy Scriptures, and of Tradition, and the general Belief of all the Churches in the World; and in the Disputes they had with them, they never undertook to give particular Reasons for the several Mysteries, but only to prove, that they ought to be believ'd. It is true indeed, that in Process of time, the Heresies gave occasion more thoroughly to examine the Doctrines, and to fix the Terms that ought to be us'd in explaining them, and to draw Consequences from the Articles of Faith which were formally reveal'd; but the Fathers enter'd upon the Discussion of those Points, being only incited by a kind of Necessity: Neither were they so bold as to start a great number of new Questions relating to the Mysteries, nor to resolve them according to Philosophical Principles. Upon the whole, as they did not commit to Writing any Speculations about Doctrinal Points, but only with respect to the Heretical Opinions; so neither did they compose any particular Theological Treatise concerning the Doctrines of the Christian Religion, of set Purpose, but they treated of them whenever there was occasion to refute some new Heresy.

Origen was the first who undertook to compile as it were a Body of Divinity, in his Work call'd The Principles: But this new Undertaking did not at all prove successful, insomuch that the Author relying too much upon his own Knowledge, and being desirous to accommodate the Doctrines of Christianity to the Maxims of Plato's Philosophy, had the Misfortune to fall into many Errors, which have sullied his Memory. But such Inconveniences did not happen to those Divines, who contented themselves only to teach with the Simplicity of Catechists, the principal Mysteries of our Religion contain'd in the Apostles Creed, and to prove them by Passages taken out of the Holy Scriptures. In the Ages following the great Heresies of the Arians, Nestorians, Eutychians, &c. the reverend Fathers were oblig'd to treat at large of the Mysteries of the Trinity, and of the Incarnation; but the Holy Scriptures, and Tradition, were the only Principles on which they grounded their Proofs, and they only made use of Argumentations to discover the Sense of the Passages of Scripture, and of the ancient Fathers. The same thing was done with respect to other Heresies; and we do not find any other Arguments alledg'd to refute them, nor any other Rules made use of in the Councils to condemn them: But by little and little an over-weaning Curiosity induced Men to start divers new Questions relating to Theological Matters, particularly the Mysteries and other difficult Points of the Christian Religion. Indeed at first the Authority of Holy Scriptures, and of Tradition, was only brought to decide them, but afterwards Philosophy was also call'd in to their Assistance, more especially the Platonick, that was then most in vogue, and which seem'd most conformable to the Rules of Christianity. The Author of the Works ascrib'd to St. Dionysius the Areopagite, who wrote in the End of the fifth Century, follow'd this Method, and treated in his Books of the Divine Attributes, and Hierarchy, of divers Theological Questions, according to the Principles of the Platonick Philosophers.

Of the Original of Scholastical Divinity.

Some time after, Boethius, a Man well versed in Aristotle's Philosophy, made use of his Maxims to explain the Mysteries of the Trinity, and of the Incarnation; which engag'd him in Debates about some very subtle and intricate Questions. But St. Joannes Damascenus is the first who undertook methodically to discuss all sorts of Theological Questions, and to reduce them into an entire Body. In the Ninth Century, Joannes Scotus Erigena apply'd Aristotle's Method and Principles to the Resolution of several Questions relating to Points of Divinity; but his subtle Notions having led him into divers Errors; his Doctrine and Method were rejected by the Divines of his Time. The Study of the most necessary and most obvious Points being neglected in the Tenth Century, it is not to be admir'd, that no Application was made to those abstruse and difficult Questions; so that Aristotle's Philosophy was not begun to be taught in the publick Schools, according to the Method of the Arabians, till the Beginning of the Eleventh Century; neither was there any use of it made at first, in Theological Matters: But in process of time, Men, whose Heads were fill'd with those Notions, insensibly introduced them into Divinity, and apply'd them not only to illustrate and decide ordinary Questions, but to form a great number of new ones, which were never heard of before. John the Sophister, Roscelinus and St. Anselm, were the first who put this Method in practice; and after them Abaelardus, Gillebert de la Porree and many others, brought it into vogue, and made publick Lectures on that Subject. Otho of Frisinghen introduced it into Germany, and within a little while after, it took place almost throughout all Christendom.

But forasmuch as it is difficult not to go astray in following a new Tract, some of the first Authors of this manner of handling Theological Points, particularly Roscelinus, Abaelardus, Gillebert de la Porree, as also Amaury or Amalaricus, and many others, in the Beginning of the following Century, fell into divers Errors; or at least expressed themselves in such a manner as was condemn'd by those Persons, who adher'd to the Sentiments and Method of Discourse us'd by the Ancient Fathers. There also happen'd another Inconvenience, which was, that the different Opinions of these Authors, about the most part of those Questions, gave occasion to many Contests and Disputes among the Divines; and in regard that the number of the Questions encreased daily, and every one to maintain his Opinions had recourse to the most subtle Topicks of the Aristotelean Logick and Metaphysick; the Disputes were almost innumerable, and became so full of Obscurities, intricacies, and Evasions, that only those who who were well verſed in that Art, were able to comprehend any thing, and thus it was impoſſible to come to any Determination. Beſides the uncouth Manner of handling the ſeveral Subjects, and the barbarous Terms that were us'd, render'd this kind of Study much more diſagreeable.

Of the Original of Scholaſtical Divinity.

To prevent theſe Inconveniences, Peter Lombard, Biſhop of Paris, undertook to make a Collection of the Paſſages of the Fathers, and chiefly of St. Hilary, St. Ambroſe, St. Jerome, and St. Auguſtine, on the principal Queſtions that were then in debate among the Schoolmen; imagining by that means to put an end to their Diſputes, and to form ſuch Deciſions, as the Authority of thoſe Perſons, on whoſe Teſtimonies they were grounded, might render venerable, and might even cauſe them to be receiv'd with common Conſent. This Collection was call'd, The Book of the Sentences, (a Title then uſually impos'd on Theological Works) and being preferr'd before all others, was receiv'd with ſo general Approbation, that in a little time, it became the only Model of Scholaſtical Divinity that was publickly us'd in the Schools; inſomuch that the Author of it was call'd, by way of Excellency, The Maſter of the Sentences: But the Doctors of the Faculty, not contenting themſelves with the Simplicity of this Work, made voluminous Commentaries on the Text, in which they renewed their Conteſts; reviv'd the ſame Queſtions; and again intermixed, with Theological Matters, the Principles of Philoſophy, and the Maxims of Ariſtotle, which were never us'd by the Maſter of the Sentences: Nay, ſome proceeded ſo far, as to find fault with his Deciſions, although they were expreſſed in the very Words of the Fathers. Thus Pope Alexander III. cenſur'd one of his Expreſſions; the Abbot Joachim wrote a Book againſt him; and the Faculty of Paris drew up a Catalogue of Articles, in which the Maſter of the Sentences was not uſually follow'd. However, he may be eſteem'd as the chief of all the School Divines; for although in his Work he has made uſe of a Method quite different from the others, as to the Manner of diſcuſſing the Theological Queſtions, yet his Book has always ſerv'd as their Model or Groundwork, and apparently they have done nothing elſe but commented upon it. Upon which account we are oblig'd to enlarge ſomewhat more on the Life, and perſonal Endowments, of Peter Lombard, as alſo on the Contents of his Work.

He was born in a Village near Novaria in Lombardy, from whence his Sirname was taken, and perform'd part of his Studies at Bononia, where there was at that time a famous Univerſity, more eſpecially for the Study of the Civil Law; but in regard that thoſe of France were much more noted, with reſpect to the Faculty of Divinity, he took a Reſolution to go thither, having obtain'd a Letter of Recommendation from the Biſhop of Lucca to St. Bernard, in which he entreated him to take a particular Care of Peter Lombard's Education, whilſt he apply'd himſelf to ſtudy in France. St. Bernard provided all things neceſſary for his Subſiſtence, as long as he reſided at Rheims; and upon his Departure for Paris, recommended him to Gildin Abbot of St. Victor, to the end that he might maintain him Gratis. Peter, in a little time, acquir'd a great deal of Reputation, and was nominated Profeſſor of Divinity in the Univerſity of Paris, of which he is alſo ſtyl'd Preſident by the contemporary Writers. He follow'd this Employment with ſo good Succeſs, that the Biſhoprick of Paris being vacant in 1150. Philip Archdeacon of Paris, the Son of King Lewis the Groſs, who was choſen Biſhop of that City by the Chapter, reſign'd his Place to him, and condeſcended ſo far as to permit a Stranger of an obſcure Parentage, and of as mean Fortunes, to be preferr'd before him, by reaſon of his extraordinary Learning; although he was the Son and Brother of a King: A ſingular and rare Example of Humility! However, Peter Lombard did not long enjoy this Dignity; for he died July 20. A. D. 1164. and was buried in St. Marcel's Church, where the Licentiates of the Faculty of Paris are oblig'd every Year to compoſe a Form of Divine Service in honour of his Memory.

This Author wrote, beſides the Book of Sentences, certain Commentaries on the Pſalms, and on St. Paul's Epiſtles, which in effect are almoſt nothing elſe but Extracts out of the Commentaries of St. Hilary, St. Ambroſe, St. Auguſtine, Caſſiodorus, and Remegius, or Remy of Auxerre. The Commentary on the Book of Pſalms was printed at Paris A. D. 1541. and that on St. Paul's Epiſtles at the ſame Place in 1535.

His Collection of the Sentences is divided into four Books, and every Book into ſeveral Sections; the Diviſion of the whole Work being grounded on St. Auguſtine's Axiom, That Knowledge has two Objects, viz. Things, and Signs; that Things are diviſible into thoſe that may be enjoy'd, and thoſe which are only to be us'd; that is to ſay, God and the Creatures. In the firſt Book he treats of thoſe Things that ought to be enjoy'd, particularly the Three Perſons of the Holy Trinity, and the Divine Attributes. In the ſecond, he ſpecifies thoſe Things the uſe of which is only allow'd, namely, the Creatures; diſcourſing of the Creation of the World; of the Fall of the Angels, and that of Man; of Grace and Free-will; of original and actual Sins, &c. In the third, he gives an Account of the Myſtery of the Incarnation of Jeſus Chriſt, by Vertue of which Mankind is delivered from Sin; of Faith, Charity, and the other practical Vertues; and of the Commandments of God, which muſt be obſerv'd for the attaining to Salvation. The fourth and laſt Book, contains Matters relating to the Signs or Sacraments of the Church, except the ſeven laſt Sections, in which he treats of the Reſurrection; of the laſt Judgment; and of the future State.

Of the Original of Scholaſtical Divinity.

In the firſt Section of the firſt Book, he examines what are the Things which ought to be enjoy'd, and what are thoſe that are only to be us'd, as alſo, what it is to enjoy and uſe Things; who are the Perſons capable of enjoying and uſing them, and by what means both the one and the other is done. Then he proceeds to reſolve theſe Queſtions according to the Maxims of St. Auguſtine, who maintains that we ought to enjoy God alone; that is to ſay, we ought only to adhere to him as our ultimate End, and to love him upon his own Account; and that we ought not to ſet our Affections on the Creatures; that is to ſay, not to love them but for God's ſake, and not to adhere to them any farther than it ſeems good to the Will of God.

He proves, in the ſecond Section, the Myſtery of the Holy Trinity, by Paſſages taken out of the Old and New Teſtament.

In the third, he explains after what manner God may be known by the Creatures, and brings Compariſons taken from the Creatures, that may ſerve to give ſome Idea of the Myſtery of the Trinity; and inſiſts more particularly on that of the Soul conſiſting of divers Faculties, which are nothing but the Soul it ſelf. He obſerves, at the ſame time, that this Compariſon, is not alike in all Points, and ſhews the Difference.

In the fourth, he diſcuſſes this Queſtion, Whether it may be ſaid, that God the Father is begotten himſelf; or whether it ought to be ſaid, that he begot another God? And concludes with St. Auguſtine, that it ought to be affirm'd, that God the Father begot another Perſon, who is God, and the ſame with him in Subſtance.

In the fifth, he examines another Queſtion about the Generation of the Word; viz. Whether it may be ſaid, that the Father begot the Divine Eſſence, or the Divine Eſſence begot the Son; or whether one Eſſence produced another; or whether the Eſſence be neither produced, nor producing? He relates divers Paſſages of the Fathers concerning theſe Queſtions, and maintains, that it cannot be ſaid, that God the Father produced the Divine Eſſence; or that the Eſſence produced the Son; or that the Eſſence produced another Eſſence: But that it muſt be expreſſed, that the Father produced the Son and the Holy Ghoſt, who are two Perſons of the ſame Subſtance, and of the ſame Eſſence with the Father.

In the ſixth, he enquires, Whether the Father begot the Son, Volens aut Nolens; (as it is uſually termed,) that is to ſay, by Neceſſity, or by his own Will? He replies with St. Auguſtine, that the Son of God was begotten according to Nature, and not according to Will; and that although God was willing to beget him, yet his Generation is not an Effect of that Will.

In the ſeventh, he propoſes another more ſubtle Queſtion; viz. Whether the Father were endu'd with a particular Will and Power to beget his Son? If an Anſwer be made affirmatively, it then follows, that the Father has a Power and Will which the Son has not, in regard that the latter is neither able nor willing to beget. He reſolves this Difficulty by ſaying, that Generation is not an Effect either of the Will, or of the Power, but of Nature, and that is not a Thing. Afterwards he explains in what Senſe St. Auguſtine ſaid, that the Son had Power to beget; that is to ſay, that it is not by reaſon of Impotency that he did not beget.

In the eighth Section, he treats of the Nature, Immutability, and Purity of God: He affirms, that he is improperly call'd a Subſtance, and that there is nothing in God, that is not God himſelf.

In the ninth, he diſcourſes of the Generation of the Son from Eternity.

In the tenth, he begins to treat of the Holy Ghoſt, and ſhews in what Senſe he is call'd Charity.

In the eleventh, he proves that he proceeds from the Father and the Son.

In

In the twelfth, he explains in what Senſe it may be ſaid, that the Holy Ghoſt proceeds chiefly from the Father, viz. in regard that the Son, from whom he proceeds, as well as from the Father, receives his Nature from the Father. He adds, that in this Senſe it is ſaid, that the Father ſends the Holy Ghoſt by his Son.

In the thirteenth, he ſhews, that human Underſtanding cannot comprehend the Reaſon of the Difference between the Generation of the Word, and the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt; and declares in what Senſe the Holy Ghoſt may be ſaid to be Ingenitus.

In the fourteenth, he treats particularly of the temporal Proceſſion, or Communication of the Holy Ghoſt; and maintains, that it is really imparted to Men; and that Men, though never ſo holy, cannot have Power to confer it, but only the Father and the Son.

He adds, in the fifteenth Section, that the Holy Ghoſt likewiſe communicates himſelf, and debates on that Occaſion divers Queſtions relating to the Miſſion of the Son.

The ſame Subject is continu'd in the ſixteenth Section.

In the ſeventeenth, the Author repreſents ſeveral Queſtions about the Miſſion of the Holy Ghoſt.

He explains, in the eighteenth, in what Senſe the Holy Ghoſt is call'd a Gift, and how he is given to us.

In the nineteenth, he treats of the Equality of the Three Perſons in the Holy Trinity, and of their Union in the ſame Eſſence.

In the twentieth, he proves the Equality of Power among the Three Divine Perſons.

In the twenty firſt, he ſhews in what Senſe it may be ſaid, that the Father is God alone, the Son God alone, and the Holy Ghoſt God alone.

In the twenty ſecond, he diſtinguiſhes the Terms that agree with the Three Perſons in common, and do not agree with any in particular, as that of the Trinity: Thoſe that agree with every one of the Three Perſons, which expreſs the abſolute Attributes, or relative to the Creatures; as the being Infinite, Almighty, Creator, &c. And laſtly, thoſe that agree with one Perſon, but not with another; as to be the Father, to be Begotten, to be Given, &c.

He ſhews, in the twenty third, that all the Terms relating to the Subſtance cannot be ſaid in the Plural Number, of the Three Perſons of the Trinity, but only in the Singular. Thus it is not ſaid, The Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt, are Almighty; although every one of theſe Perſons is declar'd to be Almighty. He excepts the word Perſon, which cannot be ſaid of the Three Divine Perſons in the Singular Number, but only in the Plural; for it cannot be ſaid, that the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt, are one Perſon, but that they are Three Perſons, or according to the Greeks, Three Hypoſtaſes.

In the twenty fourth, and in the twenty fifth, he examines divers Queſtions about the Terms of Unity, Trinity, and the Diſtinction in ſpeaking of the Trinity.

In the twenty ſixth, twenty ſeventh, twenty eighth, and twenty ninth, he diſcourſes of the Relative Properties of the Three Divine Perſons among themſelves.

In the thirtieth, he treates of the Relative Properties of God, with reſpect to Men; as to be a Creator, &c. and ſhews, that they do not imply any Change or Alteration in the Divine Nature.

In the thirty firſt, he ſhews, that the Equality and Likeneſs of the Three Perſons are not grounded on their Relative Properties, but on the Identity of their Nature.

In the thirty ſecond, he lays down two principal Difficulties; viz. Whether the Father and the Son mutually love one another by the Holy Ghoſt; or whether the Father be wiſe by the Wiſdom he has begotten? He acknowledges theſe Queſtions to be difficult; yet declares, that there is in God a certain Love, and a certain Wiſdom, which are common to the Three Perſons, although the Son be a Wiſdom which is not the Father, nor the Holy Ghoſt; and the Holy Ghoſt a Love, which is neither the Father, nor the Son; nevertheleſs without imagining Two Wiſdoms, or Two Loves, to be in the Trinity.

In the thirty third, he propoſes this Queſtion, viz. Whether the Properties of the Perſons are to be diſtinguiſhed from the Perſons themſelves, and from the Divine Eſſence?

He maintains the Negative, and condemns the contrary Opinion as Heretical.

He oppoſes the ſame Opinion, in the thirty fourth Section, and ſhews, that the Perſons are not diſtinguiſhed from their Nature.

In the thirty fifth, he begins to treat of the Attributes of God, which deſerve a particular Conſideration, ſuch are his Omniſcience, Omnipotency, Providence, Will, Predeſtination, &c. The Author ſhews, in this Section, that theſe Attributes are relative to the Creatures.

In the thirty ſixth, he makes it appear, that all Things are expos'd to God's Omniſcience, as well Good as Evil; although Evil be not an Effect that proceeds from him.

In the thirty ſeventh, he treats of the manner of God's being every where, by his Preſence, Power, and Eſſence; diſcourſing by the way, of the manner how Spiritual Creatures are in a Place, and how they paſs from one Place to another.

Afterwards, returning to the Queſtion about the Fore-knowledge of God, he ſays, that it is not the Cauſe of Things, if it be taken for a ſimple Knowledge; but if his Will, Decree, and Inclination, be comprehended under that Name, in that Senſe it is the Cauſe of all Things. That upon this account God cannot be the Author of Evil, becauſe he does not require, nor ordain it, although he knows it. In the End of this Section, is produced the famous Diſtinction of the Compoſit, and divided Senſation, to explain how God's Fore-knowledge cannot be erroneous, although the Things might happen otherwiſe. It is impoſſible that that ſhould not happen which God has foreſeen; that is to ſay, that it cannot ſo fall out that God ſhould foreſee it, and yet that it ſhould not happen; but perhaps it might not happen, and then God ſhould not have foreſeen it.

In the thirty ninth, he proves, that the Omniſcience of God has always been the ſame, and that it cannot be diminiſhed or augmented.

In the fortieth, he begins to treat of Predeſtination, and diſtinguiſhes it from Fore-knowledge, in regard that the former has reſpect only to the Good which God ought to do. Then he again makes uſe of the Diſtinction of Compoſit, and Divided Senſation; to explain in what Senſe it may be ſaid, that none of the predeſtinated Perſons can be damned, nor any of the Reprobate ſav'd. He makes Predeſtination to conſiſt in an eternal Decree of God, by which he elected thoſe whom he thought fit, and prepar'd Graces for them; and Reprobation in the Fore-knowledge of their Sins, by Virtue of which he prepar'd everlaſting Puniſhments to be inflicted on them.

In the forty firſt Section, he treats of the Cauſes of Predeſtination, and ſhews that it is purely Gratuitous; and that God has not choſen the Elect, becauſe he knew them to be Righteous, but that he call'd them to be ſo by his Grace.

From Predeſtination he paſſes to Omnipotency; and explains, in the forty ſecond Section, in what Senſe God is Almighty.

He proves, in the forty third, that God can do an infinite number of Things, which he does not, and confutes the Arguments and Allegations brought by ſome Perſons to evince the contrary.

In the forty fourth, he ſhews, that God can abſolutely make Things more perfect than he has done, if reſpect only be had to the Quality of the Creature; but cannot do ſo, if the Wiſdom and Intention of the Creator be taken into conſideration. He adds, that God can always do what he has done, becauſe he always has the ſame Power; although it happens that he cannot do in particular what he has already done.

He treats at large, in the forty fifth Section, of the Will of God, of its Nature and Effects, and of its different Kinds.

In the forty ſixth, he explains in what Senſe the Will of God cannot be ineffectual; and in what Senſe he is willing, or unwilling, that Evil be committed: He has no Inclination to Evil, yet he is not abſolutely willing to prevent it.

He proves, in the two following Sections, that the Will of God is always efficacious; that whatever he thinks fit inevitably comes to paſs, and nothing happens but by his Will: That although he does not approve all the Inclinations of Men, nevertheleſs he willingly admits the Effects of their depraved Will, but does not approve the Act of it.

In the firſt Section of the ſecond Book, the Author confutes the Error of thoſe Hereticks, who admitted two Principal or Sovereign Beings; ſhews that God created Angels and Men, and diſcourſes in general of their Nature, and of the End for which they were created.

In the ſecond, he examines when, and in what Place, the Angels were created.

In the third, he treats of the State in which they were created; and maintains, that they were created in Uprightneſs, and that their Fall happen'd but ſome Moments after their Creation.

He adds, in the following Section, that they did not enjoy perfect Bleſſedneſs, till they were confirm'd in Good.

In the fifth, ſixth, and ſeventh Sections, he debates divers Queſtions about the Fall of the Wicked, and the Confirmation of the Juſt.

In the eighth, he follows St. Auguſtine's Opinion, who believ'd that the Angels have Aerial Bodies; and upon occaſion of that Queſtion, he enquires after what Manner God was wont to appear to Men, and in what Senſe it is ſaid, that the Devils enter into Humane Bodies.

Of the Original of Scholaſtical Divinity.

In the ninth, he treats of the different Orders of the Angels.

In the tenth, he examines whether any Angels of different Orders were ſent, and gives an Account of the different Opinions of the Fathers, with reſpect to theſe Queſtions.

He proves, in the eleventh, that every one of the Elect has a Guardian Angel, yet owns that the ſame Angel may ſerve as a Guardian to ſeveral Perſons; and afterwards proceeds to examine in what particulars the Knowledge of the Angels may be augmented.

In the following Sections, to the ſixteenth, he explains the Work of the Creation.

In the ſixteenth and ſeventeenth, he treats of the Creation of Man; and enquires in what his Likeneſs to God conſiſts, when his Soul was created, and in what Place he was ſet.

He diſcourſes, in the eighteenth, of the Formation of Woman; and endeavours to explain, why ſhe was taken out of the Man's Rib.

In the nineteenth he treats of the State of Immortality, in which the firſt Man was created.

In the twentieth, he debates concerning the manner how Men were to be brought into the World, and how they were to be nouriſh'd, in caſe the State of Innocence had contin'd.

In the twenty firſt, he gives an Account after what manner the Devil tempted Man.

He diſcuſſes, in the twenty ſecond, divers Queſtions relating to the Quality and Circumſtances of the Sin of Adam and Eve.

In the twenty third, he reſolves this difficult Point, Why God permitted Man to be tempted, knowing that he was to fall? And afterwards treats of the Knowledge with which the firſt Man was endu'd.

In the twenty fourth, he begins to diſcourſe concerning the Free Will, and Grace, inherent in the firſt Man; and treats in general, in the two following Sections, of the Freedom of Grace, according to St. Auguſtines Principles.

In the twenty ſeventh Section, he diſcourſes of Vertue and Merit, which are the Effects of Grace and Free Will.

In the twenty eighth, he confutes the Errors of the Pelagians, as alſo thoſe of the Manichees, and of Jovinian.

In the twenty ninth Section, he returns to the State of the firſt Man; and after having ſhewn, that Man even in the State of Innocency ſtood in need of operating and co-operating Grace. for the doing of Good, he debates certain Queſtions about the manner how he was expell'd Paradiſe, and concerning the Tree of Life which preſerv'd him from Death.

In the thirtieth, thirty firſt, thirty ſecond, and thirty third, he treats of Original Sin, and enquires in what it conſiſts; how it is transferr'd from Parents to their Children; after what manner it is remitted by Baptiſm; whether Children contract the Sins of their Parents, as Original Sin, &c.

In the thirty fourth and thirty fifth, he diſcourſes of the Nature of Actual Sin.

In the thirty ſixth, he ſhews, that there are Sins which are both the Cauſe, and the Puniſhment of Sin.

He makes it appear, in the thirty ſeventh, that God is the Author of the Actions, by which Sin is committed, and of the Puniſhments of Sin, although he is not the Author of Sin.

In the thirty eighth, he demonſtrates, that it is the End and Intention of the Will which renders the Action either Good or Bad; and that in order to its being Good, it muſt of neceſſity be terminated in God.

In the thirty ninth, he enquires into the Reaſon, Why, of all the natural Faculties, the Will only is ſuſceptible of Sin?

In the fourtieth, he continues to ſhew, that an Action to be denominated Good, ought to have a good End and Intention.

In the forty firſt, he produces divers Paſſages of St. Auguſtine, about the neceſſity of Faith, and of an upright Will, to avoid the committing of Sin; and ſhews, that the corrupt Will is the Cauſe of Sin.

He enquires in the forty ſecond, Whether the Will and the Action be two different Sins? And afterward explains the Diviſion of the ſeven Capital Sins; ſhewing, that they derive their Original from Pride and Concupiſcence.

In the forty third, he relates the Opinions of St. Ambroſe, and St. Auguſtine, concerning the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt.

Laſtly, he makes it appear, in the forty fourth Section, that the Power of committing Sin proceeds from God; and that the Power the Devil has to tempt us to Evil, ought to be reſiſted.

Of the Original of Scholaſtical Divinity.

The third Book begins with the Queſtions relating to the Myſtery of the Incarnation. In the firſt Section, the Author lays down the Reaſons, Why it was more expedient that the Son ſhould be Incarnate, rather than the Father, or the Holy Ghoſt; and diſcuſſes this Queſtion, Whether two Perſons were in like manner capable of being Incarnate.

In the ſecond Section, he treats of the Union of the Word, with the Body and the Soul.

In the third, he ſhews, that the Body taken by the Word was free from the corruption of Sin; that the Virgin Mary herſelf was then alſo free from Sin; and that in the very moment that the Humanity of Jeſus Chriſt was conceiv'd, the Word was united to it.

He enquires, in the fourth, Why the Incarnation is attributed to the Holy Ghoſt, rather than to the other Perſons of the Trinity; and in what ſenſe it is ſaid Jeſus Chriſt was conceiv'd and born of the Holy Ghoſt?

In the fifth Section, he treats of the Union of the Perſon of the Son with the Humane Nature; and ſhews, that the Word was not united to the Perſon, but to the Nature.

In the ſixth, he gives an Account of theſe Propoſitions; viz. God was made Man, God is Man; and produces three ſeveral Explications of them made by the Fathers.

The ſame matter is farther handled in the ſeventh Diſtinction.

In the eighth, he reſolves this Queſtion, Whether it may be ſaid, that the Divine Nature was born of the Virgin Mary? And diſcourſes of the two fold Nativity of Jeſus Chriſt.

In the ninth, he produces certain Paſſages of the Fathers, concerning the Adoration of the Body of Jeſus Chriſt.

In the tenth, he propoſes this Queſtion, viz. Whether Jeſus Chriſt, quatenus Man, be a Perſon or a Thing? He maintains the Negative, and afterwards proves that the Quality or Title of Adoptive Son cannot be appropriated to him.

In the eleventh, he aſſerts, that neither ought Jeſus Chriſt to be call'd a Creature, without adding quatenus Man.

In the twelfth, he diſcuſſes divers Queſtions; Whether it may be ſaid of Jeſus Chriſt as Man, that he always was, or that it was poſſible that he might not be God? He determines, that it cannot be ſaid of the Perſon of Jeſus Chriſt, but only of his Humane Nature.

In the thirteenth and fourteenth Sections, he treats of Knowledge, Grace, and the Power of Jeſus Chriſt, quatenus Man.

In the fifteenth and ſixteenth, he proves that Jeſus Chriſt took upon him the Infirmities of Humane Nature, Sin and Ignorance only excepted, and that he was capable of undergoing Sufferings.

In the ſeventeenth, he explains the two-fold Will of Jeſus Chriſt.

In the eighteenth, he diſcourſes of what Jeſus Chriſt merited for himſelf, and of what he merited for us.

In the nineteenth, he treats of Redemption.

In the twentieth, he enquires, Why Jeſus Chriſt redeem'd us by his Paſſion and Death? And whether he could not have done it by ſome other Means?

In the twenty firſt, he propoſes this Queſtion; viz. Whether the Word remain'd united to the Body of Jeſus Chriſt, as well as to his Soul, after his Death? And concludes in the affirmative.

In the twenty ſecond, he enquires, Whether it may be ſaid, that Jeſus Chriſt was Man during the time that his Body lay in the Sepulchre?

In the following Sections, he treats of Faith, Hope, and Charity.

In the thirty third, he diſcourſes of the four Cardinal Virtues.

In the thirty fourth, of the ſeven Gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, and chiefly of the Fear of God.

In the thirty fifth, he explains the difference between Wiſdom and Knowledge.

In the thirty ſixth, he treats of the Connexion of all the Virtues, and of the Relation they have to Charity.

The four laſt Sections of this Book, contain a compendious Explication of the Decalogue.

The Holy Sacraments are the principal Subject treated of in the laſt Book.

In the firſt Section, he gives a definition of the Sacraments; ſhews the Cauſes of their Inſtitution; obſerves the difference between thoſe of the Old and New Law; and treats in particular of Circumciſion, which he believes to have been ſo neceſſary for the Remiſſion of original Sin, that he affirms, that the Children of the Jews, who died with-without partaking of that Sacrament, were confing'd to Damnation.

In the second, after having nominated the seven Sacraments of the new Law, he discourses of the Baptism by St. John the Baptist.

In the third, he treats of the Baptism of Jesus Christ, and after having confirm'd St. Ambrose's Opinion, that Baptism might be absolutely administer'd in the Name of Jesus Christ, he enquires, When the Baptism of Jesus Christ was instituted, and under what Form the Apostles baptis'd Persons? As also, Why Water is us'd in the Administration of this Sacrament, and no other Liquor; and how many Immersions ought to be made in Baptizing?

In the fourth Section, he treats of the Effects of Baptism; shewing how some Persons receive the Sacrament, and the Grace of the Sacrament; and how others receive the Sacrament without the Grace, and the Grace without the Sacrament. He proves that Infants receive both; and adds, that they even receive actual Grace, which afterwards enables them to perform good Actions.

In the fifth, he makes it appear from St. Augustine's Principles, that Baptism administer'd by an unworthy Priest, is no less Holy than that which is perform'd by the Hands of a worthy one; because the effective Power of baptizing is inherent in Jesus Christ, which he does not communicate to the Ministers.

In the sixth Section he observes, that the Bishops, or Priests, have a Right to administer this Sacrament; although in case of necessity it may be done by Lay-men, and even by Women: And that it is valid by whomsoever it be adminstered, nay when perform'd by Hereticks, provided it be done in the Name of the Holy Trinity. He asserts, that an Infant cannot be baptis'd in the Mother's Belly, and afterwards handles several other Questions relating to the Form and Ceremonies of Baptism.

In the seventh Section, he treats of the Sacrament of Confirmation; and at first observes, that the Form of this Sacrament are the Words pronounc'd by the Priest, when he anoints the Forehead of the baptis'd Person with the Holy Chrism. The Author adds, that the Administration of this Sacrament was always reserv'd to the Bishops; that they alone are capable of administring it effectually in due Form; and that it cannot be reiterated

He begins, in the eighth Section, to discourse of the Sacrament of the Eucharist; and after having shewn some of the ancient Figures of this Sacrament, proceeds to treat of its Institution; of its Form, which he makes to consist in these Words, This is my Body, this is my Blood; and of the Things contain'd therein. He says, three Things are to be distinguish'd in the Eucharist; viz. the Sacrament consisting in the visible Species of the Bread and Wine; the Sacrament and the Thing, which is the proper Body, and the proper Blood of our Lord, contain'd under the Species; and the Thing, which is not the Sacrament, that is to say, the mystical Body of Jesus Christ, or the inward Grace.

In the ninth Section, he distinguishes two Manners of receiving the Body of Jesus Christ, viz. one Sacramental, which is common to the worthy, and to the unworthy Communicants; and the other Spiritual, which is peculiar only to the former.

In the tenth, he proves the real Presence, and the changing of the Bread and Wine into the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ, and refutes the Opinion of those, who believe the Eucharist to be only a Figure.

In the eleventh, he at first enquires of what Nature this Change is, and proves it to be Substantial, insomuch that the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ are under the Accidents, which before cover'd the Substance of the Bread and Wine, which is annihilated or return'd to the first Matter. He confutes those Persons who asserted, that the Substance of the Bread remain'd after the Consecration; and afterwards gives an Account, why the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ are administer'd to us under two different Kinds, and why Water is intermix'd with the Wine.

In the twelfth, he endeavours to explain divers Questions relating to the Eucharistical Species, and affirms, that the Accidents remain therein without the Subject; and that they only are broken and divided into many Parts. Afterwards he discourses of the Quality which is peculiar to this Sacrament, as also of its Institution and Effects.

In the thirteenth Section, he acknowledges, that unworthy Ministers may consecrate the Elements; but denies, that it can be done by excommunicated Persons, and declared Hereticks.

In the fourteenth, he begins to treat of Repentance; distinguishing the Vertue of Repentance from the Sacrament of Penance: He gives divers Definitions of Repentance, and shews the Necessity of it, as also that it may be often reiterated.

In the fifteenth, he proves that one cannot be truly penitent for one Sin, without actually repenting of all.

In the sixteenth, he distinguishes the three Parts of Repentance; viz. the Compunction of the Heart, the Confession of the Mouth, and the Satisfaction of Works; and discourses in particular of the Satisfaction that ought to be made for venial Sins.

He treats of Confession, in the seventeenth Section, and shews, that it is requisite to confess one's Sins to a Priest, in order to obtain the Remission of them.

In the eighteenth, he treats of the Sacerdotal Power, and of the Use of the Keys; and after having produced different Opinions relating to that matter, concludes, That God alone has the Power of absolutely Binding and Loosing the Sinner, by cleansing the Pollution of his Sin, and remitting the Penalty of eternal Damnation: That the Priests do indeed bind and loose, by declaring that such Persons are bound or loosed by God, and by imposing Penance, or by readmitting to the Communion those whom they have excommunicated.

In the nineteenth, he discourses of the Qualities requisite in Ministers, who are employ'd to bind and loose Sinners; nevertheless he acknowledges that unworthy Priests have the Power of the Keys as well as the worthy.

The twentieth Section contains the Opinions of the Fathers concerning the Repentance of dying Persons.

In the twenty first, he discourses of the Expiation of light Sins by the Pains of Purgatory; of the general Confession of venial Sins, and of the Penalties to be inflicted on Priests, who divulge matters related to them in Confession.

In the twenty second, he proposes this Question, viz. Whether Sins that have been once forgiven, return by the Commission of following Sins? And after having produced the Reasons on both sides, leaves the Question undecided.

In the twenty third Distinction, he treats of the Sacrament of Unction, which he believes to have been instituted by the Apostles; the Effect of it being the Remission of Sins, and the Comfort of the sick Person: He also proves that this Sacrament may be reiterated.

In the twenty fourth he treats of the Functions and Dignity of the seven Orders, and of the different Dignities among Bishops.

In the twenty fifth, he discourses of the validity of Ordinations made by Hereticks; and after having produced different Opinions, seems to approve that of those who affirm, that Persons who were ordain'd in the Church still retain the Power of ordaining, though they turn Hereticks: but deny that those whom they ordain have the same Power. Afterwards he treats of Simoniacal Ordinations, and of the Age requisite for admission into Orders.

In the twenty sixth, he shews the Antiquity of the Sacrament of Marriage.

In the twenty seventh, he enquires in what Marriage consists, and distinguishes a Promise of future Marriage, from Marriage contracted by the present Consent of the Parties.

In the twenty eighth, twenty ninth, and thirtieth, he gives a farther Account of the Conditions that ought to be annexed to such a Consent as is necessary for the Consummation of Marriage.

In the thirty first, he explains the Advantages of Marriage, which are Fidelity, the lawful Procreation of Children, and the Benefit of the Sacrament, and treats of the contrary Vices.

In the thirty second, he discourses of Matters relating to the Continency of married Persons at certain times.

In the thirty third, he relates divers Considerations of the Fathers, with respect to the Polygamy of the Patriarchs.

In the thirty fourth, he treats of the Impediments that render Persons uncapable of contracting Marriage, and which makes their Marriage void and of none effect.

In the thirty fifth, he shews that a Man may be divorced from his Wife upon the Account of Adultery, and that they may be afterwards reconcil'd. The Author adds, that he who has committed Adultery with a Woman may marry her, after her Husband's decease, provided he were not accessory to his Death, and did not promise his Wife to marry her in his Life-time.

In the thirty sixth Section, he treats of the Impediment that arises from the difference of Age, and Condition between the Parties who contract Marriage.

In the thirty seventh, he discourses of the Injunctions of Celibacy observ'd by Bishops, Priests, Deacons, and Subdeacons, and of Pope Calixtus's Ordinance, declaring such Marriages null.

In the thirty eighth, he treats of the Impediment of a Vow.

In the thirty ninth, of that of difference in Religion.

In the fortieth, forty first, and forty second, of the Degrees of Consanguinity and Affinity, as well Temporal as Spiritual.

The other Sections, contain divers Questions concerning the Resurrection; the State of the Elect, and of the Reprobates after their Death; Prayers for the Dead; the Invocation and Interceſſion of the Saints; the Circumſtances of the laſt Judgment: the ſeveral Degrees of Beatitude and Glory; and the State and Torments of the Damn'd, with which ends the fiftieth Section of the fourth Book, by the Maſter of the Sentences.

This Work was publiſh'd by John Aleaume, and printed at Paris A. D. 1565. and at Lyons in 1581. It was alſo reviſ'd by Antony de Monchy, and reprinted in the ſame City in 1618. and in other Places. The Author makes it his chief Buſineſs (as we have already hinted) to collect the Opinions of the Fathers concerning all the Queſtions diſcuſſed by him: He adds very little of his own, except ſometimes in reconciling certain Paſſages which ſeems to be contradictory; and when he cannot bring them to an Agreement, he uſually leaves the Queſtion undecided. He He avoids to meddle with Queſtions concerning which the Fathers have writ nothing, and ſcarce ever makes uſe of Philoſophical Terms and Arguments, much leſs of Ariſtotle's Authority, who is often cited by the other Schoolmen.

The Book of Sentences, by Robert Pullus, is not a Collection of Paſſages of the Fathers, as that of Peter Lombard, but a Theological Work, in which he himſelf reſolves certain Queſtions which were propos'd, either by by Ratiocination, or by Proofs taken out of Holy Scripture. This Author. ſirnamed Pullus, or Pullen or Pulley, being an Engliſh Man by Nation, paſſed over into France and flouriſh'd in the Schools of Paris. He return'd to England about the Year 1130. and there re-eſtabliſh'd the Univerſity of Oxford in 1133 He was made Archdeacon of Rocheſter, and although he enjoy'd that Benefice, yet forbore not to go back to Paris, where he reſided in Quality of Profeſſor of Divinity. However, his Metropolitan thought fit to recall him, and not being prevail'd with, even upon St. Bernard's Requeſt that he might ſtill remain at Paris, caus'd the Revenues of his Archdeaconry to be ſeiz'd on, to oblige him to return to England. Whereupon Pullus appeal'd to the See of Rome, and having much Intereſt in that Court, was not only vindicated againſt the Archbiſhop, but alſo invited to Rome by Pope Innocent II. and created Cardinal and Chancellor of the Church of Rome by Lucius II. in 1144. This Dignity was enjoy'd by him till the third or fifth Year of the Pontificate of Eugenius III. when he died A. D. 1150.

Cardinal Pullus's Book of Sentences is divided into eight Parts, in the firſt of which he treats of the Exiſtence of God, of the three Perſons of the Holy Trinity, and of the Divine Attributes.

In the ſecond, of the Creation of the World, of the Angels, of the Nature of Man, of the Origine of the Soul, of Adam's Fall, of the Corruption of humane Nature, and of Original Sin.

In the third, of the Law, of the Circumciſion, of the Law of Grace, and of the Incarnation of Jeſus Chriſt.

He continues his Diſcourſe concerning that Myſtery in the fourth Part; where he alſo treats of Faith, Hope, and Charity; of Purgatory; and of the State of Souls after their Separation from their Bodies.

In the fifth, he treats of the Reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt, of the Gift of Faith, of the Sacraments, of Baptiſm, of Confirmation, of the Remiſſion of Sins, of Charity, and of Sin.

In the ſixth Part, he diſcourſes of the Effects of Sin; of Concupiſcence; of Ignorance, and other Puniſhments of Sin; of the Temptations of the Devil; of the Aſſiſtance of good Angels, and their Functions; of Repentance; and of the Prieſt's Power of binding and looſing, and of the Uſe that they ought to make of it.

The ſame Subject is farther handled in the ſeventh Part, where he alſo treats of the Fruits of Repentance; of Church-Diſcipline; of Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Power; of the Diſtinction of Sacred Orders; of the Qualities of Miniſters; and of Marriage.

In the eighth Part, he treats of the Euchariſt; of the laſt Judgment, and of the State of the bleſſed and damned Spirits.

This Author is ſomewhat obſcure, but argues with a great deal of Judgment: His Style is not altogether rude, neither is it perplexed with Scholaſtical Terms and Diſtinctions: He does not ſtart any ſubtle and Metaphyſical Queſtions, but only ſuch as relate to Points of Doctrine, Diſcipline or Morality; neither does he reſolve them by Principles of Logick or Philoſophy, but by Paſſages of the Holy Scripture, and according to the received Doctrine of the Church, and of the Fathers, which he makes uſe of as a firm Baſis or Ground-work. He ſometimes produces certain Particular Opinions, which nevertheleſs are common to him with many of theſe ancient Schoolmen; and he is one of thoſe who have maintain'd the feweſt erroneous or dangerous Opinions. In the firſt Part he ſays, that the Father and the Son are Two Principles of the Holy Ghoſt; but this Expreſſion may be taken in a good Senſe, and he never aſſerted, that the Father and the Son were Two Principles or Eſſences of a diſtinct Subſtance; but Two Perſons, who produced a Third by an Action, which, although really the ſame, may be virtually diſtinct. He ſhews, in diſcourſing of the Sacrament of Penance, that it does not take away the Guilt of Sin, but only remits the Puniſhment; and that the Prieſt's Abſolution is a Declaration that the Penitent is abſolv'd from the Guilt of his Sin, and that he is freed from the Puniſhment due to it, by the Satisfaction made by him to God: An Opinion which the Author holds in common with many ancient School-Divines. There are alſo found in his Book ſome other Opinions which are not approv'd; and amongſt others, That the Union of the Word was not made with an animated Body, but with the Maſs of Fleſh, of which the Body was firſt form'd, and afterwards the Soul: That the Torments of the Damned may be diminiſhed: That the Devils are not as yet caſt into everlaſting Flames, and that they ſinn'd even at the very Inſtant of their Creation: That if the Firſt Man had not committed Sin, thoſe who are damned would not have been brought forth into the World: That the Saints do not really deſcend on Earth in Apparitions: And that St. Benedict had a clear Knowledge of God in this World, even ſuch as the bleſſed Spirits have in Heaven.

This Author is one of thoſe who have moſt peremptorily affirmed, That the Souls are immediately created by God at that Inſtant when they are united to their Bodies, and that the Angels are pure Spirits. He likewiſe maintains, That the inward Intention of the Miniſter is not neceſſary for the Validity of the Sacrament; that without the Love of God Sin could not be forgiven; that Infants dying without Baptiſm are damn'd, and that for that Reaſon they are not bury'd in conſecrated Ground. For matter of Diſcipline, it may be obſerv'd, That Confeſſion made to Laicks for Venial Sins, and even for Mortal ones, in caſe of Neceſſity, when there was no Prieſt preſent, was in uſe at that Time: That not only the Communion, but alſo Abſolution, was alſo deny'd to Criminals condemn'd to Death: That Prieſts were wont to diſcipline their Penitents: That Parents were prohibited to enter the Church till their Children were baptiz'd: That it was permitted to receive, but not to exact Money, for the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, and even for the Celebration of Maſs: That Faſt was uſually broke at Noon, or at the Hour of * None, but that there was no Collation: That the Cuſtom of Faſting on Fridays was obſerv'd, although not reputed to be of very great Antiquity, and that Saturday-Faſts were not ſo regularly kept: That in many Churches ſome Repaſt was taken on holy Thurſday in the Evening, and that this Cuſtom began to prevail: That Baptiſm, even that of Infants, was reſerv'd for ſolemn Days: That the Participation of the Cup in the Communion among the Laity was ſtill in uſe, but ſeldom put in Practice: And that the Belief of the corporal Aſſumption of the Virgin Mary was eſtabliſhed by the Cuſtom of the Church.

This Work, by Robert Pullus, was publiſhed by Father Matboud of the Congregation of St. Maur, illuſtrated with learned and curious Notes, and printed at Paris A. D. 1655. The Eccleſiaſtical Writers, who cite this Author, mention ſome other Works compos'd by him; particularly a Commentary on the Pſalms of David, another on the Revelation of St. John, a Treatiſe of the Contempt of the World, four Books concerning the Sentences of the Doctors, a Volume of his Lectures, and ſeveral Sermons. We have none of theſe Works printed; neither is it known, whether any of them be ſtill extant in Manuſcript, except certain Sermons which were in Petavius's Library.

Peter of Poitiers made uſe of a more Scholaſtick Method than any of the above-mention'd Authors: He ſucceeded them in the Divinity-Chair of the Schools at Paris, and was promoted to the Dignity of Chancellor of the Church of that City, which he enjoy'd during 38 Years. He compil'd his Collection of the Sentences in the Year 1170. dedicated it to William Archbiſhop of Sens, and died in 1200. In the Doctrinal Points, he follows the Maſter of the Sentences, but uſes a quit different Method, as to the Manner of handling the Matters: For he explains and reſolves all the Queſtions by the Principles of Philoſophy, and treats of them as a Logician, with formal Arguments, after a very dry and uncouth Manner. This Work was ſet forth by Father Matboud, at the End of that of Robert Pullus. Peter of Poitiers likewiſe wrote certain Allegorical Commentaries on the Books of Exodus, dus, Leviticus, and Numbers; a Commentary on the Book of Pſalms; and other Works; ſome of which are to be found in the Libraries.

Of the Writers of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory.

Robert de Melun liv'd at the ſame Time, and in the End of his Life was ordain'd Biſhop of Hereford A. D. 1163. His Syſtem of Divinity in Manuſcript is kept in the Library of St. Victor at Paris, and often cited by Father Mathoud, in his Notes on Robert Pullus.

Gautier, or Gauterius, a Regular Canon of St. Victor, in the End of this Century, took upon him to confute the new Method of theſe Divines, and compos'd a Work which he call'd, A Treatiſe againſt the four Labyrinths of France, viz. Peter Abaelard, Gillebert de la Porree, Peter Lombard, and Peter of Poitiers, whom he accuſes of having aſſerted many Hereſies and Errors, in treating of the ineffable Myſteries of the Holy Trinity, and of the Incarnation, according to the uncertain Scholaſtick Method, and Ariſtotle's Principles, with which they were intoxicated. There are indeed ſufficient Grounds for this Cenſure on three of theſe Authors, but he had no reaſon to fall foul upon Peter Lombard, whoſe Work is only a Collection of Paſſages of the Fathers, in which Ariſtotle is not cited: However, it muſt be acknowledg'd, that the Maſter of the Sentences, as well as the others, ſtarted a great number of Opinions that were not approv'd by the ſucceeding Divines, and of which the Doctors of the Faculty at Paris made a Catalogue in the Twelfth Century, under this Title, Articles in which the Maſter of the Sentences is not generally follow'd.

Of the Original of Scholaſtical Divinity.

CHAP. XVI.

Of the Commentaries on the Holy Scripture compos'd in the Twelfth Century, and of the three famous Commentators, Rupert Abbot of Duyts, Hugh and Richard of St. Victor.

A New Method of commenting upon Holy Scripture was likewiſe introduced in this Century: The ancient Fathers, in their Commentaries on the ſacred Books, were wont to explain the Text either literally or allegorically, in reference to the Inſtruction of the People; and the Eccleſiaſtical Authors of the Eight and Ninth Centuries, who wrote on the Bible, only made it their Buſineſs to compile or collect divers Commentaries of the Fathers, of which they compos'd Catena's or continued Collections of Commentaries. Some alſo then brought in the Uſe of Gloſſes for the Explication of the Letter; but in the Century we now ſpeak of, they began to explain Holy Scripture, almoſt after the ſame Manner, as they treated of Theological Matters; that is to ſay, according to the Principles of Logick, diſcuſſing divers ſubtle Queſtions concerning the Doctrinal Points, and producing a great number of common Places.

This Method was follow'd by Rupert, Abbot of Duyts near Colen, in his Commentaries on the Holy Scripture; where he propoſes to treat of the Holy Trinity, and its Works, and divides them into three Parts; the firſt of which is extended from the Creation of the World to the Fall of Adam; the ſecond, from the Fall to the Paſſion of Jeſus Chriſt; and the third, to the Day of the laſt Judgment: The firſt Period of Time is appropriated to the Father, the ſecond to the Son, and the third to the Holy Ghoſt. The firſt Part contains three Books of Commentaries on the three firſt Chapters of Geneſis: The ſecond comprehends ſix other Books on the Remainder of Geneſis; four on Exodus; two on Leviticus; as many on Numbers and Deuteronomy; one on Joſhua; one on the Book of Judges; one on ſome Places of the Books of Kings and Pſalms; one on Iſaiah; one on Jeremiah; one on Ezekiel; two Books on Daniel, Zachariah and Malachy; one Book of the Hiſtory of the Macchabees; and another on ſome Places of the four Goſpels. The third Part relating to the Works of the Holy Ghoſt, being divided into nine Books, is not a continued Commentary on any particular Book, but on divers Paſſages of Scripture choſen by him, with reſpect to the Matters of which he deſign'd to treat.

The Commentaries of this Author on the 12 leſſer Prophets, and on the Book of Canticles, are more continual, come nearer to the Form of Commentaries, and recede leſs from the Manner of Writing in uſe among the Ancients; but they are extremely myſtical, and full of too ſubtle Reflections, and of Remarks which have not all the Accuracy that might be expected.

The thirteen Books of the Victory of the Word of God, contain a great Number of Queſtions and common Places on divers Paſſages of Scripture.

The Commentaries of the Glory and Dignity of the Son of God on St. Matthew, and the Commentary on St. John's Goſpel, and his Revelation, are very like thoſe on the leſſer Prophets.

The Treatiſe of the Glorification of the Trinity, and of the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, divided into nine Books, contains the Explication of many Paſſages of Scripture, that have ſome relation to the Queſtions, which he propoſes concerning the Three Divine Perſons, and more eſpecially that of the Holy Ghoſt.

As for his Treatiſe of Divine Offices, it is a Work of another Nature; in which he treats of the Divine Service, and of its Ceremonies, and gives myſtical Reaſons of them. He there ſeems to ſtart a particular Notion concerning the Euchariſt, viz. That the Bread is made the Body of Jeſus Chriſt, by the hypoſtatical Union with his Soul; nevertheleſs ſome Authors have vindicated the Aſſertion, and affirm that it may be explain'd in a good Senſe; but we ſhall not now examine this Queſtion.

The moſt part of Rupert's Works are dedicated to Cuno Abbot of Siegberg, and afterwards Biſhop of Ratisbon, to whom he was recommended by Berenger Abbot of St. Laurence at Liege, in which laſt Monaſtery Rupert ſometime reſided in Quality of a Monk. His Works were printed at Colen A. D. 1578. in three Volumes, and in two at Paris in 1638. He himſelf gives us a Catalogue of them, in the Preface to his Treatiſe of Divine Offices: He there makes mention of all thoſe that are ſtill extant, and we have every one of them, except his Treatiſe of the glorious King David, of which he had then only compos'd eleven Books.

There are two ſorts of Commentaries on the Holy Scripture that bear the Name of Hugh of St. Victor; the former are certain literal and hiſtorical Annotations on the Text; to which is prefix'd a critical Preface concerning the ſacred Writers, and the Books written by them: The others are allegorical Commentaries intermixed with a great number of Queſtions and common Places. Theſe laſt are call'd, A Volume of Extracts, and divided into 24 Books: The ten firſt of theſe, which are inſerted in the ſecond Tome of the Works of Hugh of St. Victor, contain general Remarks on the Arts and Sciences: The nine following, which are in the firſt Tome, comprehend variety of Allegories and Queſtions relating to the Hiſtories of the ſacred Books, from the Creation of the World till the Time of the Macchabees, that is to ſay, to all the hiſtorical Books of the Bible: The tenth, is a Collection of moral Homilies on Eccleſiaſtes: In the four laſt, are compris'd divers Queſtions relating to the four Goſpels. To theſe are annexed, to render the Work compleat, Explications of the ſame Nature, but more at large, on all the Epiſtles of St. Paul.

Theſe 24 Books of Commentaries are attributed by Thritbemius, and ſeveral other Authors, to Richard of St. Victor; and the firſt Part is to be ſeen under his Name in a certain Manuſcript very near his Time, which is extant in M. Colbert's Library; ſome part of it is alſo printed among the Works of that Author. However, it is affirm'd by ſome Perſons, that this Work cannot belong either to Hugh or to Richard, by reaſon that in the Chronological Table which the Author makes of the Kings of France, in the tenth Chapter of the tenth Book, he ends with Philip the Son of Lewis the Young, before whoſe Reign theſe two Writers were dead. Indeed this Reaſon may ſerve to prove, that the ſaid Work was not compos'd by Hugh of St. Victor deceaſed in 1142. but it is not ſo evident a Proof to ſhew, that Richard is not the Author of it; becauſe the latter not dying till the Year 1173. and Philip being born in 1165. he might joyn him with King Lewis the Young his Father. However, this very Paſſage makes it appear, that the Author of that Work could not have written later than the Reign of Philip Auguſtus; ſince he is the laſt of the Kings of France mention'd by him, and conſequently the ſaid Author flouriſhed in the Twelfth Century. As for the literal Notes, it cannot be doubted, that they were the genuine Works of Hugh of St. Victor, of which the following are ſtill extant; viz. his Preface concerning the ſacred Books, and the inſpired Penmen of them; his Notes on the Pentateuch; on the Book of Judges; on the Books of the Kings, and on ſome Pſalms. Theſe Notes are conciſe, and do not recede from the literal and hiſtorical Senſe. Thoſe that he made on the Lamentations of Jeremiah, and on the Prophecies of Joel and Obadiah, are larger, and Allegories are intermixed with them. To theſe Explications of the Books of the Holy Scripture are annex'd others, which he wrote on the Book of the Hierarchy attributed to St. Dionyſius the Areopagite. We might alſo add his Explication of the Decalogue, and thoſe of St. Auguſtine's Rule, which are of the ſame Style.

Of the Commentaries on the Holy Scripture.

The four Books of the Cloiſter of the Soul; the four other Books of the Soul; the ſmall Tract of the Phyſick of the Soul; the two Books of Birds; and thoſe of the ſpiritual and carnal Marriages, belong to Hugh de Foliet, a Monk of Corby: I alſo aſcribe to the ſame Monk, the Dialogue between the Fleſh and the Spirit, the Style of which is different from that of Hugh of St. Victor; nay, perhaps he is the Author of the four Books of the Myſtical Ark, and of the Ark of Noah, which bear the Name of the Benedictin Monk of Saxony: Inſomuch that in the ſecond Tome of the Works of Hugh of St. Victor, there are but very few of his genuine Pieces; viz. the Soliloquy of the Soul; the Encomium of Charity; the Diſcourſe on the Manner of Praying; the Diſcourſe of the Love of the Bridegroom, and of the Spouſe; the four Books of the Vanity of the World, and the 100 Sermons.

The laſt Tome contains Dogmatical Works; the firſt of which is called Didaſcalick, or Inſtructive Inſtitutions, being divided into ſeven Books, in which are certain Rules for ſtudying, and general Notions of the Sciences. In the fourth, he treats of the ſacred Books, of the Writings of the Fathers, and of the Councils and Canons. In the fifth, of the Senſe of the Holy Scriptures: In the ſixth, of the Manner of reading it; and in the laſt, which is the largeſt, of the Manner of attaining to the Knowledge of God, and of the Trinity, by the Creatures.

The ſecond, relates to the Will and Omnipotence of God; in which he examines this Queſtion; viz. Whether his Power be of a larger Extent than his Will?

The following Tracts are compos'd on divers Queſtions relating to the Myſtery of the Incarnation, particularly in reference to the Will of Jeſus Chriſt, his Wiſdom and Knowledge, concerning the Union of the Word with the human Nature; againſt the Opinion of the Maſter of the Sentences, that Jeſus Chriſt is not a Thing; and touching ſeveral other Scholaſtical Queſtions; beſides three Conferences about the Incarnation, and a Treatiſe of the Perpetual Virginity of the Virgin Mary.

To theſe Treatiſes are ſubjoyn'd five Books, call'd Miſcellanies of Theological Learning, which contain many common Places concerning Paſſages of the Holy Scripture, and divers Points of Divinity and Morality.

The three Books of Divine Offices, and that of the Canon of the myſtical Offering, belong to Robert Paululus, a Prieſt of the Church of Amiens, of whom we have made mention elſewhere.

The ſmall Tract, by way of Dialogue between Maſter and Scholar, concerning the Law of Nature, and the written Law, contains brief Reſolutions of a great number of Theological Queſtions.

The Summary of the Sentences, divided into ſeven Treatiſes, is a compendious Syſtem of Divinity.

But his chief Theological Work, is a Treatiſe of the Sacraments, divided into two Books, of which the firſt comprehends twelve Parts, and the ſecond eighteen. It is one of the largeſt Treatiſes of Divinity that was compos'd in the Twelfth Century, and the Author therein explains the Queſtions after a very clear manner, altogether free from the Logical Method and Terms, without involving himſelf in the Labyrinth of obſcure and intricate Speculations. He proceeds to reſolve theſe Queſtions by Paſſages of the Holy Scripture, and according to the Principles of the Fathers, more eſpecially of St. Auguſtine, whoſe Doctrine he follows, affecting even to imitate his Style; which gave occaſion to ſome Perſons to call him, The Tongue of that Father. He was a Native of Flanders, born in the Territories of Ypres, and not in Saxony, as it was generally ſuppos'd: But he ſpent his Life in France, in the Monaſtery of St. Victor, of which he was a regular Canon and Prior. He died Feb. 11. A. D. 1142. aged forty Years. His Works were printed at Paris in 1526. at Venice in 1588. at Mentz in 1617. and at Rouen in 1648.

Of the Commentaries on the Holy Scripture.

This Author had for his Pupil Richard, a Scots Man by Nation, and a Regular Canon of the ſame Monaſtery, who likewiſe attain'd to the Office of Prior in the Year 1162. and acquir'd much Reputation by the great Number of his Writings. We have but now obſerv'd, that to him may be attributed the Collection of Queſtions on the Bible, part of which is printed amongſt his Works, and the reſt among thoſe of Hugh of St. Victor. The following Works on the Holy Scripture are undoubtedly his. Viz.

Richard of St. Victor.

Three Treatiſes of critical Remarks and Hiſtory, that is to ſay, the firſt to explain the Form and Parts of the Tabernacle; the Second, to give a Deſcription of Solomon's Temple, and of every Thing that was contain'd therein; and the third, to adjuſt the Chronology of the Books of Kings and Chronicles, concerning the Kings of Judah and Iſrael. To theſe Treatiſes muſt be added a larger Explication of the Temple in Ezekiel. Theſe four Treatiſes relate altogether to critical Matters, and have no regard to Allegories, nor to myſtical or moral Significations.

His other Commentaries are not of the ſame Nature, as not being literal, but allegorical, moral or dogmatical: They conſiſt in Explications of divers Pſalms; a Commentary on the Book of Canticles; Queſtions on certain difficult Paſſages of St. Paul's Epiſtles; and a large Commentary on the Apocalypſe. The other Works of Richard of St. Victor are of two Sorts; ſome of them being Pieces relating to Points of Doctrine, and others being Treatiſes of Piety and practical Divinity.

Among the former are to be reckon'd his Treatiſe of the Trinity, divided into ſix Books: A Tract dedicated to St. Bernard, concerning the Attributes appropriated to every one of the Divine Perſons: His Treatiſe of the Incarnation: Two Treatiſes of the Emmanuel, or on theſe Words of the Prophet Iſaiah, Behold, a Virgin ſhall conceive, and bear a Son, and ſhall call his Name Emmanuel; in which he proves againſt a certain Jew, that theſe Words can be interpreted of none but the Virgin Mary and Jeſus Chriſt: A Treatiſe of the Power of Binding and Looſing, in which he follows the common Opinion of the School-Divines of his Time, concerning the Effect of the Keys, and the Power of the Miniſters: A Diſcourſe of the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt: Certain Explications dedicated to St. Bernard on ſome difficult Places of Scripture: A Diſcourſe to explain in what Senſe the Holy Ghoſt is ſaid to be the Love of the Father, and of the Son: And a Treatiſe of the Difference between Moral and Venial Sins.

His Works of Piety and Morality are theſe; viz. A Treatiſe of the Means of rooting out Evil, and promoting Good: A Diſcourſe on the State of the inward Man: Three Books of the Inſtruction of the inward Man, or of the ſpiritual Exerciſe, upon occaſion of the Dreams of Nebuchadnezzar and Daniel: A Treatiſe of the Preparation of the Soul for Contemplation: Five Books of the Grace of Contemplation, on the Ark which was ſet in the Tabernacle, with an Addition containing ſome Allegories on the Tabernacle: A Diſcourſe or Meditation on the Plagues that will happen on the Day of Judgment: Another Diſcourſe on the Day of the laſt Judgment: A Treatiſe of the Degrees of Charity: Another of the four Degrees of fervent Charity: A Diſcourſe of the two Paſſovers, with a Sermon on the Feſtival of Eaſter: A Diſcourſe of the Baptiſm of Jeſus Chriſt: A Sermon on the Effuſion of the Holy Ghoſt: A Tract concerning the Compariſon that is made of our Saviour to the Flower, and of the Virgin Mary to the Branch: Another about the Quality of the Standard of the People, attributed to Jeſus Chriſt: And laſtly, two Diſcourſes, viz. One concerning the Difference between Abraham's Sacrifice and that of David; and the other relating to the Difference between the ſame Sacrifice, and that of the Virgin Mary.

This Author died March 10. A. D. 1173. and his Works were printed at Paris in 1518. and in 1540. as alſo at Venice in 1592. at Colen in 1621. and at Rouen in 1650. He ſhews a great deal of Subtilty in his Theological Treatiſes, and argues methodically with an Exactneſs befitting an able Logician. His critical Pieces are very accurate for his Time, but his Style is not very lofty, and upon that Account it is, that his Treatiſes of Piety, though full of excellent Matter, have not all the Grandeur, nor all the Energy that might be wiſhed for.

CHAP.

CHAP. XVII.

Of Gratian's Collection of Canons.

Gratian.

ALthough many Collections of Canons, Decretals, and Passages of the Fathers, relating to the Canon-Law, were compil'd before the Twelfth Century; yet none of them was generally follow'd, or publickly taught: They were look'd upon as the Work of private Persons, and the Decisions contain'd in them had no greater Authority than the Monuments out of which they were taken; whilst every one apply'd them to his particular Benefit, but none made them the Subject of publick Lectures. The Collection which Gratian a Monk of St. Felix at Bononia, and a Native of Chiusi in Tuscany, compleated in the Year 1151. met with much better Success; for assoon as it appear'd, it was so favourably receiv'd, that the Canonists taught it publickly, and in a little Time, a great number of Commentaries were written on that Work.

In the ancient Manuscripts, and in the first Editions, it bears this Title, viz. The Concord of disagreeing Canons, and afterwards was call'd, The Book of Decrees, or simply, The Decrees. It is divided into three Parts, the first of which contains Matters relating to the Law in general, and the Ministers of the Church, under the Name of Distinctions; the second, divers particular Cases, upon occasion of which are debated many Questions that are call'd, The Causes; and the third, entituled, Of the Consecration, such Matters as relate to the Divine Offices, and the Sacraments.

In the first twenty Distinctions of the first Part, he treats of the Division of the Law; of the different Sorts of Laws, as well Civil as Ecclesiastical; of the Authority of the Canons, of the Councils, and of the Decretals of the Popes; of the sacred Orders; of the Qualities of Persons who ought to be ordain'd; of the Form and Ceremonies of Ordination; of the Functions and Conduct of Clergymen; of the Power of the Pope, and of the Bishops; of the Use of the Pall, and of every Thing that relates to the Ministers of the Church. This Part is divided into 101 Distinctions.

In the second, containing thirty six Causes, every one of which comprehends divers Questions, every Question being likewise divided into several Chapters; the Author treats of Simony; of Appeals; of Incumbents depriv'd of their Benefices; of the Quality of Witnesses and Accusers; of Elections; of the Government of Churches; of Ecclesiastical Censures; of last Wills and Testaments; of Burials; of Usury; of what ought to be observ'd with respect to † outragious or distracted Persons; of Sentences passed contrary to the due Forms of Law; of Monks and Abbots, and their Rights; of those who assault Clergymen; of Commendams; of Oaths; of War; of Heresies; of Infractions of the Canons; of Sorcerers; of Marriage, and its Impediments; of the Degrees of Consanguinity; and of Rapes. In the thirty second Cause, he has inserted a Dissertation concerning Repentance, in seven Sections; in which he follows the Error of some Writers of Penitentials, who do not believe Confession to be of Divine Right, or absolutely necessary for the Remission of Sins.

† Furiosus.

The third Part contains five Distinctions, or Sections; viz. the first, concerning the Consecration of Churches, the Celebration of Mass, and the Divine Service; the second, concerning the Eucharist; the third, about the solemn Festivals of the Year, and the Use of Images; the fourth, about the Sacrament of Baptism, and its Ceremonies; and the fifth, concerning Confirmation, Fasts, manual Labour, and some other Points of Discipline. Some Articles have been since added from Time to Time, under the Title of Palea, which is suppos'd to be the Name of the Author of these Additions, which were call'd Propalea, or Palea.

The first Edition of this Work was printed at Mentz, A. D. 1472. and the second at Venice, four Years after: The third is that of Paris in 1508. which is the first that bears the Name of Gratian; whose Text is to be found in these Editions after the same Manner that it was written by him; that is to say, full of false or erroneous Quotations: For Gratian has not only cited in his Collection, the false Decretals of the Popes, and other suppositious Works, but is also often mistaken in quoting one Author, or one Council for another, or in relating Passages otherwise than they are in the Original; upon which Account it was judged Expedient to correct the Faults of this Author. Antony de Mouchy, and Antony Contius, were the first that undertook to do it in France, in the preceding Age, and the whole Work was printed with their Notes at Antwerp in 1570. and 1573. At the same Time the Popes having consider'd the Importance of this Undertaking caus'd several Persons to be employ'd in it, in order to publish a new Edition of Gratian's Decretal, corrected, and at least clear'd of the principal Errors: They began to set about the Work under the Popedom of Pius IV. and carry'd it on under his Successor Pius V. but did not compleat it till the Time of Gregory XIII. They apply'd themselves more especially, 1. To correct the Errors that had crept into the Text of Gratian, through the Negligence of the Transcribers or Printers, by revising it exactly according to the ancient Manuscripts. 2. By substituting the Name of the true Author of the Passages cited by Gratian, in the room of that which he had set down, when it was evident that he was mistaken. 3. By observing the Differences between the genuine Text and that which is quoted by Gratian, and even correcting it in the Text of Gratian in those Places, where he only copies out their Words.

Gratian.

When this Work was compleated, it appear'd at Rome in 1580. with the Approbation of Pope Gregory XIII. who prohibited it to be published after another Manner. Whereupon it was soon printed according to the Copy of the Roman Edition in many Places; viz. at Venice in 1584. at Paris in 1585. at Francfort in 1586. and 1590. and at Lyons in 1591. and a great number of Editions of it have been since set forth. Whilst the Roman Edition was preparing for the Press, the famous Antonius Augustinus, Archbishop of Taragona, compos'd certain Dialogues concerning the Correction of Gratian, and afterwards made Additions to the same Edition, when he had procur'd a Copy of it. This Piece was printed at Taragona A. D. 1587. the next Year after his Death, and some Time after at Paris, but it was published with much more accuracy by M. Balusius in 1682. Antonius Augustinus discovers a vast number of Faults, Over-sights, and Errors in Gratian's Decretal, and makes many curious and very useful Remarks; to which may be added those of M. Balusius, which are no less judicious. But whatsoever Correction of this Work has been already, or can be made for the future, it is difficult, or rather impossible, to bring it to that Perfection which is requisite for a general Collection of the Canons and Ecclesiastical Constitutions, that is to serve as it were a perpetual Standard.

However Gratian's Collection was generally receiv'd and taught in the Schools assoon as it appear'd, but within a little while after, were added to it certain new Decretals of the Popes, particularly of Alexander III. of which were made Collections like those that are found in the End of the third General Council of Lateran, and these were likewise explain'd publickly. It is against this new Body of Law, which began to be Vogue, that Stephen de Tourney declames, in his 251 Letter, of which we have already related the Passage, to which we desire the Reader to have Recourse upon this Occasion, because it may serve as a Conclusion to what we have said in this, and in the preceding Chapters.

CHAP. XVIII.

Of the General Councils held in the Twelfth Century.

Of the General Councils held in the Twelfth Century.

ALthough the Name of Oecumenical, or General Council, denotes an Assembly compos'd of Bishops of all the Churches of the World; nevertheless the eight first General Councils held in the Levant, chiefly consisted in Bishops of the Eastern Churches, those of the Western being represented by the Legates of the See of Rome, who often were accompany'd with few or none of the Prelates of the Western Churches: But after the Separation of the Latin Church from the Greek, it was scarce possible any longer to hold Councils, in which the Latins and Greeks were willing to assemble together, in order to pass their Judgments in Ecclesiastical Affairs, or unanimously to make common Constitutions. Therefore the succeeding General Councils were compos'd only of a great number of Prelates of the Western Churches conven'd by the Popes, who were wont to publish Decisions conformable to the Doctrine and Discipline which the Bishops of these Councils had approv'd and confirm'd. There were three of this Nature held at Rome in the Twelfth Century; viz. the first under Pope Calixtus II. the second under Innocent II. and the third under Alexander III. We have already produc'd a Relation of the first, with the Extract of its Canons, in treating of the Investitures; so that it remains only to give the like Account of the second and the third.

Of the General Councils held in the Twelfth Century.

The second General Council of Lateran.

The second General of Lateran.

POpe Innocent II. having obtain'd the quiet Possession of the See of Rome, by the Death of Peter of Leon, conven'd in the Month of April A. D. 1139. a Council in the Palace of Lateran, call'd, the Second General; which (as they say) was compos'd of near a thousand Prelates, and of which thirty Canons were published.

The first imports, That all Clergymen, who were ordain'd by Simony, shall be depos'd from the Dignity which they have unjustly usurped.

The second, that all those, who have bought or sold any Benefice, shall be depriv'd of it, and branded with Infamy; and that nothing shall be exacted for the conferring of Ecclesiastical Dignities and Livings.

The third, that none shall entertain those who are excommunicated by their Bishop.

The fourth, that the Bishops, and the rest of the Clergy, shall endeavour to please God and Men, by their inward Disposition, as well as by their outward Behaviour: That they shall give occasion of Scandal to none, neither by the Colour nor Fashion of their Habits: That they shall be cloath'd after a regular and modest Manner: And that they, who neglect to observe this Rule, shall be depriv'd of their Benefices, unless they be reform'd, after having been admonished by their Bishops.

The fifth, forbids the Pillaging of the Goods, or Revenues of the Bishops after their Death.

The sixth ordains, that those who officiate as Subdeacons, or have enter'd into Orders of a higher Station, if they marry, or keep Concubines, shall lose their Offices or Benefices.

The seventh, prohibits the hearing of Mass of Priests who are married, or keep Concubines; declares the Marriages of Priests to be null; and ordains, that those who have contracted it shall be divorc'd, and put to Penance.

The eighth, regulates the same Thing, with respect to Virgins consecrated to God, if they marry.

The ninth, forbids Regular Canons, or Monks, to study the Civil Law, or the Art of Physick, in order to make Profit by the Practice of those Sciences.

The tenth, enjoyns Laicks, who have Churches or Tithes in their Possession, to restore them to the Bishops under pain of Excommunication; prohibits the conferring of Archdeaconries or Deaconries on any Persons but Priests and Deacons; declares that those who have procur'd them without entering into Orders, shall be depriv'd of them, if they refuse to be ordain'd: And in like Manner forbids the granting of them to young Men, who are not admitted into Orders, or the demising of Churches to Priests for Rent.

The eleventh ordains, that Priests, Clerks, Monks, Travellers, Merchants, and Country People, shall have free Liberty to come and go with Safety at all times.

The twelfth, specifies the Days and Times when it is forbidden to make War, and exhorts the Christians to Peace.

The thirteenth, condemns Usury and Usurers.

The fourteenth, prohibits military Combats that were practised at Fairs, and ordains, that those who are mortally wounded in Rencounters shall be depriv'd of Christian Burial; although Penance, and the Viaticum, ought not to be deny'd them.

The second General of Lateran.

The fifteenth, denounces an Anathema against those who abuse a Clergyman, or a Monk, and prohibits the Bishops to give them Absolution, except in case of Necessity, till they have made an Appearance before the holy See. The same Canon re-establishes the Right of Sanctuary for Churches and Church-yards.

The sixteenth, is a Prohibition to lay Claim to Prebends, or other Benefices, by Right of Succession.

The seventeenth, reinforces the Laws against Marriages amongst Relations.

The eighteenth, denounces an Anathema against Incendiaries, and declares them to be unworthy of Christian Burial; forbids to give them Absolution, till they have made Restitution for the Damage done by them; and enjoyns them for Penance to take a Journey to the holy Land, or to Spain, for the Service of the Church.

The nineteenth, suspends for a Year, and condemns to Restitution, the Archbishops or Bishops, who shall take upon them to remit the Rigor of the Punishment ordain'd in the preceding Canon.

The twentieth imports, that Kings and Princes have a Power to execute Justice, in consultation with the Bishops and Archbishops: A Canon which cannot be understood but in reference to Ecclesiastical Persons.

The twenty first, forbids to admit into Orders the Sons of Priests; unless they have led a religious Course of Life in Monasteries, or in Canonical Houses.

In the twenty second, Priests are admonished not to suffer Laicks to be deceiv'd by false shews of Penance; and it is observ'd therein, that that Penitence is of none Effect, when only one Crime is repented of, without reforming the others; or when one continues to dwell in the Confines of Sin, by retaining an Office or Employment that cannot be exercised without Sin; or when one bears Malice in the Heart; or when one refuses to give Satisfaction to an injur'd Person; or when we do not freely forgive those who have done us an Injury; or lastly, when an unjust War is maintain'd.

The twenty third, is against Hereticks who condemn the Sacraments.

The twenty fourth, forbids to exact any Thing for the holy Chrism, for the consecrated Oils, and for officiating at Burials.

The twenty fifth, deprives those Persons of their Benefices, who receive them from the Hands of Laymen.

The twenty sixth, prohibits Nuns to reside in private Houses.

In the twenty seventh, they are likewise forbidden to appear in the same Choir with Monks or Canons, in order to sing the Divine Offices.

The twenty eighth, prohibits the Canons of Cathedral Churches, under pain of Anathema, to exclude Persons of known Piety from the Election of Bishops, and declares those those Elections to be null, that they make without sending for, and advising with them.

The second General of Lateran.

The twenty ninth, denounces an Anathema against Slingers and Archers.

The thirtieth, declares to be null the Ordinations made by Peter of Leon, and other Hereticks or Schismaticks.

The second General of Lateran.

The third General Council of Lateran.

The third General of Lateran.

POpe Alexander III. conven'd in the Year 1179. a great Council at Rome, which is call'd, the third General of Lateran, to reform a great number of Abuses that had crept into the Church; to make Constitutions about Matters of Discipline; to condemn the Albigenses, and other reputed Hereticks; to maintain the Immunities of the Church; and to redress many Grievances that were become very common. This Council which began to sit on the second Day of March, was compos'd of about three hundred Bishops, and published twenty seven Capitularies, or Articles of Canons.

The first, is a Decree for preventing the Schisms of the Church of Rome in the Election of the Popes, ordaining, That if all the Cardinals cannot agree to chuse the same Person, he shall be esteem'd as lawful Pope, who shall obtain two Thirds of their Suffrages in his Favour; but that he cannot be ordain'd, or acknowledg'd as such, who has less than two Thirds of the Votes: Provided nevertheless that this Constitution shall not be prejudicial to the Custom of other Chapters, in which the Consent of the greater and sounder Part usually prevails; by reason that the Contests which arise in those Bodies, may be determin'd by the Judgment of the higher Powers, whereas the Church of Rome cannot have Recourse to any Tribunal that is superior to it.

The second, declares to be null the Ordinations made by the three Antipopes, Octavian, Guy, and John de Struma; deprives those of Benefices who receiv'd them from their Hands; abrogates the Alienations of Church-Revenues made by the said Antipopes; and suspends from Orders those Clergymen, who took an Oath to maintain the Schism.

The third ordains, that a Person nominated to be chosen Bishop shall be thirty Years old; that he shall be born in lawful Wedlock, and noted for his Learning, and the Probity of his Manners: That when his Election is confirm'd, when he has taken Possession of the Revenues of his Church, and when the time prescrib'd by the Canons for his Ordination is expir'd; he who had a Right to dispose of the Benefices, which he enjoy'd before he was made Bishop, shall have free Liberty to confer them: That the Deaneries, Archdeaconries, Curacies, and other Church-Livings, with the Cure of Souls, shall be granted only to those who have attain'd to the Age of twenty five Years: That they who are advanced to a higher Dignity, if they do not cause themselves to be ordain'd in due time, shall be depriv'd of their Benefices, without a possibility of reinstating themselves by vertue of an Appeal. It is also declar'd, that this Constitution shall be observ'd not only with respect to those who shall receive Induction to Benefices for the future, but also in reference to Incumbents, if the Canons require it: That those who neglect to observe it in carrying on their Elections, shall be depriv'd of their Right of electing, and even of their Benefices for three Years: And lastly, if the Bishop infringe it, or consent to the Infringement of it, he shall lose the Right of conferring Spiritual Livings; which shall be granted by the Chapter, or by the Metropolitan.

The fourth Constitution, regulates the Number of Horses which the Prelates may keep for their Equipage, during the Visitation of their Dioceses; that is to say, forty or fifty are allow'd to Archbishops; twenty five to Cardinals; twenty or thirty to Bishops; five or seven to Archdeacons, and two to Deans: Now in regard that this Number is very considerable, it is declar'd in the End of the Canon, that what is granted by way of Toleration, ought only to be put in execution in Churches which have large Revenues, and that in those Places where the Ecclesiastical Revenues are very mean, the Superiors shall take care not to overburden their Inferiors in visiting them; and that it is not the meaning of the Decree, to enlarge the Privilege of those, who were not accustom'd to have so great a Retinue. The Bishops are likewise forbidden to oppress the inferior Clergy with Taxes and Impositions, although they are permitted upon urgent Occasions to demand of them necessary Supplies: But the Archdeacons and Deans are absolutely prohibited to lay any Taxes upon the Priests or Clerks of their Jurisdiction.

The sixth, regulates the Formalities of Ecclesiastical Judicature, in which are observ'd two common Abuses, viz. One, that the superior Clergy, fearing left the Inferior should withdraw themselves from their Jurisdiction by an Appeal, frequently begin with suspending or excommunicating them, without having sent them any Monitory before; and the other, that the Inferior, on the contrary, who fear the Censure of their Superiors, appeal without having receiv'd any Wrong, and to maintain their unjust Practice, make use of the Remedy appointed for the Relief of the Innocent. Therefore to prevent these Abuses, it is ordain'd, That the Superiors shall pronounce no Sentence of Suspension or of Excommunication against the inferior Clergy, unless it were preceded by a Canonical Monition; if the Crime of which they are guilty be not of the Number of those, that render the Persons ipso facto excommunicated or suspended; and the Inferior are forbidden for enter an Appeal, before Issue be joyn'd: As for those, who make a lawful Appeal, it is decree'd, that a competent Time shall be allow'd them to prosecute it, and that in case they neglect to do it, within the limited Time, the Bishop, after the expiration of that Term, may make use of his Authority: Lastly, that if the Party summoned present himself in Court, and the Appellant does not appear, the latter shall be oblig'd to re-emburse the former all his Charges. It is also requir'd, that this Ordinance be regularly observ'd, more especially in Monasteries, and with respect to religious Persons.

The third General of Lateran.

The seventh, condemns the Abuses which passed into a Custom, of exacting Money for Induction to Benefices; for the Burial of the Dead; for the Benediction of Marriages, and for the Administration of the Sacraments. The Bishops are likewise forbidden to impose new Duties on the Churches, to augment the old ones, and to appropriate any part of their Revenues to their own private Use, and they are enjoyn'd to maintain the Liberty of their Churches.

The eighth, prohibits to bestow, or even to promise, Spiritual Livings, before they become vacant; ordains Patrons to make their Presentations within six Months after the Vacancy; and grants to the Chapter the Right of nominating to such Benefices, as are too long left vacant by the Bishop, when they are in his Gift; also to the Bishop, the like Right of nominating to those that ought to be conferr'd by the Chapter, upon the same Default: But if both Parties neglect to do it, the Right is declar'd to devolve on the Metropolitan.

The ninth, reforms the Abuses that prevail'd under colour of Privileges granted to the Knights Templars, and other religious Societies, who by virtue of these Privileges attempted many Things against the Authority of the Bishops: For they receiv'd Churches from the Hands of Laicks; admitted excommunicated Persons to the Participation of the holy Sacraments; allow'd them Christian Burial; placed and displaced Priests in several Churches by their own arbitrary Power, and without acquainting the Bishops; frequently celebrated Divine Service in Churches that lay under a Suspension; and weaken'd the Episcopal Authority by Combinations and Fraternities. To put a stop to the career of these Abuses, the Council prohibits all privileged People to entertain excommunicated Persons; enjoyns them to present to the Bishops those Priests whom they would have put in the Churches, which do not by undoubted Right belong to their Jurisdiction; and that these Priests shall give an Account of their Spiritualities to the Bishops, and of their Temporalities to the religious Society on whom they depend; so that these Benefices cannot be taken from them without the Consent of the Bishops. It is also farther declared, that if the Knights Templars come into Places lying under a Suspension, they shall only have Liberty to perform Divine Service once in them; and that the Members of their Society shall not be exempted from the Jurisdiction of the Bishops. This Regulation is extended to all other Societies, that enjoy any Privileges, and make an ill use of them.

The ſecond general of Lateran.

The tenth imports, That Money ſhall not be exacted for the admitting of Monks into Monaſteries; that they ſhall not be ſuffer'd to have any Perſonal Eſtate; that they ſhall not live privately in Towns, Villages, or Pariſhes, but in large Convents; that they ſhall not go out of them alone; that the Monks, who give any Thing for their Entrance into a Monaſtery, ſhall not be advanced to Sacred Orders; and that they who exact any Thing upon that Account, ſhall be depos'd from their Office; that he who enjoys private Poſſeſſions, unleſs they were given him by the Abbot for his Office, ſhall be excommunicated; that an Abbot, who neglects to put this Order in execution, ſhall be degraded from his Dignity; that Priories, or Commiſſions, ſhall not be given for Money; that Conventual Priors ſhall not be chang'd, unleſs for a juſt Cauſe, as in the Caſe of Dilapidation, or Irregularity, or if it be judg'd expedient to remove them to higher Station.

The eleventh, renews the Prohibitions ſo often reiterated with reſpect to Clergy-men, who are in Orders, to keep Company with Women; condemns Sodomites to very ſevere Puniſhments; and forbids Eccleſiaſtical Perſons to frequent the Monaſteries of Nuns, unleſs upon ſome emergent Occaſion.

The twelfth, forbids all Clerks, who are maintain'd by Church-Revenues, to exerciſe the Functions of Attorneys or Solicitors in Law-ſuits, unleſs it be to manage their own affairs; or thoſe of the Churches, or thoſe of the Poor, who are not able to defend themſelves. They are alſo prohibited in this Canon, to ſerve as Receivers or Judges to Lay-Lords, under the Penalty of being ſuſpended from the Exerciſe of their Miniſterial Functions. The ſame Thing is likewiſe more rigorouſly forbidden to Monks.

The thirteenth, enforces a Prohibition to the ſame Perſon to poſſeſs ſeveral Benefices, with the Cure of Souls, and ordains reſidence therein.

The fourteenth, in like manner, prohibits the Plurality of Prebends, and condemns the Proceedings of Laicks, who put Clergy-men in the Churches, and turn them out whenever they think fit; who take upon them to diſtribute the Goods and Revenues of the Church at their Pleaſure; and who exact Duties, and lay Taxes on the Churches, and on Eccleſiaſtical Perſons. Therefore they who perſiſt in ſuch Practices for the future, are threaten'd to be anathematiz'd; and the Prieſts and Clerks, who receive Benefices from the Hands of Lay-men, to be depos'd: The latter are alſo forbidden, under pain of Excommunication, to ſummon Clergy-men before their Judges; and it is decreed, that they who retain the Tithes, and other Church-Revenues, ſhall be depriv'd of Chriſtian Burial,

The fifteenth ordains, That the Eſtate or Goods which Clergy-men have got out of the Revenue of their Benefices, ſhall be left to the Churches to which they belong, whether they have ſo diſpos'd of them by their laſt Will and Teſtament or not. By this Canon is alſo aboliſhed the Cuſtom of Deans commiſſionated by the Biſhops to exerciſe Epiſcopal Juriſdiction, who upon that account exact a certain Sum of Money.

The ſixteenth determines, That in Chapters, affairs ſhall be tranſacted according to the Advice of the greater, and more ſound part of the Canons.

The ſeventeenth, provides a Remedy for the Inconvenience that happens, when the Lay-Patrons are divided, and preſent ſeveral Clerks for the ſame Church. It is ordain'd, That he ſhall be prefer'd who is the moſt worthy, and has the greateſt Number of Suffrages.

The ſecond general of Lateran.

The eighteenth, orders the Settlement of a School-Maſter in all the Cathedral Churches, for the Inſtruction of Youth, to whom is to be allotted a Benefice of a ſufficient Revenue for his Maintenance; in conſideration of which, he is forbidden to exact any Thing for granting a Licence to teach, and oblig'd to deny it to thoſe who are not capable of performing that Employment.

The nineteenth prohibits, under the Penalty of an Anathema, the Taxes and Impoſitions laid by Magiſtrates on the Churches, and Eccleſiaſtical Perſons; at leaſt unleſs the Biſhops and the reſt of the Clergy, having regard to the Exigencies of the State, eſpecially when the Revenues of the Laity are not ſufficient for the diſcharging of them, ſhall judge it expedient that the Churches ſhould contribute ſomewhat to that purpoſe.

The twentieth, condemns the Turnaments in which Soldiers fight, and often kill one another, to ſhew their Courage and Dexterity.

The twenty firſt preſcribes, under pain of Excommunication, the obſerving of a Truce, that is to ſay, of a Ceſſation of all manner of Acts of Hoſtility, from Wedneſday-Evening at Sun-ſet to Monday-Morning, from Advent to the Octave after the Epiphany, and from Septuageſima till the Octave after Eaſter.

The twenty ſecond ordains, That Monks, Clerks, Pilgrims, Merchants and Peaſants, who come and go to manage the Affairs of Husbandry, ſhall paſs on the Roads with Safety, and that no new Tolls ſhall be exacted of them.

The twenty third, grants to Lepers, who are ſufficiently numerous for the keeping of a Church, a Church-yard, and a Prieſt, a Licence to that purpoſe, upon Condition that they do no Injury to the ancient Churches, as to their Parochial Rights,

The twenty fourth, forbids Chriſtians to furniſh the Saracens with Iron, Arms, Ship-tackle or other Inſtruments of War, and excommunicates thoſe who liſt themſelves in their Service at Sea, as alſo ſuch Perſons as ſeize on the Goods of thoſe that have ſuffer'd Shipwreck.

The twenty fifth ordains, That Publick Uſurers ſhall be depriv'd of the Communion during their Life-time, and of Chriſtian Burial after their Death.

The twenty ſixth declares, That it ought not to be endur'd that the Saracens ſhould have Chriſtian Slaves, nor that the Chriſtians ſhould reſide among them. It gives permiſſion to receive the Teſtimony of Chriſtians againſt the Saracens, and ordains that thoſe who are converted to the Chriſtian Religion, ſhall remain in the quiet Poſſeſſion of the Eſtates which they enjoy'd before.

The twenty ſeventh Canon is that which relates to the Albigeois, and others who were reputed Hereticks in thoſe Times, of which we have already given ſome Account elſwhere.

Theſe are all the Regulations that were made in the third General Council of Lateran. Bartholomew Laurent, ſir-nam'd Poin, who publiſh'd the Acts of this ſame Council, has annexed to it a large Collection of divers Conſtitutions of Alexander III. and of the Popes who preceded or ſucceeded him, which he look'd upon at leaſt, in part, as a Sequel of this Council, becauſe he found it in the ſame Manuſcript: But this Work does not in any manner belong to the Council, and ought not to be eſteem'd as a part of it; ſo that we ſhall take no farther Notice of it in this Place.

CHAP. XIX.

Of the Provincial Councils held in the Twelfth Century.

Of the Provincial Councils of the twelfth Century.

WE ſhall only treat in this Chapter of thoſe Councils which made Regulations of the Church-Dicipline, or that determin'd any important Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, and we ſhall paſs by in ſilence a great Number of leſſer Councils, which were held only to re-eſtabliſh or confirm the Privileges of particular Churches and Monaſteries; or to conſecrate certain Churches; or to tranſlate the Relicks of Saints; or to paſs Judgment concerning the Differences between Churches and private Perſons about Temporalities; or laſtly, to condemn or to acquit ſome Perſons accuſed of Crimes.

Of the Provincial Councils of the twelfth Century.

The

The Council of Valence held in the Year 1100.

The Council of Valence in 1100.

IN the Year 1100. John and Benedict the Popes Legates, arrived in France, and call'd a Council at Autun, which was held in the Month of September at Valence. It was compos'd of twenty four Prelates, as well Archbishops as Bishops and Abbots, and the Deputies of the Archbishop of Lyons assisted therein. The Canons of Autun accus'd their Bishop of Simony, and the Matter was warmly debated on all sides, but the Determination of it was referr'd to the Council of Poitiers. Hugh Abbot of Flavigny, who was turn'd out by the Monks, obtain'd Letters of Restavration in this Council of Valence.

The Council of Valence in 1100.

The Council of Poitiers held in the Year 1100.

The Council of Poitiers in 1100.

THIS Council was assembled on the Octave of St. Martin in the same Year. The Bishop of Autun, not having sufficiently cleared himself of the Accusation brought against him, was depos'd and excommunicated, notwithstanding his Appeal to the Pope in this Council, and in the preceding: For the Legates had declared, that no regard ought to be had to that Appeal, since they were invested with the whole plenitude of the Pontifical Power. This Council was compos'd of eighty Dignitaries, as well Bishops as Abbots, and in it was pronounced a solemn Excommunication against King Philip for retaking Bertrade. The Abbot of St. Remy at Rheims was confirm'd in his Abby; the Case of Drogo, Treasurer of the Church of Châlons, was argu'd, and it was made to appear, that he could not possess that Benefice, having another in another Diocess: Lastly, a certain Church was adjudg'd to Ives Bishop of Chartres, which had been usurped from him, and sixteen Canons were made in this Council.

The first imports, That only the Bishops or Abbots shall be empower'd to administer Clerical Tonsure to the Monks, that is to say, to engage them in the Monastick Life by vertue of that Ceremony, and that they ought only to confer it on those Persons who actually turn Monks.

The second, That nothing shall be exacted upon account of such Tonsure, nay not so much as for the Sizzers and Napkins that are us'd in performing the Ceremony.

The third ordains, That Clerks shall not do Homage to Lay-men, and shall not receive Church-Livings from their Hands.

The fourth, That the Benediction of the Sacerdotal Habits, and of the Utensils belonging to the Altar, shall be reserv'd to the Bishop.

The fifth, That the Monks shall not be allow'd to wear the Maniple, unless they exercise the Office of Sub-deacons.

The sixth, That the Abbots shall not make use of Gantlets and Sandals, nor of the Ring, in officiating, unless they have obtain'd a Privilege from the See of Rome.

The seventh, That Prebends shall neither be bought nor sold, and that no Houshold-Provisions shall be exacted for conferring of them.

The eighth, That no Prebends, nor no other Benefices, shall be dispos'd of during the Life-time of the Incumbents.

The ninth, That the Clerks and Monks shall not buy any Altars or Tithes of the Laicks.

The tenth declares, That the regular Canons may baptize, preach, enjoyn Penance, and bury the Dead with a Licence from the Bishop.

The eleventh, That the Exercise of these Functions, is forbidden to Monks.

The twelfth ordains, that those Clerks, who carry about Relicks to get Money by them, shall not be suffer'd to preach.

The Council of Poitiers in 1100.

The thirteenth, that the Archbishops shall not exact of the Bishops, nor the Bishops of the Abbots, any Copes, Carpets, Basons, or Napkins, for their Consecration.

The fourteenth, that Laicks shall have no share in the Offerings made at the Altar, nor in the Gratuities allow'd to the Priests, especially upon the account of Burials.

The fifteenth, that no authoriz'd Judges shall seize on the Revenues of the Bishops, either in their Life-time, or after their Death.

The sixteenth, and last Canon, confirms every Thing that Pope Urban had ordain'd in the Council of Clermont; particularly concerning Tithes and Altars unjustly retain'd by Laicks, as also concerning the Celibacy of Priests, Deacons, Sub-deacons, and Canons, and the Prohibition to hold two Prebends, or two Dignities in two several Churches. Moreover it is related in a certain ancient Chronicle, that this Council ordain'd, that the Bishops should have a Right to redover their Possessions.

King Philip, to cause the Excommunication which was denounced against him in the Council of Poitiers to be taken off, wrote to the Pope, that he was ready for the future not to have to do carnally with Bertrade. Whereupon the Pope refer'd the Management of that Affair to Richard Bishop of Albano his Legate, who held at Beaugency a Council of the Bishops of the Provinces of Rheims and Sens, in which the King and Bertrade took an Oath upon the Holy Gospels, that they would no longer have carnal Copulation together, and that they would not see one another, but in the Presence of such Persons as could not be suspected, till they had obtain'd a Dispensation from the Pope. However the Bishops and the Legate durst not give them Absolution, but reserv'd the Determination of the Matter to the Pope: Afterwards Richard being departed from France, the Pope granted a Commission for that purpose to Lambert Bishop of Arras, with the Archbishops and Bishops of the Provinces of Rheims, Sens and Tours, whom he impower'd to absolve the King, in case he renounc'd his unchast Correspondence with Bertrade, and engag'd no longer to see her, unless it were in the presence of unsuspected Persons. At last, Lambert Bishop of Arras, Diambert Archbishop of Sens, Radulphus Archbishop of Tours, and many of their Suffragans, being conven'd at Paris A. D. 1105. receiv'd the Oaths of the King and of Bertrade, conformably to the Tenor of the Pope's Letter, and gave them Absolution upon those Conditions.

The Council of Poitiers in 1100.

The Council of Anse.

The Council of Anse.

IN the Year 1100. the Archbishops of Canterbury, Lyons, Tours, and Bourges, and eight Bishops, assembled at Anse near Lyons, held a Council, in which they debated Matters relating to the Voyage to the Holy Land, and excommunicated all those Persons, who had taken upon them the Cross, but had not made the Journey, till they should perform their Vow.

The Council of Anse.

The Council of Troyes.

The Council of Troyes in 1104.

RICHARD Biſhop of Albano, Legate of the See of Rome, held a numerous Council at Troyes in Champagne A. D. 1104. in which Godfrey was choſen Biſhop of Amiens, and Hubert Biſhop of Senlis accuſed of Simony, clear'd himſelf by Oath: This Council approv'd of, and confirm'd the Privileges of the Monaſteries of the Church of St. Peter at Troyes, and of the Abby of Moleſme.

The Council of Troyes in 1104.

The Council of Beauvais held in the Year 1114.

The Council of Beauvais in 1114.

GODFREY, who was ordain'd Biſhop of Amiens in the preceding Council, being ill us'd in that Country, took a Reſolution to quit his Biſhoprick; inſomuch that in the Year 1114. Conon, the Pope's Legate, having call'd a Council at Beauvais, the People of Amiens demanded another Biſhop, and Godfrey's Letter was read, in which he declar'd that he had renounc'd his Biſhoprick. The Council, that nothing might be done with precipitation, reſerv'd that Affair to be determin'd, in the Council of Soiſſons. However they made a Conſtitution in which it was declar'd, That the Revenues, of which the Churches had a quiet Poſſeſſion during a Year and a Day, ſhould belong to them forever; provided that this Poſſeſſion ſhould take Place only againſt Lay-Men, and that a Poſſeſſion of thirty Years ſhall be requiſite to transfer a Right from one Church to another.

The Council of Beauvais in 1114.

The Council of Rheims held in the Year 1115.

The Council of Rheims in 1115.

CONON, held a Council the next Year at Rheims, in which he excommunicated the Emperor Henry, and oblig'd Godfrey, to return to Amiens.

The Council of Rheims in 1115.

The Council of Toulouſe held in the Year 1119.

The Council of Toulouſe in 1119.

POPE Calixtus II. being arriv'd in France, held June 6. A. D. 1119. a Council at Toulouſe, compos'd of certain Cardinals, and of the Archbiſhops and Biſhops of Aquitaine, in which he publiſh'd ten Canons.

The firſt, is againſt thoſe who buy or ſell Spiritual Livings.

The ſecond imports, that no Man ſhall be made a Provoſt, Arch-Prieſt, or Dean, who is not a Prieſt; nor an Archdeacon, who is not a Deacon.

The third ordains, that Hereticks, who contemn the Communion of the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, the Baptiſm of Infants, Holy Orders, and Lawful Wedlock, ſhall be excommunicated, and that the ſame Puniſhment ſhall be inflicted on their Adherents.

The fourth, forbids Princes and Lay-men to poſſeſs Tithes, Oblations, Monaſteries, or other Revenues belonging to the Churches.

The fifth, prohibits to make Slaves of Free-men.

The ſixth ordains, that Clergy-men ſhall not be oblig'd to perform any manner of Service to Laicks for Church-Revenues.

The ſeventh, that none ſhall ſeize on the fourth Part of the Offerings which belong to the Biſhop.

The eighth, that neither Biſhops, nor Prieſts, nor any other Eccleſiaſtical Perſons, ſhall be permited to leave their Benefices to their Heirs, as an Inheritance by Right of Succeſſion.

The ninth, that nothing ſhall be exacted for the Conſecrated Oyls, Holy Chriſm, or the Burial of the Dead.

The tenth, that the Monks, Canons, or Clerks, who quit their Profeſſion, ſhall be excommunicated.

The Council of Toulouſe in 1119.

The Council of London held in the Year 1125.

The Council of London 1125.

IN the Year of our Lord 1125. John de Crema, Legate of the See of Rome, William Archbiſhop of Canterbury, Turſtin Archbiſhop of York, twenty Biſhops, and about forty Abbots, aſſembled at London, made ſeventeen Decrees, in which they prohibit Simony; to give or to receive any Thing for Ordinations; to receive a Spiritual Living from the Hands of Laicks; to chuſe a Succeſſor to ſuch Livings; to confer them on Perſons who are not in Orders; to deprive a Clergy-man of a Benefice without a Legal Sentence paſſed againſt him by his Biſhop; to ordain one who belongs to anothers Dioceſs; to entertain one who has been excommunicated by his Biſhop. Clerks are likewiſe forbidden to cohabit with ſtrange Women, and to follow Uſury; Witchcraft is condemn'd, and Marriages are prohibited between Relations to the ſeventh Degree; but it is declar'd, that Husbands who endeavour to get their Wives divorced, under pretence of Conſanguinity, are not allow'd to make Proof of it by Witneſſes.

The Council of London 1125.

The Council of London in the Year 1127.

The Council of London 1127.

WILLIAM Archbiſhop of Canterbury, held another Council at London two Years after the former; in which he renew'd the moſt part of thoſe Conſtitutions, adding ſome others againſt the Plurality of Benefices, alſo concerning the Reſtitution of Tithes, and the Plainneſs that ought to be obſerv'd by the Abbeſſes in their Habits and Attire.

The Council of London 1127.

The Council of London held in the Year 1138.

The Council of London 1138.

PArt of the ſame Conſtitutions were reviv'd in the Council held at London, A. D. 1138. during the Vacancy of the See of Canterbury, by Alberic Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia, the Pope's Legate in England. This Council was compos'd of eighteen Biſhops, and about thirty Abbots, and in it were publiſh'd ſeventeen Canons; of which the following are not comprehended in the preceding Councils: viz. The ſecond, which forbids the keeping of the conſecrated Elements in the Euchariſt, above eight Days, and ordains, that they ſhall be reverently carry'd to the Sick by the Prieſts or Deacons, and even by Lay-men, in caſe of Neceſſity: The fourth, which prohibits a Biſhop, who is ſent for by another Biſhop to conſecrate a Church, to exact any Thing beſides his Right of Procuration: The tenth, in which is referr'd to the Pope the giving of Abſolution to thoſe who have miſus'd Prieſts, or Perſons conſecrated to God: The twelfth, being a Prohibition to build a Chappel without a Licence from the Biſhop: The thirteenth, in which Church-men are forbidden to engage in Warlike Affairs, and to bear Arms: The fourteenth, prohibiting Monks to quit their Profeſſion: The fifteenth, which forbids Abbeſſes to be attir'd, and to have their Heads dreſſed after the manner of Secular Women: And the ſeventeenth, which imports, That School-Maſters ſhall not be permitted to let out their Schools to others for Money. Laſtly, Theobald Abbot of Bec, was choſen Archbiſhop of Canterbury in this Council, and divers means were treated of for the making Peace between the Kings of England and France.

The Council of London 1138.

The Council of Rheims held in the Year 1131.

The Council of Rheims 1131.

POpe Innocent II. as it has already been declar'd, held a Council at Rheims, A. D. 1131. in which he crown'd Lewis ſirnam'd the Young, King of France, and publiſh'd ſeventeen Canons very advantageous to the Church, but ſince they are recited in the ſecond general Council of Lateran, it were needleſs to produce an Extract of them in this Place.

The Council of Rheims 1131.

The

The Council of Rheims held in the Year 1148.

The Council of Rheims in 1148.

THis Council conven'd by Pope Eugenius III. March 22. A. D. 1148. publiſh'd eighteen Canons, which are all among thoſe of the ſecond general Council of Lateran. We have already given an Account of the Tranſactions therein, relating to the Condemnation of Gillebert de la Porrée.

The Council of Rheims in 1148.

The Council of Tours held in the Year 1163.

The Council of Tours in 1163.

THis Council held at Tours by Pope Alexander III. on the 28. Day of April, was compos'd of ſeventeen Cardinals, 127 Biſhops, and of a very great Number of Abbots, and other Eccleſiaſtical Perſons. Arnulphus, Biſhop of Liſieux, made an excellent Diſcourſe before mention'd; Alexander renew'd his Bull, of Excommunication againſt Octavian, and the ten following Canons were publickly ſet forth.

The firſt, forbids the dividing of Prebends, and the changing of Dignities.

The ſecond, condemns Uſury, more eſpecially that by Vertue of which the Intereſt of Things left in pawn by poor People, amounts to a greater Sum than the Principal.

In the third, Clergy-men are forbidden to beſtow Churches, Tithes, or Offerings on Laicks.

The fourth, is againſt the Albigeois, which we have already recited in diſcourſing of thoſe People.

The fifth, prohibits the letting out of Churches to Prieſts for an Annuity or yearly Rent.

The ſixth, forbids the exacting of any Thing for admiſſion into Orders; for Nominations to Benefices; for the Burial of the Dead; for the Holy Chriſm; and for conſecrated Oils.

The ſeventh, is a Prohibition to Biſhops to grant Commiſſions to Deans, or to Arch-Prieſts, for the carrying on of Judiciary Proceedings in their room, or inſtead of Archdeacons.

By the eighth, Monks are forbiden to go out of their Cloiſters in order to ſtudy, or to become Profeſſors of the Civil Law, or to practiſe Phyſick.

The ninth, declares the Ordinations made by Octavian, and by the other Sciſmaticks or Hereticks, to be void and of none effect.

The tenth, propoſes new Methods for maintaining the Revenues and Liberty of the Churches, and ordains, That whenever the Chaplains, who reſide in the Caſtles, perceive any Injury to be done to the Church, they ſhall make an Addreſs to the Lord of the Caſtle, to demand Reſtitution; and if he neglect to do it within the ſpace of eight Days, the Celebration of the Divine Offices ſhall be ſuſpended in the Caſtle; except that of Baptiſm, Confeſſion, and the Communion, in caſe of Danger of Death: Only it is permitted to ſay Maſs privately once a Week in a neighbouring Village, to conſecrate the Hoſt: It is added, That if the Inhabitants of the Caſtles continue in their Obſtinacy forty Days, the Chaplains ſhall abſolutely abandon the Place. They are alſo order'd to retire in three Months, if they be charged with any manner of Services, and enjoyn'd to get Information when the Booty is brought in; whether any of it belong to the Churches, or be claim'd by Clergy-men: All the Vicars and Chaplains are requir'd to take an Oath to obſerve theſe Injunctions.

The Council of Tours in 1163.

By this Canon, the Inn-keepers and Inhabitants of Towns or Villages, are forbidden to entertain excommunicated Perſons: Church-yards and Eccleſiaſtical Revenues are exempted from all manner of Rent-charges and Aſſeſſments: The Excommunication to be inflicted on thoſe who miſuſe Clergy-men is reviv'd, with a Reſervation of that Cauſe to the See of Rome. All manner of Converſe or Correſpondence is prohibited with Perſons who lie under a Sentence of Excommunication: The Deans are enjoyn'd to take care that theſe Ordinances be duly put in execution, and to give notice to the Biſhop or Archdean, of the Treſpaſſes that ſhall be committed upon them. The Abbots, Monks, Priors, Abbeſſes and Prioreſſes, are likewiſe freed from all manner of Rent-charges, and Impoſitions. Laſtly, an Anathema is denounc'd againſt Clergy-men and Laicks, who ſhall preſume to buy or to ſell any Revenues or Poſſeſſions, which they know to belong to the Church.

The Council of Caſſel in Ireland.

The Council of Caſſel in 1172.

IN the Year of our Lord 1172. Henry II. King of England, having made himſelf Maſter of Ireland, call'd a Council at Caſſel, compos'd of the Prelates and other Clergy of Ireland, in which the following Canons were eſtabliſh'd.

The firſt imports, that all the Faithful in Ireland ſhall be oblig'd not to inter-marry with their near Relations, but to contract lawful Marriages.

The ſecond, that all the Children ſhall be made Catechumens at the Church-door, and ſhall be baptized in the Church.

The third, that all the Faithful ſhall pay to their reſpective Pariſh-Churches Tithes, as well of Cattel, and of the Fruits of the Earth, as of their other Revenues.

The fourth, that all the Church Revenues ſhall be exempted from all manner of Taxes and Impoſitions.

The fifth, that when a certain Sum is made up, that is to ſay, ſtipulated or agreed to be paid for the Murder of a Perſon; the Clergy-men, who are the Heirs of the deceaſed Party, ſhall not be oblig'd to pay any Part of the Fine.

The Council of Caſſel in 1172.

The ſixth, that all the Faithful when ſain Sick ſhall make their laſt Will and Teſtament in the preſence of their Confeſſor; and that they, who have a Wife and Children, ſhall divide their moveable Goods into three Parts; One of which ſhall be allotted to the Wife, another to the Children, and the third for the funeral Expences: That if they have no Children; they ſhall leave one Moiety of their Goods to their Wives; and if they have no Wife, their Children ſhall have a Moiety.

The ſeventh, that a Maſs and * Vigils ſhall be ſaid for thoſe who die after having made Confeſſion, and that the accuſtomed Duties ſhall be paid to them.

* A ſort of Service for the Dead.

The eighth, that Divine Service ſhall be celebrated in all the Churches, according to the Rites and Cuſtoms of the Church of England.

The Council of Avranches held in the Year 1172

The Council of Avranches 1172.

THirteen Canons were publiſhed in the Council which was held at Avranches A. D. 1172. by the Cardinals Theoduin and Albert, for the giving of Abſolution to Henry II. King of England.

The firſt, forbids the conferring of Benefices with the Cure of Souls on Children.

The ſecond, is a Prohibition to beſtow on the Sons of Prieſts, the Churches that were poſſeſſed by their Fathers.

The third, is likewiſe a Prohibition to give part of the Offerings to Laicks.

The fourth, prohibits the appointing of Churches to be ſerv'd by annual Vicars.

The fifth, obliges the Curates of large Pariſhes to provide a Vicar, when they have means to do it.

By the ſixth, the Ordination of Prieſts without a Title is prohibited.

The ſeventh, forbids the letting out of Churches to farm for a Year.

The eighth, prohibits the depriving the Prieſts, who preform their Functions therein, of a third Part of the Tithes belonging to them.

The ninth, grants a Licence to thoſe Perſons, who are in poſſeſſion of Tithes, t obeſtow them on ſuch Clerks as they ſhall think fit, on condition that they ſhall After-wards return to the Church to which they belong of very good Right.

The Council of Avranches 1172.

The tenth, forbids a Husband to turn Monk, whilſt his Wife remains in the Secular State; unleſs they be both too old to get any Children: The ſame Thing is forbidden with reſpect to the Wife.

The eleventh, adviſes Faſting and Abſtinence during the time of Advent.

The twelfth, prohibits the placing of Clergy-men as Judges in the Civil Courts of Judicature.

The thirteenth, determines nothing as to the Eſtates of excommunicated Perſons; the Perquiſites claim'd for the Benedictions of Marriages and Baptiſm; and for the giving of Abſolution to thoſe who lye under a Sentence of Excommunication; by reaſon that the Biſhops of Normandy refus'd to admit that Decree.

The Council of London, held in the Year 1175.

The Council of London in 1175.

THE two Henries, Kings of England, being arriv'd at London, met with Richard Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the reſt of the Prelates of the Realm, who held a Council on the Sunday preceding the Feſtival of the Aſcenſion, in which the Archbiſhop Richard publiſhed the following nineteen Canons.

The firſt ordains, that they who have enter'd into holy Orders, and keep a Concubine, whom they refuſe to expel, ſhall be depriv'd of all Manner of Eccleſiaſtical Office and Benefice: That the Clerks who are in Orders, below the Degree of a Subdeacon, and are married, ſhall not be divorced from their Wives; but ſhall no longer enjoy their Spiritual Livings: That they who are Subdeacons, or in ſuperior Orders, and contract Marriage, ſhall be compell'd to part with their Wives: And laſtly, That the Sons of Prieſts ſhall be uncapable to ſucceed their Fathers in the Churches poſſeſſed by them.

The ſecond, forbids Clergymen to enter Victualling Houſes, to eat or to drink there, except when they are travelling on the Road.

By the third, Clerks, who are in Orders, are forbidden to aſſiſt at Trials in capital Caſes.

The fourth ordains, that the Archdeacon ſhall oblige thoſe Clergymen who wear long Locks of Hair to cut them off, and that they ſhall be cloath'd modeſtly.

By the fifth, Biſhops are prohibited to ordain the Clergy of another Dioceſs, by reaſon of the Inconveniences that may ariſe from that Practice.

The ſixth, forbids the Trial of Criminals to be manag'd in Churches, or in Church-yards.

The ſeventh and eighth, renew the Prohibitions to exact any Thing for the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments; for the burying of the Dead; or for admittance into Orders, or the Monaſtick State.

The Council of London in 1175.

The ninth, in like manner, forbids the making over of Churches to any Perſon under Pretence of endowing them; as alſo the exacting of any thing for the Preſentation to a Benefice.

The tenth, prohibits religious Perſons to follow the Trade of Merchandizing, or to be Farmers, and likewiſe Laymen to take Spiritual Livings to farm.

By the eleventh, Clergymen are prohibited to bear Arms.

The twelfth imports, that the Vicars who endeavour to retain the Benefices of thoſe who have the Title, contrary to their Promiſe or Engagement, ſhall be no longer ſuffer'd to exerciſe their Functions in the ſame Dioceſs.

The thirteenth ordains, that Tithes ſhall be paid of all Things.

The Tenor of the fourteenth is, that a Clergyman, who is caſt in his Trial, ought to be condemn'd to defray the Charges of it; and that if he has not wherewithall to pay, he ſhall be puniſh'd according to the Biſhop's Diſcretion.

The fifteenth ordains, that there ſhall be only ten particular Prefaces, for the Feſtivals which are ſpecified in that Canon.

The ſixteenth, prohibits the adminiſtring of the conſecrated Bread in the Communion ſteept in Wine.

The ſeventeenth, forbids the Conſecration of the Euchariſt any otherwiſe than in a Gold or Silver Chalice, and aboliſhes the Uſe of Tin Chalices.

By Virtue of the eighteenth, clandeſtine Marriages are forbidden.

The nineteenth, is a Prohibition to marry Children, who have not attain'd to a competent Age of maturity, unleſs it be in caſe of Neceſſity, or for the promoting of Peace.

The Synod of York, held in the Year 1195.

The Synod of York in 1195.

HUbert Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the Pope's Legate in England, held at York a Synod of the Clergy of that Church in the Month of June, A. D. 1195. in which, after having depos'd Robert Abbot of St. Mary, by reaſon of his Weakneſs and continual Diſtempers, he publiſhed certain Ordinances relating to Church-Diſcipline, more eſpecially about the Celebration of the Euchariſt.

The firſt imports, that the ſalutary Hoſt, being the moſt excellent of the Sacraments, the Prieſt ought to uſe all poſſible Diligence and Application, to the end that it may be conſecrated with Humility, received with Fear, and diſtributed with Reverence: That it is requiſite that the Miniſter of the Altar be ſure that he offer Bread and Wine with the Water in the Sacrifice; and that he cannot celebrate the Maſs, unleſs he have a Miniſter who is endu'd with ſome meaſure of Knowledge: That care ought to be taken to keep the Hoſt in a neat Box, to renew it every Sunday, and to carry it to the Sick in a Clerical Habit, and with Diſcretion.

The ſecond, enjoyns the Archdeacons to take care that the Canon of the Maſs, which he calls Secretum Miſſæ, be very correct.

The third, forbids Prieſts to oblige Laicks to cauſe a certain Number of Maſſes to be ſaid inſtead of Penance, or to make Bargains for the Price of Maſſes.

The fourth, contains a Prohibition to require more than three Perſons to ſtand as Sureties for a Child at the Baptiſmal Font; that is to ſay, two God-fathers and one God-mother, when it is a Boy; or two God-mothers and one God-father, if it be a Girl: Deacons are likewiſe forbidden to baptize, except in a Caſe of very great Extremity, or to adminiſter the Euchariſt, or Penance; but Prieſts are enjoyn'd to go readily whenever they are ſent for to baptize Children, or to give the holy Communion to ſick Perſons.

The Synod of York in 1195.

The fifth, provides for the keeping of Churches, and their Ornaments, in good Repair; and ordains, That the Euchariſt ſhall be conſecrated in a Silver Chalice, in thoſe Churches that have Means to procure one.

The ſixth imports, that the Clergymen, who have receiv'd the Crown from the Hands of the Biſhop, ſhall have Tonſure with it; but if they neglect to obſerve this Ordinance, they ſhall be compell'd to do it by the Forfeiture of their Benefices; and they who have receiv'd neither, by the Order of the Archdeacon or Deans. He recommends to Prieſts the wearing of Habits ſuitable to their Profeſſion.

By the ſeventh it is enjoyn'd, That Eccleſiaſtical Juſtice ſhall be adminiſter'd Gratis.

The eighth, ordains the Payment of Tithes without any Diminution.

The ninth, prohibits Monks to take Offices or Licences from their Superiors to farm, and to travel or to go out of their Monaſtery without a juſt Cauſe, and without a Companion: As for the Nuns, they are likewiſe forbidden to go out of their Convents, unleſs accompanied with their Abbeſs or Prioreſs.

The tenth, forbids the letting out of Tithes to farm to Laicks, although they were aſſociated with a Clergyman.

The eleventh ordains, that the Curates ſhall publiſh thrice a Year the Excommunication againſt perjur'd Perſons with extinguiſhed Candles, and ſhall denounce them excommunicated every Sunday. This Caſe is reſerv'd to the Archbiſhop, to the Biſhop, or to the Grand Penitentiary.

The twelfth, renews the Prohibitions ſo often made, That Clergymen ſhould keep unchaſt Correſpondence with Women, and regulates the Manner of trying thoſe who are accus'd of that Crime.

The

The Council of Montpellier, held in the Year 1195.

The Council of Montpellier in 1195.

MR. Michael, Legate of the See of Rome, paſſing over to Spain A. D. 1195. upon occaſion of an inrode which the Saracens had made againſt the Chriſtians in the Territories of his moſt Catholick Majeſty, who was oblig'd to retire to thoſe of the King of France; held a Council of the Biſhops of the Province of Narbonne at Montpellier, in which he reviv'd and publiſhed many Decrees of the latter Councils and Popes; amongſt others, ſome about Peace and Truce; againſt Robbers and Pyrates; concerning Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, and the Prohibition to lay Taxes on Churches; againſt Uſurers; about the Habits and Manners of the Clergy; the Frugality to be obſerv'd by Biſhops in keeping their Tables, &c. He leaves the Archbiſhop of Narbonne, and his Suffragan Biſhops, at liberty to denounce Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures againſt the Infringers of theſe Ordinances, or to ſuperſede them, accordingly as they ſhall judge moſt expedient, leſt the Hereticks ſhould take an occaſion from a general Suſpenſion of long continuance, to pervert the Faithful, and to corrupt their Principles.

The Council of Montpellier in 1198.

CHAP. XX.

Obſervations on the Eccleſiaſtical Affairs of the Twelfth Century.

Obſervations on Eccleſiaſtical Affairs.

THE Illuſtrations that we have inſerted in the Body of this Work, as to the moſt important Eccleſiaſtical Affairs of the Twelfth Century, may ſerve to ſuperſede any farther Pains that might be expected here, in making ſeveral Remarks on the Doctrine and Diſcipline of that Age. For, as to the Original and Progreſs of Scholaſtick Divinity, recourſe may be had to what we have ſaid in the XV Chapter. As to the Manner of explaining the Holy Scriptures, it would be requiſite to conſult the Obſervations made in Chap. XVI. And as to the Reception of Gratian's Decretal, only to peruſe what has been related in Chap. XVII. Neither is it neceſſary to enlarge on the Hereſies and Errors which appear'd in the Church in thoſe Times, or on the Doctrines that were eſtabliſhed againſt them, ſince we have already treated of them in particular Chapters. Indeed the Affair of the Inveſtitures might ſupply us with ſome Reflections, if we had not diſcourſed at large on that Subject in the ſecond Chapter; ſo that nothing more remains to be ſaid, concerning the Schiſms of the Popes, and the Conteſts they had with the Emperors and Kings, which rent the Church, and occaſion'd innumerable Calamities. I ſhall only obſerve here, That theſe Diſſenſions were ſo far from diminiſhing the Power of the Popes, that they ſerv'd even to corroborate and augment it: For it was in this Century, that they eſtabliſhed their Sovereignty in Rome, and their Independency of the Emperor, and even aſſum'd to themſelves a Right of conferring the Imperial Crown: They extended their Juriſdiction and Authority over the Churches farther than they had hitherto done, and met with much leſs Oppoſition in their Attempts than in former Times. The moſt part of the Councils were call'd either by them, or by their Legates, and they were the Authors of the Conſtitutions that were made therein, and to which the Biſhops ſcarce did any Thing elſe but give their Conſent. Appeals to the Pope in all ſorts of Cauſes, and in favour of all ſorts of Perſons, were become ſo frequent, that no Affair was tranſacted, the Determination of which was not immediately referr'd to the Court of Rome; which oblig'd thoſe Perſons, who had any Zeal for the maintaining of Church-Diſcipline, and among others St. Bernard, publickly to complain of the Abuſe. And indeed, they were conſtrain'd to find out ſome means to prevent it, in the third General Council of Lateran, by forbidding Appeals that were enter'd before the Sentence was pronounced, and by ordaining that the Appellants ſhould be oblig'd to proſecute them within a limited Time.

Of the Authority of the Pope.

The Diſcipline of the Church was likewiſe weaken'd by the frequent uſe of Diſpenſations, which were granted at Rome, with ſo much facility, that that Abuſe is eſteem'd by St. Bernard as one of the moſt notorious Diſorders that ever happen'd in the Church. The Popes had a very great ſhare in the Collating of Biſhopricks: For although the Biſhops were then choſen by the Clergy, and ordain'd by the Metropolitan; nevertheleſs the Deciſion of the Differences that aroſe about the Validity of the Election, being of neceſſity referr'd to the Conſiſtory of Rome, the Popes had an abſolute Power to favour whom they ſhould think fit; and if the Metropolitan refus'd to ordain him, whoſe Election was approv'd by them, they were in a Capacity to ordain him themſelves. Sometimes they ſent a Legate to aſſiſt on their behalf in the Election, where certain Perſons were recommended to the Electors, or to the Patrons of the Benefices, and it would be difficult to have no Regard to ſuch Recommendations. The Elections of the Popes were reſerv'd ſolely and wholly to the Cardinals, whoſe Dignity was advanced to ſuch a degree of Height, that they were not only reputed to be ſuperior to Biſhops, but alſo to Patriarchs and Primates. Theſe Cardinals were then choſen indifferently out of all Nations, and France produced above Fifty in that Age.

The Manners of the Clergy were more regular in this Century than in the two preceding; inſomuch that Simoniacal Practices, and other Enormities were not committed by Eccleſiaſtical Perſons, neither ſo frequently, nor ſo publickly: It was forbidden to exact any Thing for the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, for Ordination, or for the Collation of Benefices; yet this was practis'd at Rome, and elſewhere, under divers Pretences. Hitherto it was ſtrictly prohibited, that they who were in Orders ſhould marry; nevertheleſs when they did ſo, they were not divorced from their Wives; but only were degraded, turn'd out of the Clergy, or put to Penance: 'Twas only in this Century, that theſe Marriages were declar'd null, and that thoſe Perſons who had contracted them were conſtrain'd to be divorced; at leaſt the firſt Ordinance which imports ſuch an Injunction, is that of the firſt General Council of Lateran. The Conſtitution which excluded the illegitimate Sons of the Prieſts from the Clergy, was generally receiv'd, and many were enacted to prevent the Continuance of Spiritual Livings in Families, as it were a peculiar Inheritance. The Clergy-men us'd their utmoſt Efforts to exempt their Perſons and Eſtates from the Juriſdiction of the Secular Powers, and the Biſhops, who as yet were wont to adminiſter Eccleſiaſtical Juſtice perſonally, began to have Officials, whoſe Name and Functions were unknown till that Time: They likewiſe communicated their Epiſcopal Authority to Deans and Curates; which Cuſtom was forbidden by the third General Council of Lateran: They excommunicated or ſuſpended the Laicks, who uſurp'd or retain'd the Revenues belonging to the Church, or who meddled with the Diſpoſal of Spiritual Livings: However they themſelves ſometimes beſtow'd Altars, that is to ſay, Benefices on Lay-men, to enjoy the Revenues of them for a Time; and theſe ſorts of Benefices were call'd Perſonats: This Cuſtom prevail'd in like manner amongſt the Eaſtern Churches, where the Emperors and Patriarchs granted the Revenues of certain Monaſteries to Laicks. The Viſitations of the Ordinaries became ſo very chargeable to the Curates, that there was a Neceſſity of regulating their Retinue. Laſtly, all the Biſhops were oblig'd to have in their Cathedrals a Perſon capable of teaching the Arts and Sciences, and Univerſities began to be form'd in the great Cities; amongſt which thoſe of Paris and Bononia were the moſt Famous; the former for the Study of Divinity, and the other for that of the Civil Law.

Obſervations on Eccleſiaſtical Affairs.

Obſervations on the Diſcipline of the Sacraments.

The Doctrine of the Sacraments was reduced in form of a methodical Syſtem in this Age, and divers Queſtions were diſcuſſed on that Subject, which never were ſtarted before. We ſhall not at preſent inſiſt on them, but only obſerve certain particular Points of Diſcipline: The Adminiſtration of Baptiſm, even that of Infants, was reſerv'd for ſolemn Days; but Parents were not allow'd to aſſiſt at that of their Children, and the triple Immerſion was ſtill in uſe. The Cuſtom of publick Penance for publick Offences was not entirely aboliſhed; but it was very ſeldom put in practice, by reaſon that Remiſſion of Sins muſt be obtain'd by other Means, more eſpecially by Cruſades and Pilgrimages. The granting of Abſolution for certain Crimes began to be reſerv'd to the Pope, and the Biſhops: At firſt, the Species of a Sin in general was not reſerv'd, but a particular Action which appear'd to be enormous; and afterwards the Offence of thoſe Perſons, who abus'd Clergy-men, was generally referr'd to the Pope's Cognizance. Publick Confeſſions at the Point of Death were likewiſe in uſe; but the Benefit of Abſolution, and of the Communion, was deny'd, at leaſt in France, to Malefactors condemn'd to Death: Perſons who were in Diſtreſs, out of a Principle of Devotion, often caus'd themſelves to be laid on Aſhes, having their Bodies cover'd with a Hair-cloth, or clothed in the Habit of a Monk: Voluntary Mortifications, ſuch as the Penitential Shirt, the Hair-cloth, and the Scourging Diſcipline which Penitents gave themſelves, or caus'd to be given by others, were very much us'd in thoſe Times: They were wont to eat only once a Day, on the Days of Abſtinence; but they began to break their Faſt at the Hour of * None in Lent, and at Noon at another Time: Fridays Faſt was obſerv'd more regularly than that on Saturdays. The Participation of the Euchariſt under both Kinds was cuſtomary during the whole Century; although in the beginning of it ſome took the two Species both together, by ſteeping that of the Bread in that of the Wine, and in the end of the ſame Century, ſome took only one. The Term of Tranſubſtantiation was then us'd by certain Writers, to expreſs the Change of the Elements of Bread and Wine, into the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt. Then alſo the Prieſts receiv'd Alms for their Maſſes, but it was forbidden to demand any; and although they offer'd the Sacrifice for certain Perſons in particular, yet it was not doubted but that it was offer'd by them at the ſame Time for all the Faithful; to which purpoſe ſee a remarkable Paſſage of Arnulphus of Liſieux, which we have related in the Account of the Works of that Prelate. Conſtitutions were publiſhed about the Time, during which the Hoſts might be kept; but the Ordinations, and even the Conſecrations made by Schiſmaticks, or by Hereticks were reputed to be void, and of none effect.

* One of the Canonical Hours.

Obſervations on Eccleſiaſtical Affairs.

Remarks on the Monaſtick Life.

To ſay ſomewhat in like manner concerning the Monaſtick State, we ſhall obſerve that the Benediction of Monks, which was firſt introduced in the Eaſtern, and afterwards in the Weſtern Churches, became as it were neceſſary, and that an expreſs Profeſſion was enjoyn'd, which till then was never requir'd. This Benediction was uſually given by a Biſhop, or by an Abbot; nevertheleſs, a ſimple Monk might alſo perform the Ceremony, and it was not forbidden to be reiterated: When a Monk was made Abbot, he receiv'd the Benediction from his Diocefan; yet ſuch Benediction was not judg'd abſolutely neceſſary. It appears that it was cuſtomary in thoſe Times, both in the Levant, and in the Weſtern Countries, that the Monaſtery ſhould receive Money or Goods of thoſe Perſons, who were to be admitted into them; but that it was prohibited to exact any Thing on that Account. The Ciſtercian Order, which was ſmall and poor in the beginning, ſoon became ſo numerous and rich, that it gave ſome Cauſe of Jealouſy to that of Cluny, and to all the other Black Friers. There aroſe ſeveral Conteſts betwixt them, as well by reaſon of the Difference of their Cuſtoms, as upon Account of temporal Intereſts, and more eſpecially, becauſe the Ciſtercian Monks receiv'd thoſe of the Order of Cluny, who were deſirous to paſs over to them: It likewiſe fell out ſometimes, that the Ciſtercians retir'd to Cluny, and were there entertain'd; but they procur'd a Diſpenſation from the Pope for that purpoſe, and it does not appear, that thoſe of Cluny, who went to Ciſteaux, obſerv'd the ſame Formality. This Cuſtom of paſſing thus from an Order of a moderate, to another of a more auſtere Diſcipline, began to be introduc'd in the twelfth Century. The greateſt part of the Monaſteries obtain'd Exemptions of the Popes to withdraw themſelves from the Biſhop's Juriſdiction; an Abuſe that was condemned by St. Bernard, and which the Prelates were afterwards oblig'd to reſtrain in the third General Council of Lateran. Some conſiderable Abbots were permitted by the Pope to wear the Epiſcopal Ornaments; viz. the Mitre, the Dalmatick, the Gloves, the Sandals, and even the Crofier: Although thoſe who were of a more moderate Temper diſliked this Cuſtom; nevertheleſs it became ſo frequent, that many Abbots uſurped that Right, without any Licenee from the Pope; and it was neceſſary that the third General Council of Lateran ſhould forbid it them, as well as the ſimple Monks, who were not in Orders, the wearing of Maniples. Monks were likewiſe prohibited, in the firſt General Council of Lateran, to adminiſter the Sacraments, and to exerciſe any of the Functions of Curates; but this Prohibition did not hinder, but that many were taken out of Monaſteries to be made Biſhops and Cardinals. It was alſo very cuſtomary for Biſhops to retire in the end of their Life into Monaſteries, and having ſpent the Remainder of their Days in pious Exerciſes, to die in thoſe Places of retreat. The Order of Grandmont was founded in the beginning of the Century, by Stephen Muret; this Society being compos'd of Hermits dwelling in little Cells, which were ſeparated and ſhut up within the ſame Incloſure: The Rule which he enjoyn'd them to follow, was very judiciouſly compos'd, and approv'd of by the Popes, Urban III. and Clement III. It is alſo affirm'd, That the Order of the Carmelites began to be eſtabliſhed in the Year 1121. by certain Hermits of Mount Carmel, whom the Patriarch of Antioch got together to form a religious Society: They were Lay-men, who were wont to ſay the Office of the Virgin Mary, and were oblig'd to no other Vow but that of Obedience.

Obſervations on Eccleſiaſtical Affairs.

Regular Canons.

The Regular Canons were employ'd in adminiſtring the Sacraments, and in exercifing the Functions of Curates, when they were authoriz'd to that purpoſe, by their Biſhops: But ſome Prelates made a Scruple to admit them to ſuch Employments, and the Regular Canons themſelves were not very willing to be taken off from their ſolitary Life. At that Time there aroſe a kind of Conteſt between them and the Monks, about the Preeminence and Dignity of their Stations: The Order of Regular Canons was augmented by a new Congregation, of which St. Norbert was the Founder, A. D. 1120. They were call'd Canonici Tunicati, by reaſon of their Habit, whereas thoſe who bore the Name of St. Auguſtin were ſtyled Super pelliceati.

Military Orders.

With theſe Regular Canons may be joyn'd the Military Orders, which became very numerous in that Century, and were under the ſame Conduct and Rule: The moſt Ancient were thoſe of St. John of Jeruſalem, or the Knights Hoſpitallers, inſtituted in the beginning of the Century, to entertain the Pilgrims who were travelling to that City. The ſecond, are the Knights Templars, who had their Inſtitution in the Year 1118. and whoſe Office it was to provide for the Safety of the Pilgrims, by encountering thoſe who had diſturb'd them in their Journey. The Knights of the Teutonick Order, who profeſſed to perform both theſe Employments, were eſtabliſhed ſome Time after. Laſtly, in Imitation of theſe Orders, thoſe of St. James, and of Calatrava, were inſtituted in Spain, for the Pilgrimages of St. James in Galicia, and ſome others, in other Countries.

CHAP. I.

The Hiſtory of the different Revolutions in the Empire and Italy, during the Thirteenth Century.

The Revolutions in the Empire and Italy, during the thirteenth Century.

THE Affairs of the Church in this Century are ſo interwoven with thoſe of the Empire, that before we can enter upon Eccleſiaſtical Matters, we muſt lay down a Scheme of the State of Germany and Italy, of the principal Revolutions that have happen'd in them, and of the Scuffles that the Popes had with the Emperors, and the Princes of Italy. This is what I deſign to do in this Chapter.

Conteſts about the Empire between Philip and Otho.

The Emperor Henry VI. dying at Meſſina about the end of the Year 1197. or, as others will have it, at Palermo, at the beginning of 1198. left behind him a Son nam'd Frederick, of about ſeven Years of Age. Him by his laſt Will he made Heir and Succeſſor to all his Eſtates, as well as the Empire, to which he himſelf had been choſen ſome Time before by the Princes of Germany. He deſired the Pope to ſettle him in the Poſſeſſion of them; and to engage him, order'd that he ſhould receive from Frederick, for the Benefit of the Holy See, all thoſe Eſtates that had belonged to the Princeſs Mathilda, and ſome other Towns. In the meant while he conſtituted his Brother Philip, the Duke of Suabia, Regent of the Empire. Conſtantia the Mother of Frederick, demanded of the Pope to have him crown'd King of Sicily, which was accordingly done; but as for the Empire, Frederick was not put into Poſſeſſion of it: That being diſputed by Philip Duke of Suabia, who was choſen by the major Part of the Electors, and crown'd at Mentz by the Biſhop of Tarentaiſe; and alſo Otho Son of Henry Duke of Saxony, was elected by the Archbiſhop of Cologn, and ſome other German Princes; to whom the Country of Cologn, the Palatinate, Thuringen, and Livonia ſubmitted; while all the reſt of Germany were for Philip. The King of France ſtood for Philip, and England for Otho. Pope Innocent III. declared for Otho, confirm'd his Election, and rejected that of Philip, who nevertheleſs had the better of it in Germany, and by the Force of his Arms had brought many of thoſe that had acknowledged Otho to ſubmiſſion. Upon this, in the Year 1201. the Pope ſent his Legate Cardinal Guy Biſhop of Paleſtrina into Germany, to countenance Otho's Party; who ſtraight declared Philip no better than a Rebel, and commanded all the Germans, under pain of Excommunication, to acknowledge Otho for their Emperor. Still this did not put a ſtop to the Progreſs of Philip's Arms; who having drawn over Adolphus Archbiſhop of Cologn to his Side, got himſelf crown'd a ſecond Time by the Hands of this Archbiſhop, in the Year 1205. at Aix la Chappelle, maugre all the Oppoſition of the Pope's Legate; and, underſtanding that Conrade Archbiſhop of Mentz was dead, he got the Vacancy ſupply'd by the Election of Diepold, or Lupold Biſhop of Worms: But he was no ſooner gone from thence, but that the greater Part of the Canons proteſted againſt the Freedom of the Election; and thereupon having put in an Appeal to the Holy See, they re-aſſembled themſelves at Bingen, and elected Sifroy to the Archbiſhoprick of Mentz, whoſe Election was confirmed by the Pope, who likewiſe excommunicated Lupold, and the next Year by his Legate depoſed Adolphus Archbiſhop of Cologn, and choſe Bruno into his Place. In the Year 1206. Otho was beſieged in Cologn by Philip, and not thinking himſelf in a Condition to ſuſtain the Siege, retired with ſome Troops, accom-

The Revolutions in the Empire and Italy, during the thirteenth Century.

The Revolutions in the Empire and Italy, during the thirteenth Century.

accompanied by the new Archbishop Bruno; but being set upon by Philip, he was defeated, Bruno taken Prisoner, and Cologn forced to receive Philip for its Master. Otho secur'd himself in Saxony, and from thence pass'd into England. The Princes of Germany, being at length desirous to settle an entire Peace in the Empire, dispatch'd their Envoys in the Year 1027. to Pope Innocent, desiring him to acknowledge Philip, and apply himself to the reconciling of the two Pretenders to the Empire. The Pope agreed to the Proposition, but upon this Condition, that Philip's Daughter should be given in Matriage to Richard his Nephew. In Hopes to make this Design succeed, he sends three Legates into Germany, who were present at an Assembly held at Northuse upon the Christmas-Holy-days, where the two Kings concluded a Peace; Otho giving up the Empire to Philip, on Condition of marrying his Daughter, and being his Heir. Adolphus was in this Assembly absolved by the Legates, and Bruno set at Liberty by the Emperor. Philip did not enjoy the Peace long, for he was the next Year kill'd at Bamberg, by Otho Count Palatine of Witilspach, who was incens'd against him for engaging himself to give that Daughter to another, which he had before promised him in Marriage. Philip being dead, without any Consideration of the Right that Frederick King of Sicily had to the Imperial Crown, Otho was, by universal Consent of the Princes of Germany, chosen Emperor.

Otho acknowledg'd Emperor.

No sooner was Otho rais'd to this Dignity, but his old Adherents got the upper hand again, and routed those that had been for Philip. Bruno re-enter'd upon his Archbishoprick of Cologn, and Adolphus was depos'd; Sifroy took Possession of the Archbishoprick of Mentz, and drove out Lupold: Only Conrade Bishop of Spire, who had been Philip's Chancellor, retiring into a very strong Castle, would not make his Peace with Otho, nor pay him Allegiance, but upon Condition of continuing in his former Charge; which Otho was forced to allow him.

Otho goes into Italy, and there makes War.

Pope Innocent having Notice of Otho's Election, sent his Legates into Germany, to invite him to Rome, there to receive the Imperial Crown from his Hands. His Legates were received in an Assembly held at Wirtsburg in 1209. where they gave their Approbation of the Marriage that had been agreed upon between Otho, and the Daughter of Philip. The same Year, Otho took a Journey into Italy, and came to Rome, where he was received by Pope Innocent III. and crowned in St. Peters, the 4*th* of October. The Pope obliged him to take an Oath to defend the Patrimony of St. Peter; and the Romans demanding of him what was customary for Emperors to give in this Ceremony, there arose a Disturbance, in which the Romans coming to Blows with the Germans, there were many kill'd on both Sides; which made Otho remove instantly from Rome, and ravage all the Church-Lands, as well to revenge the Affront, as to mortify the Pope whom he began now to be jealous of. Upon this the Anger and Hatred of the Pope broke out against Otho to that Degree, that he threatned to excommunicate and depose him, if he did not cease those Hostilities: But Otho was so far from regarding it, that he took a Resolution to seize upon Romagna, and make himself Master of Sicily and Apulesa, which belong'd to Frederick, and whereof the Pope had had the Government ever since the Death of Constantia the Mother of that Prince. The Pope willing to put a Stop to such Designs as these, excommunicated the Emperor, and afterwards call'd a Council at Rome, wherein he declared the Empire void, and all the Subjects of it free from their Oath of Fidelity to Otho, forbidding them any more to acknowledge him for Emperor. He made this Sentence be published in Germany in the Year 1211. by Sifroy Archbishop of Mentz, who quickly repented of having done it; for the Count Palatine, the Duke of Brabant, and some other Princes of the Empire entered the Territories of his Archbishoprick with an Army, where they laid all waste, forcing him to retire for Safety into Thuringen. The Disturbances that the Publication of this Sentence had made in Germany, hastned Otho's Return Home. He call'd an Assembly at Nuremburg, about Whitsuntide the same Year; wherein he declared War against Herman Count of Thuringen, for protecting Sifroy Archbishop of Mentz, and for refusing any longer to acknowledge him Emperor. Straight he gathered his Troops, entered Thuringen, took two of the strongest Towns, and put all the Country to Fire and Sword. Being returned to Northuse, he celebrated his Marriage with the Daughter of Philip, who died within few Days after the Ceremony.

Sentence of Excommunication out against Otho.

Frederick chosen Emperor, goes into Germany.

In the mean while, Sifroy Archbishop of Mentz, the King of Hungary, the Archbishop of Treves, and the Count of Thuringen, with some other Princes of the Empire, resolve to revive the old Election of Frederick, and to make him Emperor in the Stead of Otho. They brought their Resolution into Practice, and having made a solemn Election of him anew, they sent two Deputies to carry him the Decree of his Election, and to invite him to come and take Possession of the Empire. Frederick made no Scruples but what he thought necessary to satisfy himself of their Fidelity, and being assur'd of that, he parted for Germany. He took Rome in his Way, and there desired Pope Innocent to crown him, but was put off by him with an Excuse, that he would send a Cardinal into Germany with him in the Quality of a Legate, to order the Princes of the Empire to relinquish Otho, and acknowledge him. Frederick went on his Journey, till he arrived at Constance; where a Number of the German Princes, especially those of Suabia, came to meet him with their Troops. Otho would fain have come and set upon him with his Army, but his Troops by little and little dropping away from him, he was forced to shift for himself. Frederick, on the contrary, was kindly received every where, and in a little Time made himself Master of Mentz, Cologn, and Aix la Chapelle, where he was crown'd Emperor in the Year 1214. Afterward he enter'd into an Alliance with Philip Augustus King of France. Otho who on his Part was in League with John King of England, Renaud Earl of Bologn, and Ferdinand Earl of Flanders, having raised a numerous Army against the King of France, join'd Battle with him at Pont de Bowines in Flanders, the 15*th* of July, in the Year 1214. King Philip's Person was there in great Danger, but the confederate Army was entirely routed, and Otho, after having lost his whole Army, forc'd to fly. He, with much ado, got into Saxony, where he died, some say in the Year 1216. others in 1218. never caring to meddle in State Affairs after this Defeat.

Otho, by his Death, left Frederick in peaceable Possession of the Empire. This Prince made himself be crown'd a second Time, by the Hands of Sifroy Archbishop of Mentz; and again a third Time by the Pope's Legate. At this last Coronation, he made a Vow to go to the Assistance of the Holy Land, and gave to the Holy See the Earldom of Fondi, in the Kingdom of Naples. Upon this Pope Innocent wrote to the Princes of Germany in his Behalf, and engaged Theodorick Archbishop of Treves, to get that City to acknowledge him: So that in 1215. Frederick saw himself in a peaceable Possession of the whole Empire.

Frederick crown'd Emperor by Honorius III.

In the Year 1220. he was crown'd Emperor by Honorius III. the Successor of Innocent; and for an Acknowledgment, he gave to the Holy See some Lands in Italy, and engaged himself anew to go the Holy Voyage: But within a while after, he and the Pope fell out about two Earls of Tuscany, whom he had rob'd of their Lands, and who were fled to Rome for Relief. The City of Bologn, and some other Places in Italy, rising against him, he came to Rome, and broke entirely with the Pope, by attempting to turn those Bishops out of the Churches which the Pope had put in, and to put in some of his own; pretending it to be a Right of the Kings of Sicily, which Pope Innocent III. had encroach'd upon during his Minority. The Pope rebuk'd him soundly for his Boldness, and threatned him with Excommunication, if he did not let Things continue as they were. Frederick not minding to hearken to him, Honorius the Third darted the Thunderbolt of Excommunication upon him, declar'd him to have forfeited all his Kingdoms, and freed all his Subjects from the Oath and Allegiance they had sworn to him; Which was afterwards the Occasion of a Multitude of Misfortunes to the Church and Empire. This Sentence nevertheless did then little or no Execution, not any one thereupon revolting from Frederick: But, on the other Side, in an Assembly of the Princes of Germany, held at Wirtsburg in the Year 1222. Frederick got his Son Henry, then but twelve Years old, chosen King of Germany, and crown'd at Aix la Chapelle, by Engelbert Archbishop of Cologn.

Scuffles between the Pope and Frederick.

The Sentence of the Pope against Frederick.

Frederick's Departure for the Holy Land.

Honorius the Third died before he could push the Sentence Home against Frederick; Gregory the IX. who in the Month of April, in the Year 1227. succeeded him, contented himself to warn Frederick of his Journey to the Holy Land, as he feared an Anathema. Henry King of Germany call'd a General Assembly of all the Princes of the Empire at Aix la Chapelle, at the Beginning of the Year 1227. where the Expedition for the Holy Land was resolv'd upon. Upon this, all that belong'd to the Croisade, repair'd to Brines ready to embark, where Frederick, who had engag'd himself to command them, made them wait a pretty while, pretending himself very ill. At last he makes Shift to come to them by August, and embarks to go into Asia, but he was no sooner there, but he was back again. The Pope having Notice of his Return, rubs up the old Sentence that his Predecessor had set out against him; yet with a Promise of Absolution, if he would undertake the Voyage to the Holy Land. Frederick hereupon published four Manifesto's against the Popes and Cardinals: The first he addressed to all Kings, the second to the Cardinals; and the third to the People of Rome; in all which he complains of the Excommunication which the Pope had thrown at him: and a fourth is presented to all Princes, giving them Advice against Churchmen. For all this, not long after Frederick took a Resolution of going into Syria, and put it in Execution in August 1228. When he went, he sent Ambassadors to the Pope to demand the Absolution. But the Pope absolutely refus'd him, gave Order to the Knights Templars, and Hospitalers, to cross him in all his Designs, as a profest Enemy of the Church; and forbid all that were upon the same Expedition in Lombardy and Apulesa to join him. In the mean while, Renaud Son of the Duke of Spoletto, whom Frederick had left Regent of the Kingdom of Sicily, during his Absence, had entered into the Marquisate of Ancona, and the Valley of Spoletto; against whom the Pope rais'd his Troops on the other Side, and sent Gregory the IXth's Excommunication of Frederick.

Fredericks Voyage to the Holy Land.

The Revolutions in the Empire and Italy, during the thirteenth Century.

them into Apuleia, under the Command of John de Briennes King of Jeruſalem, who made himſelf Maſter of many Towns. Frederick receiving this News in Syria, where he had ſucceſfully taken ſome Towns from the Saracens, was obliged to clap up a Treaty with the Sultan; the Conditions of which were advantageous enough to the Chriſtians, viz. That the Sultan ſhould deliver into their Hands the City and all the Kingdom of Jeruſalem, except the Temple and ſome Caſtles; and that there ſhould be a Truce of ten Years between the Chriſtians and Saracens. In purſuance of this Treaty, Frederick took Poſſeſſion of Jeruſalem, and made himſelf be crown'd King thereof in the Lent of the Year 1229. He gave Notice to the Pope, that he had made ſuch a League with the Sultan: At which the Pope ſhewed no ſmall Diſſatisfaction, and accuſed Frederick of having treated with an Infidel, ſtill ſtirring up his Subjects what he could againſt him. Frederick hearing of this, made a quick Return into Apuleia, where bringing in an Army from Germany, he recover'd all the Towns that were taken or had revolted from him, and made a Repriſal upon the Church, by taking the Dutchy of Spoletto, the Marquiſate of Ancona, and the City of Benevento. This Succeſs did not make him ſo high, but that he was willing to ſue for the Pope's Friendſhip: To gain which he diſpatched the General of his Army, with the Archbiſhop of Meſſina, to the Pope, to deſire his Abſolution; which the Pope ſtill refuſed to agree to, but upon Condition that he ſhould pay Twenty ſix thouſand Ounces of Gold to the Church of Rome, for the Damage he had done it; and ſhould reſtore all the Lands that belonged to it. Frederick's Deputies being returned, he himſelf went to meet the Pope at Anagni, where he received his Abſolution, was reeſtabliſhed in his Empire, and declared King of the two Sicilies, and of Jeruſalem. The Pope and the Emperor ſeem'd to be very well reconcil'd upon the Occaſion, they eat together, and one would have hoped here had been a firm Peace eſtabliſh'd between them: yet 'twas not long before they broke again; for the Romans rebelling againſt the Pope, and Frederick coming to aſſiſt him with his Troops, there happen'd a Miſunderſtanding between them: The Pope accuſing Frederick for underhand Dealing with his Enemies, and Frederick again reproaching the Pope, for ſecretly treating with the Romans, and telling them that it was without his Conſent, that Frederick ſet upon them near Viterbo. Howſoever it was, Frederick left the Pope, retir'd to Piſa, and from thence paſs'd into Germany; but the Pope drew good Part of his Soldiers from him, by promiſing thoſe that would come into his Camp good Entertainment.

Frederick's Peace made with the Pope.

Frederick's Son Henry revolts againſt his Father.

Frederick found himſelf croſſed in Germany, by the Factions of the Princes, and ſuſpecting his Son Henry, he deprived him of the Government, and ſent him into Sicily, which very much diſpleas'd moſt of the Princes in Germany: But yet he made Shift to keep Germany in Peace, and having gathered his Troops together, he returns to Italy in 1235, and ſets upon thoſe Towns of Lombardy which had entered into League againſt him; he takes Verona and Vicenza, and lays all the Country round waſte. His Son Henry being diſcontented, enters himſelf into the League with the Towns of Lombardy, and had drawn over many of the German Princes to his Party, had not Frederick applied a ready Remedy, by getting the Pope's Letter, charging the Princes of Germany, not to take the Son's Part againſt the Father: And thereupon he arreſted and depoſed his Son, and baniſhed him into Apuleia, where he ended his Life the following Year in a Priſon. Frederick gets his ſecond Son Conrade elected King of Germany, and brings Vienna, and all Auſtria, which had hitherto oppoſed him, to an Acknowledgment of their Duty. While he was thus labouring to eſtabliſh his Power in Germany, he did not forget his Pretenſions to the Kingdom of Jeruſalem; and thinking that they had been encroach'd upon, he wrote to Pope Gregory by the Archbiſhop of Ravenna, to do him Juſtice in that Matter. The Pope gave the Archbiſhop Commiſſion in Quality of his Legate, to take Care of the Preſervation of the Rights of Frederick, which is an evident Proof, that from the Year 1230, the Pope had not made an open Breach of his Agreement with Frederick, till 1238. But in this Year, their Differences began to grow very hot, becauſe Frederick had made War upon thoſe Cities of Lombardy, that would not acknowledge him. The Pope ſent the Cardinals to him, to make him deſiſt from carrying on the War in Italy, but all in vain; for Frederick who was ſtrongeſt, continued his Progreſſes, defeated thoſe of Milan that oppoſed his Paſſage, took Breſcia, and all the other Cities of Lombardy, except Bologna and Parma. The Pope ſeeing that Affairs went but ill with him, would have retired to Rome, but there John Cincius, a Senator of Rome that the Emperor had gained, procured the Gates to be ſhut againſt him; yet the Pope, by the Aſſiſtance of his Friends that were in Poſſeſſion of the Capital, got into Rome, drove out Cincius, procured a Peace between the Venetians and Genoeſe, and taking Courage, made the States of Italy enter into a League againſt Frederick. He moreover exerciſed his Spiritual Arms againſt him, in publiſhing a Sentence of Excommunication againſt his Perſon, and in declaring all his Subjects diſpenſed with for the Oath of Fidelity to him: And in fine, to raiſe a powerful Enemy againſt Frederick, he ſends his Nuncio's into France, to offer the Imperial Crown to Earl Robert, Brother of St. Louis King of France; but that Prince refuſed it, and by the Advice of the French Lords, ſent back his Anſwer in theſe Words: "What ſtrange Spirit, or what "Boldneſs indeed is this in the Pope, that he ſhould go about "to rob of his Eſtates, and depoſe ſo great a Prince as Frederick, without either Proof or Acknowledgment of the "Crimes of which he is accuſed; and who, did he deſerve "ſuch Dealings, could not be lawfully depoſed but by a General Council? For his Enemies (of whom 'tis evident the "Pope is one of the Chief) ought not to be credited in thoſe "Things of which they accuſe him. As for Us, We ſee no "Reaſon hitherto to think him otherwiſe than innocent; he "has dealt with us as a good Prince and Neighbour, and we "have nothing to find Fault with either in his Fidelity or Religion, which is truly Catholick. Do not we know that "he has made War for the Name of JESUS CHRIST, and "has expoſed himſelf both by Sea and Land for the Church? "This is greater Religion than we can yet diſcover in the "Pope, who, inſtead of aiding and defending him that fought "God's Battles, did all he could to croſs and deſtroy him. "We do not deſire to throw our ſelves into ſo evident a Danger as attacking a Prince ſo powerful as Frederick, who "would be aſſiſted by ſo many Kingdoms, and whom the "Juſtice of his Cauſe alone is ſufficient to uphold. We ſee "very well how little the Romans care how laviſh we are of "our Blood, ſo we be but the Inſtruments to ſatisfy their "Paſſions; and we cannot but forſee, if the Pope ſhould happen to conquer by our Means, how he would trample all "the Potentates of the Earth under his Feet, exalted with the "Pride of having cruſh'd ſo great an Emperor as Frederick." He promiſed however to ſend his Deputies to Frederick, to know what his Sentiments were about Religion, aſſuring him that he was ready to perſecute and deſtroy all thoſe who had any evil Principles in that, tho' it were the Emperor or the Pope himſelf. Accordingly he ſends his Deputies to the Emperor, who acquainted him with the Propoſitions that the Pope's Nuncios had made. The Emperor aſſured them that he was a Catholick, and thanked the Deputies of France, who ſatisfied him that their Prince had no Deſigns againſt any Chriſtian Prince whatſoever, counting it ſufficient to be Brother to the King of France, which in their Opinion was more glorious than Emperor; the one being a King born, the other receiving his Title only by Election.

The War between Frederick and the Pope.

The Emperor and the Pope accuſed one another mutually in their publick Manifeſtos. The Emperor complain'd that the Pope had broken the Peace by entring with Arms into Sicily, while he warred in the Eaſt, by oppoſing his Paſſage into Italy, by aſſiſting the Lombards againſt him, and by having excommunicated him unjuſtly. The Pope, in Anſwer to theſe Reproaches, ſays, That he was obliged to employ both his ſpiritual and temporal Arms, for the Recovery of thoſe Lands which Frederick detained from the Church, to which they belonged: That he had offered himſelf to mediate a Peace between the Emperor and the Lombards, and that the Emperor refuſed to hearken to it: That he had heaped a Multitude of Favours upon Frederick, and that that Prince, in Acknowledgement of them, had aimed at nothing leſs than the Deſtruction of the Liberty of the Churches, the robbing them of their Poſſeſſions, the ſtopping and hindring Cruſades, and ruining the Authority of the Holy See. Theſe Accuſations on the one Side and the other, were follow'd by an inteſtine War; moſt of the Provinces and Cities in Italy being divided into two Parties, that of the Gibelins, which held with the Emperor and that of the Guelphs which was for the Pope. The Party of the Gibelins, being encouraged by the Preſence of the Emperor and his Army, almoſt always had the upper Hand, ſo that the greateſt Part of the Cities were brought under Obedience to the Emperor; and there had been good Reaſon to fear that he had taken Rome it ſelf, where he kept ſecret Correſpondence with the principal Citizens, had not the Pope made all the People of Rome take upon them the Croſs for their Defence. The noble Reſiſtance of theſe religious Soldiers, obliged Frederick to leave Rome, only laying all the Country about it waſte; his Army diſperſed themſelves all over Italy, and where-ever they came made Havock of the Goods of the Church, of Monaſteries and religious Orders. The Pope, to oppoſe this Torrent, publiſhed plenary Indulgences for all thoſe that would undertake the Holy War againſt Frederick, and called a general Council at Rome, to make a more ſolemn Matter of his Depoſition. Frederick, that he might put by this Thruſt, and prevent the ſitting of this Council, takes care to have all Paſſages by Sea and Land well guarded, for the ſtopping thoſe Prelates that would come to it. The Piſans who were ſet to guard the Sea Coaſts, having met with the Genoeſe Galleys, which were bringing a good Number of Cardinals, Biſhops, and other Prelates to the Council, ſet upon them, and having taken them, brought all the Prelates to Frederick, who put them all in Priſon. Much about the ſame Time, Frederick took a Caſtle of Campania, and in it many of the Pope's Relations, whom he cauſed all to be hanged. Gregory could not bear up under the Grief of ſo many diſmal Miſ-

The Sentence of Pope Gregory againſt Frederick.

The Revolutions in the Empire and Italy, during the thirteenth Century.

The Opinion of the French upon the Depoſition of Frederick.

Misfortunes, and so falling sick, died at Rome the 30*th* of September, in the Year 1241.

The Election of Celestine IV. and Innocent IV.

Pope Celestine the Fourth, who succeeded him, seemed very inclinable to a Peace; but living but eighteen Days, had not Time to make any Thing of it. After his Death the Holy See was vacant nineteen Months, because of the Imprisonment of the Cardinals; but Frederick having at last set them at Liberty, at the Request of Baldwin Emperor of Constantinople, they chose Cardinal Sinibaud a Genoese, Pope, who took the Name of Innocent the Fourth. This Pope, it was hoped, would conclude the Peace, having been a Friend of Frederick's, while he was Cardinal: And indeed he said as much at the Beginning of his Popedom, and made use therein of the Mediation of Baldwin. 'Twas agreed, that the Pope and Frederick should have a Meeting at Castellane; but the Pope, not willing to trust him, being afraid of being taken Prisoner, never came to the Place; or, if he did, made great Haste away again, took Ship at Civita Vecchia, and passed into France; where being kindly received by Order of King St. Louis, he seated himself at Lyons; and thither call'd a General Council, citing Frederick to make his Appearance.

A General Council at Lyons, in the Year 1245.

This Council began about the End of the Month of June, in the Year 1245. Baldwin Emperor of Constantinople, assisted there in Person, with the Patriarchs of Constantinople and Antioch, and the Archbishop of Aquileia or Venice, notwithstanding the Opposition of some, took his Place among the Patriarchs. The Kings of France and England sent thither their Deputies, so that what with Cardinals, Archbishops, Bishops, and the Deputies of those that could not come themselves, there were present about a hundred and forty six. The Emperor Frederick did not appear himself, but sent Thadæus of Sessa, with a joint Deputation, to act in his Name with the Bishop of Strasburg, Hugh General of the Teutonic Order, and Peter des Vignes. The Pope assembled the Prelates on the Monday after the Feast of St. John Baptist, to consider of the Things which should be proposed in Council. The Patriarch of Constantinople laid open the miserable Estate and Condition of the Latins in the East, and the great Danger that the City of Constantinople was in. To this the Pope said not a Word. Then another proposed the Canonizing of St. Edmond Archbishop of Canterbury; but the Pope put that off till another Time. Then Thadæus propos'd an Accommodation with Frederick, declaring, That he was ready to make Peace, and be reconciled to the Pope: That he profered to reunite all Greece to the Holy See, to oppose the Progress of the Tartars and Saracens, by carrying on a War against them at his own Charge; to restore to the Church of Rome, whatsoever he had taken from it, and to make the Pope full Satisfaction. To this the Pope made Answer, That there was no Reason to trust him that had often cajol'd them with as fair Promises as these, which he had broken, and that he did this only for the present to evade the Judgment of the Council; and moreover, that Thadæus had no special Order to make any such Proposals. Then the Bishop of Beritus made a Discourse upon the apparent Danger that the Holy Land was in, and read a very mournful Letter from the Christian Lords that remained in Palestine, to desire some Supplies. These were the Preliminaries of the Council, whose first Session was upon St. Peter's Eve. After the Pope had sung the Veni Creator, wherein he was assisted by all present, and had made a Prayer for the Assistance of the Holy Spirit, he preached a Sermon, wherein he took for his Text those Words of the 94*th* Psalm, In the Multitude of the Sorrows that I had in my Heart, thy Comforts have refreshed my Soul. He told them that he had five Sorrows; the Cause of the first was the Irregularity of the Clergy and Laity; that of the second was the haughty Insolence of the Saracens; that of the third the Schism of the Greeks; that of the fourth the Cruelty of the Tartars; and lastly, that of the fifth, the Persecution of the Emperor Frederick. He enlarged upon every one of these Heads: First, he exclaimed against the Irregularities of the Clergy and common Christians. Secondly, he laid forth the Cruelties that the Saracens had exercised against the Faithful, when they took the Holy City, and the Sepulchre of our Lord. Thence he passed on to the Progress that the Emperor of the Greek Hereticks had made, insomuch that the City of Constantinople it self was in Danger. Fourthly, he spoke of the Destruction that the Tartars had made in Hungary, where they had put every Thing to Fire and Sword. And, Fifthly, of the Persecution that he pretended Frederick had raised against the Church; of the Injuries that he had done his Predecessor Pope Gregory, and of those that he was every Day labouring to do him, while he boasted that 'twas not the Church, but the Persons of the Popes that he aimed at; which was absolutely false, seeing that during the Vacancy of the Holy See, he was so far from ceasing from Hostilities, that he took that Advantage of oppressing the Church and Clergy the more. About the end of his Discourse, he exhibited against Frederick a particular Charge of Heresy and Sacrilege, for having built a City upon Christian Ground, which he peopled with Saracens, only to curry Favour with the Sultan of Babylon and the Saracen Princes; for keeping Saracen Ladies for his Mistresses; and for having broke the Oath he had taken. To prove this last Accusation, he caused the Edict of Frederick which was called the Golden Bull, and other Declarations of his to be read, wherein he promises Obedience and Allegiance to the Pope, acknowledges that the Kingdom of Sicily and Apuleia is a Dependance on the Holy See, and by which he had restored to the Church of Rome many Lands. This Discourse being finished, Thadæus rose up, and answered to all the Pope had advanced against his Master, and in his turn accused the Pope of having done many Things very injurious to him; and produced some Letters of the Pope, which shewed that he had not been as good to his Promise as it became him; and as for the Accusation of Heresy, he reply'd, That that Prince if he were there, could easily justify himself in that, but that they might judge he was a true Catholick by this, that he would suffer no Usurers in his Kingdom; which was (says Matthew Paris) "A touch for the Court of Rome, where every one "knows there is store of this sort of Cattle." He added, that if his Master was in any Confederacy with the Sultan, or any other Saracen Princes, or if he suffered the Saracens to settle in his Dominions, it was that he might make use of them in keeping under his rebellious Subjects, choosing rather to expose their Persons than those of Christians: And for the other Thing, that he had no Saracen Ladies for his Mistresses; that indeed he suffered some of them in his Court, but 'twas for the Diversion they gave him by their Conversation; but that he had sent them back again, and that he would have no more for the Future. After he had done, Thadæus required Time to give his Master notice, and to desire him to come to the Council in Person: The Pope answered, that he could not in Wisdom allow any Delay, that he was afraid of some Plots which he had already narrowly escaped; that if the Emperor came, he he must be gone; that he was in Danger of his Life, and that he did not much care for dying a Martyr, or being clap'd up in Prison. However the next Day, by the Intercession of the English and French Deputies, they gained five Days. Thadæus having given his Master notice how Things went in that Council, that Prince saw plainly that the Pope was set upon it to condemn him, and therefore thought it would not be Wisdom in him to expose his Person in a Council that he knew were his Adversaries. When the News came to Lyons that Frederick would not come to Council, his Enemies made Triumph of it, and his Friends so much discontented, that they did not dare to favour his Interests openly; insomuch that at the second Session of the Council, which was eight Days after the first, one Apulean, and two Spanish Bishops made very violent Discourses against him, particularly, for daring to stop and imprison the Cardinals and other Prelates, who were coming to assist at the Council call'd at Rome by Pope Gregory. Thadæus with a great deal of Courage defended his Master, and affirmed that he could not have done otherwise, because that those Prelates were going to Rome to assist his Enemies in their Design to depose him. The Pope gave his Vote against the Emperor, and this Session was wholly spent in Disputes. Before it rose, Thadæus demanded some longer Time, making them hope that Frederick himself would come. The Pope put off the next Session for eight Days, and then, being satisfied that the Emperor did not design to come, the third Session was upon the appointed Day. They then treated of some other Matters; as, of the Means of recovering the Holy Land, upon which the Pope order'd certain old Constitutions to be read; and likewise confirmed all those Privileges and Rights that Emperors and Princes had granted to the Holy See. The Deputies of the King of England made their Complaints of the excessive Taxes that the Court of Rome raised in England; and desired the Pope to take Order about his Legate Martin, who had taken upon him to dispose of the Benefices of that Kingdom to the Italians, to the great prejudice of their Patrons; and had tried a great many new Devices which were very chargeable both to the Church and State. He would not give them an Answer to this out of hand; but put it off till another Time, that he might be more at leisure for Frederick's Business. At last Thadæus seeing that the Condemnation of the Emperor was resolved upon, appeal'd in the Name of this Prince to another Pope, and a more General Council; alledging that there were many Bishops and Deputies that were not come to the Council. The Pope made answer, that the Council was general enough, that all the World was invited to it, and that the Bishops and Princes that were absent, were such as depended upon Frederick, whom he would not permit to come to the Council, and that consequently there was no regard to be had to the Appeal of Thadæus; so as upon the Account of it to forbear proceeding against the Emperor. After he had made a Speech, wherein he enlarged upon the Friendship that had formerly been between that Prince and him, and upon his rare Qualities, he pronounced Sentence against him, by which he deprived him of his Empire, of all his Estates, and all his Dignities. This he afterwards put into Form, and made it be publickly read in the Council. The Substance of it was, that ever since his first being raised to the Sovereign Dignity of Pope, his chief Business had been to re-establish the Peace of Christendom: that upon this Design he had sent some Cardinals to Frederick, who was the Author and Occasion of the War, and who had been excommunicated by his Predecessor Pope Gregory, with Proposals of an Accommodation; and that he had by them remonstrated to him, that for this he must begin with the setting all those Prelates, and Ecclesiasticks, ſiaſticks, and other Perſons at liberty, which he had taken in the Gallies of Genoa; that at the ſame Time he had aſſured him of his readineſs to treat with him about a Peace, and to hearken to any Propoſals which he would pleaſe to make for the Satisfaction of the Holy ſee in thoſe Things for which he had been excommunicated; and that he had fairly offered to make Reparation in caſe the Holy See had done him any Injury; that if he would ſtand it out that he had done no Injury to the Church, he would call an Aſſembly of the Kings, Prelates, and Eccleſiaſtical and Secular Princes to ſome free and ſafe Place, and willingly ſtand to their Determination: And that if it ſhould be the Judgment of the Council that the Church had in any Thing injured him, he was as ready to repeal any Thing that had been ſo acted againſt him, as he was to receive Satisfaction in caſe the Council ſhould determine on the other ſide: That Frederick would not at firſt hearken to any Propoſitions; that at laſt he had ſent the Earl of Tholouſe, Peter de Vignes, and Toadeus of Seſſa, to make Articles of Obedience and Submiſſion, and had promiſed with an Oath to make the Church Satisfaction; but that having ſo often fail'd of his Word, and now continuing his Violences, he found himſelf forced to puniſh him for his Faults. Particularly, he accuſed him of three principal Crimes: Namely, of Perjury, becauſe he had often ſacredly ſworn to reunite the Church and Empire, and had as often broken his Oath: Of Sacrilege, for arreſting thoſe Prelates that were coming to the Council: Of Hereſy, becauſe he had laid aſide that Fealty which he owed the Holy See, had ſlighted its Authority, had invaded its Poſſeſſions, had ſtopt its regular Elections, had rob'd the Churches, and perſecuted the Eccleſiaſticks and Religious Orders; all which juſtly render'd him ſuſpected of Herety, as well as his League with the Saracens, whom he made uſe of againſt the Chriſtians, and his other many Irregularities. As a juſt Conſequence of theſe Crimes and Diſorders, he declared this Prince, who by his Sins had made himſelf unfit to reign, deſpoil'd of all his Honour and Dignity; of which he is by this Sentence deprived, and all his Subjects diſcharged from the Obligation of the Oath of Fidelity which they had taken to him, and forbidden under pain of Excommunication, ipſo facto, to acknowledge him for their Emperor and King: And finally, thoſe whoſe Buſineſs it was to elect an Emperor, were order'd to chooſe him a Succeſſor, leaving it to the Pope to take care for the Kingdom of Sicily. This Sentence was read to the Aſtoniſhment of all that were preſent, and was publiſhed and ſent about on all ſides.

The Revolutions in the Empire and Italy, during the thirteenth Century.

Frederick's Defence.

Frederick in his Defence, wrote a Letter to the King of France and other Princes of Europe, wherein, having firſt acknowledged the ſpiritual Authority of the Biſhop of Rome, he denies his Power to extend to the diſpoſing of the Empire, and the puniſhing of Kings and Princes, by depriving them of their Temporalties; alledging, that tho' he have the Privilege of conſecrating Emperors, yet he has no more right to depoſe them, than other Biſhops have thoſe Kings, whom it is the Cuſtom for them to anoint. But ſuppoſing he had that Authority, which he has not, yet that he could not make uſe of it againſt whom he pleaſed, as he had done in his Procedure againſt the Emperor, without due Form of Law. For that he had no Accuſer, no lawful Summons to appear, nor Charge againſt him; nor did they make a juſt and fair Information, but only declared that the Things were notorious, which they were not; that there were very few in the Council which had depoſed any Thing againſt him, namely one Biſhop of Apuleia, whoſe Brothers and Nephew he had hanged for Treaſon, and two Spaniſh Biſhops, who were too far off to have good Information of what had paſſed in Italy: That had the Pope proceeded againſt him in due Form, and had he been allowed to have his Accuſers and Witneſſes, yet he could not have caſt him, becauſe he was not preſent, nor lawfully ſummoned; and had by his Deputies given ſuch good Reaſons for his abſence, that no one could interpret it to have been out of Pride and Contumacy; and that had he been preſent, he could not have been condemn'd by a peremptory Sentence; nay, more than all, had the whole Procedure been according to Law and Juſtice, yet the Sentence was not juſtifiable, becauſe it was founded on Facts notoriouſly falſe, and becauſe the Puniſhment inflicted exceeded as well the Power of him that gave Sentence (which reaches no farther than ſpiritual Things) as the demerit of the Crimes laid to his Charge. About the end of the Letter, he gave the Kings Notice how it was their common Intereſt to diſallow this Sentence; that they were in danger of being ſerved at the ſame rate; that the Pope had begun with him, but would end with them if they did not ſide with him for the Support of their Authority. He wrote in particular to the King of France, making him Umpire of his Differences with the Pope, and referring himſelf to his Judgment, and that of his Peers. The King of France ſenſibly touched with theſe Letters, offers Propoſals of Accommodation to the Pope, aſſuring him that Frederick was ready to give him due Satisfaction, and would ſpend the reſt of his Days in warring againſt the Infidels in the Holy Land. The Pope did but laugh at it, and replyed, That he had often promiſed as much, and more, but never performed any thing. The King of France remonſtrated to the Pope that he ought to forgive ſixty, or ſeventy Times ſeven Times; and therefore counſelled and intreated him in the Name of a great number of Holy Soldiers that were in a readineſs to go for the Holy Land, for the good of the Catholick Church, and the benefit of Religion, in imitation of JESUS CHRIST, who ſubmitted himſelf even to the Death of the Croſs, to accept of that humble Propoſition that he made him on the Emperor's part: But the Pope ſtill refuſing to hearken, St. Louis went away very much diſturbed, ſays Matthew Paris, that he could not find that Humility in the Servant of the Servants of God, which he himſelf was Maſter of. Many other Princes cryed out againſt this Sentence of the Pope, maintaining that 'twas not in his Power to raiſe and put down Kings at his Pleaſure; and the greateſt part of the Electors and Princes of Germany always received Frederick for their lawful Emperor. Only a few Male-contents that had been gained by the Pope's Agents, elected Henry Landtgrave of Touringen King of Germany, who made no great Advances, but was killed before Ulme in the Year 1247. William Earl of Holland was choſen in his ſtead, and having taken Aix la Chapelle, was there crown'd in 1248. All this while Frederick with no ſmall Succeſs was carrying on the War againſt the Guelphs in Italy; but his Son Entius, who was his Lieutenant General, being taken by the Bolognians, and put into Priſon, abated his Heat, and retired into Apuleia, where he ended his Days in 1250. leaving his Son Conrade Heir to his Eſtates. The Pope confirmed William in the Empire, excommunicated Conrade, and ſent his Legates into Sicily to hinder that Kingdom from receiving any other Soveraign than the Holy See.

The Revolutions in the Empire and Italy, during the thirteenth Century.

The Landtgrave of Thuringen, and Earl of Holland elected Emperors by ſome of the Princes of the Empire.

The Death of Frederick.

Conrade, whoſe Affairs went but ill in Germany, did nevertheleſs raiſe an Army, and paſs into Italy to ſecure the Eſtates his Father had left him: And after having ſpent ſome Time in Lombardy, he went into Apuleia, where his natural Brother Manfred governed with the Title of Viceroy; but with the Deſign of making himſelf Soveraign. Conrade was received and acknowledged by all the Cities of Sicily and Apuleia, except that of Naples, which he laid Siege to, and took at the end of eight Months. But William in the mean while making great Progreſs in Germany, Conrade was forced to return in the Year 1251. and took the City of Ratisbone with the help of Henry Duke of Bavaria; but underſtanding that William was in his march to ſet upon him with a numerous Army, he betook himſelf back again into Apuleia, where he died, not without ſuſpicion of being poiſoned by his Brother Manfred, the 22*d* of May, in 1254. leaving his Son Conradine Heir to Sicily. Manfred, who did not care for parting with Sicily, pretended a deſire of being friends with the Pope, and thereupon invites him to come to Sicily. Accordingly the Pope comes with an Army to make himſelf acknowledged Soveraign of that Kingdom; but Manfred quickly picks a Quarrel with him, and routs part of his Army; which ſo ſeized upon Innocent's Spirits, that he died at Naples the 7*th* of December, 1254. Alexander the 4*th*, who ſucceeded him, did not lay down his Predeceſſor's Deſign upon Sicily: But he had no better Fortune; Manfred defeated his Troops, and made himſelf Maſter of Apuleia and Sicily. The Pope ſeeing he was not able to maintain this War, gave the Kingdom to Edmund Son of the King of England, and diſpenſed with the Vow of that King to go for the Holy Land, on Condition he would make War upon Manfred, againſt whom he alſo appointed a Cruſade.

The Hiſtory of Conrade, Frederick's Son.

The Government of Manfred in Sicily.

Troubles in the Empire and Italy.

While Manfred was ſtrengthening himſelf in the Kingdom of Sicily, Ecelin, who took the part of Frederick's Heirs, had made himſelf Maſter of Lombardy; and the Pope to drive him from thence, had publiſhed a Cruſade againſt him too at Venice. The greateſt part of Germany had acknowledged William for their Soveraign, and as he was preparing to take a Journey into Italy, there to receive the Imperial Crown, he was forced to march againſt the Friezlanders who had entered into Holland; but going againſt them, he fell into a Fen that was frozen, and was there killed by an Ambuſcade of his Enemies, in December 1256. After his Death the German Princes were divided about the Election of an Emperor, ſome of them declaring for Richard Brother to the King of England, and the others for Alphonſus King of Caſtile. The former was elected at Francfort on the Octave of the Epiphany, in the Year 1257. by Conrade Archbiſhop of Cologn (who was alſo Proxy for Gerard Archbiſhop of Mentz) by Lewis Count Palatine of the Rhine, and Henry Duke of Bavaria; the other in Lent by Arnold Archbiſhop of Treves as Proxy for the King of Bohemia, the Duke of Saxony, the Marquiſs of Brandenburgh, and many other Princes. Thus did the German Princes baſely ſell the Honour of their Nation, and their own Votes to Strangers, who for many Years together diſputed the Empire without ever agreeing the Matter. All which Time Lombardy was the Seat of the War between the Guelphs and Gibelines; of the former of which Albert, of the latter Ecelin was the Head. The latter was wounded, and taken Priſoner in 1260. and died of his Wounds, after having for four and thirty Years been Maſter of the moſt conſiderable Cities in Lombardy. His Death ſet Italy at reſt, which was not long after broken by the War between the Venetians and Genoueſe.

The Elections of Alphonſus and Richard to the Empire.

Richard

The Revolutions in the Empire and Italy, during the thirteenth Century.

Richard and Alphonſus were elected Emperors, but got nothing by it ſave the bare Title. Alphonſus never ſet Foot in Germany; and Richard being come to Francfort, after having ſpent all that he was worth, was forced to return to England. In their abſence Ottogar King of Bohemia extended his Dominions in Germany, ſo that in a ſhort Time he was become one of the moſt powerful Princes in Europe. In Italy, Urban the 4*th*, who ſucceeded Alexander, had publiſhed a Cruſade againſt Manfred, and all that ſided with him in Apulea or Lombardy, and ſtirred up ſome French Lords to come into Italy. Manfred on his part entered with his Troops into the Eſtate of the Church, and to ſtrengthen himſelf againſt the Pope, entered into an Alliance with James the 3*d*, King of Arragon, by marrying his Daughter Conſtantia to Peter the King's eldeſt Son. The Pope on his ſide ſeeing that Edmund could not proſecute the Conqueſt of the Kingdom of Sicily, by reaſon of the Troubles that were in England, inveſted Charles Earl of Anjou Brother of St. Louis therewith, who came to Rome in 1265. and was there crown'd King of Sicily on the 28*th* of June, by Clement the 4*th*, Urban's Succeſſor, who alſo made him Senator of that City. He was followed with an Army by Sea and Land; and giving Battle to Manfred on the 26*th* of February the following Year near Benevento, he gained an abſolute and bloody Victory over his Troops, Manfred himſelf being killed upon the ſpot. After his Death the Kingdom of Sicily ſubmitted to the Conqueror; but Conradin, whoſe right this Kingdom was, wrote a Letter to the Princes of Europe, wherein he laid open the Juſtice of his Pretenſions, and implored their Aſſiſtance for its Recovery. He got together an Army compoſed for the moſt part of Voluntiers, with which, by the Advice of Henry Brother of Alphonſus, he made a Deſcent into Tuſcany, where he ſurprized and cut in Pieces thoſe Forces which Charles, whom the Pope had conſtituted Vicar of the Empire in that Country, had left there; and at the ſame Time Conrade, a Son of one of the Emperor Frederick's Baſtards, who was come from Antioch, drew off all Sicily from their Obedience, except Meſſina and Palermos, while Conradin by the Aſſiſtance of the Gibelines, made himſelf Maſter of all Tuſcany and Romagna, and entered in Triumph into Rome, where he was proclaimed Emperor by the People. But being entred into Campania with a Deſign to go into Sicily, Charles met him at the Lake of Fucin, called the Lake of Celano, where he gave him Battle on the 25*th* of Auguſt, 1268. in which Charles got the Day. Conradin, Frederick Duke of Auſtria, and Henry of Caſtile betook themſelves to flight; but happening to be known in the Way, were brought back again to the Conqueror, who put them into Priſon, and gave them their Trial the next Year. Conradin and Frederick were put to Death, and Henry of Caſtile confined to Priſon. Juſt about the ſame Time too Conrade was taken by ſome of Charles's Party, who hanged him up; and a ſhort Time after Entius, the only one remaining of the Princes of Suabia, died in his Priſon of Bologna. Thus unhappily periſhed the whole Race of the Emperor Frederick.

Charles Earl of Anjou defeats Manfred, and ſeizes himſelf upon Sicily.

Conradin diſputes the Kingdom of Sicily with Charles; he is defeated and executed.

The Election of Rodolphus to the Empire, and his Actions

The Houſe of Auſtria quickly ſucceeded that of Suabia in Glory and Power; for Richard being dead, and Alphonſus having no Friends left him in Germany, the Electors aſſembled themſelves in October 1273. at Francfort, according to the Counſel of Pope Gregory X. and there elected Rodolphus Earl of Hapsburg, without any regard had to the Remonſtrances of the Deputies of Alphonſus, or the Sollicitations of thoſe of Ottogar King of Bohemia, who thought the Empire had been aſſured to him (tho' ſome Hiſtorians ſay that he refuſed it) Rodolphus was crowned the ſame Year at Aix la Chapelle, and the next was confirmed by the Pope in the Council at Lyons, and acknowledged in an Aſſembly at Nuremberg, by all the Princes of Germany, except Ottogar King of Bohemia, who refuſed to be there. Rodolphus declared him a Rebel, and required him to deliver up Auſtria, and many other Provinces which he pretended belonged to the Empire. Ottogar refuſing to deliver them, Rodolphus declares War againſt him, and lays Siege to Vienna in 1276. Ottogar came with an Army to its Aſſiſtance, and the King of Hungary to that of Rodolphus; but yet they did not come to a Battle, the Princes of Germany interpoſing their Authority to make up theſe Differences.

'Twas agreed, that King Ottogar ſhould content himſelf with Bohemia and Moravia, and ſhould reſtore Auſtria, Stiria, Carinthia, Carniola, and the other Provinces to Rodolphus, for the performance of which he ſhould take his Oath; and to the King of Hungary thoſe Cities which he had taken from him, as well as the Hoſtages and Treaſures that he had of his. This Peace did not laſt long, for the King of Bohemia, not caring faithfully to perform theſe Articles, and being very angry that he ſhould be thus forced to ſubmit to Rodolphus, provides a new Army, and comes to ſet upon the Emperor, but he loſt the Battle and his own Life. Rodolphus took Moravia, from Wenceſlaus the Son of Ottogar, about eight Years old, leaving him Bohemia, under the Tuition of his Uncle Otho, Marquiſs of Brandenburg. He gave Auſtria to his eldeſt Son Albert, whoſe Poſterity took the Name of Auſtria, as more illuſtrious than that of Hapsburg.

The Revolutions in the Empire and Italy, during the thirteenth Century.

Charles ſpoiled of his Authority by the Pope.

The Eſtabliſhment of Rodolphus leſſen'd Charles the King of Sicily's Authority in Italy. Pope Nicholas III. took from him the Vicariate of Tuſcany, and the Quality of Senator of Rome; and in Recompence received of Rodolphus, Romagna, and the Lieutenancy of Ravenna, which he gave to the Holy See, leaving all the other States of Italy in a ſort of Liberty dependant upon the Empire. But it would not content the Pope that he had deprived Charles of his Authority in the upper Italy; he had a deſign to get the Kingdom of Sicily from him too; and about this, deals with Peter King of Arragon, as Heir of the Houſe of Suabia by his Mother Conſtantia the Daughter of Manfred. This gave occaſion to the Conſpiracy that was laid by John, Lord of the Iſland of Crocida, whom Charles had robb'd of his Poſſeſſions, againſt this Prince, and all the French that were in Sicily, which did not break out till after the Death of Nicholas, when the Sicilians maſſacred all the French in the Kingdom, on Eaſter Sunday 1282. Charles coming to revenge this cruel Action, the King of Arragon enters into Sicily with his Army, and amuſes Charles with a Truce. His Admiral Soria lays Siege to Naples in the Year 1284. and, having defeated Charles, his Troops, takes his Son Charles the Lame Priſoner, and ſends him into Arragon. Charles had enough to do to keep Apuleia and Calabria, and not being able long to ſurvive the Misfortunes, died at Foggia in Apuleia the 7*th* of January, 1285. leaving his Son Charles the Lame his Heir, who got out of Priſon in 1287. but on Condition that he ſhould renounce all Pretences to Sicily. Yet he was no ſooner got out but he made himſelf be crowned at Rome King of Sicily and Apuleia, on the 28*th* of May, 1289. Alphonſus dying ſome Time after, Charles made up the Matter with Dangianus his Succeſſor, the latter renouncing his Pretenſions to the Kingdom of Sicily, on Condition that Charles of Valois ſhould lay down his to Arragon. Yet for all this, Charles the Lame could not enjoy Sicily in Peace, for Frederick the younger Brother of Dangianus, to whom Alphonſus, by his Will had left this Kingdom, got himſelf crowned King by the Sicilians, ſo that Charles was never in Poſſeſſion of any but the Continent; the Kingdom of Sicily as it is called, being from that Time divided into two; one beyond the Pharos of Meſſina, which is the Iſland of Sicily; the other on this ſide of that Tower, call'd the Kingdom of Naples.

Sicily rebels againſt Charles.

The Sicilian Veſpers.

Charles his deſeat and death.

The diviſion of the Kingdom of Sicily.

The Reign of Adolphus.

The Emperor Rodolphus ended his Days at Germeſheim near Spire, the laſt Day of September. 1291. having reigned eighteen Years. He laid the Foundation of the prodigious Greatneſs of the Houſe of Auſtria; but he laid down as it were the Empire of Italy, by neglecting to go thither, as well as by ſelling his Power over many Cities of Tuſcany. Adolphus Earl of Naſſaw was choſen into his Place the 6*th* of January, 1292. and crowned at Francfort. He peaceably enjoyed the Empire for ſome Years; but the German Lords being diſcontented that he had not allow'd them a Share in a Sum of Mony that the King of England had given for help againſt France, and ſeeing that he had not Authority nor Strength ſufficient to maintain the Peace of Germany, depoſed him in 1298. and in his ſtead elected Albert Duke of Auſtria, Son of the Emperor Rodolphus. Adolphus defended his Right, but the Fortune of War quickly decided the Caſe in favour of Albert; Adolphus being defeated and kill'd in the firſt Engagement near Worms, in the Month of July. After his Death Albert was elected anew, and crowned at Aix la Chapelle, and remain'd in peaceable Poſſeſſion of the Empire of Germany.

The depoſing of Adolphus.

Election of Albert Duke of Auſtria.

CHAP. II.

The Life, Letters, and other Writings of Pope Innocent the Third.

The Life, Letters, and other Writings of Pope Innocent III.

INNOCENT the Third, before he was raiſed to the Pontifical Dignity, went by the Name of Lotharius. He was born at Anagni, being the Son of Thraſimond, of the Family of the Earls of Signi, and of Claricia a Roman Lady. He ſtudied at Rome, Paris, and Bologn, and being upon his Return to Rome, was ordained Subdeacon by Gregory VIII. and when he was but 29 Years old, was made Chief Deacon, by the Title of S. Sergius and S. Bacchus, by Clement III. His Learning and Merit made him be unanimouſly choſen by the Cardinals, on the very Day of Celeſtin III's Death, which happened on the 8*th* of January, 1198. although he was then but very young, and no more than Deacon. He was conſecrated Prieſt the 21*ſt* of February the ſame Year, and raiſed to the Pontifical Throne on the Sunday next after the Feaſt of the Chair of St. Peter at Antioch. After having ſatisfied the People by the ordinary Largeſſes, and received an Oath of Allegiance from them, he made an Order, forbidding all Officers in the Court of Rome, to take any Fee or Gratuity.

The Life, Letters, and other Writings of Pope Innocent III.

The Revolutions in the Empire and Italy, during the thirteenth Century.

ſiaſticks, and other Perſons at liberty, which he had taken in the Gallies of Genoa; that at the ſame Time he had aſſured him of his readineſs to treat with him about a Peace, and to hearken to any Propoſals which he would pleaſe to make for the Satisfaction of the Holy ſee in thoſe Things for which he had been excommunicated; and that he had fairly offered to make Reparation in caſe the Holy See had done him any Injury; that if he would ſtand it out that he had done no Injury to the Church, he would call an Aſſembly of the Kings, Prelates, and Eccleſiaſtical and Secular Princes to ſome free and ſafe Place, and willingly ſtand to their Determination: And that if it ſhould be the Judgment of the Council that the Church had in any Thing injured him, he was as ready to repeal any Thing that had been ſo acted againſt him, as he was to receive Satisfaction in caſe the Council ſhould determine on the other ſide: That Frederick would not at firſt hearken to any Propoſitions; that at laſt he had ſent the Earl of Tholouſe, Peter de Vignes, and Toadeus of Seſſa, to make Articles of Obedience and Submiſſion, and had promiſed with an Oath to make the Church Satisfaction; but that having ſo often fail'd of his Word, and now continuing his Violences, he found himſelf forced to puniſh him for his Faults. Particularly, he accuſed him of three principal Crimes: Namely, of Perjury, becauſe he had often ſacredly ſworn to reunite the Church and Empire, and had as often broken his Oath: Of Sacrilege, for arreſting thoſe Prelates that were coming to the Council: Of Hereſy, becauſe he had laid aſide that Fealty which he owed the Holy See, had ſlighted its Authority, had invaded its Poſſeſſions, had ſtopt its regular Elections, had rob'd the Churches, and perſecuted the Eccleſiaſticks and Religious Orders; all which juſtly render'd him ſuſpected of Herely, as well as his League with the Saracens, whom he made uſe of againſt the Chriſtians, and his other many Irregularities. As a juſt Conſequence of theſe Crimes and Diſorders, he declared this Prince, who by his Sins had made himſelf unfit to reign, deſpoil'd of all his Honour and Dignity; of which he is by this Sentence deprived, and all his Subjects diſcharged from the Obligation of the Oath of Fidelity which they had taken to him, and forbidden under pain of Excommunication, ipſo facto, to acknowledge him for their Emperor and King: And finally, thoſe whoſe Buſineſs it was to elect an Emperor, were order'd to chooſe him a Succeſſor, leaving it to the Pope to take care for the Kingdom of Sicily. This Sentence was read to the Aſtoniſhment of all that were preſent, and was publiſhed and ſent about on all ſides.

Frederick's Defence.

Frederick in his Defence, wrote a Letter to the King of France and other Princes of Europe, wherein, having firſt acknowledged the ſpiritual Authority of the Biſhop of Rome, he denies his Power to extend to the diſpoſing of the Empire, and the puniſhing of Kings and Princes, by depriving them of their Temporalties; alledging, that tho' he have the Privilege of conſecrating Emperors, yet he has no more right to depoſe them, than other Biſhops have thoſe Kings, whom it is the Cuſtom for them to anoint. But ſuppoſing he had that Authority, which he has not, yet that he could not make uſe of it againſt whom he pleaſed, as he had done in his Procedure againſt the Emperor, without due Form of Law. For that he had no Accuſer, no lawful Summons to appear, nor Charge againſt him; nor did they make a juſt and fair Information, but only declared that the Things were notorious, which they were not; that there were very few in the Council which had depoſed any Thing againſt him, namely one Biſhop of Apuleia, whoſe Brothers and Nephew he had hanged for Treaſon, and two Spaniſh Biſhops, who were too far off to have good Information of what had paſſed in Italy: That had the Pope proceeded againſt him in due Form, and had he been allowed to have his Accuſers and Witneſſes, yet he could not have caſt him, becauſe he was not preſent, nor lawfully ſummoned; and had by his Deputies given ſuch good Reaſons for his abſence, that no one could interpret it to have been out of Pride and Contumacy; and that had he been preſent, he could not have been condemn'd by a peremptory Sentence; nay, more than all, had the whole Procedure been according to Law and Juſtice, yet the Sentence was not juſtifiable, becauſe it was founded on Facts notoriouſly falſe, and becauſe the Puniſhment inflicted exceeded as well the Power of him that gave Sentence (which reaches no farther than ſpiritual Things) as the demerit of the Crimes laid to his Charge. About the end of the Letter, he gave the Kings Notice how it was their common Intereſt to diſallow this Sentence; that they were in danger of being ſerved at the ſame rate; that the Pope had begun with him, but would end with them if they did not ſide with him for the Support of their Authority. He wrote in particular to the King of France, making him Umpire of his Differences with the Pope, and referring himſelf to his Judgment, and that of his Peers. The King of France ſenſibly touched with theſe Letters, offers Propoſals of Accommodation to the Pope, aſſuring him that Frederick was ready to give him due Satisfaction, and would ſpend the reſt of his Days in warring againſt the Infidels in the Holy Land. The Pope did but laugh at it, and replyed, That he had often promiſed as much, and more, but never performed any thing. The King of France remonſtrated to the Pope that he ought to forgive ſixty, or ſeventy Times ſeven Times; and therefore counſelled and intreated him in the Name of a great number of Holy Soldiers that were in a readineſs to go for the Holy Land, for the good of the Catholick Church, and the benefit of Religion, in imitation of JESUS CHRIST, who ſubmitted himſelf even to the Death of the Croſs, to accept of that humble Propoſition that he made him on the Emperor's part: But the Pope ſtill refuſing to hearken, St. Louis went away very much diſturbed, ſays Matthew Paris, that he could not find that Humility in the Servant of the Servants of God, which he himſelf was Maſter of. Many other Princes cryed out againſt this Sentence of the Pope, maintaining that 'twas not in his Power to raiſe and put down Kings at his Pleaſure; and the greateſt part of the Electors and Princes of Germany always received Frederick for their lawful Emperor. Only a few Male-contents that had been gained by the Pope's Agents, elected Henry Landtgrave of Touringen King of Germany, who made no great Advances, but was killed before Ulme in the Year 1247. William Earl of Holland was choſen in his ſtead, and having taken Aix la Chapelle, was there crown'd in 1248. All this while Frederick with no ſmall Succeſs was carrying on the War againſt the Guelphs in Italy; but his Son Entius, who was his Lieutenant General, being taken by the Bolognians, and put into Priſon, abated his Heat, and retired into Apuleia, where he ended his Days in 1250. leaving his Son Conrade Heir to his Eſtates. The Pope confirmed William in the Empire, excommunicated Conrade, and ſent his Legates into Sicily to hinder that Kingdom from receiving any other Soveraign than the Holy See.

The Revolutions in the Empire and Italy, during the thirteenth Century.

The Landtgrave of Thuringen, and Earl of Holland elected Emperors by ſome of the Princes of the Empire.

The Death of Frederick.

The Hiſtory of Conrade, Frederick's Son.

Conrade, whoſe Affairs went but ill in Germany, did nevertheleſs raiſe an Army, and paſs into Italy to ſecure the Eſtates his Father had left him: And after having ſpent ſome Time in Lombardy, he went into Apuleia, where his natural Brother Manfred governed with the Title of Viceroy; but with the Deſign of making himſelf Soveraign. Conrade was received and acknowledged by all the Cities of Sicily and Apuleia, except that of Naples, which he laid Siege to, and took at the end of eight Months. But William in the mean while making great Progreſs in Germany, Conrade was forced to return in the Year 1251. and took the City of Ratisbone with the help of Henry Duke of Bavaria; but underſtanding that William was in his march to ſet upon him with a numerous Army, he betook himſelf back again into Apuleia, where he died, not without ſuſpicion of being poiſoned by his Brother Manfred, the 22d of May, in 1254. leaving his Son Conradine Heir to Sicily. Manfred, who did not care for parting with Sicily, pretended a deſire of being friends with the Pope, and thereupon invites him to come to Sicily. Accordingly the Pope comes with an Army to make himſelf acknowledged Soveraign of that Kingdom; but Manfred quickly picks a Quarrel with him, and routs part of his Army; which ſo ſeized upon Innocent's Spirits, that he died at Naples the 7th of December, 1254. Alexander the 4th, who ſucceeded him, did not lay down his Predeceſſor's Deſign upon Sicily: But he had no better Fortune; Manfred defeated his Troops, and made himſelf Maſter of Apuleia and Sicily. The Pope ſeeing he was not able to maintain this War, gave the Kingdom to Edmund Son of the King of England, and diſpenſed with the Vow of that King to go for the Holy Land, on Condition he would make War upon Manfred, againſt whom he alſo appointed a Cruſade.

The Government of Manfred in Sicily.

Troubles in the Empire and Italy.

While Manfred was ſtrengthening himſelf in the Kingdom of Sicily, Ecelin, who took the part of Frederick's Heirs, had made himſelf Maſter of Lombardy; and the Pope to drive him from thence, had publiſhed a Cruſade againſt him too at Venice. The greateſt part of Germany had acknowledged William for their Soveraign, and as he was preparing to take a Journey into Italy, there to receive the Imperial Crown, he was forced to march againſt the Friezlanders who had entered into Holland; but going againſt them, he fell into a Fen that was frozen, and was there killed by an Ambuſcade of his Enemies, in December 1256. After his Death the German Princes were divided about the Election of an Emperor, ſome of them declaring for Richard Brother to the King of England, and the others for Alphonſus King of Caſtile. The former was elected at Francfort on the Octave of the Epiphany, in the Year 1257. by Conrade Archbiſhop of Cologn (who was alſo Proxy for Gerard Archbiſhop of Mentz) by Lewis Count Palatine of the Rhine, and Henry Duke of Bavaria; the other in Lent by Arnold Archbiſhop of Treves as Proxy for the King of Bohemia, the Duke of Saxony, the Marquiſs of Brandenburgh, and many other Princes. Thus did the German Princes baſely ſell the Honour of their Nation, and their own Votes to Strangers, who for many Years together diſputed the Empire without ever agreeing the Matter. All which Time Lombardy was the Seat of the War between the Guelphs and Gibelines; of the former of which Albert, of the latter Ecelin was the Head. The latter was wounded, and taken Priſoner in 1260, and died of his Wounds, after having for four and thirty Years been Maſter of the moſt conſiderable Cities in Lombardy. His Death ſet Italy at reſt, which was not long after broken by the War between the Venetians and Genoueſe.

The Elections of Alphonſus and Richard to the Empire.

Richard

The Revolutions in the Empire and Italy, during the thirteenth Century.

Richard and Alphonſus were elected Emperors, but got nothing by it ſave the bare Title. Alphonſus never ſet Foot in Germany; and Richard being come to Francfort, after having ſpent all that he was worth, was forced to return to England. In their abſence Ottogar King of Bohemia extended his Dominions in Germany, ſo that in a ſhort Time he was become one of the moſt powerful Princes in Europe. In Italy, Urban the 4*th*, who ſucceeded Alexander, had publiſhed a Cruſade againſt Manfred, and all that ſided with him in Apuleia or Lombardy, and ſtirred up ſome French Lords to come into Italy. Manfred on his part entered with his Troops into the Eſtate of the Church, and to ſtrengthen himſelf againſt the Pope, entered into an Alliance with James the 3*d*, King of Arragon, by marrying his Daughter Conſtantia to Peter the King's eldeſt Son. The Pope on his ſide ſeeing that Edmund could not proſecute the Conqueſt of the Kingdom of Sicily, by reaſon of the Troubles that were in England, inveſted Charles Earl of Anjou Brother of St. Louis therewith, who came to Rome in 1265. and was there crown'd King of Sicily on the 28*th* of June, by Clement the 4*th*, Urban's Succeſſor, who alſo made him Senator of that City. He was followed with an Army by Sea and Land; and giving Battle to Manfred on the 26*th* of February the following Year near Benevento, he gained an abſolute and bloody Victory over his Troops, Manfred himſelf being killed upon the ſpot. After his Death the Kingdom of Sicily ſubmitted to the Conqueror; but Conradin, whoſe right this Kingdom was, wrote a Letter to the Princes of Europe, wherein he laid open the Juſtice of his Pretenſions, and implored their Aſſiſtance for its Recovery. He got together an Army compoſed for the moſt part of Voluntiers, with which, by the Advice of Henry Brother of Alphonſus, he made a Deſcent into Tuſcany, where he ſurprized and cut in Pieces thoſe Forces which Charles, whom the Pope had conſtituted Vicar of the Empire in that Country, had left there; and at the ſame Time Conrade, a Son of one of the Emperor Frederick's Baſtards, who was come from Antioch, drew off all Sicily from their Obedience, except Meſſina and Palermos, while Conradin by the Aſſiſtance of the Gibelines, made himſelf Maſter of all Tuſcany and Romagna, and entered in Triumph into Rome, where he was proclaimed Emperor by the People. But being entred into Campania with a Deſign to go into Sicily, Charles met him at the Lake of Fucin, called the Lake of Celano, where he gave him Battle on the 25*th* of Auguſt, 1268. in which Charles got the Day. Conradin, Frederick Duke of Auſtria, and Henry of Caſtile betook themſelves to flight; but happening to be known in the Way, were brought back again to the Conqueror, who put them into Priſon, and gave them their Trial the next Year. Conradin and Frederick were put to Death, and Henry of Caſtile confined to Priſon. Juſt about the ſame Time too Conrade was taken by ſome of Charles's Party, who hanged him up; and a ſhort Time after Entius, the only one remaining of the Princes of Suabia, died in his Priſon of Bologna. Thus unhappily periſhed the whole Race of the Emperor Frederick.

Charles Earl of Anjou defeats Manfred, and ſeizes himſelf upon Sicily.

Conradin diſputes the Kingdom of Sicily with Charles; he is defeated and executed.

The Election of Rodolphus to the Empire, and his Actions

The Houſe of Auſtria quickly ſucceeded that of Suabia in Glory and Power; for Richard being dead, and Alphonſus having no Friends left him in Germany, the Electors aſſembled themſelves in October 1273. at Francfort, according to the Counſel of Pope Gregory X. and there elected Rodolphus Earl of Hapsburg, without any regard had to the Remonſtrances of the Deputies of Alphonſus, or the Sollicitations of thoſe of Ottogar King of Bohemia, who thought the Empire had been aſſured to him (tho' ſome Hiſtorians ſay that he refuſed it) Rodolphus was crowned the ſame Year at Aix la Chapelle, and the next was confirmed by the Pope in the Council at Lyons, and acknowledged in an Aſſembly at Nuremberg, by all the Princes of Germany, except Ottogar King of Bohemia, who refuſed to be there. Rodolphus declared him a Rebel, and required him to deliver up Auſtria, and many other Provinces which he pretended belonged to the Empire. Ottogar refuſing to deliver them, Rodolphus declares War againſt him, and lays Siege to Vienna in 1276. Ottogar came with an Army to its Aſſiſtance, and the King of Hungary to that of Rodolphus; but yet they did not come to a Battle, the Princes of Germany interpoſing their Authority to make up theſe Differences.

'Twas agreed, that King Ottogar ſhould content himſelf with Bohemia and Moravia, and ſhould reſtore Auſtria, Stiria, Carinthia, Carniola, and the other Provinces to Rodolphus, for the performance of which he ſhould take his Oath; and to the King of Hungary thoſe Cities which he had taken from him, as well as the Hoſtages and Treaſures that he had of his. This Peace did not laſt long, for the King of Bohemia, not caring faithfully to perform theſe Articles, and being very angry that he ſhould be thus forced to ſubmit to Rodolphus, provides a new Army, and comes to ſet upon the Emperor, but he loſt the Battle and his own Life. Rodolphus took Moravia, from Wenceſlaus the Son of Ottogar, about eight Years old, leaving him Bohemia, under the Tuition of his Uncle Otho, Marquiſs of Brandenburg. He gave Auſtria to his eldeſt Son Albert, whoſe Poſterity took the Name of Auſtria, as more illuſtrious than that of Hapsburg.

The Revolutions in the Empire and Italy, during the thirteenth Century.

Charles ſpoiled of his Authority by the Pope.

The Eſtabliſhment of Rodolphus leſſen'd Charles the King of Sicily's Authority in Italy. Pope Nicholas III. took from him the Vicariate of Tuſcany, and the Quality of Senator of Rome; and in Recompence received of Rodolphus, Romagna, and the Lieutenancy of Ravenna, which he gave to the Holy See, leaving all the other States of Italy in a ſort of Liberty dependant upon the Empire. But it would not content the Pope that he had deprived Charles of his Authority in the upper Italy; he had a deſign to get the Kingdom of Sicily from him too; and about this, deals with Peter King of Arragon, as Heir of the Houſe of Suabia by his Mother Conſtantia the Daughter of Manfred. This gave occaſion to the Conſpiracy that was laid by John, Lord of the Iſland of Crocida, whom Charles had robb'd of his Poſſeſſions, againſt this Prince, and all the French that were in Sicily, which did not break out till after the Death of Nicholas, when the Sicilians maſſacred all the French in the Kingdom, on Eaſter Sunday 1282. Charles coming to revenge this cruel Action, the King of Arragon enters into Sicily with his Army, and amuſes Charles with a Truce. His Admiral Soria lays Siege to Naples in the Year 1284. and, having defeated Charles, his Troops, takes his Son Charles the Lame Priſoner, and ſends him into Arragon. Charles had enough to do to keep Apuleia and Calabria, and not being able long to ſurvive the Misfortunes, died at Foggia in Apuleia the 7*th* of January, 1285. leaving his Son Charles the Lame his Heir, who got out of Priſon in 1287. but on Condition that he ſhould renounce all Pretences to Sicily. Yet he was no ſooner got out but he made himſelf be crowned at Rome King of Sicily and Apuleia, on the 28*th* of May, 1289. Alphonſus dying ſome Time after, Charles made up the Matter with Dangianus his Succeſſor, the latter renouncing his Pretenſions to the Kingdom of Sicily, on Condition that Charles of Valois ſhould lay down his to Arragon. Yet for all this, Charles the Lame could not enjoy Sicily in Peace, for Frederick the younger Brother of Dangianus, to whom Alphonſus, by his Will had left this Kingdom, got himſelf crowned King by the Sicilians, ſo that Charles was never in Poſſeſſion of any but the Continent; the Kingdom of Sicily as it is called, being from that Time divided into two; one beyond the Pharos of Meſſina, which is the Iſland of Sicily; the other on this ſide of that Tower, call'd the Kingdom of Naples.

Sicily rebels againſt Charles.

The Sicilian Veſpers.

Charles his deſeat and death.

The diviſion of the Kingdom of Sicily.

The Emperor Rodolphus ended his Days at Germeſheim near Spire, the laſt Day of September, 1291. having reigned eighteen Years. He laid the Foundation of the prodigious Greatneſs of the Houſe of Auſtria; but he laid down as it were the Empire of Italy, by neglecting to go thither, as well as by ſelling his Power over many Cities of Tuſcany. Adolphus Earl of Naſſaw was choſen into his Place the 6*th* of January, 1292. and crowned at Francfort. He peaceably enjoyed the Empire for ſome Years; but the German Lords being diſcontented that he had not allow'd them a Share in a Sum of Mony that the King of England had given for help againſt France, and ſeeing that he had not Authority nor Strength ſufficient to maintain the Peace of Germany, depoſed him in 1298. and in his ſtead elected Albert Duke of Auſtria, Son of the Emperor Rodolphus. Adolphus defended his Right, but the Fortune of War quickly decided the Caſe in favour of Albert; Adolphus being defeated and kill'd in the firſt Engagement near Worms, in the Month of July. After his Death Albert was elected anew, and crowned at Aix la Chapelle, and remain'd in peaceable Poſſeſſion of the Empire of Germany.

The Reign of Adolphus.

The depoſing of Adolphus.

Election of Albert Duke of Auſtria.

CHAP. II.

The Life, Letters, and other Writings of Pope Innocent the Third.

The Life, Letters, and other Writings of Pope Innocent III.

INNOCENT the Third, before he was raiſed to the Pontifical Dignity, went by the Name of Lotharius. He was born at Anagni, being the Son of Thraſimond, of the Family of the Earls of Signi, and of Clarice a Roman Lady. He ſtudied at Rome, Paris, and Bologn, and being upon his Return to Rome, was ordained Subdeacon by Gregory VIII. and when he was but 29 Years old, was made Chief Deacon, by the Title of S. Sergius and S. Bacchus, by Clement III. His Learning and Merit made him be unanimouſly choſen by the Cardinals, on the very Day of Celeſtin III's Death, which happened on the 8*th* of January, 1198. although he was then but very young, and no more than Deacon. He was conſecrated Prieſt the 21*ſt* of February the ſame Year, and raiſed to the Pontifical Throne on the Sunday next after the Feaſt of the Chair of St. Peter at Antioch. After having ſatisfied the People by the ordinary Largeſſes, and received an Oath of Allegiance from them, he made an Order, forbidding all Officers in the Court of Rome, to take any Fee or Gratuity.

The Life, Letters, and other Writings of Pope Innocent III.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

tuity for what ſhould be done at Rome, except the Rights that were due to thoſe who drew up and writ the Bulls, on which he laid a very moderate Impoſt. Having remedied this Abuſe, he applied himſelf wholly to decide in Caſes that ſhould be brought before him. Thrice a Week he had a publick Conſiſtory, where he in Perſon gave Judgment in all principal Cauſes, leaving the meaner ones to his Commiſſaries. This quick Diſpatch brought him a Multitude of Cauſes from all Parts of the World; ſo that an Author that lived in his Time, remarks, that he in his Popedom decided more and more weighty Affairs, than had ever been decided in thrice the Time in the Church of Rome. This was the Occaſion of his writing ſuch a vaſt Number of Letters, of which there is a Collection divided into nineteen Books according to the Years of his Pontificate. The two firſt were publiſhed in the laſt Century, by Cardinal Sirlett, printed at Rome in 1543. and reprinted at Cologn in 1575. and at Venice in 1578. Monſieur Boſquet found four others, viz. the thirteenth, and the three following Books at Tolouze in the Library of the College of Foix, and printed them in 1635. Monſieur Baluze has ſince publiſhed the tenth, eleventh, and twelfth, with Part of the fifth, and a Collection of the Letters that concern the Empire, and cauſed them to be printed at Paris in 1682. with ſome other Books that had been out before. The third, and the following Books to the tenth, were found in Manuſcript in the Vatican Library. The three laſt are wholly loſt. Becauſe theſe Letters contain many Hiſtorical Facts and Points of Diſcipline, which may ſhow us what the Eccleſiaſtical Polity of the Church of Rome was in the Time of Innocent, by which the Popes have ever ſince taken their Meaſures, I thought it might be worth while to make an Extract (at leaſt of Part) of them, by particularizing the Subject of each Letter.

The firſt then is a Circular Letter about his Election, certifying all the Faithful, how that after the Death of P. Celeſtine his Predeceſſor, his Funeral being over, he was choſen Pope by the Cardinals; and recommending himſelf to all their Prayers, that God would give him Grace and Strength to bear that heavy Burden of the Papal Chair. This Letter is full of Expreſſions of Humility. The 2*d*. and 3*d*. are nothing but this ſame Letter directed, with ſome few Alterations, to the King of France, and to the Abbots, Priors, and other Religious of that Kingdom.

There is an Expreſſion in the ſecond which is no ſmall Honour to the King of France. — 'In Conſideration, ſays he, that 'the Kingdom of France has always remain'd in Unity with 'the Church, we addreſs the Firſt-fruits of our Letters to you, 'that are the firſt and eldeſt Son of the Church of Rome.'

He writ alſo a particular Letter to the Patriarch of Jeruſalem upon the ſame Subject, in which he tells him what a fervent Deſire he has to recover the Holy Land, and deliver the City of Jeruſalem. This is the eleventh Letter of the firſt Book.

In the fourth Letter of the ſame Book he writes to the Biſhop of Paris, to put him in Mind of exhorting King Philip to take the Queen his Conſort again, and to uſe her kindly.

In the fifth he forbids the Archbiſhop of Strigonia to perform that Vow he had made of going to Jeruſalem, unleſs the Kingdom of Hungary ſhould be in Peace. In the next Letter he intruſts him with the Reform of a Monaſtery.

In the ſeventh he reprimands the Abbot of St. Martin of Hungary, for being in a Conſpiracy with the Lord of that Country againſt the King, contrary to the Injunction of Pope Celeſtine.

In the eighth he entruſts the Biſhop of Ferrara with the Care of the Temporal and Spiritual Affairs of the Abby of Nonantule, with Authority to puniſh the Abbot.

The ninth is a Permiſſion to the King of Hungary to remove a Monaſtery from one Place to another.

In the tenth he adviſes one of the Sons of the King of Hungary to make a Voyage to the Holy Land, to acquit himſelf of a Vow which his Father had made, and which he had obliged himſelf to perform.

The thirteenth is a moral Exhortation to the Princes of Germany, inviting them to take up Arms againſt the Infidels.

In the fourteenth he appoints the Dean Elect, and Nicholas de Levennes Canon of Cambray, Commiſſioners to give Judgment in a Difference about a Church that was between the Abby of Prom, and that of Premontre: But becauſe about the End of the Commiſſion he had added theſe Words, quantum de jure poteritis, after theſe, probationes præſentis partis recipere; and conſequently the Commiſſioners ſeemed to have Power to prepare Things for a Hearing without obſerving this Clauſe, the Pope explains himſelf in the 62*d*. Letter, and declares that this Clauſe reſpects as well the Preparation for, as the Judgment of the Cauſe.

The fifteenth, which is written to two Cardinal Legates, is againſt an Agreement entred into without his Knowledge by a Prior, and the Prelates and Conſuls of the Cities of Tuſcany, which he pretends is a Demeſne of the Holy See.

In the ſixteenth, written to the Chapter of St. Anaſtaſia, having firſt eſtabliſh'd this for a Maxim, that all important Cauſes are to be carried to Rome; he declar'd the Election of a Biſhop, which this Chapter was forced to by the Secular Power, to be null, and order'd the Canons to proceed to the chooſing another, who more deſired to do Good, than to enjoy the Dignity, qui non minus prodeſſe deſiderit, & noverit quam præeſſe. He writ two Letters at the ſame Time, to the ſame Purpoſe, one to the Archbiſhops of Capua, Reggio, and Palermos, the other to the Empreſs, to procure a free Election. Theſe make the 17*th*. and 18*th*.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

In the nineteenth, addreſſed to the Biſhop of Paris, he declares, That a Prieſt who by the Advice of his Phyſicians has been gelt for prevention of the Leproſy, is not thereby render'd uncapable of diſcharging his miniſterial Office.

By the twentieth, he commiſſions the Biſhop of Troyes, and the Abbot of S. Loup to abſolve a Prieſt that had been accuſed of Murder, if he could clear himſelf Canonically, and his Accuſer did not appear.

In the twenty firſt, he orders the Archbiſhop and Archdeacon of Trani to inform againſt the Biſhop of Veſti, for not having obſerved an Agreement which he made with his Church, for the Reſtitution of many things that he had taken from it.

In the two and twentieth, he gives leave to the Archbiſhop of Milan to ordain thoſe Deacons and Prieſts who had receiv'd the Clericature of the Pope, becauſe of the Neceſſity he found himſelf in of having Prieſts.

The twenty third is an Oath of Fidelity taken by Peter the Præfect of Rome, and by two other Officers to Pope Innocent III.

In the twenty fourth, he orders the Biſhops of Spire, Straſburg, and Wormes, to command a German Lord to ſet the Archbiſhop of Salerno, whom he kept Priſoner, at Liberty; and if he would not, to ſuſpend the Dioceſe wherein he was detained.

In the five and twentieth, he orders the Biſhop of Sutri, and the Abbot of St. Anaſtaſius, to abſolve Philip Duke of Suabia, provided he ſet the Archbiſhop of Salerno at Liberty.

In the twenty ſixth, which is ſuperſcribed to the ſame Perſons, he orders them to charge the German Princes to ſet all the Sicilians at Liberty, that they had Priſoners, and upon their Refuſal to excommunicate them, and interdict their Eſtates.

In the ſeven and twentieth, he recommends the Aſſiſtance of his Legates, which he had ſent into the Exerchate, to the Archbiſhop of Ravenna, and his Suffragans.

In the twenty eighth, he deſires the Archbiſhop of Sens, and the Biſhop of Meaux, to comfort the Counteſs of Champagne, about the Death of her Son, and to make uſe of Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures, for the Prevention of any one's doing her any Injury.

The twenty ninth is to the Biſhop of Ferentino, and contains a Deciſion of the following Caſe. A Man had promiſed another by Oath to marry his Daughter; and there was nothing to hinder the Performance of it, but the Daughter's Unwillingneſs to comply: Two or three Years after, another Man eſpouſed her, per verba de præſenti. The Pope's Judgment is, That the ſecond Contract ought to ſtand, if it were certainly made per verba de præſenti, but if it was entered into like the other, per verba de futuro, then the former ſhould take place.

The thirtieth he writes to the Chapter of Straſburg, to certify them, that for the Preſervation of the Peace of their Chapter, the Provoſt of St. Thomas, (in conſequence of the Grant that he had made him of it by his Legate the Cardinal of St. Cecilia) had given up into his Hands the Right that he claimed to one of their Prebends, and had thereby put an End to the Suit that was between them and that Provoſt.

In the one and thirtieth, written to the Archbiſhop of Tarragon, and the Sacriſt of Wie, he entruſts them with the Judgment of a Difference about the Election of an Abbot of St. Bennet of Bage,

The thirty ſecond is an Act by which he confirms the Settlement that the Archbiſhop of Colooza, had made of ſome Churches upon the Provoſt of that Church.

The thirty third is addreſſed to two Canons of Piſa, ordering them to take care that a certain Man's Goods which he had mortgaged for a Sum of Money, ſhould be reſtored him, he paying the Principal of that Sum, for which his Eſtate was mortgaged.

In the thirty fourth, he warns the Sovereign Magiſtrate, and the Counſellors of Viterbo, not to go on in that Treaty which they and thoſe of Piſa had begun to make with the Governors of Tuſcany, without the Conſent of the Holy See. He gives Order in the following Letter to his Legates to interdict the Piſans, if they did not obey this Command.

In the ſix and thirtieth, he gives Judgment that a Prieſt, who at the Point of Death, has received a Monachal Habit from the Hands of a ſimple Monk, and has thereupon been carried into a Monaſtery, but afterwards upon his Recovery has quitted the Habit, and left the Monaſtery with the Leave of the Abbot, is not afterwards thereby obliged to lead a Monaſtical Life.

The ſeven and thirtieth is the Deciſion of a Suit that was between the Archbiſhop of Milan, and the Monaſtery of St. Donatus of Scozula.

In the thirty eighth, he confirms the Excommunication of Marcovald by his Legates, for having ſeized upon the Goods of the Church; and forbids all his Subjects to obey him, freeing them them all from any Oath of Allegiance that they might have taken to him.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

The thirty ninth is a Decree, ordering the Bishop of Lodi to settle a Clerk, named James, in the Prebend of the Church of Novara, which had been given him by his Predecessor, except it could be proved that the two Persons who were in Possession of the vacant Prebends were chosen before his Predecessor forbad the chooſing any other but James. The next Letter is but the same over again, in respect of the other that had been chosen by the Holy See for the other Prebend.

By the forty first and forty second, he puts a Monastery, that depended before immediately upon the Holy See, under the Jurisdiction of the Bishop of Luni.

In the forty third, he gives order to the Archbishop of Gnesn and his Suffragans, to make use of their Ecclesiastical Censures upon the Princes of Poland that troubled the Duke of that Country.

In the forty fourth, he gives the Bishop of Worms notice, to take care of the Celebration of the Feast of S. Paul's Conversion in his Dioceſs.

The forty fifth, is the Confirmation of a Privilege granted by the Bishop of Chartres to the Curates of the Deanry of Espernon, and to the other Archdeaconries and Deanries in his Dioceſs.

In the six and fortieth, addressed to the Archpriest and Canons of Perusa, he confirms the Rules they had made for the Government of their Church; which were, that there should be eight Regular Canons and professed Monks in their Chapter, two other Clerks, Subdeacons or Acolites: That among the Canons there should be three Offices, an Archpriest, an Ordinary, and a Chamberlain: That the Archpriest should be the Chief, and should have the care of the Society: That the Ordinary should be entrusted with the care of the Cloister of the Divine Office, and of the Reading, and should be President in the absence of the Archpriest: And that it should be the Chamberlain's Business to take care of the temporal Affairs: For the Election of an Archpriest three Persons should be chosen out of their Canons, who should take the Votes of all the others: That the Ordinary and the Chamberlain should be appointed by the Archpriest, but with the Consent of the Society; and many other Rules doth this Letter contain, for the Settlement of this House.

The forty seventh, is a Letter written to the Pope, by the Consuls and Inhabitants of the Castle of Monte-Bello, whereby they give themselves up to the Church of Rome.

In the forty eighth, to the Bishop of Marsi, he decides the following Case. A Man married a Woman with whom he had before been carnally acquainted; and after that, married another, of whom he had had Children: The first Woman demands either that he may live with her, or else she may have leave to marry another. The Pope's Answer is, that if this Man married the former per verba de præsenti, he then ought to return her; but if per verba de futuro, they must then both have a Penance enjoined them, and the Woman be at liberty to marry whom she would.

In the forty ninth, to the Abbot and Religious of the Monastery of S. Prosper of Riom, he declares null the Alienation of the Possessions of this Monastery by Guy, a former Abbot thereof.

By the fiftieth, he suspended the Patriarch of Antioch from the Power he had of ordaining Bishops, because he had, without permission from the Holy See, translated him that had been chosen Bishop of Apamea to Tripoli, and made him Bishop of that City. In the next he suspends this Bishop too.

The fifty second, fifty third, and fifty fourth are writ about a Church newly built at Compeign, which they would have under the Bishop of Soissons. He writes to him to dedicate it, and that he is willing it should belong to him, so the Bishop of Arras would but consent. And to him too he writes to bring him to agree to it.

The fifty fifth, is a Confirmation of the Judgment of his Predecessor against the Canons of Limoges, for abusing and driving out a Priest that the Bishop of Perigueux would have made a Canon of that Church: whereby he ordered the Archbishop of Bourges to excommunicate the Canons, and interdict their Church till they gave the Bishop Satisfaction. The Archbishop executed the Orders of Pope Celestin the third. Innocent in this Letter confirms what his Predecessor had done, and orders the Archbishop of Bourdeaux to carry on the procedure against the Canons.

In the fifty sixth, he settled the Right of Metropolitan of all the Bishopricks in the Isle of Corsica, upon the Archbishop of Pisa, and grants him the Primacy of the Provinces of Sardinia.

The fifty seventh, is to forbid giving any Fiefs or Benefices to those that were concerned in the Murder of the Bishop of Vicenza.

By the fifty eighth, he took off the Sentence of Excommunication, that the Legate of his Predecessor had pronounced against the Bishop of Zamora in Spain.

The fifty ninth, is written to the Deans of the Churches of St. Mary and St. Peter of Laon, and to the Chancellor of the Church of that City, about the Presentation to a Benefice disputed between the Archdeacon, who had presented a young Man not twenty, and another who had provided a Priest. Innocent decides in favour of the last, if the thing was so as it was represented.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

In the sixtieth, he commits to the Bishop of Luques and two other Persons, the Decision of a Difference between the Bishop of Orense in Spain, and the Abbot of Cella-Nova, about the pretended Exemption of this Abbot.

In the sixty first, to the Archbishop of Sens he revokes the Privilege granted by his Predecessor, to the Bishop of Chartres, which deprived that Archbishop of the Power of absolving those whom this Bishop had excommunicated; till their Cause should be examined by the Abbots of St. Colombus, and St. Germain des Prez.

In the sixty second, he determin'd, that Women may come into the Church in a short Time after their Lying-in; but yet, if they think fit to stay away out of Respect, their Devotion is not to be condemned.

In the sixty fourth, he makes null all the Presentations to Benefices by the Secular Power in the Archbishoprick of Aversa. And in the next Letter he does the same for the Archbishoprick of Salerna, in all those Presentations that had been so made while that Archbishop was kept Prisoner.

In the sixty sixth, he gives leave to the Monks of Gualdo, to change their Confinement for Liberty.

By the sixty seventh, he commits the Reform of the Abbey of St. Maixant to the Bishop of Poictiers, and orders him to do Justice to the Prior of Azay.

In the sixty eighth, he order'd the Bishop of Lodi not to have any regard to those forged Letters, by which he had hindered the Election of a Bishop by the Chapter of Novara.

In the sixty ninth, he discharged the Bishop of Troces from a Vow which he had made of going to the Holy Land, upon Condition that he should send some religious Person thither, who for the Relief of the Country should carry with him the Sum which he would have spent in his Voyage. In this Letter he mentions a Letter of Pope Alexander his Predecessor, which says, that the Vow of going to the Holy Land may be exchanged.

In the seventieth, he commissions the Bishop of Liege, the Abbot of St. Tron, and the Provost of Utrecht, to inform against the Archbishop of Treves, with Power to suspend him, if they should find him guilty of the Crimes whereof he stood accused by the Dean of his Church.

By the seventy first, he entrusted the Bishop of Zamora in joint Commission with an Abbot and a Prior, to put in execution the Decree of his Predecessor Pope Lucius the 3*d*, which constituted the Archdeacon of Troischateaux Bishop of Leon, notwithstanding a contrary Decree of his Legate published some Time after.

The seventy second, is written to the Bishop of Alisa, to excommunicate those that pretended to make him answer before Secular Judges.

The seventy third, is an Order to the Grand Master, and the Brothers Hospitallers of St. John of Jerusalem, to restore to the Church of Tripoli the Church of Nephin, and all its Dependencies, according as it had been ordered by the Holy See.

By the seventy fourth, he permitted the Bishop of Anagni, with the Consent of his Chapter, to mortgage the Church Lands, for to purchase a Castle which was for his Conveniency.

The seventy fifth, is a solemn Decree for confirming the Election of Ademar to the Bishoprick of Poictiers, which there had been a Suit about at the Pope's Tribunal. After the Death of William Bishop of Poictiers, the Chapter agreed to refer the Election of a Bishop to six of the Canons: These having let six Months slip without any Election, the Agreement was renewed in the Presence of the Archbishop of Bourdeaux, and Ademar was chosen. The Election was confirmed by that Archbishop; but on the other side, the Dean, the Subdean, and some Canons opposed it, pleading that the Time of Agreement was expired; that 'twas true it had been renewed, but upon Condition that the Election should be the same Day; that the Electors had put it off to another Day, and had done it privately, without making the Chapter acquainted, contrary to the Appeal which the Dean had made to the Holy See. Upon these Grounds they proceeded to another Election, and named the Bishop of Nantes. Some of those that had made the former Election, seeing that the Earl of Poictiers did not much like it, came over to them. The rest stood to their Election, answering that Ademar was chosen the very Day of the Renewal of the Agreement, and that the Archbishop of Bourdeaux notified it to the Chapter, which agreed to it; that they dared not make it publick, because of the Earl of Poictiers, which was the Occasion of the Electors securing themselves in some safe place before they ventured to publish what they had done in the City: And as for the rest, that the Consent of that Prince was not at all necessary for the Validity of the Election. The Pope having heard the Attornies of both Parties in a publick Consistory, gave Judgment in favour of Ademar, though the King of England was against him.

In the seventy sixth, he declared, that tho' his Predecessors had consider'd the Ordination of the Clergy that had no Titles, as nothing, yet he being willing to act with more Lenity towards them, meant that those, or the Successors of those who had ordained them, ſhould provide for their Subſiſtence till they had Benefices: And this he enjoins the Biſhop of Zamora in particular, in the Caſe of a poor Clerk whom his Predeceſſor had ordained Subdeacon, without any Title, either to a Benefice or Eſtate.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

By the ſeventy ſeventh, he adviſed the Dean of Aſtorga to content himſelf with the Privileges and Rights that his Predeceſſors had enjoyed, without overloading the Chapter.

In the ſeventy eighth, he ordered the Archbiſhop of Magdeburg to expel him that had been thruſt into the Biſhoprick of Prague by the Secular Power, and to give the Chapter the Liberty of chooſing one according to form.

In the ſeventy ninth, he commanded the Archbiſhop of Auch to hinder all Eccleſiaſticks obtaining Benefices by means of the Laicks. He ordered him alſo in the eightieth, eighty firſt, and eighty ſecond, to make all the rambling Monks to return to their Monaſteries; to take care for the Puniſhment of Heretieks; and to oppoſe Pluralities either of Livings or Abbeys.

In the eighty fourth, he condemned the Dealings of two Parſons who would have changed Livings; the one of which put a trick upon the other, by making him reſign his Living to a Kinſman of his, and then refuſing to give him his own. The Pope ordered his Living to be reſtor'd him.

In the eighty fifth, he wrote to the Archbiſhop of Milan to excommunicate his Advocate called Poſſeguerre, for having ſpoken diſdainfully of a Decree he had made, if he did not give Surety to make Satisfaction within a Fortnight.

The eighty ſixth, is an order to the Archbiſhop of Sens, to put the Curates of the Biſhoprick of Chartres in Poſſeſſion of that Privilege of Exemption that their Biſhop had granted them, and which had been confirmed to them by the 45*th* Letter.

In the next, he ordered him to take care to provide for thoſe who had been preſented to Benefices in that Dioceſs, and whom the Biſhop had put by without any Reaſon.

In the eighty eighth, he vindicated himſelf from a Reproach that the Magiſtrates of Tuſcany caſt upon him, for intending to deliver up the City of Aſſiſi to the Duke of Spoletto. He ſays, that he was ſo far from that, that he had excommunicated the Duke, and had not given him Abſolution but upon Condition that he ſhould deliver up the Country which he was in Poſſeſſion of, which he had in part performed by reſtoring the Cities of Foligni and Terni, and he had done the ſame by the Caſtle of Aſſiſi, had not the Citizens of that City, and thoſe of Peruſa oppoſed it: As for the reſt, the Reaſon he did not like that Treaty which they had made with his Legates, was only becauſe there ſeemed to be ſome Things in it which were not for the Honour of the Church.

The eighty ninth, is an Act of a Grant made to one Peter, of a Prebend of St. Hillary of Poictiers, which had belonged to his Uncle.

In the ninetieth, he adjudged a Prebend of the Church of Antwerp to him that the Chapter had provided, againſt one that his Predeceſſor had given a Canon's place to for his Subſiſtence; becauſe this laſt had conceal'd his having any more Benefices ſufficient for his Maintenance.

In the ninety firſt, he gave leave to the Biſhop of Aliſa to hire an Eſtate to help forward the Payment of ſome Debts that he had contracted by the repairing of his Church.

The ninety ſecond, is againſt the inceſtuous Marriage of the King of Caſtile's Daughter with the King of Leon. He charges Cardinal Rainier to excommunicate them if they did not part. He orders him alſo to excommunicate the King of Navarre if he had broken that Treaty which he had made with the King of Caſtile, and to keep all the Kings and Princes of Spain in peace. The following Letter is to the ſame Purpoſe.

In the ninety fourth, he recommends it to the Archbiſhop of Aix to aſſiſt the Commiſſaries of the Holy See, in their Proceedings againſt the Hereticks of Provence, and the Vaudois, Catares, Patarins, and others. This ſame Letter is likewiſe directed to the Archbiſhops of Narbonne, Auch, Vienne, Arles, Embrun, Tarragon and Lyons, and their Suffragans, and to all the Princes, Barons, Earls, and in general to all the People of thoſe Provinces.

In the ninety fifth, he exhorted all the Eccleſiaſticks to favour the Brothers of the Hoſpital of the Holy Spirit founded at Montpellier: And in the ninety ſeventh, he confirms the Privileges of that Hoſpital.

In the ninety ſixth, he ordered the Archbiſhop of Trani, and the Biſhop of Bitonto to take care of the Reſtitution of thoſe Things that had been taken from the Monaſtery of Pont de Brinde, by excommunicating thoſe that were in Poſſeſſion of them, till they ſhould reſtore them.

In the ninety eighth, he gave Judgment that the Canons newly created in the Chapter of Ferrara ought to have part of the Additions to the Revenues of that Chapter.

In the ninety ninth, he puts the King of Portugal in mind of paying that Acknowledgment, which his Father Alphonſus had engaged himſelf to pay to the Holy See every Year, after having received the Title of King, and informs him that he has given order to his Legate to force him, if he would not do it willingly.

In the hundredth, he order'd the Chaplains of St. John of Perſiceto, to pay their Archprieſt the Right of Procuration, which he ſhould give the Biſhop of Bologn for his Viſit.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

In the hundred and firſt, he ordered the Archbiſhop of Vienne to put him that had been named by the Abbot of Chaiſe-Dieu, in Poſſeſſion of the Abbey of Faverni, if he found that Abbot's Right was well grounded.

In the hundred and ſecond, he anſwered the Chapter of Spoletto, that the Marriage of a Man with a Concubine which he kept while his Wife was alive, is valid, except it could be proved that one of them had a Hand in her Death.

The hundred and third, is in favour of a Man who had a Canonry of the Church of Laon reſigned him, but had been oppoſed in it by another that the Holy See had provided, and caſt after a great deal of Charges, in a Suit at Rome under Pope Celeſtin. The Pope willing to deal favourably with him, ordered that he ſhould be acknowledged and conſidered as a Canon by the Chapter of Laon, and ſhould enter upon the firſt Canon's place vacant in that Church, notwithſtanding a Decree of the Holy See to the contrary. This is the Subject of this Letter written to the Archbiſhop of Sens, and the Biſhop and Chapter of Laon.

In the hundred and fourth, he determines that a Man who has enter'd into any Order when he was very Young, and afterwards has changed it, becauſe of his Weakneſs, for one leſs rigid and ſevere, and has in this laſt received all Orders, may without ſcruple perform the Functions incumbent on thoſe Orders, remaining a Monk in the latter Monaſtery.

In the hundred and fifth, and the hundred and ſixth, he declared to the Archbiſhop of Monreal in Sicily, that he is obliged to redeem all the Eſtates of his Church which he had alienated to no good purpoſe, and forbids him to alienate them any more.

In the hundred and ſeventh, he determined that Beneficiaries are obliged to reſide in the Church where their Benefices lie.

In the hundred and eighth, he confirmed a Treaty made between Walter Archbiſhop of Rouen, and Richard King of England, by the Conſent of the Chapter and Biſhops of the Province of Normandy, by which the Archbiſhop of Rouen was to give Andely to the King, except the Churches, Prebends, Fiefs, and the Land of Freſne: And the King in lieu was to give him all the Mills which he had at Rouen, the Towns of Diepe, and Boteille, with the Land of Louviers, and the Foreſt of Aliermont.

In the hundred and ninth, to the Biſhops of Arras, Tournay, Teronane and Cambray, he laid open the whole Suit that had been about the Election of a Provoſt into the Church of Seclin in Flanders. The Counteſs of Flanders who claimed the Patronage of that Church had named a Provoſt for it: The Canons being unwilling to receive him, ſhe appealed to the Holy See; notwithſtanding which Appeal the Canons had choſen John of Bethune for their Provoſt, who had obtained a Reſcript from the Predeceſſor of Innocent, ordering the Biſhop and Provoſt of Soiſſons to maintain the Election, and excommunicate the Counteſs if ſhe ſhould oppoſe it. In Purſuance of this, the Commiſſaries had excommunicated the Counteſs, and their Judgment had been likewiſe ſeconded by other Commiſſaries: But at laſt the Caſe being brought before Innocent, he declar'd, That the Reſcript in favour of John of Bethune had been obtained by a Trick, that the Counteſs had been unjuſtly excommunicated; and therefore he revoked all that had been acted by the Commiſſaries. This is the Subſtance of this Letter and the next to the Archbiſhop of Rheims.

In the hundred and eleventh, he forbad the Archbiſhop of Canterbury to build a Chappel that might any way be a Prejudice to his Cathedral.

In the hundred and twelfth, he declared it meritorious to reform Women from their lewdneſſes, and to marry them.

By the three following, he ordered that the Monaſtery of Baume ſhould be ſubject to that of Cluny.

In the hundred and ſixteenth, written to the Canons and Provoſt of St. Juvenca of Pavia, he order'd them to entertain the Canon, to whom his Predeceſſor had given a Mandate to be admitted into their Chapter.

In the hundred and ſeventeenth, to the Archbiſhop of Bourges, he declar'd, That the Pope alone has Authority to permit Biſhops to change one See for another.

By the hundred and eighteenth, he entruſted the Biſhop, the Chanter, and a Canon of the Church of Paris, with the Execution of a Mandate which his Predeceſſor had given to Bernard of Liſle, for a Canonſhip of Tournay, in which he had been inveſted by the Dean of Paris.

In the hundred and nineteenth, he gave Commiſſion to the Biſhop of Lamego, to a Monk that had before been Biſhop of that City, and to a Prior, to be Judges in a Difference between the Archbiſhop of Brague, and the Canons of St. Martins of Caſire about Immunity.

In the hundred and twentieth, he ordered the Archbiſhop of Milan to confer the Dignity of Chancellor of his Church on Henry, Subdeacon of the Church of Rome.

The Three next were written to procure the Reſtitution of thoſe Things to the Cardinal of Sancta Maria, which had been taken from him by Hubert the Son of Palavicin. He ordered that that unless within a Fortnight they gave Satisfaction for the Damage done to that Cardinal, the Churches of Placentia and Parma should be deprived of their Bishopricks, and subjected to the Archbishop of Ravenna.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

In the hundred twenty fourth, he gives leave to the Bishop of Oviedo to make a Monastery of a House of Regular Canons.

In the hundred twenty fifth, he gave Permission to take off the Censure that had been published against the Kingdom of Leon, and to absolve the King; but not before he had restored the Bishop of Leon, and made him Reparation for the Injury he had done him.

In the hundred twenty and sixth, to the Archbishop of Tarragon, he said, That having heard that his Church was too full, by reason of the Benefices that had been given to a great many Persons both within and without his Dioceſs, he would have him for the next seven Years let alone the filling of Vacancies, that by this Means it might be eased.

The hundred and twenty seventh, is a Confirmation of a Mandate granted by his Predecessor for a Canonry of the Church of Cambray.

The two next have nothing in them worth taking Notice of.

The hundred and thirtieth, is the Confirmation of a Treaty between the King of France and Earl of Flanders.

In the hundred and thirty first, to the Abbots of Citeaux, and of Clairvaux, he forbad the Archbishop of Rouen to act in any thing against Philip King of France, to the Prejudice of that Appeal which he had put into the Holy See; and he trusts these two Abbots to see the Order executed.

In the hundred thirty second, he granted the Bishop of Tortona the Power of forcing the Monks of his Dioceſs to observe the Interdict which he had published.

In the hundred and thirty third, he gave Order that the Parishioners of St. Achindanus at Constantinople, dependent upon the Archbishop of Grado, should pay their Tenths to this Archbishop, tho' they had been used to pay them heretofore to the Bishops his Suffragans.

In the hundred and thirty fourth, he answer'd the Abbot and the Religious of Belleville, that they might build Oratories wheresoever they had Religious sufficient to celebrate Divine Office, provided still that they first have leave of the Bishop of the Place. By the next Letter he freed them from that exceſsive Duty of Procuration which they owed the Religious of St. Irenæus.

The hundred and thirty sixth, is an Approbation of the Statutes of the Abbey of St. Waast of Arras.

In the hundred and thirty seventh, he confirms the Customs and Privileges of the Abbey of Vezelai, and grants it some new ones, particularly that of singing Gloria in excelsis on the Day of the Translation of St. Mary Magdalene in Lent.

In the hundred thirty and eighth, he revok'd a Privilege granted to a certain Chapter, that their Church should never be interdicted upon the Account of any Injury done by the Lords of the place to the neighbour Churches, because they had abused this Grant.

In the hundred and fortieth, he confirmed the Decree of the General Council of Lateran for settling the number of Domesticks, that Prelates might take with them when they went a visiting.

In the hundred and forty first, he gave his Approbation of the Agreement which the Abbot and Religious of Vezelai had made with the Earl of Nevers. He writes in the next to the Archbishop of Sens, to the Bishops of Autun, Langres, Auxerre and Nevers, to take care that this Agreement be observed by the Count of Nevers and his Successors.

In the hundred forty and third, he determined that a Clerk who had bragged of his having abused a Woman, ought to be turned out of his Living, and that the Husband of the Woman should take her again.

In the hundred forty fourth, he enjoins one who had been elected Bishop, to whom his Predecessor had given leave to be for some Time absent from his Dioceſs for the studying of the Holy Scriptures, and who had abused this Allowance, so as to apply himself to the Study of the Civil Law; he enjoins him, I say, to return to his Dioceſs, and to take with him one well versed in the Holy Scripture to instruct him.

In the hundred forty fifth, he gave order to execute a Mandate which his Predecessor had given his Secretary for a Canonry of Poictiers.

The hundred forty and sixth, is about the Reform of the Monastery of Cadain in Poictou. In the following, he order'd that the Abbot of this Monastery should be upheld against the Abbots that had been forcibly put in by the Monks.

The three following concern the Privileges of the Abbey of Vezelai.

In the hundred fifty and first, he allows him that had been chosen Bishop of Cambray, to give up his Right, and would have the Chapter to proceed to a new Election; and if they could not agree upon a Man, then that the Archbishop of Rheims, to whom this Letter is written, should provide one.

In the hundred fifty and second, he gives leave to that Archbishop to erect the Abbey of Mouzon into a Bishoprick, or to build a Cathedral in the place, according to a Grant made him by his Predecessor; provided all the while that the Monks be not driven out of their Monastery.

By the next Letter, he gives him leave as long as he lives, to appoint the Bishops of this new Bishoprick.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

In the hundred fifty fourth, he confirm'd the Judgment which Cardinal William Archbishop of Rheims, had given in favour of the Chancellor of the Church of Tournay.

The next five Letters, are written in favour of the Chapter of the Church of Tournay, to hinder the Alienation of their Estate, and about the Division to be made thereof between them.

The four following, are in favour of the Church of St. Waast of Arras.

In the hundred and sixty fourth, he commissions the Archbishop of Grado to give Judgment in a Difference between the Archdeacon of Trevisi and the Clergy of that Church.

The hundred and sixty fifth, is addressed to all the Prelates and Christian Lords, to exhort them to assist his Legates Rainier and Guy, and to employ their spiritual and temporal Authority against the Hereticks which they should find.

In the hundred and sixty sixth, he gave leave to the Abbot of St. Waast of Arras, to send back the Regular Canons to a Church they had been of before, although they had been settled there since the Monks.

In the hundred and sixty seventh, he order'd that all those that had a Hand in the Murder of a certain Bishop, should come to Rome for Absolution, except they were in Danger of their Lives, or could not come thither in Person.

In the hundred and sixty eighth and ninth, he cited the Archbishop of Tours to Rome before the Feast of St. Michael, for the Decision of a Difference between him and the Bishop of Dol.

In the hundred and seventieth, he entrusted the Archbishop of Tarentaise, the Bishop of Aosta, and the Abbot of Bonnemont, to prepare things for a hearing between the Bishop of Lausanna and his Chapter, who accused him of having robbed and wasted the Goods of the Church. The three hundred and thirty fourth is upon the same Subject.

The hundred and seventy first, is a Letter of Advice to Philip Augustus King of France, earnestly exhorting him to take his Wife again, and to put away her that he had married.

In the hundred and seventy second, he appointed the Archbishop of Rheims to take care of the Preservation of the Rights of the Abbey of St. Germain des Prez; which he confirms in the next Letter, as he doth those of the Abbey of St. Dennis, in the hundred and seventy fourth, and fifth.

In the hundred and seventy sixth, he recommends himself to the Prayers of the Religious of Citeaux and other Societies.

By the hundred and seventy seventh, he ordered the Bishop of Armagh, to allow the Bishop of Robogh, who had resigned his Bishoprick to another to retire, and the other to whom he had resigned it to remain in it, provided the Canons of that Church would choose him.

In the hundred and seventy eighth, he approved of the Judgment that the Cardinal of St. Mary had given in a Suit between two private Men, about a Canonship in the Church of Pavia.

The hundred and seventy ninth, is a Confirmation of the Election of an Abbot of St. Dennis.

In the hundred and eightieth, he gave leave to the Bishop of Agrigento to remove the Monasteries in his Dioceſs, which stood too much exposed, into Places more secure, and to recover the Possessions of his Church which had been alienated.

In the hundred and eighty first, he gave leave to the Abbot and Religious of St. Germain of Auxerre, in case the Bishop of Auxerre who was at fallings out with them, should deny, or purposely to their Prejudice defer giving them holy Chrism for the Dedication of their Altars and Churches, or consecrating their Abbots, and ordaining their Monks gratis, to apply themselves to any other Bishop whom they pleased: And likewise forbids this Bishop to require any thing for the Absolution of those belonging to this Abbey that he had excommunicated. By the hundred and eighty fourth, he determined, that if this Bishop excommunicated them unjustly, his Excommunication shall be null: And by the hundred and eighty fifth, he allows them to apply to the Archbishop of Sens for Protection from the Injustice and Violences of their Bishop.

In the hundred and eighty second, he appointed the Time for the Trial of the Suit between the Bishop of Langres and his Chapter, to be at Michaelmas.

In the hundred and eighty third, he nominated the Bishops of Arras and Senlis to take care of the Privileges of the Abbey of St. Dennis.

By the hundred and eighty sixth, he appointed the Bishop and Dean of Mascon, Judges in the Difference between the Bishop of Autun and the Monastery of Baume.

By the hundred and eighty seventh, he order'd the Chapter of Milan to let the Bishop of Tortona still enjoy the Canonry which he had in their Church before he was Bishop.

In the hundred eighty and eighth, he wrote to the Archbishop of Sens to oblige the Bishop of Autun to observe the Sentence which the Cardinal, Bishop of Ostia, had given in the case between this Bishop of Autun and the Abbot of Flavigny.

In the hundred and eighty ninth, he confirm'd the Election of Hugues to the Abbey of Vezelai, and advises him to discharge his Duty.

In the hundred and ninetieth, he wrote to the Archbishop and Archdeacon of Sens, not to turn out of his Living a

Pope Innocent's Letters.

Clergyman that had by chance killed a Child, as he was ſhooting an Arrow at a Tree, and had had Abſolution for his Fault from the former Archbiſhop, who had abſolved him, and permitted him ſtill to keep his Benefice.

In the hundred and ninety firſt, he empower'd the Biſhop of Troyes, to oblige the Clergy of his Dioceſs that had Pluralities to leave them, and to force thoſe whom he ſhould have Occaſion for in higher Orders, to receive Ordination.

In the hundred and ninety ſecond, to the Archbiſhop of Sens, and the Biſhop of Troyes, he diſannuls a new Order made by the Canons of Troyes; which was, That the Canons who had been already made, ſhould receive their Incomes whether preſent or abſent, whereas thoſe that ſhould be made for the Time to come, ſhould not receive them but only when they were preſent.

In the hundred and ninety third, he confirmed an Agreement made between the Biſhop of Troyes, and the Order of Premontre.

By the hundred ninety fourth and fifth, he ordered the Biſhop of Xaintes, to depoſe the Prior of a Society of Regular Canons, for having waſted the Eſtate of the Monaſtery, and overthrown their Government.

By the hundred and ninety fourth, written to the Abbot and Religious of Premontre, he confirmed a Grant made them by his Predeceſſors, of taking in, and turning out whom they pleaſed of their Order, without ſo much as ſubmitting to the Letters of the Pope, for the taking in thoſe again whom they had caſt out.

The next is a Confirmation of a Statute of the Chapter General of the Order of Premontre, forbidding all the Abbots of their Order, to wear a Mitre and Gloves like a Biſhop. In the hundred and ninety eighth too, he confirms another of the Statutes of their Chapter, by which they had order'd that they ſhould not be obliged to receive any Nuns into their Order. In the two hundreth, he gives them Protection from any Trouble that might be given them under the Pretence of the Right of Procuration. By the two hundred and ſecond, and the two hundred and third, he order'd that the Canons of this Order ſhould be ſubject to their reſpective Abbots and Superiors, and thoſe to the Abbot and Chapter General of Premontre, before which they ſhould appear at the times appointed by their Orders. Laſtly, he recommends in the two hundred and fourth, the Privileges and Rights of this Order, to the Care of all the Prelates in Chriſtendom.

In the hundred and ninety ninth, he ordered the Archdeacon of Laon, to reſtore to Hugues the Abbot of Peirrepont, the Horſe which he had exacted of him on the Day of his Promotion to that Dignity.

In the two hundred and firſt, he wrote to the Biſhop and Dean, and Archdeacon of Soiſſons, about an Oath which the Religious of the Abby of St. Eloy of Noyon, had made before they choſe an Abbot, that he who ſhould be choſen ſhould have it in his Power to diſpoſe of only three Obediences, and that he ſhould not appeal to the Holy See, or to the Pope's Legate. Innocent determined, that they ought to have a Penance laid upon them for this Oath, and that there ſhould be no Obligation upon any one to obſerve it.

In the two hundred and fifth, he reprimands the Biſhop of Senlis, for giving half a Prebend to a Man that had a Mandate of the Pope's, contrary to an Order of the Council of Tours, which forbids the dividing of Prebends. He ordered him to give this Man the firſt Canon's Place that ſhould be vacant in his Church, on pain of being deprived of the conferring of them, till he had provided him one; and forbids the Canons to receive any other.

The two hundred and ſixth Letter to the King of England, is a Myſtical Moral upon the Stones of four Rings, which he had ſent him.

In the two hundred and ſeventh, he gave leave to the Biſhop of Lizieux, to reduce all the Penſions upon the Churches in his Dioceſs, which were contrary to the Decree of the Council of Lateran.

In the two hundred and eighth, to the ſame Biſhop, after having taken Notice, that he ought not to admit of thoſe Appeals which were made only to evade Judgment, he granted him Power of fixing a competent Time to thoſe of his Dioceſs, who had appealed to the Holy See, to proſecute their Appeal, which if they failed to do in that Time, Judgment ſhould be executed on them.

The two hundred and ninth is againſt a Dean of Rouen, and a Chaplain who had abuſed a Prieſt, and done other Violences. He order'd the Archdeacons of Bayeux, and Coutances, to ſuſpend them ab officio & beneficio, and to excommunicate them till ſuch Time as they ſhould make Satisfaction.

In the two hundred and tenth, he order'd the Biſhop of Evreux, and the Archdeacon of Lizieux, to inform about a Deſign of a certain Lord, that had many Benefices in his Gift, of founding in his own Land, a collegiate Church of regular Canons, which ſhould enjoy the Incomes of the Churches of which they were Patrons.

In the two hundred and eleventh, he wrote to the King of Navarre, to reſtore certain Caſtles to the King of England. If he ſhould refuſe, he threatned to proceed againſt him with Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

In the two hundred and twelfth, to the Prior and Religious of Bourgueil, he declared it not to be in the Power of their Abbot, to alienate or mortgage the Eſtate of their Monaſtery, unleſs with the Conſent of the greateſt and wiſeſt Part of their Society.

In the two hundred and thirteenth, he order'd that the Knights ſhould pay the Tenths of the Lands that had been given them, to the Church to which they belonged.

In the two hundred and fourteenth, he entruſted the Archbiſhop of Bourges, the Abbot of St. Cibar of Angouleme, and the Dean of Perigueux, with the Regulation of a Difference between the Biſhop of Angouleme and his Chapter, about the Number of Canons in that Church.

In the two hundred and fifteenth, he gave Judgment in a Conteſt, about a Prebend of a Church, in favour of him to whom this Letter is written.

In the two hundred and ſixteenth, he gives leave to the Abbot of Beza, to ſend ſome of his Religious into the Obediences of Cluny, and to take ſome of the Religious of Cluny into his Monaſtery, for the Re-eſtabliſhment of it, after its being very much damaged by Fire.

In the two hundred and ſeventeenth, he determined, that the Merchants ought to pay to the Biſhop of Bergues, the uſual Tithes.

In the two hundred and eighteenth, he ordered the Payment of the yearly Penny, for every Family, which the Earl of Conthues had obliged himſelf to make all his Subjects pay, as an Alms to the Holy See; and becauſe the new Biſhop of that Country had been the Occaſion of ſtopping the Payment of that Duty, he impowered the Biſhops of Kirchval and Roſſe, to force him to it by Eccleſiaſtical Puniſhments.

By the two hundred and nineteenth, he declared null the Grant which his Predeceſſor had made of a Church to a Canon of Maſcon, not knowing that he had been excommunicated by his Chapter.

The two hundred and twentieth is written againſt a certain Chaplain, that uſed to require Money for the Burial of the Dead, and the Benediction of Marriages, and would pretend ſome Hinderance or other, if they would not pay him.

By the two hundred twenty firſt, he committed to the Biſhop of Liſbon and two Priors, the Judgment of a Caſe between the Biſhop of Coimbra, and the Templers.

In the two hundred and twenty ſecond, he ſent back to the Abbot, and two Monks of the Abby of Alcobacins in Portugal, the Examination of the Difference which was between the Biſhop of Coimbra, and the Monaſtery of the Religious of the Holy Croſs of Arganil, about an Exemption they pretended to, under Covert of a Privilege which they had by a Trick gained of Pope Clement, by feigning that the Mother-church was not the Cathedral Church, but the Church of Rome. His Determination is, that if this were all they went upon, they muſt e'en be ſubject to the Juriſdiction of that Biſhop.

The five following are likewiſe written to maintain the Privileges of the Biſhop of Coimbra.

The two hundred and twenty eighth is written to the Archbiſhop of Rouen, forbidding him to abſolve thoſe Perſons which his Suffragans had excommunicated; and ordering him to ſend them back to their Biſhop, and then if he ſhould refuſe to abſolve them, giving him Leave to do it, firſt taking Security of the Accuſed upon Oath, and upon Condition of full Satisfaction being made to the Biſhop, if he do not find that the Man was unjuſtly excommunicated.

In the two hundred and twenty ninth, he granted the Biſhop of Lizieux, the Privilege of not appearing before the Biſhop of Rouen, as Judge Delegate, in caſe he ſuſpected him, unleſs his Letters of Commiſſion ſhould have this particularly in them.

The two hundred and thirtieth is to the King of England, wherein he gave him an Account of what he had done as to the Reſtitution of that Money which the Germans had exacted of him, for his Ranſom; and of what he had done againſt the King of Navarre, to make him reſtore thoſe Caſtles which belonged to him. Laſtly, he makes a Relation of the Complaints and Differences between the Kings of France and England, and proteſts that it was not his Deſign to declare for either Side, but to do all he could to make Peace between them.

In the two hundred and thirty firſt, he ordered the Archbiſhop of Bourges, to inform againſt the Biſhop of Angouleme, accuſed by his Chapter, of waſting the Eſtate of his Church, and a great many other Irregularities.

In the two hundred and thirty ſecond, to the Abbot and Religious of Cherlieu, he decided, That one of their Monks, who was gone over into the Order of the black Monks, and had there taken the Order of Prieſthood, could perform the Offices of his Order.

In the two hundred and thirty third, he determined moreover, that the Canons may be Witneſſes in the Civil Cauſes of their Church, and that Credit ought to be given to their Teſtimony.

In

Pope Innocent's Letters.

In the two hundred and thirty fourth, he commiſſions the Biſhop of Autun, and the Abbots of Vigny, and of St. Margaret, to reform the Monaſtery of St. John of Autun.

The two hundred and thirty fifth is written to the Archbiſhop of Rheims, and to the other Archbiſhops and Biſhops of the Kingdom of France, againſt the forging of the Pope's Bulls; and to prevent it for the Time to come, he order'd that the Bulls ſhould be received either from the Hands of the Pope, or of them who are commiſſioned by him to deliver them. And for the remedying what was paſt, he would have a Provincial Council called, and all that pretended to have any Letters from the Pope, ordered to produce them, that they might be compared with the true ones: And if they were found to be forged ones, thoſe who forged them ſhould be puniſhed; the Laicks with Excommunication, and the Clergy by being ſuſpended ab officio & beneficio. Laſtly, he ordered that it ſhould be publiſhed, That all thoſe who to their Knowledge had any of theſe forged Letters, ſhould be bound to produce them within a Fortnight, under Pain of Excommunication, not to be taken off by the Pope himſelf, except at the Point of Death.

In the two hundred and thirty ſixth, he wrote to the Archbiſhop of Magdeburg, to force the Duke of Suabia to reſtore that Money to the King of England, which the Emperor Henry had exacted from him for his Ranſom. The two hundred and fifty ſecond is to the Duke of Auſtria, upon the ſame Subject.

In the two hundred and thirty ſeventh, he empowered the Biſhop of Tarentaiſe, to abſolve thoſe Incendiaries that could not come to Rome within three Years, by reaſon of their Sickneſs, or Hinderance by their Enemies.

In the two hundred and thirty eighth, he ſettled upon the Biſhop of Neytrach or Berzenza, all the Poſſeſſions that he might have, and exempts all the Lands of his Church, which he kept in his own Hands, from all Sorts of Tithes.

In the two hundred and thirty ninth, he determined that the Biſhop of Oviedo, was not obliged to reſtore the Fruits of a Piece of Land which belonged to the Biſhop of Zamora, until he had paid what was owed him, that he might be in a Condition to pay his Debts.

By the two hundred and fortieth, and forty firſt, he revok'd that Privilege which he had granted the Biſhop of Lizieux, of not anſwering, if he did not pleaſe, before the Archbiſhop of Rouen; but he ordered that this Archbiſhop ſhould never proceed againſt him, till after having thrice admoniſhed him; and that whenſoever he appealed à futuro gravamine, the Archbiſhop ſhould have no Power to attempt any thing farther, either againſt him or his Church.

In the two hundred and forty third, he gave leave to the Prior of Locheier, to keep the Eſtate of his Church in his own Hands, paying the Chapter the Rents which the Farmers uſed to pay them.

In the two hundred and forty fourth, to the Biſhop and Chapter of Angouleme, he determined, That the non-reſident Canons ſhould have no Power to oppoſe any Orders made by the Chapter in their Abſence.

In the two hundred and forty fifth, to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, to the Biſhops of Lincoln and Worceſter, and to the Abbot of Tewkſbury, he order'd, That the Monks be reeſtabliſhed in the Church of Coventry, who had been turned out by the Biſhop of Cheſter, under Pretence of a Brief gained by a Trick from his Predeceſſor.

By the two hundred and forty ſixth, he commiſſioned the Archbiſhop of Bourdeaux, and the Abbots of St. Cibar of Angouleme, and of Nantenil, to be Judges in a Difference between the Biſhop of Angouleme, and the Archdeacon of Mairmac.

In the two hundred and forty ſeventh, he committed to the Biſhop of Nevers, the Examination of a Difference between the Biſhop of Autun, and the Abbot of Buſſiere, about the Goods of an Archprieſt, who had deſired to be made a Monk in this Abby, and had let them enjoy his Goods while he lived, of which the Biſhop of Autun ſtript them when he was dead, pretending, that when this Archprieſt offered himſelf to the Monaſtery, he was not well in his Senſes; but, as he anſwered the Monks who asked him, Will you be a Monk? Yes, I will; ſo he anſwered another, who asked him, Will you be an Aſs? Yes, I will. The Pope order'd, That if the Biſhop could prove, that the Archprieſt was beſide himſelf at the Time he made this Donation, then the Monaſtery ſhould be condemned to reſtore his Eſtate and the Uſe of it; but if he could not prove that, they belonged to the Monaſtery.

In the two hundred and forty eighth, he entruſted the Abbot of St. Eucher, the Dean, and a Canon of Treves, with the Judgment of a Suit about a Prebend of St. Mary Magdalene of Verdun.

In the two hundred and forty ninth, he order'd Cardinal Ranier, to oblige the Kings of Portugal and Caſtile, to obſerve the Conditions of Peace which they had agreed upon.

The ſix next Letters have nothing worth notice in them.

In the two hundred and fifty ſixth, he determined, That the Acts of Judges are not authentick, unleſs they are authoriſed by the Witneſſes.

In the two hundred and fifty ſeventh, he confirmed ſome Rules made by the Magiſtrates of Benevento, about the Dues of Officers of Juſtice. Pope Innocent's Letters.

By the two hundred and fifty eighth, he order'd the Execution of a Mandate granted by Pope Celeſtine, for a Canonſhip of Benevento.

In the two hundred and fifty ninth, he order'd the Archbiſhop and Chapter of Rouen, to proceed according to the Reſolution of the greateſt and wiſeſt Part of the Chapter, that every Canon ſhould contribute out of his Revenue, towards the repairing of the Church.

In the two hundred and ſixtieth, written to the ſame Archbiſhop, he exhorts him not to yield to the Agreement which the Kings of France and England had made together, by which they reſolved to appoint four Eccleſiaſticks, to examine whether the Judgments he had given, or ſhould give, ought to be executed by them againſt their Subjects; and in caſe they ſhould not give Judgment, that they ought to force them, by ſeizing on their Eſtates, to revoke their Judgment.

In the two hundred and ſixty firſt, he wrote to the Biſhop of Wincheſter, to puniſh the Simoniacks in his Dioceſs, notwithſtanding their Appeal to the Holy See.

In the two hundred and ſixty ſecond, to the Biſhop and Chapter of Veſca, he order'd them to turn a certain Clergyman out of his Living, for having forged Letters, by which he got his Living again, after having left it.

In the two hundred and ſixty third, he gave leave to the Biſhop of Amiens, to put what Canons he pleaſed into a Houſe which he had given the Abbot of St. Martin of the Twins to place his Canons in, if the Abbot ſhould neglect to do it, after being put in Mind by the Biſhop.

In the two hundred and ſixty fourth, to the Archbiſhop of Rouen, he determined, That a Perſon who hath the Patronage of a Living, cannot preſent himſelf to it, however fit he be for the Place.

In the two following to the ſame Perſon, he declar'd, That all the Dioceſans, as well Eccleſiaſticks as Laicks, are obliged to ſubmit to the Sentences of Interdiction, publiſhed by the Biſhop.

In the two hundred and ſixty ſeventh, written to the Biſhop, Archdeacon, and Sacriſt of Magnelone, about a Difference between this Biſhop and the Provoſt of his Church, concerning a Perſon nominated to the Archdeaconſhip of this Dioceſs, after having related the Reaſons urged on one Side and the other, he declared, That following the Footſteps of his Predeceſſors, who were of Opinion, that the Judgments of the See of Rome might be altered when it was found there had been a Trick, he revoked the Donation of this Archdeaconſhip made by the Biſhop, although approved of by his Predeceſſor Pope Alexander; and ordered the Chapter to proceed to a new Election. By the five hundred forty and firſt, he ſettled the Archdeaconſhip upon him who had had it conferred upon him by the Archbiſhop of Arles.

In the two hundred and ſixty eighth, he recommended the Protection of the Monaſtery of St. Victor of Marſeilles, to the Archbiſhops of Arles, Aix, and Embrun, and to the Biſhops their Suffragans.

In the two hundred and ſixty ninth, he order'd the Biſhop of Varadin, to come to Rome, to receive the Abſolution of the Excommunication which he had incurred.

In the two hundred and ſeventieth, he gave leave to the King of Hungary, to keep back an Earl, and ſome other Holy Soldiers, to the Number of twenty, whom he had need of to keep himſelf firm in his Kingdom.

In the two hundred and ſeventy firſt, he exhorted an Hungarian Lord to be loyal to his King.

In the two hundred and ſeventy ſecond, he confirmed a Judgment given by his Legate Cardinal Gregory, in favour of the Biſhop of Tranſilvania.

By the two hundred and ſeventy third, he entruſted the Archbiſhop of Arles with the Reform of the Monaſtery of Lerins, with Leave to put in ſome of the Monks of Citeaux, if he did not find any of that Order there.

In the two hundred and ſeventy fourth, he gave leave to this Archbiſhop, to put ſome of the Monks of Citeaux into an Iſland, in the ſtead of the Canons which were there, but had not Subſiſtence.

In the two hundred and ſeventy fifth, he order'd the Archbiſhop and Archdeacon of Narbonne, to nullify all that the Abbot of St. Saviour of Lodeve had done againſt the Monks of his Monaſtery, and other Perſons, to the Prejudice of their Appeal put into the Holy See.

In the two hundred and ſeventy ſixth, he gave leave to the Canons of St. John of Beſanſon, to ſettle another Houſe with the Conſent of their Biſhop.

By the two hundred and ſeventy ſeventh, he diſcharged the Archbiſhop of Beſanſon, from the Accuſation which his Canons had laid againſt him, they not caring to proſecute it; and he forbids them for the future to propoſe any thing againſt their Archbiſhop. But in the mean while, he ſets the Biſhop of Chalon, and the Abbot de la Forte, to inform him of the Conduct of this Archbiſhop.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

By the two hundred and ſeventy eighth, he commiſſioned the Abbots of Citeaux and de Toul, to proceed againſt the Treaſurer of Beſanſon, to oblige him to Reſidence, becauſe, ſays he, it is agreeable to Reaſon and Equity, that he who has the Honour and the Profit, ſhould bear the Charge of it, and that the Eccleſiaſtical Dignities were eſtabliſhed for this End, that thoſe who enjoyed them ſhould do Service to the LORD.

In the two hundred and ſeventy ninth, he complained to the Archbiſhop of Milan, of his ſaying that he had been deceived in the Meaning of Letters from the Holy See, for Want of Attention to what they contained, and order'd him for the future to take care of the Execution of thoſe that ſhould be directed to him or his Dioceſans, except they had been gotten by ſuppreſſing and hiding the Truth, or by telling a Falſhood.

The two hundred and eightieth, is a Confirmation granted to the Chapter of Colocza, to receive the Tithes of certain Villages.

In the two hundred and eighty firſt, he committed the Reform of the Monaſtery of St. Stephen, to the Archbiſhop of Colocza.

In the two hundred and eighty ſecond, to the Patriarch of Grado, he ordered the Execution of a Treaty made between the Church of St. Saviour, and that of St. Bartholomew of Venice.

In the two hundred and eighty third, he determined, That the Church of St. Proculus ſhould be totally ſubject to the Monaſtery of St. Zeno of Verona, and that the Archprieſt and Clergy of that Church ſhould be ſubject to the Abbot of St. Zeno, and ſhould receive the Holy Chriſm from his Hands: He leaves them to take Care of all that belonged to the Church of St. Proculus, the Chappels and Offices which depended on it, and the Privilege of chooſing the Archprieſt.

The two hundred and eighty fourth is a Confirmation of the Inſtitution of the Order of Regular Canons of the Abby of St. Oſytus of Chur, and of its Privileges.

In the two hundred and eighty fifth, he order'd that the Biſhop of Segovia ſhould have the Privilege of putting Canons into his Church, with the Conſent of the greateſt and wiſeſt Part of the Chapter, notwithſtanding the Oppoſition of ſome of the Canons.

The two hundred and eighty ſixth is a Confirmation of the Privileges of the Abby of St. Germain of Auxerre.

In the two hundred and eighty ſeventh, to the Biſhop of Pampeluna, he empower'd this Biſhop to celebrate, or cauſe to be celebrated during the General Interdict, the Divine Office in a low Voice, the Doors of the Church being ſhut, without ringing the Bells, upon Condition that he ſhould not aſſiſt any of thoſe that were interdicted or excommunicated.

By the two hundred and eighty eighth, he gave Commiſſion to the Biſhop of Riez, to give the Dean of St. Quintin, who was in Lombardy, Notice to appear before the Archbiſhop of Rheims, and the Biſhop of Arras, whom he had appointed Judges in the Difference between the Dean and his Chapter, jointly with any other whom the Dean ſhould pleaſe to name. The following Letter is the Commiſſion to the Archbiſhop of Rheims, and the Biſhop of Arras.

In the two hundred and ninetieth, he confirm'd the Election of Sifroy, to the Provoſtſhip of Augsburg.

By the two hundred and ninety firſt, he commiſſioned the Archbiſhop of Bourges, to inform againſt the Abbot of Eſterpe.

In the two hundred and ninety ſecond, he gave leave to the Biſhop of Aquino, to retake the Poſſeſſions which had been alienated from his Church. In the two hundred and ninety fourth, he gave the Biſhop of Malta the ſame Permiſſion.

In the two hundred and ninety third, he confirm'd the Order which the Biſhop of Vatz in Hungary had made to oblige the Curates of his Dioceſs to come to his Synod.

By the two hundred ninety fifth, he commiſſioned the Archbiſhop of Trani, and the Archdeacon of Brindeſi, to be Judges in a Difference between two private Men, about the Chanterſhip of Otranto.

In the two hundred and ninety ſixth, he confirmed the Power of the Canons of St. Peter of Rome, over divers other Churches.

In the two hundred ninety ſeventh, he determined, That a Man who had been diſtracted, and was thereupon turned out of his Canonſhip, and made a Monk of, and being now come again to his Senſes, had proteſted againſt this Dealing, ſhould be put off a while, and re-eſtabliſhed in his Living.

In the two hundred and ninety eighth, to the Archdeacon of Milan, he declar'd, that Hereticks cannot be choſen into Livings, nor have any Right to chooſe.

In the two hundred and ninety ninth, he entruſted the Biſhop of Nevers, and the Abbots of Vezelai, and Maizereis, with the Judgment of a Difference between two Competitors to the Abby of Flavigny.

By the three hundredth, to the Archbiſhop of Magdeburg, and his Suffragans, he order'd them to make uſe of Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures, to make the Eſtates of the Holy Soldiers, which had been taken from them while they were in the Holy Land, be reſtored them.

In the three hundred and firſt, he commits to the Biſhop of Lizieux, and the Abbot of Valricher, the Cauſe of the Abbot of Conches.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

In the three hundred and ſecond, he exhorted the Biſhop of Syracuſe, and the Biſhops of Apulia, Calabria, and Tuſcany, to preach the Cruſade, and earneſtly exhort all their Dioceſans to go to the Holy Land.

In the three hundred and third, he adviſed the Religious of St. Saviour of Teleſa, to proceed to the Election of a new Abbot, their Abby being vacant by the voluntary Reſignation of the former.

The three hundred and fourth is a Mandate directed to the Biſhop of Limoges, and the Canons, for a Prebend of their Chapter.

In the three hundred and fifth, he declar'd that the Judgment of the greateſt and wiſeſt Part of the Chapter ought to carry it.

In the three hundred and ſeventh, he decided this Caſe, that a Man who wanted his left Hand, and had been choſen Abbot, without its being known that he was ſo maimed, ought to be turned out, as not being capable upon that account, to receive Holy Orders.

In the three hundred and eighth, he wrote to the Archbiſhop of Lyons, about the Abſolution of his Archdeacon.

The three hundred and ninth is written to the Biſhop of Padua, againſt thoſe Canons that lived more like Laicks than Eccleſiaſticks, who wore the Habit of Laicks, and made no Scruple of living publickly with Concubines; he order'd the Biſhop to take care of them, to oblige them to live honeſtly, to wear a Clergyman's Habit, and to part with their Concubines, to eat in common, and never to lie out of their Cloiſter.

In the three hundred and tenth, he wrote to the Archbiſhop of Montreal in Sicily, that the Holy See always kept the Abſolution of thoſe that abuſed the Clergy in its own Hands, to the end, that if the Honour and Reſpect which was due to Eccleſiaſticks, could not keep Men within their Duty, at leaſt the Pains and Trouble of a Voyage to Rome, might reſtrain them: That the Church of Rome did ſometimes abate of this Rigour, by an eſpecial Diſpenſation, where 'twas reaſonable: That in this it did not ſeek its own private Advantage, but aimed at the Preſervation of the Privileges of the Clergy, and the Salvation of thoſe that failed in that Point. Upon theſe Grounds he gave Power to this Archbiſhop, for three Years, to abſolve ſuch of his Dioceſs who were guilty of this Crime, as either for Age or Infirmity, were not in a Condition to come to Rome.

In the three hundred and eleventh, he confirmed the Orders which had been made by the Biſhop of Rennes, commiſſioned by the Legate of the Holy See, in regard to the Duty of the Abbot of Bourgueil, and his Manner of living, namely, that he ſhould be obliged to eat in the Hall, and ſleep in the Dorter, except he had ſome allowable Excuſe to aſſiſt in the Office, to take the Advice of his Chapter, in Affairs relating to the Houſe, &c. He appointed in the next Letter the Biſhop and Dean of Rennes, to ſee theſe Orders executed.

In the three hundred and thirteenth, he determined, That a Laick who had the Tithes in his Hands, might give them to a Monaſtery, with the Conſent of the Biſhop of the Dioceſs, without having need of taking that of his Clergy too.

In the three hundred and fourteenth, he confirmed a Judgment given between two Prieſts of Treviſi, by a Cardinal whom he had commiſſioned for that purpoſe, in a Suit which they had about a Benefice.

In the three hundred and fifteenth, he order'd the Archbiſhop of Milan, to give a Canon's Place in his Church to Bonacauſus, a Clergyman of that City, who had been ſent on the Part of this Archbiſhop to the Pope, and had gained a Mandate about a Benefice in that Church.

In the three hundred and ſixteenth, he confirmed the Privileges of the Archbiſhop of Montreal. The 317*th* is an Account of a long Caſe between the Abbot of Pegaw, and the Biſhop of Mersburg. This Abbot being accuſed of many Crimes, was called on by the Biſhop to anſwer, who paſſed Sentence upon him for Non-appearance, which was confirmed by the Legate of the Holy See. To avoid the Conſequences of this Sentence, and without telling a Word of what had paſſed, he obtained a Grant from Pope Celeſtine, which exempted him from the Juriſdiction of this Biſhop. Returning into Germany, and there ſhewing his Grant, he was cited to the Court of the Emperor, who had an Account of it. From thence he appealed to the Holy See, and got Commiſſaries named. In the mean time, the Archbiſhop of Magdeburg having interdicted, and having a mind to turn him out of his Abby too, he was forced to put himſelf into the Hands of this Archbiſhop, who gave an arbitrary Sentence. The Abbot not being pleaſed with this, made his Complaints to Rome, and had Commiſſaries appointed, not very favourable to the Biſhop of Mersburg: They made their Information: It is carried to Rome, the Affair is ſent back again from thence to other Commiſſaries, and at laſt made up by an Agreement between the Parties. Notwithſtanding this, the Abbot still applied himself to Rome, and got two of the prime Judges appointed Commissaries; the one of them gave his Information, and the Bishop appeal'd from it. The Pope gave them Commissaries, and upon their Report of the Case, doth by this Letter confirm the decisive Sentence of the Archbishop of Magdeburg, except what regarded the Validity of the Privilege. He revokes whatsoever is contrary to that, and order'd that the Monastery should remain free, and exempt from the Jurisdiction of the Bishop, till such Time as the Matter could be fully tried. By the following Letter, he appoints Commissaries upon the Place to inform of the Matter.

the

Pope Innocent's Letters.

In the three hundred and nineteenth, he appointed the Archbishop, the Dean, and the Chanter of Lyons to judge in a Case between two Archdeacons of Challon. He there determin'd, That a Man who hath been excommunicated for two Causes, and hath been absolved upon the score only of one, remains still excommunicated.

In the three hundred and twentieth, he warned the Clergy of Island to take some Order about the Disorders which reigned in their Country. The three hundred and twenty first, is written upon the same Subject, and in the same Terms, to the People of that Island.

In the three hundred and twenty second, to the Archbishop of Otranto, he determin'd, That the Son of a Woman who passed for the Concubine, and was afterwards declared the lawful Wife of a Man, is Legitimate.

In the three hundred and twenty third, he declar'd, That a Deacon who had been deprived of his Benefice by an Abbot, who was afterwards out of revenge, without his knowledge, killed by his Kindred, and who out of Sorrow for this Accident turn'd Monk, and forbore executing the Functions of his Order for two Years, might not only execute them, but be also raised to the Priesthood, if there was no other Bar, but his suspected Innocence.

In the three hundred and twenty fourth, he wrote to the Bishop of Arras and the Dean of Cambray, to put the King of France in mind of paying the Duke of Lorrain his Wife's Portion.

By the three hundred and twenty fifth, he determin'd, That a Girl who was not eight Years old, could neither contract Marriage, nor make any Promise that could oblige.

In the three hundred and twenty sixth, he gave leave to the Bishop of Faience to remove to the Bishoprick of Pavia, to which he had been elected. There are very pretty Things in this Letter about the spiritual Marriage of a Bishop with the Church his Spouse. What is said in Scripture about the Indissolubility of the carnal Marriage, he presumes may be as well applied to the Spiritual. He adds, that it should seem then as if it were not in the Power of the Pope to break the spiritual Marriage of a Bishop with his Church: And yet Custom, which is the Interpreter of the Laws, and the Holy Canons always gave full Power to the Holy See, to which alone belong the placing, the deposing and translating of Bishops: wherein he saith the Popes do not exercise human Authority, but that of Jesus Christ, whose Vicars they are. He takes notice that the Church of Pavia ought not to have elected, but have asked for him. Lastly, he declared, That he consents to this Translation only for the good which will thence accrue to the Church of Pavia.

In the three hundred and twenty seventh, he confirm'd the Decree made by the Bishop and Chapter of Orense in Spain, to admit of but six and twenty Canons.

In the three hundred and twenty eighth, he recommended the Bishop of St. George to the Monks of Monte-Cassino that they might entertain him, and supply him with whatsoever was necessary during his abode in their Monastery.

In the three hundred and twenty ninth, he commissioned the Archbishop of Cagliari, and two other Bishops of Sardinia, to sit Judges in a Difference which was between the Bishop of Uristagni and his Chapter.

In the three hundred and thirtieth, he gave in charge to the Bishop of Limoges to reprehend and correct the Clergy of his Diocess.

The three hundred and thirty first, is an Approbation of the Order of Premontre, and a Confirmation of its Customs and Privileges.

In the three hundred and thirty second, he entrusted the Dean of Lisbon and two Priors to examine the Privilege granted by the Bishop of Conimbra to his Chapter.

In the three hundred and thirty third, he determined, That a deaf and dumb Person may marry.

In the three hundred thirty fifth, he suspended the Bishop of Hildesheim, for removing to the Bishoprick of Wirtzburg without the leave of the Holy See, and deprived the Canons of Wirtzburg of the Power of Election for this Time, for having chosen him.

The three hundred and thirty sixth, is a circular Letter, exhorting all Princes and People to take up Arms for the Defence of the Holy Land against the Saracens.

The three hundred and thirty seventh, is a Mandate granted to a Clerk for a Canon's Place in the Church of Trevisi.

In the three hundred and thirty eighth, written to the Archbishop of Sens, he declar'd, That in case the Dean and Chapter of Sens had with an Oath fixed the Number of Canons before the Pope granted his Mandate to the Clerk, then the Mandate should be null: And that all the Clerk had to do, was to make them come to Rome, to mantain their pretended Right; because, says he, as we expect to be punctually obeyed when we command any Thing, so we would not command any Thing which is unjust.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

The three hundred and thirty ninth is a Mandate granted to a Clergyman, for an Archdeaconship vacant in the Church of Ivrea.

In the three hundred and fortieth, he exempts the Chapter of St. Domnin's-Burg, from the Jurisdiction of the Bishop of Parma.

In the three hundred and forty first, to the Bishop of Otranto, he advised him to put the Religious of Citeaux, into a Chappel, and into a Monastery, in Compliance with the Desire of the Earl the Founder of the Chappel, and Patron of the Monastery.

The three hundred and forty second is a Confirmation of a Privilege of Exemption granted to the Church of St. Nicholas du Mont, near Narni.

In the three hundred and forty third, he exhorted the Bishop of Lydda, to continue his Care and Preaching in Sicily, to promote the raising of an Army for the Recovery of the Holy Land. By the next, he gave him Power to absolve those excommunicated, whose Cases belonged only to the Holy See to remit, on Condition that they would go in Person to the Holy Land.

In the three hundred and forty fifth, addressed to the Prelates of France, he recommended to them the Legate whom he had sent into that Kingdom, to make Peace between the King of France and the King of England, and to gain them to assist against the Saracens.

In the three hundred and forty sixth, he gave Power to his Legate, to summon such English Prelates as he thought necessary to procure the Peace. By the following, he order'd him to proceed by Way of Interdict against the Kingdom of France, if King Philip did not take his Wife again within a Month. He exhorted this Prince to make and conclude the Peace with the King of England, in the three hundred and forty eighth Letter.

In the three hundred and forty ninth, written to the Archpriest and Canons of Milan, he discover'd a Forgery which had been practised in a Bull, by taking the Seal from another Letter, and fastning it to this forged one. He order'd the Punishment of him who was suspected of it, and at the same Time takes Notice of the different Ways that the Letters of the Pope might be forged. The first, is to fasten a false Bull to them. The second, is to tear the Bull from another Letter, and fasten it to a false one, by putting another Thread through it. The third, is to cut one of the Sides of the Thread of the Bull, and to fasten it to another Letter, by joyning the Thread together again with Flax of the same Colour. The fourth, is to slit the Load in two, and take out of it one Side of the Thread, and afterwards to join it together again. The fifth, is to raze out the Writing of the Letters, and change them as we please. The sixth, is to carry false Letters, and to mingle them rightly among the others, and so get the Bull fastned to them. This last Sort is the hardest to be found out, and cannot be discovered but by the Stile, or by the Hand, or by the Parchment; whereas the others might be found out only by Inspection.

In the three hundred and fiftieth, he declared, That all Believers might appeal to the Holy See, and that no one ought to act against them in Prejudice to that Appeal, or to proceed against those who would appeal. And in the following he says, That no one can proceed against a Person who is gone to Rome; for this is as it were an Appeal in facto, and ought to be more considered than a verbal one.

By the three hundred and fifty second, he ordered the Bishop of Ariano, to inform about the Election of an Abbot of Benevento, that he might know whether it was fit to confirm it or no.

In the three hundred and fifty third, he exhorted the Emperor of Constantinople, to aid the Holy Land against the Saracens, and to labour for the Union of the Greek and Latin Churches. In the next Letter, he gave the same Exhortation to the Patriarch of Constantinople.

In the three hundred and fifty fifth, he exhorted the Kings of France and England to Peace, and to furnish out Troops for the Assistance of the Holy Land.

In the three hundred fifty sixth, he order'd the Magistrates, the People, and the great Lords of the Dutchy of Spoletto, to obey his Legate, as being Subjects of the Holy See, to which the Duke of Spoletto had given up his Estates. This same Letter is also written to many other Cities of Italy.

In the three hundred and fifty seventh, he wrote to the King of England, about a Chappel which the Archbishop of Canterbury had newly built, and had a mind to put Canons into, and make his ordinary Residence at: The Pope is earnestly against this Establishment, and exhorted the King of England not to promote it.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

In the three hundred and fifty eighth, he recommended himſelf to the Prayers of the Abbots met together in the Chapter General of Citeaux, and deſires them to excuſe one of their Brothers whom he employ'd to preach in Sicily.

In the three hundred and fifty ninth, he gave order to the Biſhop of Oſtia to conſecrate ſome Altars which they ſaid were not yet conſecrated, in obedience to a Viſion which a Prieſt ſaid he had ſeen, in which St. Peter appeared to him many Times, and order'd him to give the Pope notice that there were a great many Altars which wanted Conſecration, and that he was careful to have them conſecrated. Innocent ſays at the end of the Letter, That tho', according to the Caution of the Apoſtle, we muſt not believe every Spirit, yet becauſe in a Matter of this Nature it is not likely that an Angel of Satan would transform himſelf into an Angel of Light, it is better to believe piouſly than to doubt raſhly; and becauſe the Thing is otherwiſe good in it ſelf, tho' it had not been revealed, he was reſolved to have it put in execution.

In the three hundred and ſixtieth, he juſtifieth his Conduct to thoſe of Milan, in having excommunicated their Advocate Paſſeguerte, for failing in that reſpect which was owing to the Judgment of the Holy See.

In the three hundred and ſixty firſt, he granted the Inhabitants of Monteſiaſcone an Abatement of half the Tribute they were to pay to the Pope, upon Condition they ſhould maintain ſome Troops of Horſe and Foot for his Service.

In the three hundred and ſixty ſecond, he decided the Caſe of a Man that was accuſed of Adultery by his Wife, thus; That Judgment could not be given upon an Information that was made lite non conteſtatâ, and all that could be done was to excommunicate the Man for refuſing to make his Appearance.

In the three hundred and ſixty third, he ordered the Goods of a Church, which he had been alienated from it, to be reſtored.

The three hundred and ſixty fourth, is about a Difference between two Iriſh Men for the Biſhoprick of Roſſe: He ſends back his Judgment of it to the Archbiſhops of Armagh and Caſſil, and to the Biſhop of Laom. The three hundred and ſixty ſixth, is a Confirmation of the Election of the Biſhop of Laghlin in the ſame Country. And by the three hundred and ſixty ſeventh, he order'd a Lord of this Country not to oppoſe this Biſhop in taking Poſſeſſion of his Biſhoprick, but to take care about the Reſtitution of thoſe Goods which had been taken from his Church.

The three hundred and ſixty fifth, is a Confirmation of the ancient Cuſtoms of the Society of St. Agathus.

In the three hundred and ſixty eighth, he decided a conſiderable Affair about the Chancellorſhip of the Church of Milan. The Pope had given it to a Subdeacon, a Canon of that Church, and had directed the Mandate for it to the Archbiſhop of Milan: He received it, and ſent word back again, that he had not given it him, becauſe he had need of the Revenues of it. The next Day he changed his Note, and declared that he had given it above ten Months before to Henry of Lampune; ſtraight the Archbiſhop was cited to Rome before the Pope, and having ſent his Attorney with Witneſſes to Rome, he proved that the Chancellor being dead in the Month of January, he had by the Application of his Friends ſecretly in his Chamber given his Place to this Henry, they having promiſed to let him enjoy the Revenues; that he had inveſted him in it by giving him the Book, and had received his Oath of Fidelity, but had not indeed given him the Patent till after having received the Pope's Mandate. This Donation was incumber'd with many Difficulties. 1. The Bargain made with his Kindred was unwarrantable. 2. It was made privately. 3. The Inveſtiture was performed with an extraordinary Ceremony. 4. 'Twas maintained, that the Chancellorſhip being a ſpiritual Benefice, could not be conferred after ſuch a Manner. 5. That he on whom it was conferred, not being an ordinary Canon, was not capable of it. The Pope appointed Commiſſioners upon the Place, to inform about theſe Matters, and interdict the Chancellor the right of enjoying it. Upon this he applied himſelf to the Pope, deſiring to have all Things reſtored him; alledging, that the Patent had been given him before the Receipt of the Mandate. As to the Form of the Conceſſion, he defended that by maintaining that there was no Simony in keeping of the Income, as well becauſe the Office of Chancellor is not ſpiritual, nor has any ſpiritual Functions annexed to it, as becauſe there was no buying or ſelling in the Caſe, and that the Fruits which he had given up had been ſeparated from the Office, and kept back by the Archbiſhop before this Donation; that as for the reſt, he was capable of the Office, being a Canon of the Church of Milan, and having a Voice in the Chapter, and a Place in the Choir. That laſtly, he had had no Hand in the Bargain which they ſaid his Friends had made, but had been purely and ſimply put into the Chancellorſhip. Upon theſe Allegations, the Pope judges that the Archbiſhop was in the Fault. 1. In giving different Anſwers. 2. In not providing a Perſon more capable. 3. Becauſe he ought not to beſtow a Benefice upon any one, and keep the Income of it to himſelf, nor to make a Bargain to keep them before he will confer the Benefice. For his Puniſhment, he deprived him of the Privilege of conferring the firſt Prebend vacant in his Church. And as for the Chancellorſhip, how great a mind ſoever he had, if he could do it with Juſtice, to give it to the Subdeacon whom he had provided, yet he declared he had not found Henry in a Fault ſufficient to deſerve being turned out, becauſe he had made no Bargain: And beſides, it was not proved that the Chancellor had any ſpiritual Functions incumbent on him; the propoſing the Ordainers and the examining of them, and the putting the Abbots and Abbeſſes in Poſſeſſion, which was cuſtomary for the Chancellors to do, belonging properly to the Archdeacons, and being done by the Chancellors only by the Commiſſion of the Biſhops. He took off alſo the Interdict which his Commiſſaries had pronounced againſt him, and judged that the Trouble of taking two Journeys to Rome was Puniſhment ſufficient.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

The three hundred and ſixty ninth, is an Order directed to the Magiſtrates and Inhabitants of Caſtellane, to take the Oath of Fidelity to thoſe whom he had ſent on his part to receive it.

By the three hundred and ſeventieth, he order'd the Archbiſhop of Canterbury to retake thoſe Goods which had been alienated from his Church, and confirmed the Re-union which he had already of ſome that had been alienated.

In the three hundred and ſeventy firſt, he confirmed the Declaration of Richard King of England, importing, that the Subvention and Help which had been granted him by the Clergy of England ſhould be no Hurt or Prejudice to the Eccleſiaſtical Immunity.

By the three hundred and ſeventy ſecond, he approved of the Donation which the Archbiſhop of London had made to the Church of Roſchild, on Condition that he ſhould enjoy it during his Life.

In the three hundred and ſeventy third, he confirmed the Foundation of ſix Prebends which the Biſhop of Arbuſen had had made in his Church.

The three hundred and ſeventy fourth, is written to the Archbiſhop of Upſal about the Pallium which he ſent him.

In the three hundred and ſeventy fifth, he takes thoſe of Peruſe into his Protection, and confirms their Privileges.

In the three hundred and ſeventy ſixth, he forbids the Clergymen whom he had made his Commiſſaries to do juſtice in Lombardy, to exact any Mony of the Parties, or to make any Bargain with them for their Salaries.

By the three hundred and ſeventy ſeventh, he commiſſioned the Biſhop of Narni to prepare things for a hearing between the Abbot of Ferentillo and ſome Noblemen.

In the three hundred and ſeventy eighth, he took into the Poſſeſſion of the Holy See two Italian Marqueſſes.

The three hundred and ſeventy ninth, is a Permiſſion to one who had made a Vow to be a Hoſpitaller to enter into the Order of St. Brunet.

In the three hundred and eightieth, he declared a Marriage null between a Man and a Woman, becauſe the Woman had before they were married been Godmother to a natural Son which the Man had by another Woman.

In the three hundred and eighty firſt, he anſwer'd divers Queſtions which had been propoſed to him by the Archbiſhop of Drontheim: As, Whether an Altar, upon which one that was excommunicated had celebrated the Office, ought to be conſecrated anew? If one might communicate with an excommunicated Perſon, who had given ſurety to obey the Church in that which it commanded him, tho' he had not yet received Abſolution? Who thoſe were that might communicate with excommunicated Perſons? What Puniſhment thoſe deſerve who do it? What is to be thought of thoſe Prieſts that ſtir up others to the Combate, and are Commanders of Navys, tho' they do not fight themſelves? The Pope reſolves theſe Queſtions in the following manner: That the Altar need not be conſecrated anew, on which an excommunicated Perſon hath celebrated: That we muſt not communicate with an excommunicated Perſon before he hath received Abſolution: That they who are excepted from not communicating with them, are compriſed in the Chapter quoniam multos: That other Perſons who communicate with ſuch of them as are accuſed, ought to be excommunicated themſelves; and thoſe who communicate with a Perſon who hath been excommunicated with his Accomplices, incur the Puniſhment of Excommunication: That thoſe Prieſts mentioned in the Queſtion ought to be depoſed. He adds ſome Anſwers to other Queſtions which were not demanded; namely, That ſuch as reſign their Benefices to Laicks, and take them again out of their Hands, ought to be turned out of them: That the Table of an Altar which is conſecrated, loſes its Holineſs if it be removed out of the Place, or have a conſiderable Crack in it: That one may mix Oil that is not conſecrated with conſecrated: That ſuch of the Clergy as are excommunicated, or were ordained by ſuch, ought to be depoſed.

The three hundred and eighty ſecond, is written to the Archbiſhop of Drontheim, and to the Prelates of Norway, againſt a Prince of that Country who tyrannized over the Church. By the following, he deſired the Kings of Denmark and Sweden to take the Part of the Churches of Norway againſt this Tyrant; and in the three hundred and eighty fourth, enjoined the Archbiſhop of Drontheim to ſuſpend the Biſhop of Berghes for favouring him.

In

Pope Innocent's Letters.

In the three hundred and eighty fifth, he determined, That a Clergyman who was guilty of Homicide, ought not to be put in again, tho' he was not punished with Death.

In the three hundred and eighty sixth, he warned the Abbot of Monte Cassino who was Cardinal, to labour for the Reformation of his own Manners, and those of his Monastery.

In the three hundred and eighty seventh, he order'd the Magistrates of Venice to revoke an Order which they had given to a Lawyer never to appear more at the Court of Venice.

The three hundred and eighty eighth, is written for the Preservation of the Liberty and Possessions of the Churches of Hungary: And because some of them who had taken an Oath to defend the Church, thought to dispense with their keeping of it by appealing to the Holy See, the Pope by the following Letter declar'd, That this Appeal doth not hinder, but that they may be proceeded against as perjur'd Persons.

The three hundred and ninetieth, is a Letter of the Archbishop of Regio's, wherein he puts this Question to the Pope; Whether, when he was commissioned with the Archbishops of Capua and Palermo, to judge in the Suit between the Archbishops of Montreal and Kossano about the Tithes, and finding himself sick could not come, the other two could proceed in the Judgment of the Suit without him, and condemn the Archbishop in Prejudice to the Appeal which he had put into the Holy See after he was cited? The three hundred and ninety first, is the Archbishop of Montreal's Letter upon the same Subject. And by the next the Pope determined, That if the Case was really so as it had been made appear to him, the Commissioners had done ill to proceed to a Judgment in the Case, and that all that in Consequence of that Judgment had been taken from the Archbishop of Montreal, ought to be restored him.

By the three hundred and ninety third, he granted to the City of Parma the Right of the Recovery of those Sums which had been stollen from the Cardinal Legate passing through their Country, which they had reimbursed to him.

In the three hundred and ninety fourth, he order'd that the Religious of the Monastery of Feltri of the Order of Citeaux, should not bury where their Oblates did; and that they should give the fourth Part of whatsoever they left in their Will to the Churches wherein their Oblates lived: But this without prejudicing the Church's Rights, or the Customs of the Order of Citeaux.

By the three hundred and ninety fifth, he empower'd his Legate Rainier to reform all the Churches which he should pass through.

In the three hundred and ninety sixth, he order'd the Archbishop of Aix to accept the Resignation of the Bishop of Frejus, and put another Bishop in his Place.

In the three hundred and ninety seventh, he exhorted the Earl of Thoulouze to undertake the War for the Assistance of the Holy Land.

By the three hundred and ninety eighth, he gave leave to the Cardinal Foulques to take Monks and Regular Canons, and employ them in preaching the Gospel in the East.

In the three hundred and ninety ninth, addressed to all the Prelates of France, he order'd Usurers to be punished, notwithstanding all Appeals whatsoever.

By the four hundredth Letter, he gave leave to the Archbishop of Siponto to turn a Collegiate Church into a Monastery of Regular Canons.

In the four hundred and first, after having compared the Spiritual and Pontifical Authority to the Light of the Sun, and the Temporal and Kingly Authority to that of the Moon, he exhorted the Governors of Tuscany to be faithful to the Holy See, and assured them of his Protection.

In the four hundred and second, he gives the Archbishop of Naples and the Chapter of Aversa till Easter to appear at Rome to have their Trial in a Difference between them.

In the four hundred and third, he ordered the Archpriest and the Clergy of the Church of Borgo San Donino to obey the Bishop of Parma.

The four hundred and fourth, is written to his Commissioners about the Letters of the Pope being charged with an Error. He says, That he who made the Charge to put off the Judgment of the Suit, and then could not make it good, ought to lose his Cause.

The four hundred and fifth, is about the Validity of a Mandate for a Canonship in the Church of St. Juvenea of Pavia, granted by the Pope to a Person whom they pretended to be unworthy of it: The Pope commissions Judges to see him put in Possession if they could not prove his unworthiness.

In the four hundred and sixth, to the Archbishops of Embrun, Arles, and Aix, and their Suffragans, he recommended it to them to make some Order in their Provincial Councils for the Provision of some Relief for the Holy Land.

In the two next, he invited an Earl to go to that War.

The four hundred and ninth is written to a Legate who had raised Money for the Holy Land, about the use which he should make of it.

The four hundred and tenth is an Act whereby he acknowledges Frederick King of Sicily, upon Condition that he should pay Homage and Fealty to the Holy See, and likewise some Acknowledgment.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

In the two following, he regulates the Manner of choosing Bishops in the Kingdom of Sicily, according to what follows. The Episcopal See being vacant, the Chapter shall give Notice to the King of the Bishop's Death: It shall then proceed to an Election, and shall ask the Consent of the Prince for the Person it shall choose, who shall not be enthronized till the King have agreed to it, nor shall perform his Office till the Pope have confirmed him.

In the four hundred and thirteenth, he order'd all the Prelates of the Kingdom of Sicily, to obey his Legate.

The four hundred and fourteenth is written against a Clergyman who had Pluralities in the Church of Naples.

In the four hundred and fifteenth, he declared, That an Oath taken by a Person, always to observe judiciary Forms, doth not take place in such Causes where one is not obliged to observe those Forms.

In the four hundred and sixteenth, he forbad the Alienation of the Possessions of the Monastries of Naples, without Leave of the Archbishop; and he declared in the next Letter, that the Archbishop of Naples might sell the Goods of the Church to pay its Debts.

In the four hundred and eighteenth, he order'd the Execution of a Mandate for a Canonship of Poictiers, which the Chapter of this Church would not obey.

In the four hundred and nineteenth, he confirmed the Primacy of the Archbishop of Lunden, over the Churches of the Kingdom of Sweden.

In the four hundred and twentieth, he order'd the Prelates of Jutland, to re-establish the Canonical Doctrine in their Country, and to put down that Custom which had been introduced, of paying but one Piece of Money, for Satisfaction for all Sorts of Crimes.

The four hundred and twenty first is a Mandate directed to the Archbishop of Lunden.

In the four hundred and twenty second, he confirmed that Custom of giving Estates to the Church, which was used in Denmark, by laying a little Piece of the Land upon the Altar, in the Presence of Witnesses.

In the four hundred and twenty third, he confirmed the Collation of the Provostship of Strand in Denmark; and in the following, order'd the Goods which had been taken from that Church, to be restored it.

By the four hundred and twenty fifth, he confirmed the Privileges and Donations of the Abby of Sora.

The four hundred and twenty sixth is an Act by which he takes the City of Todi into the Protection of the Holy See, and confirmed its Privileges.

In the four hundred and twenty seventh, he gave Judgment in a Difference between the Abby of Calana, and that of Mont-sacre, and declared, that the Abby and Religious of the former of these, should lay down all Pretensions to any Right they might have on that of Mont-sacre, on Condition that that should give them up a Church, and pay them every Year an Acknowledgment of Olives.

The three next are written about the Election of a Bishop of Cambray. It was said, that he whom the Chapter had chose, was crooked, and had married a Widow, by whom he had had a Son that succeeded him immediately in the Provostship of St. Peter of Douay. The Pope wrote upon this to the Chapter, and commissions the Bishops of Paris and Arras, to examine if Matters were really so, and in case they were, he declares this Election null.

By the four hundred and thirty first, he nominated the Archbishop of Senlis, to defend the Privileges of the Abby of Compeigne.

In the five following Letters, he condemns the Undertaking of the Archbishop of Canterbury, who would build a Church, notwithstanding all the Pope's Commands to the contrary; and order'd, that he should restore to the Monastery of Canterbury, all that he had taken from it to endow this new Church with.

By the four hundred and thirty seventh, he takes Almeric King of Jerusalem, into the Protection of the Holy See.

By the four hundred and thirty eighth, he exhorted many Princes of the East, to assist the King of Cyprus, against the Saracens.

In the four hundred and thirty ninth, he order'd, that those who had been dispensed with, for performing their Vow of going to Jerusalem in Person, should pay a Sum of Money towards the defraying of the Charges of the Holy War.

In the four hundred and fortieth, he forbids the augmenting the Number of Canons in the Church of Acre in the East.

By the four hundred forty first, he puts the King and Kingdom of Portugal, under the Protection of the Holy See.

In the two next, he forbad the Chapter of Auranches, and the Archbishop of Rouen, to proceed against the Theologal of the Church of Auranches, to the Prejudice of the Appeal which he had put in to the Holy See.

In the four hundred and forty fourth, he order'd the Archbishop of Upsal, to hinder Bastards being admitted into Orders, or any Ecclesiastical Preferment.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

By the four hundred and forty fifth, he impowered the Biſhop of Perigueux, to make what Orders he ſhould think fit for his Dioceſs and Abby, and to ſee them put in Execution, notwithſtanding any Appeal. He order'd him by the next, to make the vagabond Monks return to their Monaſteries.

In the four hundred and forty ſeventh, he wrote to the Archbiſhop of Tours, that only the Pope could give leave to Biſhops to remove to another Biſhoprick.

In the four hundred and forty eighth, he puts the King of Portugal in Mind of paying the Tribute which he owed the Holy See; and by the next, he order'd Rainier to oblige him to do it.

In the four hundred and fiftieth, he order'd the Archbiſhop of Lunden, to ſee that Men of no ſcandalous and ill Lives were imployed in the Church, for receiving the Alms towards the War in the Holy Land.

In the four hundred and fifty firſt, he confirmed the Judgment given by the Biſhop of Lodi, in favour of the Canons of Novara, againſt a private Perſon who pretended to a Prebend of that Church, belonging to him by a Mandate.

By the four hundred and fifty ſecond, he accepted of the Reſignation of the Biſhop of Urgel; and by the next, he order'd the Chapter of that Church to proceed to the Election of a new Biſhop; whom in the four hundred and fifty fourth he recommended to the Archbiſhop of Tarragon.

He determined, in the four hundred and fifty fifth, That a Religious Vow made before the Year of Probation is valid: But that the Abbots ought not to accept of it, and that that of a married Perſon ought not to be accepted, except ſhe likewiſe to whom he is married, makes a Vow of perpetual Continence.

The four hundred and fifty ſixth is written in favour of a Prieſt, who had had ſome forged Letters of the Pope's given him, and had made uſe of them, thinking them true. The Pope excuſed him upon account of his Ignorance, and order'd the Archbiſhop of Siponto to put him to no Trouble upon this Matter.

In the four hundred and fifty ſeventh, he gave leave to the Abbot and Religious of St. Edmond, to get their Church dedicated, and likewiſe to let ſuch Croſſes and Images as were not eaſily taken out remain in their Places.

In the four hundred and fifty eighth, he confirmed the Sentence given in favour of the Church of St. Paul, about the Privilege of having a Font, and Baptiſing, which was diſputed by the Church of St. Mary of Cervaro, near Monte-Caſſino.

In the four hundred and fifty ninth, he forbids the Prior and Religious of Durham, to do any thing but with the Conſent of the Biſhop of that City, which was to them inſtead of an Abby.

In the next, he upholds the Biſhop of Durham, in the Right of conferring ſuch Benefices as the Patrons had left vacant.

By the four hundred and ſixty firſt, he order'd the Biſhop of Ceſena, to take off the Cenſure pronounced againſt thoſe of that City, on Condition they would take an Oath to ſubmit to the Pope, in thoſe Things for which they were interdicted.

In the four hundred and ſixty ſecond, he declared, That Laicks could not, under any Pretence whatſoever, claim the Tithes of Churches.

In the four hundred and ſixty third, he confirmed the Orders for the Chapter of Arles; and in the four hundred and ſixty ſeventh, he forbids the receiving of any Canon into this Church, who doth not make Profeſſion of the Order of St. Auguſtin.

By the four hundred and ſixty fourth, he gave leave to the Archbiſhop of Arles to proceed againſt the Abbot of St. Gervais of Foſ, who would not obey him, and made no Scruple to admit thoſe to divine Service whom he had interdicted, and to give them Eccleſiaſtical Burial.

By the four hundred and ſixty fifth, he confirmed the Privileges of the Abby of Compeigne.

In the four hundred ſixty and ſixth, he ordered the Suffragans of the Archbiſhop of Arles, to be obedient to him.

In the four hundred and ſixty eighth, he gave leave to the Biſhop of Cbonad in Hungary, to give Abſolution in Caſes reſerved for the Holy See, to the ſick and old of his Dioceſs, upon Condition, that as ſoon as they were well they ſhould come to Rome.

In the four hundred and ſixty ninth, he order'd this ſame Biſhop to make ſuch Deacons and Subdeacons as were married, to quit their Wives.

In the four hundred and ſeventieth, he confirmed the Inſtitution of the Prebends created in the Church of Durham.

In the four hundred ſeventy firſt, he forbids Plurality of Livings.

In the four hundred and ſeventy ſecond, and third, he forbids the Provoſt of the Church of Arles, to borrow any thing without the Conſent of his Chapter, and would have him give them an Account of what he received, and what he had laid out.

In the four hundred and ſeventy fourth, he order'd, that the Archbiſhop of Arles ſhould have the Diſpoſal of the Perſonates of his Church; and in the four hundred and ſeventy ſixth, he adviſes him to make a Reform in the Monaſtery of St. Gervais.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

In the four hundred and ſeventy ſeventh, he order'd the Execution of his Mandates for the Canonſhips in the Church of Xainte.

In the three next, he order'd Peter of Corbeil, famous for his Learning and Knowledge, to be put in Poſſeſſion of a Prebendary, and the Archdeaconry of York, which had been given him by that Archbiſhop.

The four hundred and eighty firſt contains a Rule of the Order of Trinitarians, which he confirms.

By the four hundred and eighty ſecond, he gave to the Provoſt of Alba the Privilege of preſenting to the Cuſtody of his Church.

In the four hundred and eighty third, he exhorted the Biſhop of Poictiers, to reform the Churches of his Dioceſs, and gave him Power for that Purpoſe.

By the four hundred and eighty fourth, he confirmed the Privileges of the Abby of St. Peter of Corbie; and by the four hundred and eighty eighth and ninth Letters, defended them againſt the Biſhop of Tournay.

The four hundred and eighty fifth is written to the King of England, in favour of the Monks of Canterbury, who had not been well dealt with by their Archbiſhop. He ſends it in the next, to the Archbiſhop of Rouen, and the Biſhop of Ely, that they might give it the King.

The four hundred and eighty ſeventh is a Letter of Exhortation to Almeric King of Jeruſalem.

The four hundred and ninetieth, ninety firſt, ſecond and third, are written about the Tranſlation of Maurice Biſhop of Nantes, to the Biſhoprick of Poictiers, which the Pope permits and approves of.

In the four hundred and ninety fourth, he accepted of the Reſignation of the Biſhop of Carcaſſonne.

By the four hundred and ninety fifth, and ſixth, he named Commiſſaries to defend the Privileges of the Church of St. Martin of Tours.

In the four hundred and ninety ſeventh, he order'd the Biſhop of Coventry in England, to diſpoſe of the Benefices of thoſe Clergymen that were convicted of Simony, and to oblige thoſe who were ſuſpected of it, to clear themſelves canonically.

The four hundred and ninety eighth is an Act by which Guy Earl of Auvergne gave a Caſtle to the Pope, and deſired his Protection againſt the Biſhop of Clermont his Brother, who ravaged his Lands with a Troop of Biſcayans.

In the four hundred and ninety ninth, he commended the Deſign which the Archbiſhop of Colocza had of reforming a Monaſtery, and gives him leave to put regular Canons into it.

In the five hundredth, he wrote to the King of Hungary, to oblige the Sclavonians to pay their Tithes to the Archbiſhop of Colocza.

In the five hundred and firſt, he determined, That no one ought to make a Promiſe of a Benefice before it is vacant.

In the five hundred and ſecond, he gave Permiſſion to the Biſhop of Tripoli, to ſtay in that Dioceſs, although he was choſen to the Biſhoprick of Apamea, and had been tranſlated to that of Tripoli, without the Conſent of the Holy See. In the next, he takes off the Suſpenſion which had been pronounced againſt the Patriarch of Antioch, for having made this Removal without the Authority of the Holy See.

By the five hundred and fourth, he ſuſpended the Biſhop of Langres, accuſed by his Chapter of having waſted the Eſtate of his Church, for not making his Appearance at Rome, and commits the Examination of this Affair to the Biſhop of Paris.

In the five hundred and fifth, he cited the Patriarch of Jeruſalem to Rome, about ſome Differences between him and the Patriarch of Antioch.

By the five hundred and ſixth, and five hundred and ſeventh, he confirmed the Sale of ſome Poſſeſſions, and a Tranſlation made by the Templers of Montpellier.

The five hundred and eighth is written to the Biſhop of Syracuſe, and an Abbot of that Country, about the Cruſade to oblige the Prelates and Eccleſiaſticks of Sicily, to furniſh out Sums towards the War in the Holy Land, in Proportion to their Revenues, and to imploy thoſe of the vacant Churches.

In the five hundred and ninth, he exhorted this Biſhop to labour for the Converſion of Apoſtates, and to uſe Cenſures againſt them.

In the five hundred and tenth, he order'd the Archbiſhop of Colocza, and two other Commiſſioners, to declare null the Elections of the Archbiſhops of Otranto and Spalatro, if they found that they had Correſpondence with the Brother of the King of Hungary, who was excommunicated by the Pope.

In the five hundred and eleventh, he adviſed the Prelates of Hungary, not to excommunicate the Counſellors and Friends of the King, except it were upon ſome publick and neceſſary Account.

In the five hundred and twelfth, he forbids making any Impoſition upon the Eccleſiaſticks of the Patriarchate of Antioch.

In

Pope Innocent's Letters.

In the five hundred and thirteenth, he declar'd, That such Witnesses as were to depose concerning the Exceptions of a Process, could not be understood, nor obliged to give Witness about the Principal, unless one of the Parties desired it.

In the five hundred and fourteenth he determined, That the Marriage of Infidels, with such as were of Kin to them, could not be dissolved when they turned Christians.

In the five hundred and fifteenth, he declared, That Patriarchs and Prelates had no Right of taking the first Trials of Clergymen who desired to be tried by their Bishop.

In the five hundred and sixteenth, he judges, That Persons who have quitted the Cities where they were settled to go and live in others, ought not to pay their Tithes to the Bishops of the Cities which they left, but to him of the Place which they removed to.

In the five hundred and seventeenth he declared, That a Man who hath taken the Habit of a Regular Canon, and has made the ordinary Vows, although he has for a long Time fail'd of performing them, ought to take his Habit again, and remain in the Monastery he belonged to.

The five hundred and eighteenth is Advice mixed with Reprimand to the Patriarch of Jerusalem, about his Carriage to the King and Queen of Jerusalem.

In the five hundred and nineteenth, he granted the Abbot of Corbie the Privilege of wearing a Ring.

In the five hundred and twentieth, he order'd the Bishop of Coventry, to recover the Goods which had been alienated by his Predecessors.

In the five hundred and twenty first he declared, That when the Patrons of a Church are in Dispute about the Right of Presentation, if their Suit be not ended within four Months after the Vacancy, the Bishop is to put in a Vicar.

In the five hundred and twenty second, he gave Order to the Archbishop of Arles to inform himself of the State of the Church of Riez and its Bishop, that he might know whether it was fitting to grant him the Petition which he made to quit his Bishoprick.

In the five hundred and twenty third, he declared null the Election of a Man to the Abby of Luxeu, because he never had been Monk.

In the five hundred and twenty fourth he determin'd, That such as when they were sick made a Vow to their Priests of becoming Monks, although they receive not the Habit, yet are under the Obligation of the Vow.

By the four following, he appoints and recommends his Legates for the Kingdom of Dalmatia.

The five hundred and twenty ninth is a Mandate for a Prebend of Tripoli.

The five hundred and thirtieth is the Act of the Canonization of St. Homobonus, addressed to the Clergy and People of Cremona.

In the five hundred and thirty first he declared, That an Abbot who had some forged Letters of the Pope's, without knowing of it, is not in Fault.

In the five hundred and second, having proved that a Man who is chosen to a Bishoprick, cannot be removed to another without Permission from the Holy See, because the Election is as it were a Chain which fastens a Man to a Church; yet, through the Abundance of his Power, he gives leave to a Man who had been consecrated Bishop of Angers, after having been chosen Bishop of Auranches, to possess the Bishoprick of Angers, and takes off the Suspension of the Archbishops of Tours and Rouen, who had consecrated him.

In the five hundred and thirty third, he decided a Difference between two Competitors to the Priory of St. Savinus in the Diocess of Spoletto, in favour of him who had been chosen by the Chapter, against him whom the Bishop had nominated.

The five hundred and thirty fourth is a Confirmation of the Possessions and Privileges of the Church of Conimbra.

In the five hundred and thirty fifth he determin'd, That the Pallium ought not to be given but to Archbishops whose Predecessors have enjoyed it.

By the five hundred and thirty sixth to the Archpriest and Canons of the Church of St. Peter, he gives them the Revenues of the Seals of Letters granted to such as came to Rome for Devotion.

By the five hundred and thirty seventh, and thirty eighth, he cites the Bishop of Lesina upon the Coasts of Dalmatia, who was called to the Archbishoprick of Zara, and some Canons of that Church, to give an Account of this Translation.

In the five hundred and thirty ninth, he forbids the Venetians to assist or furnish the Saracens with Arms.

In the five hundred and fortieth, he named Commissioners to judge the Persons who had cut off and taken away a Letter from the Register of his Predecessor Alexander, and afterwards had maimed it. The five hundred and forty ninth is upon the same Subject.

By the five hundred forty second, he exhorts the Prior and Religious of Grandmont, to receive the Submission of a Prior and Religious of a Monastery of their Order, which was in the Diocess of Avignon.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

In the five hundred and forty third he declared, That a Person who had taken twenty Days for the Execution of a Sentence, or his Appeal from it, could not be admitted to appeal when this Term was past.

The five hundred and forty fourth is a Commission about a Difference between the Abbot of Felduar, and the Bishop of five Churches, concerning a Privilege.

In the five hundred and forty fifth, he confirmed the Judgment given by the Cardinal of St. Laurence, by which Alberic Prior of St. Laurence of Spello was turned out.

The five hundred and forty sixth is a Commission to the Archbishop of Strigonia, and to two other Bishops, to examine into the Difference between the Bishop and Chapter of Varadin.

The five hundred forty and seventh, and five hundred forty and eighth, and five hundred fifty and seventh, are Confirmations of the Privileges of Monasteries.

By the five hundred and fiftieth, he appointed Commissioners for the Difference between the Bishop of Coventry and his Monks, about some Exemptions which had been granted them by the Predecessor of this Bishop.

By the five hundred and fifty second, he granted the Protection of the Holy See to the Monastery of Cerfroy, of the Order of the Trinity.

In the five hundred fifty third, he commissions the Bishop of Paris, and Peter of Corbeil, to judge the Bishop of Langres, who was accused by his Canons.

In the five hundred and fifty fourth, he explained the Difference between a general Interdict, and a particular Interdict; because when the Interdict is general, the Churches which have Privileges of the Holy See, cannot celebrate Divine Office, except with the Door shut, in a low Voice, and without ringing the Bells: Whereas in a particular Interdict, they pretended to a Privilege of doing it publickly. To avoid any Abuses that might arise from this Dispute, the Pope decides, that an Interdict is to be accounted general; not only when a whole Kingdom or Province, but likewise when a City or Castle are interdicted.

In the five hundred and fifty fifth, he recommended it to the Archbishop and Chapter of Pisa, to perswade the Pisans to enter into the general Peace of Tuscany.

In the five hundred and fifty sixth, he frees the King of Navarre from an Oath, which the Kings of Castile and Arragon, entring with an Army into his Kingdom, had forced him to take, of giving his Sister in Marriage to the latter of them, who was her Kinsman in the third Degree.

In the five hundred and fifty seventh, he order'd the Bishops of the Kingdom of Sicily, to stir themselves against Marcovaldus.

In the five hundred and fifty eighth, he exhorted those of Capua, to a vigorous Defence against the Troops of Marcovaldus. The three next are upon the same Subject.

In the five hundred and sixty second, third, fourth, and fifth, he declared the Cardinal of St. Mary his Legate and Vicar in Sicily, Guardian to Frederick the young King, and exhorts this Prince and his Subjects to follow his Counsels.

By the five hundred and sixty sixth, he entrusted the Archbishop of Palermo, with the Reform of a Monastery in his Country.

In the five hundred and sixty seventh, he exhorted the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, to make use of the Methods of Justice, and not of Force, to right themselves in their Differences with the Templers.

In the five hundred and sixty eighth, and sixty ninth, he declared, That all Churches are bound to pay the Right of Procuration to the Legate of the Holy See, and none were exempt from it.

By the five hundred and seventieth, he gave his Approbation of the Rules of the Teutonick Order.

In the five hundred and seventy first, he order'd that the Bishop of Passaw should judge the Causes of those that were under his Jurisdiction.

In the five hundred and seventy second, he gave him Power to absolve the Incendiaries.

The five hundred and seventy third is the Judgment in a Suit about a Living.

In the five hundred and seventy fourth, he ordered the Bishop of Hildesheim to remain in the Church where he was, and forbids him to remove to that of Wirtzburg, of which he had taken the Title without the Permission of the Holy See.

In the five hundred and seventy fifth, he order'd an Earl to keep a strict Guard upon the Prisoners which he had taken of the Party of Marcovaldus.

The import of the five hundred and seventy sixth, to the Bishop of Conimbra, is, That those Clergymen who call themselves Canons of the Holy Cross, or other privileged Orders, and live in their own Diocess in a secular Habit, and receive the Sacraments of the Church, are obliged to pay all Episcopal Duties. This Letter, which is the last of the first Book, bears date the 17*th* of February in the Year one thouſand one hundred and ninety nine.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

Monſieur Baluze has added ſome Letters or Pieces made in the firſt Year of the Pontificate of this Pope.

The two firſt are Oaths taken to Pope Innocent, the one by the Prefect of Rome, the other by Count Ildebrandin.

The third is the Decree for the Confirmation of a Treaty made between the Church of Penna in Abruzzo, and the Monaſtry of St. Vit of Fourche.

The fourth, fifth, and ſixth, are written in favour of the Monks of Canterbury, concerning the difference which they had with their Archbiſhop about a Chappel he was building. And the laſt, which is the five hundred and eighty third in all, is a Letter of theſe Monks to the Pope upon the ſame ſubject.

In the firſt Letter of the ſecond Book, to the Magiſtrates and People of Viterbo, the Pope in general forbids all ſorts of Perſons, in any manner whatſoever, to receive, protect or favour the Hereticks, and declares all that ſhall ſo do infamous, unworthy of any Voice active or paſſive in Elections, to have forfeited their right of Succeſſion, and to be incapable of all ſorts of Offices. He adds, that thoſe who converſe with Hereticks, whom they know to be ſo, incur the danger of an Anathema, and order'd that the Eſtates of Hereticks ſhould be confiſcated.

In the ſecond he determined, That the Marriage of a Girl which had been nullified, becauſe it was contracted before ſhe was marriageable, might be renewed with the conſent of the Woman after ſhe was come to that age.

The third is a Confirmation of the Privileges of th eAbby of Lundors in Scotland.

In the fourth he exhorted the Magiſtrates and People of the City of Jeſi, to do all that was poſſible to bring the reſt of the Marquiſate of Ancona under the obedience of the Pope.

In the fifth, to the Biſhop of St. Andrew's in Scotland, he order'd him to provide for vacant Churches if the Patrons did not provide within the time ſet by the Council of Lateran. In the twentieth Letter he gave the Archbiſhop of Magdeburg the ſame Orders.

In the next, written to the ſame Biſhop, he gave him leave to build a new Church in his Dioceſs, becauſe thoſe which were already there were not proportioned to the number of his Dioceſans which encreaſe every day.

By the ſeventh he declar'd null the alienation of the Fiefs and Eſtates of a Church which was made in the Form required by the Eccleſiaſtical Conſtitutions.

In the eighth he order'd the Patriarch of Aquileia to re-eſtabliſh the Church of Ceneda.

By the ninth he recommended to the King of Marock the Religious of the Order of the Trinity, who employed one part of their Revenues to buy Pagan Slaves and exchange them for Chriſtians.

In the tenth he approved of the Order made by the Chapter of Xainte, by which the number of their Canons was fixed at forty.

In the eleventh he declares that a Regular Canon could not leave his Monaſtry to remove into another, without the leave of his Abbot.

In the twelfth he order'd that no one trouble the Camaldolites for Eſtates which they have had the poſſeſſion of for forty Years.

In the thirteenth, to the Biſhop of Modena, he order'd that the Appeal of ſuch as are notorious Criminals, ſhould not ſtop the Judgment of the Ordinary: becauſe the Remedy of an Appeal was never intended to ſerve the Criminal, but to be a relief to ſuch as were unjuſtly dealt with.

In the fourteenth he declar'd that excommunicated Incendiaries ought not to be allowed Chriſtian burial; that this is a Caſe reſerved to the Holy See, and that if they could not come to Rome no one elſe could give them Abſolution, but upon condition of obeying whatſoever the Holy See ſhould order them.

By the fifteenth and ſixteenth he confirms a Judgment which had been given by the Cardinal whom he had appointed Commiſſary in the Caſe between the Biſhop of Spoletto, and the Religious of the Monaſtry of St. Peter.

The ſeventeenth is a Confirmation of the Privileges and Poſſeſſions of the Biſhoprick of Achoury in Ireland.

In the eighteenth he commanded the Dean and Chapter of Auranches to proceed to a new Election of a Biſhop, becauſe he whom they had choſen was not fit, and the Election beſides had not been made in form.

The nineteenth is a Confirmation of the Privileges of the Abby of St. Mary of Caſanova.

He ſettled by the twenty firſt the Deanery of Magdeburg upon him who had been choſen to it.

In the following he confirmed the Judgment given by the Archbiſhop of Lion in favour of the Abbot and Religious of St. Rufus of Valence.

The twenty third, twenty fourth, and twenty fifth, are written about the Treaty concluded between the King of England and the King of France, for which he expreſſed a great deal of joy.

In the twenty ſixth he diſcharged the Chapter of Treviſi of anſwering the demand of a Clergyman, who by virtue of a Mandate required their Provoſtſhip.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

The twenty ſeventh, to the Magiſtrates and People of Treviſi, is full of Reprimands and Threatnings, for the Exorbitances and Crimes which they were guilty of.

In the twenty eighth, which is written to the King of Arragon about a difficulty which he had propoſed to him, concerning an Oath which he had made of keeping the Mony of the King his Father, which was counterfeited and diminiſhed very much in its weight, he determin'd, That he ought not to ſuffer it to be any longer current in his Realm.

In the twenty ninth he order'd the Puniſhment of thoſe who had counterfeited his Letters.

By the thirtieth he appointed Commiſſioners to examine into the Election of an Abbot.

The two following are Confirmations of the Privileges of two Monaſtrys.

The thirty third is a Letter of the Biſhop and Magiſtrate of Caſtellane, who ſend their Tribute to the Pope, and deſire his aſſiſtance.

In the thirty fourth he commanded the Archbiſhop of Embrun to declare the Biſhop of Vence excommunicate, for not obſerving the Suſpenſion which the Holy See had pronounced againſt him.

In the thirty fifth he order'd the Biſhops of Avignon and Tregnier to be no hindrance to the Provoſt and Canons of Ciſteron's oppoſing the forming of a Church of Templers.

In the thirty ſixth he declar'd, That the Order made by the Chapter of Bazas, which fixed their number of Canons at 18, ought not to be obſerv'd if the Revenues of that Church were ſufficient to maintain a greater number; and he commiſſioned the Archbiſhop of Bourdeaux, the Biſhop of Agen, and the Abbot of Sauve Majeur to inform of it, and to ſettle what number of Canons they thought fit therein.

The thirty ſeventh is the Judgment of a Proceſs in favour of the Abbot of St. Donatus of Scozula. And the next is the Judgment of another Suit in favour of the Abbot of Conches.

By the thirty ninth he exhorteth the Abbot of Lucedia to procure a Peace between thoſe of Placentia and thoſe of Parma.

The fortieth, forty firſt, and forty ſecond are written about the Abſolution which he would have given to the Earl of Flanders.

The forty third and forty fourth are written againſt the Earl of Nevers, who did not obſerve the Agreement which he had made with the Earl of Flanders.

In the forty fifth he took Baldwin Earl of Flanders, and the Princeſs Mary his Wife, into the Protection of the Holy See.

By the forty ſixth, and forty ſeventh, he confirm'd the Judgment which had been given in a Caſe about a Prebend of Cambray.

In the forty eighth he determin'd, That when one doth not know the motives and circumſtances of a Sentence, one ought to preſume that it was juſt.

By the forty ninth he declar'd, That a Prieſt cannot celebrate Divine Office, nor adminiſter the Sacrament of Penance, nor any other Sacrament in any Dioceſs, without the conſent and permiſſion of the Biſhop; and that a Metropolitan cannot place a Prieſt in the Dioceſs of any of his Suffragans, without his agreeing to it.

In the fiftieth he determin'd, That though the Marriage between Infidels is diſſolved when one of them is converted to the Faith, yet it is not the ſame thing in reſpect of thoſe who were married while they were Believers, when one of them becomes an Heretick or Pagan.

The fifty firſt is a Mandate for a Canonſhip of Orleans in favour of Peter of Corbeil.

The fifty ſecond is a Commiſſion to the Biſhop of Nocera for the re-eſtabliſhment of a Monaſtry.

The fifty third is a Confirmation of the Privileges of the Order of Calatrava.

In the fifty fourth he wrote to the Chapter of Hildeſheim, to nominate a new Biſhop in the ſtead of him whom they had, who would remove to the Biſhoprick of Wirtzburg. In the next he committed the Execution of this Decree to the Abbots of Corbie in Saxony, and of Herveden, and to the Dean of Paderborn.

In the fifty ſixth, he determin'd, That a Canon Regular of St. Auſtin, who had been made a Knight of the Hoſpital, had done well to return to his former Order; becauſe it is not allowable to remove out of a ſtricter Order into a more remiſs, as it is out of a remiſſer into a more ſtrict.

By the fifty ſeventh, he exhorted the King of England to put the Archbiſhop of York into Poſſeſſion of the Eſtate of his Church again, of which he had ſtript him, and to give him liberty of performing his Functions. The two next are upon the ſame Subject. And in the ſixtieth, he declar'd, That all the Preſentations made in the Archbiſhoprick of York without the Conſent of that Archbiſhop, upon pretence of his being ſuſpended, were nothing.

In

Pope Innocent's Letters.

In the ſixty firſt, he determin'd, That an excommunicate Perſon, who before he died acknowledged his fault, and deſigned to come to Rome to receive Abſolution, ought not to be denied Eccleſiaſtical Burial. Here are the Words of his Anſwer, which may very well deſerve your Attention. "The "Judgment of God is always founded on infallible Truth, "but the Judgment of the Church often depends upon an O- "pinion which may be under a miſtake: Upon this Account, "it ſometimes happens that he who is bound before God, is "free before the Church; and he that is free before God, is "bound by an Eccleſiaſtical Sentence. The Chain wherewith "the Sinner is bound before God, is looſened by a Remiſſion "of the Fault; but that wherewith he is bound in reſpect of "the Church, is looſened only by Abſolution from the Sen- "tence; which appears in the Reſurrection of Lazarus, "whom our Saviour firſt raiſes again, and then orders the A- "poſtles to untie him. So the Man, concerning whom he is "talking, having promiſed with an Oath to obey the Church, "and to give ſigns of his Penitence, might very well be abſol- "ved in the ſight of God, but not having received Abſolution, "he is not ſo in reſpect of the Church. Yet the Church could "and ought to remedy this, that is, becauſe his Penitence "was true by the plain marks he gave thereof where he lived, "it could give him Abſolution after his Death: And it ſigni- "fies nothing that the Power of binding and unbinding was "not granted the Church in reſpect of dead Men; ſo that it "cannot bind or unbind any but what are upon the Earth, or, "as it is written, cannot communicate with a Man that is "dead, with whom it did not communicate while he was li- "ving; for although it did not communicate with him, yet "it ought to have done it, it not being any ill will to Religion, "but an inevitable accident which hindred him from recei- "ving Abſolution. And we read in the Canons that the "Church has bound and unbound the dead." He order'd that this Abſolution be deſired of the Holy See, the caſe for which he was to be abſolved being a reſerved caſe; that it ſhould be performed with a penitential Pſalm, the Lord's Prayer, and the Prayer uſed upon that Occaſion; and that his Heirs ſhould make Satisfaction.

In the ſixty ſecond, he order'd a certain Lord to reſerve a Treaſure which had been found in a Country of the Patrimony of St. Peter, as belonging of right to the Holy See.

The ſixty third, is written to the Archbiſhop of Sens, about the Dean of Nevers, whom having been ſuſpected of Hereſy, he ſends back to him with Orders to re-eſtabliſh him, after he had canonically cleared himſelf by the Witneſs of fourteen Prieſts.

In the ſixty fourth, he confirm'd the Order made by the Biſhop of Uſma in Spain, to have none but Regular Canons in his Church, and ſome other Conſtitutions which he had made.

In the ſixty fifth, he wrote to the ſame Biſhop, and determin'd that ſuch of the Clergy as were notoriouſly ſcandalous in keeping Concubines, ought to be condemned without Witneſſes or Accuſers; but that ſuch whoſe Crime was not ſo notorious but that it might admit of ſome doubt, could not be condemned but upon the Depoſition of Witneſſes, and not on ſimple Declarations.

In the ſixty ſixth, he declar'd, That thoſe Laicks who keep any of the Clergy in Priſon incur Excommunication, as well as thoſe who give them ill Treatment. That ſuch as communicate with an excommunicated Perſon, ſo as to partake of or contribute to his Crimes, cannot be abſolved of the Excommunication which they incur, but by him who excommunicated the Perſon with whom they communicated, or by his Superior. But if they communicated with them only ſo as to eat or drink with them, or in any other manner without partaking of their Crimes, then they might be abſolved by their own Biſhop, or any other Prieſt. Laſtly, he determin'd, that not only thoſe who have contracted two valid Marriages, are to be accounted Bigamous, but thoſe too who have contracted ſuch as were nulled, becauſe that although they were not in facto Bigamous for want of the Sacrament, yet the Intention of being ſo was the ſame, and there was a Fault committed beſides: therefore he would not have a Diſpenſation granted ſuch, as there is to other Bigamous Perſons.

By the ſixty ſeventh, he confirm'd the Dean of Toledo in his Benefice, and puts him under the Protection of the Holy See.

By the next, he confirm'd an Archdeacon in his Benefices.

The ſixty ninth, is a Confirmation of the Eſtabliſhment of the Abbey of St. Michael of the Order of Premontre.

In the ſeventieth, he order'd that the Saracens ſhould be forced to pay their Tithes to the Pariſhes.

By the ſeventy firſt, he nam'd the Biſhops of Lincoln and Ely, with the Abbot of St. Edmund, to make up the Difference between the Archbiſhop and Monks of Canterbury, or to give Judgment in it.

The 72*d*, 73*d*, 74*th*, 76*th*, 79*th*, 89*th*, 90*th*, 92*d*, 93*d*, 98*th*, 100*th*, 101*ſt*, 102*d*, 108*th*, 109*th*, 110*th*, 116*th*, 153*d* and 274*th*, are Confirmations of the Privileges of Monaſteries.

By the ſeventy fifth, he order'd the Archbiſhop of Compoſtella to make uſe of Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures to oblige the King of Leon to put away the Daughter of the King of Caſtile, whom he had married, tho' ſhe was his Kin within the prohibited Degrees.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

In the ſeventy ſeventh, to the Archbiſhop of Tours, he determin'd, That a Metropolitan who is infirm, or has any other reaſonable Excuſe, may commiſſion another Biſhop to conſecrate his Suffragans.

In the ſeventy eighth, he order'd the Biſhop of Caſtellane to take off the Interdict pronounced againſt the Inhabitants of his City; becauſe they had ſubmitted and rejected him whom they had choſen Governor of the City without the Conſent of the Pope.

In the eightieth, he committed to the Abbot of Fertè, and to the Archdeacons of Challons, the ordering of the Difference between the Church of Autun, and the Monaſtery of Baume.

The eighty firſt, contains the Judgment in a Proceſs between the Monaſtery of St. Owen, and that de la Croix-Saint-Leufroy. His Judgment is in favour of the latter, according to the firſt Sentence in this caſe, tho' there had been a ſecond which ſeemed to contradict it.

The ſeven following Letters, contain a famous Sentence in favour of the Archbiſhop of Tours againſt the Church of Dol, by which the Biſhop of Dol is declared his Suffragan, and hath the Pallium taken from him.

In the ninety firſt, after having firſt given his Judgment that the Monks of Citeaux had acted raſhly in changing the Abbeys of Regular Canons which were in the Iſlands of Hieres, into Monaſteries of their Order, he nominated the Biſhops of Marſeilles and Agde to make a Reform among theſe Regular Canons.

The ninety fourth, is a Judgment in favour of the Templers againſt the Canons of St. Quentin.

In the ninety fifth, he nullifies the Election of a Biſhop by the Chapter of Cambray; becauſe he whom they had choſen was nothing but a ſimple Shaveling before the Election, and had had a Child too by a Widow.

In the ninety ſixth and ſeventh, he warned the King of Hungary to reſtore to the Biſhop and Church of Vatz the Poſſeſſions he had taken from them.

In the ninety ninth, he order'd his Legate in France, and the Biſhop of Paris, to look into the Caſe of the Abbot of St. Martin of Nevers, who was accuſed of Hereſy; and if he was found guilty, to depoſe him and ſhut him up in a Monaſtery.

In the hundred and third, he decides, That the Biſhops of Lisbon and Evora are Suffragans to the Metropolis of Compoſtella, and not to that of Brague. In the hundred and fifth, he declar'd, That this Sentence doth doth not at all prejudice the Rights of the Archbiſhop of Brague. And in the hundred and ſixth, he adviſed the Archbiſhops of Brague and Compoſtella to make up the Difference which they had about carrying the Croſs, by agreeing that each of them ſhould have it carried before him in the others Dioceſs.

In the hundred and fourth, he wrote to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, to hinder the Biſhops exacting any thing for the Holy Chriſm.

In the hundred and ſeventh, he declar'd null the Order of the Canons of Tours, who had given four Prebends to ſixteen Perſons, on Condition that four ſhould be content with the Revenues of one Prebend among them, till the others were dead, ſo that he who died laſt ſhould have the whole, as contrary to the Laws of the Church, which forbids Diviſions or Succeſſions in Benefices.

The hundred and eleventh, and twelfth, contain a Confirmation of the Election of the Biſhop of Placentia.

The hundred and thirteenth, contains a Judgment of a Suit between the Provoſt of the Church of Aquileia, and the Chapter of that Church, about the diſpoſing of the Revenues, wherein he gives the Cauſe to the Chapter.

In the hundred and fourteenth, to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, he empower'd him to force all ſorts of Perſons to pay Tithes, notwithſtanding any Appeal.

In the hundred and fifteenth, to the ſame Perſon, he order'd that the Churches ſhould be freed from the new Penſions.

The hundred and ſeventeenth, is a Commiſſion to the Biſhop of Tuy, the Dean of Zamora, and the Prior of St. Iſidorus of Leon, to enquire into a Suit between the Biſhop of Orenſe, and the Abbot of Cella-Nova.

By the hundred and eighteenth, he upholds the Abbey and Religious of Waltham, in the Right of preſenting to the Livings of their Church. In the hundred and nineteenth, he eaſes them from thoſe exceſſive Rights of Procuration which the Archdeacons exacted of them, and nullifies the Cenſures which had been made uſe of to force them. By the two next Letters, and by the 126*th*, 127*th*, 128*th*, 129*th*, 131*ſt*, and 132*d*, he confirm'd the Rights and Privileges of this Monaſtery.

The hundred and twenty ſecond, is a Letter by which he makes Rainier his Legate in the Provinces of Embrun, Aix, Arles and Narbonne, with Power to reform and ſettle the Monaſteries and Churches, to give Judgment in ſuch Cauſes as preſented themſelves, to abſolve ſuch as were excommunicated for having ſtruck any of the Clergy, provided Homicide did not follow upon it; to encounter the Hereticks, and to have them puniſhed. By the next, he order'd the Archbiſhops of theſe Provinces to acknowledge this Legate, and to obey and aſſiſt him.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

By the hundred and twenty fourth, he order'd the Chapter of Aquileia to put the Provoſt of that Church in again.

In the hundred and twenty fifth, he upholds a Canon in the Poſſeſſion of the Revenues of his Prebend.

The 133*d*, 134*th*, 135*th*, 136*th*, 137*th*, 138*th*, 139*th*, 140*th*, 143*d*, 144*th*, 145*th*, 146*th*, 147*th*, 149*th*, 150*th*, 151*ſt* and 152*d*, are written about the Accomodation of the Differences of the Church of Compoſtella and the Church of Bragne, which was ended by an Agreement of the Parties, and about ſome other Things relating to the Church of Compoſtella.

The hundred and forty firſt, and ſecond, are written againſt ſome Laicks of Metz, who had private Aſſemblies in contempt of the Church, and there had the Evangeliſts, the Epiſtles of St. Paul, the Morals of Job read in French, and took upon them to dogmatize and preach againſt the Prieſts.

The hundred and fifty fourth and fifth, contain a Confirmation of the Reform which the Religious of Pontigny had made in the Abby of Caduin.

In the hundred and fifty ſixth, he gave Permiſſion to the Biſhop of Aſſiſi to accept of the offer which the Archprieſt of Peruſe had made, of clearing himſelf cononically of the Crime of Simony, by the Witneſs of three Perſons.

The hundred and fifty ſeventh, is a Confirmation of the Archdeaconſhip of Cirenza to him who had been preſented to it.

By the hundred and fifty eighth, he takes the Church of St. Michael of Travalde, under the Protection of the Holy See.

By the hundred and fifty ninth, he advertiſed the Suffragans of the Archbiſhoprick of Cirenza, that he would in a ſhort Time ſend them a Metropolitan fit to fill the Place, and exhorted them to receive him with all due Reſpect; and by the next, he gives the ſame Notice to the Chapter of Anglone.

In the hundred and ſixty firſt, he gives leave to the Archbiſhop of Cirenza to take his Friends into his Church.

The three following Letters, are concerning the Immunities of the Canons of Matera and Cirenza.

In the hundred and ſixty fifth, he order'd that the Inhabitants of Matera ſhould pay the whole Tithe to the Churches to which it belongs.

In the hundred and ſixty ſixth, he wrote to the Biſhop of Aſſiſi, that he ſhould not think that thoſe whom he had excommunicated were abſolved, or that they had any Letters of Abſolution from the Holy See, or from its Commiſſaries.

The hundred and ſixty ſeventh and eighth, are written about the Abſolution of Marcovaldus, and contain the Oath that was taken by him on that Occaſion. He did not obſerve it, and the Pope was forced to write againſt him again in the hundred and ſeventy ninth Letter.

In the hundred and ſixty ninth, he determin'd, That the Biſhops may abſolve thoſe who are excommunicated for ſtriking any of the Clergy, when they cannot commodiouſly come to Rome, unleſs they had been exceſſively rude indeed.

The two following have nothing remarkable in them.

In the hundred and ſeventy ſecond, he determin'd, That he who was choſen Abbot of Gemblours, and whoſe Election they had got confirmed by giving Money without his knowledge, was not at all in the Fault.

The hundred and ſeventy third, is the Judgment in a Suit about a Canon's Place of the Iſland in Flanders.

In the hundred and ſeventy fourth, he order'd the Clergy and People of Regio to receive their Archbiſhop.

By the hundred and ſeventy fifth, he forbids the Aretins to rebuild a Caſtle.

The hundred and ſeventy ſixth, is a Letter written to the Pope by the King of Dioclia and Dalmatia, by which he recommends and ſubmits himſelf to his Holineſs, and deſires him to write to the King of Hungary to drive the Hereticks out of his Kingdom. The next, is ſuch a Letter from the Prince of Servia.

The hundred ſeventy eighth, is a Letter written by the Archbiſhop of Dioclia and Antivari, by which he thanks the Pope for the Pallium which he had ſent him, and preſents him with the Orders made by the Legates of the Holy See, and by the Prelates of Dalmatia againſt Simony, about the Celibacy of the Clergy, concerning the payment of Tithes, about the ſecrecy of Confeſſion, againſt thoſe that abuſed the Clergy, or dragg'd them before Civil Magiſtrates; about the Degrees of Affinity within which it is not allowable to marry; about the Clergy's being ſhaved for the Preſentation to Benefices, and the Preſervation of the Poſſeſſions of the Church; and laſtly, a Prohibition from putting the Children of Prieſts or Baſtards into Holy Orders, and from ordaining any one Prieſt under the Age of thirty.

The hundred and eightieth, is written by the Pope to the Archbiſhop of Antivari about the Biſhop of Soatino, who, upon ſuſpicion of Homicide, had quitted his Biſhoprick; the Pope order'd that he be allowed wherewithal to maintain himſelf.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

In the hundred and eighty firſt, he gave Notice to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, that he ought not to allow the Secular Clergy to ſit in the ſame place with the Monks at the Cathedral, or to go before them at a Proceſſion.

By the hundred and eighty ſecond, he takes an Earl and his Lands into the Protection of the Holy See.

The hundred and eighty third, to the Biſhop of Treviſi, is written againſt ſuch of the Clergy as did not wear Clergymens Habits, nor were ſhaved; he order'd him to ſuſpend them, and forbid the Archdeacon to let them take any higher Orders.

The hundred and eighty fourth, is a Letter of Frederick King of Sicily, to the Inhabitants of Monteſiaſcone, to make them obey the Sovereign Pontiff.

In the hundred and eighty fifth, he declar'd, That a Biſhop elect, who has taken Poſſeſſion before the Election was confirmed, ought to be turned out of that Biſhoprick.

In the hundred and eighty ſixth, he commiſſions the Biſhop of Fieſoli to give Judgment in a Caſe that concerned a Monaſtery of Camaldolites.

In the hundred and eighty ſeventh, he order'd the Metropolitan and the Biſhops of Sicily to redeem the Eſtates of the Kingdom of Sicily which they had alienated.

The hundred eighty eighth, is written to the Archbiſhop of Magdeburg, about the Divorce of the Duke of Bohemia from his Wife, pronounced by the Biſhop of Prague, without any regard to the Appeal which this Princeſs had put in to the Holy See, in Conſequence of which, this Duke had married the Siſter of the King of Hungary; he order'd the Archbiſhop to enquire into the Truth of the Matter, and write him word of it.

The hundred and eighty ninth, is addreſſed to the Patriarch of Jeruſalem, to the Biſhop of Lydda, and to the Knights of St. John of Jeruſalem, and of the Temple, to whom he recommends it with Wiſdom and Fidelity to diſtribute the Alms which he had ſent them, and to make him acquainted with the State of their Country.

In the hundred and ninetieth, he order'd the Chapter of Capua to proceed out of hand to the Election of a Biſhop.

In the hundred and ninety firſt, he recommends to the People of Saxony, Weſtphalia and Sclavonia, the Aſſiſtance of the Biſhop and Clergy of Livonia againſt the Pagans their Enemies.

In the hundred and ninety ſecond, and two hundred fifty and eighth, he order'd the Biſhop and People of Civita to obey the Earl of Cbieti, and take him for their Protector.

The hundred and ninety third, is a Reprimand for the Chapter of Fondi which had made two faulty Elections, having choſe Men who had not in them the Qualities requiſite for a Biſhop.

In the hundred and ninety fourth, he decided, That a Monk who had his Forefinger cut off, was incapable of ſaying Maſs.

The hundred and ninety fifth, is a Mandate for a Canonſhip of Poitiers.

The hundred and ninety ſixth, is a Commiſſion to the Archbiſhop of Bragne and two Monks, to judge in a Difference between the Biſhop of Conimbra and the Templers.

By the hundred and ninety ſeventh, he exhorted the Prelates of France, to whom it is written, to do all that was in their Power to bring the King to obey the Holy See, and to put away his Concubine, to take his Wife again.

The two following, are Commiſſions about private Affairs.

By the two hundredth, he made the Archbiſhop of Tarento his Legate in Sicily.

In the two hundred and firſt, he empower'd Conrade Archbiſhop of Mentz to confer thoſe Benefices, to which the Biſhop of Hildeſheim had preſented, in the Biſhoprick of Wirtzburg, upon whom he pleaſed, notwithſtanding the Preſentations of that Biſhop.

In the two hundred and ſecond, and two hundred and third, he order'd the Biſhops and People of Italy to receive his Legate, and obey him.

In the two hundred and fourth, he commands the Archbiſhops of Magdeburg, Mentz and Treves, and their Suffragans, to publiſh Excommunication againſt the Biſhop of Hildeſheim, who would remove to the Biſhoprick of Wirtzburg without leave from the Holy See.

In the two hundred and fifth, he exhorted an Earl of Italy to preſerve that Fidelity which he had promiſed to the Holy See, and to obſerve the Peace.

In the two hundred and ſixth, he advertiſed the Biſhop of Autun to provide Maintenance for the Jews newly converted.

In the two hundred and ſeventh, he exhorted the Magiſtrates of Viterbo to obſerve that Peace which they had made with the Romans.

The two hundred and eighth, is a Letter of the Patriarch of Conſtantinople to the Pope, in anſwer to a Letter which he had written to him, wherein he tells him that the Name of Univerſal, which he had given to the Church of Rome, puzzled him, and he could not tell the meaning of it. He takes it it ill too that he should accuse the Eastern Churches of being Shismaticks, since they professed the Faith of the Council of Nice, and believed that the Holy Spirit proceeded from the Substance of the Father. At the end of this Letter he praises the Emperor of Greece. Pope Innocent answers this Letter in the two hundred and ninth, and after having been pretty large upon the Primacy of St. Peter, which he proves to be by divine Right from many places of Scripture, he explains in what sense the Church of Rome might be stiled Universal. He says, that one doth not mean by this Name all particular Churches, but this Name we give to a Church that hath all other Churches under it; that it is likewise called the Mother of other Churches, not because it is the ancientest, but because it has the Preeminence over all the rest. He tells him afterwards that he designs to call a general Council for the Reformation of Manners, and invites him to it to settle an Union and good Understanding between the two Churches. The Emperor Alexis too writ to the Pope the two hundred and tenth Letter about the Recovery of the Holy Land, and the Re-union of the two Churches, as of a very feasible thing. The Pope answer'd him in the two hundred and eleventh, and says much the same to him as to the Patriarch of Constantinople.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

In the two hundred and twelfth, the Pope writ to his Vicar at Constantinople, not to suffer the Latin Priests to administer the Sacrament of Confirmation, which belonged to none but Bishops to do.

By the two hundred and thirteenth, he order'd all the Latin Priests which were at Constantinople to obey his Legate.

By the two hundred and fourteenth, and two hundred and fifteenth, he cites the Prior and Religious of Sainte-Croix in Spain, to appear about the Difference between them and the Bishop of Conimbra.

In the two hundred and sixteenth, he frees the Canons of Wirtzburg from the Oath which the Bishop of Hildesheim had made them take to pay a certain Sum of Money after his Death, to those as he would leave it to.

The two hundred and seventeenth, and two hundred and nineteenth, are Letters of the King of Armenia to the Pope; and the two hundred and eighteenth, and two hundred and twentieth, are the Pope's Answers to them.

By the two hundred and twenty first, he stirs up the People of Sicily to war against Marcovaldus.

The two hundred and twenty second to a private Person, is the Confirmation of a Prebend.

The two hundred and twenty third is a Commission to the Abbots of Lucedia, and St. Saviour of Pavia, for the Re-establishment of the Monastery of St. Colombanus. In the next he declar'd, That this Monastery shall still enjoy the Exemption from the Jurisdiction of the Bishop of Bobio, but not so as to be any Prejudice to the Rights of that Bishop.

In the two hundred and twenty fifth, he order'd the Punishment of the Man that had killed the Magistrate of Benevento.

In the two hundred and twenty sixth, he exhorted the Saracens of Sicily to be faithful to King Frederick, and not take the Part of Marcovaldus.

In the two hundred and twenty seventh, he determin'd, That a Priest who discovered to some Rogues a Person that they were looking for, and whom they afterwards killed, without knowing what they searched after him for, not being in any Fault, might have leave to celebrate Mass which he had been forbidden by the Bishop.

In the two hundred and twenty eighth, he order'd the Cardinal Bishop of Verona, to examine whether those that were accused of Heresy were really guilty; and that if he should find, after having questioned them, that they had no Errors in their Doctrine or Manners, he should declare them Catholicks; and if they had, and were ready to renounce them, he should give them Absolution after having taken the ordinary Oath.

In the two hundred and twenty ninth he declared, That such as let their Lands under borrowed Names are obliged to pay the Tenths, and that Clergymen are not to be allowed to have any Women live with them except they be of their Kindred.

By the two hundred and thirtieth, he granted the Bishop of Laghlin in Ireland, not to be within the Power of any but the Pope's Excommunication; and in the next, allows him to turn out a Man that had gotten into the Archdeaconry of his Church, and to dispose as he thought fit of the Benefices of his Diocess.

In the two hundred and thirty second, he declared, That a Woman who had taken upon her a Vow of Chastity to avoid being married, but upon condition of tarrying in her own House, and had afterwards married a Man by whom she had Children, ought to take her Religious Habit again, and observe her Vow.

In the two hundred and thirty third, he determined, That a Girl of not above seven Years of Age could not be engaged by any Promise of Marriage.

In the two hundred and thirty fourth, he order'd an Abbot to provide for the Subsistence of a Jew that was newly converted.

By the two hundred and thirty fifth, he appointed the Abbots of Citeaux, Morimond, and la Creste, to make strict Search after Hereticks.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

In the two hundred and thirty sixth, he commissioned the Archbishop of Naples, and the Cardinal Legate in that Country, to inform against the Archbishop of Benevento.

In the two hundred and thirty seventh, he forbids the turning the Revenues of Abbies, which were intended for the Maintenance of Monks, and the keeping of the Poor, to other Uses.

In the two hundred and thirty eighth, he forbids all the Bishops of Scotland any ways meddling against an Abby which was immediately subject to the Holy See.

In the two hundred and thirty ninth, he judged that the Alienation of the Estate of a Monastery by the secular Authority is not to be minded.

In the two hundred and fortieth, he gave leave to the Provost of the Chapter of St. Gaudentius of Novara, to correct the Faults of the Canons.

In the two hundred and forty first he decided, That such Clerks as are under Interdiction, cannot be chosen to any Ecclesiastical Benefices.

In the two hundred and forty second he declared, That all Believers are bound to pay Tithes to their Parish, and that they cannot upon any Pretence whatsoever, exempt themselves from paying any Part thereof.

In the two hundred forty third, he order'd the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the Bishop of London, to pronounce a Sentence of Excommunication against all such as had a Hand in the Violences offered to an Abbot who was putting a Sentence of the Pope's in Execution.

In the two hundred and forty fourth he says, That one ought to provide against the Commissaries that are appointed, not by way of Appeal, but by challenging them.

By the two hundred and forty fifth, to the Prelates and People of Sicily, he appointed a Cardinal Legate in this Kingdom, and order'd them to obey him.

In the two hundred and forty sixth, to the Canons and Clergy of Brinde, he cites them to Rome, to give an account of the Rout which they had made to hinder him that had been chosen of taking Possession of the Bishoprick. The two hundred and forty seventh is upon the same Subject.

The three following Letters, and the two hundred and sixty third and sixty fourth, are Confirmations of private Men in their Livings.

In the two hundred and fifty first, he desired the King of France to send aid to the King of Jerusalem against the Saracens, and to write to the Emperor of Constantinople, to maintain a Peace with this Prince.

The two hundred fifty second is a Letter of Leo King of Armenia, complaining that the Earl of Tripoli, and the Great Masters of the Orders of the Templers, and St. John of Jerusalem, would dispossess the lawful Heir of the Prince of Antioch, and desiring the Pope to protect him, and send him some Assistance against the Saracens. The Pope makes Answer in the two hundred and fifty third Letter, that he will send to his Legates upon the Place, to judge in all these Differences, and that in the mean while he'll order the Earl of Tripoli not to meddle. By the two hundred and fifty fourth Letter, he order'd the Lords and People of Armenia, to assist their King in making War against the Saracens; and by the next he sends him the Standard of St. Peter, to encounter the Enemies of the Cross.

By the two hundred and fifty seventh, he revok'd a Judgment given by the Bishop of Sidon in Syria, who was commissioned by the Holy See against the Templers: And by the two hundred fifty ninth, he order'd the King of England to restore the Templers a Castle which belonged to them.

In the two hundred and sixtieth, he appointed Commissaries to inform of the Matters for which the Abbot of Pomposa was accused.

In the two hundred and sixty first, to the Bishop of Rossano, he answer'd divers Questions which this Bishop had proposed to him. 1. That the Kindred of a Woman might marry the Kindred of her Husband. 2. That although a Husband and Wife are Godfather and Godmother to a Child, yet they do not thereby contract any such Compaternity as can hinder them from living as Man and Wife. 3. That the Latin Priests might neither have Wives nor Concubines. 4. That he might force the Abbots and Priests to come to his Synod. 5. That the Chaplains of the Castle of Rossano had nothing to do to judge of the Validity or Invalidity of Marriages.

In the two hundred and sixty second, he gave some Lands to the Judge of the Archbishop of Firmo's Temporal Jurisdiction, or his Theologal.

In the two hundred and sixty fifth, he order'd, That a Clergyman who had gained a Commission about an Affair that had been decided before, by telling a false Story, should have no Advantage by this Commission.

In the two hundred and sixty sixth, he gave a Lord notice to receive the Legate which he sends him with all due Respect.

The two hundred and sixty seventh is a Mandate for a Canonship in the Church of Breuil.

In the two hundred sixty eighth, and two hundred and seventy second, he enjoins the Abbots of Citeaux and Premontre montre to give the fourth Part of the Eſtates of their Abbies towards the Holy War.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

By the next two, he required of all the Biſhops of Europe, Supplies of Men and Money for that War; and of all the Faithful the ſame, in the two hundred and ſeventy firſt.

In the two hundred and ſeventy third, he appointed the Archbiſhop of Tyre and the Biſhop of Sidon his Commiſſaries to judge in a Suit between the Church of Tripoli, and the Knights of St. John of Jeruſalem, about a Church.

The two hundred and ſeventy fifth and ſixth are written about the Proceſs concerning the Prebends of the Church of Padua.

The two hundred and ſeventy ſeventh is written about the Election of an Archbiſhop of Capua by two thirds of the Chapter, maugre the Oppoſition of the Pope's Legate and ſome Canons: The Pope found no Fault in the Form of the Election; and becauſe he was not yet ſatisfied that the Perſon elected was thirty Years old, he puts off the Confirmation of the Election, and in the mean while till the thing was ſettled, appointed the elected Perſon, who was Subdeacon of Rome, to adminiſter both Spirituals and Temporals.

The two hundred and ſeventy eighth is alſo written about the Removal of the excommunicated Biſhop of Hildeſheim, becauſe he would without the Permiſſion of the Holy See take the Biſhoprick of Wirtzburg: The Pope gave Order to the Biſhop of Bamberg, to inform whether he obſerved and was obedient to the Interdict, that he might know whether it was fit to pardon him.

By the two hundred and ſeventy ninth, he confirmed the Inſtitution which the Biſhop of Amiens had made of four Religious in a Church.

In the two hundred and eightieth, he adviſed the Lords and Magiſtrates of Sicily, to labour with his Legate to promote the Good of that Realm.

By the two hundred eighty firſt, he confirmed an Agreement made between the Templers of Sclavonia, and the Monaſtery of St. Coſmus and St. Damienus of the ſame Country.

In the two hundred and eighty ſecond, he declared null a Reſignation made for fear of the King of England.

In the two hundred and eighty third, he finiſhed a Suit that had been depending at Rome, about the Election of the Biſhop of Sutri.

The four following are the ſame with ſome before.

By the two hundred and eighty eighth, he confirmed the new Biſhop of Hildeſheim, who was choſen in the Place of him who would remove to Wirtzburg, and declared null all the Alienations that the latter had made of the Poſſeſſions of the Church of Hildeſheim.

In the two hundred and eighty ninth, he empowered ſome Abbots in his Name to preſent to the vacant Prebends of the Archbiſhoprick of Magdeburg, which the Archbiſhop and Chapter had neglected to fill within the Time appointed by the Council of Lateran.

Monſieur Baluze takes notice after this Letter, that this ſecond Book of the Regiſter of Pope Innocent's Letters is not compleat; becauſe Roger of Hoveden quotes a Letter of this Pope's of the Year 1199. about Girardus Biſhop of St. Devias, which is not to be found among theſe; and he adds, for a Supplement, ſome Letters which he had taken from divers Places.

The firſt, which is the two hundred and ninetieth of this Book, is addreſſed to the Clergy of the Dioceſs of Penna, in the Province of Abruzzo, whom he orders to ſubmit to the Juriſdiction and Juſtice of the Biſhop, as well in what reſpects their Tithes and Incomes, as what concerns the Cauſes of Marriage and Penance.

The two hundred and ninety firſt is a Confirmation of the Privileges of the Church of Volterra.

The two hundred and ninety ſecond is a Protection granted to a Prieſt.

In the two hundred and ninety third and fourth, he exhorted all the Princes of Germany to labour for the Peace of the Empire, and for an Accommodation between Otho and Philip.

By the two hundred and ninety fifth, he commits to the Biſhop of Verceil, and the Abbot of Lucedia, the Judgment of a Proceſs between the Monks and Canons of Milan.

The two hundred and ninety ſixth is a Confirmation of the Privileges of the Abbey of Mariadura.

By the two hundred and ninety ſeventh, he takes the Earl of Montpellier into his Protection, and tells him in the next, that he will ſend him Legates to labour for the deſtroying of Hereſy.

The two hundredth and ninety ninth, and three hundredth, are written about the Removals of Biſhops. He of the Iſle of Leſina upon the Coaſts of Dalmatia, had been required for the Archbiſhoprick of Zara, and before this Demand was admitted in the Court of Rome, he had forſaken his Biſhoprick of Leſina, and had done his Duty in the Archbiſhoprick of Zara: The Chapter of Leſina had choſen in his Place the Biſhop of Spalatro. The Pope puts off the Execution of the Matter till he was fully informed how Things were, and appoints Commiſſaries for that purpoſe.

The three hundred and firſt is the Confirmation of a Treaty between the Archdeacon of Paris, and the Abbeſs of Chelles.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

The three hundred and ſecond is a Conſtitution which forbids uſing any Force to make the Jews be baptized, or doing them any Injury, or offering them any Violence.

By the three hundred and third, he granted Indulgences of forty Days to the Monaſtery of Vezelay, in which they ſay is preſerved the Body of St. Mary Magdalene.

The three hundred and fourth is a Confirmation of the Privileges of the Church of Placentia.

The three hundred and fifth and laſt of the ſecond Book, is a Letter to the Clergy of Normandy, exhorting them to contribute the fourth Part of their Revenue towards the carrying on of the Holy War.

Mr. Baluze not being able to recover the third and fourth Books of the Letters of Pope Innocent, has ſupply'd their Place with a very ancient Collection of the Decretals of this Pope, made by Rainier, Deacon and Monk of Pompoſa: It contains many Letters of the firſt and ſecond Books, and ſome of the following ranged under different Titles. We have already made an Extract of the firſt, and we have nothing left but to do the ſame with the latter. That which is in the firſt Title of this Collection is of that Number; it contains a Reſolution of ſome Difficulties about the Expreſſions which are uſed in the Myſteries of the Holy Trinity and the Incarnation. Here he takes notice that the Terms of Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, ſignify the relative diſtinguiſhing Properties of the Divine Perſons. He diſtinguiſhes in the Father three Particulars, his Innaſcibility, Paternity, and Emiſſion. Then he examines in what Senſe Jeſus Chriſt may be called Man; and having ſcholaſtically diſcuſt that Point, and given the Solutions of it which are given in the Schools, he remarks to the Archbiſhop of Compoſtella, to whom this Letter is written, that to anſwer in an Apoſtolical Manner, which is the plaineſt and beſt, one may ſay that Men in this World, cannot comprehend the true Nature of God, and have no proper Words to expreſs it by, and therefore are forced to make uſe of Relative Terms.

The ſecond Letter is a Writing given to the Ambaſſadors of Philip Duke of Suabia, by which he ſets the Prieſthood above the Imperial Dignity, and pretends that it belongs to the Pope to decide the Difference about the Empire; becauſe it was he that brought the Eaſtern Empire into the Weſt, and crowned the Emperors.

In the third, to the Emperor Alexis Comnenus, he alſo extols the Sacerdotal Dignity, and tells this Prince, that he ſhould not ſuffer the Patriarch of Conſtantinople to ſit at his Feet or on his left Hand.

The other Letters of this Collection are almoſt all in the firſt and ſecond Book, and have nothing worth notice in them, except ſome under the fortieth Title about Divorces and Poligamy.

In the firſt Letter of the fifth Book, Innocent III. determined that ſuch Nuns as have fought, or have beaten any of their Siſters, or of the Clergy, may receive Abſolution of the Biſhop who ſhall give it them in the Name of the Pope.

The ſecond is a Confirmation of the Statutes and Privileges of the Order of Grandmont.

The third is a Law made between the Clergy and Laicks of that Order.

The fourth is written to the Piſans againſt Marcowaldus.

By the fifth he gave Judgment in divers Differences between the Biſhop of Spoletto, and the Prior and Clergy of the Church of St Gregory of that City.

In the ſixth he approved of the Tranſlation of the Biſhop of Imola to the Archbiſhoprick of Ravenna.

In the ſeventh he determined that the Son of a Godfather could not marry the Daughter of the Godmother to the ſame Child, although he was born before they baptized the Child. That if theſe two Perſons had married they ought to be parted, and that whoſoever knew of any ſuch thing ought to diſcover it.

In the eighth he wrote to the Cardinal Biſhop of Paleſtrina his Legate in France, to abſolve ad cautelam the Archbiſhop of Magdeburg, whom he had excommunicated for not appearing at Corbeil, whither he had cited him, upon condition that he ſhould promiſe to make his Appearance, or ſend his Deputy, if he had not appealed to the Holy See before Excommunication.

By the ninth he confirmed the Privileges of a Chapter of Regular Canons of the Dioceſs of Magdeburg, and by the next grants them the Privilege of eating Meat, becauſe the Order of St. Auſtin, which they made profeſſion of, did not oblige them to abridge themſelves of it.

The eleventh Letter is to the Archbiſhop of Sens, to abſolve the Biſhop of Nevers.

By the twelfth he nominated Commiſſaries to judge the Archdeacon of Chartres, who was accuſed of Simony.

By the next he commiſſioned the Cardinal Biſhop of Paleſtrina, his Legate, with the Abbots of Citeaux and Beaulieu, of the Dioceſs of Verdun, to inform about the Matters whereof the Biſhop of Toul was accuſed by his Archdeacon.

In the fourteenth, he confirmed the Election of Sifroy to

the

Pope Innocent's Letters.

the Archbishoprick of Mentz, and rejected the demand of the Bishop of Worms his Competitor.

The following Letters have nothing in them worth taking notice of.

In the twenty second he declared that when those Persons, the Judgment of whose Causes he had committed to his Commissaries, could not safely come to the place appointed, they might then appeal to the Holy See, tho' the Letters of Commission excluded any Appeal.

The twenty third is written to the Bishop of Worcester against the Religious, who made use of Appeals to hinder the Bishop from visiting their Monastry, and to avoid correction. He order'd him to take a course with them for all their Appeal. He gave the same Order to the Bishop of Verona in the thirty second and thirty third Letters.

The twenty fourth and twenty seventh, are written to the Chapters of Chalons and Angers, about the Election of their Bishops.

In the twenty fifth and twenty sixth he nominated the Cardinal of St. Praxeda to be his Legate in the East, with him of St. Marcellus, and orders all the Faithful to obey them.

By the twenty eighth he acquainted the Chapter of Prague that he has absolved their Bishop.

The thirty fifth is addressed to the Archbishop of Bourges, the Bishop of Nevers, and the Abbot of Cluni, whom he commssioned to examine the Inhabitants of an Hospital who were accused of Heresy, and condemned by the Bishop of Auxerre, tho they had acquitted themselves at Rome.

The thirty sixth is written about a Difference in the Election of a Prior of the Church of St. Austrillus of Bourges, which he order'd the Thologal of Orleans to enquire into; and in case he should find the two Elections which had been made faulty, to make them proceed to a new Election in the ordinary forms.

By the thirty seventh and thirty eighth he recommended to the Prelates and Lords of Sicily, Walter Earl of Braine, whom he sends into Sicily with his Legates, and a Marshal, to carry on the War against Marcowaldus.

In the thirty ninth, to the Bishop of Auxerre, who had demanded of him, 1. Whether the Power which he had of disposing of the Estate of the Clergy that died intestate, extended it self to Canons as well as others; 2. Whether such as left their Estates to be disposed of at the will of another, might not be accounted to have died intestate: The Pope answer'd, That under that name of Clergy were comprehended Canons, and that it was not to be thought that those Persons made no Will who left other Persons Masters of their Estates.

The forty first is a Confirmation of the Privileges of the Bishop of Siponto.

The forty second is a Letter to the King of Armenia, complaining of the Templers promising to remain in unity with the Holy See, and desiring him to grant that neither he, nor his Subjects, nor his Country, nor the Latins which were in it, might be excommunicated or interdicted by any other than the Holy See. The Pope grants him his Request by the following Letter.

The forty fourth is a Letter of the Patriarch of Armenia to the Pope, desiring help of him. The Pope promises it him by the next, and exhorts him to keep the Churches of Armenia in union and submission to the Holy See.

The forty sixth is written to the Pope by another Archbishop of Armenia, who asks for a Pallium, which the Pope grants in the next Letter.

The forty eighth is written by the Pope to the Archbishop of Rheims about the Design of Philip King of France to get himself separated from his Wife. He tells him that it's fit the Queen should have Liberty to produce her Witnesses and Proofs as well as the King, and that he ought to advise the King not to demand what cannot be in justice granted. In the next, which is written to that Prince about this Affair, he talks with him about that which his Ambassadors had complained of, that he had had harder usage in this case than other Princes had received on the like occasions; seeing that King Lewis his Father, and the Emperor Frederick, and very lately John King of England, had been separated from their Wives by the Judgment of their Prelates and Estates, which the Holy See had without any scruple confirmed. The Pope answers, that they were his Legates who separated the Emperor Frederick, and that King Lewis and the King of England were parted by their Prelates, but that was because there had been no complaint made to the Holy See; which was the very Reason that the Judgment was not revoked, because no body protested against it: but the matter now in hand had been laid before the Holy See; Pope Celestin had revoked the Sentence of Divorce, and had sent his Legates into France, who might perhaps have put an end to the Affair, if he had not eluded their Judgment; that it was in the power of the Holy See, if it would go to the rigour of the business, not only to annul the Sentence, but likewise to use Censures against those that had given it, as Pope Nicholas had done against Gontierus Archbishop of Cologn, and Tetgandus Archbishop of Treves, for having divorced King Lotharius of Tetberge: that he had offered his Ambassadors to send two understanding Persons into his Kingdom to hear the Witnesses, and to go to Denmark if there was need, to receive the Queen's Evidence, to the end that they might give a true Judgment in the matter: that he was very willing if the Queen would consent, that he should choose two Persons out of his own Kingdom. In fine, he advises him to observe due form of Law in the Sentence, and to use his Queen well.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

In the fiftieth he order'd his Legates in Sicily and his Marshal, to make up the Marriage of King Frederick with the Sister of the King of Arragon.

In the fifty first and fifty second, he forbids the Archbishop of Bourges to meddle in a business of separation which had been brought before the Holy See, and says, that an action against a Marriage which has for so long time remained firm, ought not to be easily admitted.

In the fifty third he gives Judgment in a difference about the Archdeaconry of Richmond, in favour of him who had been first chosen by the Archbishop of York. The fifty fourth is about the same business.

The three next concern particular Affairs of some Churches in England.

In the fifty eighth he takes off the suspension of the Archbishop of Messina.

By the fifty ninth he declared that the Desertors of the Order of Citeaux should not be received, tho' they had Letters of Re-establishment from the Holy See, except these Letters expresly said that it should be no prejudice to the Discipline of the Order.

The sixtieth contains three Collects, and three Prayers for the Feast of St. Bernard.

The three next have nothing remarkable.

By the sixty fourth and sixty fifth he forbids giving of Benefices to the Children or Nephews of the Patrons.

In the sixty sixth he checks the King of England for the Violences he had done to the Bishop of Limoges.

The three next are about the Election of a Bishop and two Abbots

The seventieth is a Confirmation of a Treaty made between the Abbot and Monastry of Dole on one side, and Andrew of Chavigny Lord of Chateauroux on the other.

By the seventy first he confirm'd a certain Person's right to a Canonship.

By the seventy second he commissioned the Archbishop of Arles, and the Abbots of St. Giles, and of Vallemagne, to publish the Deposition of the Abbot of St. William, and to get another chosen.

The seventy third is written against the Canons of Antoninus of Placentia, who would not receive a Canon who had a Mandate from the Holy See for a Prebend of their Church.

The seventy fourth is written to the Archbishop of Melphi to excommunicate all that took the part of Marcowaldus.

By the seventy fifth he forbids turning a Church into a Monastry without the consent of the Bishop.

By the seventy sixth he granted the Monks that lived in the place whither St. Bennet retired, six Livres of Mony every Year out of the Apostolick Chamber, beside the Subsistence which they had from the Monastry of Sublac.

In the seventy seventh he imposes this Penance upon a Soldier that had cut out a Bishop's Tongue; to go naked, with his Tongue tied with a string fastned about his neck, carrying Rods in hand; to present himself in this Posture at the Church door for fifteen days together, where he should have Discipline given him, fasting all this time only with Bread and Water; and then to go for the Holy Land, where he should carry Arms for three Years, and fast every Friday only with Bread and Water.

In the seventy eighth he imposes this Penance upon a Man who having been Prisoner among the Saracens, had killed his Wife and Daughter by the command of the Saracen Prince, and eaten of their Flesh; to abstain for the future from eating any meat; to fast every Friday on bread and water, and the Mondays and Wednesdays of Advent and Lent; to eat only one Meal all the other days of Advent and Lent, and on all Vigils; to go naked footed, with a woollen Coat, and a very short Scapulary, carrying a Staff a Cubit long in his hand, taking no more of any person than would just serve him that day, not remaining above two days in one place, never daring to enter into the Church without first having received Discipline, and to recite every day a hundred Pater Nosters, kneeling at every one of them; and after having observed this Penance for three years, to return to the Holy See to desire Absolution.

In the seventy ninth, to the Abbot and Chapter of St. John of Sens, he granted them the Privileges of not being interdicted or excommunicated but upon an evident and reasonable Account.

Hitherto the Letters of the fifth Book go on without any interruption, the rest of it is imperfect, many Omissions there are, but those that we have I present you with: namely,

Pope Innocent's Letters.

The eighty ſecond, which contains the Rules for the Reform of the Monaſtery of Sublac.

The eighty fourth about the Affairs of Sicily, to Earl Walter Governour of Puglia or Apuleia.

The eighty ninth about the Death of Marcowaldus, at which he expreſſes a great deal of joy.

A Fragment of the ninety ſixth, by which he annuls the Poſtulation of the Biſhop of Leitours to the Archbiſhoprick of Auſche, becauſe this Biſhop was troubled with the Falling Sickneſs.

A Letter by which he checks the Biſhop of Penna for ſeveral Irregularities.

The hundreth by which he commiſſioned the Abbot of St. Columbus of Sens, and the Theologal of Orleans, to confirm the League made between the Biſhop of Paris and the Abbot of St. Genevieve du Mont, provided it had nothing in it which might derogate from the Authority of the Holy See, upon which the Church of St. Genevieve immediately depended.

The hundred and ſeventh to the Archbiſhop of Beſanſon, about ſome Perſons in his Dioceſs who carried the Religious of Citeaux before ſecular Judges, and obliged them likewiſe to clear themſelves by hot or cold Water, or by Duel. The Pope forbids all ſuch uſage of them for the time to come.

The hundred and fifth, which is a Letter of the King of Bulgaria, ſubmitting himſelf to the Church of Rome. And the hundred and ſixth, which is the Pope's Anſwer to him, wherein, after having recounted the uſage which the Legates of Pope Adrian met with in Bulgaria, and how the Bulgarians had driven out the Roman Prieſts to take in the Greeks, which was the cauſe that the Holy See never ſent any more Legates among them, he tells him that at his Requeſt he would ſend a Legate into his Kingdom, there to act in his name. The hundred and ſeventeenth, which is a Letter of the Biſhop of Zagora in Bulgaria upon the ſame Subject: And the hundred and nineteenth, which is the Pope's Anſwer to the Biſhop.

The hundred and twenty firſt, which is an Anſwer to the Demand of John the old Archbiſhop of Lions, what Form Chriſt Jeſus could make uſe of to tranſubſtantiate the Bread and Wine into his Body and Blood, and why theſe words were added in the Canon of the Maſs, the Myſtery of Faith, which were not to be met with in any of the Evangeliſts? Innocent takes notice, 1. That not only theſe words, but thoſe alſo, Having lifted up his Eyes to Heaven, and thoſe of the Eternal Teſtament are not in the Evangeliſts, but that it is not to be thought that the Evangeliſts have omitted nothing, and that thoſe omiſſions are to be ſupplied from other places of the Holy Scripture. 2. That ſome Perſons have made uſe of thoſe words, The Myſtery of Faith, to maintain an Error, that the real Body of Chriſt was not in the Sacrament, but only the Appearance and Figure; that theſe Perſons were deceived, becauſe, altho we ſay that the Sacrament of the Altar is a Figure, we do not thereby deny that it is real, for the Death and Reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt was an Example and Image too, and yet it was real; ſo that the reaſon why the Sacrament of the Altar is called The Myſtery of Faith is, becauſe we therein believe otherwiſe than we ſee: we ſee for example the Species of Bread and Wine, and we believe the reality of Fleſh and Blood, and the virtue of Unity and Charity: that three things are to be diſtinguiſhed in this Sacrament, the viſible Form, Bread and Wine, the reality of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, and the virtue of Union and Charity; that the firſt is Sacramentum & non Res; the ſecond, Sacramentum & Res; and the third, Res & non Sacramentum. 3. He maintains that the Apoſtles received from Jeſus Chriſt, and delivered to the Church that Form of words which is in the Canon of the Maſs. This Archbiſhop had put another Queſtion to the Pope too; namely, Whether the Water which was mingled with the Wine in the Cup, was likewiſe turned into the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt? The Pope anſwer'd, that it is the opinion of ſome, that as Blood and Water flowed from the ſide of Jeſus Chriſt, being Figures of the Redemption and Regeneration of Man, ſo the Wine and Water in the Chalice are changed into theſe two things: That others believed that the Water being changed into Wine was tranſubſtantiated into the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, which is contrary to the opinion of Philoſophers, who ſay it may be ſeparated from it: That in the third place it may be ſaid that the Water is not turned into Blood, but remains mingled with the Accidents of the Wine, as new Wine doth when it is mixed with conſecrated. He doth not condemn this opinion, but he rejects that of thoſe Men who ſay that the Water is changed into the Phlegm of the Body of Jeſus Chriſt; and embraces as moſt probable that opinion of the Water's being turned with the Wine into the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt. The third Deſire of this Archbiſhop, is to know how that change came to be made in the Secret of St. Leo: for where one reads in the ancient Miſſals, Lord grant that this Offering may profit the Soul of thy Servant Leo, there the new ones have it, Lord grant that this Offering may profit us by the Interceſſion of S. Leo, Innocent anſwers, that he doth not know by whom or when this Change was made, but that it was not without reaſon, becauſe ſeeing it is an injury to a Martyr to pray for him, all the Prayers therefore that are made for the Saints, ought to be applied to us, or to be underſtood in this ſenſe, that we pray they may be glorified more and more upon Earth, although there are ſome that think that the Glory of the Saints may be augmented till the day of Judgment, and therefore the Church may pray for their Glorification. In fine, he leaves him to judge whether the Rule of St. Auſtin about Prayers for the dead may not be applied here.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

The hundred and twenty ſecond to the Emperor of Conſtantinople, who had written to the Pope, deſiring him to hinder the Latins from invading his Eſtates; to give no Countenance to the Party of Alexis the Son of Iſaac the Angel, who was gone to deſire help of Philip Duke of Suabia to regain the Throne of his Father; and to not ſuffer Philip to be Emperor of the Weſt. The Pope anſwers him that this Alexis had come to Rome to complain of his having depoſed his Father and put out his Eyes, and kept him in Priſon: That afterwards he went to Philip and other Chriſtian Princes, promiſing them that if they would re-eſtabliſh him he would aſſiſt them in the Conqueſt of the Holy Land; that he had been conſulted about this too, but would give no anſwer till he had heard his Deputies, tho many had counſelled him to favour the Deſign, becauſe the Greek Church was not yet ſubject to the Holy See: that he was ſo far from favouring Philip, that he upheld Otho in his Pretenſions: that he exhorted him in token of the reſpect which he had for him, to labour for a Peace.

The hundred and twenty eighth to William Earl of Montpellier, who had by the Archbiſhop of Arles deſired the Pope to legitimate his Children. Innocent proves therein firſt of all that the Legitimation of the Holy See is valid, not only in what concerns the Spirituals, but the Temporals too: and becauſe this Earl alledges the Example of the King of France's Children, which Philip had by a Wife whom he took after having left Iſemburga, to obtain the ſame favour for thoſe whom he had had by a Wife that was married in the ſame manner, Innocent tells him there is a great deal of difference; 1. Becauſe the King of France by his lawful Wife had a Son who was preſumptive Heir of the Crown, whereas he had no Son by his lawful Wife. 2. Becauſe the King of France had no more from the Holy See than what concerned the Spirituals, whereas he deſired it both for Spirituals and Temporals. 3. Becauſe the King had not left his Wife till he was divorced by the Archbiſhop of Rheims, and had theſe lawful Iſſue by the other Wife before the Holy See forbid him to live with her, whereas he had obſerved no Form nor Law in the matter. 4. Becauſe the King acknowledging no Superior in Temporals, had ſubmitted himſelf to the Holy See in this caſe, though perhaps he could have given himſelf this Diſpenſation as to Temporals; but as for him who depended upon other Soveraigns, this Diſpenſation could not be granted him without encroaching upon their Right, and he could not grant it to himſelf. About the end he begins to eſtabliſh the Power which he had not over the Temporalty of St. Peter's Patrimony only, but over that of other States. And he concludes that he cannot grant his deſire, unleſs he can prove to him that his Fault is leſs, or his Authority greater than it was thought.

The hundred and ſixtieth to the King of England, wherein he reproaches him for having forſaken the Party of Otho.

The hundred and ſixty ſeventh, to the Holy Soldiers, which is full of Reproaches too about the taking of Zara in Dalmatia, which the Venetians had attacked and taken by ſtorm with the help of theſe Croſſes, and had divided the Booty with them.

Monſieur Baluze has added to theſe Letters two Privileges granted by this Pope, the one to the Monaſtery of St Laurence of Averſa, and the other to that of St. Paul and St. Peter of Canterbury, and ſome other Letters, which had never been printed, which ſerve to clear ſome of thoſe in this Book; namely, the Letters and Acts about the Accommodation between the Biſhop of Paris, and the Abbot of St. Genevieve du Mont, confirmed by the Abbot of St. Columbus of Sens, and by the Theologal of Orleans, in purſuance of a Letter of Innocent's, viz. the hundredth, and by the Pope himſelf in a private Letter which Monſieur Baluze ſpeaks of; and the Act of the Legitimation of the Children of King Philip the Beautiful, of which he ſpoke in the hundred and twenty eighth Letter.

The fifth Book is followed by a Collection of Letters which concern the Conteſt for the Empire between Philip and Otho, with this Title; The Regiſter of Pope Innocent III. about the Affair of the Roman Empire. There are to be found not only the Letters of the Pope upon that Subject, but thoſe likewiſe of the two Contenders, and of thoſe of their Parties There are ſeveral conſiderable Circumſtances of this Hiſtory to be learnt there, and we may by them ſee the diſpoſition of the Pope and Princes, and the different Motives which made them act on this or that ſide. At firſt the Pope ſeems to be neuter, and to deſire nothing elſe but that the German Princes would agree and live in Peace. The firſt and ſecond Letters.

Otho

Pope Innocent's Letters.

Otho writes him a very submissive Letter. The King of England, and other Princes which were for him, write to the Pope in his behalf. The fourth, fifth, and following Letters. Those who had chosen him give the Pope an Account of his Election, and desire his Confirmation of it. The tenth Letter. The Pope answers them in general Terms. The eleventh Letter. On the other Side, the Princes of Germany that were for Philip, demand of the Pope four Things; 1. That he would acknowledge Philip for King of Germany. 2. That he would do nothing against the Rights of the Empire. 3. That he would not refuse to crown him Emperor, when he should come to Rome for this Ceremony. 4. That he would not make War against Marcowaldus. The fourteenth Letter. The Pope answered them, that he is very sorry for the Differences in Germany, that he has no Design of entrenching upon the Privileges of the Empire; that he will give the Crown to him whose Election he shall find to have been according to Form; but that he cannot favour Marcowaldus, who is a Rebel against the King of Sicily, and who had seized upon the Lands of the Holy See. The fifteenth Letter. Philip Duke of Suabia likewise wrote to the Pope by Ambassadors that he sends him. The seventeenth Letter. And Philip King of France earnestly recommends his Affair. The thirteenth Letter. The Pope answers the Ambassadors in a full Consistory, that it belonged to the Holy See to give Judgment in this Difference. The eighteenth. Otho, who found himself the weakest of the two, writes very submissive Letters to the Pope, and makes Offers of Peace, and to yield to all that the Holy See should think fit to order. The nineteenth and twentieth. The Pope wrote a Letter to the Princes of Germany; having recounted what was said on one Side and the other, to maintain the Validity of each Election, he lays open to them the Mischiefs that this Division might produce, and exhorts them unanimously to choose one only Prince. In the mean while the Archbishop of Mentz, having called an Assembly at Andernach and at Coblentz, had there made the Princes promise that they would execute what should be ordered in the first Assembly that should be held. The Pope was angry that this was done without his having a Hand in it, and wrote thereof to the Archbishop in the twenty second Letter.

Hitherto the Pope had not declared himself, but now seeing that there was a Necessity of doing it, he weighs the Reasons and Interests that the Holy See might have, and finds that it is most for its Advantage to declare for Otho. He himself has told us his Motives in his Memoir, Intituled, The Deliberation of Pope Innocent upon the three Competitors for the Empire; Frederick, Philip, and Otho. He examines the Matter by three Principles: Quid liceat; quid deceat; quid expediat. He says, that it seems to him quod non liceat to reject the Election of Frederick, which was the first that the Princes of Germany made; quod non deceat, because he was put by his Father under the Protection of the Holy See; quod non expediat, because there was Reason to fear that when he should become powerful, and see that the Holy See had baulk'd him of the Empire, he should cast its Authority out of Sicily, and not make to it the ordinary Submissions, that he might revenge himself upon that which had taken the Empire from him. But then he sets against this, that his Election had been gained by Force, and an Oath to maintain it had been taken by Violence; that he was elected at a Time when he was not capable of managing the Empire; and that supposing he had been chosen in a Time that the Empire had been vacant in, yet non decet, because it is not reasonable that he who is under the Tutorage of others, should command and govern them: That non expedit, because the Kingdom of Sicily would by this means be united to the Empire, and there was Reason to fear that the King of Sicily being become so powerful, would not do Homage to the Holy See. For the Election of Philip he alledges, quod non liceat to reject it, because it had been made by the greatest Number: non deceat, for fear he should think that the Holy See minded only to revenge the Injuries done it: Non expedit, because he was the most powerful. Then against his Election he says, quod non liceat to approve it, because he had been excommunicated, and elected while he was excommunicated; which is so true, that he would since have gotten his Absolution, which was nevertheless not given him in due Form, because he was a Favourer of Marcowaldus, because he had taken an Oath to Frederick, and in the mean while acted contrary to this Oath. Quod deceat to oppose him in it, because else it would seem as if the Empire was hereditary, when one Brother succeeded another: Quod expediat, because he is a Persecutor, and of a persecuting Race. Against Otho, quod non liceat to acknowledge him, because he was chosen by the least Number: Quod non deceat, for fear it should seem to be out of Partiality: Quod non expediat, because his Party seemed to be the weakest. For this Prince, because sanior pars consentit; because he is the most proper: because God will assist him. The Conclusion is to counsel the Princes of Germany to agree upon one Person, and to advise them to declare for Otho. The twenty ninth Letter. After having made this Resolution, he wrote a Letter to the Archbishop of Cologn, and his Suffragans, and to the Princes of Germany, wherein he tells them that it belongs principally and finally to the Holy See to decide all Differences that should arise about the Empire, that they might be made up: Principally, because 'twas that See that translated the Greek Empire to the Latins; and finally, because 'tis that that gives the Imperial Crown: That he had waited to see whether the two Contenders would agree; but since that was not done, he had sent the Cardinal of Palestrina his Legate into Germany, with Philip a Notary, and had order'd Octavian Bishop of Ostia his Legate in France to repair thither, if he could, and see what was to be done. The thirtieth Letter. He wrote the same thing to the Prelates and Princes of Germany. The thirty first. In fine, he declar'd openly for Otho, acknowledging him to be King of Germany lawfully elected, made a Declaration of it to the Princes of Germany, and order'd them to obey him. The thirty second, and following Letters. He wrote likewise to the King of France to draw him to the same Side with himself, and to the King of England to keep him firm on it. The forty seventh, and forty ninth Letters.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

The Princes of Philip's Party, astonished at what the Legate had done, complained of the Court of Rome's meddling in the Election of an Emperor, any more than the Emperor did in the Election of a Pope, which he might pretend to a Right of doing. They said that the Cardinal of Palestrina could not do as he had done, either in Quality of an Elector, for that did not belong to him; or of a Judge, because he had given Judgment in the Absence of one of the Parties, and because he had no Power to judge in this Matter. The sixty first Letter. The Pope answer'd, That he acknowledges that the Right of choosing a King who is afterwards to be made Emperor, lies in the Hands of the German Princes, but that he hath a Right to see what this Person is, because he is to consecrate and confirm him: That his Legate had acted the Part neither of an Elector nor of a Judge, but of a Denunciator, by declaring that Duke Philip was unworthy, and Otho worthy of the Empire: That the Election of Philip was disorderly, &c. The sixty second Letter. Philip King of France complains of the Election of Otho, and tells the Pope that if he still protected him, he would take his own Measures, and assures him he had no Reason to fear any thing from Philip. The sixty third Letter. The Pope answer'd, That he had no Design to do any thing that might be a Prejudice to France: That he had a greater Affection for the King of France and his Subjects, than for all other Kings and States, Utpote in cujus exaltatione exaltari credimus Apostolicam sedem, & in cujus depressione, quod absit, ipsam deprimi crederemus. Then he gave the Reasons why he put by Philip; 1. Because he is of a Family that had been Enemies to the Holy See. 2. Because he is excommunicated. 3. Because one cannot trust him. But as for Otho, he assures him that he had engaged him to follow his Counsels in respect of France: That he is of Kin to Lewis the Son of the King of France: That it is none of his Interest to defend the English, and that he had not assisted them: That if he should take any Measures against France, the Holy See would straight oppose him: Usque adeo enim Regni Francorum diligimus libertatem, ut non solummodo contra eum, sed contra omnem hominem qui illud molestare præsumeret, pro cujus immunitate staremus, & ejus defenderemus pro viribus dignitatem. He exhorts him to leave in Peace, and touches upon some other Reasons of State, which should keep him from opposing the Empire of Otho. The sixty fourth Letter. The Pope wrote moreover many other Letters to the Princes and Prelates of Germany, in favour of Otho, who had taken an Oath to obey the Church of Rome, and to restore it all the Lands which belonged to it, and among others the Exarchate of Ravenna, the Marquisate of Ancona, the Dutchy of Spoletto, the Lands of the Countess Mathilda, &c. The seventy seventh Letter. The Party of Otho growing every Day weaker and weaker, the Pope exhorts the two Parties to come to a Treaty, that there might be a Peace. The seventy ninth. Otho to get him on his Side, promises to make a Peace with the King of France. The eighty first Letter. The Report goes that the Pope's a going to leave him. He complains thereof. The Pope assures him that he has not changed his Sentiments; that he had sent no Letters against him, and that those which went about were forged. The eighty fifth and following Letters. On the contrary he excommunicated the Bishops that were against Otho, and exhorts all the Ecclesiastick and secular Princes of Germany to be on Otho's Side. Philip, whose Party was very much strengthened, thought that he might at last perhaps gain the Pope; he wrote him a Letter to justify his Conduct, in which he says that his Design at first was to keep the Empire for his Nephew Frederick: That the Electors refused to confer it on him: That he received the Empire whether he would or no, without any looking after it, or caring for it: That some Malecontents, corrupted by the King of England's Gold, had chosen Otho: That Luipold had been Canonically chosen Archbishop of Mentz. And he ends his Letter with Promises of Obedience, and Submission, and Respect, protesting that it is a Falsehood that he was excommunicated by the Pope his Predecessor; that all he wished was to be as certain of not being excommunicated out of the Church Triumphant, as he was of not being ſo out of the Church Militant.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

Within a while after, Things looked towards a Peace; the Pope ſends Hugolin Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia, and Leo Cardinal of the Holy Croſs, in quality of his Legates into Germany, to conclude it. They received Philip's Oath of obeying the Pope in all Things for which he had been excommunicated, and gave him Abſolution after he had taken it. They obliged him to ſet Bruno of Cologn at Liberty, to turn out Lupold, and put Sifroy into Poſſeſſion of the Archbiſhoprick of Mentz. They made him disband his Army, and enter into a Truce for a Year. The hundred and forty ſecond Letter. Philip was killed not long after. You may ſee the Circumſtances of his Death in the hundred and fifty ſecond Letter of Cardinal Hugolin. Otho is afraid that ſome Body would diſpute the Empire with him: The Pope promiſes ſtoutly to maintain him in it, and to hinder any one from riſing up againſt him. The hundred and fifty third Letter. He wrote upon the ſame Subject to the Princes of Germany. Otho deſires him to write in his behalf, and the Pope doth it, and exhorts the King of France too to make Peace with him. To ſtrengthen him ſtill more, he empowered Hugolin to grant a Diſpenſation for his marrying the Daughter of Philip. He writes him a pretty Letter about the Union which there ought to be between the Sacerdotal Power and the Imperial: That they are the two Swords which ought to aſſiſt one another, and recommends his Legates to him. The hundred and ſeventy ninth Letter. In fine, Otho being come into Italy to receive the Imperial Crown, takes an Oath to the Pope, whereby he conſents to the Liberty of Elections, allows of Appeals, renounces all Pretence to the Revenues of vacant Churches, leaves the ordering of all ſpiritual Affairs to the Pope, promiſes to exterminate Hereſy, and to render to the Church of Rome all its Lands; and particularly the Marquiſate of Ancona, the Dutchy of Spoletto, the Exarchate of Ravenna, the Eſtates of the Counteſs of Mathilda, &c. and promiſes Aſſiſtance and Obedience to the Pope. This Oath was taken in the Year 1209. at Spire, the twenty firſt of March: The hundred and eighty ninth Letter: And was confirmed by the hundred and ninety ſecond.

We do not think fit to enter upon the reſt of the Letters contained in the reſt of the Books of Innocent's Regiſter, which are about an Infinity of private Actions and Affairs, the Recital of which would be more tedious than uſeful. There you may find a great many Privileges granted or confirmed to many Robies; many Confirmations of the Elections of Biſhops; divers Suits brought before the Holy See, and Judgment given in them, or elſe they returned to the Commiſſaries; Mandates for Livings; Letters to animate the Chriſtians to relieve the Holy Land, or to ſet the Catholicks about the exterminating all Hereticks; Advice to Princes and Biſhops; Queſtions about Marriages and Divorces, and particularly about that of Philip King of France, and that of Peter King of Arragon; and the Deciſion of ſome Queſtions in the Canon Law. There are ſome too about the Regal Right as well in France as England, of which we ſhall ſpeak in their Place. The greateſt Part of theſe Letters are written in a formal and practical Stile. This Pope had a wonderful Inſight into Affairs, and a very particular Knack of hitting the Joints of the Buſineſs in a few Words, and of ſetting off the Reaſons both on one Side and the other in their full Force; which he did with ſo much Impartiality, that as the Author of his Life takes notice, one can hardly diſcover which Side he enclines to till he pronounces Sentence.

Pope Innocent's Letters.

He compoſed many other Works both before and after his being Pope. Here's a Catalogue of them. A Treatiſe of deſpiſing the World, or of the Miſery of Man's Eſtate; in three Books: A Work for Piety much like that of the Imitation of Chriſt, of which there have been many Editions, as at Paris in 1482, and 1594. at Venice in 1538. at Antwerp in 1540. and at Cologn in 1681. A Treatiſe of the Myſteries of the Maſs, divided into ſix Books, printed likewiſe by it ſelf at Leipſick in 1534. and at Antwerp in 1540. A Commentary upon the ſeven penitential Pſalms, printed at Antwerp in 1550, at Venice in 1578, and at Cologn the ſame Year. Three Prayers in Honour of the Saints. Sermons for the whole Year, and for the Saints Days, with four Diſcourſes for the Conſecration of the Pope. A Treatiſe of Almſgiving. A Treatiſe in the Praiſe of Charity. Hymns or Proſes in Honour of Jeſus Chriſt and the Virgin, and Prayers upon the Paſſion of Jeſus Chriſt. Two Diſcourſes to the ſecond General Council of Lateran. The Acts and Canons of this Council. All his Works were printed with two Books of Letters in Folio, at Cologn in 1552, and in 1575. Theſe Works are full of Piety and Spirituality. The Book of the Contempt of the World may be very uſeful, and contains very lively Draughts of the Eſtate and Miſery of Man. The Books of the Myſteries of the Maſs are full of Myſtical Reflections upon the Ceremonies of the Maſs. The Stile of the Sermons is cloſe, full of Diviſions, Antitheſes, Allegories, and many Paſſages of Holy Scripture.

CHAP. III.

The Hiſtory and Writings of the Popes who have been of the Holy See, from the Death of Innocent to the End of the Century.

The Hiſtory and Writings of the Popes after Innocent, &c.

Honorius III.

POPE Innocent dying at Peruſa the ſixteenth of July 1216. Cencius Sabellius, the Son of Almerick a Roman, who had been made Cardinal Deacon by Celeſtin the 3*d*. and Cardinal Prieſt by the Title of St. John and St. Paul by Innocent the 3*d*, was elected Pope the eighteenth of the ſame Month, and took the Name of Honorius the Third. He exhorted the German Princes who had taken upon them the Holy War, to make a Voyage beyond Sea, and order'd ſolemn Proceſſions for the Succeſs of the Expedition: But for all that it had not the Succeſs that one could have wiſhed; for the Chriſtians were forced at laſt to give up Damiata which they had taken at the Beginning of the Expedition, and to throw up the Deſign. The Pope alſo cauſed War to be made upon the Moors of Spain, and the Albigenſes of Thoulouſe, and earneſtly exhorted Philip Auguſtus King of France, and Lewis the eighth his Son, to exterminate them. He died the eighteenth of April 1227.

The Regiſters of this Pope's Letters, and of thoſe of many of his Succeſſors, are in the Vatican Library, but were never yet publiſhed entire: Rinaldus has inſerted almoſt all of them in his Continuation of the Annals of Baronius, and particularly thoſe that have any thing to do with the Hiſtory. Some of them too may be found in Bzovius, and many in the Hiſtory of the Minor Brothers compoſed by Vaddingus, who has put all that concern his Order together at the End of every Volume of his Hiſtory. There are ſome of them inſerted in the Bullaries, particularly thoſe which concern the Inſtitution or Confirmation of Religious Orders, and their Statutes; the Canonization of Saints; the Cruſades againſt the Saracens and Hereticks; the Eſtabliſhment, Laws and Privileges of the Inquiſition; the Erection of Univerſities, &c. There are ſome too in the laſt Collection of the Councils; but the moſt conſiderable things in theſe Letters about the Canon Law, were put together in the ancient Collections of the Decretals of the Popes under different Titles, according to the Order which Juſtinian has obſerved in his Codes. There are five famous Collections of theſe Decretals before that of Gregory the Ninth, which is in the Body of the Law.

The Hiſtory and Writings of the Popes after Innocent, &c.

Honorius III.

The firſt, which was made a little while after the Collection of Gratian, was compoſed by Bernard Provoſt of Pavia, and Biſhop of Fayence, who collected the Conſtitutions of the Popes ſince Gratian, and particularly thoſe of Alexander the Third, and Lucius the Third, and ends at Celeſtin the Third.

Some time after three Perſons undertook to make a Collection of the Decretals of the Popes which were omitted by Bernard, or written ſince his time: Gilbert, Alanus, and John Gallus of Volterra. That of the laſt was the largeſt and beſt, and it is that which is counted for the ſecond. It contains ſome Letters of the Popes omitted by Bernard, thoſe of Celeſtin the Third, and the firſt of Innocent the Third. 'Tis thought that Alanus's is that which is inſerted among the Councils after the third General Council of Lateran.

The third Collection was begun by Bernard of Compoſtella, but the Romans being offended that a Stranger ſhould meddle with that Work, deſired Pope Innocent to have it done by his Order. Peter of Benevento, Deacon and Secretary to the Pope, was choſen out for the Buſineſs, and compoſed it out of the twelve firſt Books of this Pope's Letters, and it was publiſhed in the Pope's Name.

The fourth Collection was made five Years after, by the Order of the ſame Pope. It contains the Canons of the fourth General Council of Lateran, and the other Decretals made ſince that Council. Theſe four ancient Collections with their Commentators, have been preſented to the publick by Antonius Auguſtinus, and printed at Paris by Cramoiſy in 1621.

The

The History and Writings of the Popes after Innocent, &c.

The fifth Collection is compoſed of the Letters of Honorius the third, of whom we are ſpeaking, who cauſed it to be made and preſented to himſelf by Tancredus Archdeacon of Bologn, whom he commanded to receive it, and get it received as well in Schools as Eccleſiaſtical Tribunals. This was publiſhed by Ciro Profeſſor of the Canon Law, and Chancellor of the Univerſity of Tholouſe, and printed in that City with learned Comments in the Year 1645.

Honorius III.

Monſieur du Cheſne had the Manuſcript Regiſter of Honorius the third, ſome of whoſe Letters he publiſhed in the Fifth Tome of the Hiſtorians of France. We find three Letters of this Pope in the Collection of the Councils, in the laſt of which he aboliſhes the Avows of Churches. There are three more too in the ſame place about the Primacy of Toledo, and three more which concern the Order of Minor Brothers in the Collection of Vaddingus. Monſieur Baluze too has given us ſome in the ſecond Tome of his Miſcellany Works. Laſtly, we find ten Bulls of this Pope in the laſt Bullary, of which the firſt is a Confirmation of the Laws of the Emperor Frederick, and the others contain the Confirmation of the Laws of the Emperor Frederick, and the others contain the Confirmation of the Rules of divers religious Orders, and particularly thoſe of the Minor Brothers, and the Carmelites, and of the Privileges of Citeaux, and the Canonization of St. Laurence Archbiſhop of Dublin.

Collections of the Pope's Decretals.

Gregory the Ninth.

Cardinal Hugolin ſucceeded Honorius the third, and took the Name of Gregory the ninth; he was of Anagnia, deſcended of the illuſtrious Family of the Earls of Signi. He had been made Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia by Innocent the third, and Chief of the Embaſſy for the Cruſade under that Pope, and under his Succeſſor Honorius the third; an Employ which gained him a great deal of Credit and Authority: So that it was no Wonder that the firſt thing he did after his Election, was to preſs the Emperor Frederick and the reſt of the Croſſes, to go for the Holy Land, and that he uſed the Sword of Excommunication againſt this Emperor for putting of his Voyage. We ſhall not here repeat what we have before ſpoken of his Dealings with the Emperor, which were at laſt the Cauſe of his Death, that fell out on the 30*th* of September 1241.

The Letters of this Pope are much better written than the greateſt part of the Letters of any of the Popes of that time.

There are a great many about his Differences with Frederick; others againſt Hereticks; ſome to St. Louis King of France, and the Queen his Mother about the Differences of that Prince with the King of England; againſt the Albigenſes, and in favour of ſome Biſhops of France. This is the Subject of one and thirty Letters of this Pope, which are in the Collection of the Councils. There are ninety ſeven of his in Vaddingus, and a great Number beſides in the Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory of Rainaldus, who has amaſs'd them almoſt all together. The great Bullary furniſhes us with a Dozen, among which are the Bulls of the Canonization of St. Francis, of St. Anthony of Padua, of St. Dominick, and of St. Elizabeth. Father Dachery has publiſhed thirteen of them in the third Tome of his Spicilegium. Laſtly, there are many Fragments of his Decretal Letters in the Collection of five Books of Decretals which he had made by Raimundus of Pennafort, and which he approved of, forbidding the Uſe of any other Collection in the Schools and Eccleſiaſtical Tribunals, or the making of any other without an expreſs Order from the Holy See.

Celeſtin the Fourth.

Thirty Days after the Death of Gregory the ninth, Godfrey of Chaſtillon a Frenchman, Cardinal of St. Sabina, was by his ſingular Piety and compleat Learning recommended to the Popedom, and took the Name of Celeſtin the fourth: But he enjoyed it but eighteen Days, at the End of which he died, overloaded with old Age and Infirmities, ſo that we muſt not wonder we have no Letters of his.

Innocent the Fourth.

After his Death the Holy See was vacant for about nineteen Months, and then Sinibaud Cardinal of the Title of St. Laurence, was choſen Pope the 24*th* of June in the Year 1243. and took the Name of Innocent the fourth, and was conſecrated at Anagnia the 28*th* of the ſame Month. He lived in the Holy See three Years and ſome Months, and ſo has left us many Letters written during his Popedom. There are nineteen of them in the Collection of Councils, without counting thoſe four that are in the General Council of Lyons. In the tenth, to his Legate in Cyprus, he reſolves divers Queſtions concerning ſome Conteſts between the Biſhops of the Greek and Latin Way in that Kingdom; and he there determines, 1. That the Greeks ought to obſerve the Cuſtom of the Roman Church in the Unctions of Baptiſm. 2. That yet it may be allowed them to anoint the whole Body of the Baptized. 3. That it ſignifies nothing whether they uſe hot or cold Water in Baptiſm. 4. That none but Biſhops have Right to anoint the Forehead of the Baptized with Holy Chriſm. 5. That every Biſhop might conſecrate the Holy Chriſm: That if the Greeks had a mind to follow their own Way, according to which the Biſhops are to conſecrate it with their Archbiſhop, and the Archbiſhop with the Patriarch, they might be eaſily allowed it. 6. That Prieſts ought not to give Unction to Penitents inſtead of Satisfaction. 7. But that extream Unction ought to be given to ſick People. 8. That the Greeks might make uſe of hot Water or cold as they pleaſed in the Sacrifice of the Altar, provided they thought one might conſecrate as well with the one as the other. 9. That they ought not to be allowed to keep the Euchariſt a Year, but that it ought to be renewed every five Days. 10. That the Greeks might be left to uſe their own Ceremonies in the Maſs, provided they uſed the ſame Form of Conſecration that Jeſus Chriſt did, and did not ſtay till paſt the None Hour. 11. That the Prieſts may call the Hours as they pleaſe, and are uſed, but that they ſhould not celebrate when they had not ſaid Mattins. 12. That the Prieſts ought to be examined to ſee whether they are fit and capable of reading the Office, and celebrating the Maſs. 13. That every Prieſt ſhould offer the Sacrifice in a Chalice of Gold, or Silver, or Tin, with a white clean Linen Corporal, and upon an Altar decently ſet forth. 14. That Women are by no means to be ſuffered to ſerve at the Altar. 15. That though the Greeks would do better if they faſted every Day of the Lent, yet they might be left to the Way they were uſed to. 16. That married Prieſts who had the Care of Souls, ought not to be hindred from taking the Confeſſions of their Pariſhioners, and impoſing Penances on them. 17. That for all that it ſhall be free for the Biſhops to ſettle and appoint Prieſts in their Dioceſſes to take the Confeſſions of Penitents, to enjoyn Penances, and to act in their Name. 18. That Fornication Soluti cum ſoluta is a deadly Sin. 19. That the Greeks ſhould be obliged to give the ſeven Orders, although they had hitherto neglected it, ſtill omitting the three lower ones. 20. That the Greeks ought not to condemn all third and fourth Marriages. 21. That nevertheleſs Prieſts ſhould not give their Bleſſing upon ſecond Marriages. 22. That they ſhould not marry, ſo as they did, within the fourth Degree of Kindred and Affinity. 23. That thoſe Greeks, who acknowledged that the Souls of thoſe who died without being wholly cleanſed from their Sin, might exiſt after Death, and be eaſed by the Prayers of the Living, were obliged to call this Place where they are, Purgatory. 24. That thoſe who die in a State of deadly Sin ſhall be damned for ever. 25. That the Souls of Infants who are baptized, and of juſt Men who have no more Satisfaction to make, go directly at their Death to an eternal Country. 26. That Abbots and Monks ſhould obſerve the Rules of the Holy Fathers. The thirteenth Letter is a Confirmation of the Laws made by the Emperor Frederick againſt Hereticks: And the eighteenth forbids excommunicating or interdicting the Eſtates of the King of France without particular Orders from the Holy See. Rainaldus recounts many other Letters of this Pope in his Annals. There are ſixteen of them in the great Bullary, of which ſome are the ſame with thoſe in the Collection of the Councils, and the others are Confirmations or Privileges of Orders, and the Canonizations of Saints. Father Vaddingus has got together 98 which concern his Order. This Pope died the ſeventh of December 1254.

The History and Writings of the Popes after Innocent, &c.

Innocent the Fourth.

His Succeſſor was Rainaud of Anagnia of the Family of the Earls of Signi, a Kinſman of Innocent the third's, and Gregory the ninth's, the latter of which had made him Cardinal. He was elected on the 21*ſt* of the ſame Month December, and conſecrated on Chriſtmaſs Day, taking the Name of Alexander the fourth. He was ſix Years five Months and three Days in the Holy See, and writ in this time many Letters. There are no more than three of them in the laſt Collection of Councils, but there are a great many in Rainaldus, twenty four in the Great Bullary, which are moſt of them for the Confirmation or Settlement of Orders, or for the Eſtabliſhment of the Inquiſition, and the Perſecution of Hereticks; a Conſtitution for the Iſland of Cyprus, which is in the Addition to the eleventh Tome of the Councils; and a hundred and twenty four Letters in favour of the Order of Minor Brothers, which are in Vaddingus. There are ſix Letters more of this Pope to St. Louis in the ſixth Tome of Father Luke Dachery's Spicilegium, in which he declares that the Chappels of the King cannot be interdicted, nor any part of his Eſtates, without a ſpecial Order of the Holy See; and gives leave to the King and Noblemen to put thoſe of the Clergy into Priſon as were guilty of enormous and notorious Crimes; and declares ſuch of the Clergy, as meddle in Merchandiſe or Buſineſs, ſtript of their Privileges. This is confirmed by two Letters of Clement the fourth, which are related in the ſame place.

Alexander the Fourth.

Urban the Fourth.

The Death of Alexander the fourth fell out upon the 24*th* of June in 1261. and was followed by a Vacancy of three Months and three Days, by reaſon there were but nine Cardinals, eight of which that were preſent at the Election could not agree with one another; ſo that at laſt they were forced to bring it to this, that they would look for one out of their own College: They caſt their Eyes ſtraight upon the Patriarch of Jeruſalem, named Simon Pantaleon, a Native of Troies in Champagne, and of a very mean Extraction; but one whoſe Merit had raiſed him by Degrees to this Dignity, having firſt been Canon of Troies, then Archdeacon of Laon and Leige, and then Biſhop of Verdun. He was choſen the 28*th* of Auguſt, gust, in the Year 1261, and taking the Name of Urban the Fourth, was put in Poſſeſſion of the Holy See the 4th of September following.

The History and Writings of the Popes after Innocent, &c.

Urban the Fourth.

This Pope inſtituted the Feaſt of the Holy Sacrament for the Honour of that Holy Myſtery, and in Obedience to the Revelation which he heard many pious Perſons had had concerning it, and particularly St. Juliana of Leige, and for the Satisfaction of many Chriſtians who ardently deſired this Inſtitution. The Letter by which the Pope eſtabliſhed it in the Year 1264. is preſerved in the eleventh Tome of the Councils, and in the Great Bullary, and another Letter to a Religious Recluſe of Leige named Eve. There are in the Bullary too, eight other Letters of this Pope's ſome of which are written in Favour of the Inquiſitors, who, he declares, cannot be excommunicated by the Legates of the Holy See, and to whom he grants ſome other Privileges. There are ſome more of them too in Rainaldus; and Vaddingus has got together thirteen of them relating to his Order. Laſtly, you may find in the laſt Bibliotheca Patrum, a Paraphraſe upon the firſt Pſalm attributed to this Pope, who died at Peruſa the 3d of October in the Year 1264.

Clement the Fourth

Four Months after Guy the Groſs a Frenchman, Cardinal Biſhop of St. Sabina, who took upon him the Name of Clement the Fourth, was elected February the 5th, 1265. The firſt of his Letters is an authentick Proof of his Humility: It is written to a Kinſman of his, Peter the Groſs of St. Giles, whom he tells that he was as much troubled for his being raiſed to be Pope, as others ſeem'd joyful; and that he ought not to be proud upon this, or ſeek hereupon a more advantageous Match for his Siſter: That if he did ſo, he would not ſhow him any kindneſs; but that if he would give her to the Son of that Cavalier to whom he had before deſigned to marry her, he would advance three hundred Tournoiſe Livres: That he did not mean any of his Kindred ſhould fare better for it than if he had ſtill been a ſimple Clergyman: and that he had given notice to one of them not to come from Suza, nor to make any Petitions to him for any one; nor, if any one offered him any Preſents to do it, to take them. He writes all this to him ſecretly, and with a Charge not to ſpeak of it: and that's the Reaſon, he tells him, that he doth not make uſe of a Bull, but of the Fiſherman's Ring, of which the Popes make uſe when they write privately to any of their Friends: which is a plain Proof that this Letter was not the Effect of a vain Oſtentation of Humility, but that they were his real Thoughts. This Letter we have in the Councils with two others, which are Confirmations of the Elections made to the Archbiſhoprick of Saltzburg, and the Biſhoprick of Paſſaw. There are many other of this Pope's Letters in the Annals of Rainaldus and Bzovius, ſixteen of his Bulls in the Great Bullary, which are either the Confirmations of Orders, or Canonizations, or Orders againſt Hereticks, and in Favour of the Inquiſition. Vaddingus has collected thirty four of them which concern his Order. And Father Luke Dachery has given us five which concern the Kings of France, Arragon, Sicily and England, in the ſixth, ſeventh and ninth Tomes of his Spicilegium. This Pope departed this Life October the 29th, 1268.

Gregory the Tenth.

The Diviſions and Intrigues of the Cardinals retarded the Election of a Pope for almoſt three Years. At laſt when they ſaw they could not agree otherwiſe, they agreed to refer it to ſix Cardinals, who choſe on the 1ſt of September 1271, Theobalde Archdeacon of Leige, a Native of Placentia, who was then in Syria with an Army of Croſſes. Their Choice was approved of by all the Cardinals, who wrote to him in very reſpectful Terms. When he had notice of his Election, he parted from Syria, arrived in Italy at the Beginning of January in 1272, and was conſecrated at Rome the 27th of March, having taken the Name of Gregory the Tenth. He called and kept the ſecond General Council of Lyons in the Year 1274. There is the Letter of the Indiction of this Council, and many other Letters of this Pope about the Re-union of the Greeks and Latins, in the Acts of this Council. There is another there too, written to the Biſhop of Leige, who was depoſed in this Council for his Incontinence. There are five more in the Great Bullary, and one againſt the Chriſtians that turned Jews; and ſome which are preſerved by Rainaldus and Vaddingus. This Pope died the 10th of January 1276. 'Twas he that firſt made that Law of ſhutting up the Cardinals after the Death of the Pope, in a Place called the Conclave, and of keeping them there till they had elected a Pope, to oblige them to make a quick Diſpatch with the Election, and to prevent the Holy See's being ſo long vacant as it had been after the Death of his Predeceſſor. This Order was revoked by his Succeſſor Adrian V. and John XXI. but having been renewed by Celeſtin the 5th, and Boniface the 8th, it has ever ſince been obſerved.

Innocent the Fifth

His Succeſſors were not long in the Holy See; the firſt of them was Peter of Tarentaiſe of the Order of Preaching Friars, Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia, who was elected the 21ſt of January the ſame Year, and took the Name of Innocent the 5th. He had ſtudied and been Profeſſor in the Univerſity of Paris, and his Merits hath raiſed him in 1271 to the Archbiſhoprick of Lions, and then to the Cardinalſhip. We have an Abridgment of Theology of his printed at Paris in 1551, and a Commentary upon the four Books of the Maſter of the Sentences, printed at Thoulouze 1562. Trithemius makes mention of a great many Commentaries of his upon the ſacred Writings. He died the 22d of June the ſame Year. And Cardinal Ottobon a Genoueſe, who was choſen into his Place the 12th of July under the Name of Adrian the Fifth, died on the 18th of Auguſt at Viterbo, without Conſecration.

The History and Writings of the Popes after Innocent, &c.

Five and twenty Days after, Peter the Son of Julian a Portugueſe, Cardinal Biſhop of Freſcati, ſucceeded him with the Name of John the 19th, according to us, or according to the common Account John the 21ſt. His Pontificate was of no long Date, for he was killed by the Fall of a Cieling at Viterbo on the 20th of May the next Year. He was well skilled in Phyſick and Philoſophy, and has left us ſome Books in theſe Sciences, and ſome Letters written while he was Pope. There's one of them to the King of England in the 10th Tome of the Councils, and many others mentioned by Rainaldus, and four by Vaddingus.

John the Twenty Firſt. Adrian the Fifth.

Nicholas the Third.

The twenty fifth of November the ſame Year, John Cajetan a Roman, of the Family of the Urſino's was choſen Pope, and named Nicholas the Third, by the Name of the Title of St. Nicolas, of which he was Cardinal. We have a good many of his Letters in Rainaldus, and there are two celebrated ones in the Great Bullary, one againſt the Jews, and the other againſt Hereticks. He made a famous Decretal too, by which he reſerved to the Holy See the Demeſne of all Things that ſhould be granted to the Order of Minor Friars; leaving them only the Uſus fructus, which was repealed by the Extravagante ad Conditorem of John the 22d. Vaddingus relates likewiſe five Letters of this Pope, who died the 22d of Auguſt in 1280.

Martin the Fourth.

The Troubles raiſed by the Intrigues of the Urſins and Hannibands put off the Election of a Pope till the 22d of February the next Year: when Simon of Brie, Cardinal of St. Cecilia, who before had been Treaſurer of the Church of St. Martin of Tours, was elected; and having been conſecrated the 23d of March, took, in Memory of his former Preferment, the Name of Martin the Second, commonly called the Fourth. He gave a Token of his Humility at the Beginning of his Popedom, by ſending back his Brother, who upon Notice of his Preferment was come to Rome to meet him, and giving him but juſt what was neceſſary for his Journey; ſaying, That what he had did not belong to himſelf but the Church, and that he ought not to make uſe of it for the enriching his Kindred. He ſhewed his Acknowledgements to the Church of St. Martin of Tours, by confirming its Privileges, and granted the Order of Minor Friars the power of preaching and confeſſing. Theſe are the Subjects of thoſe two Letters of the Pope which are in the Councils. He condemned Michael Palæologus the Greek Emperor, who had broken the Treaty of Union with the Roman Church, in the Council of Lyons, and the Letter of his Condemnation is in the Bullary. There are other Letters of this Pope's to be ſeen in Rainaldus and Vaddingus. He died the 25th of March in the Year 1285.

Honor. the Fourth

Honorius the Fourth, whoſe Name before was James Sabelli, Cardinal Deacon of the Title of St. Mary of Coſmedin, was choſen in his Place the ſecond of April 1285. and conſecrated the twentieth of May following. He lived but two Years after his Election, in which Time he writ many Letters recorded by Rainaldus, Bzovius and Vaddingus. There are two conſiderable ones in the Bullary, by one of which he condemns a new Order of Mendicants erected under the Name of Apoſtolick, and by the other declares that the Sons and Grandſons of ſuch as have been puniſhed for Hereſy, are not capable of any Living or Eccleſiaſtical Order.

Nicolas the Fourth

After the Death of Honorius the fourth, which happened April the 3d 1287, the Holy See was vacant till the 22d of April 1288. when it was filled by Jerom of Aſcalon, Cardinal of the Title of St. Pudentienna, of the Order of Preaching Friars, who took the Name of Nicholas the Fourth. He made many Statutes in Favour of thoſe of his own Order, and was a great Encourager of learned Men. He wrote Commentaries upon the Holy Scriptures, and upon the Maſter of the Sentences, with many Sermons, Works which we have quite loſt. His Letters, which are very numerous, compoſe three Manuſcript Volumes in the Vatican Library; Rainaldus, Bzovius and Vaddingus afford us a great many of them, and we meet with ſix in the Bullary: the firſt againſt the Jews; the ſecond an Approbation of the third Order of St. Francis; the third a Confirmation of the Declaration of Gregory the Ninth about the Order of Cluny; the fourth the Inſtitution of an Hoſpital; the fifth about the Recovery of the Holy Land; and the laſt a Privilege for the Order of Mercy. He died at Rome the 14th of April in the Year 1292.

Celeſtin the Fifth.

His Death was following by a Vacancy of two Years three Months and ten Days: but at laſt the Cardinals, after not being able for ſo long Time to come to an Agreement, reſolved upon Peter of Mourrhon, an Hermit of Puglia, the Founder of a new Congregation, which took the Name of Celeſtines, from the Name of Celeſtin the Fifth, which was given this Pope. But this good Monk, who accepted of the Dignity with much Unwillingneſs, let himſelf be eaſily perſwaded by Cardinal Benedictus Cajetan to quit it for a quiet Life; ſo that he was but a very little while upon the Holy ly

The History and Writings of the Popes after Innocent, &c.

ly See, having been chosen Pope the 10*th* of July 1294, and having voluntarily resigned the Dignity the 12*th* of December the same Year. He renewed Gregory the Tenth's Constitution of shutting up the Cardinals in a Conclave till they had elected a Pope, to hinder the Holy See's remaining so long vacant as it had done before his Election. He made another Constitution likewise, that Popes might have the Freedom of resigning the Popedom when they pleased, which might as well have been let alone, no Pope since him having followed his Example, as no Pope before him ever set it him. He solemnly gave his Approbation of the Order of Celestines, which is recorded in the Great Ballary. There are some little Pieces attributed to him, which are nothing but Collections of Passages out of the Holy Scripture, the Fathers, the Popes and the Canonists, upon divers Heads; they were printed in his Name, and published by Celestin Telera of Siponto: but there's no more Certainty of these being the Genuine Works of Celestin the Fifth, than there is that the six Letters and Prayers published by the same Author are his; all which have nothing in them worth taking notice of. Benedict Cajetan, who got him to resign, got himself chosen in his Place under the Name of Boniface VIII. We shall have Occasion to speak of this Pope in the next Century.

The History and Writings of the Popes after Innocent, &c.

CHAP. IV.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flourished in the West in the Thirteenth Century.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flourished in the West in the Thirteenth Century.

THE great Number of Authors which wrote in the Thirteenth Century of the Church, seems to promise a great Variety of very diverting Matters. And therefore no doubt it will be a Surprize to find nothing in this Chapter almost but just the Names, the Imployments, and the Time of the greatest Part of the Authors, with a simple Catalogue of their Writings. But if one considers the Nature of the Works, and the Manner of their Composition, he must confess that we have used them as we ought, seeing the Extracts that might have been made of them would have been neither useful nor pleasant: and therefore we shall content our selves in making some general Reflections upon the different Sorts of Subjects which busied the Authors of the Thirteenth Age, and upon the Manner of their writing.

A Judgment upon the Works of the Thirteenth Century.

The most considerable are the Commentaries upon the four Books of Sentences of Peter Lombard Bishop of Paris, whose Work was then such in Request, that it was the only Divinity that was taught or learnt in the Schools. But instead of pursuing his Method, and solving the Questions which he has proposed by Passages out of the Fathers, they make use of nothing almost but Philosophical Principles, and Metaphysical Niceties: they don't think it enough to explain the Text of the Book of the Master o the Sentences, but they must take his Questions, and handle them after a different Manner. So that this cannot so properly be called a Commentary as another Work. They have added many other Questions to those of the Master of the Sentences, which are either inserted in the Commentaries, or are treated of in separate Pieces, which are commonly called Quodlibetick Questions. Some Divines finding themselves too much straitned in the Method of the Master of the Sentences, and being willing to give themselves more Scope, left off following his Model, and made a new one of their own in their Works, to which they commonly gave the Name of A Sum of Theology. There they beat about an infinite Number of Theological or Philosophical Questions, they set out the Reasons on one Side and the other, and most commonly decide the Question by Philosophical Reasonings and Testimonies, making use very often of the Authority of Aristotle, and now and then of that of the Fathers, whose Passages they commonly get upon Trust out of the Master of the Sentences, Gratian, or the ordinary Gloss; so that their Quotations are very often nothing to the Purpose, because they are taken upon the Credit of another body, because they never had Recourse to the Original it self, and because they very much wanted Criticks. The Stile of these Works is ordinarily dry and barbarous, and seldom wants Obscurity.

Their manner of delivering the Word of God to the People had got a tang of this Scholastical Method: the Sermons were full of Divisions, and Distinctions upon Distinctions, and pitiful mean Comparisons; it's very rare to find any Points of Morality explained in their full Extent, set in their true Light, founded upon solid Principles, and enforced with Eloquence: But if they do meddle with them, 'tis only to propose them drily, to explain them after the common rate, and to strengthen them with some Passages of Scripture brought in to prove what their natural sense will not bear.

The Commentaries upon the Holy Scripture are of two sorts; the one called Postilles, are short Notes, for the most part giving Grammatical Explications of the Words, and taking notice of every little Trifle; the other larger, composed of Allegories and mystical Thoughts.

Some of their spiritual Works about Piety, tho' plain, yet are pretty solid; but then again some of them are so mystical that they are not intelligible.

The Authors that wrote about the Rights and Ceremonies of the Church have made it their business to find out, or else to invent some mystical Reasons for them, with which they have stuffed their Works.

The Collections of and Commentaries upon the Decretals of the Popes, took up the time of those that studied the Canon Law. And they have in this Labyrinth of the Laws found work enough for to exercise their Pens, and matter enough to fill great Volumes.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flourished in the West in the Thirteenth Century.

Ancient History, especially that of the Church, lay extreamly neglected in this Age: yet some of its Authors have pretended to give us Abridgments and immethodical Collections of Universal History. Many of them have made particular Chronicles of their own Churches or Monastry, which they filled with things that did not deserve notice: Others have writ the History of the Crusades of their Times, or Relations of the Journeys into Palestine; and these are the most considerable of all the Historians of that time. The Lives of the Saints are rather Panegyricks than Historical Narrations.

I shan't speak of the prodigious multitude of Commentaries upon Aristotle, and the many other Works in Philosophy, in which the greatest Men of this Age very uselessly spent their Time and Pains: because, besides that these Matters do not belong to my Business, no body now makes any Account of these Books, which are no more look'd after or made use of, except it be to make the Shelves of great Libraries groan again under the weight of their numerous Volumes.

Joachim.

Joachim, a Native of Calabria, a Monk of the Order of Citeaux in the Monastry of San Bucchino, in the Diocess of Anglone, now in Lucania, afterwards Abbot of Curiaco in Calabria, and at last Abbot of Flora in his own Country, the Founder and Institutor of that Congregation, flourished from the Year 1181, to the Year 1200, which some will have to be that of his Death; but it is more probable that he lived some Years in the Thirteenth Century. He had while he lived the Reputation of Sanctity, and likewise of having the Gift of Prophecy. He composed some mystical Commentaries upon the Holy Scriptures, in which he has inserted divers Prophecies of Things which he thought must happen in that State in which he saw the Church in his Time. Some of his Predictions chanced to prove true, and others false, as it generally happens to that Sort of Prognosticators; but they always gave him Occasion of reprehending the Irregularities of the Age he lived in with more Freedom, and of representing the Consequences of them. His Works which were printed at Venice in 1519, are these.

The Harmony of the Old and New Testament, in three Books: A Work which he undertook by Order of the Popes Lucius the Third, and Urban the Third, and which he compleated under the Pontificate of Clement the Third, who approved his Work: A Commentary upon the Prophet Jeremiah: A Commentary upon Isaiah: Commentaries upon some Chapters of the Prophets Nahum, Habukkuk, Zechariah and Malachi: A Commentary upon the Revelation of St. John: The Psalter for ten Strings, in which he treats of the Trinity, and of the Distinction of the three Divine Persons. Trithemius makes mention of the following ones too; A Commentary upon the Prophet Daniel: Another Commentary upon the Gospel of St. John: A Book dedicated to the Emperor Henry VI. A Treatise of the seven Seals: Prophecies about fifteen Popes: A Prediction concerning the Times to come: Some Treatises against the Jews; but he omits his Work against the Master of the Sentences.

In this last Treatise the Abbot Joachim oppugns that which the Master of the Sentences had asserted in his fifth Distinction, in the first Book: That the Divine Essence is in such sort common to the Three Persons, that it is neither begotten, nor begetting, nor proceeding; so that one cannot say that the Father begot the Essence, nor that the Essence begot the Son, &c. 'Tis his Opinion that, admitting this Principle, we must grant four Things in God; namely, the Three Persons, and the Essence distinct from them: and that is the Reason he engages on this Side to maintain that there is nothing in the Deity which is Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, although he agrees that the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, are of one and the same Essence, Substance and Nature; so that one may very well say that the Three Persons are the same Essence, but not that the ſame Eſſence is the Three Perſons. He ſeems too to grant that this Eſſence is a real and proper Unity, but to conſider it as only a Collective and Metaphorical Unity; becauſe he makes Uſe of ſuch Paſſages of Scripture to explain it as the Word Unity is taken in this Senſe in; as where it is written that all Believers have but one Heart, that they are but one Body, that they are but one, &c. Yet there's no reaſon hereupon to believe that this Abbot was an Arian; but it is more probable that all his Error conſiſted in his way of expreſſing himſelf: but as for the reſt, it is very hard to know or gueſs what his real Sentiments of the Thing were, and perhaps it was more than he knew himſelf. However it was, the matter remain'd undecided from the Pontificate of Alexander III. until that of Innocent III. who gave it for the Maſter of the Sentences againſt Abbot Joachim in the fourth General Lateran Council, but without any Diſgrace to the Memory of that Abbot, who ſubmitted his Doctrine to the Judgment of the Holy See, and declared he would never have any other Sentiments than thoſe of the Church of Rome; without which this might have done no ſmall Hurt to the Abbot and Order of Flora, of which he was the Inſtitutor. Upon this it was that Honorius III. having heard that under colour of this Condemnation the Abbot and Religious of this Monaſtry were taxed with Hereſy, he writes to a Biſhop of Lucania, who both did it himſelf, and allowed it in his Dioceſans likewiſe, forbidding him either to do or ſuffer it for the future.

As for the Gift of Prophecy which is commonly attributed to the Abbot Joachim, William of Paris, St. Thomas Aquinas, and Trithemius, take notice that it was not really the Spirit of Prophecy, but that being a Man of deep Penetration, and great Knowledge, he would by Conjectures foretel Things to come, though he was often enough out in his Predictions. Trithemius mentions the Predictions of this Abbot about fifteen Popes; thoſe which have been printed ſo many Times are the ſame which Trithemius ſaw. An Explication of a Book of St. Cyril about the great Tribulations is aſcribed to him, but that is a ſuppoſititious Piece. We have none of the other Prophecies of this Abbot that Trithemius ſpeaks of. Roger of Hoveden relates, that when Richard King of England was in Sicily in 1190, he would have entertained this Abbot Joachim, who told him a great many Predictions, to which this Author gives the name of Fables.

John Beletha. John Beletha, Doctor of Paris, is placed by Henry de Gand and Trithemius, among the Authors which flouriſhed at the beginning of this Age. He has left us a Treatiſe of Divine Offices, printed at Antwerp in 1553, and in 1570, at Dilingben in 1572, at Lions in 1574, and at many other places. Trithemius aſſures that he was likewiſe the Author of ſome Sermons.

Peter Chanter. Peter Chanter of the Church of Paris, who flouriſhed and taught about the ſame time in the Univerſity of Paris, has compoſed a Book, called, The Word abridged: A Work of great Renown among the Authors of the next Centuries, of which a part which was written againſt the Proprietary Monks hath been printed. He likewiſe made another Book, intituled, A Grammar for Divines, very neceſſary for the underſtanding of the Holy Scriptures: He compoſed a Treatiſe of Diſtinctions: A Piece about ſome Miracles: Three Books of Sacraments: and Sermons, of which Trithemius makes mention. In Libraries are to be ſeen ſome Gloſſes of his upon the Books of the Bible, and a Collection of Caſes of Conſcience.

Gilbert Martin. Guibert or Gilbert, whoſe Sirname was Martin, taken by him upon the Account of a particular Reſpect he had for that Saint, and becauſe he had lived ſome while in the Monaſtry of St. Martin of Tours, was Monk of Gemblours, whence he was called to the Abby of St. Florin, and afterwards choſen Abbot of Gemblours in the Year 1194. But ten Years after he reſigned this Abby, and retired into the Monaſtry of Villiers, from whence he took a Journey to Tours, and at laſt returned to die at Gemblours very old, after having been Prieſt 63 Years. He has written many pious Letters to divers Perſons: A Hiſtory in Verſe of the Life and Miracles of St. Martin, dedicated to Philip Archbiſhop of Cologn: Eleven Letters to the ſame Archbiſhop, and others to Herveus Abbot of Marmouſtier, and to the Religious of that Monaſtry; and ſome others to St. Hildegardus and other Perſons. All theſe Letters have never been printed; but Father Mabillon who had the ſight of them in Manuſcript, has given us an Extract of them in his ſecond Tome of Analecta, with a Letter of Hervardus Archdeacon of Liege to a Canon of Laon, deſiring him, in Guibert's name, to make a Poem in Honour of St. Martin, as he had in Honour of St. Servatus.

Hervardus.

William. One of the firſt Schoolmen of the Thirteenth Century, is William of Segnelay, Biſhop of Auxerre, who had been Profeſſor of the Univerſity of Paris, and was tranſlated by Honorius III. to the Biſhoprick of Paris. He died at St. Cloud 23d of November 1223, and was interred in the Abby of Pontigny. He compoſed a Sum of Theology, and a Work about Divine Offices. The laſt hath not yet ſeen the light: The Sum of Theology has been printed at Paris in 1500, and once ſince.

Robert. Robert of Corceon an Engliſhman, who was made Cardinal by Innocent the Third, flouriſhed about the Beginning of this Century, and held a Council in Quality of a Legate in 1212 at Paris: He was one of the neateſt Divines of his time, and compoſed a Sum of Theology, which may be ſeen in Manuſcript in the Library of St. Victor of Paris, and is quoted by Monſieur De Launoy, and other Authors.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flouriſhed in the Weſt in the Thirteenth Century.

Alanus. Alanus of Liſle in Flanders, flouriſhed in the Univerſity of Paris, where for a long time he taught Divinity from the Beginning of his Age, till towards the End. He was called the Univerſal Doctor, becauſe he was equally excellent in Divinity, Philoſophy and Poetry. He wrote many Works both in Proſe and in Verſe: thoſe that are printed are, A Commentary upon the Song of Songs to the Praiſe of the Virgin, printed at Paris in 1540: A Sum of the Art of Preaching: A Penitential with this Title, The Corrector: A Work upon the Parables, which has been printed a great many Times: A Book of Sentences or memorable Sayings: A Work in Verſe about an honeſt and perfect Man in all Sorts of Virtue, Intituled, Anticlodianus, printed at Baſil in 1536, and at Antwerp in 1621: A Piece with this Title, The Complaint of Nature againſt the Vice of Sodomy: Two Books againſt the Albigenſes and Vaudois: Eleven Sermons: Six Books of the Wings of the Cherubims, falſly aſcribed to St. Bonaventure: Two Proſes, one upon the Incarnation, and the other upon the weakneſs of Human Nature. All theſe Works were collected by Charles Viſch, and printed at Antwerp in 1653, to which in 1656 he added two more Books of this ſame Author againſt the Albigenſes, Vaudois, Jews and Pagans. There's a Manuſcript Work of this Author's too, which is a Sum of Moral Theology, intituled, After how many Manners, becauſe he there diſcourſes in a Alphabetical Order, in how many Manners Things may be taken well or ill. This is plainly that Work which Trithemius calls the Sum of Virtues and Vices. Trithemius mentions likewiſe a Treatiſe upon the Sentences: A Treatiſe called, The Eye of the Scripture: A Treatiſe of Learning: Two Commentaries upon the five Books of Moſes; About Myſtical Equivoques; Of the Nature of Animals: A Book of Letters and Commentaries upon many Books of the Holy Scripture, all compoſed by Alanus. You muſt take care not to confound this with the Alanus Biſhop of Auxerre who lived in the Century before, and there is Reaſon to doubt whether this were ever a Citeaux Monk as the former was. The Commentary upon the Prophecies of Merlin, and the Treatiſe of the Philoſophers Stone, the former printed at Frankfort 1608, the latter at Leyden 1600, under the Name of Alanus, are two forged Pieces.

Simon. Simon a Prieſt of Tournay taught Divinity too about the Beginning of this Age with no ſmall Reputation in the Schools of Paris. Henry de Gand, and Trithemius take Notice that tying himſelf up to the Doctrine of Ariſtotle, he has fallen into ſome Errors: We have none of his Works printed, but they may be found in Manuſcript in Libraries. Theſe are the moſt conſiderable of them: A Theological Sum upon the Sentences: Divers Queſtions: An Expoſition of the Athanaſian Creed: A Commentary upon Boethius's Book of the Trinity, and of Inſtitutions upon the Holy Scripture. The Engliſh claim this Author for their Countryman, and accordingly a great many of his Works are to be found in England.

Peter. Peter of Corbeil, Doctor in Divinity of the Faculty of Paris, was Profeſſor there a great while with great Reputation. He had for his Scholar Lotharius, Son of the Earl of Signi, afterwards Pope with the Name of Innocent III. who in one of his Letters counts it an Honour to have ſtudied under him, and in Acknowledgment gets him the Archdeaconry of York, and ſome Time after the Biſhoprick of Cambray, and at laſt the Archbiſhop of Sens, which he entred upon in the Year 1200. He died the third of June in 1222. His Sum of Theology is not printed, whereof the late Monſieur De Launoy had a Manuſcript. This Archbiſhop had a great Name in his Time. He wrote a Commentary upon the Epiſtles of St. Paul, and upon many other Books of the Holy Scripture; with Sermons and divers Treatiſes.

Abſalom. Abſalom a Regular Canon of St. Victor of Paris, and afterwards Abbot of Spinkerbac in the Dioceſs of Treves, flouriſhed at the Beginning of this Century. He has left us fifty Sermons upon the Feaſts of the Year, printed at Cologn in 1554, by the Care of Daniel of Silinga Abbot of Spinkerbac.

Wernerus. Wernerus Abbot of St. Blaize in the dark-Foreſt of the Dioceſs of Conſtance, flouriſhed about the Year 1210. He made a Collection of Sermons compoſed of divers Paſſages of the Fathers, which are called by the Name of Poſtillar Sermons: they were printed at Baſil in 1549.

Tagenon. Tagenon Dean of Pavia, who flouriſhed about the Beginning of this Age, has wrote a Hiſtory of the Expedition of the Emperor Frederick Barbaroſſa in Paleſtine, publiſhed by Freherus in his Collection of the German Hiſtorians.

Anamelf. Hiſtorian. There's an Anonymous Hiſtorian too of the ſame Time in the fifth Tome of the Antiquities of Caniſius, who wrote upon the ſame Subject.

Walter. William, and by Richard. The Expedition of Richard King of England in Paleſtine, was wrote by Walter Biſhop of Lincoln, and afterwards Archbiſhop of Rouen; by William the Pilgrim an Engliſhman and by Richard Canon of London, who accompanied him in the Voyage.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flourished in the West in the Thirteenth Century.

Albert Patriarch of Jerusalem, Resident at Acre, after the taking of that City by the Saracens, made about the Beginning of this Century an Order for the Carmelites of Syria, published by the Bollandists in the Month of April.

Albert. Dodechin, Andreas Sylvius.

Dodechin a German Priest of the Church of Logenstein, and afterwards Abbot of St. Disibode, flourished about the Year 1200. He wrote at the Desire of Conon Abbot of St. Disibode, a Relation of the Voyage which he had made into the Holy Land, and continued on the Chronicle of Marianus Scotus to the Year 1200.

Andreas Sylvius Monk, and at last Abbot of Marchiennes in the Diocess of Tournay, composed about the Year 1200, at the Desire of Peter Bishop of Arras, a short History of the Kings of France of the Race of the Merovingians, printed at Douay in 1633. He likewise wrote two Books of Miracles of St. Richruda, published by the Continuers of Bollandus to the 12*th* of May.

Baldwin.

Baldwin Earl of Flanders, and Emperor of Constantinople, has writ a long circular Letter, being a Relation of the taking of Constantinople by the Latins in 1204; wherein he takes Care to forget nothing that may render the Greeks odious. It is to be met with in the Annals of Rainaldus, and in a Collection of some Pieces by Aubert de la Mire.

Geoffrey.

Geoffrey Lord of Villehardwin near Troyes in Champagne, composed in French the History of the taking of Constantinople by the Latins, where he himself assisted: It is written in an old Stile, but after a noble and impartial Manner.

Gonthier.

Gonthier a Monk in the Monastery of Paris in the Diocess of Basil, who flourished about the Beginning of this Century, has left us the History of the taking of Constantinople by the Latins, the Circumstances of which he had from Abbot Martin an Eye-witness. It was published by Canisius in the first Tome of his Antiquities.

Arnold.

Arnold Provost of the Church of Hildesheim, and afterwards Abbot of Lubeck, flourished in the Reigns of the Emperors Philip and Otho IV. He is the Author of the Continuation of the Chronicle of the Sclavonians made by Helmoldus from the Year 1171, to the Year 1209. This Work was printed at Lubeck in 1659, larger than in the first Edition of Helmoldus at Frankfort in 1556, which contains only the nine first Chapters. Yet this wants the four last Chapters, which have been published by Meibomius with the Opuscula Historica, and printed at Helmstadt in 1660. Vossius's Remarks upon this Author is, that he is to be credited in what relates to the History of the Sclavonians, but not in what he has written of the Histories of Italy, Sicily, and Greece.

Gervais.

Gervais, Sirnamed of Tilbury, from the Name of the Town where he was born, which is in England upon the Thames, of the Family of Henry II. King of England, and Great Marshal of the Kingdom of Arles, flourished much about the Year 1210, and wrote divers Historical Works: among others, An Universal History of the Kingdoms of the West with the Title of Otia Imperialia: An History of England, and some others which are kept up in Libraries, out of which there's no great Likelihood of their quickly being set free.

Walter Mapes.

Walter Mapes an Englishman, distinguished himself by his Wit under Henry II. John, and Richard Kings of England. Though he was Canon of Salisbury, Chanter of Lincoln, and afterwards Archdeacon of Oxford; yet he could not forbear making Satyrical Verses upon the Popes, Cardinals, and other Ecclesiasticks, wherein he very freely censures their Irregularities. You may see these Poetical Pieces themselves in the first Tome of the memorable Lessons of Vossius, and a Catalogue of them here; The Revelation of Priest Golias: Four Pieces against disorderly Ecclesiasticks: and one against the Irregularities of the Court of Rome.

Wilbrandus.

Wilbrandus of Oldenburg, Canon of Hildesheim, in the Year 1211, made a Voyage into the Holy Land, whereof he has given us a Relation, a Part of which was published by Allatius in his Collection of Pieces, printed at Cologn in 1653. Allatius commends this Author for a learned and curious Man; his Stile is close and Historical, but he does not make use of many barbarous Words.

Robert and Hugh

Robert a Regular Canon of the Order of Premontre in the Monastery of St. Marianus of Auxerre, composed a Chronology from the Beginning of the World to the Year 1212, the Time of his Death. It was published by Nicholaus Camuzatus Canon of Tours, and printed at Troies in 1608, with a Continuation of it by Hugh Canon Regular of the same Monastery.

Lambert.

Lambert of Liege a Benedictine Monk of St Laurence of Duitz, is thought most probably to have flourished at the Beginning of this Age. He wrote the Life of Herbert Archbishop of Cologn; some Hymns, and some Epigrams.

A nameless Author.

About the same Time the Life of St. William Abbot of Roschild, who died in 1202, was wrote by an Anonymous Author.

Peter

Peter a Monk of the Valleys of Cernay, of the Order of Citeaux in the Diocess of Paris, accompanied his Abbot Guy, afterwards Bishop of Carcassonne, in his Voyage to Languedock to encounter the Albigenses, he being one of the 12 Abbots appointed by Innocent III. for this purpose. Peter by the Order of Innocent III. has wrote a History of the Albigenses, printed at Troies in 1615, and in the Library of Citeaux, published by Father Tissier. We shall have occasion to talk of him when we come to the History of the Albigenses

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flourished in the West in the Thirteenth Century.

About the same Time William of Puilaurent wrote a Chronicle of the Heresy of the Albigenses, printed at Thoulouse in 1622, and among Duchesne's French Historians.

William. John of Oxford.

John of Oxford, Dean of Salisbury, flourished about the Beginning of this Century, and wrote a History of England, and a Relation of his Voyage into Sicily.

John of Fordeham

About the same Time with him lived John Abbot of Fordeham, Confessor to John King of England. He wrote the Life of St. Wolfrick, the Actions of King John, and a Chronicle of Scotland.

Joceline of Brakelonde.

About the Year 1214, Joceline Brakelonde an English Monk of the Monastery of Usk, composed a Chronicle of his Monastery; a Treatise of the Election of Hugh, and the Life of St. Robert, Martyr.

John Gray

John Gray Bishop of Norwich much about the same Time wrote a Chronicle, as did Adam of Barking.

Hugh White.

Hugh White, a Benedictine Monk of Peterborough, has wrote a History of his own Monastery, and of the Foundation of the Church of Mercy.

Prepositivus.

Prepositivus a famous Divine of Paris, flourished about the Year 1225. He composed a Sum of Scholastical Divinity, which has not yet been printed, but is very common in Manuscript in Libraries. St. Thomas sometimes quotes it in his Sum.

Cesaire.

Cesaire Monk of the Order of Citeaux in the Monastery of Heisterback, into which he was entred in 1199, and was afterwards made Prior of that of Villiers in Brabant, composed a great Work in 12 Books, Dialogue-wise, in imitation of St. Gregory; containing an Account of the Miracles and Visions that happened in his Time, particularly in Germany. He assures us in the Preface that none of it is his own Invention, but all he wrote he had from others. But yet he is not to be excus'd for his too easily crediting those who did not deserve it, and upon their Relation heaping together as he has done in this Work a great many idle and forged Stories. He likewise composed in 1226, three Books of the Life and Passion of St. Engelbert Archbishop of Cologn: and Homilies upon the Sundays and Holidays of the whole Year. These Works have been printed, viz. His History of Miracles at Cologn in 1591, and in Father Tissier's first Tome of the Writers of the Order of Citeaux. The Life of St. Engelbert in the Month November of Surius, and at Cologn in 1633, with the Notes of Gelenius; and the Homilies published by Andrew Coppenstein, with the Title of A Collection of Moral Discourses, printed at Cologn in 1615. He also was the Author of other Sermons and other Works, whereof there is a Catalogue in a Letter of his which Andrew Coppenstein has published at the Beginning of the Collection.

Stephen of Langton.

Stephen of Langton, tho' an Englishman, after having gone through the Course of his Studies at Paris, was chosen Chancellor of that University, and Canon of [illegible] where he for a good while professed Divinity, explaining [illegible] Scripture with no small Reputation. He was afterwards made Dean of Rheims, and at last sent for to Rome by Innocent III. who made him Cardinal. The Archbishoprick of Canterbury falling, he was chosen by some of the Canons, and consecrated by the Pope at Viterbo the 17*th* of June in 1206; but John King of England would not acknowledge him, as not having been chosen by the best and wisest part of the Chapter, nor suffer him to enter into Possession of the Church. Stephen straight has Recourse to Ecclesiastical Censures, and interdicts the Kingdom of England: The King did not think himself obliged to submit to the Interdict; but at last the poor Condition of his Affairs having forced him to yield to the Pope, he was likewise obliged to acknowlege Stephen for Archbishop. This Prelate was not long faithful to him, but took part with Lewis Son of Philip King of France, and remain'd his Friend till the Death of John, after which he found a way to get himself for a Sum of Mony discharged from the the Crime of Rebellion. He died the 9*th* of July 1228, in his House in the Plain of Slindan, in the County of Sussex.

There are in the Libraries of England and other Places, a great Number of Manuscript Commentaries of this Author upon the Holy Scripture, but there are not any of them printed: We have only his History of the Translation of the Body of St Thomas at the End of that Archbishop's Letters, printed at Brussels in 1682. The letter which he wrote to King John, and that Prince's Answer, in the third Tome of Father Dachery's Spicilegium; and eighty eight Orders made in the Council which he held at Oxford in 1222, of which we shall have Occasion to speak.

Alexander Neckham.

Alexander Neckham, an Engliſhman, Native of Hertford, after having ſtudied in England, perfected himſelf in the Academies of France and Italy, and returning into his own Country, was made a Regular Canon of St. Auſtin at Exeter, and afterwards Abbot of the Monaſtery in that City in 1215. and died 1227. He is the Author of divers Works which have not yet ſeen the Light, lying buried in the Obſcurity of ſome Engliſh Libraries; among others, A Commentary upon the four Goſpels: An Expoſition of Eccleſiaſtes: A Commentary upon the Song of Songs: The Praiſes of the Divine Wiſdom: A Treatiſe of the Nature of things: The Clearing of a Library, which contains an Explanation of many Places of the Holy Scripture.

Helinand.

Helinand a Monk of the Abby of Froimont, of the Order of Citeaux in the Dioceſs of Beauvais, flouriſhed about the Beginning of this Century, and died in 1227. He compoſed a Chronological Hiſtory from the Beginning of the World, to the Year 1204. the four laſt Books of which were publiſhed by Father Tiſſier in the 8*th* Tome of his Library of the Writers of the Order of Citeaux, with ſome Sermons, and a Letter to Walter an Apoſtate Monk, about the Recovery of a Man fallen into that Condition. He has likewiſe written the Martyrdom of St. Gereon, and his Companions related by Surius, in the tenth of October. The Verſes upon Death, publiſhed by Loiſel, are aſcribed to him. In the Library of Longpont there's a Manuſcript Treatiſe of this Author's upon the Apocalypſe, and in other Libraries a Treatiſe in Praiſe of a Monaſtical Life, and another of the Government of Princes. Trithemius and others ſpeak well of this Author; but for all that there is more of Labour in his Hiſtory than of Judgment: For 'tis nothing but a Collection from other Authors made without any Diſcretion. His other Works are but little worth.

Conrade.

About the ſame time flouriſhed Conrade of Litchtenau Abbot of Urſpurg in the Dioceſs of Augsburg, who compoſed a Chronicle from Belus King of Aſſyria, to the Year 1229. taken from divers Authors: It contains many remarkable things about the Hiſtory of Germany in his time, and the foregoing Centuries. He was made Abbot of Urſpurg in 1215. and died in 1240.

St. Francis.

St. Francis born in the Year 1182, at Aſſiſi, Founder of the Order of Minor Friars, or Minims, died in 1226. He not only by his Example taught us Humility, Patience, Submiſſion and Freedom from the Cares of the World, but likewiſe by his Writings which are the Picture of his Vertues. Here's a Catalogue of thoſe that were publiſhed under the Name of this Saint by Father de la Haye, and printed at Paris in 1641. with the Works of St. Antony of Padua: Sixteen Letters, Advice to thoſe of his Order, containing twenty ſeven Chapters: An Exhortation to Humility, Obedience and Patience; A Treatiſe of the Vertues of the Virgin, and of every Soul; A little Piece of true and perfect Joy: An Explanation of the Lord's Prayer: The Praiſe of the Lord God Moſt High, eleven Prayers: His Will: Two Orders for his Religious: A Rule for the Monaſteries: The Statute of the third Order: Twenty eight Conferences: The Office of the Paſſion: Three Songs upon the Love of God; of Apothegems; of familiar Diſcourſes; of Parables and Examples; of Benedictions; of Oracles and common Sentences: There are likewiſe ſeven Sermons, giving the Reaſons for the eſtabliſhing of this Order of Minor Brothers, and a little Treatiſe of the ten Perfections of a true Religious, and of a real Chriſtian.

St. Antony.

St. Antony, Sirnamed of Padua, becauſe he died in 1231, in that City, was born at Lisbon in Portugal. After having profeſſed Divinity at Thoulouſe, Bologn, and Padua, he became St. Francis's Diſciple, and entred into his Order. He applied himſelf particularly to Preaching, and was in his Time accounted a very neat Preacher, tho' his Sermons ſeem to us now very plain and empty. They have been printed at Paris in 1521, at Venice in 1575. and ſince at Paris again in 1641. by the Care of Father de la Haye, who has alſo preſented us with a myſtical Expoſition of this Author upon the Holy Scriptures, and five Books of moral Concordances upon the Bible: And laſtly, Father Pagi has added a Supplement of ſome Sermons upon the Saints and other Matters, which he got printed at Avignon in 1684.

Ricerus.

Ricerus an Italian of the Marquiſate of Ancona, one of the Companions of St. Francis of Aſſiſi, has wrote a little Treatiſe to teach the Means of coming eaſily to the Knowledge of the Truth. It was printed at Louvain in 1554.

Roderick Xamine.

Roderick Ximines of Navarre was raiſed in 1208. to the Archbiſhoprick of Toledo. The next Year he perſwaded Alphonſus King of Arragon, to eſtabliſh the Academy of Palenza, which in 1239 was tranſlated to Salamanca. He went in 1215 to Rome, where he made a fine Diſcourſe in the Council of the Lateran. He died in 1245. He wrote nine Books of the Hiſtory of Spain, from the coming of Hercules into that Country, to the Year 1243, publiſhed by Father Andrew Scot in the ſecond Part of his Hiſpania Illuſtris: A Hiſtory of the Oſtrogoths from the Year 453, to 555: A Hiſtory of the Huns and Vandals to the ſame time: The Hiſtory of the Arabians from 570, to 1150. A Hiſtory of the Romans from Janus to the Year 708, which are to be found in the Place above mentioned. Juſtus Lipſius gives him the Character of a good Author for his time. His Tomb is in a Monaſtery of the Order of Citeaux in Arragon, call'd Horta, with this Inſcription: Mater Navarra, Nutrix Caſtella, Schola Pariſius, Sedes Toletum, Hortus Manſolæum, Requies Cœlum.

Henry. Conrade. Eckerard.

Henry Earl of Kalwa Abbot of Richenou, wrote about the Year 1220, the Life of St. Pirminus firſt Abbot of that Monaſtery, and afterwards Biſhop of Meaux or Metz.

About the ſame Year Conrade Prior of Schur in Bavaria, wrote the Hiſtory of his Monaſtery, and the Lives of his Abbots.

Eckerard Dean of St. Gall, wrote about the ſame time the Life of St. Notgerus of Begue, which is to be ſeen in the ſixth Tome of the Antiquities of Caniſius.

William.

William Monk of St. Denis in France, is put by Trithemius among the Authors that flouriſhed under the Reign of Frederick II. about the Year 1220. He aſcribes to him three Books of Hiſtory, and many Letters.

Rigord and William.

Rigord Phyſician and Hiſtoriographer of Philip Auguſtus King of France, compoſed the Hiſtory of that Prince under the Reign of Lewis VIII. his Son, to whom it is dedicated: It was printed at Francfort in the Year 1596. with the Philppid of William the Britain, which is likewiſe the Life of Philip Auguſtus in Verſe, and the Hiſtory of St Lewis and Philip the Hardy, by William of Nangis, a Monk of St Dennis, who flouriſhed about the Beginning of the next Century.

William.

Fabian Hugelin.

Fabian Hugelin of the Order of Minor Brothers, wrote about the Year 1230, the Life of St. Francis and his Companions, printed at Cologn in 1623.

Conrade.

Conrade Abbot of Everback of the Order of Citeaux, wrote a Treatiſe of the Origin of that Order, divided into ſix Books, publiſhed by Father Tiſſier, in the firſt Tome of his Library of the Writers of the Order of Citeaux. It is thought this Author wrote about the Year 1230.

John Gall.

John Gall Abbot of Fontenelle hath left us the Life of St. Vulfran Archbiſhop of Sens, related by Surius in the 20*th* of March. He flouriſhed about the Year 1230.

Albert.

Albert Prior of the Monaſtery of Mont des Vignes at Pavia, wrote about the Year 1230. the Lives of St. Beatrix, St. Aldegonda, and St. Amandus.

Two Anonymous Writers.

About the ſame time two Anonymous Authors wrote, on the Life of the bleſſed Joſeph Herman of the Order of Premontre, recorded by Surius in the 7*th* of April; and the other that of St. Antony of Padua, recorded by the ſame Surius in the 13*th* of June.

Maurice.

In the ſecond Tome of Father Luke Dachery's Spicilegium, there are five Letters of Maurice Archbiſhop of Rouen, the three laſt of which are the Interdict which he pronounced againſt his Dioceſs, becauſe King St. Lewis had ſeized upon the Revenues of his Archbiſhoprick. It is remarkable that he interdicts all Chappels and Churches which the King had in his Dioceſs, except that where the King and Queen ſhould aſſiſt in Perſon. This Archbiſhop died the next Year.

William.

William Abbot of Andres in the Dioceſs of Teroüane, wrote a Chronicle of his Monaſtery from the Year 1082, to the Year 1234. which may be ſeen in the ninth Tome of Father Luke Dachery's Spicilegium.

John Algrin.

John Algrin of Abbeville, a Pariſian Divine, Chanter of Abbeville, and Dean of Amiens, was made Archbiſhop of Beſanſon in 1225. and nominated Cardinal Biſhop by the Title of St. Sabina in 1227, by Gregory the ninth, who had been before acquainted with him in the Univerſity of Paris, and had ſent him into Spain to preach the Cruſade, and afterwards to the Emperor Frederick II. to treat of a Peace with him. He died in 1236. and had while he lived the Reputation of a good Preacher, and made Sermons upon the Sundays and Holidays of the Year, in which, after he has in a few Words explained the Meaning of the Text, he makes a long Diſcourſe full of ſuch a vaſt Quantity of Scripture, that one can ſcarce imagine how he could collect it all or get it by Heart. This is what Henry of Gand, and Trithemius ſay of him. They may be met with in Libraries, but no Body has thought them worth publiſhing. They have printed nothing but his Notes upon the Song of Songs, at Paris in 1521, with the Commentary of St. Thomas of Citeaux upon the ſame.

Jordain.

Jordain, born at Borterge in Saxony, in the Dioceſs of Mentz, entred himſelf into the Order of Preaching Brothers (or Jacobines) in the Year 1220, and ſucceeded St. Dominick in the Generalate of his Order in 1222. He compoſed a Hiſtory of the Beginning of this Order of Preachers: Some Letters of Advice to his Religious; and many Sermons. The firſt of theſe Works hath been printed at Rome with the Notes of Maffeus, and Bzovius hath given us the Circular Letter which he wrote upon the Tranſlation of the Body of St. Dominick. You muſt take Care not to confound him with another Jordain, of Saxony too, ſirnamed, of Quedelimbourg, a Hermit of St. Auſtin, of whom we ſhall ſpeak hereafter. To the former of theſe is aſcribed likewiſe a Treatiſe intituled, The Crown of the Virgin Mary: But there is no Likelihood that that belongs to either of theſe Jordains.

Walter

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flourished in the West in the Thirteenth Century.

Walter Cornu Son of Simon Cornu, Lord of Ville-Neuve near Montereau-faut-Tonne, Dean of the Church of Paris, and made Archbishop of Sens in 1223. was chosen by Saint Louis with Bernard Bishop of Annecy, to go in the Year 1239. to receive the Crown of Thorns of our Lord, which he had recovered out of the Hands of the Venetians, to whom it had been engaged by Baldwin II. Emperor of Constantinople. He hath wrote the Relation of this History, printed among Duchesnes's French Historians.

Walter Cornu.

The same History was likewise written by Gerard a Monk of St. Quintin of Lisle, who also composed the Life and Office of St. Elizabeth of Thuringen. Henry of Gand speaks of this Author.

Gerard.

Hugh, a Regular Canon of the Order of Premontre in the Abby of Floreff in the Dioceſs of Namur wrote about the Year 1230. by order of his Abbot, the Life of St. Ivetta, a Widow and Recluse of Huy, that died in 1227. published by Bollandus in the 13*th* of January, and those of St. Ida of Nivelle, and of St. Ida of Leurve, two Nuns of a Monastery of the Order of Citeaux in Brabant.

Hugh.

Conrade.

Conrade of Marpurg a Religious, a German of the Order of Preaching Friars. wrote about the Year 1230. a History of the Life and Miracles of St. Elizabeth Princess of Thuringen, whose Confessor he had been, dedicated to Pope Gregory IX. published by Allatius in his Collection of pieces, printed at Cologn in 1653.

Philip.

Philip of Greve, Professor and Chancellor of the University of Paris, flourished about the Year 1230. He composed 300 Sermons upon the Psalms of David, which were printed at Paris in 1523, and at Bresse in 1600. They were mightily lookt upon in their time, and the Preachers made a common Use of them to that degree, that there was a Sum made out of them which is in Manuscript in Monsieur Colbert's Library: In the Libraries of England are likewise to be seen two Commentaries of this Author, one upon Job, and the other upon the Gospels.

Thomas.

Thomas de Celano, of the Order of Minor Friars, composed about the Year 1235, a Book of the Life and Miracles of St. Francis, approved by Gregory IX.

James.

We have already spoken in the foregoing Century of James of Vitry, and his History of the East and West: All that we are to observe now is, that besides this Work, and the two Letters there mentioned, he composed Sermons upon all the Epistles and Gospels of the Year, upon the Feasts, and upon the different Estates of Men, part of which were printed at Antwerp in 1575. and that he likewise wrote the Life of St. Mary of Oignies related by Surius in the twenty third of June.

Luke.

Luke Deacon of the Church of Tuy in Spain, after having travelled into Italy, Greece, and Palestine, and gained the Friendship of Cardinal Hugolin, afterwards Pope, under the Name of Gregory IX. was at last made Bishop of that Church. He composed three Books of Controversies against the Albigenses, printed at Ingolstadt in 1612. and in the last Bibliotheca Patrum; and a History of Spain from the Beginning of the World to the Year 1274. of the Spanish Æra, that is according to our account 1236. into which he inserts the Chronicle of St. Isidorus, which he continues down to his time, and makes divers Additions to and Alterations in. Lastly, he is the Author of St. Isidore's Life, related in Bollandus in the 4*th* of April, and in the second Benedictine Age of Father Mabillon. He was no more than Deacon when he wrote his Chronicle, which plainly shews he was not made Bishop till after 1236. but how long he remained so, or when he died we cannot tell. We shall have occasion to speak of this Author's Works against the Albigenses, when we treat of those Hereticks.

Godfrey.

Godfrey Monk of St. Pantaleon of Cologn, composed an Historical Chronicle from the Year 1162. to the Year 1237. which is in the Collection of the German Writers by Frebenius.

St. Edmond.

Edmond Rich born at Abington in England, after having gone through his Studies at Oxford, gave himself wholly to Divinity and Preaching, and taught Philosophy with Applause in the University of Oxford. He was then made Canon of Salisbury, and lastly Archbishop of Canterbury in 1234. by the Recommendation of Gregory IX. When he came to this Dignity he thought it was his Duty vigorously to check the Irregularities of the Courtiers, which procured him the Hatred of them, and of King Henry the third to that Degree, that he was fain to get himself to Rome for Security from them. He did not there meet with all the Satisfaction he could desire, and so returning into his own Country, he went into a voluntary Exile some while after, and in 1240 retired to the Monastery of Pontigny in France, and two Years after into the House of Regular Canons at Soisy, where he died on the 16*th* of November 1246. He was canonized the next Year by Innocent IV. He wrote a Treatise of Piety, intituled, The Mirror of the Church, printed in the Bibliotheca Patrum. He treats therein of a spiritual Life, and of the Perfection of a Christian; of the Articles of the Creed; of the seven Sacraments; of the seven mortal Sins; of the seven Beatitudes; of the seven Gifts of the Holy Spirit; of the four Cardinal Virtues; of the seven Works of Mercy; of the seven Petitions in the Lord's Prayer; of the Mysteries of our Lord; of the Godhead, and of the Trinity; of the different Degrees of Contemplation; of the Love of our Neighbour, and of Humility. He speaks of all these things without entring upon any Controversy, in a very edifying way, and proper to instruct ordinary Believers. Linwood has given us twelve Ecclesiastical Constitutions of this Archbishop.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flourished in the West in the Thirteenth Century.

Robert Grosteast.

Robert Grosteste or Grostead, born at Stratbrook in the County of Suffolk, after having studied at Oxford and Paris, was made Archdeacon of Leicester, and in the Year 1235, succeeded Hugh of Velles in his Bishoprick of Lincoln. He stoutly opposed the Designs of the Court of Rome, and of the Monks about the Jurisdiction of Ordinaries, and had a considerable Dispute with Innocent the fourth, about a Mandate which that Pope had granted to a young Italian named Frederick of Lavania, his Nephew, who was under Age, for the first Canon's Place that should be vacant in the Church of Lincoln. This Mandate was directed to the Archdeacon of Canterbury, and to Innocent the Pope's Secretary in England, who sent to Lincoln and gave notice of it to Robert, who by a Letter answered them, that he would with all Submission and Respect obey the Orders of the Holy See; but that he would oppose whatsoever was contrary to Orders that were truly Apostolick, and that no one could account those Apostolick Orders, which were contrary to the Doctrine of Jesus Christ and his Apostles, as the things contained in the Letter to him manifestly were: First, Because the Clause non obstante which was in this Letter, and many others of the like Nature, was an Inundation of Uncertainty, Boldness and Temerity, and an Inlet to Falshood and Deceit. Secondly, That there was no greater Crime in the World, setting aside that of Lucifer and Antichrist, nor any thing more contrary to the Doctrine of the Gospel and of the Apostles, nothing more displeasing to Christ Jesus, more detestable and abominable, than destroying Souls by robbing them of the Care of their Pastors; which is done when such People receive the Incomes appointed for the Subsistence and Maintenance of Pastors, as are not capable of executing their Offices; that it was impossible that the Apostolick See, which had received all Power of Jesus Christ for Edification and not for Destruction, should order so horrid and pernicious a thing to human kind, because this would be a manifest Abuse of its Power; that therefore one is so far from being obliged to obey such Commands as these, that it is one's Duty to oppose them, tho' they were published by an Angel from Heaven, and it is really an Act of Obedience not to receive them; and therefore that the Commissaries of the Holy See could do nothing herein against him. In one Word he concludes, 'That the Power of the Holy See being given only for Edification and not Destruction, and the things hereby ordered tending manifestly to Destruction, and not Edification, it was impossible they should be granted by the Holy See.' This Letter of Robert's, related by Matthew Paris, being carried to Rome, put the Pope in such a Passion, that he could not forbear expressing himself in very hard terms, if we may believe the above mentioned Author, who makes him speak thus; 'What a doting, old, deaf, impertinent Fellow is this, that dares thus rashly and impudently call my Conduct in question: By St. Peter and St. Paul, were it not for the Respect I have for his Ingenuity, I would so utterly confound him, that he should become the Talk and Astonishment, and Example of all the World, and should be lookt upon as a Prodigy. Is not his Master the King of England, who can with the least Sign of ours cast him into Prison, and cover him with Shame and Infamy, Our Vassal, or rather Our Slave? But the Cardinals, (says the same Author) represented to him how unfitting it was to act any thing against this Bishop; that what he said was true, and could not be refuted; that he was a true Catholick, and a very holy Man; that he had more Piety and Religion than the best of them; that he was of so exemplary a Life, that there was not a Prelate of greater Merit than he; that all the Churches of England and France could bear witness to this; that the Truth of his Letter, which was already no Secret, might raise the Court of Rome a great many Enemies; that he had the Name of a great Philosopher, a Man well read in Greek and Latin, zealous for the Truth, and had professed Divinity, and preached it with no small Reputation; that his Life was blameless, and that he was a Persecutor of Simoniacks.' Upon these Accounts they advised the Pope to let it pass, and make as if he had never seen the Letter. But another English Historian, named Henry of Knighton, says, that the Bishop was excommunicated: But let it be how it will, he remained steddy to his Opinion, and died in it on the 9*th* of October 1523, giving this Character of it to Master John of St. Giles a Dominican, that it was a Heresy and an Opinion contrary to Holy Scripture, to think that the Cure of Souls might be entrusted with a Child, or that the Vices of the great ones were not openly to be reproved.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flouriſhed in the Weſt in the Thirteenth Century.

He compoſed many Diſcourſes, in which with a great deal of Liberty, he checks the Vices and Diſorders of the Clergy: And ſome Letters which Mr. Brown has taken Care to have printed in the ſecond Volume of Faſciculus rerum expetendarum, printed at London in 1690. There was likewiſe printed at London in 1652, a Work of this Author's about legal Obſervations. He made a Commentary upon the Works of St. Dionyſius the Areopagite, whereof that which belongs to the Book of myſtical Divinity was printed at Strasburg in 1502. He likewiſe tranſlated into Latin the Teſtament of the twelve Patriarchs, printed at Paris in 1549. and in the Bibliotheca Patrum. In the Libraries of England there are many other Works of this Author to be met with; among the reſt, A Treatiſe about Confeſſion; another upon Marriage; a Work of the Paſtoral Care; Conſtitutions about Penance: A Work of Piety with this Title, The Moral Eye; another with this, The Doctrine of the Heart: A Book of Meditations: A Treatiſe upon the Articles of Faith; Another upon the Precepts of the Decalogue, &c. Letters and Sermons, not to ſpeak of his profane Works, as his Abridgment of the Sphere, printed at Venice in 1508. and his Commentary upon Ariſtotle's Analyticks, printed likewiſe at Venice in 1504. 1537, and 1552. By what we have ſaid of the Life and Writings of this Author, it is plain enough what his Genius and Character was, and that he had great Learning and Knowledge joined with an ardent Piety, and a Zeal for the Heat of it, perhaps hardly excuſable.

William of Paris.

William a Native of Auvergne, choſen Biſhop of Paris in 1228, died in 1240. is one of the moſt conſiderable Authors of this Age for true Knowledge and ſolid Parts. He has ſufficiently ſhewed them both in his Works, by keeping cloſe to that which regards Piety, and the Conduct of human Life, without running out upon Queſtions of meer Speculation. This is the Scope to which his Principles tend, and the Deſign which he propoſed to himſelf in the greateſt Part of his Works.

The firſt of which is a Treatiſe, intituled, Of Faith and Laws, in which after having ſhewn that the Knowledge of true Religion is the moſt excellent of all Knowledge, and the moſt uſeful; he demonſtrates Faith to be the Foundation of all Religion, which conſiſts in the Belief of thoſe things which God hath revealed to us, although they be not evident. Then he diſcovers the Cauſes of Error and Impiety, which are, 1. The Ignorance of the true Extent of human Knowledge. 2. The Diſtance of it from the things which we ought to believe. 3. The Subtilty of thoſe Things. 4. Their Height. 5. The Folly of Men who would fain by the natural Force of their Parts comprehend that which is incomprehenſible. 6. The Want of Proofs. 7. The Neglect of begging Help and neceſſary Aſſiſtance of God. Then he diſtinguiſhes two Sorts of Articles of Faith; namely, thoſe which he calls Radical and Primitive, which are the Belief of the Exiſtence of a God, and the Trinity of Perſons; and thoſe which he calls conſequential and derivative, which comprehend all the Articles of Chriſtian Faith which God has revealed to his Church. Then he paſſes on to Laws, and after having ſpoken of the Law of Nature, he with ſome Largeneſs treats of the Law and Commandments of God in the Old Teſtament. He refutes by the by the Laws and Religion of Mahomet, and ſets upon Opinion of thoſe that hold, that any one may be ſaved in his own Law and his own Religion; he ſtoutly encounters the different Sorts of Idolatry, and paſſing on to what concerns the Chriſtian Religion, he ſhows the Neceſſity of a new Law, and what the Spirit and Worſhip therein required is. This Treatiſe is followed by a long Work upon the Virtues, in which after having ſpoken of natural Virtues, he ſhows that they are not ſufficient for Salvation, and according to the Principles of St. Auſtin, demonſtrates that the real and true Virtues are the Gifts of God, and the Effects of Grace and Charity. He treats in particular of the Virtues and Paſſions, of the Union of Virtues, and of the Increaſes and Decreaſes incident to them.

The ſecond Part of his Treatiſe of Virtues is intituled, Of Manners. He there brings in all the Virtues one after another, each of them making a Panegyrick upon them, and deſcribing their Advantages and Effects.

The third Part is of Vices and Sins, where he treats largely of Original Sin.

This is followed by a Treatiſe of Temptations, and of the Means of reſiſting them; another of Merit, and the Rewards of good Works in this Life; another of the Rewards of the Saints, wherein he treats of their State and Bleſſedneſs; and another of the Immortality of the Soul, which he proves by Philoſophical Arguments. The Proof of this brings him neceſſarily to talk of the Soul of Beaſts, which he will have to be material, becauſe its Original is from, and its Operations depend upon Matter, and becauſe it is deſtroyed with the Body.

All theſe Treatiſes are one Work, and are tied one to another by Tranſitions.

That of Divine Rhetorick or Prayer is a ſeparate Treatiſe, and full of very ſolid Precepts and Maxims about that Duty; the Diſpoſition of Mind requiſite thereto; the Manner in which it ought to be performed, and the wonderful Effects of it.

The Treatiſes of this Author upon the Sacraments are not near ſo ſcholaſtical as thoſe of the other Authors of this time upon the ſame Matters. The greateſt Part of what he meddles with have ſome Relation either to Morality or Practice, and for the Reſolution of the Queſtions which he handles, he makes uſe of Principles fetch'd from the Holy Scripture, the Fathers, the Uſage of the Church, and Morality.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flouriſhed in the Weſt in the Thirteenth Century.

The next Treatiſe about the Cauſes of the Incarnation of Jeſus Chriſt, the Matter neceſſarily requiring it, is more ſcholaſtical.

That is followed by a Treatiſe of Penance, which is wholly moral. and abounds with very uſeful Rules.

The great Work of the Univerſe is a General Treatiſe of univerſal Knowledge, divided into two Parts, each of which is again ſubdivided into three others. In the firſt he treats of the Principles of this World, of its Creation, and of created Beings, of its Duration, of Eternity, of Judgment, of the Happineſs of the Saints, and the Pains of the Damned, and of God's Providence in governing the World, which is the Subject of the third Part of this firſt Book. His Diſcourſe in the ſecond is of the ſpiritual World; of the Angels, of the Devils, of Souls; of their Natures, Operations, Names, Diviſions, and Apparitions, &c. All theſe Works mentioned, are in the firſt Tome of the laſt Edition, and had been printed before in the Venetian one of 1591.

The ſecond Tome conſiſts of four Treatiſes of this Biſhop's, newly publiſhed by Monſieur Le Feron Canon of Chartres, and Doctor of the Sorbonne, from a Manuſcript of the Church of Chartres.

The firſt is a Treatiſe of the Trinity, and of the Divine Attributes, quoted by him in his Treatiſe of the Univerſe.

The ſecond is a Treatiſe of the Soul, wherein he diſcourſes of its Exiſtence, its Nature, and Qualities, and the Differences of a Man's Soul from a Beaſt's; He makes no doubt that this is mortal; and yet he does not ſcruple to call it ſpiritual, though it depend upon Matter both as to its Exiſtence and Operations. He confutes the Opinion of thoſe that think the Souls of Beaſts only Accidents, that is, that they conſiſt only in a certain Diſpoſition of Particles of Matter. He diſcuſſes many other Queſtions about the Nature and Operations of the Soul. Theſe two Treatiſes are more ſcholaſtical than any other of the Biſhops, and therefore there is Reaſon to doubt whether they belong to him or no, eſpecially that of the Soul, where the Stile and Doctrine about the Nature of the Soul of Beaſts do not agree with thoſe of the Treatiſe of the Soul in the firſt Volume.

This is not the Caſe of the third Treatiſe which is about Penance, for that is nothing but the latter Part of the Treatiſe about Penitence in the former Tome, in which he diſcourſes of Confeſſion and Satisfaction.

The laſt of the four Treatiſes is about the Collation of Benefices. He therein treats of the Call of thoſe that are to enjoy Livings, of the Sincerity wherewith they ought to enter on them, of the Duty of Paſtors, and other Beneficiaries, and of the Plurality of Benefices. He declames againſt the Neglect and Irregularities of the Beneficiaries of his time, againſt ſuch as entred upon the Miniſtry without a Call, who conſidered Livings only as Places, and looked after nothing but the Revenues of them; and againſt the Collators, who out of a temporal and carnal Proſpect gave them to ſuch as were unfit for them: He ſhows that their Duty is to make uſe of the Power which they have of conferring Eccleſiaſtical Dignities, to the Honour and Good of the Church, by putting in Perſons capable of performing all the Duties of them, ſuch as ſhould be of Age to acquit themſelves in their Station, whoſe Life ſhould be blameleſs, and who deſigned to live regularly and like Clergymen. He compares a Canonical to a Monaſtical Life, and ſhows that the Canons are no leſs obliged to lead a Life conformable to their Station, than Monks are to obſerve the Rules of their Order; and that as an Abby is to be accounted vacant when poſſeſſed by a falſe or ſecular Monk, ſo likewiſe a Canon's Place ſhould be accounted vacant when enjoyed by a Man that lives not like a Clergyman; that it was the Intention of the Founders that only ſuch ſhould enjoy the Incomes of the Church as were Men of a ſpotleſs Life, and thoſe who poſſeſſed them and yet lived diſorderly, were Uſurpers and enjoyed them againſt Right and Juſtice. As for Pluralities he ſays, that only the Doubt whether they were lawful or not, ſhould be ſufficient to deter People that had any Care for their Conſcience, from venturing upon more Cures than one, becauſe our Salvation is not to be riſqu'd, and becauſe in a doubtful Caſe one is obliged to take the ſafeſt Side. He then oppoſes it with many Arguments, 1. Becauſe thoſe who defend the Affirmative ſpeak for their Intereſt, whereas thoſe who maintain the Negative, put themſelves out of a Capacity of ever after enjoying more Livings than one. 2. Becauſe he who labours not according to the Apoſtle, is not worthy to eat; therefore he who labours not doubly and triply ought not to eat doubly and triply; that is, to have two or three different Livings, which demand two or three different Services. 3. Becauſe it is the Intention of the Founders of

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flourished in the West in the Thirteenth Century.

of Prebends that there should be as many Prebendaries as Titles, for which Reason there can be no one allowed to have two Prebends in one Church, and if not in one Church, much more not in two, where the Distance of the Places renders a Man less capable of satisfying his Duty. 4. Because this Plurality of Benefices in the same Person, took away a great many Members from the Church, and deprived it of a great Number of Ministers. 5. Because it is not Charity, but Covetousness and Ambition that made Men desire more Benefices than one. 6. He says that it is as impossible that a Man should have two Benefices, as that the same Member should assist two Bodies at once, or the same Tree be planted in two Places. He answers an Objection that came naturally in his Way: Namely, that seeing there are Livings, the Revenues of which are far more considerable than those of others, it seemed as allowable to have many little ones with a small Revenue, as one great Living which was worth ten or twelve others: He says that this Thought proceeds from a false Opinion that one is in Livings only to look upon the Revenue, without regarding the Charge and Offices; for every Living, tho' of never so small Revenues, having a particular Office which the Person that enjoys it is obliged to perform, it is irregular to have any more Persons in it than one; that the Livings which are not sufficient to maintain one Man, either do not require a particular Service, or if they do, the Revenue of them is augmented by the Addition of some other: That if any one shall alledge that there are some Livings which do not require Residence, he is deceived; because all Benefices do by their Establishment and Foundation oblige to Residence, and that the contrary is nothing but an evil Custom introduced by the Wickedness of the Clergy. Lastly he says, that if any one pleads against him the Dispensations of the Pope; he answers, That those are things above him, and that if any one throughly considered them he would find them to signify nothing; that whatever Virtue the Dispensations which the Pope granted certain Persons to enjoy more Livings than one might have, yet he could not dispense with their Covetousness, with their Ambition and Greediness; he could not grant them Indulgences for their Vices, or give leave for such Irregularities, nor was it his Intention that the temporal Estate of the Church, appointed for the Entertainment of God's Servants, and dedicated to the Lord to be employed in his Service, should ever be perverted to the Nourishment and Maintenance of wicked Men. 'Twas upon these Reasons that William of Paris founded that Order which he got passed within a while after he was Bishop by the Doctors of the Faculty of Paris, that it should not be allowable to enjoy more than one Living, when that was sufficient for the Provision and Maintenance of one Person, which it was supposed then to be when the Revenue amounted to fifteen Paris Livres.

William of Paris.

The Sermons ascribed to William of Paris make another Part of the second Volume of his Works: But there's some Reason to doubt whether they are really his, or not rather William Perrault's, a Religious of the Order of preaching Friars of Lyons, with whose Name they are to be seen in some Manuscripts, and were printed at Paris in 1494. at Lyons in 1567, and at Cologn in 1629. tho' in many other Manuscripts, and in the Tubingen Edition of 1499, and the Paris one of 1638. they have the Name of William Bishop of Paris affixed to them: But it is most likely that they by Right belong to the former. 1. Because they are not in the other's Stile, but in a more dry, concise and compact one. 2. Because the Author of them quotes the Fathers, and particularly St. Austin, oftner. 3. Because they are quoted with the Name of William of Lyons, by William a Dominican of Paris, who lived three hundred Years ago, in a Postille upon the Epistles and Gospels of the Year, printed at Paris in 1509. and at Strasburg in 1513, and 1521. 4. Because all those that speak of William Perrault ascribe these Sermons to him. 5. Because they are full of Passages and Thoughts out of the Holy Scripture, the Character which Gerson gives of the Works of William Perrault.

The Dialogues of the seven Sacraments, printed at Leipsick in 1512. and at Lyons in 1567. under the Name of William of Paris, are not certainly his; because the Author himself tells us, That he took Part of his Work from St. Thomas and Peter of Tarentaise, which makes me think that it is William the Dominican of Paris's, of whom we spake before.

William of Paris was the Author of many more Books which Trithemius mentions, and particularly of Commentaries upon the Psalms, upon the Proverbs, upon Ecclesiastes, upon the Gospel of St. Matthew, and upon the Song of Songs, of Letters and other Treatises: The Commentaries upon the Song of Songs, and upon the Proverbs may be seen in Manuscript in the Library of the Abby of Longpont, in the Diocese of Soissons, as Oudin tells us, who also would have the Commentary upon St. Matthew, printed in the Edition of St. Anselm's Works at Cologn in 1630. under the Name of that Saint, to be William of Paris's, notwithstanding that Father Gerberon ascribes them to one Hervens a Monk of the City of Dol; and indeed the Author of this Commentary in the sixth Chapter, quotes a Treatise which he had written of the Virtues and Vices, and William of Paris seems to refer to this Commentary in his Treatise upon the Manners in the tenth Chapter: Besides, that in the Catalogue of Herveus's Writings made by the Monks of his Monastery, in the Circular Letter about his Death, there's no Mention of this Commentary upon St. Matthew; so that what Father Gerberon says of the Commentaries attributed to St. Anselm, is to be understood only of the Comment upon St. Paul's Epistles.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flourished in the West in the Thirteenth Century.

The Stile of this Author is plain, intelligible, natural, and not near so barbarous as that of the greatest Part of the Schoolmen of his time; yet it hath nothing of a fine Delicacy in it: He doth not run out upon Metaphysical Notions near so much as the other Divines of his time, and particularly keeps close to what concerns Morality, Discipline and Piety. He sometimes confutes Aristotle, and makes use of the Principles and Arguments of Plato. He very well understood the Opinions of the profane Philosophers, throughly read and digested the Holy Scripture, but he was but meanly versed in the Fathers. We took notice before that his Works were printed at Venice, in 1591, and some Years ago there was a new Edition of them printed at Orleans in 1674. which is that that we have here all along followed.

Vincent of Beauvais.

Vincent, Sirnamed of Beauvais, because he lived in that City, was a Burgundian, and a Religious of the Order of Preaching Friars. He undertook in the Reign of St. Louis, who was at the Expence of it, a Sort of Encyclopædia of Science in a great Work, intituled, The Mirror. It is divided into four Parts, which are four quite distinct Works: The Doctrinal, which comprehends the Principles of all Sciences, beginning at Grammar, and ending at Divinity: The Historical, containing an Universal History from the Beginning of the World to the Year 1244. The Natural, which treats of natural Things, as of Plants, Birds, &c. and The Moral, which treats of the Passions, of Law and Grace, of the Virtues and of the Vices. These Works are nothing but a Collection out of divers Authors, as he acknowledges in his Preface. The last of them is almost Word for Word the same with the second Second of Thomas Aquina's Sum, which is very hard to be reconciled with the Chronology of these two Authors; for St. Thomas not dying before 1274. and his Sum being one of his last Pieces, it is not easy to imagine how Vincent of Beauvais, who is supposed to have died in 1256. should have copyed from it. The Criticks divide upon the Resolution of this Difficulty; some say that perhaps Vincent did not die till 1264. and St. Thomas might before that have composed his second Second, which might have been communicated to Vincent: Others say that this Book of Morals is not the Work of Vincent; but that this Author not having meddled with them, or what he wrote therein being lost, some Body put in these Extracts of St. Thomas to make Vincent's Works compleat. These Opinions are not very probable; for first, almost all Authors that have spoken of Vincent of Beauvais, make him die in 1256. and if one should suppose that he lived till 1264. it is pretty hard to imagine how he should copy a Work which was then neither published nor finished. Besides, it cannot be thought that Vincent of Beauvais did not compose a moral Treatise, because he in his Preface tells us, that this is one of the Parts of his Work, and because the old Authors, such as Henry of Gand and Trithemius, make mention of this very one, which begins with the very Words that are related by Trithemius, for the Beginning of Vincent of Beauvais's Work of Morality. But then on the other Side, it appears that the Sum of St. Thomas is all in the same Stile, and he quotes the second Second in his other Works; whereas the Work of Vincent of Beauvais is a Rhapsody taken from different Authors; and it is likewise said that he quotes the Sum of St. Thomas in his Natural Treatise. These are the Difficulties that occur, and the Conjectures that are brought on each Side, upon which I shall leave the Reader to make what Reflections he shall think fit, not seeing any thing sufficient to determine me on one side or other.

The entire Work of Vincent of Beauvais is a vast Collection that showeth the laborious Diligence of the Author, more than his Judgment and Palate. His Historical Mirror was printed separately at Nuremberg in 1473. and at Mentz in 1474. The Moral Part at Nuremberg in 1485. and at Venice in 1493. The Doctrinal at Nuremberg in 1486. and all the four Parts at Basil in 1481. at Venice in 1484, and in 1591. and at Douay in 1524. with the Title of, The Library of the World. Trithemius mentions some other Works of Vincent of Beauvais; namely, a Treatise of Grace, or of the Redemption of Jesus Christ: A Discourse in Praise of the Virgin, and another in Praise of St. John the Evangelist: A Treatise about the Instruction of Kings Sons, and a Consolatory Letter to St. Louis upon the Death of one of his Friends, and some other Letters. These two last pieces were printed at Basil in 1481.

Raimond of Rochfort.

Raimond of Pennafort or Rochfort, born in 1175 at Barcelona, studied in the University of Bologn, and after having taken his Degrees, did there teach the Canon Law. He was afterwards recalled to Barcelona by his Bishop, and made by him Canon and Provost of his Cathedral. He left this Dignity in 1218, to enter into the Order of preaching Friars, and was in a short time after chosen by John Algrin Cardinal of St. Sabina Legate in Spain, to accompany him in his Embas-

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flouriſhed in the Weſt in the Thirteenth Century.

ſy. Pope Gregory the Ninth being acquainted with his Merit, invited him to Rome, made uſe of him in his Affairs, and made him his Chaplain, his Penitentiary, and his Confeſſor. He refuſed the Archbiſhoprick of Tarragon, but being obliged to return by the Advice of his Phyſicians to Barcelona, he was choſen third General of his Order in 1238. and reſigned that Dignity within two Years to live a ſimple Monk. He was nevertheleſs induſtrious for the rooting out the Vaudois and Saracens, perſwading James I. King of Arragon, to ſet up the Inquiſition in his Realm. He died in 1275. being a hundred Years old. He was canonized by Clement VIII. in 1601. 'Tis he that was the Author of that Collection of five Books of Decretals which is in the Body of the Law, which he made by the Order and with the Approbation of Pope Gregory the IX. who recommended it to the Doctors and Students of the Univerſity of Bologn, in his own Name, to ſerve them for a Rule in their Schools, and a Law in their Judgments. He likewiſe made a Sum of Caſes of Conſcience. which was printed at Rome in 1603. It is divided into three Parts: In the firſt he treats of Sins committed againſt God: In the ſecond, of thoſe againſt our Neighbour: In the third, of Irregularity, of Hindrances to the taking of Holy Orders, Diſpenſations, Canonical Purgations, Sentences, Penances, and Abſolutions; to which is joined a Treatiſe in reference to Matrimony. The greateſt Part of theſe Caſes he decides by the Authority of the Holy Scriptures, the Canons, the Decretals, or the Fathers, and very rarely by their own Evidence. An Example which all that wrote after him upon theſe Matters ought to have followed. Some Authors take notice of a Treatiſe of his about the Viſitation of Dioceſſes and the Care of Souls; and another of War and Duelling; and another concerning the Means of trading without Injuſtice. But theſe we have none of.

Giles of Aſſiſy.

Giles of Aſſiſy, a Companion of St. Francis, is Author of a little Piece, intituled, Words of Gold, printed at Antwerp in 1534. and of many other little Works which are no where but in Manuſcript. He died in 1262.

Alexander of Hales.

Alexander, ſirnamed of Hales, from the Place where he was born, which is in Gloceſterſhire in England, after having gone through the Courſe of his Studies in his own Country, came to the Univerſity of Paris, where he followed Divinity, and the Canon Law, and gained ſuch a Reputation in them, that he was ſirnamed the Irrefragable Doctor, and the Fountain of Life. In 1222. he entred into the Order of Friars Minims, and made Paris the Place of his Reſidence, where he died in 1245. on the 27*th* of Auguſt.

By the Order of Innocent IV. he made a Commentary upon the four Books of Sentences, or a very ſubtile Sum of Divinity, which hath been printed at Nuremberg in 1482, at Baſil in 1502, at Venice in 1575, and 1576, and at Cologn in 1622. for we muſt not make two diſtinct Works of his Commentary, and of his Sum, as ſome have done: It is one and the ſame Work, as is plain in the Manuſcripr of the Library of St. Victor, where it is, with the Text of the Maſter of the Sentences, and this Title, A Sum and Commentary upon the Maſter of the Sentences: So that the Commentary upon the Sentences printed at Lyons in the Year 1515. with Alexander of Hales's Name to it, is not really that Author's. And I doubt too whether the Sum of the Virtues, printed at Paris in 1509. or the Treatiſe intituled, Deſtructorium Vitiorum, which was printed at Nuremberg in 1496, and at Venice in 1582. ought to be aſcribed to him. It is certain that he compoſed a Poſtille upon the whole Bible; but the Commentary upon the Pſalms printed in his Name at Venice in 1496. in Right belongs to Hugh of St Charus: And there's Reaſon to doubt whether the Commentary upon the Revelations publiſhed under the Name of Alexander of Hales, and printed at Paris in 1647. is really his. The Commentary upon Ariſtotle's Phyſicks belongs to Alexander of Alexandria, Doctor of Barcelona, who flouriſhed about 1313. We can give no Judgment of the Commentaries upon the Prophets, upon the four Evangeliſts, and upon all the Epiſtles of St. Paul, which go under this Author's Name, and are to be met with in the Libraries of Milan and Oxford. We have loſt the Commentary which he made upon the Statutes of the Minor Friars, and a Treatiſe of the Harmony of Divine and Human Law, which Trithemius mentions. Laſtly, we have none of the Lives of St. Thomas of Canterbury, or of Richard King of England; nor have we a Treatiſe againſt Mahomet, which ſome Authors ſay he wrote: And indeed we have none of his Works left us, that we can certainly ſay are his, except his Sum, which diſcovers that he had more Subtilty than Skill in the Antiquities of the Church.

John of Rochelle.

John of Rochelle of the Order of Minor Friars, a Companion of Alexander of Hales, if we may believe Trithemius, compoſed a Treatiſe upon the Sentences; a Sum of Virtues and Vices; and a Treatiſe of the Soul. Some Commentaries upon the Holy Scripture, and ſome Sermons are likewiſe aſcribed to him.

Albertus Magnus.

Albert the great (ſo called becauſe of his vaſt Learning) deſcended from the Lords of Bolſtadt, was born at Lavingen in Suabia, according to ſome Authors in 1193. and according to others in 1205. In 1221. he entred himſelf into the Order of Preaching Friars, and having ſignalized himſelf by by his profound Knowledge, upon the Death of Jordan General of his Order, he was choſen in 1236. to govern it in Quality of Vicar, which he did two Years; and by many Votes was nominated General, as was alſo Hugh of St. Charus, but neither of them was choſen: Albert was made Provincial of his Order in Germany, and made his Abode at Cologn, where he taught Divinity with no ſmall Reputation. Pope Alexander IV. choſe him in 1260, for Biſhop of Ratiſbon; but he was ſoon weary of a Dignity which he never ſought, and within three Years reſigned his Biſhoprick that he might retire into his Monaſtery at Cologn, where he died November 15. in the Year 1280.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flouriſhed in the Weſt in the Thirteenth Century.

There is no Author that hath more Works printed under his Name than this, for they make one and twenty Volumes in Folio, publiſhed at Lyons in 1651. We have nothing to ſay of what is in the ſix firſt, becauſe they are only Logick and Phyſicks.

The five next are Commentaries upon the Holy Scripture, viz. the ſeventh, A Commentary upon the Pſalms; the eighth, upon Jeremy, Baruc, Daniel, and the twelve Minor Prophets; the ninth, upon the Goſpels of St. Matthew and St. Mark; the tenth, upon the Goſpel of St. Luke; the eleventh, upon the Goſpel of St. John and the Revelations.

The twelfth Tome contains Sermons for all the Year, and for the Saints; Prayers upon the Goſpels of all the Sundays in the Year; two and thirty Sermons on the Euchariſt which are among the Works of St. Thomas too; but, 'tis more likely, belongs to Albert: And a Diſcourſe upon a Woman of Fortitude.

The thirteenth is Commentaries upon the Books aſcribed to St. Dionyſius the Areopagite, and an Abridgment of Divinity in ſeven Books.

The three next Volumes are Commentaries upon the four Books of the Maſter of the Sentences.

The ſeventeenth and eighteenth contain a Sum of Divinity.

The nineteenth is a Work, intituled, A Sum of the Creatures: In two Parts, the ſecond of which is of Man.

Theſe that have been mentioned are, no Body doubts, the Works of Albert the Great, but the twentieth Volume hath many in it which are doubtful, or forged: The firſt is not of that Number; it is a Diſcourſe in Honour of the Virgin, with the Title of Marialis, upon theſe Words of the Goſpel, The Angel Gabriel was ſent, &c. But the twelve Books of the Praiſes of the Virgin which follow it are Richard's of St. Laurence, a Penitentiary of Rome, about the Year 1240. if we may credit the Manuſcripts. And there's as much Reaſon to doubt whether the Bible of Mary, the Author of which applies to the Virgin whatſoever is contained in the Scripture, which had been printed at Cologn before, belongs to Albert the Great.

Richard of St. Laurence.

The twenty firſt contains ſome Works which are not without Suſpicion: A Treatiſe of the Sacrifice of the Maſs, and the Sacrament of the Euchariſt: The Paradiſe of the Soul; or A Treatiſe of Virtues: And the Treatiſe of cleaving to God It is not certain that theſe are really his.

St. Bonaventure, ſirnamed the Seraphick Doctor, was born at Bagnarea in Tuſcany, in the Year 1221. He entred himſelf in 1243. into the Order of Minor Friars, and ſtudied in the Univerſity of Paris, where he afterwards taught Divinity, and took his Doctor's Degree with St. Thomas Aquinas in 1255. The next Year he was choſen General of his Order, and reformed its Diſcipline, and regulated its Habit. 'Tis ſaid that he introduced the Cuſtom of making a Prayer to the Virgin after Compline, and of ringing the Bell to call the Faithful together, and that he was the Occaſion of the Inſtitution of Confreries, after the Example of that which he ſettled at Rome in 1270. 'Tis reported that it was he who, when the Cardinals could not agree about the Election of a Pope, after the Death of Clement IV. propoſed to them the chooſing of Theobald Archdeacon of Leige, who took the Name of Gregory X. This Pope in Acknowledgment made him Cardinal Biſhop of Albany in 1274. ſome while before the ſecond General Council of Lyons, at the firſt Seſſion of which he aſſiſted on the 7*th* of May, but died before it roſe, on the 15*th* of July in the ſame Year. He was canonized by Sixtus the 4*th* in 1482.

St. Bonaventure.

See the Judgment that Gerſon gives this Author and his Works in his Treatiſe about the Books which Monks ought to read: 'In my Opinion, ſays he, one of the beſt Authors 'that a Man can read is Euſtachius, for ſo one may tranſlate 'his Name of Bonaventure; he is the Man of all the Catho-'lick Doctors, not to derogate from the reſt, that ſeems to 'me the moſt proper and ſafe for the enlightning of the Judg-'ment, and inflaming the Heart. To be convinced of this 'one need not read any more than two of his Works; I mean 'his Breviloquy and his Itinerary, which are written with ſo 'much Art and Brevity, that nothing can be beyond them; 'and though they are more difficult and ſcarce than his other 'Works, yet all Chriſtians ought to ſearch and examine them, 'Myſtical Theology being proper for the Faithful. In another place (in his Book of the Examination of Doctrines) he ſays, 'That if any one ſhould ask him which of the Doctors he thought moſt proper for the Inſtruction of the Faith-'ful; his Anſwer ſhould be, without detracting from the 'reſt, St. Bonaventure: becauſe he is ſolid, ſafe, pious, juſt and 'de-

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flourished in the West in the Thirteenth Century.

St. Bonaventure.

'devout, and keeps as far as he can from Niceties, not meddling with Logical or Physical Questions, which are alien to the Matter in Hand, disguised under Theological Expressions, as too many do: and because by clearing the Understanding, he sets off Religion and Piety in their true Colours; which is the Reason, adds he, that the indevout Schoolmen which, the more is the Pity, make the greater Number, cast him by, though there is nothing more noble, more divine, more conducive to Salvation, and fitter for Divines than the Doctrine of this Author. Trithemius makes almost the same Judgment of him in these Words: 'St. Bonaventure 'wrote many very deep and devout Works: all his Expressions are full of heat, and inflame the Hearts of those that read 'him, as well as inlighten their Minds by a holy Light; for 'his Works surpass all those of the Doctors of his Time in 'their Usefulness, the Spirit of the Love of God, and of 'Christian Devotion shining through them: He is deep without Prolixity, subtile without Nicety, eloquent without Vanity; his Words are full of Spirit, yet not bombastick; which 'is the Reason that such as are touched with the Love of God 'read him with the more Safety, understand him with greater 'Ease, and remember him with the greater Profit. Many Authors teach Doctrine, and others preach Devotion, but there 'are very few to be met with who have joined these two 'Things together in their Writings: But in St. Bonaventure 'they are united, for his Devotion instructs in Doctrine, and 'his Doctrine inspires with Devotion: So that whoever desires 'both Knowledge and Devotion cannot do better than apply 'himself to the reading of his Works. Much of the same Opinion is St. Antoninus, who remarks, That such as desire Divine Knowledge more than Aristotelical Vanity, find his Works easy to be understood. Indeed the greatest Part of St. Bonaventure's Works are mystical and spiritual: they make eight Volumes, printed at Rome in 1588.

The first contains Commentaries upon some Books of the Old Testament, viz. A sort of Preface, intituled, Principles of the Holy Scripture: Thirty three Sermons upon the Six Days Work, or the Creation of the World: Explications or Postilles upon the Psalms, upon Ecclesiastes, upon the Book of Wisdom, and upon the Lamentations of Jeremy.

The second Volume contains Commentaries upon the Gospels of St. Matthew, St. Luke, and St. John, with Conferences upon the last of them.

The third is Sermons of Time and of the Saints.

The fourth and fifth are Commentaries upon the four Books of the Master of the Sentences.

The sixth Tome contains the first and second Parts of his Opuscula, the Titles of which are, Of the reducing of Arts to Divinity: The Breviloquy: The Centiloquy: The Quiver: An Explanation of the Terms of Theology: An Abridgment of the Books of the Sentences: Four Books of Sentences in Verse: Of the four Cardinal Virtues: Of the seven Gifts of the Holy Spirit: Of the three Ternaries of Sins: Of the Resurrection from Sin to Grace: The Diet of Salvation: Of the Hierarchy of the Church. Those of the second Part are the Soliloquy: Meditations upon the Life of Jesus Christ: Of the seven Degrees of Contemplation: Of the five Feasts of the Child Jesus: The Office of the Passion, The Elogy of the Cross: The Wood of Life: The Mirror of the Praises of the Virgin: The Crown of the Virgin: The Compassion of the Virgin: The Nightingale of the Passion of our Lord, fitted to the seven hours: On the seven Words of our Saviour on the Cross: The Great Psalter of the Virgin: The Little Psalter on the Salutation of the Angel, and the Salve Regina.

The seventh Tome contains the third Part of his Moral Opuscula, which are, Of the ordering of a Christian Life: Of the Government of the Soul: The Mirror of the Soul: Of the ten Commandments: Of the Degrees of Virtues: The Itinerary of the Spirit of God: Of the seven Paths of Eternity: The Spur of Divine Love: The Fire of Love: The Art of loving: The Book of Spiritual Exercises: The Fasciculary: The five and twenty Memorials: The Confessional: Of the Manner of confessing: Of Purity of Conscience: Of the Priests Preparation for the Mass: An Explication of the Mass: Of the six Wings of the Cherubims, and the six Wings of the Seraphims.

The eighth Volume contains the Opuscula which concern the Religious, the Catalogue of which I shall set down: A Treatise of the threefold Estate of Religiouses: The Mirror of Discipline for Novices, which some call in Question: The twenty Steps of Novices: Of Advancement in Religion: Of the Contempt of the World: Of the Reformation of the Spirit: The little Alphabet of a good Monk, which is Thomas à Kempis's: Of the Perfection of a Religious Life: An Explanation of the Rule of the Minor Friars: Questions about this Rule: Why the Minor Friars preach: Of the Poverty of Jesus Christ: That Jesus Christ and his Apostles went barefoot: An Apology for Evangelical Poverty: A Treatise against the Reviler of the Order of St. Francis: An Apologetick against the Adversaries of the Order of Minor Friars: A Treatise intituled, De non frequentandis quæstionibus: Conferences to the Brothers of Toulouse which are not St. Bonaventure's: A Treatise of the Reform of the Minor Friars, address'd to the Provincials of the Order. In this Tome there is an Appendix containing, An Abridgment of Theology: Treatises upon the Essence, Invisibility and Immensity of God, and a Work of Mystical Divinity.

The Life of St. Francis related by Surius in October 4. is likewise ascribed to St. Bonaventure.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flourished in the West in the Thirteenth Century.

Thomas Aquinas.

St. Thomas of Aquino, Sirnamed the Angelical Doctor, of the House of the Earls of Aquino, descended from the Kings of Sicily and Arragon, was born in 1224 in the Castle of Aquino, which is in the Country of Lavoro in Italy. After having been educated in the Monastry of Monte-Cassino, he was sent to Naples, where he studied Humanity and Philosyphy. He entred in 1241 into the Order of Preaching Friars, notwithstanding all his Mother could do, who laid hold on him and kept him close up in a Castle; but nothing could conquer his Resolution, for finding Means to escape out of his Confinement, wherein he was kept for two Years, he came to Paris in 1244, and from thence went to Cologn to study under Albert the Great. Returning again to Paris, he took the Doctor of Divinity's Cap in 1255. He went back into Italy in 1263, and after having gone through most of the Universities, teaching Scholastical Divinity, he settled at Naples, the Archbishoprick of which City offered him by Clement the IV. he refused. In 1274, Gregory the X. called him to the Council of Lyons, and parting from Naples on his Journey thither, he fell sick by the way in the Monastry of Fossa-Nova near Terracena, and there died, being fifty Years old, on the seventh of March the same Year.

The Number of St. Thomas's Works is prodigious. They make seventeen Volumes in Folio, and were printed at Venice in 1490, at Nuremberg in 1496, at Rome in 1570, at Venice in 1594, and at Cologn in 1612. The five first Tomes are Commentaries upon the Works of Aristotle: The sixth and seventh, a Commentary upon the four Books of the Sentences: The eighth, Theological Questions; namely, ten Questions about the Power of God, sixteen Questions about Evil, one Question about spiritual Creatures, another about the Soul; a Question of the Union of the Word; a Question of Virtue in general; a Question of Charity, another of brotherly Correction: A Question of Hope, another of the Cardinal Virtues, and nine and twenty of Truth, and twelve Quodlibetick Questions. The ninth contains the Sum of the Catholick Faith against the Gentiles, divided into four Books: The tenth, eleventh, and twelfth, are a Sum of Divinity, with the Commentaries of Cardinal Cajetan: The thirteenth is composed of many Commentaries upon the Old Testament: namely, A Commentary upon the Book of Job: A literal and mystical Explanation of the five first Psalms: An Exposition upon the Song of Songs, which they say he dictated upon his death-bed to the Monks of Fossa-Nova: Commentaries upon the Prophecies of Isaiah and Jeremiah, and on the Lamentations, which the best Criticks think rather belongs to the English Thomas than this. The fourteenth Volume contains Commentaries upon the Gospels of St. Matthew and St. John, but that upon St. Matthew was made by Peter Scaliger, Dominican of Verona. That upon St. John was put into Method by Renaldus a Companion of St. Thomas, from an Explanation which he heard of it from the Mouth of S. Thomas. The fifteenth is a Chain upon the four Gospels taken from the Fathers, and presented to Pope Urban IV. The sixteenth contains a Commentary upon the Epistles of St. Paul, and Sermons. The seventeenth Volume contains divers little Pieces of Divinity; namely, A Treatise against the Errors of the Greeks, to Pope Urban IV. An Abridgment of Divinity, to Renaldus a Monk of his Order, which some with a great deal of Probability ascribed to Ulric of Strasburg: An Explanation of some Articles against the Greeks, Armenians, and Saracens, addressed to the Chanter of Antioch: A Treatise of the two Precepts of Charity, and of the ten Commandments of the Law: An Explanation of the Lord's Prayer: An Explication of the Salutation of the Angel: An Answer about the hundred and eight Articles taken out of the Works of Peter of Tarentaise, to John of Verceil, General of the Order of Preaching Friars, which is commonly thought to be none of St. Thomas's: Another Answer addressed to the same Person, about the forty two Articles: An Answer about six and thirty Articles, to the Reader of Venice: Another Answer about six Articles, to the Reader of Besançon: A Treatise about the difference between the Divine Word, and the Human Word: A Treatise about the Nature and Origin of the Word of the Understanding: A Treatise about separate Substances, or of the Nature of Angels: A Treatise of the Unity of the Understanding, against the Averroists, who hold that all Men have but one Understanding: A Work against such as dissuade Men from entring themselves into a Religious Order: A Treatise of the Perfection of a spiritual Life: A Treatise, intituled, Against those that oppose the Worship of God and Religion, wherein he defends the Orders of Mendicants against the Books of William of Holy Love: Four Books of the Government of Princes, which cannot be St. Thomas's, because they talk of Adolphus succeeding Rodolphus in the Empire, and Albert, Adolphus, which was not

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flouriſhed in the Weſt in the Thirteenth Century.

Thomas Aquinas.

till many Years after the Death of St. Thomas; beſides, that the Stile is different from that of St. Thomas's Works: A Treatiſe of the Government of the Jews: A Treatiſe of the Form of Abſolution: An Explanation of the firſt Decretal: Another Explanation of the ſecond: A Treatiſe of Spells: Another of Judicial Aſtrology: A Treatiſe of the Eternity of the World: A Treatiſe of Deſtiny: Thirty ſeven other Treatiſes of Logical and Phyſical Matters, which it is not worth while to make a Catalogue of here: Seven Books of the Education of Princes, which are only in the Roman Edition: The Office for the Feaſt of the Holy Sacrament, compoſed by Order of Pope Urban the Fourth, the Inſtitutor of that Solemnity. There is Reaſon to doubt whether St. Thomas was wholly the Author of this, or whether he made Uſe therein of an Office for that Feaſt, which had been before compoſed by John Clerk of Liege: which is proved by the Teſtimony of the Author of the Life of St. Juliana the Virgin, who aſſures us that this John did make ſuch an Office, which conſiſted of Hymns, Anthems, Reſponſes, Leſſons, Chapters, and Collects; and by the ancient Books of the Church of St. Martin of Liege, among which is found a Piece of this Office of the Holy Sacrament which is aſcribed to St. Thomas. Father Alexander the Dominican on the other ſide maintains that it is St. Thomas's, and proves it by the Authority of William of Toco an Author contemporary with St. Thomas, who puts it in the Catalogue of his Works, and Ptolomy of Lucques, Biſhop of Toricelli, a Scholar of St. Thomas's, and St. Antoninus; but I believe it is pretty eaſy to reconcile theſe two Opinions, by ſaying that St. Thomas made uſe of the Office compoſed by John Clerk of Liege, and inſerted part of it in that which goes under his Name; for it is true that ſome of that Office is his own, and he reduced it into the Form it is now in; which is the Reaſon that in the Hiſtory of the Tranſlation of the Body of St. Thomas, it is only ſaid that it was he that digeſted, ordinavit, the Office of the Holy Sacrament: A Treatiſe of the Holy Sacrament of the Altar in two and thirty Chapters, which Tritbemius makes Albert the Great Author of, and which is to be found among his Works divided into many Sermons: Another Treatiſe of the Sacrament of the Euchariſt, which is not St. Thomas's, at leaſt not beyond exception, any more than all the following Treatiſes: Of the Humanity of Jeſus Chriſt: Of the Love of Jeſus Chriſt, and one's Neighbour: Of Divine Manners: Of Bleſſedneſs: Of the Manner of Confeſſing: Of Purity of Conſcience: Of the Office of a Prieſt: Of the Maſs: Of buying and ſelling for a Time, attributed by ſome to James of Viterbo: A Letter concerning the Manner of acquiring Divine and Human Knowledge: A Treatiſe of the Vices and Virtues: Of Concordance: Of Uſury, not to ſpeak of the two Commentaries upon the Books of Boetius; the one upon his Treatiſe of Weeks, the other upon that concerning the Trinity, which is thought to be St. Thomas's. There is likewiſe at the end of this Volume a Commentary upon the four Books of Sentences, which ſome call in queſtion.

Under St. Thomas's Name ſome other Commentaries upon the Holy Scripture have been printed by themſelves, viz. upon Geneſis, upon the Prophecy of Daniel, upon the Books of the Maccabees, upon the Canonical Epiſtles, and upon the Revelation; but theſe are not his, the greateſt part of them belonging to the Engliſh Thomas. Laſtly, there is a Commentary of St. Thomas upon the Books of Boetius of the Conſolation of Philoſophy, printed at Louvain in 1487, and at Lyons in 1514, which we may very well allow to be his.

There have been ſome Difficulties raiſed in our Age about St. Thomas's Sum, which have made it doubted whether it be really his. We have already ſpoken to one of them, which aroſe from the ſecond Part of the Second of that Work, being found in Vincent of Beauvais. Monſieur De Launoy has propoſed another from the ſilence of Pope Clement the VI. who doth not mention this Work in that exact Catalogue of St. Thomas's Works, which he makes in the Panegyrick upon that Saint, ſpoken ſome time after his Canonization. But Father Alexander has vindicated this Work by the Teſtimony of contemporary Authors, or ſuch as lived not long after him, as William of Toco one of thoſe that ſollicited his Canonization, who made a Catalogue of St. Thomas's Works, at the Head of which ſtands this Sum. William de la Mare of the Order of Minor Friars, who about the End of the Thirteenth Century wrote againſt the Doctrine of St. Thomas in a Book, intituled, Correctorium Operum Fratris Thomæ, and takes moſt of the Points which he oppoſeth out of his Sum of Theology, as out of his principal Work: Giles a Roman, the Scholar of St. Thomas, who defended him againſt William de la Mare: John the German, and Nicholas Trivet who about the Beginning of the next Century made a Catalogue of St. Thomas's Works; St. Antoninus and many others, not to mention Demetrius Cydonius, who tranſlated this Sum into Greek, with not a few Praiſes of the Author of it; ſo that the Silence of Clement VI. will ſcarce do any Thing againſt the Teſtimony of ſo many Authors, and thoſe ſo antient, and ſo much more antient too than that Pope. St. Thomas did not finiſh his Sum, but the End of the laſt Part was added by Peter of Auvergne, a Scholar of his, about 1280, who took the greateſt Part of this Supplement out of the other Works of St. Thomas, and particularly out of his Commentary upon the Maſter of the Sentences. This Author likewiſe wrote many Commentaries upon the Books of Ariſtotle which we ſhall not here ſpeak of, but ſhall conclude this Article of St. Thomas with a General Scheme of his Sum.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flouriſhed in the Weſt in the Thirteenth Century.

In the firſt Part, after having in the firſt Queſtion ſpoken of the ſacred Doctrine in general, he treats of God; of his Eſſence; of his Attributes and Operations; of Bleſſedneſs; of the three Divine Perſons; of their Proceſſions and Relations: And laſtly, he conſiders God in Relation to the Creatures as their Creator and Preſerver.

In the firſt Part of the ſecond Part, he treats of the Motions of a reaſonable Creature towards God, of its ultimate End, and of the Actions conducing thereto; of their Principle; of Virtues and Vices in general; of Laws, and of Grace.

In the ſecond Part of the Second, he in particular treats of the Theologal and Moral Virtues, and of whatſoever may have any Relation to them.

In the third Part he treats of the Means of coming to God, viz. the Incarnation of Jeſus Chriſt, and the Sacraments, and they make the Subject of this Part, which ends in Queſtions about the four Ends of Man.

Hugh of St. Charus

Hugh the Cardinal was of Barcelonette in Dauphine, and not of Barcelona in Spain, as ſome Authors have made him. He was ſirnamed of St. Charus or St. Theodorick, and entred into the Order of Preaching Friars. He ſtudied in the Univerſity of Paris, and there took the Degree of Doctor in Divinity; Authors do not agree whether before or after his profeſſing it. He was ſent by Pope Gregory IX. to Conſtantinople, to labour for the re-uniting the two Churches, and created Cardinal by the Title of St. Sabina in 1245, by Innocent the IV. and afterwards employed in many Legations. He died the 19*th* of March in 1260. They ſay he expreſſed about the latter end of his Life, no ſmall Grief for his having been raiſed to the Cardinal Dignity, confeſſing that he had rather have lived a ſimple Religious in his own Order, than have had the weight of a Cardinal's Hat on his Head. He compoſed Poſtilles; that is to ſay, ſhort Notes or Gloſſes upon the whole Scripture, wherein he explains the Text according to the four Senſes that it might bear. He wrote a larger Commentary upon the Pſalms, which ſome aſcribe to Alexander of Hales, but St. Antoninus aſſures us it is Cardinal Hugh's. Under his Name there are ſome Sermons printed too, and a Work with this Title, The Prieſts Miror: But the moſt uſeful Thing that ever he did, and which will eternize his Memory, is the Concordance of the Bible of which he was the Inventor, and which he made many Monks of his Order labour at; who made a Concordance of all the Names and all the Verbs in the Bible. Conrade of Halberſtadt added the indeclinable Particles to it, and a while after it was perfected. The Poſtilles of Hugh upon the Bible were printed in 1504 at Baſil, in 1548 at Paris, and in 1600 at Venice: His Sermons were printed in 1479 at Zuvol, and the Prieſt's Miror at Lyons in 1554.

Conrade of Halberſtadt.

Conrade of Halberſtadt was likewiſe the Author of ſome other little Works of Sermons and Commentaries upon the Bible, which Tritbemius mentions.

William Perrault.

William Perrault a ſimple Monk of the Order of Preaching Friars in the Monaſtry of Lyons, and not Archbiſhop of that City as ſome have made him, had the Reputation of a good Preacher, and a good Divine. He made a Sum of the Virtues and Vices which was in good Eſteem that Age and the next, and is quoted with an Encomium by Gerſon, who ſays, That this Author did not heap together ſtuff out of his own Head, but took what he wrote from the bottom of the Holy Scriptures; and that if one ſhould go to compare the new Fancies of ſome with this Doctrine, he would ſoon ſee that they had neither Solidity nor Truth on their Side. This Sum has been printed a great many Times, and among others at Venice in 1492, and 1497, and at Baſil in 1497, at Lyons in 1551, and at Paris in 1629. He likewiſe was the Author of many Sermons, and 'tis not without Reaſon thought that thoſe which go under the Name of William of Paris belong to this Author. Tritbemius mentions a Work of his for the Inſtruction of Religious. This Author was contemporary with William of Paris, and St. Thomas of Aquino, and died as 'tis thought in the Year 1275.

Thomas of Chantpre.

Thomas of Chantpre born at Leuwe or Loo near Bruſſels, was at firſt a Regular Canon in the Monaſtry of Chantpré near Cambray, whence he removed into the Order of Preaching Friars; and after having ſtudied at Cologn under Albert the Great, about the Year 1255 he was made Subprior and Reader of the Dominicans of Louvain, and laſtly conſecrated Biſhop, to ſerve as a Suffragan and Aſſiſtant to the Biſhop of Cambray. The Year of his Death is not certainly known; Juſtus Lipſius places it on the 15*th* of May 1263. Others ſome Years after.

The principal Work of this Author is a Book, intituled, The Univerſal Good, or, The Bees; becauſe he therein makes uſe of the Figure of Bees to give us Precepts about the Carriage and Duty as well of Superiors as Inferiors. This Work was was printed at Douay in 1697, 1607, and 1627. The last of these Editions published by George Colvenerius a Dominican, Doctor and Chancellor of the University of Douay, is the perfectest. In this Work Thomas makes mention of another Work of his about the Nature of Things, in composing which he spent fifteen Years. He likewise wrote the Lives of St. Christina, of St. Lutgarda, and of St. Mary of Oignies, related by Surius in the 16*th* and 23*d* of the Month June, and that of St. Margarita of Ypres, printed by it self at Douay in 1618. 'Tis said that he understood the Greek, and that he made a Latin Version of the Works of Aristotle at the Desire of St. Thomas of Aquino, who made use of it for his Commentaries upon that Philosophy; but others will have the Version which St. Thomas used to be more ancient. Be it how it will 'tis a very vicious Translation, and some believe it was not made from the Greek of Aristotle, but from a Greek Translation, from an Arabick Translation of him.

Roger Bacon.

Roger Bacon of an illustrious Family, born about the Year 1206, at Ilchester in the County of Somerset in England, was surnamed, The Admirable Doctor, for his extensive Knowledge and penetrating Wit: But tho' he was a Religious of the Order of Minor Friars, yet he applied himself more to the Study of the Mathematicks, Physicks, and Chymistry, than of Divinity, and had entred so far into the Secrets of them that he was more than once accused for a Conjurer, and thereupon referred to his General, who condemned him in 1278 He was likewise next Year put in Prison by Order of Pope Nicholas IV. He is the Author of a great many Works, of which some are in print, and the rest in Manuscript; but as they are all Physical or Mathematical, except one Abridgment of Divinity not printed, 'twill be of no use to make a Catalogue of them here. He died in 1284.

Peter de Vignes.

Peter de Vignes a German, Secretary of State, and Chancellor to Frederick II. defended bravely the Rights of the Empire, and the Cause of his Prince against the Assaults of the Popes; he was deputed by his Master to the Council of Lyons in 1245, and there did his utmost to hinder his Condemnation; but his Services were but scurvily rewarded, for being accused the next Year of Unfaithfulness, Frederick put out his Eyes, and kept him in Prison at Capua, where he died in 1249. We have six Books of Letters written by him to divers Persons about the Business of the Empire, printed at Basil in 1566. and at Augsburg in 1609, and a Discourse containing the Complaints of the Emperor Frederick for his Deposition against the Pope and Cardinals, composed in 1230, and printed at Haguenau in 1539.

Humbert.

Humbert, surnamed of Romans, from the Place of his Birth, a Town of Dauphine, took his Degrees in the University of Paris, and made Profession in 1225 in the Convent of Jacobines of that Place, where he taught Divinity. He was in 1254 chosen fifth General of his Order; voluntarily resigned that Charge in 1263, and retired to Lyons, where he died a simple Monk in 1277. He is the Author of the following Works: The Mirror for Religious, or six Book of spiritual Instructions for a religious Life, printed at Louvain in 1575, and at Paris in 1622. A Letter about the three Vows of Religion, and the Virtues that ought to accompany them, printed with Sermons at Haguenau in 1508, and at Venice in 1603. A Commentary upon the Rule of St. Augustin, printed at Cosma in 1605, and at Mons in 1645. Two hundred Sermons printed as we said before at Haguenau and Venice: Two Books for the Instruction of Preachers, which Trithemius calls the Preachers Sum, printed at Vicenza in 1604, and at Barcelona in 1607. Some attribute to him the History of the Rise and of illustrious Men of the Order of the Preaching Friars, intituled, The Lives of the Brothers: But this Work belongs to Gerard de Frachet a Native of Limoges, a simple Monk, who composed it by the Order of Humbert his General. This Work was printed at Douay in 1519: Gerard de Frachet likewise composed a Chronicle from the Beginning of the World, to the Coronation of Charles King of Sicily; that is, to the the Year 1266, which may be seen in Manuscript in many Libraries. He died the 4*th* of October 1271.

Gerard de Frachet.

Bartholomew of Bresse.

Bartholomew of Bresse Professor and Interpreter of the Canon Law, who flourished about the Year 1240, composed divers Treatises of the Law: namely, A Repertory of the Decree divided into three Books, five Books upon the Decretals, divers Letters, and a Chronicle of the Cities of Italy, We have none of these Works. He died in the Year 1258, being 84 Years old.

Godfrey the Bald.

Godfrey the Bald Archbishop of Bourges is Author of the Life of St. William Bishop of St. Brieux, related by Surius in the 29*th* of July. He flourished about the Year 1240.

William of St. Martin.

William a Monk of St. Martin of Tournay, made about the Year 1246 a Collection of Sentences, or Flowers taken out of Works of St. Bernard, printed at Paris without a Name in 1499, and at Lyons in 1556. This we find in Manuscript with the Name of this Monk to it, in the Library of Citeaux.

Gilles of Orval.

Gilles a Monk of Orval of the Order of Citeaux in the Dutchy of Luxemburg, composed about the Year 1246, a History of the Bishops of Liege, published by Chapeaville, and and printed at Liege in his Collection in the Year 1613.

Bernard Priest and Sacrist of the Church of Compostella was in favour with Pope Innocent VI. who made him his Chaplain He composed a Commentary upon the first Books of the Decretals, printed at Paris in 1516, and a Treatise of notable Things, and Cases upon the five Books of Decretals, printed at Nuremberg in 1493, and at Strasburg in 1498; not to speak of his Collections of the Popes Bulls, and of the Chronicle of the ancient Kings of Spain, which is in the fourth Volume of Hispania illustris.

Conrade of Compostella. Conrade.

Conrade Bishop Coadjutor, or Vicar of the Archbishop of Mentz, composed a Chronicle of the History of Mentz from the Year 1140, to the Year 1250, printed at Basil in 1535, 1569, and among Urstitius's Historians of Germany. He likewise made a Chronicle of the former Times, printed at Frankfort in 1584.

Albert.

Albert a Monk of Stade in the Archbishoprick of Bremen was chosen Abbot of that Monastery in 1232; but desiring to put in execution a Bull which he had obtained of Pope Gregory IX. for the Reform of it to the Order of Citeaux, and the Monks refusing to comply with him therein, he removed into the Order of Minor Friars in the Year 1240, of which he was afterwards General. He made a Chronicle from the Beginning of the World to the Year 1256, taken from the best Authors, whose Words he relates, and clears from a great deal of false History, which the Authors of that Age used carefully to collect. This Work was published in 1587, by Reinerius Reineccius, and printed at Helmstadt, and since reprinted at Wittemberg in 1608.

David of Augsburg

David of Augsburg of the Order of Minor Friars, flourished about the Year 1250. He is the Author of three little Pieces of Piety; the first intituled, The Novice's Formula for the Reformation of the Outward Man; the second, A Formula for the Inward Man; and the third, A Mirror of the seven Steps of Religious: The two first were printed by themselves at Augsburg in 1593, and the last under the Name of St Bonaventure at Antwerp in 1591. They are all three, with the Name of David of Augsburg to them, in the Library of the Fathers, of Cologn, and in the last. Trithemius assures us that this Author made many Sermons, which have not yet seen the Light.

Alberick Verus.

Alberick Verus or Vere of the Family of the Earls of Oxford and Clare, a Regular Canon of St. Austin, flourished about the Year 1250. He composed a Treatise of the Eucharist, the Life of St. Osithus, and the Antiquities of his Monastery which bore the Name of this Saint. The Life is in Surius in the 7*th* of October.

Walter.

Walter of the Order of Minor Friars and Bishop of Poictiers, flourished about the Year 1250 He composed a Sum of Theology upon the Books of the Master of the Sentences, quoted by St. Thomas in his Sum of Quodlibetick Questions, and Sermons for the whole Year, written by Order of Pope Alexander IV.

Roger.

Roger wrote a History about the Year 1250 of the piteous Estate of the Kingdom of Hungary ruined by the Tartars, which is at the End of the Chronicles of Hungary.

Constantine.

Constantine of Orvieto flourished about 1250. There's no other Work ascribed to him but the Life of St. Dominick.

Engelbert.

Engelbert Abbot of the Order of Citeaux who flourished about the same Time, wrote the Life of St. Edwiga related by Surius in the 15*th* of October.

Robert Rich. Robert Bacon.

Robert Rich of Abington, Monk of Pontigny, and Robert Bacon an Oxonian Doctor, wrote the Life and History of the Translation of St. Edmond Archbishop of Canterbury, who died in 1240. Their Work was written ten or twelve Years after: It is in Surius in the 16*th* of November.

John de Dieu.

John de Dieu a Spaniard, Doctor in the Canon Law in the University of Bologn, and Canon of that City, flourished about the middle of this Century, and composed many Treatises of the Canon Law, and a Penitential addressed to the Bishop and Chapter of Bologn. None of these Works have been yet printed. The late Monsieur Le Feron Canon of Chartres, and Doctor of the Faculty of Paris, whose Learning and Piety are well known to the Learned World, had a Manuscript of it, from which Monsieur Petit the Publisher of the Penitential of Theodore took those Extracts which he hath put at the End of it. 'Tis likewise in Manuscript in the Cambridge Library. The other Works that Trithemius mentions of this Author are, His Sum of litigious Causes: The Judges Sum: The Tables of the Decree, and the Decretals: The Agreement of these two Works, and divers Canonical Questions. They say that some of these Works may be met with in Libraries.

John Colonna.

John Colonna a Roman of the Order of Preaching Friars, was made Archbishop of Messina in 1255 by Pope Alexander the IV. who the same Year appointed him to be his Legate and Governour of Taurmina. He composed a large Historical Collection in six Books, intituled, The Sea of

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flouriſhed in the Weſt in the Thirteenth Century.

Hiſtorics, which Trithemius, St. Antonius, and many others mention.

An Anonymous Author of the Life of St. Clare, related by Surius in the 12*th* of Auguſt, compoſed this Life by Order of Pope Alexander IV. about the Year 1255.

Anameleſs Author.

Rainier Sachon of Placentia, who from a Miniſter of the Waldenſes, became after his Converſion a Religious of the Order of Preaching Friars, and Inquiſitor againſt the Sect he had himſelf been of, flouriſhed about the Year 1254, and died about the Year 1260. He is Author of a Treatiſe againſt the Waldenſes, and other Hereticks of his Time, publiſhed by Gretſer, and printed at Ingolſtadt in 1613. He treats therein of the Origin of theſe new Sects, the Marks by which one may diſtinguiſh thoſe that are of them, their Manners, and how they are to be examined and puniſhed. There is at the End of this Treatiſe an Addition about Hypocrites, whom he call Stertzers and whoſe extravagant Errors he relates. Gretſer will not have this Work to be Rainier's.

Rainier Sachon.

Matthew Paris.

Matthew, ſirnamed Paris, whether from his having been born or having ſtudied in that City, flouriſhed in England from the Year 1220, to the Year 1260. He took a Religious Habit in the Moneſtery of St. Alban in 1217, and lived ſo regularly, that the Pope made choice of him to make a Reform in the Monaſtery of Holm in Norway. By Order of Henry III. King of England, who honoured him with his familiar Friendſhip, he undertook a Hiſtory of England, and that he might make a compleat Body of it, he copied that which had been compoſed by Richard of Wendower Prior of Beauvoir in the Dioceſs of Lincoln, from the Time of William the Conqueror to the Year 1235, and continued it to the Year of his Death 1259, though at firſt he deſigned to carry it no farther than 1250. It hath been continued to 1273, by William the Riſhanger Monk of St. Alban. Matthew Paris made afterwards a good many Additions or Supplements to his Hiſtory, and an Abridgment of it. He likewiſe wrote the Life of the two Offas Kings of Mercia, Founders of the Monaſtery of St. Alban, and the Lives of the twenty three firſt Abbots of that Monaſtery. The Stile of this Author hath a Tang of the barbarouſneſs of the Age he lived in, but he hath a great deal of good Senſe and Judgment: He ſpeaks very freely of the Powers of his Time, relates Matters fully and exactly, and confirms what he ſays by Letters and original Acts. The great Hiſtory of Matthew Paris was printed the firſt Time at London in 1571, and at Baſil in 1606; and afterwards with a great many Leſſons, and the Lives of the Offas, and the Abbots of St. Alban, and the Additions of Matthew Paris, and the Continuation of Riſhanger, at London in 1640, by the Care of William of Wats, who put notes to it, and a Gloſſary of the barbarous Words. This Edition was reprinted at Paris in 1544, and at London in 1684. The ſhort Hiſtory was never yet printed, but it is to be ſeen in Manuſcript in ſome Libraries in England, where is likewiſe in his Name, An Univerſal Hiſtory from the Beginning of the World to the Reign of William the Conqueror, which is very little different from that of Matthew of Weſtminſter.

William of Riſhanger.

Henry of Suſa.

Henry of Suſa was made Archbiſhop of Embrun about the Year 1258, and Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia in 1262, whence he got the Sirname of Oſtienſis, the Name by which he is commonly known and quoted. He was accounted the ingeniouſeſt Man of his Time for the Knowledgde of the Canon and Civil Law, and merited the Name he had of The Fountain and Glory of the Law. He compoſed a Sum of the Canon and Civil Law, which commonly goes by the Name of The Golden Sum, which hath been printed at Baſil in 1537, and 1573, and at Lyons in 1588, and 1597. He likewiſe made a Commentary upon the Book of Decretals by Order of Pope Alexander the IV. printed at Rome in 1470, and 1473, and at Venice in 1498, and 1581. Theſe Works are in great Eſteem with the Canoniſts, and may paſs for Originals, which thoſe that came after did nothing but copy. Authors cannot agree upon the Year of his Death, ſome place it in 1267, others put it off till 1281; but Meſſieurs De St. Martha by very good Reaſons prove that he died in 1271.

John Semeca.

John Semeca Povoſt of St. Stephen of Halberſtadt flouriſhed from the Year 1250 to the Year 1267, in which he died. He is Author of the common Gloſs upon the Decree of Gratian, which hath often been printed with its Text.

Anameleſs Author.

The Life of the bleſſed Godebert written by an Anonymous Author about the Year 1260, is in Surius in the 11*th* of April but in another Stile.

John of Parma.

John of Parma born in the Territory of Bologn, of the Order of Minor Friars, after having taught the Maſter of the Sentences at Paris, was choſen General of his Order about the Year 1250, and depoſed in 1256, retiring into a Hermitage near Rieti, where he lived thirty Years after. He compoſed a Treatiſe upon the Maſter of the Sentences; two Books of the Life of Religiouſes; a Writing with this Title. The Converſation of the bleſſed St. Francis with Dame Poverty, and a Treatiſe of the Benefits of the Creator. They attribute to him the Office of the Paſſion of our Lord.

John Chriſtophle.

John Chriſtophle of the Order of Preaching Friars, flouriſhed about the Year 1260. He publickly expounded the Holy Scripture, and wrote ſome Commentaries upon the New Teſtament.

Robert ſirnamed of Sorbonne, from the Town where he was born in the Dioceſs of Sens, Chaplain to King St. Lewis, was Canon of Soiſſons, and afterwards of Paris, where he founded in the Year 1252, the College or Houſe of Sorbonne. The Year wherein he died is not exactly known, but it muſt be between the Year 1271, and 1274.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flouriſhed in the Weſt in the Thirteenth Century.

Robert of Sorbonne.

We have in the Library of the Fathers three little Pieces of Piety of this Robert; the firſt of Conſcience; the ſecond of Confeſſion; and the third, intituled, The Way to Paradiſe. In the firſt he treats of the Book of the Conſcience; what this Book is, where it is to be found, and what it teaches, what is its Diviſion, how one muſt enter into it, and what its Parts are. He compares Men that deſire to be ſaved, and the Means of Salvation, with the Students that would take their Degrees and be licenſed by the Chancellor of the Univerſity, and the Methods they uſe to gain their Deſire. 'A Student, 'ſays he, that hath an earneſt Deſire to take his Degrees at 'Paris, and is afraid of being refuſed them, will take care 'to inform himſelf in what Book he ſhall be examined: ſo 'whereas we all deſire to go into Paradiſe, and all that 'are there ſhould be Doctors in Divinity, and there read the 'great Book of the Bible which is the Book of Life, in which 'all Things are written, and no one can come thither that is 'not firſt examined in the Book of Conſcience; the firſt thing 'we ought to do is to ſtudy this Book, which is much the 'more neceſſary, becauſe when one is refuſed by the Chancellor, he may come again the next Year, or get the Sentence revoked by Sollicitations or Preſents; whereas if one 'be rejected in the great Day of Judgment, there is no poſſible means of returning, nor any appeaſing of God the 'Great Chancellor by Prayers or Preſents. When one is refuſed by the Chancellor, there are not above five or ſix Perſons that know it, and the Diſgrace wears off with 'time: whereas he that is rejected at the Day of Judgment, ſhall have eternal Diſgrace in the Face of the 'whole World, and this Diſgrace ſhall be followed by eternal Torment. The Chancellor forces no Perſon to come 'for a Licenſe, he obliges no one to come to his Examination, but ſtays till he preſents himſelf of his own Accord; 'but God makes Men come whether they will or no to his 'Judgment. The Chancellor of Paris examines not in above 'ſeven or eight places of the Book, but the Great Chancellor, 'God, goes through the whole Book of Conſcience. He continues this Compariſon throughout his Book, but one may judge of the reſt by this Sample. at the End he ſpeaks of the Qualities of a good Confeſſor: He would have one chooſe a diſcreet, moral, underſtanding, zealous Man, with whom one is acquainted, before a Stranger.

The ſecond Treatiſe is an Examination of the Conſcience to make a good Confeſſion, wherein he counts over all the Sins that one can commit, and of which one ought to accuſe himſelf.

The third Treatiſe is as it were a Concluſion of the two former: He treats therein of the Means to obtain Remiſſion of Sins for Salvation, which are Contrition, Confeſſion and Satisfaction, which he calls the three Journeys of the Voyage to Paradiſe, each of which conſiſt of three Leagues. The Leagues of Contrition are, 1. Sorrow for having deſerved Hell. 2. Sorrow for having rendred one's ſelf unworthy of Glory. 3. Sorrow for having offended God: three Conditions neceſſarily required in Contrition, without which a Man cannot be ſaved; for it is not enough to be poſſeſſed with the Fear of Hell, or the Hope of Paradiſe, but he muſt have alſo the Love of God, and be in a Diſpoſition of not committing Evil, tho' there were neither Heaven nor Hell. Confeſſion is the ſecond Journey, which is followed by Abſolution. The Leagues of Confeſſion are, 1. That it be entire. 2. That it be voluntary. 3. That it be faithful; that is, accompanied with a full Aſſurance. The laſt Journey is Satisfaction, the three Leagues of which are, 1. To promote good and hinder Evil in others as much as lies in his Power. 2. To forgive Injuries for the Love of God. 3. to do Penance for his Sins according to his Condition and the Counſel of his Confeſſor. He recommends it to Prieſts to order ſuch Actions for Penances as are quite contrary to the Sins; and adviſes thoſe that would eſcape the Pains of Purgatory to implore the Prayers of others. Laſtly, he recommends Mortifications, Tears and Alms, as very proper Means of ſatisfying God for the Sins which we have committed.

A Man may give a Judgment by what we have ſaid of his Works, that they are very plain, and written in a very familiar Way; but his Doctrine is good and ſolid, and proved by Paſſages out of the Holy Scripture and the Fathers, of which he might have made a better Work, had not he, according to the bad Cuſtom of thoſe Times, been too much upon Diviſions and Compariſons, unworthy of the grave and ſerious Subject he treated.

Hannibal of Annebaud.

Hannibal of Annebaud a Roman, of the Order of Preaching Friars, after having taught Divinity at Paris, was Maſter of the Sacred Palace under the Popes Alexander IV. and Urban IV. This laſt made him Cardinal in the Month of May 1262. He died ten Years after. He hath wrote a Commentary upon the four four Books of the Maſter of the Sentences, printed under the Name of St. Thomas of Aquino in the Collection of his Works.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flouriſhed in the Weſt in the Thirteenth Century.

John of Galles.

John of Galles of the Order of Minor Friars, after having gone through his Studies in England, went into France and taught at Paris, where he flouriſhed about the Year 1260. He was ſirnamed, The Tree of Life, becauſe of his vaſt Learning, which according to the Cuſtom of that Age conſiſted in the Study of School Learning, and the Decretals, and in a good Proviſion of Hiſtorical and Moral Common Places. He made a great many Works of this Nature. Thoſe that are printed are, The Doctor's Pearl, or common Places upon all Sorts of Subjects; otherwiſe, A Sum of the Government of Life: The Ordinary; or, The Alphabet of a Religious Life: A ſhort Diſcourſe of the Worth and Abuſe of Philoſophy: Another Diſcourſe of the four Cardinal Virtues of the ancient Princes and Philoſophers: An Abridgment of the Lives of the famous Philoſophers, printed at Lyons in 1511. A Sum of Conferences, printed at Paris in 1516, and 1561. The Morals to the Fables of Ovid, printed at Paris in 1509. not to ſpeak of the ſecond Collection of Decretals which we have already mentioned. There are many other Manuſcript Works of this Author.

Gilbert of Tournay.

Gilbert or Guibert of Tournay, of the Order of Minor Friars, flouriſhed in the Univerſity of Paris about the Year 1270. He wrote at the Deſire of John Biſhop of Tournay, the Life of St. Eleutherius the firſt Apoſtle of that Country, publiſhed by Bollandus in the 10*th* of February. There are in the Library of the Fathers two Treatiſes of this Author's, one of the Functions of a Biſhop, and the Ceremonies of the Church, and the other of the Peace and Tranquility of the Soul. He is likewiſe the Author of many Sermons printed at Paris in 1518. Laſtly, Henry of Gand aſſures us that this Author made the Hiſtory of the firſt Voyage of St Louis into the Holy Land. He died before the Year 1293. for Henry of Gand who died in that Year mentions his Death.

Ralph Bocking.

Ralph Bocking of Chicheſter, a Monk of the Order of Preaching Friars, wrote about the Year 1270. the Life of St. Richard Biſhop of Chicheſter, the Abridgment of which is in Surius in the 3*d* of April, and was publiſhed by the Bollandiſts on the ſame Day. He compoſed ſome Sermons.

John Genes.

John Genes de la Caille, of the Order of Minor Friars, wrote a Treatiſe of the City of Jeſus Chriſt, printed at Reggio in 1501, and at Rome in 1523. He flouriſhed about the Year 1270.

William of Sandwich.

William of Sandwich, an Engliſhman, of the Order of Carmelites, compoſed about the Year 1270. a Chronicle of the Increaſe of the Carmelites in Syria and Paleſtine; of the Ruin of their Monaſteries in that Country, and their Removal into Europe. He ſtayed a long time upon Mount Carmel, and in the Holy Land, and did not return into England, till after the taking of Acre, or Ptolemais by the Saracens, which fell out in 1251. The Carmelites have not forgot to put this Author in the Collection of the Hiſtorians of their Order, which they made in four Volumes in Folio, with the Title of The Mirror of the Carmelites, printed at Antwerp in 1680. and the Bollandiſts have put him in their Hiſtorical Treatiſe of the Patriarchs of Jeruſalem, which is at the Beginning of the 3*d* Tome of the Month March. He likewiſe, if we may believe Trithemius, compoſed a Commentary upon the Maſter of the Sentences, Remarks upon the Rule of his Order, and a Collection of Decretals for the Religious.

William Guarron.

Trithemius among the School-divines of the Thirteenth Century, about the Year 1270. places William Guarron, an Engliſhman, of the Order of Minor Friars, who he ſays was Scotus his Maſter, and very expert in Ariſtotle's Philoſophy, according to the Cuſtom of the Modern Divines. He wrote a Commentary upon the four Books of Sentences.

Thomas Spott, and William Thornus.

Thomas Spott or Sprott, a Benedictine Monk of the Monaſtery of St. Auſtin in England, about the Year 1257. wrote the Lives of the Abbots of his Monaſtery, which were alſo written ſome time after by William Thornus Monk of the ſame Monaſtery, who copied the Hiſtory of Spott, only adding ſome Circumſtances.

Thomas of Lentini.

Thomas of Lentini a Sicilian of the Order of Preaching Friars, after having been a Voyage into the Holy Land, was made Archbiſhop of Coſenza, and ſent again into the Eaſt in 1272. by Pope Gregory X. in quality of his Legate, to govern the Patriarchate of Jeruſalem. He died there about the Year 1277. He wrote the Life of St. Peter Martyr of his Order, related by the Bollandiſts in the third Volume of April.

Martin.

Martin a Polander, and a Religious of the Order of preaching Friars, had the Office of Penitentiary of the Church of Rome, under the Popes John XXI. and Nicholas III. He was by the latter of theſe named to the Archbiſhoprick of Gneſne in Poland, the 23*d* of June in 1278. and died at Bologn the ſame Year as he was in his Way thither. He compoſed a Chronicle from the Birth of Jeſus Chriſt to the Year 1277. containing the Hiſtory of the Emperors and Popes. Many Additions have been made to this Chronicle, and among others the Hiſtory of the She Pope Joan, which are in the Baſil Edition of 1559, and the Antwerp one of 1574. But theſe Additions are retrenched in the Edition of John Fabricius a Regular Canon of the Order of Premontre, from an old Manuſcript of that time, printed at Cologn 1616. They aſcribe to him alſo Sermons printed at Strasburg in 1486, and 1488. Some Authors take notice of a Sum of the Canon Law, made by this Author, and by him called Martiniana, and of a Treatiſe of the memorable Things of Rome.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flouriſhed in the Weſt in the Thirteenth Century.

Nicholas of Hanaps.

Nicholas of Hanaps, ſo named from a Village in the Dioceſs of Rheims, where he was born, was of the Order of Preaching Friars. He performed the Office of Penitentiary at Rome about the Year 1270, and was made Patriarch of Jeruſalem in 1281. by Pope Martin IV. He died at Ptolemais in 1288. He made an Hiſtorical Collection of Examples of Vices and Vertues taken from the Holy Scripture, in thirty four Chapters, commonly called, The Poor Man's Bible; Some have falſly aſcribed this to St. Bonaventure, and among his Works it is printed: But the Manuſcripts give their Teſtimony for Nicholas of Hanaps, and it hath been printed under his Name at Tubingen in 1533, at Venice in 1537, at Paris in 1547, and at Baſil in 1550.

Bonaventure Brocard.

Bonaventure Brocard Native of Strasburg of the Order of preaching Friars, made the Voyage of the Holy Land about the Year 1280. and hath left us a very exact Deſcription of it, one part of which hath been publiſhed by Caniſius, in his ſixth Tome of Antiquities. Andricomius, who made uſe of it for the making his Map of the Holy Land, aſſures us that this Deſcription is entire in a Manuſcript of the Library of the Croiſiers of Cologn. They attribute to him the Annals of the Actions of the Emperor Frederick II. in the Holy Land, which Wolfangus, Laſius, and Simlerus mention.

Mark Paul.

Mark Paul a Venetian, Son of Nicholas Paul, after having travelled for a long time, wrote in Italian a Relation of his Travels, which hath been tranſlated into Latin, and printed at Baſil in 1532, and 1535. and at Helmſtat in 1585.

Matthew of Vendome.

Matthew of Vendome, ſo named from his Country, Abbot of St. Denis, flouriſhed under the Reign of St. Louis, and was one of thoſe to whom this Holy King left the Adminiſtration of his Kingdom, when he went his ſecond Voyage to the Holy Land; and the Man whom he named Executor of his Will. He governed the Abby of St. Denis from the Year 1260, to the Year 1286, in which he died. They aſcribe to him a Poem of Elegiack Verſe, containing the Hiſtory of the Tobies, dedicated to Bartholomew Archbiſhop of Tours: It is well enough, conſidering the time it was written in, and very ſententious; it hath been printed at Lyons in 1505, at Baſil in 1563, and at Breme in 1642.

Geoffrey of Beaulieu.

Geoffrey of Beaulieu of the Order of Preaching Friars, and Confeſſor to St. Lewis, whom he aſſiſted at his Death, wrote the Life of that King, by order of Pope Gregory X. Another Dominican named William of Chartres, Chaplain to that King, added to it a ſecond Book of the Life and Miracles of that Saint. Theſe two Books are printed in the 5*th* Tome of Ducheſne's Collection.

William of Chartres.

John Peckham.

John Peckham of the County of Suſſex in England, entered himſelf into the Order of Minor Friars; after having ſtudied at Oxford, he went to perfect himſelf at Paris, and returning into England he publickly profeſſed. But he was ſoon called back again to Paris, and from thence to Lyons, where he had a Canon's Place, which he enjoyed till his Death. From Lyons he went to Rome, where he got ſo into the Pope's Favour, that the Archbiſhoprick of Canterbury happening to be vacant, by the Reſignation of Robert Killwarbey, the Pope made choice of him to fill the Place; and accordingly he was conſecrated at Rome the 6*th* of March in 1278. ſo he returned into his own Country, raiſed to the chief Dignity in the Realm: But he was to pay a good Sum for it to the Pope, and he had great Differences with the Archbiſhop of York. Yet he peaceably enjoyed his Archbiſhoprick, and enriched, and raiſed his Kindred, who were poor and of mean Extraction. He died in 1291. He compoſed a Book, intituled, Collectanea, or, Collectorium Bibliorum, printed at Paris in 1514, and at Cologn in 1541. We have forty ſeven Eccleſiaſtical Conſtitutions of this Archbiſhop, and in the Libraries of England many other Treatiſes of his in Manuſcript, as, A Book of the Trinity: Conferences for all the Sundays in the Year: Meditations upon the Body of Jeſus Chriſt: Diſputes between St. Thomas and this Author.

William Durants.

William Durants born at Puy in Languedock, a Scholar of Henry of Suſa's, firſt ſtudied at Bologn, and having there taken the Doctor's Cap, he taught the Canon Law at Modena, from whence Pope Clement IV. called him to be his Chaplain, and Auditor of the Palace. He was by Gregory X. ſent Legate to the Council of Lyons in 1274. and at laſt made Biſhop of Mende in 1286. He afterwards refuſed the Archbiſhoprick of Ravenna, offered him by Boniface VIII. but he accepted the Legation to the Sultan of Egypt, and having gone thither, he died at Nicoſia in the Iſland of Cyprus on the 6*th* of July in the Year 1296. He was ſo excellent at Diſpatch of Buſi-neſs, that he was ſirnamed, The Father of Practicks. He hath left us a Book intituled, The Mirror of the Law, in three Parts, dedicated to Cardinal Ottobon, afterwards Adrian V. The Repertory of the Law taken out of this Work, and the Rationale of Divine Offices: A Commentary upon the Canons of the Council of Lyons, and an Abridgment of the Gloſſes, and the Text of the Canon Law. The Mirror and the Repertory of the Law have been printed with the Rationale, at Lyons in the Year 1516, and 1551. The Mirror was likewiſe printed by it ſelf at Baſil in 1574, and at Franckfort with the Repertory in 1592. The Rationale is the moſt common, and hath been printed many times in many places. The Commentary upon the Canons of the Council of Lyons hath been printed at Fano in 1569. and the Abridgment of the Gloſſes at Paris in 1519.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flouriſhed in the Weſt in the Thirteenth Century.

Anonymous Authors.

An Anonymous Author of the Order of Preaching Friars, who began the Annals of the Dominicans of Colmar, which are printed among the Hiſtorians of Germany, wrote about the Year 1280. but this Chronicle has by ſome other been continued down to the Year 1302. It is full of Trifles.

John of Hayde.

John of Hayde flouriſhed under Edward King of England, about the Year 1280. He wrote the Paſſion of St. Laurence, and the Life of St. Maclius.

William de la Mare.

William de la Mare of the Order of Minor Friars, flouriſhed about the Year 1280. He wrote a Commentary upon the Maſter of the Sentences, and having undertaken to criticiſe upon the Works of St. Thomas, he wrote a Book, intituled, The Correctory of the Works of St. Thomas, and of the Additions to the Works of St. Bonaventure.

Rupert of Ruſſia.

Rupert or Robert of Ruſſia, of the Order of Minor Friars, flouriſhed about the Year 1280. He taught Divinity with Reputation. He is the Author of many Works. Trithemius takes notice only of theſe: An Explanation of the Rules of St. Francis, dedicated to Aimon an Engliſhman General of his Order: Four Books upon the Sentences, and many Sermons. Bellarmine adds to theſe a Book of the Soul. I could not get notice of any of his Works, or know whether they are printed or no.

Ulric of Strasburg.

Ulric born at Strasburg, of the Order of Preaching Friars, flouriſhed in the Univerſity of Paris, about the Year 1280. He compoſed a Sum of Divinity; a Treatiſe upon the Sentences; a Treatiſe of the Soul; another Treatiſe of Caſes of Conſcience, and Queſtions of the Law; and Commentaries upon ſome Books of Ariſtotle. None of theſe Works are to be met with in Print; but ſome attribute an Abridgment which is among the Works of St. Thomas Aquinas to him. He died young, and before he had gotten a Doctor's Cap.

St. Gertrude, and St. Matilda.

St. Gertrude and St. Matilda Siſters, and Religiouſſes of the Monaſtery of Benedictines of Helfenden in the County of Mansfeld, compoſed about the End of this Century Books of Piety in German, which have ſince been tranſlated into Latin; namely, St. Gertruda Spiritual Exerciſes, and St. Matilda Revelations. Theſe little Pieces have been printed at Paris in 1513, at Cologn in 1536, at Venice in 1522, and 1588, and in other Places. They died about the Year 1290. The former of them was made Abbeſs of Rodalſdorf in 1251. whence ſhe was the next Year with her Nuns removed to Helfenden.

Thierri of Apolda.

Theodorick of Apolda in Thuringen, of the Order of preaching Friars, wrote about the Year 1289. the Life of St. Elizabeth Daughter to Andrew King of Hungary, and Widow of Lewis Landgrave of Thuringen, in eight Books, publiſhed by Caniſius in the 5th Tome of his Antiquities. He ſayeth in his Preface that he was above ſixty Years old when he began this Work, and had been two and forty Years in his Order. Whatſoever Volſius ſays, it doth not appear that the Life of St. Dominick in ſeven Books belongs to another Thierri; but one may take notice that Surius who publiſhed it, according to his Cuſtom, hath changed the Stile in many Places.

Gobelin.

About the End of this Century, they place Gobelinus, who wrote the Life of St. Meinulphus, Archdeacon of Paderborne, publiſhed by Brouverus in 1616. with the Life of St. Meinwerc Biſhop of that City.

Egehard.

Egehard Abbot of Urangen, wrote about the ſame time a Chronicle of the Biſhops of Hildeſheim from Charlemagne, to the Year 1290. publiſhed in the ſame Place by Brouverus, with the Life of Godehard Biſhop of Hildeſheim.

Conrade, and Stephanardus.

Thoſe who have written of the Authors of the Dominican Order, join two of them together who lived about the End of this Age. Conrade a German, who about the Year 1290. wrote a Life of St. Dominick, and Stephanardus a Milan Divine, who made a Chronicle of Milan in Verſe: He ſeems to be the ſame with Stephanardus Flamminus, who wrote a Hiſtory in Verſe of the Snares laid by the Biſhop of Como for Vicount Otho, where he accuſes the Pope of having had a Hand in it, ſpoken of by Paulus Jovius; and perhaps that is nothing but a Fragment of his Chronicle. We have none of theſe Works.

Ralph of Colonna.

They place in this Century one Ralph of Colonna, Canon of Chartres, who about the Year 1290. compoſed a Treatiſe of the Tranſlation of the Empire, dedicated to Lambert of Caſtille Profeſſor of the Law, wherein he would prove that they were the Popes who removed the Greek Empire to the Latins, publiſhed by Goldaſtus in the ſecond Tome of his Monarchy. The Treatiſe is well enough written, and full of very important Matters; but is likewiſe full of Prejudices for the Court of Rome, which make him maintain a falſe Propoſition.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flouriſhed in the Weſt in the Thirteenth Century.

Thomas Palmeran.

Thomas Palmeran an Iriſhman, Doctor of the Houſe of Sorbonne, is the Author of two Collections, one taken out of the Holy Scripture, the other out of the Fathers, intituled, Flowers of the Bible, and Flowers of the Fathers, and printed at Paris in 1556, and at Lyons in 1678, and 1679. He flouriſhed about the Year 1290. as it is ſet down in ſome Manuſcripts of his Works.

Guy de Baif.

Guy de Baif born at Reggio, a Lawyer and Archdeacon of Bologn, flouriſhed about the Year 1290. He compoſed three Books of Commentaries upon the Decree, and five upon the Decretals: A Work called, The Roſary: It was printed at Venice in 1580. with the Notes of Superant and Tretius.

Gregory Cairguent

Gregory Cairguent, or of Wincheſter, a Benedictine Monk of Gloceſter, wrote the Annals of his Monaſtery, from the Year 680, to the Year 1291. He took the Habit in 1217.

Raimond of Martins.

Raimond of Martins a Catalonian, of the Order of preaching Friars, profeſſed in the Monaſtery of Barcelona, and recommended himſelf by his Knowledge in the Oriental Tongues, which was very rare in that Time: He undertook that Study by the Advice of Raimond of Pennafort, that he might confute the Jews and Saracens out of their own Works. In purſuance of which he wrote that Book called, The Dagger of Faith, in which he encounters the Jews and Saracens at their own Weapons. Porchet the Carthuſian made uſe of it, and took out of it almoſt all that he wrote in his Book intituled, The Victory over the Jews, but he acknowledges to whom he is beholden; whereas Peter Galatin of the Order of Minor Friars, has confidently copied Porchet and Raimond in his Book of the Secrets of the Catholick Faith without ſo much as naming either of them; although all the Rabbinical Learning he there makes a Noiſe with be taken out of their Works. That of Raimond hath been printed with the learned Notes of Monſieur Voiſin at Paris in 1651, and at Leipſick in 1687. with an Introduction by Benedict Capſovius, and a Treatiſe by Herman a converted Jew. This Author flouriſhed about the End of this Century.

Nicholas the Gaul.

Nicholas the Gaul ſeventh General of the Carmelite Order, after having diſcharged that Employ for twenty Years, retired into a Solitude about the End of the Century. He is placed among the Church-Authors, becauſe of a Piece of his, intituled, The Arrow of Fire, wherein he deplores the Miſchance which happened to the Monaſtery of Mount Carmel of his Order which had been burned by the Saracens, and many Monks killed.

Sigeard.

Sigeard Monk of St. Alban in England, wrote the Life of that Saint, which Tritbemius mentions, and which Voſſius ſays is that which is in the fifth Tome of the Antiquities of Caniſius. He flouriſhed at the End of this Century.

Matthew of Aquaſporta.

Matthew of Aquaſporta, twelfth General of the Order of Minor Friars, Penitentiary of Rome, afterwards Biſhop of Porto, and made Cardinal by Nicholas the IV. diſtinguiſhed himſelf by divers Works he is Author of; namely, A Treatiſe of Divinity upon the Maſter of the Sentences: An Inventory, or an Abridgment, with a Table of the Sentences: Quodlibetick Queſtions: A Commentary upon St. Paul's Epiſtle to the Romans: Poſtilles upon the Pſalms, and upon the Epiſtles of St. Paul, and divers Sermons. He died when Boniface VIII. was Pope.

Arlotte of Tuſcany.

Arlotte of Tuſcany, General of the Order of Minor Friars about the Year 1290. is Author of a Concordance of the Old and New Teſtament. He likewiſe wrote ſome Sermons.

Luke of Padua.

About the ſame Time flouriſhed Luke of Padua, a Religious of that Order, who compoſed ſome Sermons.

Simon William, and Henry of Affligem.

Simon Monk of Affligem, who flouriſhed about the End of this Century, particularly applied himſelf to the making Extracts and Abridgments of the Writings of the Fathers, and compoſed after this Manner a great many Works. Thoſe that Henry of Gand and Trithemius mention are: An Abridgment of the Morals of St. Gregory upon Job: Sermons upon the Song of Songs: The Viſion of a Lay-brother of the Monaſtery of Poſtela, of the Order of Premontre: Extracts of the Sermons of St. Gregory upon Ezekiel: Extracts of the Conferences of the Fathers, and of the little Treatiſe of St. Richard of St. Victor, concerning the twelve Patriarchs. About the ſame time William a Monk and Prior of the ſame Monaſtery of Affligem, tranſlated into German Verſe the Life of St. Lutgardus, written in Latin by Thomas of Chantpre; and into Latin he tranſlated a Relation of the Viſions of a Nun of the Order of Citeaux who had written it in German. Henry of Gand ſpeaks of theſe two Authors, and of a third, a Monk of the ſame Monaſtery named Henry, a Native of Bruſſels, who made a Kalender, in which he ſet down not only the Days, but the Hours and Minutes too of the Lunations.

Alexander of Dol.

Henry de Gand makes mention of one Alexander of Dol, who wrote a Book in Verſe, intituled, Doctrinal, which was very much in Vogue among the Grammarians of his Time.

Trithemius

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flourished in the West in the Thirteenth Century.

Tritbemius calls him Alexander of Ville-Dieu, and says that it was commonly believed that he was a Dominican. He ascribes to him Treatises of the Kalendar, of the Sphere, and of Arithmetick.

About the same time flourished Gerard a Dominican, who taught Divinity at Paris, and afterwards at Liege, whence he had the Sirname of Gerard of Liege; he is Author of a Treatise in seven Books, intituled, The Mirror of Preachers, or, The Doctrine of the Heart, which contains the Matters wherein Preachers ought to instruct Believers, printed at Naples in 160-.

Peter the Provincial.

Henry of Gand makes mention of a religious Dominican Provincial of France named Peter, who made Sermons upon all the Sundays and Holidays of the Year, which he says were made common use of in his time.

Engelhard.

Engelhard Abbot of Lankaim about the Year 1290. wrote the Life of St. Matilda Daughter to Bertoul Earl of Andechs, Abbess of Diessen, and afterwards of Oelstisten; it is in the fifth Tome of the Antiquities of Canisius.

Henry of Gand.

Henry Goethals, commonly called Henry of Gand, from the Name of his Country, Archdeacon of Tournay, took his Degrees in the Faculty of Paris, and taught there with Reputation, which according to the Custom of those times got him the Name of The solemn Doctor. He composed a Sum of Divinity, printed by Ascensius Badius at Paris in 1520. and Quodlibetick Questions in Divinity upon the four Books of the Master of the Sentences, printed at Paris in 1518, and at Venice in 1615. A Treatise of famous Men or Ecclesiastical Authors, in which he continues the Works of St. Jerom, and Sigebert of Gemblours, down to his own time, beginning with Fulbertus Bishop of Chartres, and ending at Evrard of Bethune. This Work was printed with those of St. Jerom and Sigebert in the Editions of Sifroy at Cologn, in 1580. and Aubertus de la Mire at Antwerp in 1639. He likewise is the Author of a Treatise of Virginity; a Treatise of Penance, Sermons, and the Life of St. Eleutherius Bishop of Tournay, not to speak of his Commentaries upon Aristotle, Works which Tritbemius speaks of, and which may be seen in Manuscript in some Libraries in Flanders. This Author died the 29*th* of June 1239.

Richard of Middleton.

Richard of Middleton, in Latin De media villa, sirnamed, The Solid Doctor, an Englishman of the Order of Minor Friars, after having gone through his Studies at Oxford, flourished in the University of Paris about the Year 1290, and returning into his own Country, did there teach with great Reputation, and died there in 1300. He composed four Books of Questions upon the Master of the Sentences, printed at Venice in 1509, and 1589, and at Bresse in 1591. and eighty Quodlibetick Questions of Divinity, which are at the End of his Commentaries upon the Sentences. He likewise wrote a Commentary upon the four Gospels, a Commentary upon the Epistles of St. Paul: A Treatise of Law about the Order of Judgments: But these Works have not been yet printed.

James de Voragine.

Jacobus de Voragine, so called from the Name of the City of Warragio near Genes, where he was born, entred himself into the Order of Preaching Friars, and after having been Provincial in Lombardy, he was made General of his Order, and at last in the Year 1292. raised to the Archbishoprick of Genes, wherein he remained till 1298. the Year of his Death. He is Author of the Golden Legend which contains the Lives of the Saints, where he hath amassed together without Judgment or Discretion a Heap of Stories for the most Part fabulous. See what a Judgment Melchior Canus gives of him, 'That Legend, says he, was written by a Man that had a 'Mouth of Iron, and had a Heart of Lead, and who had 'neither Justice nor Prudence in him. The Miracles that we read there are rather Monsters of Miracles than true ones.' Yet it has sold mightily, and it was one of the oftenest printed Books in the fifteenth Century, in which it was printed at Nuremberg in 1478, and 1493. at Deventer in 1479, and 1483, at Venice in 1483, at Basil in 1486, at Strasburg in 1496, and at the Beginning of the Sixteenth Century, at Lyons, in 1510, and at Strasburg in 1518. There is an Abridgment made of it printed at Venice in 1498. The same Author made a great many Sermons: namely, for the Lent, for the Sundays of the Year, for the Saints Days, upon the Griefs of the Virgin, and a Work, intituled, Mariale Aureum, containing a hundred and sixty Discourses in an Alphabetical Order in Praise of the Blessed Virgin; but they are just as much worth as his Legend, both for the Stile which is mean and trivial, and for the Matters they contain. These Sermons have been often printed singly, and altogether at Mentz in 1616. But tho' his Works will not commend this Archbishop, yet certainly his Life and Piety will; for he was very devout, and very charitable to the Poor, to whom he distributed almost all the Revenues of his Archbishoprick. He very much studied the Works of St. Austin, and had made an Abridgment of him. He likewise procured a Version of the Bible into the Italian Tongue.

Guy of Munois.

Guy of Munois in the Diocess of Autun, was Monk of the Abby of St. Germain of Auxerre, and afterwards Abbot thereof in 1277. This Dignity was disputed with him, and he was forced to go twice to Rome, to plead his Right to it, where after eight Years he at last gained his Cause. In 130-. he voluntarily resigned his Abby, and retired into a private Cell, where he died the 23*d* of February, in 1313. He studied Divinity and the Canon Law at Orleans, and at Paris for nine Years. Father Labbe hath published a History of the Abbots of St. Germain of Auxerre, from the Year 1189 to 127-. composed by this Author.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flourished in the West in the Thirteenth Century.

Ptolomy of Lucques.

Ptolomy of Lucques, of the Order of preaching Friars, was a Scholar of St. Thomas Aquinas, and afterwards Bishop of Torcello. He has wrote the Lives of the Popes to Celestin V. in whose Time he lived.

John the Teutonick.

John the Teutonick of the Order of preaching Friars, Bishop of Bosnia in Hungary, flourished at the End of this Century, and the Beginning of the next. He composed a Sum for Preachers, printed at Rutlingen in 1487. and the Confessor's Sum, printed at Lyons in 1518. They say too that it was he that made the Table of the Sum of the Apparatus of Raimond of Pennafort.

Garsias.

Among the Authors that flourished at the End of this Century, Tritbemius places a Spaniard named Garsias, who taught the Civil and Canon Law with Reputation, and composed many Works upon that Subject, and particularly a Commentary upon the Decretals.

Henry Suson.

Henry, or as others call him Amandus Suson, of the Order of preaching Friars, lived at the End of this Century, or in the next, for some Place his Death in 1306, and some put it off till 1365. but be that how it will, he is the Author of divers little Works of Piety in German, which have been translated by Surius, and printed at Cologn in 1588. The Titles of them are these: The Clock of Wisdom: A Hundred Meditations upon the Passion of Jesus Christ, with as many Prayers: A Discourse of the nine Rocks: A Dialogue about Truth: Sermons for all the Year, for the Holidays of the Saints, and for Lent: Divers Letters full of pious Thoughts. The first of these Works was printed at Venice in 1492, and in 1539. at Naples in 1558, and in other Places. There is another Work of Piety of this Author's, called, The daily Office of the eternal Wisdom.

Walter of Exeter.

Walter of Exeter, of the Order of preaching Friars, made the Life of Guy Earl of Warwick, about the Year 1301.

Francis of Moncade.

Francis of Moncade Marques of Avetone, and Earl of Osona, to the Nobleness of his Extraction joined the Love of Knowledge and learned Men. He wrote at the Beginning of the Fourteenth Century, the History of the Expedition of the Catalonians and Arragonians, under Roger Vice-Admiral of Sicily, against the Turks and Greeks: which he composed from the Memoirs of Raimond of Montaner, who was present in the Expedition, and from the Writings of George Pachymere, and Nicephorus Gregoras thereon Authors whose Works are only in Manuscript.

Thus you have the greatest Part of the Authors that wrote in the Thirteenth Century. No doubt there were more whose Names are quite lost, and others whose Works are not come out of the Libraries where they are in Manuscript. Among such we may take notice of these. William a converted Jew, and Deacon of the Church of Bourges, (a Disciple of St. William Archbishop of Bourges from the Year 1199, to the Year 1210.) who after his Conversion wrote a Work against the Jews, which is in Manuscript in the Library of the Jacobines of the Great Convent of Paris. Adam of Chamilly, a Monk of Citeaux, made Bishop of Senlis in 1230, and died in 1250. many of whose Sermons we find in Manuscript in the Library of Longpont. Moneta of the Order of preaching Friars, who flourished about the Year 1240, and hath left us a Sum of Divinity: Alberick a Monk of Citeaux, that made a Chronicle to the Year 1241. Albertanus a Lawyer of Bresse in Italy, who flourished about the Year 125-. some of whose Treatises of Piety we have in Manuscript; viz. A Treatise of the Love of God and our Neighbour: A Treatise of Consolation and Advice, and a Treatise to teach one to hold one's Tongue and speak. William Brosse raised to the Archbishoprick of Sens in the Year 1258, composed a Sum of Virtues and Vices which is in the Library of Monsieur Colbert. Benedict Bishop of Marseilles Elect in 1229, who died in 1254. and left a Treatise of Faith which is in the same Library. Thomas Bockingham Chancellor of the University of Oxford, who flourished about the Year 1270. and made a Commentary upon the Master of the Sentences, and some other Commentaries upon the Books of the Holy Scripture, which are in the Libraries of England. Odo Rigaud, of the Order of Minor Friars, made Archbishop of Rouen in 1247, who died in 1275 whose Sermons and Commentaries upon the Pentateuch, upon the Psalms, and upon the Gospels we have. William of Tripoli of the Order of preaching Friars in the Monastery of Acre in Syria, who wrote the History of the Saracens and Mahomet; and William of Rubrock of the Order of Minor Friars, who wrote an Itinerary, or a Relation of a Journey into the East upon the same Subject. Baldwin a Regular Canon of Premontre, Author of a Chronicle from the Birth of Jesus Christ to the Year 1294. Stephen a Monk of Cella Nova in Spain, who composed a Relation of the Miracles of St. Rodosindus Bishop and Monk. John of Nusco Monk of Monte

Monte-Virgine in the Kingdom of Naples, Author of the Life of St. William Founder of his Order: Conrade Monk of Schur, a Chronicle of whose is to be seen. Ralph of Noir an Englishman, who composed two Chronicles, one a large one, the other an Abridgment. Alexander of Somerset, Prior of the Monastery of Regular Canons of Esby in England, who wrote the Lives of many Saints, and made a Kalendar in Verse, Works which are in Manuscript in some English Libraries: And in short, many other Authors whose Works may be found in some Library or other.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flourished in the West in the Thirteenth Century.

CHAP. V.

The History of the Greek Church, and of the Authors who flourished in the East, during the Thirteenth Century.

The History of the Greek Church, &c.

THE State of the Eastern Empire, and of the Greek Church in the Thirteenth Century, was subject to various Revolutions. The Emperor Isaac Angelus, after he had reigned Nine Years, was dethron'd in the Year 1195. by his own Brother Alexius, who took upon him the Sirname of Comnenus, and after he had put out his Brother's Eyes, cast him and his young Son into Prison. The Son having made his Escape from Constantinople, went into Germany to wait upon his Brother-in-Law the Emperor Philip, by whose Advice he made his Application to the Army of the Croisade, which was ready to march for the Conquest of the Holy Land. He desir'd that before they march'd into Palestine, they would re-establish him in Constantinople, and expel the Usurper, withal promising afterwards to joyn Forces with them, and to help them to considerable Supplies. This Proposal being made to the Croisade, at their Rendezvous at Venice, by the Emperor's Ambassadors and the Deputies of Alexius, was accepted by the Venetians and French, whose Army march'd to, and besieg'd Constantinople in the Year 1203. and within eight Days took it. Alexius the Elder fled by the Bosphorus and the Euxine Sea to Zagora, an Isle of Thrace. Isaac was set at Liberty, and re-established on the Throne with his Son Alexius. This Prince promis'd to recognize the Pope, to put an End to the Schism, and to reconcile all his Subjects to the Church of Rome: But not being as yet altogether in a Capacity of performing what he had promised to the Princes of the Croisade, he prevail'd upon them to put off their Expedition into the Holy Land till Easter following. During this time the Latin Army sat down before the Gates of Constantinople, and that natural Aversion which they bore to the Greeks, was the Cause of frequent Quarrels and Contests between them; in one of which Rencounters, several Soldiers of the Army were so far incensed by those who liv'd in the Suburbs of the City, that they set it on Fire, and destroyed Part of it. This Accident rendred not only the Latins, but also the two Emperors whom they had re-established, odious to the Greeks, and gave Occasion to one of their Kinsmen nam'd Murzulphus, to usurp the Government. It was by his Advice that Alexius had refus'd to grant to the Croisade what he had promis'd them. At last they broke out in an open War with them, wherein the Greeks not meeting with that Success which they hop'd for, the Constantinopolitans, who suppos'd they were betray'd by their Princes, proclaim'd Nicolas Canabus Emperor. Murzulphus having seiz'd upon Alexius, caused himself to be acknowledg'd Emperor by the People, clap'd Canabus into Chains, strangled Alexius in Prison, and put an End to the Life of Isaac. But he was soon after chastis'd for his Treason by the Croisade, who immediately laid Siege to Constantinople, and took it by Storm on the 12*th* of April 1204. Murzulphus made his Escape the Night before, and and Theodorus Lascaris was elected in his Room by the Greeks. The City was given up to be plunder'd by the Soldiers, who committed all Manner of Cruelties and Outrages. After the taking of this City the Latins elected Baldwin Count of Flanders for Emperor, and Thomas Morosini a Venetian for Patriarch: For they had agreed that if the Emperor were a Frenchman, the Patriarch should be a Venetian. They became Masters of all the Churches, and supplied them with Latin Priests: And afterwards enlarging their Conquests in Greece, they reduced under their Obedience almost all that had belonged to the Grecian Emperors in Europe, and divided it among them. Murzulphus and Old Alexius fell into the Hands of the Latins, the former was put to Death, and the latter imprison'd: So that, there only remain'd Theodorus Lascaris, who having escaped into Asia, set up the Imperial Seat at Nice.

The new Emperor Baldwin wrote a Letter to the Pope, upon the taking of Constantinople, wherein he heaps up a great many Reproaches upon the Greeks, exaggerates their Perfidiousness, their Wickedness, and their Hatred to the Church of Rome, and gives a Narrative of the Abuses which had crept in amongst them. Pope Innocent III. upon the Receipt of this Letter, wrote to the Emperor Baldwin, to the Bishops and Priests of the Latin Church, who were at Constantinople, to use their Endeavours to reduce the Greeks under the Obedience of the Holy See. But notwithstanding all their Endeavours, and tho' the Pope's Legates made use of very harsh and rigorous Methods to constrain them to it, yet they could not gain their End, and the Emperor, Henry Baldwin's Successor, was forced to put a Stop to those Proceedings; to open the Greek Churches, and to set their Priests and Monks at Liberty in spite of Pelagius the Pope's Legate who oppos'd it. The Bulgarians in the Year 1204. return'd to their Obedience to the Pope. Theodorus Comnenus Prince of Epirus abjur'd the Schism under the Pontificate of Honorius III. and afterwards having taken upon him the Title of Emperor of Constantinople, and become Master of Thessalonica, he was excommunicated by Pope Gregory IX. in the Year 1229.

The History of the Greek Church, &c.

The Emperor Baldwin did not long enjoy his new Dignity, for he was taken on the 15*th* of August 1205. by John King of the Bulgarians, who kept him in Prison for Sixteen Months, at the End of which he died a cruel Death. After his Death, his Brother Henry was advanced to the Empire in the Year 1206. who reign'd ten Years or thereabouts, and had for his Successor Peter of Courtnay Count of Auxerre, who had married Yolanta the Sister or Daughter of Henry. But that unfortunate Prince never enter'd into the Possession of the Empire: For being on his Way thither, after he had been crown'd at Rome by Honorius III. he was taken in his Passage thro' Thrace, by Theodorus Prince of Epirus, and sent to the Emperor Theodorus Lascaris, who put him to Death. His Son Robert succeeded him in the Year 1221. who dying in the Year 1228. was succeeded by his Brother Baldwin II. from whom the Greeks retook Constantinople in the Year 1261.

During this the Greeks had an Emperor at Nice in Bithynia: Theodorus Lascaris was the first, and in the Year 1222. John Ducas his Son-in-Law succeeded him. This John retook from the Latins a Part of those Countries which they had conquer'd, and after he had reigned three and thirty Years, left his Son Theodore Lascaris Heir to his Estates, which he did not long enjoy, being taken away by Death in the fourth Year of his Reign, A. D. 1259. His Son John being in his Minority was soon turn'd out of the Empire by Michael Palæologus the Son of Andronicus Palæologus, and by the Mother's Side descended from the Family of the Comneni, who put to Death the Man whom Theodore had nominated for the young Prince's Tutor, caus'd himself at first to be declared Regent, afterwards Associate of the Empire, and at last rid himself of his Collegue, after he had caus'd his Eyes to be put out. Michael had an happy Beginning of his Reign by the taking of Constantinople, which Alexius Strategopulus Cæsar had seiz'd upon by the Treachery of some Greeks, who were in the City in the Year 1261. and drove out thence the Latins.

Projects for the Reunion of the Greeks and Latins.

Under the Empire of John Ducas, Pope Gregory IX. entred into a Negotiation in the Year 1233. with Germanus set on foot Patriarch of Constantinople, residing at Nice, for the Re-union of the two Churches. That Pope wrote a Letter to the Patriarch (related by Matthew Paris) about the Differences in Religion which were between the Greeks and Latins; and made choice of two Monks of the Order of the preaching Friars, nam'd Hugh and Peter, and two of the Order of Minor Friars, nam'd Aimo and Radulphus, to treat with the Patriarch. They met at Nice, where they had several Conferences with the Greeks about the Procession of the Holy Ghost, and the Celebration of the Eucharist with unleaven'd Bread. But they came to no Conclusion, and the Patriarch of Constantinople told them that he would call a Synod, where the Patriarchs of Jerusalem and Antioch would meet him, with whom he might resolve upon something in the Case. The Pope's Advocates retir'd to Constantinople, from whence they were called to Nymphea in Bithynia, near the Euxine Sea, where that Council of the Greeks was held on the Morrow after Easter-day, in the Year 1233. They there repeated all that had been said on either Side at Nice, concerning the two Points in question; and after several Disputes, the Greeks gave in Writing a Declaration, wherein they maintain'd, That one might celebrate the Eucharist with unleaven'd Bread, and the Latins presented a Profession of Faith, concerning the Procession of the Holy Ghost. The Latins refuted the Opinion of the Greeks about unleaven'd Bread by the Authorities of Scripture, and of the Greek Fathers: The Greeks oppos'd the Testimonies of others against them, and the Dispute lasted till late at Night. They had no Conference afterwards for and Latins.

for several Days together; and at last the Emperor John Ducas propos'd to the Latins, to leave out that Addition made in the Creed about the Procession of the Holy Ghost; and to permit the Greeks to adhere to their Opinion; and that the Greeks should acknowledge and approve of the Sacrament of the Latins, celebrated with unleaven'd Bread: But the Pope's Legates reply'd, that the Pope would not part with the least Iota of the Faith; and that the Greeks ought to believe, and preach to others concerning the Body of Jesus Christ, that it may as well be done with unleaven'd as with leaven'd Bread. And concerning the Holy Ghost, that he proceedeth as well from the Son as from the Father; and that they should inculcate this Doctrine to the People: But that the Pope would not force them to add this Clause expresly in their Creed, when they sung it in the Church, nor condemn the Sacrament of the Greeks celebrated with leaven'd Bread. The Greeks were very much nettled at this Proposition, and having called together the Pope's Legates a second time, order'd their Profession of Faith about the Procession of the Holy Ghost to be read before them, and offer'd several Passages of the Fathers to refute it. The Pope's Legates adhered stiffly to their Sentiments, and both Sides parted looking on each other as Hereticks. Afterwards the Pope's Legates obtain'd Leave to depart. The Greeks sent in all haste after them, to regain the Declaration which they had given them concerning unleaven'd Bread; and gave them another concerning the Procession of the Holy Ghost, wherein they produced a great many Passages out of the Greek Fathers, to prove that he proceeds only from the Father.

There was likewise another Treaty of Re-union set on foot, between Pope Alexander IV. and the Emperor Theodore Lascaris. This Pope sent him the Bishop of Urvieto as his Legate, and gave him an Instruction containing the Articles of Obedience to the Holy See, granted by the Greeks in the time of Innocent III. with the Demands of the Greeks, and the Answers which the Legate ought to return them. But this Negotiation had no Success, and the Legate was sent back without having done any thing in the Business.

The Reunion of the Greeks and Latins under Michael Palæologus.

Michael Palæologus foreseeing that the Pope would not fail to arm the Princes of the West against him, for the retaking of Constantinople, resolv'd upon proposing the Re-union of the Greeks with the Roman Church, that by this means he might free himself from the Fear of those terrible Croisado-Men. He thereupon sent as his Ambassador to Pope Urban IV. Nicholas Bishop of Crotona a Greek by Nation, but brought up in the Church of Rome; to assure his Holiness that he was perswaded the Greeks and Latins did not differ in the Faith; that the Bishop who came to wait upon him had given him to understand, That the Latin and Greek Fathers were of the same Mind; that he intreated his Holiness to send him a Legate for the more speedy Re-uniting of the two Churches: Urban IV. replied to those Proposals in a very obliging Manner, and sent him two Nuncio's of the Order of the Minor Friars, with the Bishop of Crotona. The Affair however drop'd for the present, because Michael Palæologus seeing himself out of Danger, was not so urgent in pressing the Accommodation; but the Pope's Nuncio's having granted to the Greeks several Points which did not very well please Clement IV. Urban's Successor: That Pope wrote to Michael Palæologus, and sent him a Profession of Faith, containing the Articles of the Creed explain'd in very clear Terms, and particularly the Procession of the Holy Ghost from the Father and the Son; to which he added the Doctrine of the Roman Church touching Baptism, Purgatory, Hell, the seven Sacraments, especially the Eucharist celebrated with unleaven'd Bread; the Indissolubility of Marriage; the Permission of third and fourth Marriages; and lastly, about the Pope's Primacy. He declares to him, that it was needless to call a Council to canvass these Positions; but that if the Greeks would receive them, a Council might be held to ratify the Union of the two Churches. This Profession of Faith was carried to the Emperor Michael by Two Monks of the Order of the preaching Friars the Pope's Legates. That Emperor having receiv'd Intelligence of the Preparation which St. Lewis King of France, and Charles Duke of Anjou King of Sicily were making at that time for the East, and fearing the Storm would fall upon him, wrote to Saint Lewis a little after the Death of Clement, declaring, That he was willing to abjure the Schism; that he had sent for that purpose several Ambassadors to Rome, some of whom had been stop'd by the Way, and the others had receiv'd no satisfactory Answer; that he made choice of him as Umpire of this Difference, and conjur'd him to do his utmost to put an End to it. St. Lewis returned that Emperor Word, That he could do nothing in this Business, but only press the Holy See to put an End to it. Thereupon he referred the Emperor's Ambassadors to the Cardinals, to whom he wrote, desiring them to make up this Re-union as soon as possible. Upon those Instances the Cardinals wrote about it to the Bishop of Albany in Greece, and sent him the Profession of Faith drawn up by Clement IV. with Orders to cause the Emperor and the Bishops to subscribe it.

Gregory X. being advanced to the Papal Chair, the Emperor Michael immediately dispatch'd Ambassadors to him with a Letter, declaring the Desire he had of the Re-union; and the Pope for his Part wrote him another Letter, wherein resuming all that had passed from the Beginning of the Treaty under Urban IV. and Clement IV. he declares to that Emperor, that the shortest and best Way to put an End to the Differences of the two Churches, was to cause the Patriarch, the Bishops and the Greek Clergy to subscribe to the Profession of Faith drawn up by Clement IV. and afterwards invites him to come in Person, or to send his Ambassadors to a General Council, which he intended to hold. He sent him four Legates of the Order of the Minor Friars, to treat with him. Palæologus upon the Receipt of this Letter from the Pope, us'd his utmost Endeavours to bring about the Union, and to that End had recourse to Artifice, Persuasion, and Force. The Greeks at first made a very vigorous Opposition, and the Patriarch Joseph could by no means be brought over. John Veccus Treasurer of the Church of Constantinople, a Man of Parts and Learning, was one of the warmest in opposing it at first; but afterwards having read over the Writings of Nicephorus Blemmidas, and consulted the Passages of the Greek Fathers concerning the Procession of the Holy Ghost, he inclin'd to Peace. However the Patriarch continuing to oppose it, the Emperor sent Ambassadors to Pope Gregory, to acquaint him, he had done his utmost to promote the Re-union; but that this Business could not be adjusted in so short a time, because it was requisite to convene several Bishops who were at some Distance off. The Pope in his Reply to the Emperor, takes notice to him, that it was the Opinion of a great many Persons, That the Greeks did not act sincerely in their Endeavours after the Re-union, and that their Design was only to draw this Affair out in length.

The Emperor to remove this Suspicion and to put an End to the Business, obliged the Patriarch Joseph to retire into a Monastery of Constantinople, till such time as the Re-union were concluded, or fell to nothing; on Condition, That if the Business did not succeed, then he should hold his See; but if it did, and he would not approve of the Treaty of Union, then another Patriarch should be elected in his stead. Most of the other Greek Bishops follow'd the Emperor's Sentiments, so that he made no longer Scruple to send his Ambassadors with a Letter, wherein he declar'd, That the Greek Church approv'd of the Profession of Faith sent from Rome, and recogniz'd the Primacy of the Church of Rome, and only desir'd, that they might be permitted to repeat the Creed without the Addition. The Greek Bishops sent likewise a Deputy with a Letter from the Metropolitan of Ephesus, and Thirty Greek Bishops who approv'd of the Union, and disapprov'd of the Opposition made by the Patriarch Joseph. These Letters were delivered to the Pope and the General Council held at Lyons in the Year 1274. George Acropolita swore for the Emperor, That he held the profession of Faith, recogniz'd the Primacy of the Church of Rome, and abjur'd the Schism. The Deputy of the Greek Bishops did the same in their behalf, and the Union being thus concluded, the Pope sung Te Deum, and caus'd the profession of Faith to be recited in Greek and Latin, repeating the Article of the procession of the Holy Ghost twice. The Pope testified his Joy by his Letters written to Michael Palæologus, to his Son Andronicus, and to the Greek Bishops, congratulated their Re-union, and recommended to them the finishing of all, by bringing those over who had not as yet submitted. Upon the Return of the Ambassadors, the Patriarch Joseph was deposed, and John Veccus was elected in his place, who recited the Name of Gregory in the Mass, styling him the Oecumenical or Universal Pope. This new Patriarch labour'd earnestly to compleat the Re-union, and the Emperor sent Ambassadors to the Pope to acquaint him that all was over. However a great many Greeks were still dissatisfy'd at the Re-union. John XXI. desiring fully to compleat it, sent Legates to the Emperor Michael, who receiv'd them honourably, and promised to perform all that his Ambassadors had agreed to in the Council of Lyons. That Emperor went still farther, and sent Ambassadors to Rome to assure the Pope, That having call'd a Synod of Greek Bishops, they had approv'd de Novo of all that was done in the Council of Lyons. Those Ambassadors were intrusted with Letters from the Emperor Michael, from his Son Andronicus, and with a Letter from Veccus and the Council of the Greeks, which contained a profession of Faith, a little differing from that of Clement IV. particularly on the Article of the procession of the Holy Ghost, tho' the same in Substance. Those Letters written in the Year 1277. were not deliver'd to John, but to his Successor Nicholas III. who complain'd of the Alteration which the Greek Bishops had made in the profession of Faith, and was for requiring them to sign the profession of Clement IV. and to add to their Creed the Clause Filioque. He wrote upon this Subject to the Emperor, to his Son Andronicus, and to the Greek Bishops; and sent his Legates with Instructions, that they should engage the Emperor to cause the Patriarch and all the Greek Bishops to subscribe to the profession of Faith, the Recognition of the Pope's Primacy, the Abjuration of the Schism, and the Promise of Submission to the Holy See: That they should prevail upon him to order the Clause Filioque, to be sung in all the Greek Churches: That as for the particular Rites and Ceremonies of the Greek Church, such might be tolerated as were not contrary to the sound Faith. Their Instruction likewise contain'd a Draught of the Deed of Submission which the Biſhops and Clergy of each Church were to Sign. The Legates were likewiſe Enjoyn'd to go to as many Churches as they could, to get it Subſcrib'd, and to let the Greeks know, That the Romans wonder'd that neither the Patriarch nor the Greek Biſhops had as yet demanded of the Holy See, the Confirmation of their Dignities, and the Abſolution from their Cenſures. The Greek Biſhops made no Anſwer to theſe Propoſals of Pope Nicholas, neither were they executed, and the Emperors Michael and Andronicus only Subſcrib'd over again a Declaration much like to that which George Acropolita had Sign'd in the Council of Lyons. Their Letters were not deliver'd to Pope Nicholas, but to his Succeſſor Martin IV. who being in Alliance with Charles King of Naples and Sicily, in the Year 1281. Excommunicated the Emperor Paleologus as a Schiſmatick, and a Favourer of the Schiſm of the Greeks. Michael was ſo incens'd at it, that once he forbad the Pope's Name to be recited in the Maſs, and he was juſt ready to break the Union. However he did not do it, tho' Martin renew'd his Cenſures; and it laſted till the Death of Michael; tho' ſeveral Greek Monks gave it ſome Diſturbance by thoſe many Writings which they Publiſh'd againſt the Patriarch Veccus, who refuted them very vigorouſly.

The Hiſtory of the Greek Church, &c.

The Reunion between the Greeks and Latins is broken in the time of Andronicus the Emperor.

But after the Death of Michael Palæologus, which happen'd in December 1283. his Son Andronicus declar'd himſelf againſt the Union, and would not ſo much as pay thoſe Honours to his Father's Funeral, as were uſually paid to Emperors. Veccus retir'd into a Monaſtery, and Joſeph was reſtor'd in the Patriarchal See of Conſtantinople, but he was diſturb'd by the Partiſans of Arſenius, and at laſt George of Cyprus Sirnam'd Gregory was made Patriarch after the Death of Joſeph. He caus'd Veccus to be Baniſh'd to Mount Olympus, from whence he was recall'd to appear at a Council which Andronicus held againſt him in the Year 1284. in the Palace of Blacherna at Conſtantinople. In the Council he was condemned, and all the Archbiſhops and Biſhops, who had been moſt for the Union, were depos'd. Afterwards Veccus who bravely defended his Cauſe in the Council, was by the Emperor's Order ſent Priſoner to the Caſtle of St. George in Bithynia, with two of his Clergy Nam'd Conſtantine Meleteniota and George Metochites. Veccus dy'd there ſometime after, and his two Companions being diſcharg'd out of Priſon without changing their Minds, and perſiſting ſtill in the Defence of their Opinion, were at laſt ſent into Exile, where they dy'd.

The Succeſſion of the Patriarchs of Conſtantinople during the Thirteenth Century.

'Tis ſomething to ſet down the Succeſſion of the Patriarchs of Conſtantinople during this Century, by Reaſon of the various Opinions of Hiſtorians in the Caſe: But let us ſee what can be ſaid the moſt probable, and the moſt conformable to the Hiſtory of that Time. When Conſtantinople was taken by the Latins, John Camatera who was Patriarch of that City, retir'd to Didymoteca, or Dimotuca, a City of Thrace, where he dy'd two Years after, without going to Nice, tho' earneſtly invited thither by Theodore Laſcaris. About two Years after his Death, this Prince willing to preſerve all the Enſigns of the Empire, thought fit to make a Patriarch of Conſtantinople, who ſhould reſide at Nice. The firſt who was Elected, was one Nam'd Michael Sauranus or Autorianus, who enjoy'd that Poſt for ſix Years. Theodore Irenicus Hyppatus or Coppas Succeeded him in the Year 1215, and was almoſt as long on the See. In his ſtead they Elected in the Year 1221. Iuaximus Abbot of the Acmet Monks, who enjoy'd the Place only Six Months, and dy'd. Manuel Charitopula Succeeded him, and dy'd a little before the Emperor John Ducas, in the Year 1226. After his Death, ſeveral propos'd Nicephorus Blemmidas Monk of Mount Athos, to be Advanc'd to the Dignity: But upon his Refuſal Germanus Sirnam'd Nauplius was advanc'd to that Poſt, and enjoy'd it Seventeen Years and an half. After his Death, Methodius Abbot of the Monaſtery of Saint Hyacinthus, had the Honour of being Patriarch of Conſtantinople the ſpace of Three Months. Manuel Succeeded him, and was inveſted with this Dignity Fourteen Years. At laſt Arſenius Autorianus was made Patriarch, under the Emperor Theodore Laſcaris, in the Year 1257. This Man has himſelf given us an Account of his Life, in his laſt Will and Teſtament, where he ſays, That during the Empire of that Religious Prince, he had no Conteſt about Religious Matters, but employ'd himſelf wholly in relieving the Widows, the Fatherleſs, and the Oppreſſed. That after the Death of that Prince, the Biſhops, Senate, the Officers of the Army and the People met together in his Abſence, to conſtitute Michael Palæologus Regent, and that upon his coming to Court, he found him at the Helm: That in a ſhort Time after, he made himſelf Collegue in the Empire; that they had forc'd him to Crown Palæologus, but upon Condition that the Young Emperor John ſhould have the Preheminence: That afterwards perceiving that this Agreement was not put in Execution, and that Michael did many Things irregularly, he retir'd; and that Michael ſet up in his ſtead, Nicephorus a Biſhop of Epheſus, who dying within a Year after, Michael recall'd him: That the City of Conſtantinople being re-taken, that Prince had us'd all his Endeavours, to bring him over to own, that the Arch-biſhop of Epheſus had been lawful Patriarch, and to make him admit of thoſe whom he had promoted to Holy Orders; but that he would not conſent to either: That notwithſtanding this Palæologus Re-eſtabliſh'd him in his Patriarchial See, but withal continu'd to perſecute him: That after this, the Young Emperor's Eyes were put out; that having underſtood that Michael had committed that Crime, he had excomunicated him for it: That he hop'd, he would have been ſenſible and repented of his Fault, and merit Abſolution, by remitting a Part of the Taxes But that Prince having not chang'd his Mind, he had Three Years after, abſolutely excommunicated him, in a Council compos'd of the Biſhops, Clergy and Senate: That ever ſince that Prince had perſecuted him, and drove him out of his Church, under a Pretence that he had Adminiſtred the Communion to the Sultan's Children, tho' it was evident, that it was the Metropolitan of Piſidia, who had adminiſtr'd to them Baptiſm and the Euchariſt: That afterwards he had ſent him into Exile, after he had caus'd him to be excommunicated in a Synod; and had often us'd him unkindly in the Place of his Exile. Arſenius being turn'd out, Joſeph was put up in his Place, in the Year 1266. but ſeveral would not acknowledge him, and adher'd to the Intereſts of Arſenius, which caus'd a Diviſion betwixt the Greeks of Conſtantinople, and laſted till the Death of Joſeph. After Joſeph was depos'd in the Year 1274. John Veccus was ſet up, ſo that there were at that Time Three Patriarchs of Conſtantinople, Arſenius, Joſeph and Veccus. Arſenius dy'd firſt in Exile: Veccus was in Poſſeſſion of the Patriarchſhip during the Reign of Palæologus but after his Death, he was immediately Depos'd, and Joſeph Reeſtabliſh'd; who dying a while after, the Patriarchſhip was beſtow'd in the Year 1284. on George of Cyprus Sirnam'd Gregory, who wrote very warmly againſt Veccus and the Latins. He had nevertheleſs many Adverſaries, ſo that perceiving himſelf deſpis'd, and growing infirm and ſick, he retir'd into a Monaſtery, where he dy'd, after he had been Patriarch Five Years.

The Hiſtory of the Greek Church, &c.

The Greek Church in this Century, produc'd a great many Famous Men, who wrote about the Conteſts between the Greeks and Latins, and have given us an Hiſtory of the great Revolutions of the Eaſtern Empire. An Account of the moſt Conſiderable of theſe Authors, we here give you.

Nicholas d'Otrantes flouriſh'd at Conſtantinople, the Beginning of this Century. He made Uſe of an Interpreter in the Conferences which Cardinal Benedict (ſent in the Year 1201. to Conſtantinople by Pope Innocent III.) had with the Eaſtern Biſhops about the Differences in Religion. He compos'd divers Treatiſes againſt the Latins, among the reſt, a Treatiſe concerning the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, againſt Hugh Etherianus: A Treatiſe to prove, That Jeſus Chriſt made Uſe of leaven'd Bread in the Laſt Supper; and a Treatiſe concerning Saturday's Faſt, concerning the Marriage of Prieſts, and the other Controverted Points between the Latin and the Greek Church. Thoſe Tracts are cited by Allatius, who produces ſome Fragments of them in his Works.

Nicholas d'Otrantes

About the ſame Time flouriſh'd Nicetas, who from being Librarian of the Church of Conſtantinople, was advanc'd to the Archbiſhoprick of Theſſalonica. He has compos'd a Treatiſe concerning the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, againſt Hugh Etherianus, divided into Six Dialogues. Leo Allatius has quoted ſome Fragments of it. We have likewiſe in the Jus Greco-Romanum, an Anſwer of this Author to the Queries of Baſil the Monk.

Nicetas Archbiſhop of Theſſalonica.

Nicetas Acominatus Sirnam'd Choniates, from the Place of his Nativity, after he had ſpent his Youth with his Brother Michael Archbiſhop of Athens, was made Secretary of State to the Emperors Alexius, and Iſaac Angelus; and afterwards Advanc'd to the Chief Poſts of the Government: Viz. to be Lord Treaſurer, Secretary of State, and Lord High Chamberlain to the Emperor. When Conſtantinople was taken by the Latins in the Year 1204. he retir'd with his Wife and Children to Nice in Bithynia, where he dy'd in the Year 1206. He has compos'd One and Twenty Books of Hiſtory, which begin at the Death of Alexius Comnenus, which Zonaras has continued, to the Year 1203. Voſſius and Lipſius commend his Stile, his Genius and his manner of Writing, and obſerve, that he has affected to imitate the Style of Homer and the Ancient Poets. The ſame Author, has compos'd a Tract Intitul'd, A Treaſure of the Orthodox Faith, divided into Twenty ſeven Books, the Five firſt of which, are Tranſlated into Latin by Morellus, and to be met with in the Bibliotheca Patrum; and a Fragment of the Twentieth Book, has been likewiſe Publiſh'd, concerning the Order which ought to be obſerv'd, in admitting the Saracens when they turn Chriſtians.

Nicetas Acominatus Choniates Hiſtor.

The Hiſtory of Nicetas was printed in Greek with the Latin Verſion of Wolfius, at Baſil in the Year 1557. at Paris, in the Year 1566, at Franefort, in the Year 1568. at Geneva, in the Year 1593. and at Paris in the Body of the Byzantine Hiſtory, in the Year 1647. The Five Books of the Treaſure of Orthodox Faith, were Printed at Paris, in the Year 1580. and at Geneva in the Year 1592. The Fragment of the Twentieth Book, is to be met with in Greek and Latin, in the the Second Volume of the Additions to the Bibliotheca Patrum, Printed in the Year 1624.

The History of the Greek Church, &c.

Michael Acominatus Choniates, Arch-bishop of Athens, survi'd his Brother for some Time, whose Panegyrick he made, Printed with the Works of Nicetas. He has likewise Compos'd several other Tracts, and among the rest, One upon the Cross, which is to be met with in Manuscript in the French King's Library.

Michael Acominatus Choniates Arch-bishop of Athens.

About the same Time, one Joel made a Chronological Abridgment from the Beginning of the World, to the taking of Constantinople by the Latins, which was Translated by Leo Allatius, and Printed in Greek and Latin at Paris, in the Byzantine History, in the Year 1651. with the History of George Acropolita Logothetes. This George was promoted in the Court of the Emperor John Ducas at Nice, and apply'd himself to the Study of the Sciences. He was afterwards made Lord High Treasurer, and Employ'd in the most important Affairs of the Empire. Theodore Lascaris made him Regent of all the Western Provinces of his Empire. He was taken Prisoner by Michael Angelus, but set at Liberty, by the Emperor Palæologus. who sent him on an Ambassy to Bulgaria. Upon his Return from this Ambassy, he apply'd himself wholly to the Instruction of Youth, and behav'd himself well in that Employment, for several Years. He was one of the Judges nominated in the Year 1272. to determine the Affair of John Veccus Patriarch of Constantinople. The next Year he was sent into the West, by the Emperor, to conclude the Peace and the Re-Union of the two Churches with Pope Gregory X. and swore to it in the Year 1274. at the Council of Lyons. In the Year 1282. he was sent again to the King of Bulgaria, and dy'd upon his Return. He continu'd the Greek History, from the taking of Constantinople by the Latins, till it was re-taken by Michael Palæologus, in the Year 1261. This Work being found at Pera, was bought of Catachuzenus, brought from Constantinople by George Douza, and Publish'd with a Translation by his Brother Theodore, who caus'd it to Printed with Notes, at Leyden, in the Year 1614. The next Year the Text was printed at Geneva. Afterwards Leo Allatius publish'd this History in a larger Volume, and thus it was printed at Paris, in the Year 1561. The modern Greeks have bestow'd great Encomiums on this Author, and look'd upon him as a Prodigy of Learning and Eloquence. However, were we to judge of him by his History, we should not say such fine Things of him He likewise compos'd several other Tracts, among the rest, Thirteen Prayers, and a Discourse upon the taking of Constantinople by the Greeks, of which he makes mention, in his History; a Commentary on the Sermons of Saint Gregory Nazianzen, and a Treatise of Faith, of Virtue and of the Soul; which are to be met with in Manuscript, in several Libraries.

Joel.

George Acropolita Logothetes.

Whilst Constantinople was in the Hands of the Latins, Pantaleon Deacon of that Church, compos'd a Treatise against the Greeks, about the Procession of the Holy Ghost, the State of departed Souls, unleavened Bread, and the Submission due to the Church of Rome. This Treatise is to be met with in Latin, in Stewart's Addition to the Antiquities of Canisius, and in the last Bibliotheca Patrum. 'Tis probable, that he was the Author of the Sermons attributed to Pantaleon, who is referr'd to the Seventh Century, tho' this latter, goes under the Quality of Priest of the Church of Constantinople: For it might be that he was Priest of that Church, after he had been Deacon.

Pantaleon Deacon of the Church of Constantinople.

Manuel Charitopula Patriarch of Constantinople. We meet with in the Jus Græco-Romanum of Lewenclavius several Ecclesiastical Institutions, under the Name of Manuel, which some have attributed to the Emperor Manuel Comnenus, but which are the Answers of Manuel Patriarch of Constantinople, to the Questions of the Bishop of Pella. But whereas there were two Manuels honour'd with that Dignity, during this Century, viz. Manuel Charitopula, who in the Year 1221 succeeded Maximus Abbot of Acmets; and liv'd to the Year 1226. another Manuel, who Succeeded Methodius, in the Year 1244. and was Patriarch Fourteen Years together; 'Tis very difficult to know, to which of the two these Works belong; however, they are commonly ascrib'd to the former.

Manuel Charitopula Patriarch of Constantinople.

The First Question is, Whether Women forsaken by their Husbands, of whom they have heard no News of for five Years together, may afterward marry? The Answer is, that the Husbands who leave their Wives ought to be excommunicated, and that the Wives of those of whom they have had no News, may marry again after Five Years time: But those who know where their Husbands are, ought to go and wait upon them.

The Second Question is, what Penance ought to be inflicted on such Priests, by whose Negligence it happens, that the Consecrated Bread be eaten by Rats: And what ought to be done when the Priest being at the Altar, a Mouse by chance happens to eat the Consecrated Host? The Answer is, The Priests by whose Negligence this happens, ought to be suspended for some time: And as to the latter Case, if it does not happen through the Fault of the Minister, he is not to be blam'd for it; but another Oblation ought to be set upon the Altar, and the Sacrifice to be concluded with Consecrating it.

The History of the Greek Church, &c.

The Third Question is, What Punishment the Priests deserve, who contemn the Excommunication of their Bishops, and still continue to celebrate and perform their Functions tho' interdicted? The Answer is, That they ought to be depos'd.

The Fourth Question is, Whether Laicks who are above Forty, have been marry'd twice, and have Children, may marry again? The Answer is, That they are not to be allow'd it.

The Fifth Question is, Whether one may celebrate the Holy Eucharist without an Anti-table? (that is, as it is explain'd in that place, a piece of a Table-Cloath, or Napkin bless'd by the Bishop in the Ceremony of the Dedication of the Church.) The Answer is, That 'tis not requisite to make use of them on all Altars, but only on Altars of whose Consecration we are not very well satisfied.

The Sixth Question is, What Punishment those Priests deserve who celebrate Marriages during Lent; and what one ought to think of such Marriages? The Answer is, That if those Priests did it out of Ignorance or Simplicity, they ought to bear less Punishment, than if they did it wilfully; but that such Marriages are valid.

Germanus II. Sirnam'd Nauplius Patriarch of Constantinople, was advanc'd to that Dignity by the Greeks, in the Year 1226; when Constantinople was in the Possession of the Latins, and dy'd in the Year 1243. So that he was only Titular Patriarch of Constantinople, having his constant Residence at Nice. We have already observ'd, That most of the Works attributed to Germanus I. Patriarch of Constantinople, belong to this Man, and among others the Mystical Theory, which is not in the same Condition wherein it was first compos'd; there being many Additions and Alterations since made. We ought likewise to attribute rather to this Author than to the former, the Discourse upon the Dedication of the Church of the Virgin Mary, and upon the Nursing of our Saviour, publish'd by Father Combefis in his Book de Originibus Constantinopolitanis: A Panegyrick of the Virgin, and a Sermon on the Nativity, publish'd by the same Author in the same Piece: But as for the third, which is upon the Death of the Virgin. Allatius observes, that the Ancient Manuscripts, as well as the Style, and the Manner wherein it is wrote, make it appear, that it belongs to George of Nicodemia. We must likewise ascribe to Germanus II. the Sermons on the Beheading of Saint John, on the Presentation, Annunciation, and Death of the Virgin Mary, publish'd by the same Father in his Addition to the Bibliotheca Patrum: But we must except the Discourse upon our Saviour's Burial, which belongs to a more Ancient Author. 'Tis likewise probable that the two Discourses on the Cross, and the two Sermons on Fasting, publish'd by Gretser under the Name of Germanus Patriarch of Constantinople are his; since it appears, that the Person who compos'd them, wrote at that time when the Greek Emperors were at war with the Latins. Lastly there is no Question to be made, but that the two Letters directed to the Greeks of the Isle of Cyprus, publish'd by Cotelerius, in the second Tome of his Monumenta Ecclesiæ Græcæ, belong to Germanus II. since he warmly exhorts the Greeks of his Communion, not to communicate with those who observ'd the Rites and Usages of the Latins, or who were united to them, and opposes the Addition of the Phrase Filioque made to the Creed, and the other Customs of the Latins. He likewise wrote against the Latins a Treatise of the Procession of the Holy Ghost, a Synodal Epistle in answer to the Minor Friars and and the other Missionaries; several Opuscula upon Unleaven'd Bread, upon Purgatory, and upon the three ways of Administring the Sacrament of Baptism, which are found in Manuscript, and made mention of by Allatius. This Patriarch is likewise Author of three Constitutions concerning the Patriarchal Monasteries, which are to be met with in the third Tome of the Jus Græco-Romanum of Lewenclavius.

Germanus Nauplius Patriarch of Constantinople.

Nicephorus Blemmidas, Priest and Monk of Mount Athos, where he led a very Holy Life, was very favourable to the Latins, and more inclinable to the Peace than any other Greek of this Century. 'Tis in this Temper of Mind, that he compos'd two Treatises of the Procession of the Holy Ghost: The one is directed to James Patriarch of Bulgaria, and the other to the Emperor Theodore Lascaris. He therein very strongly confronts the Opinion of several Greeks who maintain'd, that we could not say, that the Holy Ghost proceeded from the Father and the Son; and proves, that this Expression was very orthodox, and conformable to the Doctrine of the Holy Scriptures, and of the Holy Fathers of the Greek Church. These two Tracts are printed in Greek and Latin, at the end of the first Tome of Raynaldus, and in the Græcia Orthodoxa of Allatius, who has likewise given us in the Second Book of his Tract, concerning the Concord of the Greek and Latin Churches, a Letter which Nicephorus wrote, after he had with Disgrace turn'd out of the Church belonging to his Monaste-

Nicephorus Blemmidas Monk of Mount Athos.

The Hiſtory of the Greek Church, &c.

ry, Marcheſina the Miſtreſs of the Emperor John Ducas, as unworthy to enter that Holy Place. There is likewiſe printed in Greek, at Augsburg in the Year 1605. under the Name of this Author; an Abridgment of Logick and natural Philoſophy. There are alſo ſeveral other Theological pieces of the ſame Author in the Vatican Library, in the Library of Bavaria, ſuch as the Panegyrick of Saint John the Evangeliſt; a Diſcourſe concerning the Soul; another concerning the Body; ſeveral Commentaries on the Pſalms, and Opuſcula on Faith, Virtue, and Religion. His Treatiſe on the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, ſhews him to be a Man of a juſt Reaſon, well vers'd in the Scriptures and the Fathers, and full of good Principles of Divinity.

Arſenius Autorianus Patriarch of Conſtantinople.

Arſenius Autorianus, Patriarch of Conſtantinople, Monk of Mount Athos, was advanc'd in the Year 1257. as we have already obſerv'd, to be Patriarch of Conſtantinople; and he had not only the Title of it, as his Predeceſſors had; but likewiſe the Happineſs of re-entering that Church, after the Greeks had re-taken Conſtantinople from the Latins. Having faln into Diſgrace with Michael Palæologus, he was turn'd out and depos'd in the Year 1268. and ſent into Exile, where he liv'd ſeveral Years. He has compos'd an Abridgment of the Canons, extracted from the Fathers and Councils, and divided into One Hundred forty one Heads, which is to be met with in the ſecond Tome of the Bibliotheca Juris Canonici by Juſtel. Cotelerius has ſince publiſh'd in the ſecond Tome of his Monumenta Eccleſiæ Græcæ, the Laſt Will and Teſtament of this Patriarch, wherein he gives an Account of the Conteſt he had with the Emperor Michael Palæologus, and renews the Excommunication which he had iſſued out againſt him.

Theodore Laſcaris, Sirnam'd Ducas the Greek Emperor.

Theodore Laſcaris Junior, Sirnam'd Ducas, the Greek Emperor, (Grandſon to that Theodore Laſcaris who took upon him the Quality of Emperor at Nice, after the taking of Conſtantinople by the Latins, and Son of John Ducas, who was likewiſe Emperor of the Greeks at Nice, by Virtue of his Wife Irene, Daughter to Theodore the Elder,) ſucceeded his Father about the Year 1255. But not being able to undergo the Fatigue of the Empire, he retir'd ſoon after into a Monaſtery, where he dy'd, in the Year 1259. in the 36*th* Year of his Age. This Prince who minded his Studies more than the Affairs of the State, compos'd ſeveral Pieces of Theology, among others, a Treatiſe concerning the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, againſt the Latins, Directed to the Biſhop of Corona; the Preface of which, Dr. Cave makes mention of, as taken out of a Manuſcript of this Treatiſe, which is in England. Allatius makes mention of ſeveral Theological Diſcourſes, belonging to this Prince, upon the Trinity and the Incarnation. Freberus ſpeaks of a Book which he made, concerning natural Communication, and there are to be met with in the French King's Library, ſeveral Manuſcript-Tracts of this Author's, ſuch as a Treatiſe of the Trinity, a Diſcourſe of Virtue, a Treatiſe of Faſting, &c. The Medals of this Emperor repreſent him to us holding a Croſs in his Right Hand, and a Book in his Left, an Emblem of his Learning and Piety.

George Pachymeres.

George Pachymeres flouriſh'd about the Year 1280. He was born at Nice, in the Year 1242. where he had his Education. He afterwards entred into Orders, had the greateſt ſhare with the Patriarch of Conſtantinople in all Affairs, both Eccleſiaſtical and Civil, and gained ſo great a Repute, that he was choſen in the Year 1267. to try Arſenius Patriarch of Conſtantinople, who was accus'd of High Treaſon. In the Year 1273. he compos'd a Book concerning the Union of the Greek and Latin Churches. He liv'd ſeveral Years in the enſuing Century, when he dy'd is uncertain. His Hiſtory is divided into thirteen Books, which contain what occur'd under the Emperors Michael and Andronicus Palæologus, from the Year 1258, to the Year 1308. There have been publiſh'd ſeveral Extracts of it by Wolfius, at the End of the Hiſtory of Nicephorus Gregoras, printed at Baſil, in the Year 1562. Petavius publiſh'd a part of the reſt, with the Abridgment of the Patriarch Nicephorus, in the Year 1616. But at laſt Father Pouſſin has publiſh'd this Hiſtory compleat, in Greek and Latin, in two Volumes in Folio, printed at Rome in 1666, and 1669. Pachymeres is likewiſe the Author of a Commentary on the Works of Saint Dionyſius, printed ſeveral times with the Works of the Author; and of a little piece, concerning the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, publiſh'd by Allatius, in the firſt Tome of his Græcia Orthodoxa. He likewiſe compos'd an Abridgment of Ariſtotle's Logick, printed in Greek at Paris, in the Year 1548, in Latin at Baſil 1560, and in Greek and Latin, at Oxford, in the Year 1666. with ſeveral pieces of Rhetorick which are in Manuſcript in the French King's Library, of which, Allatius has given us a Catalogue. The ſame Allatius obſerves, that the Style of this Author is uncorrect, and his way of Writing is too much like the Writings of the Ancient tragick Poets, which is too bombaſtical for Hiſtory; that his Syntax is obſcure and perplex'd; but yet that he is ſmooth and wiſe enough for an Age wherein the greateſt Extravagancies paſs'd for Wiſdom. Allatius in his Græcia Orthodoxa, has likewiſe given us a little Treatiſe of Pachymeres againſt thoſe who maintain'd, that it was ſaid, That the Holy Ghoſt had his Eſſence from the Son, becauſe he is of the ſame Nature with the Son.

John Veccus Patriarch of Conſtantinople, ſtudy'd theſe points the moſt of any Greek of his time, and was one of a very piercing Genius, and wrote well. This made Nicephorus Gregoras ſay, That there might be ſome Greeks, who had a greater inſight into profane Learning, than John. Yet they were all Children, when compar'd to him, with Reſpect to the Subtilty of Genius, to Eloquence, and penetration of Thought in Eccleſiaſtical points. He was at firſt very much wedded to the Opinions of the Greeks, and (as we have already hinted) very ſtrongly oppos'd the Deſign of the Union, ſet on foot by Michael Palæologus. But the Emperor having ſhut him up in a frightful Priſon, where he order'd the Works of Nicephorus Blemmidas to be put into his Hands, he chang'd his Opinion; and collected a great many Paſſages of the Greek Fathers, which favour'd the Doctrines of the Roman Church, about the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt; of which he made an advantageous Uſe, in defending the Union, which he maintain'd by ſeveral Tracts. Allatius has publiſh'd ſeveral of them, of which this is the Catalogue: Two Books concerning the Union of the Churches of Old and New Rome, wherein he proves the Opinion of the Latins about the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, by the Teſtimonies of the Greek Fathers, and refutes the Arguments which Photius, John Furnes, Nicholas of Metona, and Theophylact make uſe of to oppoſe it. A Tract containing twelve Chapters, about the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, wherein he handles the ſeveral Queſtions, and explains a great many Paſſages of the Greek Fathers on that Subject. A Letter to Alexius Agallianus Deacon of the Church of Conſtantinople, upon the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt. A Synodal Decree, wherein it is order'd, that the Propoſition Ex ſhould be writ over again in a Manuſcript of a Tract of Saint Gregory Nyſſene, which had been Eras'd by the Chancery-Clerk of the Church of Conſtantinople, a profeſs'd Enemy to the Latins. His Laſt Will and Teſtament, wherein he perſiſts in his Doctrine of the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt. A Treatiſe of the Agreement of his Works, with Doctrine of the Fathers. A Diſcourſe upon the Injuſtice which had been done him, by turning him out of his Patriarchial See. An Apology of that Diſcourſe againſt the Injuſtice which he had ſuffer'd, wherein he detects the falſe Gloſſes of a certain Scribe. Another Apology, wherein he proves, That the Re-union did not deſtroy the Cuſtoms of the Greeks. Three Books to Theodore Biſhop of Saddai about the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt. Four Books upon the ſame Subject, directed to Conſtantine. Two Diſcourſes againſt the Writings of George of Cyprus, and againſt his new Errors. The Refutation of the Remarks of Andronicus Camatera, on thoſe paſſages of Scripture relating to the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt. Thirteen Heads, or Remarks on the Words and Thoughts of the Fathers. Theſe Works are to be met with in the firſt and ſecond Tome of Allatius's Græcia Orthodoxa, who makes mention of ſeveral other Tracts of Veccus in the ſecond Book of the Agreement between the Greek and Latin Churches, Chap. 15.

The Hiſtory of the Greek Church, &c.

John Veccus Patriarch of Conſtantinople.

Veccus had for the Companions of his Fortune, of his Exile and of his Studies, George Metochita Deacon of the Church of Conſtantinople, and Conſtantine Meliteniota his Arch-Deacon, who compoſed ſeveral Works in the Defence of the ſame Doctrine and of the ſame Cauſe.

George Metochita Deacon, & Conſtantine Meliteniota Arch-Deacon of the Church of Conſtantinople.

The former whoſe Stile is harſh, has compos'd a Treatiſe on the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, divided into five Diſſertations, of which Allatius has given us a Fragment in his Book of Purgatory taken out of the fifth Book, and another Fragment out of the ſame Book in his Treatiſe againſt Hottinger. And Father Combefis has given us a Fragment taken out of the Fourth Book, in his Additions to the Bibliotheca Patrum: A Refutation of three Chapters of Plannda the Monk publiſh'd by Allatius in the ſecond Tome of his Græcia Orthodoxa: The Refutation of what Manuel Nephew of Cretois wrote, publiſh'd by the ſame Author in the ſame Tome: A Diſſertation, containing the Hiſtory of the Union of the two Churches, of which Allatius has given us ſome Fragments: An Anti-heretical Diſſertation againſt the Writings of George of Cyprus. Another Diſſertation of what was the Conſequence of the two foregoing.

The latter, (viz. Conſtantine Meliteniota) has left behind him two Treatiſes, One concerning the Union of the Greeks and Latins, and the other about the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, publiſhed by Allatius, in the ſecond Tome of his Græcia Orthodoxa.

Simon of Crete of the Order of Preaching Friars.

About the ſame time Simon a Native of Crete, of the Order of preaching Friars, compos'd three Treatiſes for the Latins in the Form of Letters about the proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, the firſt directed to Manuel Ulobola; the ſecond to Sophronia; and the third to John, Keeper of the Archives. Allatius who has ſeen them, has only left us part of this laſt in his Treatiſe againſt Hottinger.

The Greek Schiſmaticks had likewiſe their Champions, who wrote in Defence of their Doctrine; at the Head of whom we may place George of Cyprus ſirnam'd Gregory, Patriarch of Conſtantinople, who was a Man of Spirit, eloquent and polite in his Diſcourſe, of great Learning and Parts, and pretty well vers'd in the Eccleſiaſtical points. His chief piece, called The Synodal Tome, which he ſtyles The Pillar of Orthodoxy, was writ againſt Veccus. He likewiſe compoſed other Works againſt the Latins, divers Panegyricks, and ſeveral Letters which are to be met with in Manuſcript in Libraries.

The Hiſtory of the Greek Church, &c.

George Moſchamper, Regiſter of the Church of Conſtantinople, was likewiſe one of the Adverſaries of Veccus, againſt whom he wrote ſeveral Tracts, which that Patriarch refuted.

Conſtantine Acropolita Logothetes, ſignaliz'd himſelf likewiſe by his Writings againſt Veccus; and ſo did a Monk named Mark, and Job Jaſites, who compos'd a Book ſometime before the other two, againſt a Writing of the Emperor Michael, and an Apology for Joſeph.

The Hiſtory of the Greek Church, &c.

We may likewiſe reckon among the Greek Authors, Gregory Abulpharaje an Arabian, of the Sect of the Jacobites or Melchites, who compos'd an Hiſtory of the Dynaſties which ends at the 683 Year of the Hegira; that is, Anno Chriſti 1284. He was in great Eſteem in the Eaſt. His Tract was publiſh'd in Arabick and Latin by Dr. Pocock, and printed at Oxford in the Year 1663.

CHAP. VI.

Of the Councils held during the Thirteenth Century.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

THERE is ſcarce any Age wherein more Councils were held in the Weſt, and wherein more Laws, Conſtitutions, and Ordinances were made, than in this, of which we are giving you an Hiſtory. The Popes, Arch-biſhops, and Biſhops, were all in a particular Manner engag'd in reforming the Church, in regulating the Manners and Conduct of Eccleſiaſticks, and informing them of their Duties. This is the Subject Matter of moſt of the Canons and Ordinances of the Councils and Synods held in this Century. Therein the Manner how the Clerks ought to be habited, and the Life they ought to lead, are adjuſted; the Luxury and the Diſorders of ſeveral are condemned with the utmoſt Severity. Therein they have a great many Inſtructions about the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, the Celebration of Maſs, and the Ceremonies of the Church. There the Biſhops, Prieſts, and the other Clergy are inform'd of their Functions and Office Therein Plurality of Benefices is prohibited, and Reſidence enjoined, and a great many Proviſo's made about the Collation of Benefices. Therein a great many Laws are enacted relating to Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes, and to prevent the Abuſes which ſeveral made of the Commiſſions they took out of the Holy See. Therein are renew'd and confirm'd the Privileges and Immunities of the Clergy, and the Penalties inflicted on thoſe who offer any Violence to their Perſons or Eſtates, or ſeize upon their Tithes. Therein new Methods are found out to puniſh Hereticks, and to ſupport the Inquiſition lately ſet up. Therein Sorcerers and Uſurers, are condemn'd. Therein all the Faithful are enjoin'd to be preſent at the Parochial Maſs on Feſtivals and Sundays, and to confeſs themſelves and receive the Communion at leaſt once a Year. Theſe are the principal Matters treated of in the Canons of the Councils of which we are going to give you a particular Account, according to the Order of time wherein they were held.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The Council of Sens in the Year 1198.

The Council of Sens, 1198.

MIchael Corbeil, Archbiſhop of Sens, being come to the Town of La Gharite, at the Inſtance of the Biſhop of Auxerre, whither the Biſhops of Nevers and Meaux were likewiſe come, and having made enquiry what Hereticks there were in that place, they found that Reginald Abbot of Saint Martin at Nevers. and the Dean of the Cathedral Church of that City, were accus'd of Hereſie, and that there were a great many Accuſers and Witneſſes againſt them. They ſuſpended them, and cited them to Auxerre, where they made their Appearance. The Abbot would not make his Defence, but appeal'd to the Holy See before his Proceſs was drawn up. The Archbiſhop of Sens without regarding this Appeal, continu'd the drawing up his Proceſs, and cited him to the Council which was to be held at Sens. The Trial of the Dean was likewiſe referred to that Council, that ſo they might have time to receive the Depoſitions of Witneſſes on both ſides.

The Council was held at Sens in the Year 1198. and the Biſhops of Troyes, Auxerre, and Nevers, were there preſent. The Abbot of St. Martin appear'd before theſe Prelates, and endeavoured to make his Defence; but ſeeing his Affair was like to have no Succeſs, he renew'd his Appeal. Tho' it was againſt all Form, and the Biſhops were not obliged to take any Notice of it; yet they would not pronounce any thing againſt him upon the account of Hereſie, but condemn'd him for other Crimes whereof he ſtood convicted, and for the Scandal he gave, and depos'd him for ever. They afterwards ſent to the Pope the Depoſitions drawn againſt him; which imported, that he had aſſerted, That the Body of Jeſus Chriſt went into the Draught, and that all Men would one Day be ſaved.

The Council of Sens, 1198.

As to the Dean, there were not Evidences ſtrong enough to convict and condemn him, but ſince there were a great many preſumptions againſt him, becauſe of his Intimacy with Hereticks; they would not give him Abſolution, but ſent him to Rome, Innocent III after he had heard him, and examin'd his Proceſs, order'd that he ſhould clear himſelf by the Teſtimony of Fourteen Witneſſes, and wrote to the Archbiſhop of Sens, that he would admit him to clear himſelf, and reſtore to him his Benefice after he had done it. The Abbot of St. Martin having likewiſe removed his Cauſe to Rome, the Pope referr'd him to Peter, Cardinal of St. Mary his Legate in France, and to Odo Biſhop of Paris. We are inform'd of this Piece of Hiſtory by the Letters of Innocent III. and by the Chronicon of Auxerre, wherein 'tis ſaid, that thoſe two Hereticks were of the Sect of the Publicans.

The Council of Dalmatia in the Year 1199.

The Council of Dalmatia, 1199.

TWO Legates of Pope Innocent III. in Dalmatia, one of whom nam'd John, being only a Chaplain, and the other call'd Simon a Subdeacon, made twelve Orders for the Clergy of that Kingdom, wherein they prohibited Simony, renewed the Law of the Celibacy of Eccleſiaſticks, fixed the Times of Ordinations, and the Intervals betwixt them, approv'd of the ancient dividing of the Church-revenues into four Parts, enjoyn'd the Secrecy of Confeſſion, provided for the Security of Eccleſiaſticks, by declaring thoſe excommunicated who abus'd them, and by prohibiting them from being carried before ſecular Judges; prohibited Marriages between Relations to the fourth Degree; enjoyn'd Clerks to have the Clerical Tonſure; condemn'd the Laicks who collated Benefices, and thoſe who receiv'd them from their Hands; excommunicated thoſe who retain'd the Treaſures of the Church, and ſuch who left their Wives; prohibited Baſtards from being admitted into Holy Orders, and forbad the Ordaining any one who was not full Thirty Years old.

The Council of Dalmatia, 1199.

The Council of London in the Year 1200.

The Council of London, 1200.

HUbert Archbiſhop of Canterbury call'd a Council at London in Weſtminſter-caſtle, againſt the Prohibitions which the Earl of Eſſex Lord Chancellor of England had made, wherein he publiſh'd ſeveral Injunctions.

By the firſt he orders, That the Words of the Canon of the Maſs ſhall be pronounced diſtinctly and ſincerely by the Prieſts, without relying too much upon them.

In the ſecond, he prohibits Prieſts from ſaying two Maſſes a Day, without urgent Neceſſity, and when a Prieſt ſhall be obliged to celebrate twice, he enjoyns that after the firſt Celebration he ſhall take care to drink up what is left in the Chalice, to wipe his Fingers, to waſh them, and to take care to have Water to waſh after the ſecond time of celebrating, at leaſt that there ſhould not be any Deacon or any other Miniſter aſſiſting at the firſt Celebration, who ſhould be capable of this Ablution. He likewiſe orders, That the Euchariſt ſhall be kept in a proper and decent Box, and ſhall be carried to the Sick, cover'd over with a white Cloth, a Taper and Croſs being carried before it; and that it ſhall not be given but in publick, and only to thoſe who deſire it.

The Council of London, 1200.

The Councils held during the Thirteenth Century.

The third imports, That ſuch Children as are expos'd ſhall be baptiz'd; that no Perſon ſhall be preſented to Confirmation by his Brother, by his Mother, or his Uncle, or his Mother-in-Law; and that Deacons ſhall not adminiſter Baptiſm, or enjoyn Penance, unleſs in caſe of Neceſſity.

The fourth enjoyns the Prieſts in inflicting of Penances, to conſider the Circumſtances and the Qualities of the Sins, and the Condition of the Perſons, and to take care not to impoſe any Penance which may diſcover the Crime; as for Inſtance, not to make a Woman ſuſpected by her Husband. He prohibits Prieſts who have fall'n into any Sin to approach the Altar to celebrate Maſs before they have confeſs'd their Sins. And laſtly, He orders, That the Prieſts ſhould not enjoyn the Laicks as a Penance, to order ſo many Maſſes to be ſaid for them. The other Conſtitutions of this Council are taken out of the Lateran Council under Alexander III.

The Council of Lambeth in the Year 1206.

The Council of Lambeth, 1206.

IN the Year 1206. Stephen of Langton, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, held a Synodal Aſſembly at his Palace of Lambeth, wherein he made three Inſtitutions: The firſt, about the Right of Mortuaire which was paid to Churches: The ſecond againſt drunken Clubs; and the third to prohibit Prieſts from ſaying above one Maſs a Day, except in the Chriſtmaſs or Eaſter Holy-days, or when a Curate is obliged to bury a Corps in his Church, in which Caſe, he who celebrates ought not to receive the Ablution but at the laſt Maſs.

The Council of Lambeth, 1206.

The Conſtitutions of Cardinal Gallo, drawn up in the Year 1208.

The Conſtitution of Cardinal Gallo, 1708.

Gallo Cardinal Deacon of St. Mary's, who liv'd under the Pontificate of Innocent III. and was ſent by that Pope as his Legate into France, has left us ſeveral excellent Conſtitutions about the Behaviour of the Clergy, drawn up in the Year 1208.

In the firſt, he condemns all the Prieſts and other Eccleſiaſticks who kept in their Houſes ſuſpicious Women, excepting thoſe Clerks who were of the Minor Orders, who might marry, but not hold their Benefices with their Wives. He orders, That the Eccleſiaſticks ſhould be admoniſh'd not ſo much as to keep their Mothers, or their Wives, or any of their neareſt Relations in their Houſes.

In the ſecond, he prohibits under Pain of Excommunication, the demanding any thing for Baptiſm, Burial, Benediction, and the reſt of the Sacraments of the Church; and yet he allows, that Laicks ſhould be admoniſh'd not to refuſe out of a Motive of Avarice, what the Faithful were us'd to give out of Devotion to teſtifie the Reſpect they bore to the Sacraments.

The third and fourth prohibit the Clergy and beneficed Perſons from wearing red Habits, or ſuch as were made in the faſhion of the Laicks Habits.

The Conſtitution of Cardinal Gallo, 1708.

The fifth prohibits Monks from wearing ſumptuous Robes, or of any other Colour than Black.

The ſixth prohibits the Clerks and Monks from being Uſurers or Merchants under the Penalty of Excommunication.

The ſeventh enjoyns the Superiors to put theſe Conſtitutions in Execution.

The eighth and ninth import, that they ſhall admoniſh the Scholars to obſerve them, and if they will not, then they ſhall be declared Excommunicate by the Chancellor, who ſhall have no Correſpondence with them till they have made Satisfaction, and receiv'd Abſolution from the Biſhop, or in the Biſhop's Abſence from the Abbot of St. Victor. Laſtly, He enjoyns the School-maſters to explain theſe Conſtitutions themſelves. Theſe laſt Articles ſhew, that theſe Orders were made at Paris.

The Council of Avignon in the Year 1209.

The Council of Avignon, 1209.

IN the Year 1209. Hugh Raymond Biſhop of Riez, and Milo Legates of the Holy See, held a Council at Avignon the 6th of September, at which were preſent the Archbiſhops of Vienna, Arles, Embrun, and Aix, with twenty Biſhops, ſeveral Abbots and ſeveral Curates. There they made theſe following Conſtitutions.

By the firſt, Biſhops are enjoyn'd to preach the Word of God, and cauſe it to be preach'd in their Dioceſſes.

The ſecond imports, that the Biſhops ſhall make uſe of Cenſures (if Occaſion require) to oblige the Earls, Lords and other Perſons to ſwear, that they will extirpate the Hereticks, and turn the Jews out of all Manner of Offices.

The third, that Uſurers ſhall be excommunicated.

The fourth, that the Jews ſhall be hinder'd from exacting Uſury, from working on Sundays, and from eating Fleſh on Days of Abſtinence.

The fifth orders the paying of Tithes to the Eccleſiaſticks, and forbids the Alienation of them.

The ſixth prohibits unjuſt Exactions and Taxes, made by the Lords without the Authority of the Prince; and orders, that the Territories of thoſe Lords who exact them ſhall be interdicted.

The ſeventh prohibits Laicks under pain of Excommunication, from exacting any Taxes from the Clergy, and from ſeizing upon the Eſtates of Biſhops or Eccleſiaſticks after their Death.

The eighth likewiſe prohibits the Laicks from intermeddling with the Elections, or from hindering the Freedom of them.

The ninth prohibits the building of Churches fortified with Caſtles, and enjoyns the Fortifications of ſuch as have them, to be demoliſh'd, except ſuch as are neceſſary for the repulſing the Pagans.

The tenth confirms the Laws made for the preſervation of Peace, and condemns the Arragoneſe, the Barbanzoneſe, and Routiers, who diſturb it.

The eleventh enjoyns the Eccleſiaſtical Judges, ſpeedily and with Reſolution, to diſpatch the Cauſes which ſhall be brought before them.

The twelfth is againſt the Forwardneſs of ſome in taking off an Excommunication or Interdiction. 'Tis declared according to a Decretal of Pope Innocent III. That no Excommunication made for ſome Damage done, ſhall be taken off, till ſuch time as the excommunicate Perſon ſhall ſwear to make Reparation; and if it be for having committed a Default in Judgment, till ſuch Time as he likewiſe ſwear to appear before the Judge.

The Council of Avignon, 1209.

The thirteenth contains a new Law againſt perjured Perſons, by which the Abſolution of thoſe who are guilty of that Crime, is reſerv'd to the Pope, as well as the Abſolution of ſacrilegious Perſons and Incendiaries.

The fourteenth renews the Law of the Lateran Council, to oblige the Collators of Benefices to preſent within ſix Months.

The fifteenth prohibits Biſhops, Abbots, and other Superiors, from allowing the Monks to hold any thing by way of Property; and the rather, becauſe the Pope himſelf cannot allow it, as Innocent III. has declared in one of his Decretals.

The ſixteenth is againſt thoſe who exerciſe any Violence, and take Men by Force.

The ſeventeenth prohibits the allowing of Dancing in Churches on the Vigils of Feſtivals, or the ſinging of profane Songs.

The eighteenth is about the Habits of Monks; it is ordered, that the Monks ſhall have ſuch an Habit and Tonſure as is conformable to their State, that their Cloths ſhall be of plain Stuff, of a modeſt Colour, and with Sleeves. And with reſpect to Seculars, that they ſhall have a Coronet, and cloſe Habits, but neither Red, nor Green, nor made with Silk.

The nineteenth imports, that the Superiors and the other Clergy, ſhall be promoted to Holy Orders, according to the Mandamus of their Biſhop; and that thoſe that are in Holy Orders, ſhall not engage themſelves in Civil Offices, nor make Cabals.

The twentieth declares the Relations to the fourth Degree of thoſe who murder'd Peter of Chateauneuf Legate of the Holy See, and Geffrey Canon of Geneva, incapable of holding Benefices.

The laſt is an Injunction to the Archbiſhops and Biſhops, to take Care that the foregoing Conſtitutions be obſerved.

The

The Council of Paris in the Year 1212.

Robert Corceo Cardinal and Legate of the Holy See, held a Council at Paris, in the Year 1212. wherein he publish'd several Constitutions, relating to the Life, Manners, and Conduct of Ecclesiasticks, which are divided into four Parts: The first contains those which relate to the secular Clergy; the second, those which relate to the Regulars; the third, those which relate to the Nuns, Abbesses, and Abbots; and the fourth, those which concern the Archbishops and Bishops.

1. He orders the secular Clergy to be modest in their external Behaviour, to wear their Hair cut round, to abstain from frequent and dangerous Conversations in the Church or in the Choir, from useless walking in the Fields, and not to depart the Choir during divine Service.

2. He forbids any Distributions to be made to those who are at the Beginning and End of the Service, and are absent in the Middle.

3. He prohibits the Clergy from keeping Hounds or Hawks, and having magnificent Equipages.

4. He prohibits them from having Women in their Houses.

5. He enjoins them to be submissive to their Superior, to confess themselves to him, and no other, unless it be with his Consent.

6. He forbids the Clergy who have Benefices, the exercising the Function of Advocates for Money, or out of any base Design.

7. He prohibits Ecclesiasticks from swearing that they will lend nothing, nor be Security for any Man, and declares such Oaths null.

8. He would not that such Preachers should be tolerated, who preach to get Money, and to whom Pledges are given for so doing, let them have Relicks about them or not: He would have only those to preach, who are approv'd by their Bishop; and prohibits the Preachings of others.

9. He orders that unknown Priests should not be suffer'd to say Mass.

10. That one should not admit to the Communion, or bury any excommunicated, interdicted or unknown Person, or one of another Parish.

11. To suppress the enormous Avarice of Priests, he orders that Laicks should not be oblig'd to bequeath any thing, by their last Will and Testament, for the saying of Masses, and that no Contract should be made, nor any thing required for saying them, under what pretence soever. He forbids the great Number of yearly Masses, which were too great a Burden to the Priests, and condemns those frivolous Masses, which some said only for Form's sake.

12. He prohibits those who have Churches by way of Property, from farming them out for the injuring of others. He orders that the Priests shall not hear Confessions in a Church, without the Leave of the Superior, or of him who has the Cure of the Parish, unless in case of Necessity.

13. He forbids the dividing of Benefices.

14. He forbids the bestowing of Rural Deanries for a set Time, or for ever, for a certain Sum of Money.

15. He forbids Archdeacons to exact the Duty of Procuration, from the Churches which they do not visit personally.

16. He declares, that they should not suffer in the Cloysters Assemblies for Play or Debauchery, no not so much as in the Places where they were forced to sell Wine.

17. He admonishes the Canons of the Conventual Chapters, to choose a Stranger for their Superior, if they have not one capable of that Office among themselves.

18. He orders, that when there is an Election to be made in a Chapter, the Day of Election shall be publish'd, that so those who are absent may be there.

19. He prohibits the Plurality of those Benefices that have the Cure of Souls.

20. He orders, that no Person shall pretend that a Benefice belongs to him, by Right of Succession, and prohibits the exacting any thing for the granting a Licence to teach School.

The second Part of those Constitutions, relate to the regular Canons and Monks.

He begins with forbidding to exact any thing for Admittance into the Order, and that the Monks ought not to hold any thing, by way of Property; excepting Priors and those who are in some Employment, who may by the Permission of the Superiors, retain what shall be necessary for the Discharge of their Office.

2. He fixes the Age wherein any one shall be admitted into any Order, viz. eighteen Years old.

3. He orders, that the Bishops shall cause the little Wickets, which are in the Abbies and Priories to be shut.

4. He recommends to the Monks the distributing to the Poor, Infirm and Sick, the Revenues which are allotted for their Refreshment, and to be Hospitable.

5. To give to the Poor their accustomed Alms.

6. He prohibits the refusing to admit any Person into a Religious Order, under pretence of his being of another Country.

7. He interdicts the Usurers and excommunicated Persons, from Entrance into a Religious Order, and from Ecclesiastical Burial.

8. He prohibits the admitting a Monk of another Monastery, if there be not a very strong Presumption, that he has a mind to change upon a Motive of sincere Devotion, and that he does it with the Consent of his Abbot.

9. He prohibits the Monks from wearing white Gloves, gawdy Shoes, and any thing like those of the Laity, and from making use of any other colour'd Cloth, than white or black.

10. He forbids them to have any Chambers out of their Dormitory (unless they be Officers of the House to whom it is allow'd) to quarrel in the Chapter, to make any Noise in the Cloyster, to entertain Women, to play at unlawful Games, to go a Hunting, and enjoins them to be silent in the Refectory.

11. He orders, that they should give to a Monk who is obliged to go a Journey, a Horse and Necessaries for his Journey, so that he may not be forced to beg upon the Road.

12. He admonishes the Inferiors to obey with Humility, and the Superiors to command with Discretion and Prudence.

13. He forbids Abbots to let out Provostships or Priories to farm.

14. He enjoins the Ordinaries of the place, to excommunicate those who have quitted their Religious Habit.

15. He orders, that if excommunicated, interdicted, or irregular Persons present themselves to be admitted into a Religious Order, they shall declare their Irregularity; that if the Abbot can absolve them, he shall do it, if not, he shall refer them to the Major Superior, who has the power of doing it: That if it happen any such be admitted by Surprise, or otherwise, and afterwards it be discover'd, he shall receive Absolution from his Abbot, or the Major Superior.

16. He renews the tenth Canon of the third Lateran Council, which forbids the permitting Monks alone in Towns, or Villages, or so much as in Cures.

17. He renews the Prohibition made in the same Council, that no Monk should have two Priories, or two Offices.

18. He relates a Decree of the Council of Chalcedon, which forbids the Monks making any Cabals.

19. He forbids them to be Advocates for the Causes which concerned their Monastery, or any other Religious House, especially if they did it without the permission of their Abbot.

20. He excommunicated the Monks who left their Monastery, to study Physick, or Law, in pursuance of the Lateran Council.

21. He forbids the Monks to lie two in a Bed.

22. He prohibits the diminishing the Numbers of the Monks of Priories.

23. He forbids the Custom of some Monks, who swore that they would lend out no Books.

24. He orders, that those who cause any Discord in Monasteries to have a Cell apart for themselves, shall be shut up in the Cloyster.

25. He declares, That 'tis Usury to sell Commodities dearer, because of a longer Term allowed for Payment.

26. He prohibits the Clergy and Bishops from buying of Priories.

27. He forbids the demanding a Treat, or Habits, from those who would enter into a Religious Order.

The third Part contains the Constitutions relating to Nuns, and some about Abesses and Abbots.

1. He orders, that they should not suffer the Clergy, or suspicious Servants to come nigh them.

2. That they lie single.

3. That they shall not go out to visit their Relations, unless with Persons of approv'd Integrity, and for a short Time.

4. That they have no Dancing in their Cloysters.

5. That they shall live and be attir'd meanly and decently.

6. That they shall live in Common of the Goods of the Monastery.

7. That they shall have sage and discreet Confessors, of the Bishop's Appointment.

8. That the Abbesses who will not do their Duty, shall be suspended, and if upon Admonition, they do not mend, they shall be depos'd.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

9. He orders what is to be observed by those who are appointed to serve in the Infirmaries, or Hospitals.

10. He orders, That the Abbots who neglect their Duty, shall be punish'd, and prohibits them from performing the Functions of an Advocate, or a Judge, upon pain of being deposed.

11. He inflicts the same Punishment upon those who live disorderly.

12. He forbids their having a great Retinue, or young Lackeys.

13. He orders, that they should not bestow the Goods of the Monastery on their Relations, unless they be poor, or so accounted.

14. He prohibits them from suffering young Women to enter their Monasteries, and from bestowing Priories on their Relations: And orders them twice a Year to receive the Accounts of the Priors or Officers.

15. He forbids them to regulate any Affair of Consequence, or to raise a considerable Sum of Money, without the Advice of their Elders, at least of seven chosen for that purpose, by the Chapter.

16. He enjoins them to be tender towards their repenting Brethren, and not to sell Offices.

17. He forbids them to menace or abuse those who make any Proposition to the Chapter about the Reformation of the House.

18. He enjoins them not suffer the Priors, or Officers to live irregularly.

19. He forbids them to eat in their Chambers, unless in case of Necessity.

20. He prohibits those who are admitted into a Monastery, from going out to study; and orders those who are gone out, to return within two Months.

21. He admonishes the Abbots, to keep Chaplains of a mature Age and good Morals.

The last Part, contains the Constitutions relating to Archbishops and Bishops.

1. He orders them to have their Coronets large enough, and wear their Hair cut round, that so it may not be seen below their Mitre; to be prudent and modest in their Conversation and Conduct.

2. Not to hear Matins a-bed, and not to concern themselves with feculent Affairs, during the Time of Divine Service.

3. To celebrate the Office themselves upon High Festivals, and to preach the Word of God, or cause it to be preached.

4. Not to go a Hunting, nor wear fine Furs, nor play at Dice or Cards.

5. To have reading at their Tables the Beginning and End of their Meals.

6. To have prudent Almoners, to exercise Hospitality, to give their Audiences for the Administration of Justice, and to hear the Poor at stated Hours, to receive often the Confessions of others, and as often to confess themselves.

7. To reside in their Cathedral Churches, especially on the High Festivals, and in the Time of Lent.

8. To cause the Profession they made when consecrated, to be read over to them at least twice a Year.

9. Not to carry along with them in their Visits a great Train and needless Equipages.

10. To make choice of prudent Friends, Men of good Morals, and to keep their Families in due Order.

11. To have such Officers as have all the Qualifications necessary for the well discharging of their Trust, and especially, such as are grave and prudent, who will do Justice Gratis.

12. To tolerate nothing that shall border upon Simony in the Collation of Holy Orders or Benefices, in the Dedication of Churches, in the Benediction of Virgins, &c. provided none of the honest and allowed Customs be prejudiced hereby.

13. Not to give Benefices with the Cure of Souls, to young or unworthy Persons; not to excommunicate, or pass Censures with precipitation, not to exchange the Punishment of the excommunicated for pecuniary Mulcts; not to give a Dispensation for the three Forms of Marriage for Money; not to collate Benefices which are not vacant; and not to promote to Holy Orders such Clerks whose Ability and Vertue are not known.

14. To take nothing for the Seal, for doing Justice, for redeeming the Right of Procuration, for the Burial of excommunicated Persons, or for tolerating Clerks to converse with Women.

15. Not to suffer Justice to be done in Church-yards or consecrated Places.

16. Not to be at the Feasts of Fools.

17. To hold a Synod every Year, to confer the Sacrament of Confirmation, to correct the Disorders of their Diocess.

18. Not to suffer the Women to dance in the Church-yards, or any consecrated Places, nor to work on Sundays.

19. To prevent the cancelling of Last Wills and Testaments.

20. To extirpate that Crime which is odious to name.

21. Lastly, to punish that Disorder with Severity, according to the Rule made in the Lateran Council on that Subject.

The Council of Montpellier in the Year 1215.

The Council of Montpellier. 1215.

IN the Council held at Montpellier, in the Year 1215. by Peter of Benevento Cardinal, upon the Affair of the Earl of Montfort, they published forty six Decrees.

The four first relate to the Manner how the Bishops and the other Clergy ought to be habited. It is therein order'd, that the Bishops shall wear a Linnen-vest, and a long Habit sew'd on their Shoulders, and ty'd with Ribbans on their Breast. That the Canons and other benefic'd Persons, shall not make use of any gilded Loops or Shoes, and that they shall not frequent the Court, or Taverns, nor have any familiar Converse with Women; that they wear no colour'd, or close-body'd Coats. That the Arch-deacons and others promoted to any Dignity in Cathedral, or Collegiate Churches, shall wear a long Habit closed from the Top, whether it be of Woollen or Linnen: That the Canons shall observe the same thing: That the benefic'd Clerks shall wear a round Coronet about their Heads, that so the Hair above and below may be parted by an equal Circle.

The three next relate to the Manners of the Clergy. He forbids them to lend upon Usury, or to keep Hawks.

The eighth prohibits the giving Prebends to Laicks.

The two next provide for the Execution of the former.

In the eleventh and twelfth, the Bishops are enjoin'd to bestow Benefices Gratis on Persons capable of holding them, and are prohibited from granting them to young Persons, who are as yet in the lesser Orders.

The two next relate to the Abbots and Monks, and contain the Ordinances so often repeated at that time, about the Modesty which they ought to have in their Habits, their renouncing of all Property, the forbidding the exacting of any thing for Admittance into a Monastery, the prohibition of being Advocates, the Alms which they ought to give to the Poor of what is remaining at their Tables.

The Council of Montpellier. 1215.

The five next concern the regular Canons. They are enjoin'd to wear great Coronets, and the Monks to wear larger; to be meanly shod, not to go out of the Monastery wherein they are to enter into another; to have Surplices over their Habits, and when they travel a close black Cassock; and to give nothing for a Prebend.

By the twenty ninth, the Priests and Monks are prohibited to admit of Usurers, excommunicated, and interdicted Persons to the Communion, or to give them Burial.

In the thirtieth and thirty first, it is enjoined, that three Monks at least, should be put into the Priories, and if the Revenues be not sufficient to maintain them, more should be united to them, that so there might be in each a Prior and two Monks.

The next, are Laws for the Observation and Preservation of Peace.

In the last, the Archbishops and Bishops are ordered to have a Priest, and two or three Laicks in each Parish, who are obliged by Oath, if need be, to declare to the Bishop, the Lords and Judges of the Place, the Heretick which they have discover'd in their Quarter.

The fourth General Lateran Council held under Pope Innocent III. in the Year 1215.

The IV. General Lateran Council held 1215.

THIS Council was appointed by Innocent III. the 20th of April 1213. to be held two Years and an Half after, that is, at the Beginning of November in the Year 1215. The Pope in his Letters of Indiction, gives his Reasons, why he thought that Council necessary, viz. the recovering of the Holy Land, and the Reformation of the Catholick Church. He says, that whereas those two things affect the general State of the Church, he had resolv'd according to the Advice of his Brethren, and other judicious Persons, to call a General Council for the Salvation of Souls, for the eradicating of Vice, and planting of Vertue, to correct Irregularities, reform the Manners, condemn Heresies, put a Stop to Divisions, establish Peace, prevent Outrages, re-establish Liberty, and to engage the Princes and

The IV. General Lateran Couneil held 1215.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

and People to retrieve the Holy Land: That in the Interim, till the Council should meet, he had taken care to inform himself of the Abuses which needed Reformation, and to send Persons into the several Provinces, to dispose them for the Expedition to the Holy Land. He enjoins the Archbishops and Bishops to come to the Council (excepting one or two Bishops who should remain in each Province) and those who could not come in Person, to send Deputies, and admonishes them, to order all the Chapters to send likewise their Deputies thither. In the mean time he recommended to them, the diligent enquiring into whatever was necessary to be reformed or amended in their Provinces, that so they might speak of it in the Council, and to contribute all they could towards the promoting the Expedition to the Holy Land. This Circular Letter was directed to the Patriarchs, Archbishops, Bishops, and Soveraign Princes of all Christendom.

The IV. General Lateran Council held 1215.

The Council met at Rome in the Church of St. Saviour, on the time prefix'd (in November 1215.) and consisted of four hundred and twelve Bishops in Person, near eight hundred Abbots and Priors, and a great many Deputies of the absent Prelates, or of the Chapters. The Latin Patriarchs of Constantinople and Jerusalem were there in Person: The Patriarch of Antioch who was sick, sent a Bishop thither; and there came a Deacon the Deputy of the Patriarch of Alexandria, which was then under the Power of the Saracens. The Ambassadors of the Emperor of Constantinople, of the King of Sicily the Emperor elect, of the Kings of France, England, Hungary, Jerusalem, Cyprus, Arragon, and of the other Princes, were there.

The Pope open'd the Session by Preaching on those Words of our Saviour, With desire have I desired to eat the Passover with you. He therein took notice of three Sorts of Passovers which he desired to celebrate with the Fathers of the Council, the Corporeal, the Spiritual, and the Eternal: The Corporeal, which was the passing from one Place to another, for the Deliverance of Jerusalem; the Spiritual, which was the passing from one State to another, by the Reformation of the Church; and the Eternal, which is the passing from the Temporal State to the Glory of Heaven. Upon the first Head, he exhorts the Ecclesiasticks to do all they could for the succouring of the Holy Land. Upon the Second, he exhorts them to make use of Spiritual Punishments on the Delinquents, that so they might reduce them from their Error. He exhorts them in particular, to correct the Ecclesiasticks; because the Disorder proceeded chiefly from the Clergy, whose evil Example the People follow'd. He observes, that from hence chiefly proceed the Evils which infest the Church of God. 'Tis this (says he) that overthrows 'the Faith, disfigures Religion, destroys Liberty, treads Justice 'under Foot, increases the Number of Hereticks, makes 'the Schismaticks insolent, the Infidels Proud and the Sara- 'cens Powerful. He concludes all with the third Passover, which is the passing to Glory, where he prays he may one Day meet with them. He preach'd likewise another Sermon to the Fathers of the Council, which is only a Moral Exhortation.

Afterwards he orders the Reading in a full Council the Chapters or Canons upon the Discipline of the Church, which were already drawn up. Matthew Paris says, That those Canons seem'd tolerable to some of the Prelates, but grievous to others. His Words are these, Facto prius ab ipso Papa exhortationis Sermone, recitata sunt in pleno Concilio Capitula Septuaginta quæ aliis placabilia, aliis videbantur onerosa. Let the Case be how it will, 'tis certain, That these Canons were not made by the Council, but by Innocent III. who presented them to the Council ready drawn up, and order'd them to be read, and that the Prelates did not enter into any Debate upon them, but that their Silence was taken for an Approbation.

These seventy Chapters or Canons, begin with a Form of Faith, drawn up in these Terms. 'We do firmly believe, 'and sincerely confess, That there is but One True, Eternal, 'Immense, Omnipotent, Immutable, Incomprehensible, Ineffable God, the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, who are 'Three Persons, but only One Essence, One Substance, and 'One Simple Nature. The Father derives his Substance from 'none, the Son has it from the Father, and the Holy Ghost 'proceeds from Both, without Beginning and without End. 'The Father begets, the Son is begotten, and the Holy Ghost 'proceeds. They are Consubstantial and Co-equal in all 'things, equally Powerful, equally Eternal, One Individual 'Principle of all things, the Creator of things Visible and In'visible, Spiritual and Corporeal, who by His Omnipotent 'Power, created out of Nothing at the Beginning of Time, 'and all together, two sorts of Creatures, Spiritual and Cor'poreal; and afterwards the humane Nature, which is a Com'pound of Soul and Body. For the Devil and the other 'Demons were Good when God created them, and became 'by their own Fault Wicked, and Man sinned and fell by 'the Suggestion of the Devil. This Holy Trinity, which is 'Indivisible with respect to its Essence, and distinguish'd accor'ding to its personal Properties, has given to Mankind a salu'tary Doctrine by the Ministery of Moses, the Prophets, and 'the other Servants of God, according to the Order and Dis'position of Times. And at last Jesus Christ the only Son 'of God, who was incarnate by the Power of the whole 'Trinity, and conceiv'd of the Virgin Mary (always a Vir'gin) by the Power of the Holy Ghost, who was true Man, 'made up of a reasonable Soul and humane Body, one 'single Person compounded of two Natures, has more clear'ly shown us the Way of Life, who being Immortal and 'Impassible as to his Divinity, as to his Humanity became 'Passible and Mortal: And he suffer'd for the Salvation of 'Mankind on the Cross; he died and descended into Hell; 'is risen from the Dead, and ascended up into Heaven; but 'he descended in his Soul, and rose again with his Body, 'and is ascended into Heaven with his Body and Soul, and 'shall come again at the End of the World, to judge both 'the Living and the Dead, and to give to all Men according 'to their Works, as well the Reprobates as the Elect, who 'shall all arise again with their own Bodies which they at pre'sent bear about them, that so they may receive according to 'their Deserts, whether they be Good or Bad; the former E'ternal Glory with Jesus Christ, and the latter Eternal Dam'nation with the Devil. There is but one Catholick Church 'of the Faithful, out of which none is Saved; wherein Je'sus Christ is both Priest and Sacrifice, whose Body and Blood 'are contain'd really in the Sacrament of the Altar under the 'Species of Bread and Wine; the Bread being Transubstan'tiated into the Body of Jesus Christ, and the Wine into his 'Blood by the Power of God, that so to render the Mystery 'of the Unity perfect, we might receive of His Nature what 'he receiv'd of Ours. No Person may consecrate the Sa'crament, but the Priest who has receiv'd lawful Ordinati'on, by the power of the Keys of the Church, which Jesus 'Christ has given to his Apostles and their Successors. The 'Sacrament of Baptism, which is consecrated by Invocation 'of the Trinity, Father, Son and Holy Ghost, on the Water, 'is the Cause of Salvation as well of Infants as of adult 'Persons, when it is confer'd according to the Form of the 'Church, whoever it be that administers it. If any one falls 'into Sin after Baptism, he may be always restor'd to Grace 'by a true Repentance: Not only Virgins and those who live 'continently; but also marry'd Persons, who please God 'by their Faith and Good Life, merit Eternal Life. This is 'the Abstract of the Doctrine of the Church contain'd in the Profession of Faith of this Council. Which is the first Chapter or Canon of it.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The IV. General Lateran Council held 1215.

In Consequence to this, the Council condemns in the Second Chapter, the Treatise compos'd by the Abbot Joachim against Peter Lombard, about the Unity of the Essence of the Trinity; because that Abbot had treated him as a Fool and an Heretick, for having said in his Book of Sentences, That the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, are one Supreme or Soveraign Being, which is neither begetting, begotten nor proceeding: A Proposition from whence he pretends it follows, That there is a Quaternity in the Godhead, namely three Persons of the Trinity, and one common Essence. The Council explains and confirms the Doctrine of the Master of the Sentences, and rejects that of Joachim; who pretended, that the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, were not the same thing, tho' they be one Substance and one Nature; which yet he explain'd in such a Manner, that he seem'd to admit of only a Specifick Unity, or Resemblance between those three Persons. The Council declar'd those to be Hereticks, who would maintain the Opinion of the Abbot Joachim. However, they order'd, That the Condemnation should be no Prejudice to the Monastery of Flora, of which Abbot Joachim was the Founder; because there they liv'd regularly, and put in practice a very good Discipline; but especially because that Abbot had submitted his Books to the judgment of the Holy See, and had protested in Writing, that his Belief was the same with that of the Church of Rome, which is the Mother and Mistress of all the Faithful. The Council likewise condemn'd in the same Chapter, the Errors of Amaury, of whom 'tis said, that the Father of Lies had so obscur'd his Understanding, that his Doctrine may rather pass for Nonsense than Heresie.

In the Third Canon, they excommunicated and anathematiz'd all the Hereticks, who oppose the Catholick and Orthodox Faith, as before explain'd: And 'tis therein Order'd, that the Hereticks shall be deliver'd up after their Condemnation to the Secular Powers, or to their Officers, to be punished according to their Demerits, the Clerks being first degraded: That their Goods shall be confiscated, if they be Laicks: And if Clerks, then they shall be apply'd to the Use of the Church: That those who lye under violent Suspicions of Heresie shall be likewise anathematiz'd, if they do not give Proofs of their Innocence, and they shall be avoided, till they have given Satisfaction, and if they be in a State of Excommunication during a Year, they shall be condemn'd as Hereticks: That the Lords shall be admonish'd and oblig'd by Ecclesiastical Censures, to take an Oath, that they will extirpate Hereticks and excommunicate Persons, who shall be within their Territories: That if they neglect to do it after Admonition, they shall be excommunicated by the Metropolitan and Biſhops of the Province, and that in Caſe they perſiſt a Year without making Satisfaction, the Soveraign Pontiff ſhall be advertis'd thereof, that ſo he may declare their Vaſſals abſolv'd from their Oath of Fealty, and beſtow their Lands upon ſuch Catholicks as will ſeize upon them, who ſhall be the lawful Poſſeſſors of them by extirpating Hereticks, and preſerving the the Purity of the Faith in them; but without Prejudice to the Right of the Superior Lord, provided he offer no Obſtruction or Hindrance to the putting this Ordinance in Execution. The ſame Indulgences are granted to thoſe Catholicks, as ſhall undertake to extirpate Hereticks by force of Arms, as are granted to thoſe who go to the Holy Land. They excommunicated thoſe who entertain'd, protected, or ſupported Hereticks, and declare, That thoſe who ſhall be excommunicated upon that Account, if they do not make Satisfaction within a Year, ſhall be declar'd Infamous, and diveſted of all Offices, as well as of Votes in the Elections; that they ſhall not be admitted as Evidences; that they ſhall be depriv'd of the Faculty of making a Will, or ſucceeding to an Eſtate; and laſtly, That they may not perform the Functions of any Office. 'Tis likewiſe farther order'd, That thoſe who will not avoid the Company of ſuch Perſons as are by the Church denounc'd Excommunicate, ſhall be excommunicated themſelves, till they have given Satisfaction. But above all, Eccleſiaſticks are forbidden to adminiſter the Sacraments to them, to give them Chriſtian Burial, to receive their Alms or Oblations, upon pain of being ſuſpended from the Functions of their Orders, wherein they may not be re-eſtabliſh'd without a ſpecial Indulto from the Pope. The ſame Puniſhment is likewiſe inflicted on the Regulars, and beſides this, that they be not any longer tolerated in the Dioceſs, wherein they ſhall have committed ſuch a Fact. All thoſe are excommunicated who ſhall dare to preach without having receiv'd a Licence from the Holy See, or a Catholick Biſhop. Laſtly, The Archbiſhops and Biſhops, are oblig'd to viſit in Perſon, or by their Archdeacons or by other Perſons, once or twice a Year, the Dioceſſes where it is reported that there are any Hereticks, and to put a certain Number of Inhabitants upon their Oath, to diſcover to the Biſhop ſuch Hereticks as may be detected. They are likewiſe enjoin'd to cauſe the Accuſed to appear, and to puniſh them if they do not clear themſelves, or if they relapſe after they have been clear'd. Laſtly, The Biſhops are threatned to be depos'd if they neglect to purge their Dioceſs from Hereticks.

The Councils held during the Thirteenth Century.

The IV. General Lateran Council held 1215.

The Fourth Canon relates to the Greeks. It imports, That tho' the Council would honour and favour the Greeks, who threw themſelves under the Obedience of the Holy See, by maintaining as far as poſſible their Cuſtoms and Ceremonies, yet it could not tolerate, what might be prejudicial to the Salvation of Souls and to the Eccleſiaſtical Dignity: That the Greeks, after they had ſhaken off their Obedience to the Holy See, have had ſo great an Abhorrence to the Latins, that they would not celebrate on the Altars whereon the Latins had celebrated, till they had waſh'd them; that they had re-baptiz'd thoſe who had been baptiz'd by the Latins. They are here forbidden to do any ſuch thing for the future, and are exhorted to conform themſelves to the Church of Rome, that there may be one Flock under one Shepherd. They who ſhall for the future undertake the like, are menac'd with Excommunication and Depoſition.

The Fifth regulates the Order of Patriarch, and orders, That next to the Church of Rome, which has the Primacy over all other Churches according to the Appointment of our Saviour, the Church of Conſtantinople ſhall have the Firſt Place, that of Alexandria the Second, the Church of Antioch the Third, and that of Jeruſalem the Fourth: And the Patriarchs of thoſe Churches are impower'd to grant the Pall to the Archbiſhops who depend on them, and to demand of them a Profeſſion of Faith and of Obedience to the Holy See, after they themſelves have receiv'd the Pall from the Holy See (which is here ſtyl'd the Enſign of the Plenitude of the Paſtoral Power) and have taken an Oath of Fealty and Obedience to it. They are likewiſe allow'd to have the Croſs carry'd every where before them, except in the City of Rome, and other Places where the Pope ſhall be in Perſon, or his Legate, having the Marks of the Apoſtolick Dignity. They are alſo allow'd the Privilege of trying the Appeals of all the Provinces within their Juriſdiction, except Appeals to the Holy See, to which all the World ought to pay a Deference.

In the Sixth it is order'd, That according to ancient Cuſtom the Metropolitans ſhall every Year call Provincial Councils, wherein they ſhall treat of the Reformation of Manners, eſpecially of thoſe of the Clergy, and cauſe the Canons to be read over, eſpecially thoſe that are made in this Council, and that the Biſhops ſhall take care to have in their Dioceſſes ſeveral prudent and grave Perſons, who without exerciſing any Juriſdiction, ſhall inform themſelves of ſuch Things as are neceſſary to be reform'd or corrected, and ſhall make their Report to the Metropolitan and his Suffragans in the next Council, that ſo a Remedy may be apply'd.

The Seventh, enjoins the Ordinaries to be careful in reforming the Manners of the Clergy within their Dioceſſes, and to correct the Abuſes and Diſorders; and that they might with the greater Freedom, it declares, That they may not be hinder'd in doing it, under the Pretence of any contrary Cuſtom, or by any Appeal. With reſpect to the Diſorders of the Canons of Cathedral Churches, which the Chapters were us'd to correct; 'tis here order'd, That they ſhall be corrected at the Time prefixed by the Biſhop, if not, that then he ſhall make uſe of Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures to correct them: That he ſhall likewiſe take care to reform the other Irregularities of his Clergy, by obſerving in all things the Rule and Order preſcrib'd him: That moreover, if the Canons forbear to ſay the Office in their Church, without any evident Reaſon, the Biſhop ſhall not forbear to celebrate, and upon his Complaint the Metropolitan ſhall make uſe of Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures againſt them. Laſtly, The Ordinaries are admoniſh'd in this Canon, not to abuſe this Ordinance, to get any profit to themſelves by it, or to oppreſs thoſe of their Dioceſs.

The Councils held during the Thirteenth Century.

The IV. General Lateran Council held 1215.

The Eighth Canon, regulates the Proceſs which ought to be minded in the Accuſations of Eccleſiaſticks. 'Tis therein declar'd, That 'tis not to be tolerated to accuſe them lightly: That they ought to be preſent when they are inform'd againſt, unleſs they abſent themſelves out of Contumacy: That they ought to be told the Heads of the Information againſt them, and to know their Accuſers, and to be admitted to put in their Replications and lawful Exceptions: That there are three Ways of proceeding againſt a Criminal, by Way of Accuſation, by Denunciation and by Inquiſition. That the Accuſation ought to be uſher'd in by the complaint of the Accuſer, the Denunciation, by a charitable Admonition, and the Inquiſition, by common Report: That yet it was not requiſite to obſerve this Method preciſely, with reſpect to Regulars, and that one might diveſt them of their Offices when it was expedient, without obſerving all theſe Formalities.

The Ninth orders, That the Biſhops of Dioceſſes, wherein there are People of different Nations, and who have different Cuſtoms, ſhall take care to provide Perſons who may celebrate Divine Service according to thoſe different Rites, without putting themſelves to the trouble of having two Biſhops in one and the ſame Dioceſs.

The Tenth imports, That the Biſhops ſhall take Care to have in the Churches of the Dioceſſes eminent Perſons to preach the Word of God, and adminiſter the Sacrament of Penance.

The Eleventh confirms the Decree of the Council of the Lateran, held under Alexander III. importing, That there ſhall be in all Cathedral Churches a Maſter to teach Gratis the Clergy of thoſe Churches, and the other poor Scholars, on whom they ſhall beſtow the Revenue of the Benefice; and extends this Rule to other Churches, that ſo the ſame might be obſerv'd for the Maſter of a Grammar-School: And that in the Metropolitan Church, beſides the Grammar-Maſter, there ſhall be a Divine to teach the Prieſts and other Eccleſiaſticks the Holy Scripture, and what relates to the Cure of Souls; that they ſhall beſtow on him the Revenue of a Benefice, tho' he might be a Canon at the ſame time, and that he ſhall hold it ſo long as he ſhall be a Teacher: That if the Metropolitan Church have not wherewithal conveniently to keep a Theologician, and a Grammar-Maſter, the Theologician ſhall be kept there, and the Grammar-Maſter provided for in another Church.

The Twelfth imports, That every three Years there ſhall be held in all Kingdoms or Provinces, without prejudice to the Rights of the Dioceſan Biſhops, Chapters of Abbots, and Priors of Monaſteries, who never were uſed to hold any ſuch before: That they ſhall invite to them two Abbots of the Order of Ciſteaux, who were accuſtom'd to hold ſuch: That four of them ſhall preſide over the Chapter, which ſhall be held ſeveral Days: That there they ſhall lay out themſelves upon reforming the Order, and making the Regular Diſcipline to flouriſh: That whatever ſhall be order'd with the Approbation of the four Preſidents, ſhall be inviolably obſerv'd notwithſtanding any Oppoſition, or Appeal whatever: That all thoſe who come to the Chapter ſhall live in common whilſt it is held: That there they ſhall nominate Viſiters to viſit the Monaſteries of Men and Women, and to correct and reform whatever ſhall want it in them; ſo that if they find themſelves oblig'd to depoſe any Superior, they ſhall acquaint the Biſhop of him, who ſhall not fail to depoſe him; and in caſe he does not do it, that then they ſhould acquaint the Holy See with it. It orders the ſame thing with Reſpect to regular Canons. However it does not diſcharge the Biſhops from taking care of the Monaſteries; on the contrary, it enjoins them with the utmoſt Diligence to keep up the Diſcipline, that ſo the Viſiters may find nothing to reform. Laſtly, it orders the Biſhops and Preſidents of Chapters to make uſe of Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures againſt the Seculars who ſhall do any wrong to the Monaſteries.

The Thirteenth prohibits all manner of Perſons from erecting a new Order, and imports, that thoſe who would embrace the Monaſtick Life ſhall enter into an Order already approv'd; and that thoſe who are willing to found a new Monaſtery ſhall follow one of the Rules, and one of the Orders already approv'd. It likewiſe forbids one and the ſame Perſon to be a Monk, or Abbot of two Monaſteries.

The Fourteenth enjoins, That the Incontinent Clerks ſhall be puniſh'd: That if any one being taken up for that Crime, ſhall shall dare to celebrate, he shall be divested of his Benefices and depos'd: That the same Severity shall be used to Bishops, who shall countenance those Irregular Persons for any Interest: And that the Ecclesiasticks who are in Countries where they have Liberty to marry, shall be more severely punish'd, if they fall into the Sin of Incontinence.

The Councils held during the Thirteenth Century.

The Fifteenth, is against the Drunkenness of Ecclesiasticks, and forbids them to go a Hunting, and to keep Hounds or Hawks.

The IV. General Council held 1215.

The Sixteenth forbids them to concern themselves in Secular Trades, especially in such are dishoneſt: To go to Comedies or Farces; to frequent Publick Houses, unless in a Journey, or in case of Necessity; and to play at any Games of Dice: And it enjoyns them to wear a Coronet and Tonsure suitable to their Quality; to have Habits clos'd before, which should be neither too long nor too short; not to wear colour'd Cloths, or such as are set off with Trimming; not to wear at Church Copes with Sleeves, not to wear Clasps or Ribbans of Gold and Silver, nor Rings, unless by their Dignity they have a Right to wear them. It is likewise order'd. That Bishops shall wear in Church and out of Church Surplices of Linnen, except those who ought to wear the Monachal Habit, and that the Mantles which they make use of, shall be fastned before or behind with Clasps.

The Seventeenth is against the Effeminacy of some Clerks who spent part of the Night in Feasting, or in Prophane Company, slept till Daylight, and in saying their Matins left out one half of the Office: And against those who celebrate Mass but four Times a Year, and who were present at it but very seldom, and without any Manner of Devotion. Those Irregularities were forbidden under Pain of Suspension, and the Clerks are exhorted to celebrate the Morning and Evening-Service constantly and devoutly.

The Eighteenth prohibits them from pronouncing the Sentence of Death, from assisting at Executions, from writing or dictating Letters to demand the Death of any Person, from being Inquisitors, from exercising any part of Chirurgery, wherein it was necessary to apply Iron or Fire; from giving Benediction for the making of a Tryal by hot or cold Water, or by hot Iron.

The Nineteenth forbids the putting any Houshold Goods into Churches, unless in Cases of Necessity; and orders, that they shall keep the Utensils and Ornaments of the Church of their own.

The twentieth orders, that the Holy Chrism and the Eucharist shall be kept under Lock and Key, and that if the Person to whose Care they are entrusted, leaves the Place where they are, open, he should be suspended ab Officio for three Months, and if any Accident happen to them through his Fault, he shall be punish'd for it very severely.

The twenty first is the famous Canon which enjoins, that the faithful of both Sexes who are arriv'd to Years of Discretion, shall confess all their Sins at least once a Year to their own proper Priest (that is, the Curate, as appears by the thirty second Canon, where this Title is given to Curates:) That they shall compleat the Penance impos'd on them, and receive the Sacrament of the Eucharist devoutly at least every Easter, unless they believe that they ought to abstain from it for some time, upon some reasonable Account, and with the Advice of their own proper Priest. Those who shall not discharge this Duty, shall be condemn'd to the being depriv'd of entring into the Church whilst they live, and of Ecclesiastical Burial when they die. And 'tis order'd, that this Canon shall be often read publickly in the Church, that so none may plead Ignorance in the Case. 'Tis here added, that if any one would confess his Sins to a Priest that is a Stranger, he ought to ask and get leave for it of his own proper Priest, because otherwise he can neither bind nor unbind. The Priests are likewise admonish'd to be discreet and prudent, to handle like good Physicians the Wounds of their Patient; to pour into them Oyl and Vinegar by informing themselves exactly of the State of the Sinner, and of the Circumstances of his Sins; and to know what Counsel he ought to give him, and what Remedies he ought to make use of to cure him, to take care never to discover by Word or Sign the Sins of those who are confess'd; and if he wants Advice in the Case, to ask it without discovering the Person. Lastly, that those who shall disclose any Sin that has been reveal'd to them in Confession, shall be condemn'd not only to be depos'd, but also to be confin'd during Life in a Monastery, there to do Penance for it.

The twenty second imports, that the Physicians of the Body shall advise their Patients to send for the Physicians of the Soul before they prescribe any thing to them, that so they may provide for the Salvation of their Souls, before they lay out any Care for the Health of their Body. It likewise forbids Physicians under pain of Excommunication to prescribe any thing to their Patient for the Health of his Body, which may put his Soul in any Danger.

The twenty third imports, that a Cathedral or Regular Church shall not be vacant above three Months; and if those whose Right it is to elect, do not proceed to an Election within that time, they shall forfeit the Right of electing Pro hac vice, which shall lapse to their immediate Superior, who shall be oblig'd to do it within three Months.

The Councils held during the Thirteenth Century.

The twenty fourth prescribes the Forms of Elections: Namely, that in the Presence of all those who ought to be there, three credible Persons be chosen out of their Body, who shall collect and exactly count the Voices of all who shall give their Suffrages; and who having put them in Writing, shall immediately publish them, without being liable to any Appeal, that so he may be elected, who has all the Votes, or the Votes of the Major and Sounder Part of the Chapter: Or that they may commit the Power of electing to a certain Number of capable Persons, who shall provide for the vacant Church in the Name of All. The Elections made otherwise are declar'd Null; if they are not made by the unanimous Vote of all the Electors as it were by Inspiration. These then are the three ways of Election, by Scrutiny, by Compromizing, and by Inspiration. They who observe not this Form shall forfeit their Right of Election pro hac vice. It prohibits the constituting a Procurator in the Business of Election, if he who constitutes be not absent, and in a Place from whence he ought to be summon'd, where he is detain'd by a lawful Obstruction, of which Oath shall be made; and in this Case 'tis allow'd to commissionate one of the Body in his Place. Lastly, it rejects clandestine and secret Election, and enjoins, that the Election shall be solemnly publish'd immediately after it be made.

The IV. General Lateran Council held 1215.

The twenty fifth deprives him, who consents to an Election made by the Authority of Secular Powers, of the Benefice to which he has been elected, and renders him uncapable of being elected to another: And with respect to those who proceeded to the Election, it suspends them for three Years ab Officio & Beneficio, and deprives them of the Right of electing

The twenty sixth imports, that he whose Right it is to confirm the Person elected ought carefully to enquire into the Form of Election, and the Person elected, that in Case the Election be according to Form, and the Person elected have the Qualifications requisite, he shall confirm it. Those who confirm an unworthy Person, shall forfeit their Right of confirming, and be suspended from their Benefices. The Bishops are admonish'd to promote only such to Holy Orders, who can acquit themselves of their Duties worthily. As for those who are under immediate Subjection to the Holy See, 'tis order'd, that if they can conveniently, they shall personally appear before the Pope to obtain the Confirmation of their Election, or shall send able Persons by whom one may be inform'd of the Qualifications of the Person elected, and of the Form of the Election; provided notwithstanding that those who are out of Italy, if their Election be not disputed, shall have the Administration both of Spirituals and Temporals. As to the Consecration or Benediction, 'tis declar'd, that it shall be given according to Custom.

The twenty seventh enjoyns the Bishops to instruct, or cause those to be instructed on whom they confer Priests Orders, of the Manner of celebrating Divine Service, and of administring the Sacraments. They are threatned to be punish'd who shall for the future ordain ignorant Priests; because 'tis more eligible to have a few good, than a great many bad Ministers.

The twenty eighth orders, that those who shall have ask'd and obtain'd leave to quit their Benefices, shall be bound to do so; if not, that then they shall be forc'd to it.

The twenty ninth renews the Canon of the Lateran Council held under Alexander III. which prohibits one and the same Person from holding several Benefices, that have the Cure of Souls; and that this may be put in Execution, it orders, that any Ecclesiastick who shall accept of a Benefice having the Cure of Souls, when he has another of the same Nature, shall forfeit his Right to the first, and if he will hold it he shall likewise be turn'd out of the latter: That the Patron of the first Benefice shall forthwith bestow it on whom he pleases, and if he delays presenting the Space of three Months, not only the Right of presenting shall lapse to another, as is order'd in the former Lateran Council, but also that he shall bestow so much of his Revenues on the Church, as he has gain'd by the vacant Benefice. The same thing is order'd with respect to Personats, and therein 'tis prohibited the having two Personats in one and the same Church, tho' they have not the Cure of Souls. However 'tis declar'd, that the Holy See may dispense with this Law with Respect to Persons of Merit and Learning, who ought to be dignify'd with considerable Benefices, when there shall be sufficient Reason for it.

The thirtieth orders, that those who shall collate Benefices on insufficient Persons, shall be suspended from the Right of collating, and that this Suspension shall not be taken off, but by the Authority of the Pope, or Patriarch.

The thirty first imports, that the Children of Canons, and especially Bastards, may not have Prebends in the Churches where their Fathers are Canons.

The thirty second orders the Patrons of Parochial Churches to allow the Curates a sufficient Part of the Revenues for their their Maintenance, and enjoins the Curates to ſerve their Cures themſelves and not by Vicars, at leaſt, that a Pariſh-Church ſhall not be annex'd to a Prebend or a Dignity, in which Caſe he who is the Incumbent being oblig'd to do Duty in the Great Church, ſhall ſubſtitute in his Place for the Cure a conſtant Vicar, to whom he ſhall allow a Competency. It prohibits the laying a Penſion on the Revenues of Curates.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The IV. General Lateran Council held 1215.

The thirty third orders, that the Biſhops, or their Arch-deacons ſhall not exact the Right of Procuration, but when they ſhall viſit in their own Perſons; that they ſhall obſerve the Regulation made in the Lateran Council. This Law likewiſe extended to the Legates and Nuncio's of the Holy See; and they who viſit are recommended not to ſeek their own Profit, but the Glory of Jeſus Chriſt, and to apply themſelves to the Reformation of Manners and to Preaching.

The thirty fourth prohibits the Exactions made under a Pretence of paying the Duty of Procuration to Legates or any others.

The thirty fifth prohibits the appealing from a Judge to a Superior before he has paſs'd Sentence, unleſs there be a lawful Cauſe for ſuch an Appeal, which ſhall be repreſented to the Judge before it can be brought before the Superior; which is enjoin'd without prejudice to thoſe Conſtitutions, which order, that the greater Cauſes ſhall be referr'd to the Holy See.

The thirty ſixth imports, that if the Judge revoke a Comminatory or Interlocutory Sentence which he has paſs'd, he may continue the drawing up of the Proceſs, when an Appeal has been made from this Sentence.

The thirty ſeventh prohibits the granting of Commiſſions for the allowing Perſons to appeal before Judges above two days Journey diſtant from the Place where the Perſon aſſign'd is; and the obtaining ſuch Commiſſions without ſpecial Orders from the Lord of the Place.

The thirty eighth enjoins the Judges to have a publick Officer, or two ſufficient Perſons, who ſhall write down all the Form of the Proceſſes, which ſhall be communicated to the Parties concern'd keeping the Minutes by them.

The thirty ninth orders, that the Perſon who has been turn'd out of any Place, ſhall be firſt put in it again, before his Right to it be try'd.

The fortieth imports, that the Poſſeſſion of a Year ſhall be computed from the Day of its being ſettled by a Decree; tho' the Perſon in whoſe Favour Sentence is paſs'd, cannot by Reaſon of the Malice of his Adverſary, be put into Poſſeſſion of the thing which is adjudg'd to him, or may have been turn'd out of it. It prohibits Eccleſiaſticks from committing the Tryal of Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes to Laicks.

The forty firſt imports, that the Preſcription which is not Bona fide made ſhall be of no Force, and that 'tis neceſſary that he who makes uſe of Preſcription, ſhall not remember any Time when what he holds did not belong to him.

The forty ſecond prohibits Eccleſiaſticks from enlarging their Juriſdiction to the Prejudice of ſecular Juſtice.

The forty third prohibits Laicks from exacting Oaths of Fidelity from Eccleſiaſticks, who hold no Temporality of them to oblige them to it.

The forty fourth declares, that the Conſtitutions of Princes which are prejudicial to the Rights of the Church ſhall not be obſerv'd, whether they be for the Alienation of Fiefs, or for the incroaching on the Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, or for any other Goods.

The forty fifth prohibits Patrons and Vouchers of Churches from undertaking more than is is allow'd them, and deprives them of the Right of Patronage, who ſhall wound or kill the Clerks of the Churches under their Patronage.

The forty ſixth revives the Excommunication iſſued out by the Lateran Council againſt thoſe who exact Tallies and other Taxes from Eccleſiaſticks. Notwithſtanding it allows Biſhops in Caſes of Neceſſity to engage Eccleſiaſticks to give ſomething, provided they have adviſ'd with the Pope about it firſt. It declares thoſe Sentences null that are made by excommunicated Perſons, and it obſerves, that thoſe who have been excommunicated whilſt they were in an Office, are not diſcharg'd from their Excommunication for their having quitted that Office.

The forty ſeventh regulates the Form of Excommunication as follows. The Excommunication ought to be preceded by Admonition made in the Preſence of ſeveral Witneſſes: It ought to be founded on a publick and reaſonable Cauſe. If the excommunicated Perſon finds himſelf aggriev'd, he may complain of it to the ſuperior Judge, who ſhall ſend him back to be abſolv'd by the Judge who excommunicated him, if there be no Danger in ſuch a Delay; but if it is to be fear'd, that this Delay may have dangerous Conſequences, he may himſelf give him Abſolution. When the Injuſtice of the Excommunication ſhall be prov'd, he who has excommunicated ſhall be condemn'd to repair the Damages of him who has been excommunicated, and be puniſh'd according as his ſuperior Judges think requiſite. But if he who complains of the Excommunication does not bring any ſufficient Reaſon, he ſhall be condemn'd to Damages and puniſh'd as the Superior pleaſes, if he be not excuſable by ſome probable Error, and he ſhall remain excommunicated till he has made Satisfaction, or given Security for doing it. If a Judge finding himſelf in a Miſtake revoke his Sentence, and he in whoſe favour it was made will appeal, no notice ſhall be be taken of ſuch Appeal, unleſs the Error be ſuch as admits of no Queſtion: in which Caſe he ſhall abſolve the excommunicated Perſon, upon Condition that he will ſubmit to the Judgment of him to whom the Appeal has been made.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The IV. General Lateran Council held 1215.

The forty eighth imports, that when any Perſon has a Judge whom he ſuſpects, and will refuſe to be try'd by him, he ſhall allege the Reaſons of his Suſpicion before Umpires who ſhall be pitch'd upon, and if they think them Juſt, the refus'd Judge ſhall refer the Proceſs to another Judge or the Superior. That if it happens that he who has received Admonition, does appeal, and yet his Diſorder be certain either by the Evidence of the Fact, or by his own Confeſſion, or by any other Way, that then no notice ſhall be taken of that Appeal; and in caſe the Crime be dubious, the accus'd ſhall be oblig'd in appealing to notifie before the Judge the reaſon of his Appeal, which ought to be ſuch, that if it be prov'd, it ſhall be allow'd Lawful: That he ſhall be likewiſe oblig'd to proſecute his Appeal before the Judge in a competent time, if not, then the firſt Judge ſhall proceed againſt him notwithſtanding his Appeal, and if he has made a wrong Appeal, he ſhall be ſent back to the firſt Judge. However theſe Orders are not to be underſtood to touch the Regulars.

The forty ninth prohibits the excommunicating or abſolving any Perſon for Intereſt, and orders that in the Places where they impoſe a pecuniary Mulct in giving Abſolution, they ſhall be oblig'd to make Reſtitution in caſe the Excommunication was unjuſt.

The fiftieth repeals the Prohibition of contracting Marriage in the ſecond and third Degree of Affinity, and between Children iſſuing from a ſecond Marriage, and the Relations of the former Huſband, and reſtrains the Degrees wherein Marriages were unlawful to the fourth Degree of Conſanguinity and Affinity.

The thirty firſt prohibits clandeſtine Marriages, and orders, that the Prieſts ſhall publiſh the Banns in Churches, that ſo ſuch Impediments as are lawful may be objected againſt them. Penalties are likewiſe inflicted on thoſe who countenance or authorize inceſtuous or clandeſtine Marriages.

The fifty ſecond imports, that they ſhall admit of no Evidences with reſpect to Marriage-Impediments, who only give in their Evidence by Hear-ſay, unleſs they be very creditable Perſons, and who depoſe, that they have heard it ſaid by ſeveral Perſons before the Proceſs was drawn up: That thoſe Witneſſes ſhall ſwear that they are not induc'd thereto by any Motive of Hatred, of Fear, of Friendſhip, or of Intereſt: That they ſhall mention the Degrees of Kindred: And laſtly, That they ſhall not be credited, unleſs they depoſe, that they have ſeen ſeveral of thoſe Perſons treat one another as Relations.

The fifty third prohibits the giving of Lands to ſuch Perſons as have not us'd to pay Tithes to Churches.

The fifty fourth imports, That the Tenth ought to be taken of all Sorts of Revenues before any thing is rais'd upon it for the Payment of the Tax or Tribute.

The fifty fifth orders, That the Demeans which for the future ſhall be purchas'd by the Monks of Ciſteaux, or by any others ſhall pay Tithes.

The fifty ſixth prohibits the Secular or Regular Clergy, when they let out Inheritances, or beſtow them in Fief, from ſtipulating, that they ſhall pay them the Tenths thereof, and that thoſe to whom they give them ſhall be interr'd among them.

The fifty ſeventh to redreſs the Abuſes of ſeveral Privileges granted to Regulars, ordains, That the Privilege granted to the Friars of ſeveral Orders of being always interr'd in Holy Ground, at leaſt if they were not formally excommunicated or interdicted, ought not to be underſtood but only of ſuch who are conſecrated and have changed their Habit, or of thoſe who have beſtow'd their Eſtate upon them, of which they have only retained to themſelves the Uſufructus of it. The Privilege likewiſe is reſtrained which they had of opening the Churches of an interdicted Place upon their Arrival there, only to one ſingle Church.

The fifty eighth grants to the Epiſcopal Churches during an Interdiction, the Favour granted to ſeveral Monks of celebrating Divine Service in their Churches with a low Voice without ringing the Bells, at leaſt when this was not expreſly prohibited by the Interdiction, or when thoſe of that Church had not been the Occaſion of the Interdiction; and upon Condition that the excommunicated and interdicted Perſons ſhall not be preſent.

The fifty ninth extends to all the Monks the Prohibition that was made to particular Perſons of being Surety for any one, or raiſing any Sum without the Abbot's and the major Part of the Chapter's Leave.

The ſixtieth prohibits the Abbots from incroaching on the Rights

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

Rights of Bishops, by trying the Causes of Matrimony, by imposing publick Penances, by granting of Indulgences, and by performing any other Functions peculiar to the Bishops, unless they have Leave or a lawful Reason for so doing.

The sixty first revives the Canon of the Lateran Council, which prohibits the Monks from receiving Tithes from the Hands of Laicks, and enjoyns them to present to the Bishops such Priests to serve in the Churches which do not depend on them pleno jure, who shall be responsible to the Bishops for the Spiritualities, and may not be turned out without their Permission.

The IV. General Lateran Council held 1215.

The sixty second imports, that having understood that Religion was often dishonour'd by exposing of Relicks to Sale, to put a Stop to this Scandal for the future, it prohibits the shewing of Relicks out of their Cases, the exposing them to Sale, and the honouring any new ones, unless approv'd by the Pope's Authority. It admonishes the Prelates not to suffer, that those who come out of Devotion to their Churches, be impos'd upon by Falsities and Shams, as it happen'd in most Places where this Practice prevail'd for Interest. And they are prohibited from admitting of any Questors, who have not the Pope's Permission, of which the Form is here given. Lastly, the Abuse of indiscreet Indulgences is regulated, and 'tis order'd, that the Indulgences for the Dedication of a Church, shall last no longer than a Year, and that on the Anniversary of that Feast, they shall grant Remission of Penance enjoyned for forty Days only. It likewise requires, that the Number of Indulgence-days be likewise limited in all other Acts by which they are granted.

The sixty third abolishes the Use, or rather Abuse, which was crept into some Churches of exacting a certain Sum for the Benediction of Abbots, and for the conferring of Holy Orders, and declares those who exact or receive any thing upon that account to be guilty of Simony.

The sixty fourth prohibits likewise the exacting of any thing for being admitted into any Religious Order, and enjoyns, that the Nuns who shall give or exact any thing under any Pretence whatsoever, shall be turn'd out of the Monastery, and enjoyn'd Penance in a more austere Monastery. And as to those who have been admitted for Money before this Decree, 'tis order'd that they shall retire into another Convent of the same Order, or shall be admitted afresh into the Monastery wherein they are, and shall take their Places only from the Day of this latter Admission. The same thing is order'd with respect to Monks and the other Regulars, and the Bishops are enjoyn'd to publish this Decree every Year in their Dioceses, that it might be observ'd.

The sixty fifth prohibits the Bishops from interdicting a Church after the Death of the Curate, in order to exact a Sum of Money of his Successor, or from demanding any thing to permit a Secular to be admitted into any Religious Order or be interr'd there.

The sixty sixth prohibits the demanding any thing for the Burial of the Dead, for the Benediction of the Marriage, or for any such like things. However 'tis not pretended by this Decree, to put a Stop to the pious Customs which some out of an Heretical Spirit would abolish.

The sixty seventh is against the exorbitant Usury of the Jews. It orders, that those among them who exact any from the Christians, shall be debarr'd from having any Commerce with Christians; as well as those who will not give the Church Satisfaction for the Tithes and the other Oblations due upon the account of the Houses or Inheritances which they possess.

In the sixty eighth 'tis order'd, That the Saracens and Jews shall wear particular Habits to distinguish them from others, and they are prohibited to go abroad on Good Friday, because at that time they were us'd to express their Joy in insulting over the Christians. Princes are enjoin'd to prevent them from uttering Blasphemies against Jesus Christ.

The sixty ninth revives the Canon of the Council of Toledo, which forbids the bestowing any publick Charges or Offices upon them.

The seventieth imports, that the Jews who are converted and have been baptized, shall be hindred from observing their Ceremonies, and from mixing Judaism with Christianity.

Those Chapters, or at least part of them, being read in the Council, the Pope caus'd the Decree for the Croisade to be published, being drawn up in these Terms. 'Being earnestly 'desirous to recover the Holy Land from the Hands of the 'Profane, We order by the Advice of prudent Persons, who 'are acquainted with the favourable Circumstances of Times 'and Places, and by the Approbation of the Sacred Council, that the Croisado-Men shall be ready by the First of June 'in the Year ensuing; and that all those who are resolved to 'go by Sea shall rendezvous in the Kingdom of Sicily, some 'at Brinda and others at Messina, and the adjacent Places, 'where we are resolved to be in Person, that so that Army 'may be regulated by our Councils, aided by our Succours, 'and depart with the Divine and Apostolick Benediction. 'Those who will go by Land, shall be likewise ready by the 'same time, and shall give us notice thereof, that so we may 'send them a Legate to conduct and succour them. That 'the Priests and other Ecclesiasticks from the Highest to the 'lowest, who shall be in the Christian Army, take care to apply themselves to Prayer and Preaching, and to instruct o-'thers by their Doctrine and Examples, that so they might 'have the Fear of God always before their Eyes, and that they 'neither say nor do any thing which may offend the Divine 'Majesty: And if they should fall into any Sin, they rise a-'gain by Repentance. He grants to the Ecclesiasticks who 'shall be in that Army, the Right of receiving the Revenues of their Benefices for three Years, as if they were Resident. He orders all the Prelates to admonish all those who are engaged in the Croisade, that they are obliged to perform their Vow, and to constrain those who will not do it by excommunicating their Persons, and interdicting their Demeans, if they have no lawful Hindrance, which the Holy See judges sufficient to dispense them from their Vow. He recommends to them likewise the exhorting and inviting all the Princes and all their Subjects to provide Soldiers, Arms, Provisions, and Ships for the Expedition, in order to obtain the Remission of their Sins: And to set an Example himself, He declares, that he will furnish them with thirty thousand Pounds of his Estate, besides the Charges of the Journey of those Croisado-Men in and about Rome, upon which three thousand Merks of Charity-money, lying in his Hands, shall be expended. He enjoins all beneficed Men to give the twentieth Penny of their Ecclesiastical Incomes during three Years for the Relief of the Holy Land, and to deposite those Sums into the Hands of those who shall be commission'd by the Holy See to be Collectors of it: He excepts out of this several Monks, and those who shall go in Person to this Expedition: He engages himself and the Cardinals to pay the Tenth of their Revenues. He puts the Estates of those who are engag'd in the Croisade, under the Protection of the Holy See, that so no Tax might be laid upon them. He would have the Interests of the Money which they ow'd during this Expedition to be remitted, and that the Jews be oblig'd to remit it to them. He excommunicates those who shall assist or succour the Corsairs and Pirates, that take and rob those who go to the Holy Land; those who shall supply the Saracens with Arms, or other warlike Ammunitions, to be made use of against the Christians; all those who shall aid or give them any Assistance; those who shall carry any Ships into the East, during the four ensuing Years; and those who shall hold any Turnaments. He enjoins, that all the Christian Princes who are at War shall make Peace, or at least a Truce for four Years, and that they shall be constrain'd thereto by excommunicating their Persons and interdicting their States. Lastly, he grants to all who shall go to the Holy Land in their own Persons, and at their own Charges, a plenary Indulgence of all their Sins for which they shall have Contrition, and which they shall have confess'd: And he promises them a more perfect Degree of Eternal Happiness than to others. He grants likewise a plenary Indulgence to all those that shall send Persons to it at their own Charges, or to those who shall go at the Charges of others, and grants a proportionable part of this Indulgence to those that shall contribute to the Relief of the Holy Land either by their Goods or their Advice. And lastly, he declares, that the universal Synod joins with him in his good Wishes, to all those who shall contribute towards so good a Work.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The IV. General Lateran Council held 1215.

Historians tell us of several other Matters which were regulated by this Council, or rather by the Pope. The Cause of the Empire was there agitated between the Deputies of Otho and Frederick, and adjudg'd in favour of the latter. Therein they likewise treated of the Affair of the Counts of Toulouse and Foix, who requested to be re-settled in their Estates. The Brother of the Count of Montfort maintained, that they ought not to be restored to them, and upon their Contest, it was ordered, that the City of Toulouse, and the other Countries which the Croisado-Men had conquer'd, should be given to the Count of Montfort. And with respect to the Demeans which the Count of Toulouse had in Provence, that they should be sequestred to be surrendred either in whole or in part to the Son of the Count of Toulouse, if he gave any Signs of the Sincerity of his Faith and of his good Life. This Decree is related by Father Luke Dachery in the seventh Tome of his Spicilegium, by which it appears, that there was likewise reserv'd to Raimond Count of Toulouse, a certain annual Sum upon his Revenues, and his Wife the Sister of the King of Arragon had reserv'd to her the Lands which belonged to her as her Dowry. The Pope confirm'd the Sentence of Suspension pass'd by his Legates against Stephen Archbishop of Canterbury, charged with having held Intelligence with the Barons of England, who would have depos'd the King. Those Lords were excommunicated. 'Tis likewise said, that the Patriarch of the Maronites, re-united those of his Nation to the Church of Rome in this Council; that there they debated the Question about the Primacy of Toledo: That the Pope did then institute the Order of the Cross, and approv'd of the Dominican and Franciscan Orders.

This Council which was so numerous at first, broke up in less than a Month. The Prelates weary with staying at Rome, beg'd leave one after another to depart; and the Pope (if Matthew Paris may be believ'd) granted them leave, by obliging them their Maintenance, and enjoins the Curates to ſerve their Cures themſelves and not by Vicars, at leaſt, that a Pariſh-Church ſhall not be annex'd to a Prebend or a Dignity, in which Caſe he who is the Incumbent being oblig'd to do Duty in the Great Church, ſhall ſubſtitute in his Place for the Cure a conſtant Vicar, to whom he ſhall allow a Competency. It prohibits the laying a Penſion on the Revenues of Curates.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The IV. General Lateran Council held 1215.

The thirty third orders, that the Biſhops, or their Arch-deacons ſhall not exact the Right of Procuration, but when they ſhall viſit in their own Perſons; that they ſhall obſerve the Regulation made in the Lateran Council. This Law likewiſe extended to the Legates and Nuncio's of the Holy See; and they who viſit are recommended not to ſeek their own Profit, but the Glory of Jeſus Chriſt, and to apply themſelves to the Reformation of Manners and to Preaching.

The thirty fourth prohibits the Exactions made under a Pretence of paying the Duty of Procuration to Legates or any others.

The thirty fifth prohibits the appealing from a Judge to a Superior before he has paſs'd Sentence, unleſs there be a lawful Cauſe for ſuch an Appeal, which ſhall be repreſented to the Judge before it can be brought before the Superior; which is enjoin'd without prejudice to thoſe Conſtitutions, which order, that the greater Cauſes ſhall be referr'd to the Holy See.

The thirty ſixth imports, that if the Judge revoke a Comminatory or Interlocutory Sentence which he has paſs'd, he may continue the drawing up of the Proceſs, when an Appeal has been made from this Sentence.

The thirty ſeventh prohibits the granting of Commiſſions for the allowing Perſons to appeal before Judges above two days Journey diſtant from the Place where the Perſon aſſign'd is; and the obtaining ſuch Commiſſions without ſpecial Orders from the Lord of the Place.

The thirty eighth enjoins the Judges to have a publick Officer, or two ſufficient Perſons, who ſhall write down all the Form of the Proceſſes, which ſhall be communicated to the Parties concern'd keeping the Minutes by them.

The thirty ninth orders, that the Perſon who has been turn'd out of any Place, ſhall be firſt put in it again, before his Right to it be try'd.

The fortieth imports, that the Poſſeſſion of a Year ſhall be computed from the Day of its being ſettled by a Decree; tho' the Perſon in whoſe Favour Sentence is paſs'd, cannot by Reaſon of the Malice of his Adverſary, be put into Poſſeſſion of the thing which is adjudg'd to him, or may have been turn'd out of it. It prohibits Eccleſiaſticks from committing the Tryal of Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes to Laicks.

The forty firſt imports, that the Preſcription which is not Bona fide made ſhall be of no Force, and that 'tis neceſſary that he who makes uſe of Preſcription, ſhall not remember any Time when what he holds did not belong to him.

The forty ſecond prohibits Eccleſiaſticks from enlarging their Juriſdiction to the Prejudice of ſecular Juſtice.

The forty third prohibits Laicks from exacting Oaths of Fidelity from Eccleſiaſticks, who hold no Temporality of them to oblige them to it.

The forty fourth declares, that the Conſtitutions of Princes which are prejudicial to the Rights of the Church ſhall not be obſerv'd, whether they be for the Alienation of Fiefs, or for the incroaching on the Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, or for any other Goods.

The forty fifth prohibits Patrons and Vouchers of Churches from undertaking more than is is allow'd them, and deprives them of the Right of Patronage, who ſhall wound or kill the Clerks of the Churches under their Patronage.

The forty ſixth revives the Excommunication iſſued out by the Lateran Council againſt thoſe who exact Tallies and other Taxes from Eccleſiaſticks. Notwithſtanding it allows Biſhops in Caſes of Neceſſity to engage Eccleſiaſticks to give ſomething, provided they have adviſ'd with the Pope about it firſt. It declares thoſe Sentences null that are made by excommunicated Perſons, and it obſerves, that thoſe who have been excommunicated whilſt they were in an Office, are not diſcharg'd from their Excommunication for their having quitted that Office.

The forty ſeventh regulates the Form of Excommunication as follows. The Excommunication ought to be preceded by Admonition made in the Preſence of ſeveral Witneſſes: It ought to be founded on a publick and reaſonable Cauſe. If the excommunicated Perſon finds himſelf aggriev'd, he may complain of it to the ſuperior Judge, who ſhall ſend him back to be abſolv'd by the Judge who excommunicated him, if there be no Danger in ſuch a Delay; but if it is to be fear'd, that this Delay may have dangerous Conſequences, he may himſelf give him Abſolution. When the Injuſtice of the Excommunication ſhall be prov'd, he who has excommunicated ſhall be condemn'd to repair the Damages of him who has been excommunicated, and be puniſh'd according as his ſuperior Judges think requiſite. But if he who complains of the Excommunication does not bring any ſufficient Reaſon, he ſhall be condemn'd to Damages and puniſh'd as the Superior pleaſes, if he be not excuſable by ſome probable Error, and he ſhall remain excommunicated till he has made Satisfaction, or given Security for doing it. If a Judge finding himſelf in a Miſtake revoke his Sentence, and he in whoſe favour it was made will appeal, no notice ſhall be be taken of ſuch Appeal, unleſs the Error be ſuch as admits of no Queſtion: in which Caſe he ſhall abſolve the excommunicated Perſon, upon Condition that he will ſubmit to the Judgment of him to whom the Appeal has been made.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The IV. General Lateran Council held 1215.

The forty eighth imports, that when any Perſon has a Judge whom he ſuſpects, and will refuſe to be try'd by him, he ſhall allege the Reaſons of his Suſpicion before Umpires who ſhall be pitch'd upon, and if they think them Juſt, the refus'd Judge ſhall refer the Proceſs to another Judge or the Superior. That if it happens that he who has received Admonition, does appeal, and yet his Diſorder be certain either by the Evidence of the Fact, or by his own Confeſſion, or by any other Way, that then no notice ſhall be taken of that Appeal; and in caſe the Crime be dubious, the accus'd ſhall be oblig'd in appealing to notifie before the Judge the reaſon of his Appeal, which ought to be ſuch, that if it be prov'd, it ſhall be allow'd Lawful: That he ſhall be likewiſe oblig'd to proſecute his Appeal before the Judge in a competent time, if not, then the firſt Judge ſhall proceed againſt him notwithſtanding his Appeal, and if he has made a wrong Appeal, he ſhall be ſent back to the firſt Judge. However theſe Orders are not to be underſtood to touch the Regulars.

The forty ninth prohibits the excommunicating or abſolving any Perſon for Intereſt, and orders that in the Places where they impoſe a pecuniary Mulct in giving Abſolution, they ſhall be oblig'd to make Reſtitution in caſe the Excommunication was unjuſt.

The fiftieth repeals the Prohibition of contracting Marriage in the ſecond and third Degree of Affinity, and between Children iſſuing from a ſecond Marriage, and the Relations of the former Huſband, and reſtrains the Degrees wherein Marriages were unlawful to the fourth Degree of Conſanguinity and Affinity.

The thirty firſt prohibits clandeſtine Marriages, and orders, that the Prieſts ſhall publiſh the Banns in Churches, that ſo ſuch Impediments as are lawful may be objected againſt them. Penalties are likewiſe inflicted on thoſe who countenance or authorize inceſtuous or clandeſtine Marriages.

The fifty ſecond imports, that they ſhall admit of no Evidences with reſpect to Marriage-Impediments, who only give in their Evidence by Hear-ſay, unleſs they be very creditable Perſons, and who depoſe, that they have heard it ſaid by ſeveral Perſons before the Proceſs was drawn up: That thoſe Witneſſes ſhall ſwear that they are not induc'd thereto by any Motive of Hatred, of Fear, of Friendſhip, or of Intereſt: That they ſhall mention the Degrees of Kindred: And laſtly, That they ſhall not be credited, unleſs they depoſe, that they have ſeen ſeveral of thoſe Perſons treat one another as Relations.

The fifty third prohibits the giving of Lands to ſuch Perſons as have not us'd to pay Tithes to Churches.

The fifty fourth imports, That the Tenth ought to be taken of all Sorts of Revenues before any thing is rais'd upon it for the Payment of the Tax or Tribute.

The fifty fifth orders, That the Demeans which for the future ſhall be purchas'd by the Monks of Ciſteaux, or by any others ſhall pay Tithes.

The fifty ſixth prohibits the Secular or Regular Clergy, when they let out Inheritances, or beſtow them in Fief, from ſtipulating, that they ſhall pay them the Tenths thereof, and that thoſe to whom they give them ſhall be interr'd among them.

The fifty ſeventh to redreſs the Abuſes of ſeveral Privileges granted to Regulars, ordains, That the Privilege granted to the Friars of ſeveral Orders of being always interr'd in Holy Ground, at leaſt if they were not formally excommunicated or interdicted, ought not to be underſtood but only of ſuch who are conſecrated and have changed their Habit, or of thoſe who have beſtow'd their Eſtate upon them, of which they have only retained to themſelves the Uſufructus of it. The Privilege likewiſe is reſtrained which they had of opening the Churches of an interdicted Place upon their Arrival there, only to one ſingle Church.

The fifty eighth grants to the Epiſcopal Churches during an Interdiction, the Favour granted to ſeveral Monks of celebrating Divine Service in their Churches with a low Voice without ringing the Bells, at leaſt when this was not expreſly prohibited by the Interdiction, or when thoſe of that Church had not been the Occaſion of the Interdiction; and upon Condition that the excommunicated and interdicted Perſons ſhall not be preſent.

The fifty ninth extends to all the Monks the Prohibition that was made to particular Perſons of being Surety for any one, or raiſing any Sum without the Abbot's and the major Part of the Chapter's Leave.

The ſixtieth prohibits the Abbots from incroaching on the Rights

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

Rights of Bishops, by trying the Causes of Matrimony, by imposing publick Penances. by granting of Indulgences, and by performing any other Functions peculiar to the Bishops, unless they have Leave or a lawful Reason for so doing.

The sixty first revives the Canon of the Lateran Council, which prohibits the Monks from receiving Tithes from the Hands of Laicks, and enjoyns them to present to the Bishops such Priests to serve in the Churches which do not depend on them pleno jure, who shall be responsible to the Bishops for the Spiritualities, and may not be turned out without their Permission.

The IV. General Lateran Council held 1215.

The sixty second imports, that having understood that Religion was often dishonour'd by exposing of Relicks to Sale, to put a Stop to this Scandal for the future, it prohibits the shewing of Relicks out of their Cases, the exposing them to Sale, and the honouring any new ones, unless approv'd by the Pope's Authority. It admonishes the Prelates not to suffer, that those who come out of Devotion to their Churches, be impos'd upon by Falsities and Shams, as it happen'd in most Places where this Practice prevail'd for Interest. And they are prohibited from admitting of any Questors, who have not the Pope's Permission, of which the Form is here given. Lastly, the Abuse of indiscreet Indulgences is regulated, and 'tis order'd, that the Indulgences for the Dedication of a Church, shall last no longer than a Year, and that on the Anniversary of that Feast, they shall grant Remission of Penance enjoyned for forty Days only. It likewise requires, that the Number of Indulgence-days be likewise limited in all other Acts by which they are granted.

The sixty third abolishes the Use, or rather Abuse, which was crept into some Churches of exacting a certain Sum for the Benediction of Abbots, and for the conferring of Holy Orders, and declares those who exact or receive any thing upon that account to be guilty of Simony.

The sixty fourth prohibits likewise the exacting of any thing for being admitted into any Religious Order, and enjoyns, that the Nuns who shall give or exact any thing under any Pretence whatsoever, shall be turn'd out of the Monastery, and enjoyn'd Penance in a more austere Monastery. And as to those who have been admitted for Money before this Decree, 'tis order'd that they shall retire into another Convent of the same Order, or shall be admitted afresh into the Monastery wherein they are, and shall take their Places only from the Day of this latter Admission. The same thing is order'd with respect to Monks and the other Regulars, and the Bishops are enjoyn'd to publish this Decree every Year in their Dioceses, that it might be observ'd.

The sixty fifth prohibits the Bishops from interdicting a Church after the Death of the Curate, in order to exact a Sum of Money of his Successor, or from demanding any thing to permit a Secular to be admitted into any Religious Order or be interr'd there.

The sixty sixth prohibits the demanding any thing for the Burial of the Dead, for the Benediction of the Marriage, or for any such like things. However 'tis not pretended by this Decree, to put a Stop to the pious Customs which some out of an Heretical Spirit would abolish.

The sixty seventh is against the exorbitant Usury of the Jews. It orders, that those among them who exact any from the Christians, shall be debarr'd from having any Commerce with Christians; as well as those who will not give the Church Satisfaction for the Tithes and the other Oblations due upon the account of the Houses or Inheritances which they possess.

In the sixty eighth 'tis order'd, That the Saracens and Jews shall wear particular Habits to distinguish them from others, and they are prohibited to go abroad on Good Friday, because at that time they were us'd to express their Joy in insulting over the Christians. Princes are enjoin'd to prevent them from uttering Blasphemies against Jesus Christ.

The sixty ninth revives the Canon of the Council of Toledo, which forbids the bestowing any publick Charges or Offices upon them.

The seventieth imports, that the Jews who are converted and have been baptized, shall be hindred from observing their Ceremonies, and from mixing Judaism with Christianity.

Those Chapters, or at least part of them, being read in the Council, the Pope caus'd the Decree for the Croisade to be published, being drawn up in these Terms. 'Being earnestly 'desirous to recover the Holy Land from the Hands of the 'Profane, We order by the Advice of prudent Persons, who 'are acquainted with the favourable Circumstances of Times 'and Places, and by the Approbation of the Sacred Council, that the Croisado-Men shall be ready by the First of June 'in the Year ensuing; and that all those who are resolved to 'go by Sea shall rendezvous in the Kingdom of Sicily, some 'at Brinda and others at Messina, and the adjacent Places, 'where we are resolved to be in Person, that so that Army 'may be regulated by our Councils, aided by our Succours, 'and depart with the Divine and Apostolick Benediction. 'Those who will go by Land, shall be likewise ready by the 'same time, and shall give us notice thereof, that so we may 'send them a Legate to conduct and succour them. That 'the Priests and other Ecclesiasticks from the Highest to the 'lowest, who shall be in the Christian Army, take care to apply themselves to Prayer and Preaching, and to instruct o-'thers by their Doctrine and Examples, that so they might 'have the Fear of God always before their Eyes, and that they 'neither say nor do any thing which may offend the Divine 'Majesty: And if they should fall into any Sin, they rise a-'gain by Repentance. He grants to the Ecclesiasticks who 'shall be in that Army, the Right of receiving the Revenues of their Benefices for three Years, as if they were Resident. He orders all the Prelates to admonish all those who are engaged in the Croisade, that they are obliged to perform their Vow, and to constrain those who will not do it by excommunicating their Persons, and interdicting their Demeans, if they have no lawful Hindrance, which the Holy See judges sufficient to dispense them from their Vow. He recommends to them likewise the exhorting and inviting all the Princes and all their Subjects to provide Soldiers, Arms, Provisions, and Ships for the Expedition, in order to obtain the Remission of their Sins: And to set an Example himself, He declares, that he will furnish them with thirty thousand Pounds of his Estate, besides the Charges of the Journey of those Croisado-Men in and about Rome, upon which three thousand Merks of Charity-money, lying in his Hands, shall be expended. He enjoins all beneficed Men to give the twentieth Penny of their Ecclesiastical Incomes during three Years for the Relief of the Holy Land, and to depositе those Sums into the Hands of those who shall be commission'd by the Holy See to be Collectors of it: He excepts out of this several Monks, and those who shall go in Person to this Expedition: He engages himself and the Cardinals to pay the Tenth of their Revenues. He puts the Estates of those who are engag'd in the Croisade, under the Protection of the Holy See, that so no Tax might be laid upon them. He would have the Interests of the Money which they ow'd during this Expedition to be remitted, and that the Jews be oblig'd to remit it to them. He excommunicates those who shall assist or succour the Corsairs and Pirates, that take and rob those who go to the Holy Land; those who shall supply the Saracens with Arms, or other warlike Ammunitions, to be made use of against the Christians; all those who shall aid or give them any Assistance; those who shall carry any Ships into the East, during the four ensuing Years; and those who shall hold any Turnaments. He enjoins, that all the Christian Princes who are at War shall make Peace, or at least a Truce for four Years, and that they shall be constrain'd thereto by excommunicating their Persons and interdicting their States. Lastly, he grants to all who shall go to the Holy Land in their own Persons, and at their own Charges, a plenary Indulgence of all their Sins for which they shall have Contrition, and which they shall have confess'd: And he promises them a more perfect Degree of Eternal Happiness than to others. He grants likewise a plenary Indulgence to all those that shall send Persons to it at their own Charges, or to those who shall go at the Charges of others, and grants a proportionable part of this Indulgence to those that shall contribute to the Relief of the Holy Land either by their Goods or their Advice. And lastly, he declares, that the universal Synod joins with him in his good Wishes, to all those who shall contribute towards so good a Work.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The IV. General Lateran Council held 1215.

Historians tell us of several other Matters which were regulated by this Council, or rather by the Pope. The Cause of the Empire was there agitated between the Deputies of Otho and Frederick, and adjudg'd in favour of the latter. Therein they likewise treated of the Affair of the Counts of Toulouse and Foix, who requested to be re-settled in their Estates. The Brother of the Count of Montfort maintained, that they ought not to be restored to them, and upon their Contest, it was ordered, that the City of Toulouse, and the other Countries which the Croisado-Men had conquer'd, should be given to the Count of Montfort. And with respect to the Demeans which the Count of Toulouse had in Provence, that they should be sequestred to be surrendred either in whole or in part to the Son of the Count of Toulouse, if he gave any Signs of the Sincerity of his Faith and of his good Life. This Decree is related by Father Luke Dachery in the seventh Tome of his Spicilegium, by which it appears, that there was likewise reserv'd to Raimond Count of Toulouse, a certain annual Sum upon his Revenues, and his Wife the Sister of the King of Arragon had reserv'd to her the Lands which belonged to her as her Dowry. The Pope confirm'd the Sentence of Suspension pass'd by his Legates against Stephen Archbishop of Canterbury, charged with having held Intelligence with the Barons of England, who would have depos'd the King. Those Lords were excommunicated. 'Tis likewise said, that the Patriarch of the Maronites, re-united those of his Nation to the Church of Rome in this Council; that there they debated the Question about the Primacy of Toledo: That the Pope did then institute the Order of the Cross, and approv'd of the Dominican and Franciscan Orders.

This Council which was so numerous at first, broke up in less than a Month. The Prelates weary with staying at Rome, beg'd leave one after another to depart; and the Pope (if Matthew Paris may be believ'd) granted them leave, by obliging them them before their Departure to take up great Sums from the Merchants of Rome to give him. The War between thoſe of Piſa and the Genoeſe, and the Troubles of Italy, immediately obliged the Pope to put an End to the Council, and to quit his Care for the Affairs of the Church, to put in Order thoſe of Italy. Being ſet out from Rome on that Deſign, he died at Peruſa the 16*th* of July, 1216.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The Council of Melun in the Year 1216.

The Council of Melun, 1219.

POpe Innocent III. having wrote to Peter of Corbeil, Archbiſhop of Sens and his Suffragans, againſt King Philip Auguſtus, whom he ſuſpected of ſupporting his Son Lewis, whom he had excommunicated, becauſe he carried on a War againſt John King of England, tho' he was Croſs'd for the Holy Land; they met at Melun, in the Year 1216. to return an Anſwer to the Pope, and at the ſame time made ſeveral Orders relating to Church-Diſcipline. They order, that thoſe who ſhall continue in a State of Excommunication above a Year and a Day without being abſolv'd, ſhall be conſtrain'd thereto by the Secular Power, which ſhall ſeize upon their Perſons and Effects. They prohibit a Prior, if he be not a Conventual, from borrowing more than forty Sols, without the leave of his Abbot. They enjoin the Abbots and Priors to give an Account every Year in the Chapter, of the Income and the Expences of the Monaſtery. They prohibit them from borrowing any Sum without the Conſent of the Chapter, and the Advice of the Biſhop, in caſe the Abbot be abſent. And laſtly, they order the Abbots and Monks to be habited according to their Quality.

The Council of Melun, 1216.

The Council of Oxford in the Year 1222.

The Council of Oxford, 1222.

STephen Langton Archbiſhop of Canterbury, of whom we have already made mention, held a Council at Oxford in the Year 1222. wherein he made a great many Orders for reforming the Church of England, and eſpecially the Monaſtical Diſcipline. He therein condemn'd an Impoſtor who called himſelf The Chriſt, and ſhewed Marks in his Hands, in his Feet, and in his Side, as the Scars of thoſe Wounds made in his Suffering upon the Croſs. We have the Canons of this Council divided into forty nine Chapters.

The firſt declares all thoſe excommunicated who wrong the Church; thoſe that diſturb the Quiet of the State; falſe Witneſſes, eſpecially in the Caſe of Marriage, and Diſ-inheriting; falſe Accuſers; thoſe who unjuſtly or maliciouſly oppoſe the Patronage, or the taking Poſſeſſion of Benefices: and thoſe that obſtruct the Execution of the Orders of the Prince againſt excommunicated Perſons.

The ſecond concerns the Duties of Biſhops who are recommended to have honeſt and grave Almoners, to be charitable, to give Audience to the Poor, and to do them Juſtice, to hear Confeſſions, to ſee that their Dioceſſes be viſited, to be reſident at their Cathedrals on the great Feſtivals, and during Lent, and to ſee that the Profeſſion of Faith which they made at their Conſecration be read.

By the third, they are prohibited from exacting any thing for the Collation of Benefices; and by the fourth, from delaying to give Inſtitution and Induction to ſuch as are preſented to them for to ſupply the Benefices. However in caſe there be two Perſons preſented by two Patrons, it is ordered by the fifth, that neither of them ſhall be promoted by the Biſhop till the Cauſe be determined.

The ſixth imports, that the Prieſts ſhall celebrate Maſs and adminiſter the Sacraments with Devotion; that they ſhall repeat the Words of the Canon entirely; that they ſhall not take the Ablution, if they are to celebrate again the ſame Day. They are likewiſe prohibited from celebrating the Maſs often on one and the ſame Day, except on Chriſtmas and Eaſter-day: or when a Corps is to be interr'd, in which caſe they ſhall ſay the firſt Maſs of the Day, and the ſecond for the deceas'd.

The ſeventh prohibits the Eccleſiaſticks who are benefic'd or in Orders, from being Farmers, Judges, Bayliffs, or Officers, and from giving or paſſing Sentences of Death. Prohibitions are therein likewiſe made from holding a Seſſion to try a Criminal in conſecrated places, ſuch as the Church and Church-yard.

The eighth contains the Catalogue of Feaſts that ought to be ſolemniz'd, which are all Sundays, the five Days of Chriſtmaſs, the Circumciſion, the Epiphany, all the Feſtivals of the Bleſſed Virgin, except that of the Conception, to celebrate which no Man is oblig'd (theſe are the very Words of the Council) the Converſion of St. Paul, the Chair of St. Peter, all the Feſtivals of the Apoſtles, the Feaſt of St. Gregory, Holy Thurſday, the ſecond, third and fourth Holy-days in Eaſter-week, Aſcenſion-day, the ſecond, third, and fourth Holy-days in Whitſun-week, the Feaſt of St. Auguſtin in May, the two Feaſts of the Holy Croſs, the Tranſlation of St. Thomas the Martyr, the two Feaſts of St. John, the Feaſt of St. Margaret, that of St. Mary Magdalene, the Feaſt of St. Peter in Bonds, the Feaſts of St. Lawrence, St. Michael, St. Edmund, the Confeſſor, St. Edmund the King and Martyr, St. Catharine, St. Clement, and St. Nicholas, the Feaſt of the Dedication of each Church, and the Feaſt of the Holy Patron. There are likewiſe reckon'd ſeveral other Feaſts of a ſecond Rank, which are to be celebrated with leſs Solemnity, and ſeveral of a third Rank, on which they might go to Work after Maſs, with a Liſt of the Vigils and Faſts of the Year.

The ninth enjoins the Curates to preach often, and to take care to viſit the Sick.

The tenth imports, that every Church ſhall have a Silver Chalice, with other neceſſary Utenſils, a white Surplice, Altar-cloths, Books and Ornaments proper and ſuitable, and that the Archdeacons ſhall take care of it.

The Council of Oxford, 1222.

The eleventh prohibits a Man who reſigns a Benefice, from retaining the Vicarage thereof.

The twelfth forbids the dividing a Benefice into ſeveral, and the giving it to divers Perſons.

The thirteenth prohibits the giving the Vicarage of a Church to a Man who will not ſerve that Church in Perſon.

The fourteenth orders the Reſidence of the Benefic'd Clergy.

The fifteenth adjuſts what Allowance is compleat for a Vicar.

The ſixteenth declares, that there ought to be two or three Prieſts in the great Pariſhes.

The ſeventeenth imports, that the Biſhop ſhall cauſe him who is preſented to a Benefice to take an Oath, that he has given nothing to him who preſented him.

The eighteenth, that there ſhall be ſettled in every Archdeaconry Confeſſors for the Rural Deans, and the other Eccleſiaſticks, who will not confeſs themſelves to their Biſhop.

The nineteenth prohibits Rural Deans from taking Cognizance of Matrimonial Cauſes.

The twentieth forbids all Manner of Perſons to keep Robbers in their Service.

The twenty firſt forbids the Archdeacons to be any Charge to the Churches in their Viſits.

The twenty ſecond prohibits the Leaſing out of Benefices.

The twenty third and the four next order the Archdeacons to inform themſelves whether the Canon be as it ought to be, and whether the Prieſts know how to recite it and to pronounce the Words of Baptiſm; to inform themſelves whether the Euchariſt and the Holy Chriſm be under Lock and Key, and to take an Account of the Ornaments and Goods of the Churches.

The twenty eighth prohibits the Ordinaries, or their Officers from iſſuing out any Sentences which are not preceded by a Canonical Admonition.

The twenty ninth imports, that nothing ſhall be demanded for Burial, nor for adminiſtring the Sacraments.

The thirtieth and thirty firſt prohibit the Eccleſiaſtical Judges from hindring the Agreement of the Parties, and from obliging any Perſon to clear himſelf, unleſs he has been accuſ'd by Men of Probity.

The following Chapters regard the Manners of Eccleſiaſticks. They are order'd to wear the Clerical Habit, to have cloſe Sleeves, and a Coronet and ſhort Hair, to avoid Drunkenneſs, and to keep no Concubines.

The thirty ſixth and ſeventh prohibit the Alienation of the Church-Goods, and the giving them in Fief to Laicks.

The thirty eighth and ninth have relation to the Nuns. They are prohibited to wear Silk-Vails, or ſuch as are embroider'd with Silver, to have Habits with Trains, and to demand any Money for being admitted into the Nunnery.

The fortieth prohibits the farming out of Churches, unleſs for ſome Reaſon to be allow'd by the Biſhop, and to a Perſon who, one may be aſſur'd, will make a good uſe of it.

The forty firſt prohibits the granting to any Perſon the enjoying a Benefice with the Charge of Souls, any Revenue in another Church, tho' it be ſub Titulo Gratiæ.

The forty ſecond imports, that the Advocates, who ſhall diſpute the Validity of a Marriage, which ſhall be declar'd Good by the Sentence of the Judge, ſhall be ſuſpended from their Function for a Year, if the Judge do not diſcharge them by the Sentence it ſelf.

The following Chapters relate to the Monks. 'Tis therein order'd, that they ſhall live in Common, that they ſhall lie in the the ſame Dormitory, and eat in the ſame Refectory: That no Monk ſhall be admitted before the Age of eighteen: That the Nuns ſhall not go out of their Nunnery; that Silence ſhall be kept in the Monaſteries; that the Monks ſhall not go out of their Monaſtery without the Leave of their Superiors: That the Superiors may ſend a Monk into another Monaſtery, if they think fit: That the Nuns ſhall have only ſuch Confeſſors as are appointed by the Biſhop, &c. Laſtly, The Council confirm'd whatever had been order'd in the Lateran Council, under Innocent III.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The Council of Mentz, in the Year 1225.

The Council of Mentz, 1225.

IN the Year 1224. Honorius III. ſent as his Legate into Germany Cardinal Conrade Biſhop of O-porto, who had formerly been Monk and Abbot of Ciſteaux, to endeavour to reform the Manners of that Kingdom. This Legate held a Council at Mentz, the Ninth of December in the Year 1225. where he made ſeveral general Conſtitutions for all Germany.

The three firſt are againſt the Clerks who keep Concubines.

The fourth prohibits the iſſuing out any Excommunication, without a precedent Admonition.

The fifth declares the Legacies of Church-Goods made by Clerks to their Natural Children, or their Concubines null.

The ſixth enjoins, that the Clerks who being excommunicated or ſuſpended by their Biſhops, continue to perform their Functions, ſhall be depos'd from their Offices and Benefices, without hopes of being reſtor'd.

The ſeventh declares thoſe Perſons excommunicated, who celebrate the Holy Myſteries before Perſons declar'd excommunicated.

The eighth imports, that the Biſhops ſhall certifie to the Neighbouring Biſhops the Perſons whom they ſhall have excommunicated, that ſo they may ſhun them and cauſe them to be ſhun'd by others, and declares, that if any of them ſhall wittingly communicate with thoſe whom his Brethren have excommunicated, the Canons of his Cathedral Church ſhall ſeparate themſelves from his Communion, ſo long as he perſiſts in defiance of this Rule.

The Council of Mentz, 1225.

The ninth anathematizes the Patrons, who in beſtowing of Benefices that are in their Gift, ſhall keep back Part of the Tithes, or of the Eccleſiaſtical Revenues. In the next, 'tis order'd, that thoſe who ſhall be advanc'd on that Condition, ſhall be depriv'd of their Office or their Benefice.

In the eleventh, the Biſhops and Archdeacons are forbidden to receive any of thoſe who are preſented to them by Patrons, till he has taken an Oath, that he has not committed Simony.

By the twelfth, it is prohibited to put any Hireling-prieſts into Churches: And in thoſe where there ought to be Vicars, 'tis order'd, that they ſhall be perpetual, and ſhall be allow'd an honourable Subſiſtence.

The thirteenth inflicts the Penalty of Suſpenſion on thoſe who ſhall tempt any Virgins conſecrated to God, and the Penalty of Excommunication ipſo facto, on thoſe who ſhall debauch them. Laſtly, it is order'd, that thoſe Conſtitutions ſhall be publiſh'd throughout all Germany.

The Council of Narbonne in the Year 1227.

The Council of Narbonne 1227.

LEWIS VIII. King of France being at Pamiez in the Year 1226. made a Law againſt thoſe who deſpis'd the Keys of the Church, by which he condemns to a Mulct, thoſe who ſhall permit themſelves to be excommunicated, and orders, that all the Goods of thoſe who ſhall remain under Excommunication above a Year ſhall be ſequeſtrated. This Law was confirm'd the next Year in a provincial Council held in Lent at Narbonne. This is the firſt Article of that Council.

The ſecond, third and fourth are againſt the Jews, by the laſt, they are adjudg'd to pay yearly Sixpence each to the Pariſh wherein they live.

The fifth regulates the Forms of the laſt Wills and Teſtaments, and imports, that they ſhall be made in the Preſence of the Curate and ſome Catholick Perſons.

The ſixth is againſt perjur'd Perſons and falſe Witneſſes.

The ſeventh orders, that the Names of thoſe who confeſs themſelves, ſhall be regiſtred, and that thoſe who will not come at leaſt once a Year to Confeſſion, ſhall be deprived during their Lives from entring into the Church, and after their Death of Eccleſiaſtical Burial. It is likewiſe enjoin'd, that the Confeſſions ought to be made publickly, and not privately.

The eighth imports, that every Lord's Day they ſhall excommunicate publick Uſurers, inceſtuous Perſons, ſuch who keep Concubines, Adulterers, Raviſhers, and thoſe who obſtruct the Executing of laſt Wills and Teſtaments.

The ninth imports, that there ſhall be given to Prieſts who ſerve the Churches a competent and ſuitable Allowance.

The Council of Narbonne 1227.

The tenth, that there ſhall not be leſs than three Monks, or three Canons in Religious Houſes.

The eleventh, that the Monks, or Regular Canons, ſhall not perform the Office of Advocates.

The twelfth, that the Clergy ſhall not be tax'd.

The thirteenth, that they ſhall not impoſe any new Cuſtoms.

The fourteenth, that there ſhall be in every Pariſh Inquiſitors after Hereticks.

The fifteenth, that the Lords, Governors, Judges, &c. ſhall be oblig'd to drive out Hereticks.

The ſixteenth, that Hereticks ſhall be turn'd out of all Offices of Truſt.

The ſeventeenth, that they ſhall be declar'd excommunicated who give any Countenance to Raimond the Son of the Count of Toulouſe, to the Count of Foix, and to the Viſcount of Beziers.

The eighteenth, that thoſe who have Benefices with the Cure of Souls, ſhall be advanc'd to Prieſthood.

The nineteenth, that thoſe who beg Alms ſhall not preach in Churches, but ſhall only read their Letters.

The twentieth, that the Feaſt of St. Matthias ſhall always be celebrated in Leap-Year, the ſecond of the two Biſſextile Days: That the Ember-Week in September ſhall always be obſerv'd the firſt Wedneſday of that Month; and that every Year a Provincial Council ſhall be celebrated on the Sunday call'd Lætare.

The Council of Toulouſe in the Year 1229.

The Council of Toulouſe 1229.

RAIMOND Junior Count of Toulouſe having made his Peace with King St. Lewis, and being return'd to his Eſtates, Romanus Cardinal of St. Angelo, Legate of the Holy See, follow'd him in order compleatly to deſtroy Hereſie in that Country, and held there a Council in the Year 1229. which begun in July and ended in November, at which were preſent Peter Amelli Archbiſhop of Narbonne, Gerard of Malemort Archbiſhop of Bourdeaux, and Amaneus Archbiſhop of Auſche, and ſeveral Biſhops of thoſe Provinces: The Counts of Toulouſe, and the other Barons and Lords of the Country, except the Count of Foix, were likewiſe there, with the Seneſhall of Carcaſſonne, and the two Conſuls of Toulouſe, who were to ſwear to and approve of the Peace. The Legate proceeded therein againſt ſeveral Hereticks, reconcil'd ſeveral of them who recanted, and made forty five Orders for the rooting out of Hereſy.

In the firſt, he enjoins the Archbiſhops and Biſhops to ſettle in each Pariſh a Prieſt and two or three approv'd Laicks, to make Inquiſition after Hereticks, and to engage them upon Oath to uſe their utmoſt Endeavours to find them out, to preſent them forthwith to the Biſhop, and to the Lords or their Bayliffs.

In the ſecond, the ſame thing is enjoin'd to Abbots exempted with reſpect to the Places where they have Juriſdiction.

The Council of Toulouſe, 1229.

In the third, the Lords of the reſpective Places are recommended to ſearch after Hereticks, and to ruin the Places whither they reſort.

In the fourth, there is added the Penalty of loſing their Eſtates, againſt thoſe who know that a Heretick lives in their Territories, and will ſuffer it. And with reſpect to thoſe who ſhall neglect to make Inquiſition after them, 'tis order'd, in the next Canon, that they ſhall likewiſe be puniſh'd for their Neglect. The Houſes where Hereticks ſhall be found are not ſo much as ſpar'd; and in the ſixth Canon, 'tis declared, that they ſhall be deſtroy'd, and that the Ground ſhall be confiſcated. The Bayliffs are condemn'd to the Loſs of their Offices and Eſtates, who ſhall be careleſs and negligent in ſearching after Hereticks.

But to prevent the Abuſe that might be made of theſe Conſtitutions, in making thoſe paſs for Hereticks who were not ſo; 'tis order'd in the eighth, that no Perſon ſhall be condemned as an Heretick, who has not been judg'd to be one by the Biſhop of the Place.

The ninth gives leave to the Lords and their Officers to apprehend Hereticks upon the Territories of other Lords.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The tenth imports, that the Hereticks who voluntarily recant, shall not remain in the Villages where they were, if they are suspected of Heresy, but shall be transported into other Catholick Villages, which are free from Suspicion; that they shall wear two Crosses on their Clothes, and have Certificates from their Bishops of their being reconcil'd: That they shall not be admitted any more into publick Offices, nor do any publick Acts till they shall have been qualify'd for it again by the Pope or his Legate.

The Council of Toulouse, 1229.

In the eleventh, 'tis order'd with respect to those who are converted by the Fear of Death, or for some other such Account, that they shall be shut up in a wall'd Place, that so they may not corrupt others.

The twelfth imports, that all Men above fourteen Years old, and all Women above twelve, shall make an Abjuration of all Sorts of Heresy, and a Profession of the Faith of the Roman Church, and that they shall be engag'd to persecute Hereticks.

In the thirteenth 'tis order'd, that all Persons who have the Use of their Reason, shall confess themselves twice a Year to their own proper Priest, and receive the Sacrament of the Eucharist, at Christmass, Easter, and Whitsuntide, so that Confession shall go before the Communion, unless the Priest think fit for some just Cause, that they should abstain one time from receiving the Eucharist, and that those who shall abstain from it upon other Accounts, shall be suspected of Heresy.

The fourteenth prohibits Laicks from having the Books of the Old or New-Testament, unless it be a Psalter or a Breviary, and the Rosary, and does not permit them so much as to translate them into the vulgar Tongue. This Restraint was doubtless founded on that frequent Abuse which was made of them in that Country.

In the fifteenth, they who are suspected of Heresy, are prohibited the Practice of Physick, and Hereticks are forbidden to come near the Sick, after they have received the Viaticum.

The sixteenth orders, that the last Wills and Testaments shall be received by the Curates.

The seventeenth prohibits the Prelates and Barons from bestowing Offices which depended on them on Hereticks, and from having for their Domesticks suspected Persons, or of an ill Reputation.

The eighteenth declares those to be of a bad Repute, who are notoriously infamous, or against whom Persons of Worth give in Evidence.

The nineteenth maintains the Churches and Religious Houses in their Privileges, and orders the entire Payment of Tithes.

The twentieth prohibits the laying any Tax on the Clergy.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The twenty first discharges them from all Manner of Tributes and new Duties, and extends this Favour to the Monks and Pilgrims, provided they do not concern themselves in Merchandise.

The Council of Toulouse 1229.

The twenty second obliges those who receive Taxes, to take care of the High-ways, and makes them responsible for the Robberies committed between Sun and Sun.

The twenty third forbids Laicks from laying any Tax on the Servants of Churches or of Church-men, if they do not hold any Estate of them.

The twenty fourth orders, that if any Person shall throw a Clergy-man into Prison, even tho' he has not the Tonsure, the Bishop shall be acquainted of it; That the Lay-Judge shall be obliged to remit him into the Hands of the Ecclesiastical Judges, and that if he refuse to do it, he shall be declar'd excommunicated and forced to deliver him up by his Lord.

The twenty fifth orders all the Masters and Mistresses of every House, every Sunday and Holy-day to be at Church, to hear the Preaching and Divine Service, and not to go out till Mass be quite over: That if they both cannot be there, one of them shall, and that if both miss without being sick, or having any lawful Excuse, they shall be oblig'd to pay twelve French Deniers; one Moiety whereof shall go to the Lord, and the other to the Priest and the Church. They are likewise recommended to go to Church on Saturday-Nights in Honour of the Virgin Mary.

The twenty sixth contains the Catalogue of the Festivals, which are as follow: Christmass-Day, the Feasts of St. Stephen, of St. John the Evangelist, of the Holy Innocents, of St. Sylvester, of the Circumcision, of the Epiphany, of the Purification, of the Annunciation, of the Assumption, of the Nativity of the Virgin Mary, Easter-Day, and the two next Days, the three Rogation-Days, Whitsunday and the two following Days, the Nativity of St. John Baptist, the Invention and Exaltation of the Holy Cross, the Feasts of the twelve Disciples, of St. Mary Magdalen, of St. Lawrence, of St. Martin, of St. Nicholas, of the Dedication of St. Michael, the Dedication of each Church, the Feast of the Holy Patron, and every Sunday.

In the twenty seventh 'tis order'd, that during all those Festivals, they shall abstain from all Manner of Work according to Custom, and according to the Order which shall be prescribed by the Bishop, and that the Curates shall give notice of them every Sunday at Mass.

The other Canons relate to the observing of Peace, and contain Orders for Civil Affairs.

The Council of Chateau-Gonthier in the Year 1231.

The Council of Chateau-Gonthier. 1231.

In the Year 1231. Francis Cassardi Archbishop of Tours, and the Prelates of the Province being met in a Council at Chateau-Gonthier, being desirous to redress several Abuses which were in that Province, made thirty seven Canons.

The first enjoins, that Prelates ought not to tolerate clandestine Marriages, and to proceed without Delay and without Excuse, to the divorcing of those who had contracted them.

The second prohibits the Arch-priests and Rural Deans, from taking Cognizance of Matrimonial Causes.

The third orders the Institution of a Curate into a Church, to be after this Manner: The Patron whether an Ecclesiastick, or a Laick, shall present to the Arch-deacon, or the Rural Dean, and afterwards to the Bishop, or to him who has the Episcopal Power, the Person whom he has chosen within the Time prescrib'd by Law: He shall be oblig'd to swear, that he has neither given nor promis'd any thing for that Benefice, and that he does not know, that any one has given, or promis'd any thing for him: Lastly, the Bishop, or he who has the Episcopal Power, shall give him the Cure of Souls, and he shall be obliged to swear, that he will obey his Bishop, maintain the Rights of his Church, and recover the Estates which are alienated.

The fourth orders the Bishops to oblige all the Clergy who have Benefices with the Cure of Souls, to serve them in Person, unless they judge that they ought to be dispens'd from it upon a just Cause.

The fifth imports, that when a Church shall be farm'd out, a sufficient Part of the Revenue shall be reserv'd for the Maintenance of the Chaplain.

The sixth, that the Number of the Canonships of each Chapter shall be fix'd, that so the Prebends may not be divided but given whole to one and the same Person.

The seventh, that they shall no more give the Presentation of the Prebend which shall be first vacant in Cathedral Churches.

The eighth, that the Customs of Cathedral Churches shall be set down in Writing.

The ninth, that those who communicate with excommunicated Persons, if they do not abstain from so doing, after notice given them, shall be debar'd entring the Church.

The Council of Chateau-Gonthier. 1231.

The tenth, that the Ordinaries and Delegates shall be very sparing in issuing out General Excommunications.

The eleventh, that the Priests and other Ecclesiasticks shall not be tributary to Laicks, and those who shall become such, shall be suspended ab officio & beneficio.

The twelfth prohibits Arch-priests, Arch-deacons and others who are invested with Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, from having their Offices out of Town, and enjoyns them to discharge their Functions themselves in Person.

The thirteenth forbids the Prelates and others who have Jurisdiction, from receiving the Right of Procuration in Money.

The fourteenth prohibits the Prelates from demanding Money in farming out of Churches.

The fifteenth imports, that the Patrons who give Presentations to uncapable Persons, shall forfeit their Right of presenting pro hac vice.

The sixteenth, that those on whom Benefices are bestow'd with Cure of Souls, shall understand the Vulgar Language of the Country.

The seventeenth prohibits the selling of the Election of Guardianships.

The eighteenth orders, that no Priest shall be admitted to perform his Functions, unless licens'd by his Bishop, or unless his Ordination be evident.

The nineteenth forbids the Laicks to vend their Actions to Ecclesiasticks, in order to trick the Tribunal of the Secular Judge.

The twentieth imports, that Ecclesiasticks taken in any enormous Crime, shall be put into the Bishop's Hands, who shall degrade them if convicted of any Crime which deserves that Punishment, and that afterwards if they do not amend, the Church shall no longer protect them.

The twenty first orders, that debauch'd Clerks shall be shaven, that so their clerical Tonsure may not be seen.

The twenty second, that such of the Croisade who are guilty of enormous Crimes, shall be declar'd to have forfeited their Privileges by the Ecclesiastical Judge, and if they continue tinue to commit such Crimes, they shall be punish'd by the Secular Judge.

The Councils held during the Thirteenth Century.

The twenty third is against Tyrants or great Lords, who caus'd the Estates of Ecclesiasticks to be rifled by Persons of ill fame.

The twenty fourth orders the Monks to keep Silence, and to see, that those of the same Order be habited in the same manner agreeable to their Rule.

The Council of Chateau-Gonthier, 1231.

The twenty fifth prohibits the putting young Monks who are not quite fifteen Years old into any other Priories besides Conventuals.

The twenty sixth prohibits all Monks from having any thing de Proprio.

The twenty seventh orders them to observe the Rule about abstaining from Meat.

The twenty eighth imports, that an Abbot shall not go in the Country without a Monk attending him, nor a Monk without a Foot-boy.

The twenty ninth, that a single Monk shall not be put into Priories, but that there shall be two who shall say the Office which is done at twice, for the Patrons.

The thirtieth is against Usurers; 'tis therein order'd, that they shall be excommunicated every Sunday, and that such as are suspected of that Crime shall be oblig'd to justifie themselves to renounce it publickly.

The Councils held during the Thirteenth Century.

The three next are against the Jews, to hinder them from insulting over the Christians; and to deprive them of the Right of being Witnesses.

The Council of Chateau-Gonthier, 1215.

The Thirty fourth prohibits under pain of Excommunication the contracting of Marriage, till after the Banns have been publish'd after the usual manner; that so an Engagement to marry may be granted and given in the Face of the Congregation.

The two next prescribe what Oaths the Judges and Lawyers ought to take.

The last confirms the Canons made in the Council held at Laval.

The Council of Beziers in the Year 1233.

The Council of Beziers, 1233.

Guthier de Marvis Bishop of Tournay and Legate of the Holy See, held a Council at Beziers in the Year 1233, wherein he publish'd the twenty six following Orders.

The first is, that they shall every Sunday excommunicate the Hereticks and their Favourers.

The second, that any Person whatever may apprehend an Heretick and carry him before the Bishop.

The third, that the Favourers of Hereticks may not buy Baylywicks.

The fourth, that converted Hereticks who will not wear a Cross shall be treated as Hereticks and their Goods confiscated.

The fifth, that the Priests shall carefully observe the Decrees of the Council of Toulouse against the Hereticks, and against those who are not present at Divine Service.

The sixth, that Examination shall be made into the Capacity and Morals of those who are promoted to Holy Orders, and that none shall be admitted, who has not a patrimonial Title to the Value of a hundred French Sols.

The seventh, that the Tonsure shall be only given to those who can read and sing, who are the Children of Freemen, and born in lawful Wedlock, unless the Bishop of the Place grant a Dispensation.

The eighth prohibits Bishops from exacting Oaths for their Interest of those upon whom they shall confer Orders.

The ninth imports, that the Bishops shall supply the Archdeaconries with Persons zealous for the Salvation of Souls, and capable of instructing both Clergy and Laity.

The tenth, that the Constitutions of the fourth General Lateran Council against those who excommunicate unjustly shall be read.

The eleventh, that the Patrons, as well Ecclesiasticks as Laicks shall present to Bishops, Curates, or perpetual Vicars of the vacant Churches before the Feast of All Saints.

The twelfth, that those who have Benefices with Cure of Souls, shall be constrain'd to take Orders forthwith, or else lose their Revenues: That if a Cure be united to a Prebend or Dignity, he who enjoys them, shall put a perpetual Vicar in his stead into the Cure, to whom he shall give a competent Maintenance: And that every Parish-Church shall have a perpetual Priest who shall serve the Cure in person.

The thirteenth, that the Constitutions made in the fourth General Lateran Council about the Life and Morals of the Clergy shall be observ'd.

The Council of Beziers, 1233.

The following Canons relate to the Monks.

The fourteenth prohibits their having any thing de Proprio, and declares, that this is so annex'd to the Monachal Order, that not only the Abbots may not exempt a Monk from this Law, but also that the Pope cannot dispense with it, any more than he can with the Observance of the Celibacy.

The fifteenth and sixteenth prescribe to the Abbots, Monks, and Regular Canons how they ought to be cloathed.

The seventeenth enjoins the Monks to shut up their Cloysters, and not to suffer any Seculars to enter without Necessity.

The eighteenth orders the reading in the Refectory, and that a Chapter be held every Day.

The nineteenth enjoins them to stay in the Cloyster from the Chapter-Hour till Tierce, and forbids them to go out without leave of their Superior.

The twentieth imports, that every Week Distribution shall be made to the Poor.

The twenty first, that there shall be in the Monasteries a Monk, or a Secular to teach Grammar.

The twenty second prohibits the giving of Estates to Monasteries in prospect of having Benefices bestow'd upon them, divests those of them who came to them by such Methods, and deprives those likewise who gave them of their Privilege. A Prior or an Abbot is likewise forbidden to possess the Priory of another Monastery, unless he be call'd by a Canonical Election to some conventual Priory.

The twenty third imports, that they shall not sell Wine in a Monastery, nor suffer Persons of scandalous Profession to enter therein.

The twenty fourth, that they shall not admit Laicks to possess Prebends, or the Revenues of those Benefices, as given by way of Oblation.

The twenty fifth, that they shall not suffer one Monk to be in a Priory alone, that there shall three or four, but no Irregular Monks shall be sent thither.

The twenty sixth, that they shall oblige all those who are arriv'd to the Age of fourteen to swear that they will keep the Peace.

The Council of Arles, in the Year 1233.

The Council of Arles, 1233.

John Baussanus Archbishop of Arles held a provincial Council in the Year 1234, wherein he made twenty four Constitutions.

In the first, he orders that the Canons of the fourth General Lateran Council shall be put in Execution.

By the second, he obliges the Bishops to preach the Faith themselves, and to cause it to be preach'd by Persons of Merit.

In the third, he admonishes the Bishops to make use of Exhortations and even Censures to oblige the Officers of Justice, and the Lords to root out Hereticks out of their Jurisdiction.

In the fourth it is order'd, that every Sunday an Excommunication shall be publish'd against Hereticks and their Favourers.

The fifth imports, that in each Parish a Priest, and two other Persons shall be settled as Inquisitors.

The sixth, that the Heretical convict shall be condemn'd to perpetual Imprisonment, and that those who will not relent shall be deliver'd up to the Secular Power.

The two next are for the Observation of Peace.

The Council of Arles, 1233.

In the ninth, he prohibits the Confraternities and Societies which are not allow'd by the Bishop.

The tenth imports, that they shall not give Absolution to those who are excommunicated for having done any Injury, till such time as they have made Satisfaction.

In the eleventh, he orders, that the Bodies and Bones of those who after their Death shall be discover'd to have been Hereticks, shall be dug up again.

In the twelfth, 'tis prohibited to bestow Benefices on Laicks.

In the thirteenth, he declares, that the Excommunication ought to be usher'd in by an Admonition, and if the Excommunicated do not get themselves absolv'd within a Month, they shall not receive Absolution till they have paid 50 Sols a Month from the Time of their Excommunication.

In the fourteenth, he exhorts the Bishops to be vigilant in reforming the Manners of their Clergy.

In the fifteenth, he orders, that they should excommunicate every Sunday the Usurers, publick Adulterers, Diviners and Sorcerers.

In the sixteenth, that the Jews and Jewesses shall be distinguiſh'd from Chriſtians by a Badge which they ſhall wear on their Habits.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

In the ſeventeenth, he declares, that if the privileg'd Perſons will not ſubmit to the Sentences of Prelates and to their Cenſures, one may refuſe to do them Juſtice.

In the eighteenth, that all the Biſhops of the Province ought ſtiffly to maintain the Rights of the Regale of the Church of Arles.

In the nineteenth, that each Church of the Country ought to have a Curate, or at leaſt to be ſupply'd by the Biſhop's Order.

In the twentieth, that Biſhops and other Prelates having the Cure of Souls, ſhall proceed according to the Forms of the Canons in the Affairs relating to Tithes, Legacies, Chappels and other Eccleſiaſtical Rights.

In the twenty firſt, he prohibits the making any Laſt Will and Teſtament but in the Preſence of the Curate.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

In the twenty ſecond, he prohibits the raiſing any new Taxes.

In the twenty third, he pronounces an Anathema againſt thoſe who treat for the Tithes or other Rites of the Church with the Monks without the Conſent of the Biſhop.

In the twenty fourth, he orders, that no Biſhop may turn an Eccleſiaſtick out of his Benefice without taking cognizance of the Cauſe.

This ſame Archbiſhop held a ſecond Council at L'iſle in Provence, in the Year 1251; wherein he has renew'd theſe Conſtitutions and explain'd them, and couch'd them in thirteen Chapters, the laſt of which is againſt clandeſtine Marriages.

The Council of Narbonne held about the Year 1235.

The Council of Narbonne 1235.

Peter Amelli Archbiſhop of Narbonne, John Bauſſanus Archbiſhop of Arles, and Raymond Archbiſhop of Aix, being met, as 'tis believ'd, at Narbonne about the Year 1235, made Decrees about the Puniſhment of Hereticks, directed to the Brethren Inquiſitors of theirs and the Neighbouring Provinces, who had propos'd to them ſeveral Doubts on that Subject, wherein they return them this Anſwer; that they ought to impoſe for Penance on the Hereticks and their Favourers (who voluntarily recant, and to whom they have promis'd that they ſhall not be caſt into Priſon) the wearing of Croſſes, the preſenting themſelves every Sunday in the Churches with part of their Body naked, and with Wands in their Hands between the Epiſtle and Goſpel in order to receive the Diſcipline; to do the ſame thing at the ſolemn Proceſſions, to be preſent every Sunday at Maſs, at the Veſpers and at Sermon, to Faſt, to viſit the Holy Places, to defend in Perſon or by others maintain'd at their Charge the Faith of the Church againſt the Saracens and Hereticks (but not to order them to go beyond Sea) to make them ſhift their Country, and build Places to ſhut up the poor Converts. Moreover, they leave it to the Diſcretion of the Inquiſitors to impoſe ſuch Penances as they ſhall think convenient, to increaſe or moderate them. They would have them to oblige the Converts to make a publick Confeſſion of their Faults. They commit to the Curates the taking care to ſee that the Converts obſerve the Penances which the Inquiſitors ſhall have impos'd on them. With reſpect to other Hereticks, who ought to be confin'd according to the Law of the Council of Toulouſe; they ſay, that there being ſo great a Number of them, that this cannot eaſily be done, the Pope ſhall be acquainted with it, and only ſuch ſhall be confin'd who are moſt capable of corrupting others. As for the Rebels, Apoſtates, Favourers of Hereticks and thoſe who conceal or neglect to puniſh them they would have them be treated variouſly according to the Variety of their Faults. They admoniſh the Jacobine Friars, not to impoſe any pecuniary Mulcts, nor to demand any. They would not have Perſons ſuſpected of Hereſie, or New Converts to be admitted into a Religious Houſe. They preſcribe ſeveral Laws about the Proceedings of the Inquiſition, ſuch as keeping the Names of the private Witneſſes, the receiving all ſorts of Witneſſes, not to hear them above once, nor to credit the Confeſſors, about the Points on which Hereticks ought to be interrogated; about the Errors of the Vaudois, and the Signs whereby to diſcover them.

The Council of Narbonne 1235.

The Council of Tours, held about the Year 1236.

The Council of Tours, 1236.

Jeuellus de Mayenne Archbiſhop of Tours, on the Tueſday before St. Barnabas's day, in the Year 1236, held an Eccleſiaſtical Aſſembly in that City, wherein he publiſh'd fourteen Decrees for the Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Polity.

By the firſt, the Croiſado-Men are depriv'd of their Privileges, when they commit ſuch Crimes as deſerve Puniſhment, and they and the other Chriſtians are prohibited from killing or abuſing the Jews.

In the three next 'tis order'd, that none ſhall be admitted Lawyers, who have not ſtudied the Law for three Years, nor Officials, who have not ſtudied it five Years, nor Notaries who are not acquainted with the Style and Conſtitutions of the Palace.

In the fifth, to obviate the Frauds of thoſe who made an ill uſe of the Letters of the Holy See, the Commiſſaries delegated in the Province of Tours, are prohibited from executing their Commiſſion till they have ſhew'd the original Copy of it, and unleſs he that has it, ſwear that he has procur'd thoſe Letters, that they are true, and that he will not carry him with whom he has to do before other Judges.

By the ſixth, the Judges are order'd to have regard to Appeals.

In the ſeventh, the Biſhops are recommended to take care, that the Laſt Wills and Teſtaments be duly executed.

The Council of Tours, 1236.

The eighth declares, thoſe who contract two Marriages at a time to be Infamous, and condemns them to be whip'd.

The ninth orders, that every Sunday the Sorcerers ſhall be excommunicated, and condemns them to ſevere Correction.

The tenth, renews the Prohibitions of communicating with excommunicated Perſons, made in the Council held at Chateau-Gonthier, under Penalty of a pecuniary Mulct.

The eleventh imports, that thoſe who pretend to be exempt from the Juriſdiction of the Ordinary, ſhall be oblig'd to exhibit their Letters of Exemption.

In the twelfth, falſe Witneſſes are condemn'd to ſevere Puniſhments.

In the thirteenth, the Biſhops are enjoyn'd to take care that the new Converts of their Dioceſſes be inſtructed, and to provide a Subſiſtence for them, leſt they return to their Errors under the pretence of Poverty.

In the fourteenth, the Abbots and Priors are order'd to uſe Hoſpitality.

The Council of London, in the Year 1237.

The Council of London, 1237.

Henry III. King of England in the Year 1237, ſent for Cardinal Otho Legate of the Holy See. At firſt the Clergy and Laity were alarm'd at his Coming, but that Cardinal behav'd himſelf with a great deal of Moderation and Prudence. He reconcil'd the Lords, refus'd part of the Preſents which they offer'd him, and appointed a Synod to be held at London for the reforming the Diſcipline. The King of England ſhew'd him a great deal of Reſpect, which made the Grandees of the Kingdom to murmur. The King of Scotland was more reſerv'd, and would not permit the Legate to enter his Dominions, telling him that he had no Occaſion for a Legate in his Kingdom; that all was well enough there; that they had never ſeen any Legate there; that he would never ſuffer any; that beſides he would not do well to expoſe his Perſon by coming thither, becauſe the People of his Country were Savage and Cruel, and might perhaps abuſe him.

The Council appointed to be held at London by the Legate, was held there on the next Day after the Octave of St. Martin. The Legate appear'd there ſeated in a magnificent Throne, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury on his Right-Hand, and the Archbiſhop of York on his Left, who both of them made Proteſtations for the preſervation of their Privileges. Afterwards the Legate made a Speech to the Prelates of the Council on the Prudence and Wiſdom of Eccleſiaſticks. On the Morrow the King ſent Commiſſioners to the Council, who ſhould warn the Legate, that he did nothing which might infringe the King's Prerogative; and one of them ſtay'd in the Council to take care of it. The Legate order'd the Letters of his Legation to be read. On the third Day they made an end of reading the Decrees, which the Legate propos'd in the Council, which began to be read the firſt Day. They are thirty one.

The Council of London, 1237.

The firſt concerns the Dedication of Churches, and implies, that it deriv'd its Original from the Old and New Teſtament, and has been obſerv'd by the Holy Fathers under the New. That it ought to be ſolemniz'd with greater Dignity and Care, ſince then they only offer'd Sacrifices of dead Beaſts, whereas now they offer on the Altar, by the Hands of the Prieſt, a living and true Sacrifice, namely the only Son of God: Therefore the Fathers have with Reaſon order'd, that ſo ſublime an Office, ſhould be celebrated only in conſecrated Places, at leaſt, when no Neceſſity requires its being done elſewhere. Having therefore ſeen and underſtood that a great many deſpiſe or neglect this Sacred Miniſtry, and having met with with a great many Churches, even Cathedrals, which tho' Ancient, have not as yet been consecratee with the Holy Oyl; to remedy this Neglect, they order, that all Cathedral, Conventual and Parochial Churches which are compleatly built, shall be consecrated within two Years by the Diocesan Bishops, or by their Authority; and the same time is prescrib'd for those which shall be built hereafter. And that this Statute, may be observ'd, they prohibit the Celebration of Mass in those Churches which shall not have been consecrated within two Years after they shall be built. They forbid the Abbots and Curates to pull down old consecrated Churches, under a pretence of making them finer, without the consent of the Bishop of the Diocess, who shall take care to see whether it be fit to be granted, or no; and if he grants it, he shall see that the new one be finish'd forthwith. As to Chappels, they order nothing in particular with respect to them.

The Councils held during the Thirteenth Century.

The next Canons contain the Doctrine of the Sacraments; In the second, the Number of them is determin'd, and 'tis declared, that they ought to be celebrated with Purity and gratuitously.

The third is upon Baptism, 'tis therein determin'd, that the Time of administring it solemnly is Holy Saturday, and the Saturday in Whitsun-week. that Infants ought to be baptiz'd on those Days, and it enjoins Curates to teach their Parishioners the Form of Baptism, that so they may administer it in case of Necessity.

The fourth is against those who require Money for giving Absolution and the other Sacraments.

The fifth imports, that the Bishops shall take care to nominate in each Deanery prudent and wise Confessors, to confess the Clerks who are asham'd to confess themselves to the Deans, and that there shall be in Cathedrals a general Penitentiary.

The sixth, that those who are to be ordained shall be examined, and that a Register shall be kept of those who shall be approv'd, that so others might not mix themselves with them.

The seventh prohibits the farming out of Benefices, and especially Dignities.

The eighth imports, that if any Churches be leas'd out, it shall be only for five Years.

The ninth, that they shall not let out Leases for ever.

The tenth, that the Vicars shall be Priests, and obliged to personal Residence in the Churches which they are to serve.

The eleventh, that they shall not give away the Benefices of the absent, upon the Report of their being dead, unless they are assur'd of it.

The twelfth prohibits the dividing of Benefices.

The thirteenth renews the Decrees concerning Residence, and against those who have Pluralities

The fourteenth regulates the Manner of the Habits of the Clergy, and recommends to the Bishops to be the first in giving an Example to others.

The fifteenth to prevent the Marriages which some Clerks contracted clandestinely to save their Benefices, declares the Children born of such Marriages uncapable of holding Benefices.

The sixteenth renews the Ecclesiastical Statutes against Clerks who kept Concubines.

The seventeenth prohibits the Children of Clerks from possessing the Benefices of their Fathers.

The eighteenth is against those who protect, and give Shelter to Highway men.

The nineteenth prohibits all the Monks from eating Flesh, and orders, that their Novices shall be oblig'd to profess at the End of their Year: Which is likewise extended to Regular Canons.

The twentieth enjoins the Archdeacons to do their Duty with Diligence, and not to burden the Churches by excessive Duties of Procuration.

The twenty first forbids the Ecclesiastical Judges to hinder the Parties from agreeing.

The twenty second exhorts the Bishops to reside in their Churches; there to celebrate Divine Service on the chief Festivals of the Year, on the Sundays of Advent and Lent, and to see that their Dioceses be visited.

The twenty third imports, that Care shall be taken to place able Judges, especially in Matrimonial Causes; and that the Judges of Abbots who are in Possession, shall not pass a definitive Sentence, till after they have consulted the Bishop of the Diocess.

The eight other Constitutions relate to the various Forms of Justice, and the Conditions which make these Acts authentick. These Decrees were read in the Council, and the Prelates of England hearkned to them very quietly. There was only the Bishop of Worcester who remonstrated touching the prohibition of having Pluralities, that this Law could not be observ'd in England, because there were a great many Persons of Quality that enjoyed several Benefices, who lived honourably upon them, and bestowed large Alms. He said likewise, that it would be very difficult to observe the Abstinence from Meat, according to the Rule of St. Benedict, in all Monasteries, and he desir'd the Legate to send the Pope Word of these things. The Legate consented thereto, provided the other Prelates of the Council would join with him. Lastly, because several gave out, that the Orders which should be made by the Legate, should only be of Force during his Legation, he caused a Decretal to be read which authorized them for ever.

The Council of Cognac in the Year 1238.

The Council of Cognac, 1238.

IN the Year 1238. Gerard Archbishop of Bourdeaux called a Council at Cognac, the Munday after the Octave of Easter, wherein he published thirty nine Decrees.

The first excommunicates those that made use of several Sorts of Tricks, which are expressed in particular.

The second likewise declares those Men excommunicated, who conspire against Ecclesiasticks; the Persons who cite any one before them, without having seen the authentick Letters of their Commission; and those who enlarge them, and those who detain the Goods or the Persons of Ecclesiasticks.

The third excommunicates the Laicks who detain Churches, Hospitals, or Religious Houses.

The fourth forbids the Archdeacons, Archpriests, and Deans to have Vicars: And the fifth forbids Curates to be Vicars in other Churches.

The sixth orders, that every Parish shall have a particular Seal.

The seventh, that no Person shall be cited before the Commissaries of the Holy See, till the Original of the Letters of the Commission be exhibited, and a Copy be given thereof.

The eighth prohibits the Bishops and other Ecclesiastical Judges from taking off Excommunications made for Offences committed, till such time as they have oblig'd the Party offending to make Satisfaction.

The ninth enjoins the Bishops to see that the Sentences of Excommunication issued out by their Colleagues be duly executed in their Dioceses.

The tenth orders, that none shall be commissioned to try Causes of Matrimony, but able and discreet Persons.

The eleventh, lays the Penalty of Excommunication on such Lay-Judges as oblige the Ecclesiasticks to plead before them.

The twelfth and thirteenth prohibit the Monks and Priests from being Advocates and Proctors.

The fourteenth orders, that Advocates shall be appointed for Paupers.

The fifteenth, that if two Lords have Vassals who are subject to them promiscuously, they shall be interdicted for the Faults of either of them.

The Council of Cognac, 1238.

The sixteenth, that the Lords shall restore to the Churches, what they have taken away from them upon the account of the Interdiction issued out against them.

The seventeenth prescribes the Formalities which ought to be observed in the Excommunication of Barons.

The eighteenth condemns them to a Fine of ten Livres, who remain in a State of Excommunication for forty Days.

The nineteenth deprives those who apprehend or abuse the Clergy, of the Right of being admitted into holy Orders, and of possessing Benefices themselves, or by their Descendants to the third Generation.

The twentieth prohibits the Abbots from giving Money to the Monks or Regular Canons for their Subsistence, and from receiving any thing for Admission into their Monasteries.

The twenty first orders, that the Stewards shall give an Account of their Management every Month, and the Abbot, every Year, and that the Cloysters shall be shut up at seasonable Hours.

The twenty second prohibits the Monks from going out of their Monastery without Leave of their Abbots, and from staying, or eating abroad.

The twenty third prohibits them likewise from preferring any Petition in a Court of Judicature, without the Order of their Abbot

The twenty fourth prohibits the Monks and Regular Canons from wearing Cloaks in their Monastery, or in the places of their Abode.

The twenty fifth forbids them to have any thing de proprio, under the Penalty of being deprived of Ecclesiastical Burial.

The twenty sixth prohibits them likewise from having certain Kinds of Habits, and from wearing a Gown which is not close, and which has no Sleeves.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The twenty seventh enjoins the Abbots twice every Year to publish an Excommunication against the Monks who shall have any thing by way of Property, or who shall not be habited conformably to their Quality.

The twenty eighth prohibits Monks from being Bail for any, and from borrowing more than twenty Sols.

The twenty ninth enjoyns them to observe the Rule of St. Benedict, about abstaining from Meats.

The thirtieth prohibits them from holding Curacies, unless in case of Necessity, and with the Leave of the Bishop their Diocesan.

The thirty first prohibits the Monks and Regular Canons from being alone in Priories, or in Barns.

The thirty second orders, that no Co-friaries shall be established without the Leave of the Diocesan Bishop.

The thirty third imports, that a competent Allowance shall be given to those that serve the Cures, enough to maintain them.

The thirty fourth prohibits the building of new Monasteries, or Hospitals, without the Leave of the Bishop.

The thirty fifth renews the Prohibitions against the alienating the Goods of the Church, without special Licence from the Bishop.

The thirty sixth orders, that the Curates who have Parishioners in common, shall be obliged to divide them between them.

The thirty seventh prohibits the allowing Ecclesiasticks of another Diocess, to celebrate Divine Service, unless they have Testimonials from their Bishop of their Orders, of their Morals, and of the Occasion of their Journey.

The thirty eighth prohibits him who presents to a Benefice, the demanding of him whom he presents an Oath, whereby he engages himself to take nothing of any Person, because this looks like Simony.

The thirty ninth imports, that no Person shall provide for the vacant Churches, the Presentation of which is laps'd to the Ordinary.

The Council of Tours, in the Year 1239.

The Council of Tours, 1239.

Juvellus de Mayenne Archbishop of Tours held another Council in that City in the Year 1239, in which he made the following Decrees.

The first is, that the Bishop shall nominate in each Parish three Clergy men, or at least three creditable Laicks, of whom he shall take an Oath to speak the Truth about the Scandals which shall happen in that, or the neighbouring Parishes in Matters of Faith, or other Ecclesiastical Crimes.

The second imports, that the Clerks convicted of Crimes, shall at first be punished according as the Bishop pleases, and for the second Offence by the Forfeiture of their Benefices.

The third orders the Priests to wear close Habits, under the Penalty of five Sols Fine.

The fourth imports, that nothing shall be demanded, or exacted before the Administration of the Sacraments, but that they might demand the usual Dues after they have been administred.

The fifth and sixth prohibit the Priests and Curates from excommunicating their Parishioners by their own Authority.

The seventh declares those Legacies null, which are made by a beneficed Clergyman, or one in Orders to his natural Son.

The eighth renews the Prohibition made in the Council of Chateau-Gonthier, against Archdeacons and other inferior Prelates having Officials.

The ninth forbids the Prelates to issue out Sentences of Excommunication hastily, and enjoyns them to do it maturely, and after the Admonitions prescribed by the Laws, and made in a competent Distance of time, at least if the Affair does not require Speed. The same Canon does afterwards prescribe the Order that is to be observed in the pronouncing of Excommunication.

In the tenth, 'tis prohibited to excommunicate in general Terms all those who communicate with excommunicated Persons.

The eleventh prohibits the giving of Money to the Regulars for their Maintenance.

The twelfth prohibits the Clergy and Monks from having Servant-maids in their Houses, or in their Priories.

The thirteenth interdicts the Monks from the Right of serving Curacies, if the Bishop has not intrusted them with the Cure of Souls.

The Council of Laval, in the Year 1242.

The Council of Laval, 1242.

The same Archbishop of Tours held a third Council at Laval in the Diocess of Mans in the Year 1242. wherein in the first place he renewed the Statutes about the Monastical Habits and Discipline.

2. He ordered that the Abbots should take care to keep the Priories in good Condition.

3. He prohibited them from changing the Priors.

4. He prohibited the Archdeacons from taking Cognizance of Matrimonial or Simoniacal Causes, without a special Power from the Bishop, and from having Officials out of the City.

5. He renewed the Penalties inflicted by the Canons on Clergymen, who plead in secular Courts of Judicature.

6. He regulated the Manner of celebrating Divine Service during the Interdiction.

7. He likewise renewed the Prohibition made against Monks having Money of their own to buy themselves Cloaths.

8. He declared, that he who remained a whole Year excommunicated, ought to be banished from the Place where he dwelt.

9. He order'd, that those who were accus'd of having injured the Churches, and against whom there were strong Suspicions, ought to clear themselves Canonically, and that if they cannot come off with this Purgation, they ought to be punished.

The first General Council of Lyons in the Year 1245.

The first General Council of Lyons, 1245.

WE will not here repeat what we have already said concerning the History of this Council, and of the Sentence which the Pope herein pass'd against the Emperor Frederick; but since we have not spoken of the other Affairs which were transacted, nor of the Decrees which were made in it, we are obliged to say something of them in this Place.

There were three principal Affairs besides that of Frederick: The relieving of the Empire of Constantinople against the Greeks; that of the Empire of Germany against the Tartars; and that of the Holy Land against the Saracens. The Pope willing to provide for these three urgent Necessities, orders for the Relief of Constantinople, that a Moyety of the Revenues of all Benefices, on which the Incumbents did not actually reside, should be given. However he excepts out of this Act, the Clergy of the Church of Rome, the Croisade-Men, and those who have lawful Excuses for their Non-Residence. He likewise join'd to this Supply the third Part of what any Benefices might be worth above an hundred Merks. He promis'd likewise that the Church of Rome should give a third Part of its Revenues towards the Relief of the Empire of Constantinople. He excommunicates the beneficed Clergy who should use any Fraud, and grants Indulgences to all those that shall go to the Succour of that Empire, equal to those which they had who go to the Holy Land.

To put a Stop to the Incursions of the Tartars into Poland, Russia and Hungary, he could find no better Way than to make Trenches and Forts, in order to prevent their Inroads till such time as the Holy See consider of it, and be able to provide for their Relief.

Lastly, as to what concerns the Relief of the Holy Land, where the Affairs of the Christians were in a very bad Posture, he admonishes the Priests and other Ecclesiasticks in the Army of the Christians, to pray continually, and to exhort the Croisade-Men to Repentance, and the Practice of Vertue; and grants to those Clergymen the Privilege of enjoying their Benefices. In the second place, he appoints for the Relief of the Holy Land the twentieth Part of all the Revenues of Benefices for the Space of three Years, and the tenth of the Revenues of the Pope and Cardinals. He exempts the Croisade-Men from Taxes and all Manner of Contributions. He discharges them from the Interest of those Sums which they had borrowed. He pronounces an Anathema against the Pyrates and against all those who supplied the Saracens with Ships, Arms, or other Ammunitions. He orders a Peace to be made between the Christian Princes for four Years, under the Penalty of excommunicating and interdicting those who opposed it. He prohibited Turnaments, and lastly heaped very large Indulgences on the Croisade-Men.

He made use likewise of another Method of raising Funds for the Relief of the Holy Land and the Empire, which was to admonish those who had the Cure of Souls, to encline the Faithful to give something by their last Wills and Testaments, or otherwise, to be imployed in this good Work, and to take care to keep it.

The Pope likewise in this Council made several Decrees relating to the Canon Law, such as about Commissions, Elections, the providing of a Delegate-Judge; about the Processes, Appeals, and Accusations; about Excommunication, and Debts

The Councils held during the Thirteenth Century.

Debts contracted by Churches, and other Points of Law which are to be met with in the Decretals, and which are related by Matthew Paris in his History.

Some of these Decrees were made in the Council, and others before or after the Council: But the Decree about Raising the Pence, displeas'd several Prelates, who openly oppos'd it; and the more, because it was said, that it was to be done by the Pope's Commissaries, and they complained, that the Court of Rome had often rob'd them of their Revenues under this Pretence.

The Council of Beziers, in the Year 1246.

The Council of Beziers, 1246.

IN the Year 1246. William de Broa Archbishop of Narbonne held a Council of the Bishops of his Province in the Town of Beziers, wherein he made a Collection of forty six Canons, extracted out of the preceding Councils: Namely, the fourth general Lateran Council, the Council of Narbonne, in the Year 1228. and the Council of Avignon. He likewise drew up thirty seven Decrees for the Inquisitors of that Country, containing several Rules of the Things which they ought to observe.

The Council of Valenza in the Year 1248.

The Council of Valenza, 1248.

PEter Cardinal Bishop of Albany, and Hugh Cardinal Priest of Saint Sabina, in the Month of December, 1248. held at Valenza a Council of the Bishops of the Povinces of Narbonne, Vienna, Arles, and Aix, in which they published Statutes against the Emperor Frederick and his Adherents, about the Inquisition and Excommunication; against perjured and sacrilegious Persons, Sorcerers, Relapsers, and other Criminals.

The Council of Saumur, in the Year 1253.

The Council of Saumur, 1253.

PEter de Lambale Archbishop of Tours, after he had visited his Province, called a Council at Saumur in December 1253. to reform the Disorders and Abuses which he had taken notice of in his Visitation. He thereupon made thirty two very useful Decrees.

By the first it is order'd, that they shall recite the Offices for the Canonical Hours in all Cathedral and Collegiate Churches at the Times appointed, and with requisite Devotion; and that one Side of the Quire shall not begin a Verse, till the other Side has ended the foregoing Verse.

By the second, the Archdeacons, Archpriests, Rural Deans, and others, are enjoyned to take care, that the Sacristy, the Fonts, the Holy Oyls, the Holy Chrism be kept under Lock and Key, and that the Sacraments in populous Places, and especially in Cities, be carried with Veneration.

The third imports, that the Corporals shall be wash'd by the Priests habited with Surplices in a very clean Vessel, and set apart for that Use, and that the first Water shall be cast into the Pond; that the Linnen of the Altar and of the Priests shall be washed by a Woman or by a Girl, separately from others, and that they shall take care to keep them well.

The fourth renews the Statute made in the Council of Laval, about the Inventory of the Ornaments and Goods of Churches, which ought to be kept by the Archdeacon.

The fifth enjoyns, that the Archdeacons, Priests, and Rural Deans, shall be obliged to take Holy Orders within a Year.

The sixth prohibits the holding of Pleadings in Churches, and in their Portico's.

The seventh prohibits the Archdeacons and other inferior Prelates from holding their Pleadings in presence of their Bishops.

The eighth prohibits them from having Officials out of Town.

The ninth prohibits the exacting the Duty of Procuration, unless they actually visit.

The tenth revives the Statute made in the Council of Chateau-Gonthier, to prevent the dividing of Prebends.

The eleventh prohibits the admitting any Canon who is not born in lawful Wedlock.

The twelfth prohibits the Prelates from exacting any Subsidy from their Inferiors, unless they have Occasion for it, and then to receive a moderate one with Charity.

The thirteenth revokes the Pensions laid on Curates.

The fourteenth and fifteenth enjoyn the Regulars to observe the Rules prescribed in the Letters of the Pope which relate to them, and to keep Copies of them by them.

The sixteenth revives the Statute of the Council of Chateau-Gonthier, which prohibits the Monks from having any thing de proprio.

The seventeenth prohibits the Monks from concerning themselves with secular Pleadings.

The eighteenth prohibits the Abbots from bestowing Regular Places on Seculars.

The nineteenth orders, that the ancient Number of Monks shall be re-established in each Monastery.

The twentieth and twenty first prohibit the Abbots from exacting new Pensions of Priories, and from retrenching their Revenues.

The twenty second imports, that the Abbots or Priors shall not keep their Registers out of the Monastery.

The twenty third prohibits the Clergy from concerning themselves with Merchandise, and from making any Contracts of Society with Merchants.

The twenty fourth prohibits the Ecclesiastical Judges from commissioning several Persons to cite without Distinction such as they please before them.

The twenty fifth and sixth are against those who hinder the Exercise of the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, or the Execution of the Sentences.

The twenty seventh prohibits clandestine Marriages.

The twenty eighth is against an Abuse which was practis'd at that time of granting several Curacies in Commendam to one and the same Person, who has already one in Title. They who receive those Benefices are deprived of them, and those who collate them, of the Power of presenting.

The twenty ninth prohibits Bishops from applying to their Profit a Part of the Revenues of Parochial Churches, and from charging them with new Pensions.

The thirtieth prohibits the Clergy from bequeathing any thing to their natural Children or their Concubines.

The thirty first orders, that those who have Sacerdotal Prebends in Chapters, shall take upon them Priests Orders, and serve them in that Quality.

The thirty second orders, that all the Canons made by the Archbishops of Tours, Predecessors to Peter, shall be inviolably observ'd under Pain of Excommunication.

The Council of Alby in the Year 1254.

The Council of Alby, 1254.

THis Council was held by Zoan Bishop of Avignon, and Legate of the Holy See, and consisted of the Provinces of Narbonne, Bourges, and Bourdeaux. Therein they revived a great many Decrees made in the preceding Councils.

The twenty eight first, relate to the Inquisition and the Punishment of Hereticks.

The twenty ninth orders the Execution of the Canon stylʼd Omnis utriusque sexus, concerning the Easter Confession; and obliges all the Faithful to receive the Communion at Christmas, Easter, and Whitsun-tide.

The next to the fortieth revive the Decrees of the Councils of Narbonne, Valenza, and Toulouse, about being present at the Divine Service of the Parish, about Excommunications, Persons excommunicated, and last Wills and Testaments.

The forty first prohibits the Priests from keeping Women within the Inclosures of the Church.

The forty second orders, that there shall be Silver Chalices in all Churches which have fifteen Pounds a Year Revenue.

The forty third enjoyns the Bishops to make use of Ecclesiastical Censures to oblige those who hold Churches to repair and maintain them.

The forty fourth and fifth revive the Laws which prohibit Ecclesiasticks from having any secular Employments or Offices.

The eight next prescribe the Modesty which Ecclesiasticks and Regulars ought to observe in their Habits, and in their Way of Living.

The fifty fourth and fifth import, that there shall be at least three Monks or two Regular Canons in each Priory.

The fifty sixth orders the Patrons to present the Benefices in their Gifts to able Persons within the time prefix'd, without any Compact and without diminishing the Revenues: And prohibits the applying the Revenues of a vacant Church, to any other Uses than to the Interest of that Church.

The four next fix the Duties of Visitations.

The sixty first and second revive the Decrees of the Council of Avignon, against perjur'd Persons and Usurers.

The eight next are againſt the Jews.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The ſeventy firſt prohibits any new Impoſts under Pain of Excommunication.

The Council of Bourdeaux in the Year 1255.

The Council of Bourdeaux, 1255.

THis Council properly ſpeaking is only a Synod of the Clergy of Bourdeaux, held the 13*th* of April in the Year 1255. wherein Gerrard de Malemort Archbiſhop of that Church publiſhed the following Conſtitutions.

1. He ordered the Clergymen who have Churches to be reſident, and to preſent themſelves in time to receive Orders under the Penalty of loſing their Benefices.

2. He prohibits the Prieſts and Curates from tolerating Queſtors in Churches without his or the Holy See's Order.

3. From admitting of ſtrange Clergymen without his Leave.

4. From executing the Letters of Commiſſion iſſued out of the Holy See, when a great Part of the Time prefixed is elapſed.

5. From giving conſecrated Hoſts to Children on Eaſter-day; inſtead of which he permits the giving them conſecrated Bread.

6. He orders the Curates to write in the Miſſals the Inventory of the Goods of their Church, and forbids them to alienate them without the Conſent of the Biſhop.

7. He forbids the preſenting of Relicks to Lay-men to ſwear by them in the Seaſons wherein 'tis unlawful to ſwear upon the Evangeliſts, upon any other account than that of Peace, which Seaſons are from Septuageſima Sunday to Eaſter; from the Beginning of Advent to the Octave of Epiphany, during the Rogation-days, and every Sunday in the Year.

8. He forbids the Prieſts to carry any Proceſs before a ſecular Judge, unleſs it be with the Conſent of the Biſhop.

9. He orders, that they ſhall not any more bring any Relicks out of their Caſes, to expoſe them to the Weather, and that no new ones ſhall be honour'd till they have been approved of by the Pope.

10. He prohibits the Clerks from taking any Cognizance or paſſing any Sentence in Criminal Matters.

11. He prohibits the giving of Abſolution to excommunicated Perſons at the point of Death, till they have ſatisfied all Parties, and given Security for ſo doing, and makes them reſponſible for it, who abſolve them otherwiſe.

12. He orders, that no Pleadings ſhall be in the Cloyſters of the Monks under Pain of Interdiction.

15. He made ſeveral Decrees relating to Tithes. He excommunicates and deprives of Eccleſiaſtical Burial the Laicks who poſſeſs or detain them: Declares that the Tithes belong to the Curates: Prohibits the engaging or alienating of Tithes, and beſide the Tithes, would have the Laicks pay the firſt Fruits, which is the thirtieth, fortieth or fiftieth Part, and the other Dues which they owe to their Curates. This is the Subject Matter of ten of theſe Conſtitutions.

In the twenty ſixth, he forbids the exacting any thing for the Adminiſtration of Sacraments, or for the collating to Benefices.

In the twenty ſeventh and eighth, he revives the temporal Puniſhments againſt thoſe who infringe the Excommunication, or who deſpiſe and neglect to take it off.

In the two laſt, he reforms the Abuſes which were crept into the Societies, and prohibits them from making Conſtitutions or chooſing an Head, without the Conſent of the Curate, and for the Good of the Church.

The Council of Beziers in the Year 1255.

The Council of Beziers, 1255.

PEter d' Antevil Chief Juſtice of Carcaſſonne and Beziers, laying Siege to Querbus, in behalf of King Saint Lewis, in the Year 1255. gave Orders to William de Broa Archbiſhop of Narbonne, and the Biſhops his Suffragans to give him Supplies. They met upon that account the 8*th* of May the ſame Year at Beziers, where they concluded on what they ſhould do, and in the Council they publiſhed the Laws made in the foregoing Year by Saint Lewis, which have been publiſhed by Baluzius, and are to be met with in the laſt Editions of the Councils.

The Council of Beziers, 1255.

The Council of Ruffec in the Year 1258.

The Council of Ruffec, 1258.

GErard de Malemort Archbiſhop of Bourdeaux held a Synod in Auguſt 1258. at Ruffec for maintaining the Rights of the Church. He therein ordered, that for three Sundays ſucceſſively, they ſhould be excommunicated, who hindred the Juriſdiction of Churches, or violated the Rights and Liberties, and ſeized upon the Revenues of them. He condemned ſeverely the Monks who deſpis'd the Cenſures of their Biſhops. He prohibits Eccleſiaſticks from making their Anſwers before ſecular Judges, and from having any ſecular Employments. He regulates the Forms of laſt Wills and Teſtaments, according to the preceding Councils, as well as the Abſolution of excommunicated Perſons at the Hour of Death. He admoniſhes the Commiſſaries of the Holy See of what they ought to obſerve in the executing of their Commiſſion, and prohibits the trying of Cauſes in Monaſteries. This is the Subject Matter of ten Chapters of this Council,

The Council of Ruffec, 1258.

The Council of Montpellier in the Year 1258.

The Council of Montpellier, 1258.

JAmes Archbiſhop of Narbonne revived in a Synod held at Montpellier, the ſixth of September 1258. the following Decrees.

The Firſt is againſt thoſe who violate the Rights and Liberties of Churches and Church-men.

The ſecond prohibits the Biſhops from granting the Tonſure, or Holy Orders to thoſe who are not of their Dioceſs, and enjoins them not to confer it on Perſons under 20 Years of Age, who require it out of a Senſe of Devotion, and to ſerve the Church, and who have ſome Tincture of the clerical Learning.

The third declares the Clerks who do not live clerically, and who are concerned in any ſecular Buſineſs, to be depriv'd of their Immunities and Privileges.

The fourth imports, that thoſe who ſhall interdict or excommunicate any Perſon as Delegates or Sub-delegates of the Holy See, ſhall ſhew their Commiſſion.

The fifth, that the Jews may not exact Uſury.

he ſixth renews the ſecond Canon of the Council of Bourdeaux in the Year 1255, againſt Queſtors.

The ſeventh orders the Execution and Publication of theſe Orders.

The eighth imports, that the Decree againſt thoſe who ſeize on the Goods of the Church, ſhall be publiſhed every Sunday at the Homily.

The Council of Montpellier, 1258.

The Council of Cologne in the Year 1260.

The Council of Cologne, 1260.

COnrad Archbiſhop of Cologne publiſhed in the Year 1260, ſeveral Conſtitutions for the reforming of Church-men and Monks. He therein revives the Canons againſt Clerks who keep Concubines, againſt the ſimoniacal and merchandizing Clergy: He orders, that they ſhall be able at leaſt to read and ſing the Praiſes of God. He recommends to them the being habited clerically. He makes ſeveral Orders about the Lives and Offices of Canons. Laſtly, he makes ſeveral particular Orders in the ſecond Part about the monaſtical Life. There are fourteen of theſe Rules for the Clerks, and twenty eight for the Monks.

The Council of Cologne, 1260.

The Council of Arles in the Year 1260.

The Council of Arles, 1260.

THis Council was held by Florence Archbiſhop of Arles, and conſiſted of the Biſhops of his Province. In the Preface there is an Account of the Errors of thoſe who are ſtiled Joachites, who defended the Doctrine of a Book called, The eternal Goſpel, and they are condemn'd in the firſt Canon.

In the ſecond 'tis order'd, that the Curates ſhall teach their Pariſhioners the Form of baptizing Infants in caſe of Neceſſity.

In

The Council of Arles, 1260.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

In the third, 'tis order'd, that they who administer, and those who receive the Sacrament of Confirmation ought to be at the Feast.

In the fourth, 'tis forbidden to contract Marriage without the Authority of the Church.

In the fifth 'tis order'd, that there shall be at least perpetual Vicars in all Parish-Churches.

In the sixth, that the Office of the Trinity shall be celebrated the Sunday after Whitsuntide.

By the seventh, 'tis prohibited to make use of Torches of Wood in Churches; and 'tis order'd, that they shall make use of Wax tapers.

In the eighth 'tis order'd, that the Jews shall be distinguished from the Christians by some Mark.

In the ninth, the Clerks who have Benefices are prohibited from exercising the Functions of Advocates in a Lay-Court.

In the tenth, the Monks and Regular Canons are prohibited from receiving any Salary for their Preaching.

In the eleventh, the Regular Canons are ordered to live according to the Rule of St. Augustine, to eat in common in one and the same Refectory, and to wear a Habit agreeable to their Condition.

The twelfth is against an Abuse which was then practised by the Knights-Templars, who being themselves and their Servants exempted from the Jurisdiction of Ordinaries, bestow'd that Quality on several Clerks who still retain'd their Habit, that so they likewise might be exempted from the Jurisdiction of their Bishop. This Council orders, that the Exemption shall only extend to those who are really of that Order, and that the others shall be subject to the Correction and Jurisdiction of the Ordinaries.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

In the thirteenth 'tis order'd, that religious Persons shall be settled in the Hospitals to take care of them.

The fourteenth imports, that no Credit shall be given to the Deeds by which the Bishop raises Money, unless seal'd with his own Seal.

In the fifteenth, the Monks are prohibited from admitting Laicks into their Churches on Sundays or Holy-days, and from Preaching in the Time of the Parochial Divine Service.

In the sixteenth, the Penitentiaries who are sent into Parishes to absolve Men in such Cases as are reserved to the Bishop, are enjoined not to hear any Confessions, but in such Cases; and to refer them in other Cases to the Curate.

The seventeenth is against those who use any Force to keep their Relations or Friends in Benefices, or to cause them to be elected into them.

The other Canons of this Council are lost.

The Council of Cognac, in the Year 1260.

The Council of Cognac, 1260.

Peter de Roscidavella who in the Year 1259. succeeded Gerard de Malemort, in the Archbishoprick of Bourdeaux, held a provincial Council in the Year 1260. at Cognac, wherein the following Decrees were published.

The first prohibits the holding of nocturnal Assemblies, called Vigils, in the Churches and Church-yards, because several lewd things were committed in them, and sometimes Murder; which obliged them to send for the Bishops, to reconcile those Churches. However, it permits Luminaries and other Acts of Devotion which were us'd to be observ'd.

The second abolishes the Balls which were us'd to be kept in Churches on Innocent's Day, and the Custom of choosing on that Day one of the Company, on whom they conferr'd the Title of Bishop.

The third orders, that the Revenues of vacant Churches shall be reserv'd for the Successors.

The fourth, that the Commendams and Collations of vacant Benefices shall belong to the Bishop or Archbishop.

The fifth prohibits the Curates from marrying of Women of another Parish, without the Consent of their Curate.

The sixth prohibits the admitting of Priests of another Diocess to the Celebration of the Holy Mysteries.

The seventh prohibits Cock-fighting, which was a Kind of Sport practis'd in Schools.

The Council of Cognac, 1260.

The eighth is a Revival of the Orders about the Habits of Ecclesiasticks.

The ninth prohibits the giving the Holy Chrism to exempt Persons who will not pay to the Bishop of their Diocess what they owe him; and from administring the Sacraments to those who are under their Jurisdiction.

The tenth orders the beneficed Clergy who are absent for their Studies or for some other lawful Cause with the Leave of their Bishop, to put Vicars into their Benefices, to whom they shall allow a sufficient Pension for their Maintenance.

The eleventh enjoyns the Patrons to allow convenient Salaries to the Curates who depend on them.

The next Canon orders, that those who have Priories shall maintain two Monks in each.

The thirteenth prohibits the Priests from holding Cures by Lease.

The fourteenth revives the Prohibitions against laying new Pensions on Churches.

The fifteenth and sixteenth prohibit the interring any Corps out of the Parish.

The seventeenth orders, that the Curates shall have a particular House of their own.

The eighteenth and nineteenth renew the Constitutions of the former Councils concerning Tithes, and enjoyn the Curates to take Possession of the Tithes, under pain of Excommunication and Forfeiture of their Benefices.

The Council of Lambeth, in the Year 1261.

The Council of Lambeth, 1261.

Boniface Archbishop of Canterbury held a Council the Beginning of May 1261. at Lambeth, wherein he made several Constitutions for the Maintenance of the Immunities, Privileges and Liberties of the Church of England. There are likewise several about the Ecclesiastical Judgments and Officers, about Confession and Penance, and about the clerical Tonsure and Crown.

The Council of Cognac, in the Year 1262.

The Council of Cognac, 1262.

Peter de Roscidavella Archbishop of Bourdeaux in the Year 1262. held a Council at Cognac, wherein he order'd:

1. That the Places where any Clerks are detain'd by Force, shall be interdicted.

2. That those who molest the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction shall be excommunicated.

3. That the Lords shall be engaged by Ecclesiastical Censures to force those who slight Excommunications to re-enter into the Communion of the Church.

4. That they shall not absolve the excommunicated, till they have made Satisfaction and Restitution.

5. That during the Interdiction the Parishioners shall be prohibited going to Divine Service in any interdicted Church.

6. That the Archdeacons, Archpriests and Curates shall not cause their Benefices to be serv'd by Vicars.

7. That these Constitutions shall be published every Year in the Synods.

The Council of Bourdeaux in the Year 1262.

The Council of Bourdeaux, 1262.

THe same Archbishop made several other Constitutions of the like Nature, in a Synod held the same Year at Bourdeaux.

The first imports, that the excommunicated shall be esteemed such, till they have received Letters of Absolution from their Bishop.

The second, that those who shall continue in a State of Excommunication during a Year, shall be deemed Heretical.

The third, that a Curate shall not bury one of another Parish.

The fourth, that the Curates shall exhort those who are of Age, to present themselves to receive Confirmation, at the Time of the Bishop's Visitation.

The Council of Bourdeaux, 1262.

The fifth, that those who shall contract clandestine Marriages, both the Ministers and Witnesses shall be excommunicated and suspended ab officio & beneficio, and that those Marriages shall be reckoned clandestine, which are not contracted by the proper Curate or Pastor of the Husband or the Wife with the Consent of the other Curate.

The sixth, that each Curate shall have in his Parish a List of the Excommunicated.

The seventh, that Absolution from Excommunication cannot be granted but by the Judge who issued out the Excommunication, and that in case the excommunicated Person happen to die, after his Death Absolution shall be required of that Judge.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The Council of Nantes, 1264.

The Council of Nantes in the Year 1264.

Vincent de Pilenes, Archbiſhop of Tours, held a Council at Nantes the Tueſday after the Feaſt of St. Peter and St. Paul, and therein made the following Conſtitutions.

By the firſt, the Patrons of Livings are prohibited from engaging themſelves to give any Benefice which is not yet vacant.

By the ſecond, he forbids the diminiſhing the Number of Monks.

By the third, he prohibits the Clergy from Hunting.

By the fourth, he forbids the eſtabliſhing of Vicarages.

By the fifth, he regulates the Treats which ought to be given to Biſhops during their Viſitation.

The ſixth is againſt the Clergy who are not reſident, or hold Pluralities.

The ſeventh exempts the Clergy from paying Taxes.

The eighth prohibits the Eccleſiaſtical Judges from citing by virtue of an extraordinary Power, any Perſons to Places of no Note, and from citing before them any more than four Perſons by virtue of the Clauſe: Et quidem alibi.

The ninth imports, that Proviſion ſhall be made for Eccleſiaſticks againſt Laicks.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The Council of Nantes, 1264.

The Decrees of Engelbert Archbiſhop of Cologne in the Year 1266.

The Decrees of Engelbert 1266.

Engelbert Archbiſhop of Cologne, publiſhed on the 10*th* of May 1266. forty five Canons about the Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction; againſt thoſe who aſſaulted the Perſons of Clergymen, who drew them before ſecular Judges, who hinder'd them in the Exerciſe of their Juriſdiction, who violated the Rights and Immunities of the Churches, ſeized upon their Goods, or kept back the Tithes; againſt excommunicated Perſons who ſlighted the Excommunication or Interdiction, &c. Theſe Decrees were ratified by Henry Archbiſhop of Cologne in the Council which he held in the Year 1322.

The Decrees of Engelbert 1266.

The Council of Vienna in Auſtria, in the Year 1267.

The Council of Vienna 1267.

Guy Cardinal Legate in Germany, held a Council at Vienna in Auſtria, conſiſting of ſix Biſhops, on the 10*th* of May 1267. wherein he publiſhed twenty one Heads for the reforming the Diſcipline of the Churches of Prague and Salzbourg.

In the firſt, he orders the Clerks to live and be cloath'd clerically.

In the ſecond, he enjoyns the Biſhops not to be any Charge to their inferior Clergy in their Viſitations.

By the third, he recommends Continency to the Clergy, and orders the puniſhing of thoſe who kept Concubines.

The fourth and fifth are againſt thoſe who offer any Violence to the Perſons or Eſtates of Church-men.

The ſixth is againſt thoſe who hold Pluralities without a Diſpenſation.

The ſeventh is againſt Laicks who are in Poſſeſſion of Tithes.

The eighth is againſt Uſurers.

The ninth is againſt the Clerks who oppoſe by Force the Correction of their Superiors, and againſt Patrons who beſtow Benefices on Perſons under the Age of eighteen.

The tenth is againſt thoſe who ſeize on the Goods of the Church during the Vacancy.

The eleventh imports, that the Lay-Patrons ſhall not inſtitute into Benefices, but only the Ordinaries.

The twelfth, that the Curates are obliged to actual and perſonal Reſidence on their Benefices.

The thirteenth orders the Biſhop of Prague and the Biſhops of the Province of Salzbourg, to viſit the Monaſteries of the Black-Friars, being attended with the Monks of the Order of Ciſteaux.

The fourteenth prohibits the Abbots from conſecrating Chalices, Patins, and from bleſſing the Holy Veſtments, and from performing any of the Epiſcopal Functions.

The five laſt are about the Jews.

The Council of Vienna 1267.

The Council of London in the Year 1268.

The Council of London, 1268.

Otobon Cardinal Legate of the Holy See in England, held a Council at London in the Year 1268. wherein he publiſhed fifty four Decrees upon ſeveral Points of Church-diſcipline.

The firſt contains an Inſtruction about the Sacrament of Baptiſm.

The ſecond forbids the demanding any thing for the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, and preſcribes the Form of Abſolution.

The third orders, that the Churches ſhall be conſecrated.

The fourth prohibits the Clergy from bearing Arms.

The fifth is about the Manner how Clerks are to be habited.

The ſixth and ſeventh prohibit them from being Advocates, or Judges in ſecular Cauſes.

The eighth renews the Laws againſt the Clerks who keep Concubines.

The ninth orders thoſe that are advanced to Benefices with the Cure of Souls, to take Prieſts Orders forthwith, and to be reſident.

The tenth and eleventh relate to the Collation of Benefices, to the Qualifications requiſite in Perſons who are to be preſented to them, and fix Penalties on Intruders, who get themſelves to be preſented to a Benefice before 'tis vacant.

The twelfth prohibits the dividing a Benefice into ſeveral, and the Impoſition of new Penſions.

The thirteenth denounces Excommunication againſt the Clergy, who ſhall violate the Sanctuary of Churches.

The fourteenth is againſt thoſe who obſtruct the Celebration of Matrimony.

The fifteenth relates to laſt Wills and Teſtaments, and obliges the Executor to renounce the Right which he has to plead in his Juriſdiction.

The ſixteenth prohibits Patrons from retaining the Fruits of vacant Benefices, if they have not a Right to it by ſome acquired Title, or by ancient Cuſtom.

The ſeventeenth imports, that the Chaplains of Chappels granted without prejudicing the Rights of Pariſh Churches, ſhall be bound to give to the Curates the Offerings which are made in thoſe Chappels.

The eighteenth enjoins the beneficed Clergy, to keep the Buildings of their Benefices in Repair; and if they do it not, it allows the Biſhops to ſee that it be done at their Coſt and Charges.

The nineteenth prohibits the demanding the Duty of Procuration, unleſs they actually viſit, and renews the Canon of the fourth General Lateran Council upon that Subject.

The twentieth prohibits the Archdeacons from taking Money for a ſcandalous and notorious Offence, and from exchanging a canonical Penalty, for a pecuniary Mulct.

The twenty firſt prohibits the leaſing out of Eccleſiaſtical Dignities, Benefices, or Offices.

The twenty ſecond declares the Biſhops obliged to Reſidence, both by Divine and Eccleſiaſtical Laws.

The twenty third prohibits the Biſhops from granting a Church of their Dioceſs to another Biſhop, or to a Monaſtery, if it be not out of Charity, and to relieve a very poor Church.

The twenty fourth imports, that the Goods of thoſe who die inteſtate, ſhall be converted to pious Uſes.

The four next Canons concern the judiciary Forms.

The twenty ninth orders, that when Abſolution ſhall be given from Cenſures, it ſhall be publiſhed.

The thirtieth relates to the collating of Benefices, and prohibits Pluralities.

The thirty firſt prohibits Commendams.

The thirty ſecond declares the Preſentations of Benefices made to Perſons who already have Benefices which oblige them to Reſidence, to be null and void.

The thirty third, to hinder Colluſion in Reſignations of Benefices, prohibits the reſtoring a Benefice to him who has reſigned it.

The thirty fourth declares all the Compacts made for the Preſentations of Benefices, and the Penſions newly impos'd, to be null.

The thirty fifth prohibits the holding of Markets, or exerciſing any other Trade in Churches.

The thirty ſixth orders Proceſſions and ſolemn Prayers for the Peace of the Kingdom, and of the Holy Land.

The thirty ſeventh, that theſe Statutes ſhall be read every Year in the Provincial Councils.

The Council of London, 1268.

The

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The following Articles relate to the regular Canons and Monks, about the Profeſſion and the Time of the Noviceſhip; the Obſervation of the Decretals of the Popes about the Monks, the Prohibitions againſt the Monks having any thing de proprio, the Veſtments, Churches, Utenſils, the Manner of the Monks Living, their Number and Employments, the Cloyſtering and the Affairs of Nuns. The Monks are deſired to confeſs themſelves and to celebrate Maſs often.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The Ordinance of St. Lewis in the Year 1268.

The Ordinance of St. Lewis, 1268.

THe Subſtance of this Ordinance is as follows, Lewis King of France, ad perpetuam rei memoriam, for the Safety and Tranquility of the Church within our Dominions, for the Increaſe of Divine Worſhip, for the Salvation of the faithful Chriſtians, and for obtaining the Succour of Almighty God, to whoſe Power alone our Kingdom always has been ſubject, and to whom alone we would that it ſhould be always ſubject: We have decreed and order'd by this moſt wiſe Decree, which ſhall be perpetual:

That the Prelates of the Churches within our Kingdom, and the Patrons and uſual Collaters of Benefices ſhall fully enjoy their Privilege, and that each of them ſhall preſerve his Juriſdiction.

Item, That the Cathedral and other Churches of our Kingdom ſhall have free Elections, and that they ſhall be duly executed.

Item, We will and command, that the Sin of Simony, the Peſt of the Church, be entirely baniſhed our Kingdom.

Item, We will and command, that the Promotions, Collations, Proviſions and Diſpoſals of Prelacies, Dignities, and of other Eccleſiaſtical Benefices and Offices of the Kingdom, be made according to the Orders and Determination of the common Law, of the Holy Councils, and of the ancient Decrees of the Holy Fathers.

Item, We prohibit the levying or raiſing the too burdenſom Taxes and Exactions impoſed, or to be impoſed by the Court of Rome on our Kingdom, which have miſerably impoveriſh'd it; unleſs it be for a very urgent Cauſe of Religion, an indiſpenſible Neceſſity, and by our voluntary and expreſs Conſent, and by the Conſent of the National Church.

Item, We renew and confirm the Liberties, Franchiſes, Prerogatives, Rights and Privileges granted by the Kings of France our Predeceſſors, of bleſſed Memory, or by us to the Churches, Monaſteries, Places of Piety, Monks, or Eccleſiaſtical Perſons.

Afterwards he orders all his Officers to take care to execute this Ordinance, which bears Date May, in the Year 1268.

Some queſtion the Truth of this Conſtitution, but without Reaſon: And we find it quoted in the Articles preſented by the Parliament to Lewis XI. at the Convention of the States at Tours in the Year 1483. and in the Act of Appeal made by the Univerſity of Paris in the Year 1491.

The Ordinance of St. Lewis, 1268.

The Council of Chateau-Gonthier in the Year 1268.

The Council of Chateau-Gonthier, 1268.

Vincent de Pilenes Archbiſhop of Tours held a Council in Auguſt 1268. at Chatean-Gonthier, wherein he reviv'd the Decrees of the former Councils againſt thoſe who ſeiz'd on Church Lands, who obſtructed the Exerciſe of Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, and who continued excommunicated during a Year; to prevent the riſling of vacant Priories: That the Monks ſhall not keep their Regiſtry out of the Monaſtery; about the Habits which Archdeacons and Deacons ought to wear, and about the Power of the Biſhop, to abſolve Men from Excommunications. They are eight Articles in all.

The Council of Chateau-Gonthier, 1268.

The Council of Angers in the Year 1269.

The Council of Angers, 1269.

THere are two Canons of the Council held at Angers in June 1269. The one againſt thoſe who hinder any from making Legacies to Churches: And the other to prevent the Clergy from being Advocates in ſecular Courts.

The Council of Angers, 1269.

The Council of Sens in the Year 1269.

The Council of Sens, 1269.

IN the ſame Year a Council was held at Sens, the Saturday before the Feſtival of Simon and Jude, in which they revived the Eccleſiaſtical Decrees againſt the Clergy who kept Women in their Houſes, againſt Uſurers, the Canon call'd Omnis utriuſque ſexus, the Prohibitions againſt citing the Clergy before ſecular Judges, and againſt the Abuſes of Privileges.

The Council of Sens, 1269.

The Council of Compeign in the Year 1270.

The Council of Compeign 1270.

John of Courtnay Archbiſhop of Rheims, on the Monday before Aſcenſion-day, 1270. held a Council at Compeign, conſiſting of ſeven Biſhops of his Province, wherein he publiſhed a very ſevere Decree againſt thoſe who ſeized on the Goods of Churches, againſt their Abetters, and thoſe that harbour'd them, or receiv'd the Goods which they had taken.

The Council of Compeign 1270.

The Council of Avignon in the Year 1270.

The Council of Avignon, 1270.

THe ſame Year Bertrand of Malferrat Archbiſhop of Arles, held a Council at Avignon the 15th of July, in which he order'd:

1. That thoſe who alienate the Goods of Churches without the Conſent of the Dioceſan Biſhop, ſhall be forced by Cenſures to conceal ſuch Contracts.

2. That the Money bequeath'd to be made uſe of according to the Will of the Executors, be imployed in pious Works, and according to the Advice of the Biſhop.

3. That the Archbiſhops and Biſhops ſhall aſſiſt each other in publiſhing and executing their Sentences.

4. That thoſe who have Benefices with the Cure of Souls, ſhall take Prieſts Orders within a Year, except Archdeacons, for whom 'tis enough to be only in Deacon's Orders.

5. That the Expences in receiving the Legates and Nuncio's of the Pope, ſhall be defray'd by the whole Dioceſs.

6. That the Biſhops and Chapters ſhall give competent Revenues to Church-men ſettled in Perſonates, or Dignities.

7. That the Clergy who have Recourſe to the ſecular Power againſt their Biſhop, ſhall be excommunicated, and if they ſlight the Excommunication, they ſhall loſe their Benefices.

8. That the Clergy who have by Words or Actions injur'd a Biſhop, a Provoſt, or any other Perſon plac'd in Authority, ſhall be incapable to hold any Benefice in their Church, till after they have made them Satisfaction.

The Council of Avignon, 1270.

The Council of St. Quentin in the Year 1271.

The Council of St. Quentin, 1271.

IN the Year 1271. the See of the Church of Rheims being vacant, Milo Biſhop of Soiſſons appointed a provincial Council according to Cuſtom, to be held at St. Quentin. The Canons of Rheims oppos'd it, pretending it was their Right to appoint it: The Difference being adjuſted, the Council met, in which they made ſeveral Orders about the Privileges of Churches and Church-men.

The Council of St. Quentin, 1271.

The Councils held during the Thirteenth Century.

The Council of Rennes in the Year 1273.

The Council of Rennes in 1273.

John de Montfereau Archbiſhop of Tours the Monday after Aſcenſion-Day 1273, held a Council at Rennes, wherein he renew'd the Orders againſt thoſe who abus'd Eccleſiaſticks, and Monks, who rob them of their Goods, or ſeiſe upon the Goods of the Churches; and the Decree of the Council of Chateau-Gonthier againſt thoſe who rifled Priories. This is contain'd in ſeven Articles.

The Councils held during the Thirteenth Century.

The Second General Council of Lyons in the Year 1274.

The Council of Rennes in 1273.

The ſecond General Council of Lyons in 1274.

Gregory X. appointed this Council two Years before it was held, for three Reaſons which are taken notice of in his Bull of Indiction. 1. For the Reunion of the Greek Church, with whom they were in a fair Way of Agreement. 2. For the Relief of the Holy Land. 3. And for the reforming the Church Diſcipline and the Lives of the Clergy. The Pope himſelf preſided there in Perſon. The Latin Patriarchs of Conſtantinople and Antioch were likewiſe there, with about five hundred Biſhops, ſeventy Abbots, and a thouland other inferior Prelates: The Ambaſſadors of the Kings of France, Germany and Sicily, and thoſe of Michael Palæologus Emperor of the Eaſt were ſent thither by their Maſters. James King of Arragon was preſent at the firſt Seſſion; but becauſe the Pope would not crown him, till he had paid the Tribute which his Father had engag'd to give every Year to the Holy See, he retir'd in a great Paſſion with the Pope.

The firſt Seſſion of the Council was held in the great Church of Lyons the ſeventh of May 1274. After the uſual Prayers the Pope made a Speech, and propos'd to the Aſſembly, the three Reaſons for which he had appointed that Council, and adjourn'd the ſecond Seſſion to Monday the eighteenth of the ſame Month. He made another Harangue in the ſecond Seſſion, and adjourn'd the Council to the eight and twentieth of the ſame Month, after he had diſmiſs'd ſeveral of the inferior Prelates. Between theſe two Seſſions the Pope prevail'd upon the Biſhops and Abbots to give the Tenth of their Revenues for ſix Years, for the Relief of the Holy Land.

The third Seſſion was not held till the ſeventh of June, and then the Cardinal of Oſtia made a Speech to the Council: They therein read part of the Conſtitutions of this Council about Diſcipline, and afterwards the Pope having made a Speech, permitted the Prelates to retire and go abroad, but not above ſix Leagues from thence. He did not appoint a Day for the next Seſſion, becauſe it was uncertain when the Ambaſſadors of the Greeks would arrive. They came the Twenty fourth of that Month, preſented their Letters to the Pope, and were very well receiv'd by him: They were preſent at High-Maſs the 28*th*. of the ſame Month, in which they ſung the Goſpel and the Creed in Latin and Greek, and the Greeks repeated thrice the Article of the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt from the Father and the Son. Between this and the next Seſſion the Pope oblig'd the Biſhop of Liege, and the Abbot of St. Paul at Rome, accus'd of Irregularities, to lay down their Dignities. He likewiſe gave Audience to the Envoys of the Tartars.

The fourth Seſſion was held the ſixth of July: Therein the Letters of the Grecian Emperor were read, and one of the Ambaſſadors ſwore to the Re-union, and Obedience to the Church of Rome. Afterwards they ſung Te Deum, the Creed with the Article of the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt from the Father and the Son, and with the other Prayers. The Pope communicated the Letters of the King of Tartars to the Council, and concluded this Seſſion with a Speech; appointing the fifth Seſſion for the Tueſday following. It was put off to the ſixteenth Day of the Month, becauſe the Pope negotiated in particular with the Prelates and Cardinals, to get them to paſs a Conſtitution which he had drawn up about the Election of a Pope.

The fifth Seſſion was uſher'd in with the ſolemn baptizing of one of the Tartar-Ambaſſadors. They therein read ſeveral other Conſtitutions, and put off the reſt till the Morrow, on which was held the ſixth and laſt Seſſion. They therein made made an end of reading the two Canons which remain'd; after which the Pope made a Speech, wherein he declaim'd againſt diſorderly Church-Men, and threatned if they did not reform to proceed againſt them. He promis'd to apply likewiſe Remedies, whereby to oblige the Curates to Reſidence in their Pariſh-Churches, and to ſupply them only with able Perſons. The Council afterwards was concluded with the uſual Prayers.

The Conſtitutions read and publiſh'd in this Council by Pope Gregory, which he order'd, and which ſhould be obſerv'd and inſerted in the Decretals under Heads, are one and thirty in all.

The firſt has for its Title De Trinitate & Fide Catholicâ; concerning the Trinity and the Catholick Faith, It is therein declar'd, that the Holy Ghoſt proceeds from the Father and the Son, as from one ſingle Principle and by one ſingle Spiration: And they are condemn'd who deny that the Holy Ghoſt proceeds from the Father and the Son, and thoſe who dare averr, that he proceeds from the Father and the Son, as from two Principles.

The ſecond General Council of Lyons in 1274.

The following Articles to the fifteenth are under the Title, Of the Election and Promotion of the Elected.

The ſecond contains ſeveral Rules about the Conclave and the Election of a Pope.

The third obliges thoſe who oppoſe the Elections and Poſtulations, to declare in their Letters of Appeal the Cauſes and Reaſons of the Nullity, which they think fit to make uſe of, and prohibits them from alledging any others afterwards.

In the fourth, a Perſon elected to a Benefice, is prohibited from taking Poſſeſſion thereof till his Election be confirm'd.

The fifth declares, that he who is elected, ſhall be bound to to give his Conſent to the Election within a Month, reckoning from the Day on which the Election ſhall be notify'd to him, and to get it confirm'd within three Months.

The ſixth imports, that thoſe who give their Vote for an unworthy Perſon, ought not to forfeit the Power of electing, unleſs the Perſon they vote for be elected; tho' their Action be very criminal.

The ſeventh, that he who has given his Vote for a Perſon, or conſented to his Election, is not to be admitted to oppoſe it afterwards; unleſs he diſcovers in that Perſon ſome Vice or Defect which lay conceal'd before.

The eighth, that when there are two thirds of Votes for one Perſon, the other third is not to be allow'd to object any thing againſt the Electors, or the elected.

In the ninth 'tis declar'd, that tho' Pope Alexander III has with Reaſon plac'd the Cauſes of the Elections of Biſhops in the Number of greater Cauſes, yet if it happens that an Appeal be injudiciouſly made for an apparently frivolous Cauſe; thoſe Kinds of Appeals ſhall not be brought before the Holy See: But that 'tis requiſite in order to have any Cauſe brought immediately before it, that the Appeal be grounded upon a probable Reaſon, and which would upon Proof appear to be lawful: That the Parties are allow'd to deſiſt from the Appeal, provided there be no trick in ſuch a deſiſting; for if the Judges to whom it belong'd to take Cognizance thereof, do find that there is any, they ought to enjoin the Parties to appear before the Holy See within a convenient time.

The tenth imports, that if it be objected againſt a Perſon, that he is incapable becauſe of his Ignorance; it ſhall be referr'd to a Tryal, and if in the Iſſue he be found capable, no regard ſhall be had to any of the Reaſons of his Adverſary.

The eleventh iſſues out Excommunication againſt thoſe who do any wrong to the Electors; becauſe they would not give their Votes for thoſe whom they recommended to them.

The twelfth likewiſe iſſues out Excommunication againſt thoſe who would de Novo take up the Regalia, the Care and the Title of the Defender of Churches and Monaſteries, or who favour thoſe who do ſo: And for thoſe who enjoy thoſe Privileges, either by Virtue of the Foundation or by any ancient Cuſtom, they are prohibited from abuſing their Power, and from ſeiſing during the Vacancy, the Goods of the Church which are not Part of the Incomes or Revenues thereof, and from ſuffering the Goods of the Church to be rifled.

The thirteenth declares, the Preſentations of Cures made by Perſons under five and twenty Years of Age, to be Null and Void, and obliges the Curates to Reſidence, and to take Prieſt's Orders in the Year of their Promotion.

The fourteenth prohibits the giving a Curacy in Commendam to a Perſon under Age, or for above ſix Months.

The fifteenth has for its Title, Of the Seaſons of Ordinations, and of the Qualifications of thoſe who are to be Ordain'd. They are therein ſuſpended from the Power of Ordaining for a whole Year, who ſhall ordain the Clerks of another Dioceſs.

The ſixteenth has for its Title, Of Bigamy. The Pope therein determines, that thoſe who have been marry'd twice, have forfeited all the Privileges of the Clergy, and that they are prohibited from having ſo much as the clerical Habit and Tonſure.

The two next are under the Title, Of the Office of Ordinary Judges.

The ſeventeenth imports, that the Chapters who would be diſcharg'd from ſeveral Offices, ought before they cauſe it to to ceaſe, to exhibit a Declaration in writing of the Reaſons why they are willing to have that Office ceaſe: And that 'tis not lawful to throw down the Images and Statues of the Virgin Mary, and of the other Saints.

The Councils held during the Thirteenth Century.

The eighteenth imports, that all thoſe who have Pluralities of Dignities, or Benefices with the Cure of Souls, ſhall bring their Diſpenſations to the Ordinaries, and if they ſhall not be found to be Canonical; then they ſhall appear before the Holy See. It likewiſe prohibits the Ordinaries from beſtowing ſuch ſort of Benefices on thoſe who have the like already.

The nineteenth has for its Title, de Poſtulatione: It relates to the Oath which Advocates and Proctors are bound to take.

The twentieth, under the Title, Of what is done through force or fear; declares the Abſolutions of Excommunication extorted by Force or by Fear, to be Null and Void.

The twenty firſt moderates the Canon of Clement V. of Benefices vacant in Curiâ, the Preſentation of which belongs to the Pope, by granting the Ordinaries leave to collate them within a Month.

The twenty ſecond prohibits the Biſhops from alienating the Goods of Churches in any manner whatever, without the Conſent of the Chapter, and declares the Alienations otherwiſe made to be Null and Void.

The twenty third cancels and puts down all the Orders of Mendicant Friars eſtabliſh'd ſince the Lateran Council under Innocent III. which have not been approv'd by the Holy See, and with reſpect to thoſe which have been approv'd of by the Holy See, he allows thoſe who are admitted Monks to live in their Houſes; but forbids them to admit Novices, and to make any new Acquiſitions: And as to thoſe Houſes and Eſtates which they have acquir'd, he would have them be reſerv'd for the uſe of the Holy Land. He declares, that this Conſtitution does not extend to the Orders of Minor and Jacobine Friars, and allows the Orders of the Auguſtine Carmelites and Hermits eſtabliſh'd before this Council to remain in their preſent State and Condition, till there ſhall be ſome new Order made upon their account. Laſtly, He permits thoſe of the Orders which are not approv'd of to go into another Order, provided notwithſtanding that no entire Order, nor Monaſtery ſhall enter into another without ſpecial Leave from the Holy See.

The Councils held during the Thirteenth Century.

The twenty fourth renews the Prohibitions of exacting or even receiving any thing for the Right of Procuration, without perſonal Viſitation.

The twenty fifth is about the Sanctity of Churches: 'Tis therein forbidden to hold Aſſemblies, Pleadings, Markets, &c. in conſecrated Places.

The twenty ſixth and ſeventh are againſt Uſurers, who are condemn'd to very ſevere Penalties.

The twenty eighth aboliſhes the Uſe of Repriſals.

The three laſt Canons are about Excommunication. The Firſt imports, that the canonical Admonition ought to expreſs by Name thoſe who are to be excommunicated, and that it ought to be done three times one after another within the ſpace of ſome Days. The Second, that the Abſolutions ad Cautelam cannot be of force in the Sentences of General Interdictions of Towns or other Places. The third which is the thirty firſt and laſt Canon of this Council, declares thoſe Men excommunicated who would force the Eccleſiaſtical Judges by the Seiſure of their Temporalities to revoke the Sentences of Interdiction or Excommunication which they have paſs'd.

Theſe Conſtitutions bear date November the firſt, in the third Year of the Pontificate of Gregory X.

The Council of Saltzburg in the Years 1274 and 1281.

The Council of Saltzburg in 1274. & 1281.

Rederick Archbiſhop of Saltzburg and Legate of the Holy See, in the Year 1274, held a Provincial Council in his Metropolis, wherein he publiſh'd the Canons of the Second General Council of Lyons, and order'd the reading the Conſtitutions publiſh'd by Guy Cardinal and Legate of the Holy See, in the Council held at Vienna in Auſtria in the Year 1267, to which he added twenty four Articles.

By the firſt, he orders the Abbots of the Order of Saint Benedict to hold provincial Chapters every Year for the reforming the Monaſtical Diſcipline.

By the ſecond, he orders, that the run-away Monks ſhall be fetch'd back again, that thoſe who commit enormous Crimes ſhall be put into Priſon. He prohibits Abbots from diſpenſing from their Obedience the Monks who paſs into a more Auſtere Order.

In the third, he reproves the Abuſe of ſeveral Abbots who ſent Monks into other Monaſteries for ſlight Faults: He orders, that they ſhall puniſh them for their Faults in the Monaſteries where they have committed them, and that they ſhall not make the Monks change their Monaſtery unleſs the Biſhop conſents to it.

In the fourth, he prohibits the Abbots the Uſe of pontifical Habits, the Bleſſing of Holy Veſtments and Veſſels, the Power of granting Indulgencies and the other Sacerdotal Functions, if they do not juſtifie their Privileges in the firſt provincial Council.

In the fifth, he prohibits the Regular Canons the ſame thing, and leaves the other Abuſes to be reform'd at a provincial Chapter.

In the ſixth, he repeals the Powers given to Monks of confeſſing, of granting Indulgencies, or of doing any other Sacerdotal Functions.

The ſeventh imports, that thoſe who have Pluralities of Benefices, ſhall be contented with the laſt that has been given them, and ſhall be turned out of the reſt, unleſs before the holding of the firſt provincial Council, they make it appear, that they have obtain'd a Diſpenſation to hold them from the Superior who has the Right to grant it.

The eighth obliges all the Clergy who have Benefices with the Cure of Souls to Reſidence, on pain of forfeiting the Incomes and the Benefit of the Temporalities of their Benefices.

The ninth ſubjects to the ſame Penalty thoſe who take not Orders within the time preſcrib'd by the Canons.

The tenth orders, that in Benefices where there ought to be Vicars, a competent Stipend ſhall be allow'd them for their Maintenance.

The eleventh revives the Laws about the Clerical Tonſure and Habit.

The twelfth and thirteenth ſuſpend the Clerks who frequent Taverns or play at Dice.

The fourteenth excommunicates thoſe who ſhall break a Priſon, in favour of a Clerk impriſon'd by the Order of his Biſhop.

The fifteenth prohibits Men and Women from taking upon them the religious Habit, if they do not make Profeſſion of a Rule in an Order already approv'd, and deſign to enter a Monaſtery.

†

The Council of Saltzburg in 1274. & 1281.

The ſixteenth prohibits the giving any thing to Vagrant Scholars.

The ſeventeenth prohibits certain Sports which were kept in Churches.

The eighteenth orders the Biſhops to ſee that the Cenſures paſs'd by other Biſhops be obſerv'd.

The nineteenth imports, that they ſhall cut their Stubble in all the Province on the Feſtivals of St. Rupert, St, Vigilius, and St Auguſtine Patrons of Saltzburg.

The twentieth prohibits the Monks from chooſing Confeſſors out of their Order, unleſs it be by the Biſhop's Leave.

The twenty firſt orders, that the Clerks or Monks ſhall be caſt into Priſon, who make uſe of the Secular Powers to exempt themſelves from the Correction of their Biſhop, and declares them unworthy to poſſeſs Benefices or Eccleſiaſtical Offices.

The twenty ſecond imports, that they ought to make uſe of a general Interdiction to puniſh the Impriſonment or Perſecution of a Biſhop.

The twenty third prohibits the receiving of Curacies from the Hands of Laicks, and from entring into Poſſeſſion of them before they are inſtituted and inducted by the Biſhop.

The twenty fourth prohibits the Advocates of Churches from moleſting them, and exacting more than their Dues of them.

The ſame Archbiſhop held another provincial Council at Saltzburg in the Year 1281, conſiſting of fourteen Biſhops, in which he publiſh'd the following Canons.

The firſt, which prohibits the Alienation of Abby Lands, unleſs it be with the Conſent of the Biſhop and the Monks.

The ſecond, which orders, that the Superiors ſhall every Year give an Account to the Biſhop of the Uſe that has been made of the Revenue of the Monaſteries.

The third, which preſcribes to the Monks the Faſting from the Feſtival of St. Martin to Chriſtmaſs, and the Beginning of Lent at Quinquageſima Sunday.

The fourth is againſt the Monks who have any thing de Proprio.

The fifth and ſixth relate to the Habits and Behaviour of the Monks.

The ſeventh revives the Canons for holding general Chapters for the Order of St. Benedict.

The eighth moderates the Charges of the Viſitors.

The ninth is againſt the Nuns who do not live in Common, though ſhut up in one and the ſame Monaſtery.

The tenth prohibits the Plurality of Benefices with the Cure of Souls.

The eleventh obliges the Titulars of Benefices to reſide, and puts down the Vicars.

The twelfth is about the Rights pretended to by the Patrons of Churches.

The thirteenth is againſt thoſe who offer any Violence to the Clerks.

The fourteenth condemns thoſe who are the Cauſe of a Church's or Church-Yard's Pollution by ſhedding of Blood, to pay the Charges of its being reconcil'd.

The fifteenth is againſt the Patrons or Judges, who ſeize on the Demeans of the Benefices of deceas'd Clerks.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The ſixteenth orders the Prayers for Peace, namely the Pſalm, call'd Domine quid Multiplicáſti, the Lord's Prayer; the Verſicle, call'd Fiat pax in Virtute tuâ, the Collect call'd Deus à quo Sancta Deſideria, which ſhall be ſaid every Day at Maſs after the Agnus Dei.

The ſeventeenth is againſt the Clerks who forge Writings.

The eighteenth prohibits the Clerks from receiving Churches at the Hands of Laicks.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The Council of Arles in the Year 1275.

The Council of Arles in 1275.

THis Council was held by Bertrand of St. Martin Archbiſhop of Arles.

The four firſt Canons are loſt.

In the fifth 'tis order'd, that the Biſhop ſhall cauſe the Sentences of Excommunication and Interdiction paſs'd by their Brethren to be publiſh'd and obſerved.

The ſixth imports, that an Inventory ſhall be made of the Goods of Churches and of Hoſpitals.

The ſeventh prohibits the Selling or Mortgaging the Chalices, or other Ornaments of the Church, without the Biſhop's leave.

The eighth imports, that the laſt Wills and Teſtaments ſhall be made in the Preſence of the Curate.

The ninth, that the Curates ſhall take care that the Legacies bequeath'd to pious Uſes, be duly diſcharg'd.

The tenth, that no Perſons ſhall be ſollicited to be interr'd out of their own Pariſh.

The eleventh, that the Rules of the Law in Eccleſiaſtical Affairs ſhall be obſerv'd.

The twelfth contains the Caſes which are to be reſerv'd to the Pope, which are Hereſy, Simony, the Non-obſervation of Excommunication or Interdiction, the Ordination per Saltum, or without the Biſhop's leave, Fires, the touching the Euchariſt or the Holy Chriſm in order to put it to an ill uſe; Homicide, Sacrilege, Inceſts with one's Aunt, Siſter, Kinſwoman or a Nun, the debauching of a Maiden, the Sin againſt Nature, the expoſing of a Child, and Abortion.

The thirteenth contains the Caſes reſerv'd to the Biſhops, or their Penitentiaries; which are falſe Witneſſes, a Marriage contracted by a Perſon who is engag'd on Oath to marry another, they being preſent at the Office of an excommunicated or interdicted Perſon, the Celebration of Divine Service, in an interdicted Place, the burying in an interdicted Church-Yard, the ſeiſing and retaining of Tithes, or of things bequeath'd to the Church by laſt Wills and Teſtaments: The Prieſts are prohibited from granting Abſolution in ſuch Caſes, unleſs thoſe whom they confeſs are at the Point of Death, or uncapable of waiting on the Biſhop or his Penitentiary.

The Council of Arles in 1275.

In the fourteenth and fifteenth, the Clergy are prohibited from buying up Corn to ſell it again for profit.

In the ſixteenth 'tis order'd, that they ſhall have Silver-Chalices in all Churches.

In the ſeventeenth 'tis order'd, that they ſhall re-build the Country-Churches and the Houſes belonging to them.

In the eighteenth, that the Uſurers and Adulterers ſhall be excommunicated every Sunday.

In the nineteenth, that the Curates ſhall keep a Regiſter of the Names of thoſe who preſent themſelves at the Sacrament of Penance during Lent, and that after Eaſter they ſhall give the Biſhop an Account of thoſe who are not confeſs'd, and if there be any Monks who take Confeſſions in the Pariſh, they ſhall give in the Names of thoſe whom they have confeſs'd to the Curate.

In the twentieth, that if one of thoſe who are not confeſs'd to the Curate die within the Year, he ſhall not be interr'd in Holy Ground.

In the twenty firſt, that the Curates ſhall hear the Confeſſions of the Sick, or give leave to the Secular Prieſts or Monks to hear them.

In the twenty ſecond, the Curates are prohibited from leaving their Churches to go into others, before they have given their Biſhop an Account of their Conduct.

The Synodal Statutes of Robert de L'Iſle Biſhop of Durham in the Year 1276.

The Synodal Statutes of Robert de L'Iſle Biſhop of Durham in 1276.

THeſe Statutes contain ſix Articles for the Rights of Tithes and a Sentence of Excommunication againſt all Perſons whatever, who ſhall either directly or indirectly moleſt the Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, or who obſtruct the Execution of its Sentences, or the Execution of the Laſt Wills and Teſtaments.

The Synodal Statutes of Robert de L'Iſle Biſhop of Durham in 1276.

The Council of Saumur in the Year 1276.

The Council of Saumur in 1276.

JOhn de Monſoreau Archbiſhop of Tours, held a provincial Council at Saumur the Monday after the Feſtival of St. John Baptiſt, wherein he publiſh'd fourteen Decrees about the Eccleſiaſtical and Monaſtical Diſcipline.

In the firſt 'tis order'd, that there ſhall be always kept a lighted Taper in the Churches.

In the ſecond 'tis prohibited to put any Cheſts, or prophane Things in Churches.

The third is againſt Plurality of Benefices with the Cure of Souls.

The fourth and fifth concern the Habits of Clerks and Monks.

The ſixth prohibits the Abbeſſes from retaining the Goods of benefic'd Men.

In the ſeventh the Monks are prohibited from having ſeveral Places in diſtinct Monaſteries.

The eighth prohibits the ſending young Monks into any Priories but what are Conventual.

The ninth renews the Laws againſt thoſe who take away the Revenues of Priories.

The tenth prohibits the giving of Priories to Secular Clerks.

The eleventh enjoins the Secular Judges to ſee that Juſtice be done to Eccleſiaſticks.

The twelfth deprives excommunicated Perſons of the Right of bringing any Action in Law, of pleading, or giving any Evidence.

The thirteenth permits the Biſhop to abſolve in ſuch Caſes wherein the Council inflicts the Penalty of Suſpenſion or Excommunication.

The fourteenth orders the Obſervation of the Decrees of the former Councils.

The Council of Saumur in 1276.

The Council of Bourges in the Year 1276.

The Council of Bourges in 1276.

SImon Cardinal of Cecilia Legate of the Holy See, held a Council at Bourges in the Year 1276. and having therein debated on ſeveral Points of Diſcipline, drew up ſixteen Articles of the things determined therein, about the Freedom of Elections, the Power of Delegate-Judges and Ordinaries, Tithes, Laſt Wills and Teſtaments, the Immunities of Churches and other Matters concerning the Eccleſiaſtical Court.

The Council of Bourges in 1276.

The Council of Langeis in the Year 1278.

The Council of Langeis, in 1278.

JOhn de Monſoreau Archbiſhop of Tours held a Council at Langeis, wherein he publiſh'd ſixteen Canons.

The firſt regulates the Dues of Viſitation.

The ſecond prohibits the Arch-Prieſts and Arch-Deacons from having Officials out of Towns.

The third is againſt clandeſtine Marriages.

The fourth prohibits the Prieſts from keeping in their Houſes their Children born of their Concubines, and from bequeathing any thing to them.

The fifth is about Laſt Wills and their Executors, who are prohibited from buying the Goods contain'd in the Laſt Will.

The ſixth declares thoſe who deſpiſe the Keys of the Church unworthy of Legacies.

The ſeventh is againſt thoſe who abuſe the Pope's Letters.

The Council of Langeis, in 1278.

The

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The eighth prohibits the leasing out of Curacies.

The ninth orders, that a General Excommunication shall not be pass'd on all who communicate with excommunicated Persons.

The tenth obliges those who have Rights granted by another, to affirm before the Action be brought, that there is no Fraud in that Grant.

The eleventh prohibits the sending of young Monks into Priories.

The twelfth prohibits the admitting of any more Monks or Nuns than the Monasteries can maintain.

The thirteenth obliges them to put more than one Monk into each Priory.

The fourteenth prohibits the rifling of Priories.

The fifteenth turns the Secular Advocates out of Spiritual Courts.

The Last obliges the Officials to swear that they will take no Bails, and that they will administer Justice faithfully.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The Council of Ponteaudemer in the Year 1279.

The Council of Ponteaudemer in 1279.

William de Fille-Cour Archbishop of Roan, held a provincial Council at Ponteaudemer the Thursday before Ascension-Day in the Year 1279, wherein he made the following Canons about Church-Discipline.

The first imports, that the excommunicated Clergy shall lose the Revenues of their Benefices, and that if they continue Excommunicated during a Year, they shall be turn'd out of the Benefices themselves.

The second, that the Chaplains or Curates who do not celebrate Mass, if they do not amend after they have been admonish'd, shall be turn'd out of their Benefices.

The third, that the Canons of the Councils of Bourges and Lyons against the Disturbers of the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, shall be observ'd.

The fourth, that those who are excommunicated by the Canon, for having abus'd the Clergy, shall be denounc'd such and punish'd, if they do not get themselves absolv'd.

The fifth, that the Canon of the Lateran Council about Confession and the Communion, shall be observ'd.

The sixth, that the Lords or Judges who detain the Clerks to the prejudice of the Demands of the Ecclesiastical Judges, shall be excommunicated.

The seventh, that the personal Causes of Ecclesiasticks shall not be brought before Secular Judges.

The eighth, that the Grand Decimators are bound to repair the Churches.

The ninth, that no Christians shall be Slaves to Jews.

The tenth, that no Vigils nor Dancings shall be kept in Churches or Church-yards.

The eleventh, that the Clergy shall not go a Hunting.

The twelfth, that there shall be the old Number of Monks in Abbies and Priories.

The thirteenth, that the Monks who are in Priories, shall observe the Constitutions of Pope Gregory about abstaining from Meats, Confessions, Fasts, &c. and that they shall be forc'd thereto by Censures.

The fourteenth, that the Regulars shall not dwell with Seculars, unless by the Abbot's leave.

The fifteenth, that they shall borrow nothing without the the Abbot's consent.

The sixteenth, that the Rural Deans shall not issue out any Excommunication or Suspension, but by Writing.

The seventeenth, that the excommunicated Persons shall be denounc'd such, till they shall get themselves absolv'd.

The eighteenth, that no general Excommunication shall be issued out, unless for Robberies and Damages done, and after Admonition.

The nineteenth, that the Chaplains on whom Churches are bestow'd for a certain time, shall be examin'd about their Abilities and Ordination.

The twentieth, that the Clergy shall forbear Secular Employments, shall wear the Tonsure, and live clerically.

The twenty first, that those who will not wear the clerical Habit and Tonsure, after being admonish'd of it, shall be no lon- defended or vindicated by Ecclesiastical Judges.

The twenty second, that the benefic'd Clergy who are excommunicated for not having paid the Tithes, shall get themselves absolv'd before Christmass.

The twenty third, that the Clergy who are of the Croisade, shall not abuse the privileges granted to them by the Bulls of the Popes, or by their Legates.

The twenty fourth, that the Regular Canons shall not be admitted to be Curates, till after they have been examin'd by the Bishop, and that they shall not be remov'd by their Superiors, but by the consent of the Bishop.

The Council of Ponteaudemer in 1276.

The Council of Avignon in the Years 1279 & 1282.

The Council of Avignon, 1279 & 1282.

Bertrand of St. Martin Archbishop of Arles, who was afterwards Cardinal Bishop of St. Sabina, held a Council at Avignon the seventeenth of May 1279. wherein he made Constitutions for the maintaining the Immunities and Privileges of Church-Goods and Church Men; the Liberty of the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction for the putting in Execution the Excommunication against the Clergy who concern'd themselves with Merchandise and Secular Affairs, and about Last Wills and Testaments. These Canons are compriz'd under fifteen Heads.

The same Archbishop held another Council in the same City in the Year 1282, wherein he made eleven more Decrees.

The first is against Usurers.

The second orders Prayers to be made for the Church.

The third prohibits the Alienation of Church-Goods, without consent of the Bishop.

The fourth orders the appointing of Proctors to maintain the Causes of Ecclesiasticks, which are perplex'd before Secular Judges.

The fifth obliges all the Parishioners to be present at the Parish-Mass on Sundays and Holy Days, and to receive the Eucharist on Easter-Day and Whitsunday from their own Curates.

The sixth prohibits the privileg'd and exempt Persons from infringing the Censures of the Ordinaries.

The seventh excommunicates those who carry Ecclesiastical Affairs before Secular Courts.

The eighth declares the Leagues, Associations, and Confraternities made contrary to the Ecclesiastical Laws, to be Null and Void.

The ninth imports, that privileg'd Persons may be excommunicated out of the Place of their Exemption, if their Privileges do not expresly exempt them from that Excommunication.

The tenth relates to the Forms of Last Wills and Testaments.

The eleventh is imperfect.

The Council of Avignon 1279 & 1282.

The Council of Redding in England in the Year 1279.

The Council of Redding in 1279.

John Pecham Archbishop of Canterbury having conven'd the Bishops his Suffragans at Redding in the Year 1279 did there renew the Constitutions of Otthobon, and made several others about the Collations of Benefices, the Sentences of Excommunication and the Clergy who kept Concubines. There was also one about Infant Baptism, wherein 'tis order'd, that all those who should be born eight Days before Easter and Whitsuntide, shall be kept to be baptiz'd solemnly on those two Festivals.

Besides these Canons for the Clergy, which were publish'd the thirtieth of July, John Pecham the same Year and probably in the same Council, made other Constitutions relating to the Monks and Nuns, wherein he is very particular in what relates to the Order and Discipline which ought to be observ'd in Monasteries.

The Council of Redding in 1279.

The Council of Buda in the Year 1279.

The Council of Buda in 1279

Philip Bishop of Fermo Legate of the Holy See in Hungary, Poland, Croatia, Servia, &c. held a Grand Council of the Prelates of those Countries at Buda, which broke up the fourteenth of September 1279. In which he made sixty nine Canons about Church-Discipline, which are as it were an Abstract thereof

The twelve first are about the Habits and Conduct of the Clergy.

The first orders the Prelates to wear a large Crown.

The second and third regulate the Form of their Habits.

The fourth prohibits the Clerks who have no Prelacy from wearing Rings.

The Council of Buda in 1279

The fifth prohibits them from frequenting Taverns.

The sixth enjoins the Monks who are made Bishops to wear their religious Habit.

The seventh orders the Clerks to refrain from all Military and Violent Actions.

The eighth forbids them dishonourable Exercises, playing at Dice and frequenting of Shows.

The ninth prohibits them from passing Sentences of a pungent Pain.

The tenth prohibits the Archdeacons from bestowing Vicaridges on Laicks, or marry'd Clerks.

The eleventh prohibits the Clergy from bearing Arms.

The twelfth renews the Prohibition against having Women in their Houses.

The thirteenth recommends to the Clergy the celebrating the Holy Mysteries with due Reverence, and in a decent Habit.

The fourteenth prohibits the Bishops who visit Churches or Parishes, from being burdensom to them, by excessive Duties.

The fifteenth prohibits the receiving of a Benefice from a Lay-Patron.

The sixteenth enjoyns Curates and other beneficed Persons having a Cure of Souls, to reside and serve their Churches in Person, and not by Vicars.

The seventeenth prohibits the Conspiracies, or Combinations of the Clergy.

The eighteenth recommends to the Curates the visiting the Sick, before going to the Synod.

The nineteenth prescribes the Manner how they ought to appear there.

The twentieth imports, that all those who have Benefices with the Cure of Souls, shall be ordain'd Priests.

The twenty first, that the Eucharist and the Holy Oyls shall be kept under Lock and Key.

The twenty second, that no Person shall be suffer'd to serve at the Altar, or read the Epistle without a Surplice and a Cassock; and that the Priests shall recite Divine Service distinctly and devoutly.

The twenty third excommunicates the Intruders, and obliges them to make Restitution of their Income.

The twenty fourth and fifth prohibit the Clerks from answering or appearing before secular Judges, unless for secular Affairs.

The twenty sixth prohibits them from keeping in their Houses the Children which they have had whilst in Holy Orders, and declares those Children to be the Vassals of the Church. It likewise prohibits the Clergy from keeping Dice, and other Instruments for to play at Hazards.

The twenty seventh prohibits the shewing of Relicks out of their Cases, unless on great Festivals, and when there are a great many Pilgrims; from exposing them to Sale, and from honouring new ones without the Pope's Approbation.

The twenty eighth imports, that no Persons shall be suffer'd to preach but such as are approv'd of by the Bishop, or by the Holy See; and that no other Questors shall be tolerated but such as have Commissions from the Pope or the Bishop.

The twenty ninth, that the Goods of Churches shall not be mortgaged.

The thirtieth, that the Curates shall not give away the Goods of Churches.

The thirty first, that no Clerk shall go in Pilgrimage without his Bishop's Leave.

The thirty second, that unknown Persons shall not be admitted to the Celebration of the Mass.

The thirty third obliges the Faithful to be present at the Parochial Divine Service, especially at the Parochial Mass of Sundays. It prohibits the Curates from Administring the Sacraments to any others but to their own Parishoners, except to travelling Clerks, or Pilgrims, or to those that go to a certain Church out of Devotion, and with the Pope's Leave.

The thirty fourth obliges all those who have the Management of Ecclesiastical Goods, to give an Account of their Administration.

The thirty fifth ascertains the Sums which the Abbots and Superiors may borrow.

The thirty sixth is against the Alienations of the Church.

The thirty seventh prohibits unreasonable Exactions.

The thirty eighth obliges the Archdeacons to study the Canon Law three Years.

The thirty ninth reserves the Cognizance of Matrimonial Causes to prudent and discreet Persons.

The fortieth declares all the Means us'd to hinder the Visitation of Ordinaries, to be null and void.

The forty first prohibits the locking up of profane Utensils in the Church.

The forty second orders the Curates to have Church-Books.

The forty third, that no profane Actions shall be done in the Church.

The forty fourth prohibits the Vigils which the Laicks kept in Churches.

The forty fifth, that those who shall not assist at the canonical Hours, shall lose their Share in the Distributions.

The forty sixth prohibits a Custom of that Country, by which they demanded a Sum for interring those who came to an accidental Death.

The forty seventh prohibits the Ecclesiasticks from keeping Concubines.

The forty eighth prohibits all Manner of Persons from tolerating debauch'd Women in their Houses or Estates.

The forty ninth prohibits the seizing upon the Goods of deceas'd Ecclesiasticks.

The fiftieth prohibits the Alienation of the Goods or Rights of Churches, under very severe Penalties.

The fifty first imports, that those who have the Rights of Patronage cannot give nor transfer them to others, without the Bishop's Consent.

The fifty second and third are against those who usurp the Revenue of the Churches, or Monasteries.

The fifty fourth recommends to the Ecclesiastical Judges the doing Justice, and not to suffer themselves to be corrupted by Interest or Favour.

The fifty fifth deprives the excommunicated Persons of the Right of acting in Courts of Justice, of Pleading, of giving Evidence, &c.

The fifty sixth enjoins the Ecclesiastical and Civil Judges to admit of the Exceptions which the Parties alledge for not answering in their Courts.

The fifty seventh, that the secular Judges shall punish those who are refractory to the Judgment of Ecclesiasticks, and shall see that their Sentences be executed; and that the Ecclesiastical Judges shall likewise make use of Censures, that the Lay-judges may be obey'd.

The fifty eighth excommunicates the Lords and others who obstructed those who appealed to the Holy See.

The fifty ninth and sixtieth are concerning the Immunity of Ecclesiasticks.

The four next Canons relate to the Manner how the Monks and regular Canons are to be habited, to the Abstinence and Confinement they ought to observe.

The sixty fifth and sixth prohibit them from taking up Churches by Lease, from serving them above eight Days, and from going to secular Schools, without the Leave of their Superior.

The sixty seventh renews the Prohibitions against communicating with excommunicated Persons, and recommends the Observation of the Interdictions.

The sixty eighth excommunicates those who ravage the Fields and Meadows.

The sixty ninth is against those who seize on the Revenues of the Churches.

The Council of Angers, in the Year 1279.

The Council of Angers, 1279.

IN the Year 1279. John de Montsoreau Archbishop of Tours, held a provincial Council at Angers, the Sunday after the Festival of St. Luke, wherein he published five Canons.

The first excommunicates those who cite Ecclesiasticks before secular Judges for personal Affairs.

The second prohibits the Officers of Bishops from exacting any thing for Sealing the Instruments of Ordination.

The third is against those who inter in Holy Ground the Corps of those to whom such Interment is forbidden.

The fourth deprives the beneficed Clergy who are excommunicated of the Revenue of their Benefices during the time they are excommunicated, and orders, that they shall be turned out of the Benefices themselves, if they continue in a State of Excommunication above a Year.

The fifth declares, that the Bishops have Power to take off the Censures pass'd in this Council.

The Council of Angers in 1279.

The

The Councils held during the Thirteenth Century.

The Synodal Statutes of Sifroy Archbishop of Cologne, in the Year 1280.

The Synodal Statutes of Sifroy Archbishop of Cologne in 1280.

Sifroy Archbishop of Cologne, published in the Year 1280. several Synodal Statutes for the Instruction of Ecclesiasticks. He therein at first treats of the Conduct, the Way of Living, the Habits and the Duties of Ecclesiasticks, the Rules which the Monks ought to observe, and how the Curates ought to behave themselves in the Administration of the Sacraments. He afterwards treats of what relates to the Administration and Ceremonies of each Sacrament in particular; of Burials, and Church-yards, of the Alienation of Church-goods, of the Privilege of Sanctuaries: He therein renews the Laws against Usurers, and the Prohibitions of holding Benefices of Laicks. He therein confirms the Decrees of the Council of Cologne, and what relates to last Wills and Testaments, and the Observance of the Ecclesiastical Interdiction.

The Synodal Constitutions of Geofrey of St. Brice Bishop of Saintes in the Years 1280, and 1282.

The Constitutions of Geofrey of St. Brice Bishop of Saintes, in 1280, & 1282.

THis Bishop published in the Year 1280, several synodal Decrees about the Church-discipline.

It is therein order'd, that all his Curates shall appear at the Synod: That the Fonts shall be shut up: That the Holy Chrism shall be kept in proper Vessels: That there shall be three Sponsors at Baptism: That the Body of Jesus Christ shall be attended when carried out to the Sick: That no Corn nor Measures shall be put in Churches: That the Commissions shall be directed to the Curates, and executed by them. He reserves a great many Cases to the Bishop, and lastly, he therein forbids the vilifying the Jacobine or Minor Friars who take Possessions, by accusing them of discovering the Confessions of their Penitents.

The same Bishop published other Constitutions in the Year 1282. about excommunicated Persons about the Right of Visitation, and about last Wills and Testaments.

The Constitutions of Geofrey of St. Brice Bishop of Saintes, in 1280, & 1282.

The Constitutions of Gautier Bishop of Poitiers, in the Years 1280, and 1284.

The Constitutions of Gautier Bishop of Poitiers in 1280, & 1284.

IN the Year 1280. Gautier of Bruges Bishop of Poitiers, made likewise several synodal Decrees, wherein he prohibited the sealing of blank Letters. He therein prohibited the Archpriests from having Officials, and the Curates from serving their Benefices with Vicars. He therein prohibited the Ecclesiasticks from making use of any other Confessors than those who are nominated by the Bishop to administer to them the Sacrament of Penance; the Confessors from granting Absolution in Cases reserv'd to the Bishop; and the Deacons from granting Absolution: He likewise made several Orders against the Greeks and Usurers; about Judgments; against those that detain the Letters of the Bishops their Predecessors; against those who disturb the Synod; about the Right of nominating Questors, which he reserves to the Bishop, and about the Rights of Bishops, Archdeacons, and Vestry-keepers.

In the Year 1284. the same Bishop made likewise other synodal Canons, wherein he prohibits. (1.) The celebrating of Divine Service in the Presence of excommunicated Persons. (2.) The granting a Benefice to a Man who already has a Curacy. (3.) The receiving the Sacraments from a Priest who has not Power to administer them. (4.) He orders the Payment of Tithes. (5.) He enjoins the Abbots and Superiors to leave in the Priories and Curacies which become vacant, a sufficient Provision for maintaining the Prior or Curate till the next Harvest.

The Constitutions of Gautier Bishop of Poitiers in 1280, & 1284.

The Council of Lambeth, in the Year 1281.

The Council of Lambeth in 1281.

John Peckham Archbishop of Canterbury, of whom we have already spoke, held an Assembly of Bishops at Lambeth, in the Year 1281. the 10*th* of October, wherein after he had order'd the executing of the Orders made in the last Council of Lyons, and of the Constitutions of Ottobon, and the Canons of the Council of Lambeth under Boniface his Predecessor, he published twenty seven Decrees.

The first is about the Reverence due to the Eucharist. It is therein ordered, that the Priests shall confess themselves at least once a Week: That the Holy Sacrament shall be kept in a Pyx close lock'd up in the Tabernacle: That every Sunday the Hosts shall be renew'd: That at the Elevation the Bells shall ring, and all that hear them even out of Church, shall down on their Knees. The Priests likewise are admonished of the Instructions which they ought to give the People about this Sacrament.

The second is about the Annuities of Masses which are said for the Dead. It is therein declar'd, that a Priest ought to acquit himself of all the Masses, with which he is charg'd, and that it is not true, that he may satisfy by one Mass several, to whom he has promis'd to say an entire Mass for them.

The third is about Baptism. It is therein prohibited to re-baptize those who are baptized with the Form of Words, tho' by Laicks: And order'd to re-baptize them on Condition, that a Question be made whether the Baptism was administred according to the lawful Form.

The fourth is about Confirmation: Therein they are blamed who neglect the receiving of this Sacrament.

The fifth is about Holy Orders: It is therein prohibited to grant Holy Orders with the four Minor Orders, and therein is commended the Practice of conferring the four Minor Orders separately.

The sixth prohibits the Priests from granting Absolution to those who are obstinate in their Sins, and to those who have Pluralities of Benefices, and will not quit them.

The seventh prohibits privileged Persons from confessing and granting Absolution, if they be not approved by the Ordinary.

In the eighth 'tis order'd, that a publick and solemn Penance shall be impos'd for great, publick, and scandalous Sins: And the Absolution of Homicide is reserv'd to the Bishop.

The ninth renews the Order importing, that there shall be in each Deanry a general Confessor for all the Clergy.

The tenth contains an Abridgment of the Instructions which the Pastors ought to give to their Parishoners.

The three next concern Processes as well as the twenty fourth.

The fifteenth prohibits the leasing out of Churches to Laicks.

The sixteenth imports, that all the Houses of regular Canons shall come to the general Chapter.

The four next are against the Corrupters of Nuns, and against the Apostate Monks.

The twenty first prohibits the nominating of Monks for Executors of last Wills and Testaments.

The twenty second is about the clerical Habit.

The twenty third prohibits the granting of Benefices to Clergymens Sons.

The twenty fifth is against the Clerks who have Pluralities.

The twenty sixth prohibits the admitting any one for an Advocate who has not studied the canon and civil Law for three Years.

The last orders all the Priests of a Diocess to say a Mass for their Bishop after his Decease.

The same Archbishop wrote a Letter to King Edward, in favour of the Liberties of the Churches and Ecclesiasticks of England, wherein he relates the Examples of his Predecessors, to incline him to be favourable to them.

The Council of Lambeth in 1281.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The Council of Tours, in the Year 1282.

The Council of Tours in 1282.

John de Montsoreau, Archbishop of Tours, the Wednesday after the Festival of St. Peter in Vinculis, in the Year 1282. held a provincial Council in his Metropolitan City, wherein he made thirteen Canons.

The first is against those who bring Processes against Persons merely to get something of them, to free them of Trouble.

The second, against those who excite and foment Processes.

The third prohibits the Clergy and Monks from frequenting Taverns.

The fourth is against those who tear the Books and abuse the Ornaments of the Church.

The fifth orders the Observation of Processions.

The sixth is against Usurers.

The five next relate to the Freedom and Jurisdiction of Church-men:

The twelfth is against those who hinder the receiving of Tithes.

The thirteenth orders the Execution of the Decrees made in the former provincial Councils.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The Council of Tours in 1282.

The Synodal Statutes of the Diocefs of Nismes, published about the Year 1284.

The Synodal Statutes of Nismes in 1284.

These Statutes were made under the Episcopacy of Bertrand de Languisel, who was Bishop of Nismes, from the Year 1280, to the Year 1323. These are properly the Instructions of a Ritual about the Sacraments, the Ceremonies, and Church-discipline.

The Synodal Statutes of Nismes in 1284.

The Council of Ravenna, in the Year 1286.

The Council of Ravenna in 1286.

Boniface Archbishop of Ravenna, on the eighth of July 1286. held a provincial Council in his Metropolis, wherein he made nine Canons.

By the first he prohibits the Clerks from entertaining or nourishing the Players or Dancers, which are sent to them when their Relations are advanced to Offices, or are married.

By the second, he exhorts the Ecclesiasticks to give Alms to the Poor, and grants Indulgencies to those who maintain them.

The third condemns to a pecuniary Mulct, the Clergy who bear Arms without the Leave of their Bishop, and without a just and necessary Cause; and those who do not wear a clerical Habit, Tonsure and Crown.

The fourth orders the Execution of the thirteenth Canon of the second General Council of Lyons, which obliges those who are advanced to Benefices with the Cure of Souls to take Priests Orders.

The fifth obliges the Canons to be more constant at Divine Service; orders that there shall be Distributions made, which shall be given only to those who are there present.

The sixth forbids the Notaries from receiving the last Wills and Testaments of Usurers, unless in the Presence of a Priest.

The seventh orders the Prelates to excommunicate those who refuse to pay Tithes, and that in case the Persons excommunicated neglect to take off the Excommunication, Recourse shall be had to the secular Power.

The eighth declares what Cases are reserved to Bishops, which are the Absolution of a Major Excommunication, the Absolution of Incendiaries, Blasphemers, Murderers of their Children; the dispensing of Vows; the Absolution of Homicides, Forgers of Deeds, of those who make any Attempt on the Immunities and Ecclesiastical Liberties; of Sorcerers; of those who are guilty of Bestiality; of the Incestuous, and those who debauch'd Nuns; the Cases of Larceny, when one cannot tell to whom Restitution ought to be made; Perjurers, and clandestine Marriages.

The ninth declares those Persons to be excommunicated with the Major Excommunication, who under the Pretence of Custom and Privilege, offer any Violence to the Immunities and Liberties of Churches.

The Council of Ravenna in 1286.

The Council of Bourges in the Year 1286.

The Council of Bourges in 1286.

Simon de Beaulieu Archbishop of Bourges, on the 17th of September in the same Year, held a provincial Council at Bourges, wherein he renewed the Constitutions of his Predecessors by thirty five Decrees.

The first orders the Ecclesiastical Judges to proceed with all Manner of Precaution and Prudence in the Trials of Matrimonial Causes, and enjoyns the Curates to inform the Bishops or their Officers of the unlawful Marriages contracted in their Parishes.

The second prohibits the contracting Marriage before the lawful Age, and condemns clandestine Marriages.

The third prohibits the Ecclesiastical Judges from taking Cognizance of Matrimonial Causes out of the Limits of their Jurisdiction.

The fourth renews the Prohibitions made to Archdeacons of having Officials out of Towns.

The fifth deprives the Curates of the Revenues of their Curacies till they be ordain'd Priests.

The sixth prohibits the admitting of Priests or Clerks to confess, preach, or administer the Sacraments, if they be not approved by the Ordinary.

The seventh revives the Prohibition made to Ecclesiasticks of having suspicious Women in their Houses.

The eighth prohibits them from keeping and maintaining their Bastards in their Houses.

The ninth declares, that those who continue above a Year in the State of Excommunication, shall lose their Benefices.

The tenth enjoyns the Curates to keep the Names of the Excommunicate by them, and to denounce them every Festival.

The eleventh orders them to read the Constitution of Gregory X. in the Council of Lyons, and that of Simon Legate of the Holy See, made at the Council of Bourges, about the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction.

The twelfth contains and orders the executing of the Decretal of Gregory X. called, Quia nonulli de Rescriptis.

The thirteenth orders all the Faithful to confess themselves every Year, and to receive the Eucharist at Easter; enjoyns the Curates to keep a List of their Communicants; and declares, that those who shall die without having discharg'd this Duty, shall be depriv'd of Ecclesiastical Burial.

The fourteenth orders the reading and executing of the Canon call'd, Omnis utriusque sexus, of the Lateran Council under Innocent IV. and the Constitutions of Clement IV. and Martin IV. which grant to the Minor Friars the Power of preaching and hearing Confessions.

The fifteenth orders the Curates to take notice of those who communicate with the excommunicated, and to send in their Names to the Bishop, or his Official.

The sixteenth prohibits the Absolution of an excommunicated Man by his Bishop, unless it be at the Point of Death, or to be interr'd in Holy Ground.

The seventeenth is against the Usurers, and revives the Constitution made against them in the Council of Bourges under Simon.

The eighteenth enjoyns the Regulars to observe their Rule strictly.

The nineteenth prohibits the Monks from having any thing de proprio.

The twentieth does not allow the Prior to borrow above 60 Sols, without the Consent of his Abbot.

The twenty first orders the removing of Coffers and other profane Things out of Churches.

The twenty second prohibits the Dancing there.

The twenty third orders, that no Monks shall be sent into Priories under twenty Years of Age.

The twenty fourth prohibits Women from inhabiting in the Houses of Monks.

The twenty fifth excommunicates the Monks who receive Tithes from the Hands of Laicks.

The twenty sixth prohibits the rifling or diminishing the Priories during the Vacancy.

The twenty seventh renews the eighth Canon of the Council of Tours, in the Year 1133. about last Wills and Testaments against those who conceal'd them.

The Council of Bourges in 1286.

The

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The twenty eighth is against the Executors of Wills who buy or detain the Goods of the Testator.

The twenty ninth enjoyns the Bishops to take care of the Execution of Wills, if the Executors be remiss.

The thirtieth orders, that the last Wills and Testaments shall be received by the Bishop.

The thirty first imports, that they shall proceed against those who neglect to get themselves absolv'd from the Excommunication, and that Recourse shall be had to the secular Power to oblige them to it.

The thirty second orders, that they shall be punished who do not keep the Festivals.

The thirty third enjoyns the Suffragans and their Judges to pay a Deference to Appeals.

The thirty fourth prohibits the Official of Bourges, and the other Judges of that Archbishoprick, from obstructing the Execution or the Jurisdiction of the Suffragan Bishops.

The thirty fifth enjoyns all the Ecclesiastical Judges to order the Execution of the Sentences pass'd against those who offer any Violence to the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The Synodal Canons of Peter Bishop of Exeter, in the Year 1287.

The Synodal Canons of Peter Bishop of Exeter in 1287.

PEter Bishop of Exeter, held a Synod of his Clergy at Exeter in the Year 1287. wherein he drew up an Instruction for his Clergy about the seven Sacraments; the building of Churches and their Ornaments; the Church-yards; the Immunity of Churches; the Life, Conduct, and Residence of Clergymen; the Divine Service; the assisting at the Parochial Mass on Sundays and Holy-days; the Festivals which ought to be celebrated; the Trades, Trafficks and Employments prohibited to the Clergy; the Chapters; the Rural Deans; the Provisions of Benefices; the Visitations of Arch-deacons and their Dues; the Immunities of Clerks; the Celebration of Marriage; Appeals; Questors; the Relicks of the Saints; last Wills and Testaments; Mortuaries; Tithes; Offerings; Excommunications; and several other Points of Discipline comprized in fifty five very large Articles, and which contain several remarkable things.

The Synodal Canons of Peter Bishop of Exeter, in 1287.

There is at the End of this Synod an Instruction about the Manner of confessing and imposing Penances, which is supposed to have been made by the same Bishop. Therein are explained the Points upon which the Penitent ought to be examined; the Cases reserved to the Pope and the Bishop; the Temper in which the Penitent ought to be; the Penances which the Confessor ought to inflict; and the things he ought to instruct his Penitent in.

The Council of Wirtzburgh, in the Year 1287.

The Council of Wirtzburgh in 1287.

JOhn Bishop of Frescati Legate of the Holy See in Germany, held in the Year 1287. an Ecclesiastical Assembly at Wirtzburgh, wherein he would have exacted a Contribution of the tenth Penny of the Revenues of the Clergy; but he could not gain his End, and only published forty two Decrees about the Church-discipline.

The five first concern the Morals and the Conduct of the Clergy; order them to be habited in a Manner agreeable to their Quality, and prohibit them from going to Taverns, from Gaming, from being familiar with Nuns; from bearing Arms, and from having Women lodged in their Houses.

The sixth inflicts the Penalty of Excommunication against those who seize on Benefices to which they have no Right.

The seventh prohibits the Priests from celebrating above one Mass per diem, to put a Stop to the Abuse which was introduced by several Priests, of celebrating twice without Necessity only to get double Contributions.

The eighth orders, that the most Holy Body of Jesus Christ shall be carried to the Sick, and to Women near their Travel with due Veneration, by a Priest in a Surplice with a Hood, a Clerk going before with a lighted Taper and a Bell; That those who go by shall down on their Knees, and repeat three Pater-Nosters, and as many Ave-Maries; which shall exempt them from ten Days of the Penances enjoyned them.

The ninth prohibits the Alienation of Church-goods.

The tenth is against those who have two Curacies.

The eleventh prohibits the giving of Curacies to Persons under five and twenty Years of Age.

The twelfth orders the Patrons to present the Benefices in their Gift, to Persons of requisite Qualification.

The thirteenth prohibits the secular and regular Clerks from publickly singing or celebrating Divine Service in interdicted Places, as well as from ringing of Bells.

The fourteenth prohibits the receiving of Benefices from Laicks.

The fifteenth prohibits the making of Contracts for Burials or Benedictions.

The sixteenth and seventeenth order those who have Chappels or Curacies in their Gift, to put Vicars into them, whom they shall allow a competent Maintenance.

The eighteenth and nineteenth concern the Regularity which ought to be observ'd by the Monks and Nuns.

The Council of Wirtzburgh, in 1287.

The twentieth and twenty first are against the Laicks, who seize upon Church-goods or Benefices.

The twenty second adjusts the Rights and Duties of Church-Advocates.

The twenty third renews the Ecclesiastical Laws against Usurers.

The twenty fourth declares them excommunicated who offer any Violence to Ecclesiasticks.

The twenty fifth inflicts the same on those who offer any Injury to the Nuncio's of the Pope.

The twenty sixth excommunicates likewise those who seize on the Goods of vacant Churches.

The twenty seventh recommends to the Archbishops and Bishops the Visitation of their Dioceses.

The twenty eighth prohibits the fortifying of Churches, in order to make use of them as of Castles.

The twenty ninth prohibits the excommunicating of Children or Women for the Debts of their dead Husbands or Fathers.

The thirtieth declares Highway-men and those who give them Shelter, excommunicated ipso facto.

The three next are for the Preservation of Church-goods.

The thirty fourth is against the false Apostles. The Clerks are forbidden to entertain or give them any Subsistence.

The thirty fifth forbids the Laicks the administring of Church-goods, under Pretence of repairing the Buildings of Churches.

The thirty sixth excommunicates those who hinder the bringing of Complaints before Ecclesiastical Judges.

The thirty seventh excommunicates the Forgers of Apostolical Letters.

The thirty eighth orders, that the Interdiction issued out by the Bishop, shall be observ'd.

The thirty ninth prohibits the Conservators appointed by the Pope for Religious Houses and Monasteries, from meddling with those things which are not comprehended in their Commission.

The fortieth is against those who exact new Duties.

The forty first orders the Execution of these Canons.

The forty second revokes the Privileges granted to particular Persons, which exempted them from Excommunications and Interdictions.

The Council of L'Isle in Provence in the Year 1288.

The Council of L'Isle in Provence 1288.

ROstaing Archbishop of Arles, and the Bishops of his Province being met at L'Isle a little Town of the Diocese of Cavaillon, in the Country of Venaissin in Provence, made a Collection of the Canons of the former Councils of their Province, and drew up eighteen of them, of which the thirteen first are taken out of the former Councils.

The Council of L'Isle in Provence, 1288.

The fourteenth is against those who give Poyson or Physick to cause Abortion.

The fifteenth prohibits the carrying in of Corn, till the Tithe be taken of it.

The sixteenth discharges the Churches and Church-men from paying of Taxes.

The Councils held during the thirteenth Century.

The ſeventeenth, for the preventing the Charges at Chriſtnings, which were the Cauſe that Children dy'd unbaptiz'd, orders, that they ſhall not give any thing but a white Habit to the baptiz'd.

The eighteenth orders the Obſervation of the Canons of the former Councils.

The Councils held during the Thirteenth Century.

The Synodal Statutes of Gilbert Biſhop of Chicheſter, publiſh'd in the Years 1289 & 1292.

The Synodal Statutes of Gilbert Biſhop of Chicheſter in 1289, and 1292.

THeſe Canons contain divers Regulations about the Life, Morals, Conduct and Duties of the Prieſts; about Marriages, Benefices, Excommunications, Proceſſions, Church Ornaments and Ceremonies.

This very Biſhop in the Year 1292, added other Conſtitutions to the former, whereby he forbids the ſuffering of beaſts to graze in Church-yards, the reſtraining the Oblations to a Penny, He therein excommunicates the Detainers of Tithes; orders the Pariſhioners to hear Maſs with Silence; prohibits the interring in Churches, and putting any Cheſts therein without the Biſhop's Leave.

The Synodal Statutes of Gilbert Biſhop of Chicheſter, in 1289, and 1292.

The Council of Nogarol in the Year 1290.

The Council of Nogarol in 1290.

A Menens of Armagnac Archbiſhop of Auſche on the Saturday after the Aſſumption of the Virgin Mary 1290, held a provincial Council at Nogarol in the in the Country of Armagnac, wherein they order'd Roger Bernard Count of Foix to reſtore to the Biſhop of Laſcar the City of Laſcar, the Caſtles and Places belonging thereto under the pain of Excommunication; and inſerted this Sentence among the provincial Decrees of this Council ad perpetuam rei memoriam. This is the firſt Head.

By the ſecond, they ratified the Sentence of Excommunication againſt thoſe who retain the Church-Goods of that Province.

In the third, they prohibit the ſtretching of the Powers granted in the Apoſtolical Letters beyond their Contents.

In the fourth, they Excommunicate the Sorcerers.

By the fifth, they pronounce the Sentence of Excommunication againſt thoſe who cite Clerks before Secular Judges. They likewiſe exempt the Leprous from their Juriſdiction, and order them to wear a diſtinguiſhing Badge under forfeiture of five Sols.

In the ſixth and ſeventh, they revive and augment ſeveral Penalties inflicted on thoſe who offer any Violence to the Perſons or Eſtates of Eccleſiaſticks.

The Council of Nogarol in 1290.

The Council of Saltzburg in the Year 1291.

The Council of Saltzburg in 1291.

THe City of Acra having been taken from the Chriſtians by the Sultan of Babylon in the Year 1291, Pope Nicholas X order'd provincial Councils to be held for the finding out ways and means of reentring into Poſſeſſion of the Holy Land. The Knights Hoſpitalers, Templars and Teutonicks were accus'd of not having done their Duty. This gave occaſion to the Council held the ſame Year at Saltzburgh, of propoſing to the Pope the uniting theſe three Orders into One.

There are three Decrees of a Council at Saltzburgh under Archbiſhop Conrade without Date, which are commonly attributed to this Aſſembly.

By the firſt it is order'd, that to remedy the Abuſe of Marriages clandeſtinely contracted, there ſhall be ſix honeſt and creditable Perſons of the Neighbourhood, or Pariſh of the Contracters, who ſhall be preſent and ſerve as Witneſſes of the Marriage. The ſame Canon iſſues forth the Penalty of Excommunication ipſo facto againſt thoſe who ſhall tranſgreſs this Order, or ſhall be preſent at clandeſtine Marriages, or ſhall ſuffer them to be contracted in their Houſes.

In the ſecond the Secular and Regular Clergy are prohibited from acquiring, enjoying, or retaining under any Title whatſoever, any Offices or Employments depending on Secular Princes, or Lords, under the Penalty of forfeiting their Privileges and Benefices.

The third is againſt ſeveral Vagrant Scholars of a looſe Life, who ſtyl'd themſelves Clerks, and ran about the Country.

The Council of Saltzburg in 1291.

The Council of London in the Year 1291.

The Council of London in 1291.

THis Council was held by Bernard Biſhop of Groſſeto Legate of the Holy See, who therein order'd an Edict to be made whereby the Jews were entirely and perpetually baniſh'd the Kingdom of England: King Edward demanded and obtain'd an Impoſt on the Clergy, under Pretence of going to the Relief of the Holy Land: And he therein would renew, in ſpight of the Legate's Oppoſition, the Prohibition made againſt Eccleſiaſticks and Monks buying of Inheritances.

The Council of London, in 1291.

The Council of Saumur in the Year 1294.

The Council of Saumur in 1294.

REginald of Montbaſon Archbiſhop of Tours, held a provincial Council at Saumur in October 1294, wherein he publiſh'd five Canons.

By the firſt, the Clerks and Monks are enjoin'd to be habited agreeably to their State and Condition, and are prohibited from wearing colour'd Cloths.

The ſecond adjuſts the Conditions under which Abſolution ought to be given to the Excommunicated at the Point of Death.

The third prohibits the Eccleſiaſtical Judges the impoſing of a pecuniary Mulct for the Puniſhment of enormous Crimes

The fourth prohibits the Archdeacons, Archprieſts, and others who have Authority, from ſending Clerks throughout the Dioceſs to hear Confeſſions.

The fifth is againſt thoſe who obſtruct the Church-men from receiving the Tithes.

The Council of Saumur in 1294.

The Synodal Statutes of Robert of Winchelſey Archbiſhop of Canterbury, publiſh'd in the Years 1295, and 1300.

The Conſtitutions of Robert of Winchelſey in 1295 & 1300.

THeſe Conſtitutions which are forty ſeven in all, contain ſeveral Rules about the Functions of Advocates and Eccleſiaſtical Judges, and about the Inſtructions, Proceedings and Forms which ought to be obſerv'd in the trying of Proceſſes.

There are likewiſe other Conſtitutions of the ſame Archbiſhop in the Year 1300, which relate to the Payment of Tithes and to the Ornaments of Churches.

The Conſtitutions of Robert of Winchelſey in 1295 & 1300.

The

The Synodal Constitutions of Guy de Neuville Bishop of Saintes, Published in the Year 1298,

The Constitutions of Guy de Neuville in 1298.

THE Constitutions of this Bishop are upon the ordinary Matters contained in the Canons made in this Century, Namely about the Habits of Clerks and Monks; the Residence of Curates, the Tithes, Excommunications, and the Seisures of Church-Goods.

The Constitutions of Guy de Neuville in 1298.

The Council of Roan in the Year 1299.

The Council of Roan in 1299.

WIlliam de Flavacourt Archbishop of Roan, and the Bishops of the Province of Normandy on the Thursday after the Octave of Whitsontide 1299, held a Council in the Church of St. Mary du Pré, at present call'd the Church de bonne Nouvelle, wherein they made seven Canons.

The first is against the Irregularities of the Clergy.

The second prohibits the holding of Courts of Judicature on Festivals.

By the third, the Clerks are prohibited from submitting themselves in Personal Causes to Civil Justice.

The fourth prohibits the Secular Judges from taking Cognizance of Matters of Fact which relate to Church Men.

The fifth is against those who offer any Violence to the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction.

The sixth prohibits the Bishops from granting to the Regulars the power of absolving in reserv'd Cases, unless it be only to some of whose Prudence and Ability they are very well satisfy'd, and likewise upon Condition, that this Grant shall not extend to the Confession which ought to be made to the proper Curate or Pastor, unless by his Consent.

The last orders the publishing and executing of the fore-going Decrees.

The Council of Roan in 1299.

CHAP. VII.

An Account of the Contests between the Divines of Paris, and the Dominican Friars: And of the Writings of William de Saint Amour.

The Contests between the Divines of Paris and the Dominican Friars.

IN the Year 1229, during the Minority of King Lewis the Saint, and the Regency of Queen Blanche of Castile, the University of Paris not being able to have Justice done them, for the Death of some of its Scholars, who had been kill'd by the Soldiers, left off their publick Lectures, and retir'd part to Rheims and part to Angers, according to the Grant which they pretended to have for so doing in such Cases, by the Bull of Gregory IX. In the Absence of the Secular Doctors, the Dominicans who had not hitherto taken the Degree, apply'd themselves to the Bishop of Paris and to the Chancellor of the University, to be admitted Doctors, and took Possession of one of the Divinity-Chairs. Four Years after the University being re-establish'd in Paris, and regulated by Order from the Holy See, the Dominicans not only kept what they were in Possession of, but likewise set up another Divinity-Professorship among them in spight of the Chancellor of the University. They afterwards spread themselves in the other Cities of France, and there open'd publick Schools. The University of Paris fearing the Consequences of these new Establishments, and that other Regulars would likewise set up two Divinity-Professorships, which would put a Stop to the Profession of the Secular Doctors; made a Decree, whereby it was order'd, that none of the Regulars for the future might have two Divinity-Professorships at one and the same time. The Dominicans stood out against this Decree, and the University being again oblig'd in the Year 1250, to cease its Lectures, because they could not get Justice done them for the Injuries done to their Scholars (some of whom were imprison'd, others beaten, and others kill'd) the Dominicans declar'd, that they would not put this Prohibition in Execution, unless the University would grant them two Professorships by an authentick Deed. The University remonstrated to them, that their Concern was not about two Divinity-Professorships, nor about the particular Interests of the Members of the University; but about an Injury offer'd to the whole Body; and that they had done very ill in making their Advantages by the Misfortunes of the University. These Contests lasted about two Months; but at last the University having obtain'd the Satisfaction which they requir'd, and being at quiet, came to another Resolution; whereby it was resolv'd, that no Person should for the future be promoted to a Doctor's Degree, till he had first taken a solemn Oath to observe the Decrees and Constitutions of the University: And that the Dominicans might make no scruple of taking of it, 'tis added. 'Provided there be nothing in 'these Statutes prohibited by the Rule of the Dominican Friars 'which I profess, nor any thing dishonourable, or contrary 'to the Salvation of Souls, to humane and divine Right, to 'the publick Interest, or to the Holy Church of God. Notwithstanding this the Dominicans refus'd to take that Oath, unless the University would grant them two Professorships in Divinity. The University to chastise their Disobedience, after fifteen day's Delay and divers Admonitions, expell'd them from their Society, by a solemn Decree which was publish'd in all the Colleges. The Dominicans petition'd Pope Innocent IV. to re-establish them, and obtain'd of him a Commission directed to the Bishop of Evreux for the Re-establishment in their University, with Authority of making use of Ecclesiastical Censures against the Members of the University who oppos'd their Re-establishment. The University being advertis'd thereof, apply'd themselves to the Count of Poitiers who govern'd the Kingdom jointly with Queen Blanche in the Absence of King Saint Lewis her Brother who was in the Holy Land, and remonstrated to him, that out of Respect to the Holy See, they were ready to receive the Dominicans, provided their Statutes remain'd in full Force, till the Pope, who determin'd this Affair without hearing both Parties, should order otherwise. However the Dominicans prevail'd upon the Bishop of Evreux to delegate for the Executing the Bull which was directed to him, a Canon of Paris nam'd Luke which they back'd by a Letter immediately directed to him in Person, in pursuance whereof, that Canon suspended all the Members of the University from their Functions, and order'd this Decree of Suspension to be publish'd, notwithstanding the Appeal made to the Holy See. The University for their parts caus'd the Decree for the Expulsion of the Dominicans to be publish'd, and in the Year 1253, wrote a circular Letter to all the Prelates of the Kingdom, to prevail upon them to succour them in the Oppression under which they groan'd. At last in the Year 1254, Pope Innocent IV. having by his Decretal restrain'd the Pretensions of Regulars, by prohibiting them from admitting Parishioners into their Churches on Sundays and Holy-Days, and administring the Sacrament of Penance without the leave of the Curates, from Preaching in their Churches during the time of the Parochial Divine-Service, and from Preaching in Parish-Churches, unless invited thereto by the Curates, or had obtain'd their leave, and from performing any other Hierarchial Office in Defiance to the Ordinaries, tho' it pronounc'd nothing about the Affair of the University of Paris; this Decree render'd the Dominicans more moderate in the pursuit of their Pretensions. But Innocent IV. dying December 23. 1254. His Successor Alexander IV. revok'd the Decretal of Innocent on Christmas Day the same Year, and on the fourteenth of April 1255, he publish'd the Bull which begun with these Words, Quasi Lignum Vitæ, by which he order'd the Academicks of Paris to admit

The Contests between the Divines of Paris and the Dominican Friars.

The Conteſts between the Divines of Paris and the Dominican Friars.

all the Dominicans, eſpecially thoſe who were advanc'd to the Divinity-Profeſſorſhips, into their Society, to permit them to enjoy all their Rights and Privileges, and to have as many Profeſſorſhips as they plea's'd. And for the more ſpeedy Execution of this Bull, he ſent another the ſame Day to the Biſhops of Orleans and Auxerre, by which he granted them a Commiſſion to ſee that the former was obſerv'd, with Power of uſing Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures againſt thoſe who oppos'd it. Thoſe two Biſhops in purſuance of that Bull, proceeded againſt the Seculars of the Univerſity, who being retir'd for a time from their Colleges, and being return'd again to the City; return'd Anſwer, that they were no longer of the Univerſity, and conſequently that the Pope's Bull did not reach them. However they wrote a Letter to the Pope, whereby they declar'd to him, that not being willing to oppoſe his Bull, tho' they had ſeveral lawful Exceptions to offer againſt it, that they might not be engag'd in ſuch Proceſſes as were not agreeable to their Profeſſion; but that conſidering that it was more for their Advantage to be depriv'd of the Rights and Privileges of the Univerſity, than to join in one Body with the Dominicans, which by Experience they knew would be prejudicial to them, and which they were afraid would prove pernicious to the whole Church; they had withdrawn themſelves and renounc'd the Rights and Privileges of the Univerſity, that they might not have any thing to do with the Dominicans, yet without contradicting the Bull of his Holineſs: That having recourſe to his Clemency, they humbly pray him to revoke the Sentence of Excommunication iſſued out againſt them, and to re-place them in the ſame Liberty and Condition in which they were before; aſſuring him at the ſame time, that they were ſo far perſuaded that they could not in Conſcience admit the Dominicans, that they would rather tranſplant their Schools into another Kingdom, or go back to their own Country, where they might have their Liberty; than be put under the intolerable Yoke of a forc'd and diſadvantagious Society. Before this Letter came to the Hands of the Pope, the Dominicans obtain'd three Bulls, almoſt the ſame Day, directed to the Biſhops of Orleans and Auxerre, which order'd the Execution of the firſt Bull, and enjoin'd theſe two Commiſſioners to declare all the Members of the Univerſity who would not admit the Dominicans, and even thoſe who were retir'd to avoid entring into a Society with them, to have forfeited all their Offices and Benefices. The Execution of theſe Bulls was ſtop'd by the Order of King Saint Lewis, who was minded to reſtore Peace to the Univerſity, and ſuppreſs theſe Conteſts. To attain this, he join'd his Remonſtrances with thoſe of the Biſhops conven'd at Paris, to engage the Secular Doctors and Dominicans to refer themſelves to the Archbiſhops of Bourges, Rheims, Sens and Roan. Theſe four Prelates having heard both Parties, and conſulted with other Biſhops, put an end at laſt to this Conteſt, the firſt of March 1256, by an Accommodation, in which the Seculars conſented, that the Dominicans ſhould for ever enjoy the two Divinity-Profeſſorſhips, upon Condition, that thoſe Monks remain'd ſeparate from the Scholaſtical Society of the Secular Doctors and Scholars of Paris, provided that they renounc'd the Bulls which they had, or might obtain contrary to theſe Conditions; that they would endeavour to have them revok'd, and that they would no more ſet upon the whole Univerſity, or any of its Members. This Treaty one would have thought ſhould have reſtor'd Peace to the Univerſity, but at Rome they were not inclin'd to ſuffer a Stop to be thus put to ſeveral Bulls, by an Accommodation in which the Holy See had no Hand. At the ſame time the Treaty was concluded Alexander made a Bull, by which he order'd the Biſhop of Paris to excommunicate all thoſe who hindred the Dominicans from Confeſſing, Preaching, Teaching, or being admitted into the Schools of others. Sometime after (in the Beginning of May) he order'd by another Bull, directed to all the Members of the Univerſity of Paris, the Execution of the former Bulls, and by a ſecond dated the ſame Day, he enjoin'd the Biſhop of Paris to make uſe of Canonical Penalties to oblige thoſe of the Univerſity who had moleſted the Dominicans, to give them Satisfaction, by calling in, if need were, the Secular Power. He exhorted King Saint Lewis by a third Bull, to ſuccour the Biſhop of Paris in quelling the Inſolence of thoſe who oppos'd the Execution of the Bulls. The Dominicans, not willing that it ſhould ſeem they had any Hand in the Non-Execution of the Treaty, requeſted the Pope, that he would revoke his Bulls, and approve of the Accommodation. But the Pope on the contrary in his Bull dated June 18 1256, declar'd, that, that Treaty having been made without his Knowledge, and to the Prejudice of what he had order'd, he diſapprov'd it, and by Name declar'd William of Saint Amour, Udo of Douay, Doctors in Divinity, Maſter Nicholas de Bar-ſur-Aube, and Chriſtian Canon of Beauvais, as the Principal Authors of this Diſturbance, to have forfeited all their Dignities and Benefices: He forbids their Teaching, and all manner of Perſons from hearing their Lectures; order'd, that they ſhould be baniſh'd the Kingdom; declar'd, that he would inflict the ſame Puniſhment on the reſt, if they did not ſubmit within fifteen Days after the Publication of his Bulls, and enjoin'd the Biſhop of Paris to excommunicate them, and to give away their Benefices. He reviv'd and confirm'd theſe very Orders by two other Bulls iſſu'd out about the end of the ſame Month.

The Conteſts between the Divines of Paris and the Dominican Friars.

The Conteſt between the Body of the Univerſity and the Dominicans, became at laſt a private quarrel, between the Monks and William de Saint Amour Doctor of the Sorbonne, and Divinity-Profeſſor, one of the moſt zealous Defenders of the Privileges of the Univerſity, and of the greateſt Adverſaries the Dominicans had to deal with. In the Year 1254, they accus'd him of having advanc'd ſeveral things contrary to the Honour of the Holy See, and of having made a ſcandalous Libel againſt the Pope. This Charge being brought before the King upon the Complaints of Gregory the Apoſtolick Nuncio, the matter was referr'd to the Biſhop of Paris, before whom William of Saint Amour clearly prov'd his Innocence, and the Falſity of that Accuſation. The Dominicans afterwards invented another, and under pretence of ſeveral Propoſitions, which the Univerſity of Paris had advanc'd againſt the luſty Mendicants, without naming any Perſon, they accus'd William of Saint Amour of calumniating their Order, and preſented to the King a Writing containing ſeveral erroneous Propoſitions, which they imputed to him. William of Saint Amour having procur'd a Copy thereof, prov'd in a Sermon which he preach'd in the Church of Innocents, that he had never taught thoſe Errors, and had only advanc'd ſuch Truths as were maintainable by ſeveral Paſſages of the Holy Scriptures. Sometime after he compos'd his Book concerning The Perils of the Laſt Times, which occaſion'd the Dominicans to renew their Complaints againſt him. He compos'd it, as 'tis ſaid, by the Order of ſeveral Biſhops, to diſcover by Holy Writ the Character of the falſe Prophets, who were to come in the Laſt Times, and to oppoſe the Book call'd The Eternal Goſpel, the Doctrine of which began to ſpread it ſelf. Pope Alexander IV. in rejecting the Accommodation made between the Univerſity and the Dominicans, condemn'd by Name William of Saint Amour, the principal Author of that Treaty, depriv'd him of a Chappel which he had, prohibited him from teaching, declar'd him to have forfeited all the Offices and Benefices which he might have, and requir'd that he ſhould be baniſh'd the Kingdom. This Sentence was not executed againſt him, William of Saint Amour was not proſcrib'd, but ſtill liv'd at Paris. The Dominicans delated him before the Biſhops of the Provinces of Sens and Rheims, who met at Paris in the Year 1256, and accus'd him of having advanced ſeveral falſe and erroneous Propoſitions, contrary to good Manners and the Honour of their Order. William of Saint Amour appeared before thoſe Prelates, and declar'd to them, that he had never advanced any Propoſition contrary to Truth and to the Salvation of Souls, that he had not condemn'd any Order, that had been approved by the Church of Rome; that he was ready to maintain what he had advanced, or to correct and retract, if they thought it proper. Thoſe Biſhops offered the Dominicans and William of Saint Amour to hold a Council, and to invite thither the Biſhops of the neighbouring Provinces and ſeveral learned Doctors, to try their Conteſts. William of Saint Amour and his Party accepted of the Propoſal; but the Dominicans would not refer themſelves to the Determination of the Council, ſo the Affair remain'd undecided, and the Quarrel roſe higher than ever. Then the Univerſity thought it was their Duty to ſend Deputies to Rome in their own Defence. They made choice of William of Saint Amour, Udo of Douay, Nicholas de Bar-Sur-Aube, John of Caſtiville, and John Bellin, to demand the Re-eſtabliſhment of the Peace of the Univerſity, and with Orders to maintain the Book concerning the Perils of the laſt Times, made by William of Saint Amour, and to urge the Condemnation of the Book call'd The Everlaſting Goſpel. Theſe Deputies procur'd recommendatory Letters from the Chapters of the Churches of the Province of Rheims, and prepar'd for their Journey to Rome; but the Dominicans were before-hand with them, and having ſent the Book concerning the Perils of the laſt Times to the Pope, it was examin'd by the Cardinals, and afterwards condemn'd by Alexander IV. as containing perverſe Opinions, contrary to the Power and Authority of the Pope and of other Biſhops, contrary to the Honour of thoſe who make Profeſſion of Poverty for God's ſake, and who do a great deal of good in the Church by their Zeal; contrary to the ſalutary State of poor Mendicant Friars, eſpecially the Dominicans and Minor Friars; laſtly, as a Book capable of raiſing great Scandals and Diſturbance, of cauſing the Ruin of ſeveral Souls, and of diverting the Faithful from Devotion and Charity, from Converſation and embracing Religion. 'Tis upon theſe Grounds that the Pope declares this Book to be Wicked, Criminal and Execrable, and prohibits all Manner of Perſons from approving, maintaining, reading and keeping it by them. He wrote at the ſame Time to the King and to the Biſhops of France ſeveral Bulls againſt this Book full of

Ex-

The Contests between William of St. Amour and the Dominicans.

Expreſſions of Indignation, and exhorted the Univerſity to treat the Domicans kindly, and to condemn ſincerely the Book of William of Saint Amour. But becauſe he was afraid, that his Orders would not punctually be executed, he heaped Bulls upon Bulls, and made uſe of all the Methods he could to get them to be executed. However the Deputies of the Univerſity not in the leaſt ſtartled at all theſe Efforts, continued their Journey; but being come to Anagnia where the Pope then was, there was only William of St. Amour, who ſtood firm, the other three condemn'd his Book: As for his Part he defended himſelf ſo well, that the Pope ſent him away abſolved. However he was no ſooner gone and returned ſick from Rome, but the Pope ſent him a Letter, by which he forbad him to go into France, under the Penalty of Excommunication, and of loſing all his Benefices, and debarr'd him from ever teaching or preaching, as a Puniſhment of ſeveral Faults, eſpecially for having compos'd the abominable and pernicious Book concerning the Perils of the laſt Times. At the ſame Time he ſent ſeveral other Bulls into France, to procure at any Rate the Execution of his Decree, againſt the Book and Perſon of William of St. Amour, and drew up an Act containing all the Points which he would have to be executed in the Univerſity of Paris, about the Mendicant Friars, which are (1.) That they ſhall be admitted into the Body of the Univerſity, and that the Bull Quaſi Lignum Vitæ, ſhall be executed according to the Form and Tenor thereof, without any Oppoſition. (2.) That the Dominican and Minor Friars, eſpecially Thomas Aquinas and Bonaventure ſhall be admitted bonâ fide, among the Doctors and Profeſſors of the Faculty. (3.) That they ſhall not force the Mendicant Friars to take any Oath, or make any Treaty contrary to this Order. (4.) That the Univerſity of Paris ſhall not be allowed to tranſlate themſelves elſewhere, under any Pretence whatſoever. (5.) That they ſhall preach and teach in Paris, that the Book condemned by the Pope deſerves it; that the Pope may ſend Preachers and Confeſſors where he pleaſes, without the Conſent of the inferior Prelates or Curates: That the Archbiſhops and Biſhops may likewiſe do the ſame without the Conſent of the Curates: That a State of Poverty embrac'd for the Sake of Jeſus Chriſt, is a State of Salvation and Perfection: That the poor Monks, who have forſaken their All for the Sake of Jeſus Chriſt, may beg for their Living without working with their Hands, tho' they be ſtrong and luſty, eſpecially thoſe who are imployed in reading, preaching and expounding the Word of God: That it ſhall be declar'd, that what is ſaid in that Book concerning falſe Prophets, falſe Apoſtles, Forerunners of Antichriſt who crept into Houſes, ought not to be underſtood of the Orders of the Dominican and Minor Friars: And that laſtly, it ſhall be acknowledg'd, that there have been Miracles wrought by the Saints who have been of thoſe two Orders. The Pope order'd the Cardinals to draw up this Writing, and ſent it to the Biſhop of Paris, with Orders to get it approv'd of and executed by Odo of Douay, and Chriſtian Canon of Beauvais, and in caſe they would not do it, to declare them perjur'd. Notwithſtanding all theſe Bulls, the ſecular Doctors of the Faculty of Paris would not admit the Dominicans, and perſever'd in their Separation from the Regulars, tho' William of St. Amour, to avoid the Storm that threatned him, retir'd into his Village of St. Amour, in the Franche-Comté. Alexander IV. thundered out freſh Bulls againſt them in the Year 1259. directed to the Biſhop of Paris, and carried the Point ſo far by his Threats and Cenſures, that he obliged moſt of the Members of the Univerſity to re-unite themſelves with the Mendicants who were admitted into the Body of the Univerſity, by a Decree dated February 21. 1259. upon Condition, that they ſhould always have the loweſt Place in the Acts and Aſſemblies, even after thoſe of the other regular Orders. At laſt the Pope died on the 24*th* of June, in the Year 1261. after he had granted above forty Bulls in favour of the Dominicans, againſt the Univerſity of Paris, or againſt its Members. After his Death there was a little Quiet in the Univerſity of Paris. William of St. Amour returned thither, and to juſtify himſelf, he alter'd the Title and the Method of his Book concerning the Perils of the laſt Times, and ſent it to Pope Clement IV. that he might examine it. That Pope return'd him Anſwer, That he ought to forget what was paſt, and beware of falling into the ſame Extravagancies: That the Book which he had ſent him contain'd the ſame in Subſtance as his firſt, tho' a little diſguis'd, but that not having read it quite through, he could not give him his Opinion of it, as he would do when he had made an End of reading it, and had conſer'd with Perſons of Judgment about it. This Letter bears Date October 17. 1266. The Year of the Death of William of St. Amour, has never yet been taken notice of by any Author. But his Epitaph which is in the Church of St. Amour in the County of Burgundy, where he was interr'd, informs us, that he died in the Year 1272. The Funeral Regiſter-book of the Church of Maſcon, informs us that it was the 13*th* of September. This was communicated to us, by Monſieur Francatel, who made Search after it. The Works of William of St. Amour were printed in the Year 1632. by the Care of a certain Doctor of the Sorbonne, who has conceal'd his Name under that of Alitophilus; as well as the Name of the City where they were printed, and the Printer's Name, under this Enigma, Conſtantiæ, ad Inſigne bonæ fidei apud Alitophilos.

The Contests between William of St. Amour and the Dominicans.

The Works of William of St. Amour.

The Book concerning the Perils of the laſt Times, is preceded by a Preface on the Book of Pſalms, an imperfect Commentary on the firſt Pſalm, and a Sermon on the Parable of the Publican and Phariſee, in which William of St. Amour deſcribes the Characters of the Phariſees ſet down in Scripture, and applies them to the Hypocrites of his Time, 'and 'chiefly (ſays he) to thoſe who pretend by their Habit and 'outward Behaviour, by a more auſtere Life, and by Spiritual 'Exerciſes which they have invented and eſtabliſhed by their 'Traditions, to an external Semblance of Sanctity and Religion, in order to be prais'd and had in Honour by Men: 'Theſe are (adds he) the Impoſtor-Monks, as may be proved by their Works, as it is written by St. Matthew, Chap. 7. You ſhall know them by their Fruits: I do not mean by 'thoſe Works which they ſhew to make themſelves believed 'to be holy: For they ſeem to be good, and for that Reaſon 'it is, that 'tis obſerved in the Gloſſary on that Place, That 'in the Eyes of Men they ſeem to be righteous by their Faſts, 'their Prayers, and their Alms; but theſe are not their Fruits, 'becauſe theſe Works are imputed to them as ſinful, by rea'ſon of that vain Glory, which they aim at: Therefore they 'are known by the Works which they do not ſhow, tho' 'they do them to obtain the Glory and Pleaſures of the 'World; becauſe there are ſome among them, who, as the 'Apoſtle ſays, in the ſecond Epiſtle to Timothy, Chap. 3. are 'rather Lovers of Pleaſure than Lovers of God. He after'wards ſets down four infallible Signs whereby to diſcover 'them, taken out of the ſame Goſpel: They love the firſt 'Places in the Feaſts, the chief Seats in the Synagogues, to be 'ſaluted in publick Places, and to be call'd by Men Rabbi. He 'afterwards explains thoſe Tokens after the following Man'ner: On the firſt (ſays he) it ought to be obſerv'd, that they 'may be ſaid to love the firſt Places in Feaſts, who frequent 'the Tables of Kings, Princes, and Prelates, who are the firſt 'at them to get the beſt of the Treat; which is unbecoming 'Regulars, and eſpecially Preachers, &c.' He likewiſe adds another Proof of the Love they have to the uppermoſt Places in Feaſts, viz. the Curioſity they have of diving into the Affairs of great Men, and of intermeddling with them: Upon the ſecond Token, which is the Loving of the uppermoſt Seats in the Synagogues; he obſerves, that they are juſtly to be charged with this, who get themſelves to be nominated by the ſecular Powers for to preach in Churches on the great Feſtivals, without having any Deference to the Authority of the Biſhops and other Prelates, who intrude themſelves into the Miniſtery without being call'd thereto, and who aim more at ſhewing their own Parts and Eloquence, than at Preaching the Word of God. Upon the third Sign or Token of loving to be ſaluted in the publick Places, he applies it to the Regulars, who get themſelves to be ſummon'd into the Conſiſtories of Princes and Prelates, who frequent them, who concern themſelves in giving their Judgments and Counſels in them, in order to attract the Reſpect of thoſe who have any Buſineſs there. Laſtly, on the laſt Token, viz. Their Deſire of being call'd Rabbi, Rabbi, he obſerves, that it is very applicable to the Regulars, who make uſe of Excommunication, and raiſe a Scandal in the Church, in order to obtain the Quality of Maſters.

This Diſcourſe is only an Introduction of that which William of St. Amour eſtabliſhes in his Book concerning the Perils of the laſt Times. In the firſt Chapter he proves from that Place of St. Paul, 2 Tim. 2. 1. That at the latter End of the Church there ſhould happen perilous Times. In the ſecond he deſcribes the Characters of thoſe who ſhall be the Cauſe of thoſe Perils, as they are ſet down in the ſame Place: Men Lovers of themſelves, Covetous, Boaſters, Proud, Blaſphemers, Diſobedient to Parents and Superiors, Unthankful, Unholy, Unnatural, falſe Accuſers, Incontinent, without Charity, Traytors, Heady, High-minded, Lovers of Pleaſure more than Lovers of God: Such as creep into Houſes, &c. He adds, that they are thoſe falſe Teachers, and falſe Prophets foretold by our Saviour, which he applies to thoſe who preach without a Call, without a Miſſion, and without the Leave of the Curates, under Pretence, that they have Permiſſion from the Pope, or the Biſhop. He obſerves, that he would not diſpute the Authority of the Pope, or of the Dioceſan Biſhop; but that the Licence which they grant to ſome to preach, ſignifies only in caſe they be invited thereto; ſince the Biſhops themſelves can do nothing out of their own Dioceſs, unleſs call'd by their Brethren, and that 'tis not to be ſuppos'd, that the Pope grants a Power to a great many Perſons of preaching to one and the ſame Auditory, if they be not invited to it by the Curates. In the third he demonſtrates what thoſe Characters were by which thoſe dangerous Men ſhall ſow thoſe Diſorders, namely, a Semblance of Piety, Religion, and Charity, which ſhall make them to paſs for true Chriſtians. In the fourth he explains the Perils to which the Faithful ſhall be expos'd by the Impoſture of thoſe falſe Preachers, who ſhall reſiſt the Truth as Jannes and Jambres reſiſted Moſes, that is to ſay, who ſhall ſeduce Princes and the Chriſtian People by their Shew of Wiſdom, and ſhall divert them from obeying the Counſels of their lawful Superiors in order to follow their corrupt Maxims and Morals. In the fifth he ſhews the Ways which they ſhall make uſe of to ſeduce them; viz. by creeping into Houſes, by making them diſcover their Secrets in Confeſſions, by ſeducing Women and the Simple; by making themſelves Lords and Maſters of their Souls, and by forcing them to make Vows; and by diverting them from the Submiſſion which they owe to their Paſtors. In the ſixth he ſays, that thoſe who ſhall not foreſee thoſe Perils ſhall be in Danger of periſhing by them. He proves in the ſeventh, that thoſe who are the Cauſe of them ſhall periſh. In the eighth he endeavours to prove by the Signs ſet down in Scripture, that theſe Perils are not far off. In the ninth he ſhews, that it chiefly belongs to the Prelates to foreſee, diſcover, and divert thoſe Perils. In the tenth he demonſtrates the Puniſhments to which they are liable in this World and the next, if they do not oppoſe them. In the eleventh he proves, that tho' thoſe Perils have been foretold, yet they might be diverted for a Time, if vigorouſly oppoſed. In the twelfth he explains the Methods which ought to be made uſe of in order to divert them: Which are, (1.) To conſider who thoſe Perſons are who creep into Houſes, and whether there be any ſuch in the Church. (2.) When one ſhall have diſcover'd them, to inform others of them. (3.) To injoyn them to avoid ſuch. (4.) To hinder them from preaching and teaching. (5.) To oblige thoſe who are of their Sect to withdraw themſelves from them. (6.) To hinder others from entring into their Sect, and in general to ſhun the falſe Prophets, the Idle who will not work with their Hands, and the Inquiſitive. He in this place oppugns the Practice of begging when one is ſtrong and luſty, and when a Man may get his Living by his Labour, and ſays, that 'tis a Piece of Injuſtice. In the thirteenth he examines among what Sort of Perſons we ought to ſearch after theſe Seducers, and pretends, that it is not among the Pagans, nor among the wicked or ignorant Chriſtians that this Search ought to be made; but amongſt the wiſe Perſons, among thoſe who profeſs to follow the Dictates of Jeſus Chriſt, who ſeem to be moſt holy and moſt prudent, that one would think them to be the Elect of Jeſus Chriſt. In a Word, in the laſt Chapter he reckons up forty one Marks to diſtinguiſh the falſe Apoſtles from the true, of which, ſays he, ſome are infallible, and others probable. In the Beginning he proteſts, that he had no Deſign of advancing any thing againſt any particular Perſon, or againſt any State or Order of Men, but only in general to declaim againſt the Sins of the Wicked, and the Perils of the Church: However 'tis eaſy to ſee, that he means the Dominican Friars, and that 'tis at them he aims, and whom he ſets upon in this Book which he ſubmits to the Correction of the Church.

The Works of William of St. Amour.

This Treatiſe is follow'd by two Pieces wherein he reſolves two Queries, viz. In the firſt, Whether it be lawful to give all one's Eſtate to the Poor, and be reduc'd to Beggary? In the ſecond, whether one ought to beſtow any Alms on a luſty Mendicant? He reſolves both in the Negative, founds his Reſolutions on ſeveral Paſſages out of the Scriptures and Fathers, and propoſes to himſelf the Objections which might be made to it, to which he returns his Anſwers. He concludes the ſecond Query, by aſſerting, That the Preachers ought not to ask any Money leſt it be an Occaſion to them of Covetouſneſs, and leſt they ſhould ſeem to be guilty of Simony.

Thoſe Writings are followed by the Anſwers which William of St. Amour, made to the erroneous Propoſitions which were laid to his Charge. He therein ſhews either that he never had advanced any ſuch thing, or that they had put a falſe Conſtruction on what he had ſaid; or that they had added to and perverted his Expreſſions. (1.) They accus'd him of having ſaid, that he who preaches commits a mortal Sin, if he receives or asks any thing of thoſe to whom he preaches. He replies, that he had never advanced this Propoſition; that on the contrary he had ſaid, That the Preacher who has a lawful Miſſion may receive for his Subſiſtence, and that 'tis his Due. (2.) Of having ſaid, That the Monks may not be Doctors nor hold Dignities. He replies, that he had not ſaid that; but had only ſaid, that the Monks who have abandon'd the World, ought not to be over ſollicitous in being made Doctors, as they ought not to hunt after the Riches, Honours, and Pleaſures of the World. (3.) Of having ſaid, that 'tis not lawful for Monks to reſide in the Courts of Princes and Prelates. He replies, that he had only ſaid, that it was dangerous for them. (4.) Of having ſaid, that he who preſents himſelf to preach without being call'd thereto, is guilty of a mortal Sin. He replies, that he had only ſaid, that one ought not to intrude into that Miniſtery without being call'd thereto. (5.) That he who admitted another's Pariſhoner to Confeſſion, was guilty of a mortal Sin: To which he replies, that he had added, without the Permiſſion of the Superior. (6.) That a Biſhop who preaches out of his own Dioceſs, commits a mortal Sin. He replies, that he had never ſaid thus; but had only ſaid, that 'tis not lawful for a Biſhop to execute his Epiſcopal Functions out of his own Dioceſs, without the Leave of the Ordinary. (7.) Of having ſaid, that he who gives away his whole Eſtate to live himſelf upon Charity, is not in a State of Salvation. He replies, that he had only ſaid, that a Man in Health, who has not wherewithal to live, ought to work with his Hands to get himſelf a Livelyhood: And to give a full Reſolution to this Head, he declares, That he who is not skill'd in any Trade, may beg till he has learned a Trade: That thoſe who are naturally incapable of working, ſuch as Children, aged, and infirm Perſons, might likewiſe beg: That the ſame might be extended to thoſe who are habitually render'd incapable of Working; that thoſe who cannot get Work, or cannot get a Livelyhood by Working, may likewiſe beg. Laſtly, That thoſe who by their Duty being employed in ſpiritual Functions, have not Time to work, may likewiſe beg. (8.) Of having aſſerted, that all thoſe who are in an Order, who have no Revenue, who are able to work and do not, but live on Alms; are not in a State of Salvation, and cannot be excus'd upon the account of Preaching. He replies, that he had only ſaid this upon the account of the great Number of Mendicants who are in the Nation, and eſpecially upon the account of certain young Perſons who were call'd Bons-Valets, and of certain Nuns, called Beguines, who are not of any Order approv'd by the Holy See. (9.) Of having ſaid, that the Handſomneſs of Habits is not profitable nor unprofitable to Salvation. He replies, that he never ſaid this, but only, that it was lawful to wear a fine Habit, provided it were not above the Quality of him who wears it, and againſt the Cuſtom of the Country. (10.) Of having ſaid, That he who wears a mean Habit beneath his Quality, ſins more than he who wears one above his Quality. He replies, that he had never ſaid this; but, that there might be ſomething of Pride in wearing a Habit beneath one's Quality, and that this Pride is a greater Sin becauſe of the Hypocriſy that attends it. That moreover in theſe two Articles, he aims at the Beguines and Bons-Valets, who ſay, that one may not wear a fine Habit, without endangering one's Salvation. (11.) Of having ſaid before the Biſhop of Maſcon, that the ſpiritual Functions do not excuſe a luſty Mendicant, who lives upon Alms. He replies, that he had already anſwer'd that Head. (12.) Of having ſaid, that Women who take upon them the Religious Habit, or cut off their Hair, and ſtill lead a ſecular Life, ſin heinouſly. He replies, that he never ſaid this, but only, that it was not lawful to take upon them an Habit different from that of their Profeſſion. (13.) Of having ſaid, that Jeſus Chriſt and the Apoſtles did not beg. He replies, that he had never read in Scripture, that they had any Right of receiving of thoſe to whom they preached, Things neceſſary for this Life: That after the Reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt, the Apoſtles preach'd, and that they received what was voluntarily offer'd to them, with a great deal of Difficulty. (14.) Of having advanced ſeveral things againſt the Pope's Decree, by which it was order'd to admit the Dominicans into the Univerſity of Paris, and ſuch Things as were prejudicial to that Order, and of having declar'd, that he was afraid, that they were the Men who crept into Houſes, who are idle and inquiſitive, who would be call'd Rabbi, Rabbi, &c. He replies, that it was true, that he was preſent at the Treaty which was made between the Mendicants and the Univerſity; that he had heard thoſe Objections ſtarted by thoſe who defended the Cauſe of the Univerſity; but that he had not propos'd them, as being neither the Proctor nor the Governor of the Univerſity. (15.) Of having ſaid, that they could not condemn the Books of Abbot Joachim, becauſe there were ſeveral Perſons who ſupported him. He replies, that he never ſaid this, but only, that ſeveral Errors of that Abbot had been already condemn'd, and that the others could not as yet have been condemn'd, becauſe they could not be detected in ſo ſhort a Time, by reaſon of the great Number of them, of the Buſineſs of thoſe who were imployed to examine them, and of the Credit of thoſe who maintain'd them. I omit the following Heads, which contain only either general Reproaches, or particular Matters of Fact, or are only a Repetition of what relates to the Habits and Poverty: And ſhall only ſpeak of that which relates to the Preaching and Miſſion of the Mendicant Friars. They had accus'd him of having maintain'd, That all thoſe who preached without being call'd by the Curates, tho' approv'd by the Pope, were falſe Prophets. He replies, That he never ſaid this, but only of thoſe who had no Miſſion either from their Ordinaries or the Pope. They accus'd him likewiſe of having ſaid, That tho' the Prieſts approv'd by the Biſhop may confeſs, yet they may not adminiſter the Sacrament of Penance. He replies, that he had only ſaid, That none but thoſe who have the Charge of Souls, or who have received their Miſſion from them, may confer the Sacrament of Penance. They farther accuſed him of having ſaid, That the Biſhop in collating a Curacy, granted the whole and retained the whole. He replies, that he had ſaid, that where a Biſhop gives a Cure to a Prieſt, the Prieſt has the immediate Juriſdi-

The Works of William of St. Amour.

ction

The Works of St. Amour.

ction thereof, and that the Biſhop has it mediante Presbytero; tho' he might ſometimes exerciſe it immediately by himſelf and that the Prieſt diſcharges the Biſhop non a toto ſed a tanto. Laſtly, he clear'd himſelf of the Charge laid againſt him, that he had advanc'd a great many Propoſitions againſt the falſe Prophets of his Time, who crept into Houſes, not only before Men of Learning, but alſo before the Simple and Ignorant, and when the Seculars and Regulars were at Variance: He cleared himſelf, I ſay, of this Charge, by declaring, That he had no Deſign of ſaying theſe Things againſt the Order of the Dominicans, nor againſt their Perſons, but only in general againſt all the falſe Prophets who crept into Houſes: That it was a very ſcandalous Thing for thoſe Religious to ſay, That they were pointed at by the Works of theſe falſe Prophets, becauſe they could not pretend any ſuch Thing, if thoſe Works did not in ſome Meaſure appear in their Actions: That tho' it might have been applied to them, yet the Truth ought not to be ſilenc'd upon that Account; and that the Scandal which they ſaid would enſue thereon, ought to be no Hindrance for publiſhing the Truth. That moreover, with Reſpect to the Book which they ſaid had been condemn'd by the Pope, and of which they made him the Author, it was compos'd by the Doctors of Divinity, and in Juſtification of the Univerſity of Paris, to ſatisfy the Prelates of the Gallican Church, who being admoniſh'd to beware of the Perils which ſhould happen in the laſt Times, had deſir'd that a Collection ſhould be made of the Paſſages of Scripture, wherein thoſe Perils were denoted; that he had ſet upon this Work jointly with ſeveral other Doctors, and reduc'd thoſe Paſſages under different Heads: That it had been alter'd five Times, and that it was the third Edition which had been diſapprov'd by the Cardinals, which had been corrected in the two next: That the Pope had only diſapprov'd of the Form of the Compoſure; that he was perſwaded, that if he had ſeen the fourth and fifth Editions, he would never have condemn'd them: And that laſtly, in the Beginning of each Edition, they ſubmitted the Work to the Correction of the Church, the Pope, and the other Prelates: That the Authors had corrected it themſelves, and had no Deſign of maintaining the Things which the Pope had condemn'd.

The largeſt Collection of William of St. Amour on this Subject, is that which he made during his Exile, and which he ſent to Pope Clement IV. It is divided into five Parts.

In the firſt he examines who thoſe falſe Prophets are of whom he ſpeaks, and ſhews how dangerous they are to the Church in general. In particular he ſhews in this Part, That the Honour, Juriſdiction, Order and Peace of the Church, conſiſt chiefly in maintaining the Rights of the Ordinaries, ſo that there be but one Biſhop in a Dioceſs, one Archdeacon in an Archdeaconry, and one Curate in a Pariſh. That 'tis true, that in Caſes of Neceſſity one may have Recourſe to extraordinary Supplies, and that the Pope, who is the Superior of Biſhops, and the Ordinary of Ordinaries, may upon lawful Occaſions, ſend into ſeveral Churches Perſons to preach the Goſpel, and to preſide over others. But that if he gave to a great many Perſons a general Commiſſion of preaching and adminiſtring the Sacrament of Penance, it was not probable that by this general Grant he would give them Liberty of exerciſing thoſe Functions in all Churches without asking Leave of the Prelates, and even in Defiance of them: That this would be to overthrow the Order of the Church, to diſturb its Peace and ſubvert its Laws. As to the Maintenance of thoſe Preachers, he owns, That he who preaches has a Right to receive of thoſe to whom he preaches the Goſpel wherewithal to live; but he ſays, That the Ordinaries, that is, the Biſhops and Curates have a Right to take what is neceſſary for them, as the Reward of their Labour: That thoſe who are delegated by the Pope, may likewiſe receive their Subſiſtence from thoſe to whom they are ſent; but that thoſe who are ſent by the Biſhops or by the other Prelates who have ſettled Revenues for the Cure of Souls ought to be maintain'd by thoſe who ſend them. That moreover it is not probable, that the Pope intended to ſend an infinite Number of Preachers who ſhould be a Charge to the People, and the rather becauſe Preaching and Adminiſtration of the Sacraments is forbidden to the Monks by the Canons, and reſerved to the Prelates: That the general Licence which the Pope grants to an infinite Number of Regulars, of whom he has no Knowledge, can ſignify no more than to render them capable of preaching and adminiſtring the Sacraments, when they ſhall be invited, and imployed by the Ordinaries in caſe of Neceſſity.

The Works of St. Amour.

In the ſecond Part, he treats of the Idleneſs and Begging of thoſe new Apoſtles. He maintains, That it is not lawful for Perſons in Health who can get their Living by their Labour, to live idle and to beg. He owns, That Eccleſiaſtical Employments diſpenſe Men from working with their Hands, but he particularizes ſeveral Sorts of ſpiritual Employments: Thoſe of Prelates and Curates who have a Right of receiving their Subſiſtence of thoſe who are under their Care: Thoſe of the Monks in their Churches and Monaſteries, who ought to live of their Revenues, and for whom the Biſhop in caſe they have not enough may provide: Thoſe of Perſons who ſtudy to render themſelves ſerviceable to the Church; ſuch as ſecular Students, who ought to be aſſiſted, and may require it in caſe they are not provided for: That Perſons who are ſtrong and in a Condition of getting their Living by their Work, do ſin ſo long as they are idle, and that Begging engages them in ſuch Circumſtances, as render them in Danger of their Salvation. That the Monks and Regular Clerks who attend at Prayers, Preaching and Study, are not thereby excus'd from working with their Hands, and have no Right to beg: That Jeſus Chriſt and his Apoſtles did never beg. He ſpeaks likewiſe by the Way, againſt the Monks being familiar with Women. Laſtly, he demonſtrates by ſeveral Arguments, That Labour is requiſite to a Monaſtical Life, oppoſes the Curioſity and Ambitus of the Monks.

The third Part contains the Methods which thoſe falſe Teachers make uſe of to inſinuate themſelves into the Affections of the Simple, which are Diſguiſes, Hypocriſy, the Affectation of a ſingular Sanctity, the Meanneſs of their Habit, and the Auſterity in their Way of Living.

The fourth Part contains the Marks whereby the falſe Prophets might be known, and the Methods of diſtinguiſhing them from the true Teachers, which are fifty in all.

Laſtly, in the laſt Part he relates the Means of preventing thoſe Perils, and ſhews the Obligation which the Biſhops and Paſtors lie under of applying a Remedy thereto, and how they ſhall be puniſhed who are negligent therein.

The Works of St. Amour.

There is likewiſe a Sermon of William of St. Amour on the ſame Subject, preached on the Feſtival of Saint Philip and Saint James, which contains the ſame Maxims.

The Style of that Author is plain, he advances nothing but what he confirms by a Paſſage of Scripture, or of the ordinary Comment, or of the Canon Law. In his great Work he likewiſe cites the Fathers, particularly the Treatiſe of Saint Auguſtine about the Labour of Monks, Saint Jerome, Saint Gregory, Saint Iſidore, Saint Anſelm, the Prophecies of Saint Hildegarda, &c. The Abſtract of his Works which we have already given you, and the Anſwers to the Objections made againſt him, are enough to acquaint us of his real Sentiments; but one cannot tell how to juſtify the malicious Application which he made of the Paſſages of Holy Writ, to the Orders of the Mendicant Friars, approv'd by the Holy See, and chiefly to that of the Dominicans: For tho' he declared, that he did not aim at them, yet the Occaſion of his Writing, and the Motive of undertaking that Task, put it out of all Queſtion, that he had them in his Eye, and that it is them he attacks without naming them, but by deſcribing them in a Way wherein he could hardly be blamed.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Errors advanced by Amaury, Abbot Joachim, and ſeveral others, and of their Condemnations.

The Doctrine of Amaury and his condemnation

IN the Beginning of the thirteenth Century, a Clerk Student at Paris, named Amaury, born in a Village in the Dioceſs of Chartres, call'd Bena, after he had for a long Time taught Logick, and expounded the Scriptures, kept ſtill a particular Method and ſingular Opinions. Among other things he maintain'd, That every Chriſtian was obliged to believe as an Article of Faith, that he was a Member of Jeſus Chriſt. This Opinion having been diſputed in the Schools of Paris, the Debate was brought before Innocent III. who after he had heard the Propoſitions of Amaury, and the Refutation of them by the Univerſity of Paris, condemned the Opinion of Amaury. Being returned to Paris, he was obliged to retract his Opinion with his Mouth, tho' not with his Heart. Within a ſhort Time after, he died, and was interred near the Monaſtery of Saint Martin in the Fields.

The Doctrine of Amaury and his condemnation

Of the Errors advanced by Amaury, &c. and their Condemnations.

The Errors of the Diſciples of Amaury and their Condemnation.

After his Death, ſome of his Diſciples publiſhed other Errors more dangerous than the former, as for Inſtance, That ſince the Time of the Law was paſt, the Sacraments were uſeleſs, and that every one is juſtified by the internal Grace of the Holy Spirit: That the Vertue of Charity takes away the Sinfulneſs of an evil Action; and according to this Maxim, they committed Crimes contrary to Chaſtity with the Women who followed them, and which they ſuffer'd to go unpuniſhed, under the Pretence of Charity. Other Authors accuſe them likewiſe of Teaching. (1.) That the Body of Jeſus Chriſt was no more on the Altar in conſecrated Bread, than in any other Loaf. (2.) That God had ſpoken by Ovid, as well as by St. Auguſtine. (3.) That there was no Reſurrection, nor any other Heaven or Hell, than good Thoughts and mortal Sins. (4.) That one ought not to honour the Saints or their Relicks. A Goldſmith nam'd William was the Head of this Sect: He call'd himſelf the Ambaſſador of God, and propheſied, that before five Years the World ſhould be ſmitten with four Plagues; with Famine on the People, with the Sword on the Princes, with Earthquakes which ſhould ſwallow up Cities, and with Fire on the Prelates of the Church. He call'd the Pope Antichriſt, Rome Babylon, and all the Church-men Members of Antichriſt. He likewiſe foretold, that King Philip Auguſtus and his Son, ſhould ſoon reduce all Nations under the Obedience of the Holy Ghoſt. Peter Biſhop of Paris, and Jurin the King's Counſellor, being inform'd of this new Sect, to diſcover who were of it, made uſe of a Man, who likewiſe pretended to be of it. By this Means ſeveral were diſcovered and apprehended, who being brought to Paris were condemned in a Council held 1209. and afterwards burnt by the Order of King Philip. The Authors of that Time reckon up fourteen of them, whoſe Names and Qualities they tell us: There were ſome Prieſts, and almoſt all had ſtudied Divinity. Of thoſe fourteen ten were burnt, three were condemned to perpetual Impriſonment, and one who became a Monk before he was apprehended. They condemned the Memory of Amaury, his Bones were dug up and thrown into the common Sewer. He who diſcovered thoſe Hereticks by pretending to be of their Sect, applied himſelf to the Abbot of St. Victor, to Maſter Robert and Friar Thomas, who conſulted the Biſhop of Paris, and three other Maſters about it, by whoſe Advice, he who had diſcovered thoſe Hereticks, continued with another Prieſt to feign himſelf to be one of them.

Ariſtotle's Works condemned

They condemned in the Council of Paris, Ariſtotle's Books of Metaphyſicks and Phyſicks, newly brought from Conſtantinople, and tranſlated into Latin: They order'd them to be burnt, and forbad the reading them under pain of Excommunication. This Prohibition was confirm'd about the Year 1215. by the Pope's Legate who endeavoured to reform the Univerſity; but he allowed the teaching of the Logicks of that Philoſopher. Gregory IX. in the Year 1231. renewed it, but withal adding, That he did not forbid the reading Ariſtotle's Books, but till ſuch Time as they were corrected. In the Year 1265. Simon Legate of the Holy See, in reforming the Univerſity, confirm'd the Conſtitution of the Year 1215. about the Books of Ariſtotle, without taking any Notice of the Correction. But in the Reform of the Univerſity in the Year 1366. they permitted the reading the Books of Phyſicks, as well as the reſt. This was the Fortune of the Works of that Philoſopher at that Time.

The Opinion of Abbot Joachim.

Abbot Joachim having in his Books advanced ſeveral Propoſitions againſt the irregular Morals of his Time, and exhorted Men to aſpire after a greater Perfection, than that which was practiſed in the World: Some took Occaſion from thence to believe, That the Law of the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt, which they thought imperfect, would ſuddenly expire, and that the Law of the Spirit a great deal more perfect, would ſucceed it. This Doctrine ſpread among a great many ſpiritual Men, and one of them made a Book to eſtabliſh it, to which he gave the Title of The eternal Goſpel.

The Condemnation of that Book.

This Piece appeared about the Beginning of this Century; but what is the Author's Name is not known: Matthew Paris aſcribes it to the Order of the Jacobines, Aimeric to John the ſeventh General of the Franciſcans. Let the Caſe be how it will, 'tis certain, that a great many Monks approv'd of this Work, and that ſome of them would have taught this Doctrine publickly in the Univerſity of Paris, in the Year 1254. but the Biſhops oppoſed it: And the Book of the Eternal Goſpel was condemned to be burnt in the Year 1256. by Pope Alexander IV. who at the ſame Time proſcrib'd thoſe who maintain'd the Doctrine of that Book, as William of St. Amour, and Ptolemy of Lucca aſſure us.

The Errors of that Book.

All the Errors of this Book turn upon this Principle, That the Law of the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt was imperfect, in Compariſon of the Law of the Spirit, which was to ſucceed it: For according to this Book, the Law of the Goſpel was to laſt no longer than twelve hundred and ſixty Years, and conſequently was upon expiring. The Author of that Book advanc'd, beſides this, ſeveral particular Errors, viz. That none but ſpiritual Men had the true Knowledge of the Scriptures: That only thoſe who went Bare-foot were capable of preaching the ſpiritual Doctrine: That the Jews, tho' adhering to their Religion, ſhall be loaded with good Things, and delivered from their Enemies: That the Greeks were more ſpiritual than the Latins, and that God the Father ſhould ſave them: That the Monks were not obliged to ſuffer Martyrdom in Defence of the Worſhip of Jeſus Chriſt: That the Holy Ghoſt received ſomething of the Church, as Jeſus Chriſt as Man had received of the Holy Ghoſt: That the active Life had laſted till Abbot Joachim; but that ſince his Time it was become uſeleſs: That the contemplative Life had begun from his Time, and that it ſhould be more perfect in his Succeſſors: That there ſhould be an Order of Monks by far more perfect, which ſhould flouriſh when the Order of the Clergy was periſhed: That in this third State of the World, the Government of the Church would be wholly committed to thoſe Monks, who ſhould have more Authority than the Apoſtles ever had: That thoſe Preachers perſecuted by the Clergy, ſhould go over to the Infidels, and might excite them againſt the Church of Rome. Theſe are ſome of the Extravagancies which the Authors relate, as extracted out of the Book of the Eternal Goſpel.

Of the Errors advanced by Amaury, &c. and their Condemnations.

The Condemnation of the Joachimites in the Council of Arles.

The Maintainers of this Work are called Joachites, or rather Joachimites in the Council of Arles, 1260. wherein their Doctrine was examined and condemned in theſe Terms: 'Among the falſe Prophets who appear at this Time, none are more dangerous than thoſe who taking for the Foundation of their Folly ſeveral Ternaries, in part true, and making falſe Applications of them, eſtabliſhed a very pernicious Doctrine, and wickedly affecting to do Honour to the Holy Ghoſt, do impudently derogate from the Redemption of Jeſus Chriſt, by aiming to include the Time of the Reign of the Son and his Works, within a certain Number of Years; after which the Holy Ghoſt ſhall act: As if the Holy Ghoſt were to act with more Power and Majeſty for the future, than he has done yet ſince the Beginning of the Church. Theſe Joachites, by a Chimerical Concatenation of certain Ternaries, maintain, That the Time of the Holy Ghoſt ſhall for the future be enlightned with a more perfect Law; laying down for the Foundation of their Error, this Holy and Celeſtial Ternary, of the ineffable Perſons of the ever-bleſſed Trinity, Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, and are for eſtabliſhing their Error on the Baſis of all theſe Truths. They add to this ſovereign Truth other Ternaries, by aſſerting, That there ſhall be three States or Orders of Men, who have had, or ſhall have each their proper Seaſon: The firſt is that of married Perſons, which was in Repute in the Time of the Father, that is, under the Old Teſtament: The ſecond is that of Clerks, which has been in Eſteem in the Time of Grace by the Son in this Age of the World: The third is the Order of Monks, which ſhall be glorified in Time with a larger Meaſure of Grace, which ſhall be given by the Holy Ghoſt. Three Sorts of Doctrines anſwer to theſe three States, the Old Teſtament, the New, and the eternal Goſpel, or the Goſpel of the Holy Ghoſt. Laſtly, they diſtinguiſh the whole Duration of the World into three Ages: The Time of the Spirit of the Law of Moſes, which they attribute to the Father; the Time of the Spirit of Grace, which they attribute to the Son, and which has laſted 1260 Years; and the Time of a more ample Grace and of unveiled Truth, which belongs to the Holy Ghoſt, and of which Jeſus Chriſt ſpeaks in the Goſpel, when he ſaies, When that Spirit of Truth ſhall come, he will teach you all Truth. In the firſt State, Men liv'd according to the Fleſh; in the ſecond, between Fleſh and Spirit; and in the laſt, which ſhall endure to the End of the World, they ſhall live according to the Spirit. The Conſequence which they draw from this Fiction of Ternaries, is, That the Redemption of Jeſus Chriſt has no more Place, and that the Sacraments are aboliſhed; which the Joachites have almoſt the Impudence to advance, by aſſerting, that all Types and Figures ſhall be aboliſhed at this Time, and that the Truth ſhall appear all naked without the Veil of Sacraments. Maxims theſe are which ought to be abominated by all Chriſtians who have read the holy Fathers, and who firmly believe, that the Sacraments of the Church are viſible Signs and Images of inviſible Grace; under the Elements of one of which the Son of God abides, as he has promiſed, in his Church to the End of the World.'

This Council adds, That tho' this Doctrine had been condemned a while ago by the Holy See in its Cenſure of the Book of The eternal Goſpel; yet becauſe ſeveral Perſons maintain'd it under a Pretence, that the Books which ſerv'd as a Foundation to that Error had not been examin'd nor condemn'd (viz. the Book of Concordances, and the other Books of the Joachites, which till then remain'd undiſcuſs'd, becauſe they lay conceal'd in the Hands of ſome Monks, and began then to appear in the World, and to infatuate the Minds of many) it condemns and diſapproves of thoſe Works, and prohibits the making uſe of them under pain of Excommunication.

The Propoſitions condemned by William of Paris.

In the Year 1240. William Biſhop of Paris, having convened all the Regent Doctors of the Univerſity, condemn'd ten Propoſitions which had been taught, as Matthew Paris obſerves by the Profeſſors of the Dominican and Franciſcan Orders, who willing to diſpute with too much Subtilty, and of Paris, to to dive too far into Mysteries, were fallen into Error by the just Judgment of God, says that Author, to whom the Wisdom and Simplicity of a firm Faith is more acceptable than too great Subtilty in Divinity; it being more safe and meritorious to receive and believe with Simplicity, what the Fathers have taught, than to adhere to that which must be proved and discovered by humane Reason. The ten Propositions are these. (1.) That the Essence of God shall not be seen by Men, or Angels. (2.) That the Divine Essence, tho' the same in the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, yet as it is, that Essence and the Form, 'tis one in the Father and the Son, and not in the Holy Ghost. (3.) that the Holy Ghost proceeds not from the Son, since he is Love and Unity, but only from the Father. (4.) That there are several eternal Truths which are not himself. (5.) That the first Moment, the Creation and the Passion, are neither the Creator nor the Creature. (6.) That the wicked Angel had been wicked from the first instant of his Creation. (7.) That the Souls in Bliss and even that of the Blessed Virgin her self shall not be in the Empyreal Heaven with the Angels, but in the Crystalline Heaven. (8.) That an Angel may be in many Places at one and the same time, and even every where. (9.) That he who is endued with better natural Parts, shall have more Grace than another. (10.) That the Devil had no support to keep him from falling, nor Adam to keep in his State of Innocence. The Assembly after they had censured these Propositions, declared, that Men ought firmly and without doubt to believe, (1.) That the Substance, Essence and Nature of God shall be seen by the Holy Angels and the Blessed Souls. (2.) That there is but only one substantial Essence and only one Nature in the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, even as it is the Form. (3.) That the Holy Ghost as Unity and as Love proceeds from the Father and the Son. (4.) That there is but only one eternal Truth which is God, and that no other has been from all Eternity. (5.) That the first Moment, the Creation and Passion, are Creatures. (6.) That the Bad Angels have been Good, and became Bad by their Sin. (7.) That the Souls of the Blessed and their Bodies shall be in the Empyreal Heaven, as well as the Holy Angels. (8.) That the Angels are in a distinct place, so that they cannot be in two Places at once, much less every where. (9.) That Grace and Glory are granted according to the Order and Predestination of God. (10.) That the wicked Angels and Adam had Support to keep them from falling, tho' not sufficient to carry them on into Perfection.

About the same time William Professor of the Franciscan Friars having advanced in a Sermon preached on the Festival of St. John Baptist in the Church of his Monastery, several Propositions about Free Will and Free Grace, was oblig'd to retract the two following, in an Assembly of the Doctors of Divinity of Paris. (1.) Free Will is a Natural Power to receive Grace, but not an Effective, or Co-operating Power for the entertaining of Grace. (2.) He who is damned, has never been in a State of Grace, but has been always an Ishmael or a Judas, never a Saint John.

The Retractation of William the Franciscan.

In the Year 1270, in December, Stephen Templar Bishop of Paris condemn'd other Propositions taught by several Professors in Philosophy and Divinity of the University of Paris which are thirteen in Number. (1.) That the Understanding of all Men is one and the same in Number. (2.) That this Proposition Homo intelligit, is false and improper. (3.) That the Will chuses and wills by necessity. (4.) That all sublunary things are subjected to the Influences of the Heavenly Bodies. (5.) That the World is eternal. (6.) That there never was a first Man. (7.) That the Soul of Man as being the Form of him, is corruptible. (8.) That the separated Soul does not suffer eternal Fire. (9.) That Free Will is a passive, not an active Power and that 'tis led by the sensitive Appetite. (10.) That God has no Knowledge of singular things. (11.) That he knows nothing externally without himself. (12.) That the Actions of Men are not govern'd by Providence. (13.) That God cannot give Immortality, or Incorruptibility to a mortal, and corruptible Creature. The Bishop of Paris order'd the Rector of the University not to suffer that Questions of Faith should be disputed in the Philosophy-Schools, and the University provided against it by a Statute made April the first 1271, by which it declar'd, that all those who after they have proposed Questions which may concern Faith and Philosophy, shall decide them against the Faith, or shall maintain those Propositions true, according to Principles of Philosophy tho' contrary to the Faith; shall be expelled the University.

Propositions condemned by Stephen Templar Bishop of Paris.

Notwithstanding this Maxim, that one and the same thing may be true according to Philosophy, and false according to Faith, spreading it self: The same Bishop being admonished by Pope John XXI. forbad it in the Year 1277, and condemned a great many Errors which they took the Liberty to maintain under this Pretence, as if there might be two Truths, one according to Philosophy, and another according to Faith. He likewise condemned a Book call'd, Of Love, or Of the God of Love, and some Writings of Geomancy, Necromancy and Witchcraft.

CHAP. IX.

An Account of the Sects of the Vaudois and Albigenses, and other Hereticks: Of their Errors, Condemnation, Adversaries, of the Inquisitions, Croisades, and Wars rais'd against them.

The Rise of the Sect of the Vaudois.

About the Year 1160, Peter Valdo a rich Merchant of Lyons being in an Assembly of his Brethren was so sensibly affected at the sudden Death of one of them, that he took upon him a Resolution of altering his way of Living, and explaining the Words of Jesus Christ against Riches in a literal Sense, he distributed all his Goods to the Poor of the City, to make a Profession of voluntary Poverty, and to revive, as he pretended, the way of Living among the Apostles. Several Persons having followed his Example, they formed a Sect of People whom they called the Vaudois, or Waldenses from the Name of their first Founder; The Poor of Lyons, because of the Poverty of which they made Profession; Leonisti, from the Name of the City of Lyons, and Insabbatates, upon the Account of certain Shoes, or Sandals, which they wore, cut on the top to shew their bare Feet, in Imitation of the Apostles, as they supposed. Valdo having some Learning, explain'd to them the New Testament in the Vulgar Tongue. He instructed them so well, that they took the Fancy upon them not only of imitating the voluntary Poverty of the Apostles, but also of preaching and teaching, tho' they were Laicks and had no Mission. The Clergy of Lyons having reprov'd them for it, they began to declaim against the Ecclesiasticks and against their Irregularities, giving out with a great deal of Haughtiness, that the only Reason why they opposed their Preachings, was because they envy'd the Sanctity of their Morals, and the Purity of their Doctrine. The Pope enjoined them Silence, judging that it did not belong to Laicks who had but very little Learning to preach the Word of God; but they did not hearken to the Voice of his Holiness, and continued to preach boldly. Pope Lucius III. excommunicated and condemned them with other Hereticks. His Bulls only serv'd to exasperate them, to confirm them in their Obstinacy, to put them upon shaking off entirely the Yoke of Obedience, and to engage them to maintain divers Errors. Their Sect spread it self in several Places, which obliged Alphonso King of Arragon to condemn them in the Year 1195. Bernard Archbishop of Narbonne proscrib'd them, and some time after held a Conference with them, wherein they were convicted of several Errors. Notwithstanding these Condemnations, some among them applied themselves to the Pope, to obtain from the Holy See the Confirmation of their Institution; but the Pope having learned that there was Superstition in their Conduct, rejected them and in their stead approved of the Order of the Franciscans, who tho' they were not guilty of those Superstitious Practices yet went barefoot, and made a Vow of voluntary Poverty.

The Rise of the Sect of the Vaudois.

The Errors of the Waldenses or Vaudois.

The Waldenses or Vaudois in their first Rise were not guilty of any great Errors; but they fell into them by Degrees. We may find out the Progress of them from the Authors who have treated of them. The Design of Valdo was not to establish a new Sect, nor to maintain new Tenets; but to set up a Society of Persons who should practise according to the Letter, the Advices of the Gospel, and who should revive the Apostles way of Living. There was nothing to be blam'd in all this, if they had not made an Ostentation of voluntary Poverty, and adher'd to such Superstitious Practices, such as cutting their Shoes to shew their naked Feet, the wearing of particular Habits, and never cutting the Hair of their Heads. They afterwards assumed to themselves the Power of Preaching, tho' Laicks and without a Mission. At first they only exhorted others to imitate their way of Living; but the Clergy opposing their Preaching, they began to rebel against the Prelates, and to shake off the Yoke of Obedience: They declaimed against the Manners of the Ecclesiasticks, and maintain'd, that their Unworthiness rendred them incapable of their Ministry, that they were not oblig'd to obey them, and that Laicks may preach without their Permission. But going still farther, they taught, that the Ministers whose Manners were irregular could neither consecrate, nor grant Absolution because they did not lead an Apoſtolical Life, and they uſurped that Right to themſelves, even tho' they were only Laicks: They likewiſe maintained, that all Paſtors were obliged to embrace a Life of Poverty, by entirely renouncing all their Eſtates: That it was not lawful to ſwear upon any Account whatever, nor to put Men to Death, tho' for an Offence. They afterwards oppugned the Doctrine of the Church about the Worſhipping of Saints, their Relicks, the Indulgencies and Ceremonies of the Church, the Sacraments and Purgatory.

The Errors of the Waldenſes or Vaudois.

This was the State and Condition of the Sect of the Waldenſes or Vaudois about the Year 1250, as we are informed by Rainerius Sacbo, who reduc'd their Errors to three Heads. The firſt contains the Blaſphemies which they uttered againſt the Church, its Inſtitutes, and againſt the whole Body of the Clergy: The ſecond comprehends the Errors which they advanced againſt the Sacraments of the Church and againſt the Saints; and the third the Declamations which they made againſt the laudable Cuſtoms approved by the Church. A particular Account of thoſe Errors we here give you, as they are related by Rainerius. 'In the firſt Place they ſay, that the Church 'of Rome is not the Church of Chriſt, but a Church of Wicked Men, and that it has ceas'd from being ſo, ever ſince 'the time of St. Sylveſter, when the Poiſon of Temporalities entred the Church. They add, that they are the Church 'of Jeſus Chriſt, becauſe they follow the Doctrine of Jeſus Chriſt and the Apoſtles in their Words and Actions. 'The ſecond Error which they teach is, that the Church is 'full of Vices and Sins, and that they are the only Perſons 'who live holily. The third, that ſcarce any beſides them 'hold the Doctrine of the Goſpel. The fourth, that they are 'the truly poor in Spirit, who ſuffer Perſecution for Righteouſneſs ſake, and for the Faith. The fifth, that they are 'the true Church of Jeſus Chriſt. The ſixth, that the Roman 'Church is that Harlot mention'd in the Apocalypſe, becauſe of 'its ſuperfluous Ornaments, of which the Eaſtern Church is 'not ſo nice. Seventhly, they deſpiſe the Laws of the Church, 'as being too many and too burdenſome. Their eighth Error is, that the Pope is the Author of all Errors. The ninth, 'that the Prelates are the Scribes, and the Monks are the Phariſees. The tenth, that the Pope and all the Biſhops are Homicides becauſe of the Wars which they tolerate. The 'eleventh, that they ought not to obey the Prelates but only 'God. The twelfth, that all the Members of the Church 'are equal. The thirteenth, that no Perſon ought to bow 'the Knee before a Prieſt. The fourteenth, that they ought 'not to pay Tithes. The fifteenth, that Clerks ought not to 'have Eſtates in Land. The ſixteenth, that neither Clerks 'nor Regulars ought to have Prebends. The ſeventeenth, 'that the Biſhops and Abbots ought not to have any Royalties. The eighteenth, that one ought not to divide the Land 'and the People. The nineteenth, that 'tis ill done to found 'and endow Churches. The twentieth, that nothing ought 'to be bequeath'd to Churches by Laſt Wills and Teſtaments. 'They likewiſe maintained, that no Perſon ought to pay any 'Rent to the Church. They condemned the Eccleſiaſticks 'for their Idleneſs, and pretended that they ought to work 'with their Hands as the Apoſtles did. They rejected the 'Titles of Prelacies, of Pope, of Biſhops, &c. They con'ſidered all the Eccleſiaſtical Benefices as null and void. 'They had no regard to the Privileges of the Church. They 'deſpiſed the Exemptions of Church-goods and Church-men. 'They valued not Councils and Synods. They pretended, 'that all the Privileges of Curates were of humane Inventi'on, and that the Rules made by the Monks are Phariſaical 'Traditions.

'In the ſecond place, They condemned all the Sacraments 'of the Church, and firſt about Baptiſm they ſay, that the 'preliminary Admonition is worth nothing; that the waſhing 'of Infants is of no avail to them; that the Sureties do not 'underſtand what they anſwer to the Prieſt: Laſtly, they re'ject all the Exorciſms and all the Benedictions of that Sacrament. They likewiſe reject the Sacrament of Confir'mation, and wonder that only Biſhops are allow'd to ad'miniſter it. Concerning the Sacrament of the Euchariſt 'they ſay, that the Prieſts who are in any mortal Sin cannot 'conſecrate, and that Tranſubſtantiation was not effected in 'the Hands of him who conſecrated unworthily, but in the 'Mouth of him who received the Euchariſt worthily, and 'that one might conſecrate on a common Table, according 'to what the Prophet Malachy ſays, They ſhall offer in all 'Places a pure Offering in my Name. They likewiſe condemned the Cuſtom of Chriſtians who communicated only 'once a Year, becauſe themſelves communicated daily. 'They ſaid, that Tranſubſtantiation ought to be made with 'Words in the vulgar Tongue. That the Maſs was nothing, 'becauſe the Apoſtles never ſaid it, and they only ſaid it for 'their own Intereſt. They received not the Canon of the 'Maſs, but only made uſe of the Words of Jeſus Chriſt in 'the vulgar Tongue. They called the Chanting of the Church 'an infernal Crime. They rejected the Canonical Hours, 'They maintain, that the Offering made to the Prieſt at Maſs 'ſignifies nothing, and diſapproved of kiſſing the Pyx and 'the Altar. About the Sacrament of Penance, they ſaid, 'that no body could be abſolv'd by a wicked Prieſt; and 'on the contrary a good Laick has that Power. That they 'remit Sins and confer the Holy Ghoſt by the Impoſition of 'Hands. That it was better to confeſs one's ſelf to a good 'Laick than to a bad Prieſt: That they ought not to impoſe 'large Penances, but to follow the Example of Jeſus Chriſt, 'who ſaid to the Adultreſs, Go and ſin no more. They re'ject the publick Penances and the annual general Confeſſi'ons. They likewiſe caſt a blemiſh on the Sacrament of Mar'riage, by maintaining, that it was a mortal Sin for a Man to 'have to do with his Wife, when ſhe was paſt Child bearing. 'They did not acknowledge the ſpiritual Alliance, nor the 'Impediments of Affinity and Conſanguinity appointed by the 'Church, no more, than thoſe of publick Order and Decency. They hold, that Women have no need of Benediction 'after their lying in; that the Church was in the wrong in 'prohibiting the Clergy from marrying, and that they who 'live continently do not ſin by Kiſſes and Embraces. They 'do not approve of the Sacrament of extreme Unction, be'cauſe it was only given to the Rich, and ought to be adminiſtred by a great many Prieſts; that all the Laicks are ſo 'many Prieſts; that the Prayers of wicked Prieſts ſignify no'thing. They laughed at the clerical Tonſure. They ſay, 'that the Laicks ought not to pray in Latin, that all the La'icks even the Women may preach; that whatever is not 'in the Scriptures is fabulous. They celebrate and adminiſter 'the Sacraments in the vulgar Tongue. They learn by heart 'all the Text of the Scriptures, and reject the Deciſions and 'Expoſitions of the Fathers. They deſpiſe Excommunication, 'and have little or no regard to Abſolution. They laugh at 'Indulgencies and Diſpenſations. They do not allow of 'any Irregularity. They believe no other Saints, but the Apoſtles, 'and invocate no ſaints, but God alone. They deſpiſe the Canonizations, Tranſlations, Vigils of the Saints. They laugh at 'the Laicks who make choice of Saints in the Lots which they 'draw upon the Altar. They never ſay any Litanies. They do not 'believe the Legends. They ridicule the Miracles, and have no 'Eſteem for Relicks. They look upon Croſſes as common 'Wood. They teach that the Doctrine of Jeſus Chriſt and 'the Apoſtles is ſufficient to Salvation, without being oblig'd 'to obſerve the Laws of the Church, and that the Tradition of 'the Church is the Tradition of the Phariſees. They do not 'allow of any myſtical Meaning in the Scriptures, nor in the 'Practices or Ceremonies of the Church.

The Errors of the Waldenſes or Vaudois.

'In the third place theſe are the Errors which they held 'concerning the Uſages of the Church. They deſpiſed all 'the approved Cuſtoms which are not to be met with in the 'Goſpel, ſuch as the Feſtivals of Candlemaſs, and Palm-Sunday, 'the reconciling of Penitents, the Adoration of the Croſs, 'the Feſtival of Eaſter, with thoſe of Jeſus Chriſt and the 'Saints. They ſay, that all Days are equal, and work on 'Holy days as well as on other Days. They do not obſerve 'the Faſts of the Church. They deſpiſe the Dedications, the 'Benedictions and the Conſecrations of Wax-Tapers, Boughs, 'chriſm, fire, the paſchal lamb, Lying-in-Women, pilgrims, holy 'Places, ſacred perſons, ornaments, ſalt and water. They would 'have no walled Church; and diſapprove of the Dedication 'of Churches and Altars, and their Ornaments; the Sacerdotal Habits, the Chalices and the Corporals. They would 'not have any lighted Tapers, nor any Incenſe offer'd, nor 'any Holy Water us'd. They condemn Images, the Chanting of the Church, Proceſſions on Feſtivals or Rogation-'Days. They find fault, that a Prieſt is allowed to ſay ma'ny Maſſes on one Day. They make merry during the time 'of Interdiction. They go not to Churches, and perform 'the Duties of Chriſtians only in Appearance and hypocritically. They condemn the Eccleſiaſtical Burial, the Ceremonies of Interments, the Maſſes and Prayers for the Dead. 'and the Confraternities. They deny Purgatory, and maintain, that there are only two States after Death, one for the 'Good and Elect in Heaven, and the other for the Reprobate and Damned in Hell. They teach, that all Sin is in its 'own nature Mortal, and that there is no ſuch thing as a 'Venial Sin. They pretend, that it is unlawful to ſwear; 'whereupon thoſe that are perfect among them chuſe rather 'to die than to ſwear. Thoſe who are not ſo perfect, ſwear, 'but do not think themſelves oblig'd to keep their Oath, and 'look upon thoſe who exact it of them as more guilty than 'Homicides. They condemn all Princes and Judges, being 'perſuaded, that 'tis not lawful to puniſh Malefactors. Laſtly, 'they condemn the Eccleſiaſtical Judgments.

Policdorſius who wrote about an hundred Years after Rainerius againſt the Vaudois, relates the Original of them after the ſame manner, and obſerves, that at firſt they only oppugn'd the Diſcipline and the Ceremonies of the Church without reflecting on the Sacraments; but that afterwards they thought fit to hear Confeſſions, to impoſe Penances, and to grant Abſolution, and that within a while after ſome among them intruded to conſecrate the Body of Jeſus Chriſt, and to communicate to others; but that ſeveral of their Sect had diſapproved proved of that Conduct. the Errors of the Vaudois which Pelichdorfius refutes in his Work, are, (1.) That the Sacerdotal Order was sunk ever since the time of St. Sylvester, and that the true Faith was obscured, and only a few Elect in the World. (2.) That the Priests and the other Clergy of the Church of Rome being Fornicators, Usurers, Drunkards, &c. have not the Holy Ghost, cannot confer it, and are not to be obey'd. (3.) That the Blessed Virgin and the Glorifyed Saints do not regard what is done here on Earth, and do not pray for us; that therefore it is needless to invocate them, and that God alone is to be prais'd, honour'd, and pray'd to (4.) That there are but two States after Death, and consequently no Purgatory. (5.) That tis not better to be interr'd in a Church-yard than elswhere: That 'tis needless to consecrate Churches, Altars, Sacerdotal Habits; to bless Water, Ashes, Wax-tapers, &c. (6.) That the Chanting of the Church is condemnable: That the Canonical Hours and all the other Prayers are useless except the Pater-noster, which is the only Prayer that ought to be us'd, and that all that is said at Mass ought to be rejected, as being of human Institution, except the Words of Consecration and the Lord's Prayer. (7.) That Pilgrimages, Indulgences, and the Jubilee, ought to be rejected. (8.) That Excommunication is of no force. (9.) That one ought not to have any Images, or to pay them any Worship. (10.) That the Exorcisms which some Priests make over the Possessed are Superstitions, and the rather because no Man since the Passion of Jesus Christ can be possessed by the Devil. (11,) That that the Study of the Languages and the Sciences are hurtful. (12.) That all Oaths tho' judicially and truly made are condemnable and sinful. (13.) That the Pastors and Ministers of the Word of God ought to have nothing de Proprio, in imitation of Jesus Christ and the Apostles.

The Errors of the Waldenses or Vaudois.

We do not think fit to add any thing to the Testimonies of these two Authors concerning the Errors of the Waldenses or Vaudois, which they have very largely insisted on. This Sect increas'd very much in the thirteenth Century, in spight of the Inquisitors, and spread it self in Arragon, and in the Vallies of Piedmont, where it has remain'd, still holding the same Maxims till it was united in the Year 1530, with Oecolampadius and the other Sacramentarians, to whom the Vaudois sent Peter Mason, and George Morel who entred into a Treaty with Oecolampadius and Martin Bucer: These two latter propos'd to them the rejecting of several of their Errors, by acknowledging, that a Christian might swear lawfully, and exercise the Office of a Magistrate; that the Ministers might possess something de Proprio; that one might punish Malefactors with Death; that wicked Ministers might administer the Sacraments, &c. And they engag'd them to maintain others which they had never maintain'd before, particularly, that the Body of Jesus Christ is not in the Eucharist, and that there was no necessity of confessing their Sins, a Doctrine which the Vaudois never till then openly oppos'd. However notwithstanding this Union, most of the Vaudois persisted still in their own Principles till necessity forc'd them in the Year 1630, to take the Calvinists for their Pastors.

Several other Sects.

Raynerius likewise mentions several other Sects of Hereticks of his time, viz. the Runcaires who espoused the Errors of the Patarini, and who maintain'd, that no mortal Sin was committed by the lower Part of the Body, and upon this false Principle abandon'd themselves to all manner of Irregularities. These Men disguis'd their Sentiments and never gave a direct Answer to the Questions they were ask'd. The Siscidois, who held the same Opinions with the Vaudois, only they had a greater Respect for the Sacrament of the Eucharist. The Ortlibenses or Orbibarians, who deny'd the Mystery of the Trinity; taught that Jesus Christ was the Son of Joseph and Mary; believ'd the Word to be Eternal; deny'd the Resurrection and the Last Judgment; and maintain'd, that Jesus Christ had not suffer'd really; annull'd all the Sacraments of the Church, and asserted, that the Eucharist was only Bread. The Cathari, whose Sect was divided into three Parts, that of the Albanois, that of the Concorezois, and that of the Bagnolois. This Sect prevail'd chiefly in Lombardy. Their common Errors were, that the Devil was the Author of this World, that the Sacraments are of no avail to Salvation, that Marriage is a mortal Sin, as well as the eating of Flesh, Eggs, and Cheese; that there is no Resurrection, and that 'tis not lawful to punish Malefactors, nor kill Animals: That there is no Purgatory. They allow'd of four Sacraments, but such as had nothing besides the Name agreeable with those of the Church: For instead of Baptism, they made use of the Imposition of Hands: Instead of consecrating the Eucharist, they bless'd a Loaf before Meals, and after having said the Lord's Prayer they broke and distributed it to all there present: About Penance they taught that eternal Glory is not diminished by Sin, nor the Punishment of Hell augmented by Impenitence, that no Person shall go into Purgatory, that the Imposition of Hands remits entirely the Punishment and the Guilt of Sin. They made no other Confession besides a publick Acknowledgment of their Sins in general, and impose no less Penances on the least than they do on the greatest Sinners. They allow'd of four Degrees of Orders, the Bishop, the first Son, the second Son, and the Deacon. Raynerius reckon'd up sixteen Churches of those Cathari, and observes that the Sect of the Albanois was divided into two Parts; viz. One of which Gelesinanza their Bishop of Verona was the Head, and the other which had for its Head John of Lyons. He in particular related the several Errors of those Sects, which held the Extravagancies of the Manichees and Bulgarians, besides they were of the Opinions of the Vaudois and Albigenses with whom they were united. For in this Century as well as the foregoing, all those Hereticks agreed to oppose the Hierarchical Order of the Church, its Usages, its Ceremonies, and its Sacraments, and several particular Sects were faln into extravagant Errors and abominable Disorders.

The Errors of the Waldenses or Vaudois.

The great Sect of the Albigenses was a Mixture and Composure of all those particular Sects: It spread it self in Languedot, Provence, Dauphiné and Arragon: Raymond Count of Toulouse supported their Party, which was become very numerous and powerful, especially in Languedoc, and grew every Day stronger and stronger by the Remisness of the Prelates, and the irregular Manners of the Ecclesiasticks. Pope Innocent III. (being minded to put a stop to them) sent in the Year 1198, two Legates Raynerius and Guy into those Provinces, to endeavour the Extirpation of those Hereticks, recommended them to the Bishops and Lords, that they would assist them in this Undertaking and employ their Authority for to punish the Hereticks. In the Year 1199. he order'd their Estates should be confiscated. This first Mission having had no great Success, Pope Innocent gave Commission to Arnold Abbot of Cisteaux to employ the Abbots and Monks of his Order, and particularly Peter de Chantea-neuf and Radulphus Monks of Fontfroide, not only to preach against those Hereticks, but likewise to excite the Princes and People to extirpate them, and to form a Croisade against them. These Missionaries making no great Progress at first, held a Council in the Year 1207. wherein they debated on the Methods of converting the Albigenses. Didacus Bishop of Osma declared, that in order to succeed in this Affair it was requisite, that they should lay aside the Fastus, the Pomp and Magnificence which appeared in their Habits and Equipage, that they should embrace the Poverty of Jesus Christ and demonstrate their Faith not only by their Words but also by their Actions, that so they might save the Souls of those whom these Hereticks deceiv'd by a false Semblance of Piety and Virtue. This Advice seem'd to them very good, all of them promis'd to follow it, and he was the first who put it into Execution by dismissing all his Equipage, and retaining only a few Clerks among whom was Dominick afterwards Founder of the Jacobine Friars. The rest follow'd his Example and continued their Preachings. The greatest Adversary they had in those Errors was Raymond Count of Toulouse. They issu'd out against him Ecclesiastical Censures, and excited the Lords of his Province, who oblig'd him in appearance to abandon the Party, of the Albigenses, and to receive Absolution. But forasmuch as his Repentance was not sincere, he chang'd every Moment, and at last having had a Conference at St. Giles's in Provence with the Pope's Missionaries, he caus'd Peter de Chateau-neuf to be assassinated in going out of that City. The Pope had no sooner heard of it but he issu'd out his Bulls against the Murderers, and especially against Raymond Count of Toulouse, whom he believ'd to be the Author of that Action, and exhorted Philip Augustus King of France, and the other Princes and Lords of the Kingdom, to raise a Croisade to fight the Albigenses and to seize on the Demeans of Raymond. That Count, to avoid the Storm which was coming upon him, sent to assure the Pope, That he would do whatever they required of him, that he would endeavour to destroy the Heresy, and that he would receive Absolution from the new Legate, which he entreated he would send him, because the Abbot of Cisteaux was too severe upon him. The Pope sent one of his Chaplains nam'd Milo, and Theodosius Canon of Genes, with Order however to do nothing but by the Advice of the Abbot of Cisteaux. These two Legates having held an Assembly of Prelates in the Castle of Montily in Provence, agreed upon the Propositions which were to be made to Count Raymond. Milo afterwards sent for him to come to Valenza, and obliged him to deliver up for the security of his Word seven Towns of Provence or Languedoc, to cause it to be declar'd by the Consuls of Avignon, Nismes, and Saint George, That if he did not obey the Orders of the Legate, they should not think themselves oblig'd to keep any longer their Oath of Allegiance to him; and to grant a County of that Country to the Church of Rome. The Count of Toulouse constrain'd by the necessity of his Affairs, granted those Conditions, and promis'd to do whatever that Legate would prescribe to him. He began by delivering up the seven Towns to Theodosius, and afterwards came to St. Giles's where Milo was to reconcile him. He was brought Naked in a Sheet to the Church-porch of St. Giles's, and swore upon the Body of Jesus Christ and upon the Relicks of the Saints, in Presence of the

The Inquisition and Croisades against the Albigenses.

The Riſe of the Sect of the Vaudois.

Legate and twenty Biſhops who were met at that Place, to obey the Church of Rome, to do whatever the Pope and his Legate would order him, to abandon the Hereticks, and to expel them, to reſtore to the Church what he had taken away from it; ſubmitting himſelf and his Succeſſors to the Forfeiture of his Eſtate, and to Excommunication, if he did not obſerve what was contained in his Oath. Afterwards the Legate put the Stole on his Neck, ſtruck him with the Wand, and brought him into the Church after he had given him Abſolution. He order'd him to re-eſtabliſh the Biſhops of Carpentras and Vaiſon in all their Eſtates and Privileges, to drive out of their Territories the Arragonois, the Routiers, the Coteraux, and the other Hereticks, to exclude the Jews from all Manner of Offices; to treat as Hereticks thoſe who ſhould be delated to him by the Biſhops as ſuch; and to ſign the Articles of Peace which the Legates of the Pope ſhould draw up. The Counts, Barons, and Conſuls of Avignon and Montpellier, took likewiſe their Oaths, and at laſt the Count of Toulouſe made a Declaration, whereby he engaged himſelf to maintain the Liberties and Immunities of Churches.

The Army of the Croiſade having no more Conteſt with the Count of Toulouſe, turned its Forces againſt Beziers, where the Albigenſes were fortified. The Town was beſieg'd, taken, and burnt, and all the Inhabitants put to the Edge of the Sword. The Count of Beziers who was a Catholick, made a Manifeſto againſt the Cruelties offer'd to his Subjects, and retir'd to Carcaſſonne. The Army of the Croiſade beſieged it, the Count held it out a long Time; but he being taken, the Town was abandon'd and left to the Croiſade-Men, who elected Simon Count of Montfort for their General. He carried on the War, and took a great many Places and Caſtles, not only from the Hereticks, but likewiſe from other Lords. The King of Arragon was offended at it, and the Count of Toulouſe went himſelf to Rome, to prefer his Complaints to the Pope, and to make his Agreement with him. The Pope promis'd to do him Juſtice, and on his Part he engaged himſelf to drive out the Albigenſes out of his Territories. When this Count was upon his Return, there was a Treaty of Peace ſet on Foot between him and the Count of Montfort. They met at Narbonne with the King of Arragon, who was the Mediator of the Peace. The Abbot of Ciſteaux propos'd to the Count of Toulouſe, the extirpating of all the Heretieks who were in his Territories; promiſing to reſtore to him all his Towns and Caſtles, if he would do it. Propoſals were likewiſe made of making a Peace with the Count of Foix, and of reſtoring to him all his Caſtles except Pamiez. This Peace was not concluded, and the Count of Toulouſe ſtill perſiſting to ſuccour the Albigenſes, and to make War for the recovering of his Territories, was excommunicated by the Pope's Legate, who caus'd War to be proclaim'd againſt him as well as againſt the Count of Foix, by Simon of Montfort, to whom they gave the Pillage of theſe two Princes. The Count of Montfort immediately drew out the Army of the Croiſado into the Field, took from the Counts of Toulouſe and Foix, Part of their Dominions, and forced them to ſhut themſelves up in Towns, leaving him Maſter of the Field. Hitherto the King of Arragon had ſtood neuter; but now declar'd himſelf for the Count of Toulouſe, and being come to that City, he propos'd to the Archbiſhop of Narbonne, the Re-eſtabliſhment of the Counts of Toulouſe, of Comminges, of Foix and of Bern, offering in behalf of the Count of Toulouſe, to give the Church Satisfaction for all the Wrongs which he might have been the Cauſe of, and in caſe they would not grant this Favour to the Father; he deſired it for the Son: He likewiſe deſired, that they would reſtore to the Counts of Foix, Comminges and Bern, who were not Hereticks, the Lands and Caſtles which the Croiſade-Men had taken away from them, upon Condition, that they would give the Church Satisfaction. The King of Arragon having given in thoſe Propoſals in Writing to the Prelates, met in the Year 1213. at Lavaur: They replied, That as to the Count of Toulouſe, he had no farther Favour to expect; and for the reſt, it was requiſite, that before they demanded Juſtice of the Church, they ſhould give it Satisfaction, and get themſelves abſolv'd, and that afterwards they ſhould have Juſtice done them. The King of Arragon perceiving, that they had rejected his Propoſals, required a Truce to be made till Pentecoſt, with a Deſign of retarding the Progreſs of the Croiſade, and when they would not grant him that, he appeal'd to the Pope, inform'd him of the Propoſals which he had made, and ſent him the Submiſſions of the Count of Toulouſe, Foix, Comminges, and Bern. The Prelates proteſted againſt this Appeal: Yet the Pope ſeem'd to have ſome Regard for it, and at firſt appear'd favourable to the Demands of the King of Arragon; but the Deputies of the Council, and of Simon of Montfort being arriv'd at Rome, and having given him their Inſtructions, he declar'd himſelf entirely in favour of the Croiſado, and wrote about it to the King of Arragon. That Prince being incens'd at this Repulſe, rais'd an Army of 100000 Men, and being join'd with the Counts of Toulouſe, Comminges, and Foix, laid Siege to a Place near Toulouſe, nam'd Muret, in which the Count of Montfort had plac'd a Garriſon. The latter having thrown himſelf into the Place with a thouſand or twelve hundred Men, made ſo vigorous a Sally on the Beſiegers, that he defeated and cut them in Pieces. The King of Arragon loſt his Life in the Engagement. This Defeat was followed by the ſurrendring of the City of Toulouſe, and the Conqueſt of a great Part of Languedoc and Provence. In the Year 1215. the Pope, in purſuance of a Decree of the Council of Montpellier, granted to the Count of Montfort all the Territores of the Count of Toulouſe, and the others which had been conquer'd by the Croiſade-Men, but with a Charge, that he receive the Inveſtiture of them from the King, and pay him the Feodal Rights. The fourth General Lateran Council held in November the ſame Year, having heard the Counts of Toulouſe and Foix, and the Brother of the Count of Montfort, granted to the latter the County of Toulouſe, and only reſerved to the Son the Lands which he had in Provence, and four hundred Merks per Annum. At this Time Simon of Montfort took upon him the Name of Count of Toulouſe, received the Inveſtiture of the County from the King of France, and continued to carry on the War, againſt the Albigenſes and the Men of Toulouſe, whilſt St. Dominick and Cardinal Bertrand the Legate to Pope Honorius III. endeavoured by their Miſſions to convert the Hereticks. In the mean time, Raymond Count of Toulouſe, who had withdrawn himſelf to Arragon, returned with Forces into his own Country, and ſeiz'd upon the City of Toulouſe: Simon of Montfort laid Siege to it immediately, and after he had inveſted it ſeven whole Months, he was kill'd in a Sally about the End of the Year 1218. His Son Amaury ſucceeded him in his Conqueſts, and was aſſiſted by Philip Auguſtus King of France, who ſent his Son Lewis and ſome Forces to his Relief: But that Prince being recall'd, the Counts of Toulouſe, of Comminges, and of Foix, retook in a little Time what had been taken away from them. Amaury perceiving himſelf too weak, quitted his Pretenſions, and yielded his Rights to Lewis VIII. who had ſucceeded his Father in the Kingdom of France. Raymond Count of Toulouſe being dead, his Son of the ſame Name ſucceeded him, who to keep himſelf in his Eſtate was for being reconcil'd to the Pope, to whom he promis'd entire Submiſſion. Honorius III. commiſſioned the Archbiſhop of Narbonne, to make up the Peace, and that Prelate having in the Year 1224. call'd a Council at Montpellier, he therein took the Oaths of the Count of Toulouſe and his Barons, by which they engaged themſelves to reduce their Country to the Obedience of the Roman Church, to reſtore to the Eccleſiaſticks their Revenues, to pay them fifteen thouſand Merks within three Years for Damages ſuſtain'd, to ſee Juſtice done upon the Hereticks, and to extirpate them out of their Country. In the foregoing Year the Albigenſes created an Antipope in Bulgaria and Dalmatia, againſt whom Conrade Cardinal Biſhop of Porto, and Legate of the Holy See, held a National Synod of France at Paris. In the Year 1225. Cardinal Romanus held another National Council at Bourges, in which the Count of Toulouſe and the Count of Montfort appear'd and maintain'd the Rights and Pretenſions which each had to the County of Toulouſe. After they had been heard, Cardinal Romanus had a private Debate with the Prelates, but came to no Concluſion. This Legate had Orders to demand for the Pope the Revenues of two Prebends in all Cathedral Churches, two Places in the Abbies, and one Prebend in the other Churches. He would likewiſe appoint Proctors to receive thoſe Revenues, and four Abbots to be Viſitors of all Monaſteries of France. But the Prelates reſolutely oppos'd this Project, and declar'd boldly that they would never ſuffer ſuch an Oppreſſion. The next Year the ſame Cardinal held a National Council at Paris, wherein he excommunicated Raymond Count of Toulouſe, and gave his Demeans to Lewis King of France and his Succeſſors, to whom Amaury yielded his Pretenſions. The King and Lords immediately took the Croſs from the Hands of the Legate, who caus'd the Croiſade to be preach'd up throughout the whole Kingdom. The King march'd at the Head of the Croiſade-Men, took Avignon, and became Maſter of all Provence. The Count of Foix ſubmitted to the King and the Pope, but he kept not his Word, and was again excommunicated with Count Raymond, the Toloſians, and Trinavel Viſcount of Beziers in the Council of Narbonne, held 1227. At laſt in the Year 1228. Raymond Count of Toulouſe was obliged to ſubmit to King Lewis and the Pope, and to make a Treaty with them upon what Terms they pleas'd. It was begun at Meaux, and ended at Paris in the Preſence of Cardinal Romanus the Pope's Legate, and of the Lords of the Land. The Count promis'd the Legate and the King, that for the future he would be faithful to the Church and to the King of France: That he would extirpate the Hereticks and their Favourers out of his Territories; that he would ſet up the Inquiſition in them: That he would pay a certain Sum to thoſe who ſhould detect an Heretick; that he would take Care to puniſh the Routiers: That he would maintain the Perſons and the Privileges of Eccleſiaſticks: That he would cauſe the Sentences of Excommunication to be duly executed: That he would ſhun the Excommunicate, and oblige them to re-enter into the Boſom of the Church: That he would ſet up Judges unſuſpected of Hereſy: That he would reſtore to Churches and Church-men

The Riſe of the Sect of the Vaudois.

all

all the Estates which belonged to them before the Croisade; that he would cause the Tithes to be paid to the Churches: That he would give seventeen thousand Merks for the Damages done to the Churches, of which ten thousand should be distributed by the Direction of the Legate, four thousand to the Abbies of Cisteaux, Clairvaux, Grand-Selve, and Candeil, six thousand to fortify the Castle of Narbonne, and the others which shall be put into the King's Hands, four thousand to found an University at Toulouse: That after he had received Absolution, he would take the Cross from the Hands of the Legate, and depart within two Years to make War against the Saracens for five Years: That he would give his Daughter in Marriage to the King's Brother, upon Condition, that after the Death of the Count, the City of Toulouse and the Diocess thereof should belong to that Prince, and that in case he should die without Heirs, that Country should be annexed to the Crown, and no other Children or Heirs of Count Raymond to make any Pretensions thereto: That they would likewise leave him the Dioceses of Agen and Cahors, and Part of that of Albi, but that the King shall retain the City of Albi, and what is on the other Side the River Tarn towards Carcassonne: That he would do Homage to the King for the Territories left him, and that he would quit all his Pretences to the Country on this Side the Rhone; that he would stand by what had been done by the Count of Montfort; that he would make War against the Count of Foix, and the other Enemies of the Roman Church; that he would demolish the Fortifications of the City of Toulouse, and thirty other Castles; that for a Guarantee of this Treaty, he would put into the King's Hands the Castle of Narbonne, and several others, which the King should detain for ten Years, and keep at the Charges of the Count. This Treaty was concluded at Paris on April 18. 1228. Afterwards the Count and those of his Retinue, who had been excommunicated, went into the Church of Notredame at Paris, on Good-Friday, bare-foot in a Sheet, to receive Absolution from the Legate. This done, the Count remained Prisoner at Paris, till the Conditions of the Treaty were performed. About the Feast of Pentecost, the King sent him into his own Country, whither the Legate accompanied him, and held a Council at Toulouse in the Year 1229. wherein he set up the Inquisition, and made several Orders for the Extirpation of Hereticks. Count Raymond was not at first so violent against the Albigenses, for which the Pope's Legate upbraided him in the Year 1232. in an Assembly held at Melun, where he was resolv'd that this Count should make Laws against them, according to the Instructions of the Archbishop of Toulouse, and of a Lord who should be nominated by the King. The Archbishop drew up the Heads, according to which the Count in the Year 1233. made a very large Declaration against the Hereticks, which he published at Toulouse on the 14*th* of February. This last Blow put an End to the Contest of the Albigenses, who were afterwards left to the Inquisitors, who totally destroyed the unhappy Remainder of those Hereticks.

The Rise of the Sect of the Vaudois.

The Errors of the Albigenses.

This Sect being (as has been already observ'd) compos'd of several other particular Sects, 'tis hard to determine what Errors were common to all the Sect, and what were only taught by particular Sects. The following are such as are charged upon them by Alanus Monk of Cisteaux, and Peter Monk of Vaux de Cernay, who wrote against them at that Time. They accuse them (1.) Of owning two Principles or two Creators, the one good, and the other bad; the former, the Creator of invisible and spiritual things, the latter, the Creator of Bodies, and the Tutor of the Old Testament. (2.) Of admitting two Christs, the one bad, who appear'd upon Earth; and the other good, who never lived in this World. (3.) Of denying the Resurrection of the Flesh, and of believing that our Souls are Demons, confin'd to our Bodies for the Punishment of their Sins. (4.) Of condemning all the Sacraments of the Church, Of rejecting Baptism as useless. Of abominating the Eucharist, Of practising neither Confession nor Penance, and of believing Marriage to be unlawful. (5.) Of ridiculing Purgatory, the Prayers for the Dead, Images, Crucifixes, and the other Ceremonies of the Church. These are the Heads to which the principal Errors charged upon the Albigenses may be reduc'd. As to their Way of Living, there were two Sorts of People among them, the Perfect, and the Believers; the Perfect boasted of living continently, did neither eat Flesh, nor Eggs, nor Cheese, abhorr'd Lying, and never swore. The Believers liv'd as other Men, and were as irregular in their Manners, but were persuaded, that they were saved by the Faith of the Perfect, and that none of those who received the Imposition of their Hands were damned.

The Treatise of Luke of Tuy, against the Albigenses.

Luke Bishop of Tuy in Spain has compos'd a Work against the Albigenses divided into three Parts. In the first, he refutes their Errors about the Intercession of Saints, Purgatory, the Prayers for the Dead, the State of departed Souls, by Passages taken out of the Dialogues of Saint Gregory and St. Isidore. In the second, he refutes their Errors about the Sacraments and Sacramental Things, Benedictions, Sacrifices, the Authority of the Holy Fathers, the Worship of the Cross and Images. In the third Part, he detects the Fallacies which the Hereticks were guilty of, whether in denying of Truths, or by dissembling their Sentiments, or by spreading of Fables, and setting up false Miracles, or in imposing on the Church, or in corrupting the Writings of the Catholick Doctors, or by affecting to suffer with Constancy.

The Rise of the Sect of the Vaudois.

Among all the Sects which started up during the thirteenth Century, there was none more detestable than that of the Stadings, which shewed it self by the Outrages and Cruelties which it exercised in Germany, 1230. against the Catholicks, and especially against the Church-Men. Those impious Persons honour'd Lucifer, and inveigh'd against God himself, believing that he had unjustly condemned that Angel to Darkness, that one Day he would be re-established, and they should be saved with him. Whereupon they taught, That till that Time it was not requisite to do any thing that was pleasing to God, but the quite contrary. They were persuaded that the Devil appeared in their Assembly. They therein committed infamous Things and uttered strange Blasphemies. 'Tis said, that after they had received the Eucharist at Easter, from the Hands of the Priest, they kept it in their Mouths without swallowing it to throw it into the Jakes. Those Hereticks spread themselves in the Bishoprick of Breme, and in the Frontiers of Friezland and Saxony, and getting to a Head massacred the Ecclesiasticks and Monks, pillag'd the Churches, and committed a World of Disorders. Pope Gregory IX. excited the Bishops and Lords of those Countries to make War against them, in order to extirpate that wicked Race. The Archbishop of Breme, the Duke of Brabant and the Count of Holland, having rais'd Forces, march'd in the Year 1234. to engage them. They made a vigorous Defence, but were at last defeated and cut to Pieces; six thousand were kill'd upon the Spot, the rest perished after several Ways, and they were all routed; so that there were but a few left who were converted, and returned to their Obedience the next Year.

The Stadings.

The Schismaticks of Germany.

In the Year 1248. during the Heat of the Contests between the Emperor Frederick II. and Pope Innocent IV. there rose up several People in Germany, who, under Pretence of defending the Emperor's Interest, set upon Preaching, That the Pope was an Heretick; That all the Bishops were Heretical and Simoniacal; That all the Priests being in mortal Sin, had no longer the Power of Binding and Unbinding, nor of consecrating the Eucharist; That they were Seducers; That neither the Pope nor the Bishops, nor any Man alive had the Power of interdicting Divine Service, and that those who did it were Hereticks and Deceivers; That the Franciscans and Dominicans perverted the Church by their false Preachings, and that the Life which they led was unlawful; that none but them preached the Truth, or lived according to the Gospel. After they had preached those Maxims, they declared to their Auditors, that they would give them Indulgences, not such as the Pope or Bishops pretended to grant, but an Indulgence which comes from God himself, and by our Order. These Preachers did more Harm than Good to the Interest of Frederick and Conrade; for they were the Occasion that many Catholicks abandon'd Conrade, which was in part the Cause of his Ruin.

The Flagellantes or Whippers.

The Sect of the Flagellantes or Whippers in its Rise was only the Effect of an indiscreet and immoderate Zeal, but had fatal Consequences. It began at Perusa, about the Year 1260. When a great many Men of all Ages march'd in Procession two and two with naked Bodies, Whipping themselves publickly till the Blood came, to implore the Mercy of God. These Processions were preceded by Priests who carried the Cross, and consisted of Men of all Sorts of Quality and Age. The Women and Maids exercis'd the same Right upon themselves at Home. At first these Instances of Penance were attended with Reconciliations, Restitutions, and Works of Charity. This Custom afterwards prevailed not only in other Towns of Italy, but likewise in Germany: And as Men are always inclinable to set a Value on their Performances, some of those Whippers preach'd That one could not obtain Remission of one's Sins without thus whipping one's self, and to obtain it they should confess their Sins to one another. The Prelates and Princes foreseeing the Abuses and Disorders which might ensue on this new Institution, opposed it, and put a Stop to this Superstition for some Time. But it reviv'd with more Fury and Disorder in the next Century, especially in Hungary and Germany, where there was an Impostor who gave out, That an Angel had brought him a Letter from Heaven, which promis'd those who would whip themselves for thirty four Days together, the Pardon of all their Sins. They admitted none into their Society, but such as had wherewithal to live, obliged them to confess their Sins, and pardon their Enemies before their Admission, and required if they were married, that they should obtain the Consent of their Wives. They at last carried themselves to such great Extravagancies, that they rais'd Seditions, massacred the Jews, rifled the Estates of Laicks, and committed a great many other Crimes. King Philip de Valois hindred them from coming into his Kingdom, by the Advice of the Doctors of the Sorbonne of Paris, who remonstrated to him, that the Practice of this new Sect was contrary to the Law of God, contrary to the Customs of the Church, and prejudicial to the Salvation of Souls. They likewise acquainted Pope Clement VI. of it, who condemned that Sect, and prohibi-

The Errors of the Waldenſes or Vaudois.

ted thoſe Kinds of publick Whippings, and the rather, becauſe ſeveral of thoſe Whippers ſupported by Prieſts and incenſed Monks, broach'd Opinions contrary to the Doctrine of the Church, ſaying, That the Blood which they ſhed in Whipping themſelves was mix'd with the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, and advanced ſeveral other as extravagant Errors: This is what is obſerv'd by the Continuator of Williams de Nangis on the Year 1349. wherein that Sect renewed its Extravagancies upon the account of a great Mortality which rag'd on the Earth. Gerſon has likewiſe compos'd a Treatiſe againſt theſe Whippers, of which we ſhall ſpeak in its proper Place.

The Errors of the Waldenſes or Vaudois.

CHAP. X.

Eccleſiaſtical Obſervations on the Thirteenth Century.

Eccleſiaſtical Obſervations on the thirteenth Century.

THere were in this Century two Sorts of Errors againſt Religion, and the Church had two Sorts of Adverſaries to ſtruggle with, the firſt were thoſe notorious Hereticks, who ſubverted the Fundamentals of the Chriſtian Religion, by openly oppugning the Authority, the Sacraments, the Ceremonies, and the Diſcipline of the Church. The others were the raſh Divines, who, deſirous to diſtinguiſh themſelves by maintaining nice and new Notions, advanc'd ſuch Propoſitions as were infamous, raſh, erroneous, and contrary to the Tradition of the Church, and the Faith of Jeſus Chriſt. The Pope and the Prelates (perceiving that the former contemn'd the ſpiritual Power, and that Excommunication and the other Eccleſiaſtical Penalties, were ſo far from reducing them, that they rendred them more inſolent, and put them upon uſing Violence) were of Opinion, that it was lawful to make uſe of Force, to ſee whether thoſe who were not reclaimed out of a Senſe of their Salvation, might be ſo by the Fear of Puniſhments, and even of temporal Death. There had been already ſeveral Inſtances of Hereticks condemned to Fines, to Baniſhments, to Puniſhments, and even to Death it ſelf; but there had never yet been any War proclaim'd againſt them, nor any Croiſade preach'd up for the Extirpation of them. Innocent III. was the firſt that proclaimed ſuch a War againſt the Albigenſes and Waldenſes, and againſt Raymond Count of Toulouſe their Protector. War might ſubdue the Heads, and reduce whole Bodies of People; but it was not capable of altering the Sentiments of particular Perſons, or of hindring them from teaching their Doctrines ſecretly. Whereupon the Pope thought it adviſable to ſet up a Tribunal of ſuch Perſons whoſe Buſineſs ſhould be to make Inquiry after Hereticks, and to draw up their Proceſſes. For this purpoſe he made choice of the Dominican and Franciſcan Friars who were newly eſtabliſh'd, to whom he gave Commiſſion to make an exact Inquiry after Hereticks, and to draw up Informations againſt them: And from hence this Tribunal was call'd, The INQUISITION. By Degrees the Authority of thoſe Inquiſitors increas'd, and whereas at the firſt they only drew up the Proceſs of Hereticks, and ſollicited the ordinary Judges to condemn them, they afterwards had the Power granted them of trying the Crime of Hereſy conjunctly with the Biſhops. The Emperor Frederick II. approv'd of this Tribunal, took the Inquiſitors into his Protection, and attributed to the Eccleſiaſticks the taking Cognizance of the Crime of Hereſy; leaving only to the ſecular Judges, the Power of inflicting the Puniſhment of Death on thoſe who were condemn'd. This Tribunal of the INQUISITION was at firſt ſet up at Toulouſe, and in the other Cities of Languedoc, where the Hereſy of the Albigenſes and Waldenſes had the deepeſt Rooting. The Popes likewiſe ſet it up in Italy, from whence it paſs'd a long time after into Spain; but it was baniſh'd France, and could never be introduc'd into Germany.

The Hereſies and Errors rais'd in the thirteenth Century.

The Inquiſition is eſtabliſhed.

The Original of Cenſures.

As to the raſh Divines who advanc'd Errors contrary to ſound Doctrine, no more proper Method could be found out to put a Stop to their Progreſs, than to cauſe them to be cenſur'd by other Divines; to cauſe them to be retracted by thoſe who had advanc'd them, and to hinder them from being taught in the Schools. This was the Original of the Cenſures of the Faculties, which began to be in Uſe in that Century, but became very frequent in the ſucceeding Centuries.

The Hiſtory of the Univerſity of Paris.

The Academies or Univerſities which were already eſtabliſhed in this Century, were reduc'd to a Form, and there were ſeveral newly eſtabliſh'd: Among the reſt, that of Paris, which had began to be form'd in the foregoing Century, became powerful and famous, upon the Account of the great Number of Scholars who flock'd thither from all Parts, and of the Maſters with which it furniſh'd all Europe. In its firſt Riſe it was compos'd of Artiſts who taught the Sciences and Philoſophy; and of Divines, who made Commentaries on Peter Lombard's Book of Sentences, and explain'd the Holy Scriptures. There is Mention only made of theſe two Faculties in the Conſtitutions made in the Year 1215. by the Cardinal of St. Stephen Legate of Innocent III. and in the Act of Donation made to the Jacobines in the Year 1217. Thoſe Monks and the Franciſcan Friars were ſoon after join'd to the ſecular Divines, and afterwards the Bernardines. The Faculties of Law and Phyſick were a ſhort time after made Part of the Univerſity. There is Mention made of that of the Law in the Reform of the Univerſity by Gregory IX. and of all four in the Letter which the Univerſity wrote in the Year 1253. to all the Prelates of the Kingdom againſt the Jacobines, wherein it compares the four Faculties to the four Rivers of the Garden of Eden. At firſt the Univerſity was compos'd only of Scholars and Maſters, and there were no particular Ceremonies us'd for the acquiring of that Degree: The time which they had ſpent in their Studies, and their Capacity alone conferred it on them. Afterwards they diſtinguiſhed ſeveral Degrees, and fix'd the time they ought to ſtudy, or learn to acquire them. Gregory IX. ſeems to be the firſt who diſtinguiſhed the Degrees of Batchelor, Licentiate, and Maſter or Doctor. They were the Batchelors who taught publickly: They began by reading and explaining the Holy Scriptures, and afterwards compos'd Treatiſes on the Maſter of the Sentences. The former were call'd Biblici, and the latter Sententiarii. They bore the Name of Bacillarii or Bacalarii à Bacillâ, either becauſe they were admitted by giving them a little Wand, or becauſe they ſo call'd the Novices of the Militia, who exercis'd with Sticks in order to learn to fight with Arms. The Batchellors were often exercis'd in Diſputes, of which the Maſters and Doctors were Moderators. This was the Original of School-Acts. When they had compleated the time preſcribed for their Studies, and their Courſes, they were licentiated by the Chancellor of the Church of Paris, and were afterwards admitted Maſters or Doctors. The Chancellor of Genevieve pretended likewiſe to the ſame Right, and enjoyed it for ſome time; but theſe Chancellors could only give Degrees to ſuch as had went through the Courſe of their Studies in the Faculties, and paſs'd the uſual Examinations. So that John of Orleans Chancellor of Paris, in the Year 1271. having attempted by virtue of his own Authority, to give a Doctor of Divinity's Cap to Ferdinand the King of Arragon's Son, tho' his Quality might have ſeem'd to have a Privilege of diſpenſing with the uſual Laws; yet the Univerſity oppoſed it, and deprived the Chancellor of the Right of licentiating, and nominated another in his ſtead. This was the Cauſe of a Trial between the Univerſity and the Church of Paris, which did laſt till the Death of the Chancellor. When the Chancellors would have exacted Duties for granting of Licences, they were hindred from it by ſeveral Orders. The firſt Divinity-Schools were in the Cloyſter of Notre-dame, at St. Genevieve, and Saint Victor. Afterwards there were more in ſeveral other Places, and ſeveral Colleges were founded, where they held publick Lectures. In the time of William of Saint Amour, about the Middle of this Century, there were twelve Divinity Profeſſorſhips, three in the Cloyſter of Notre-dame, ſeven among the ſecular Doctors, and two of the Dominicans: The other Monks increas'd the Number of them. The Sciences and Philoſophy were taught in ſeveral Schools by Maſters; the Head of thoſe Maſters is call'd in the Edict of King Philip the Fair of 1200. Capital Scholarium, and afterwards had the Quality of Rector of the Univerſity. The Scholars and Maſters were divided into four Claſſes, who had their Proctors or Syndicks.

Eccleſiaſtical Obſervations on the thirteenth Century.

The Authority of the Popes.

The Authority of the Popes was as great in this Century as the laſt. The Difference of the Princes of Germany in the Election of the Emperor, gave them an Opportunity of maintaining their Right over the Empire, and of ſtrengthning their temporal Power in Italy. The Collection and Publication of the Decretals gave the laſt Blow towards the entire Ruin of the ancient Law, and the Eſtabliſhing the abſolute and unlimited Power of the Pope, and were the Cauſe of a World of Proceſſes, which were brought before the Court of Rome.

Of Elections and Collations of Benefices

The Election of Biſhops belong'd to the Chapters, and thoſe of Abbots or Abbeſſes, to the Societies in Italy, France, England, and Germany. The Prebends of Cathedrals were likewiſe beſtowed by the Election of the Chapter, ſometimes by the Biſhop, and ſometimes by both. But the Popes made uſe of ſeveral Methods to get to themſelves the Diſpoſal of Benefices, as Favours in Expectance, as Reſerves, Proceſs upon Elections, Compromiſing between the contending Parties, and laſtly by the Right of Lapſing. This Right was eſtabliſh'd to ſupply the Negligence of the ordinary Collators, in caſe they did not preſent to the Benefices within a ſet time, or in caſe thoſe whom they ſhould have preſented became unworthy

The Errors of the Waldenses or Vaudois.

unworthy or incapable. In these Cases the Right devolv'd to the Metropolitan or the Pope. Clement IV. reserving to himself all the Benefices vacant in Curiâ, declar'd in his Bull dated 1266. That the Disposal of all Benefices belong'd of Right to the Pope. The Princes were maintain'd by the Decretal of the Council of Lyons, in the Royalties they were in Possession of, and enjoyed not only the Revenues of vacant Churches, but had likewise the Presentation of those Benefices which depended on them.

In this Century was introduc'd the Commendam's of Benefices, and the Distinction between Benefices with the Cure of Souls and simple Benefices. Pluralities were very common, but yet condemn'd by several Canons, and by the Decision of the Divines of Paris, in the Year 1238. The Age of those who were promoted to Holy Orders was fix'd: A Sub-deacon to be eighteen Years old, a Deacon twenty, and a Priest twenty five: Several Canons were made about their Habits, and their external Duties. The Jurisdiction, Privileges, and Immunities of the Clergy were stretch'd to the utmost Degree. However they were charged with Supplies by the Princes, for the Necessity of the State, and by the Popes with Imposts for the Croisados, or under other Pretences.

The Contests between the Clergy and the mendicant Friars about Confession.

There is scarce any thing remarkable in this Century about the Administration of the Sacraments, and the Discipline of the Church, besides what relates to the Right of confessing and granting Absolution. The Canon call'd Omnis utriusque sexus, of the General Lateran Council, held in the Year 1215. under Innocent III. Orders all the Faithful to confess themselves to their proper Curate or Pastor, or if they would confess themselves to another, to get leave of their proper Priest; because otherwise they could not be absolv'd. This Canon is confirm'd and explain'd to mean the Curate by several Provincial Councils of this Century, such as the 13*th.* Canon of the Council of Toulouse, 1229. by the 46*th.* of the Council of Beziers, 1260. by the 4*th.* of the Council of Sens, 1269. by the 19*th.* 20*th.* and 21*st.* of the Council of Arles, 1275. by the 8*th.* of the Synod of Cologne, 1280. by the 7*th* and 9*th* of the Council of Lambeth, 1281. by the Synod of Nismes, 1284. by the 5*th.* Canon of the Synod of Exeter, 1287. by the 6*th.* of the Council of Roan, 1299. and by the 108*th.* of the Council of Bayeux, in the Year 1300. Notwithstanding the Mendicant Friars presuming upon the Privileges granted them by the Pope, pretended to have a Right of confessing and giving Absolution to the Faithful, without asking the leave not only of the Curates, but of the Bishops themselves. Gregory IX. was the first who gave leave to the Dominicans to preach and hear Confessions by his Bull dated at Anagnia, September the 26*th.* 1227. directed to all Archbishops, Bishops, and other Prelates of Christendom. The Dominicans desirous to make use of this Privilege, and to confess not only without leave of the Curates, but also of the Bishops; rais'd the whole Body of the Secular Clergy against them. Innocent IV. maintain'd them in their Privilege by his Bull dated May 14. 1244. directed to the Bishops of England, where this Dispute was then highest. But those Prelates insisting on the Canon of the Fourth General Lateran Council, rejected that Privilege, and the Divines of Paris being consulted with upon that Subject, in the Year 1250. return'd for Answer, That it was not lawful to confess one's self to the Pope himself, nor to the Bishop, nor to their Penitentiaries, nor to those whom they should commission, without the Consent of the Curate. Innocent IV. tir'd with the continual Complaints of the Ordinaries, and concern'd at the Abuses which were occasion'd by that Privilege which the Monks pretended to have of confessing the Faithful, without the Leave of their Curates; prohibited the Monks according to the Determination of the Lateran Council, from confessing the Faithful without their Curates Leave. This Bull is dated at Naples, November the 21*st.* 1254. But Alexander IV. repealed it by his Institute, dated likewise at Naples December 22. the same Year, and by another dated October the 21*st.* 1256. He confirms the Privilege granted to the Monks of Confessing without the Leave of the Curates; which was likewise regulated by another Bull granted about the 2*d.* of October, the Year ensuing, against the Propositions of Odo of Douay, and Christian of Beauvais, who together with William of St. Amour, had asserted, That the Monks might not preach, confess, or give Absolution without the Consent of the Curates and Ordinaries, tho' they had a Mission from the Pope. Clement IV. likewise condemned that Doctrine by his Bull of the 20*th.* of June, 1265. Notwithstanding the Synod of Clermont in the Year 1263. and the provincial Council of Saltzburg, in the Year 1274. order'd the Execution of the Canon, call'd, Omnis utriusque sexus, and declar'd, That the proper Priest was the Curate. This last Council entirely repeal'd the Permissions of preaching and confessing granted to the Mendicants. Martin IV. willing to silence the Contest, granted to the Monks by his Bull of the 10*th.* of January, 1282. the Permission of Confessing, upon Condition however, that those who confess'd themselves to them, should confess themselves once a Year to their proper Curate. This Accommodation was seconded by the Council of Bourges in the Year 1286. But there arose another Difficulty; for the Bishops and Curates pretended, that those who were confess'd to the Monks were oblig'd to confess the same Sins to their Curates. The Monks maintain'd the contrary, and pretended, That the Precept was obey'd by making a Confession once a Year of some Sins to the Curate. It was necessary to have Recourse to the Holy See to get its Sense on this Matter, and in the mean time it was determin'd, that it was necessary to confess to the Curates. The Clergy of France sent Deputies to Pope Nicholas IV. But he would not decide this Controversy. Boniface VIII. undertook it in his Decretal Super Cathedram, whereby he order'd, That the Superiors of the Religious Houses should make their Application to the Prelates, and ask their leave to administer the Sacrament of Penance for the Friars which they should make choice of to imploy in this Ministry; that if they grant it them, they may confess and give Absolution; and if they refuse it, he would grant it to them by the Plenitude of his Power; after they should come to demand it of him. Benedict XI. alter'd something of this Constitution by his Decretal call'd inter Cunctos, and expressly declar'd, That those who were confess'd to the Monks were not oblig'd to confess the same Sins to their Curate, excepting Excommunication, or in case one was fraudulently confess'd. He likewise orders, That the Superiors of the Monks shall demand this Licence in Writing of the Diocesan Bishops, and that if they do not grant it, they may administer this Sacrament without Licence: Yet he exhorts them to admonish the Faithful to confess all their Sins once a Year to their proper Curate. This Decretal of Benedict was afterwards repeal'd by Clement V. in the Council of Vienna, by the Clementine call'd Dudum, which re-establishes the Practice enjoin'd in the Decretal Super Cathedram of Boniface VIII.

The Errors of the Waldenses or Vaudois.

The Institutions of several religious Orders.

The Original, Confirmation, and Progress of the Mendicant Friars is one of the great Events of this Century. The Waldenses gave Occasion for this Institution; for as they made Profession of renouncing all their Worldly Goods, of leading a Life of Poverty, of being constant in Prayer, in reading the Scriptures, and in preaching, and of practising in the literal Sense the Advices of the Gospel; so there were several zealous Catholicks who would imitate them. Two new Converts of that Sect, Bernard and Durand of Osca were the first who made Profession of this Sort of Life, and instituted in the Province of Tarragon, a Congregation which they call'd the Poor Catholicks, in opposition to the Poor of Lyons. They practis'd the Advices of the Gospel in the literal Sense, gave all their Goods to the Poor, studied the Holy Scriptures, work'd with their Hands, disputed against the Hereticks, attended the Prayers, preserved their Chastity, lived in common, paid the Tithes and Offerings, but affected nothing of Singularity in their Shoes, that they might not give that Scandal which the Poor of Lyons did. Innocent III. approv'd of that Order, and confirm'd the Order of the Humbled or Humilies, who liv'd much after the same Manner, and applied themselves to Preaching. There were at the same time a great many zealous Persons who would have set up new Orders of Monks, so that the Lateran Council, in the Year 1215. was obliged to restrain the inventing of new Rules, or establishing of new Orders of the Religious. Notwithstanding a little after, the principal Orders of the Mendicants were established, and afterwards approved by the Popes. For the same Year Dominick de Guſman, who had preach'd a long time against the Albigenses, took up a Resolution, with nine more of his Companions, to establish the Order of preaching Friars. He went to wait upon Pope Innocent III. to obtain the Confirmation of it. That Pope made a Scruple of granting it to him, because of the Prohibition of the Lateran Council; but being admonished (if the Historians of that Order may be credited) by an Heavenly Vision of the Good which the Order of Saint Dominick would do to the Church, he commended his Design, advis'd him, that he might not contradict the Decree of the Council, to take the Rule of St. Augustine, and sent him to Toulouse, to acquaint his Companions of it; which he did, and return'd afterwards to Rome. Whilst these Transactions pass'd Innocent dy'd, and Honorius III. approv'd of that Order; and in the Year 1218. consented, that those Monks should quit the Habit of Regular Canons, which they hitherto wore, and take up a particular Habit, and observe new Constitutions. They were at first establish'd at Toulouse, and a little after spread over all Christendom. In the Year 1217. they had a Monastery at Paris, which was at first between the Archbishop's Seat, and L'Hôtel Dieu, and the same Year in the House of St. James, from whence they were called Jacobines. In the first Times, before they had alter'd any thing of the Rule of Saint Augustine they had Abbots, as the regular Canons, but afterwards they created to themselves a General over all the Order and Priors or Superiors. St. Dominick founded also Nuns of his Order.

The poor Catholicks.

The humbled or Humilies.

The Minor or Franciscan Friars.

The Order of Minor or Franciscan Friars had been instituted some time before in the Year 1208, by Francis of Assisy, who had drawn up a new Rule: It was approv'd in the Year 1215. by Innocent III. and confirmed by Honorius III. in the Year 1223. They encreased in a short Time, and in the Year 1216. were establish'd in Paris, where they had their House given them in the Year 1218. and in the Year 1219. they went over to England.

The Errors of the Waldenſes or Vaudois.

The Inſtitution of the Hermits of St. Auguſtine is not ſo well known. Some carry it ſo high as Saint Auguſtine, but without Grounds; others make William Duke of Aquitaine to be the Author of it, who lived in St. Bernard's Time, and who being return'd from his Journey to Jeruſalem, founded in Italy ſeveral Monaſteries of Hermits, who were call'd Williamites, and not Auguſtines. This Order which was almoſt extinct, was reviv'd by John Bon of Mantua, who founded in Italy ſeveral Monaſteries of Hermits, who were called the Friars of John Bon, or Zambonites. He founded likewiſe ſeveral other Orders of Hermits, of which ſome call'd themſelves Friars of the Order of Fabala, others Britini, the others, the Friars of the Penitence of Jeſus Chriſt, or Saccites. Innocent had a Deſign of uniting all theſe Orders into one, and it was executed by his Succeſſor Alexander IV. who made one Conventual of them under a General, and called them the Hermits of St. Auguſtine, tho' he had drawn them from their Hermitages to live in Towns, and to imploy them in the Affairs of the Church.

The Auguſtine Friars.

The Carmelites.

The Order of Carmelites which had been founded about the Year 1121. received a Rule the Year 1199. from Albert Patriarch of Jeruſalem, which was approv'd by Honorius III. They came into the Weſt in the Year 1238. founded a Conventual, and ſpread there. Their Rule was afterwards explain'd and moderated by Innocent IV. in 1245.

The Order of the Redemption of Captives.

The Sylveſtrines.

Beſides theſe four Orders of Mendicants, there were a great many other Religious Congregations founded in this Century; ſuch as the Order of the Holy Trinity, or of the Redemption of Captives, founded in the Year 1211. by John of Matha, of Provence Doctor of Paris, and by Felix an Hermit of Valois, and approv'd by Innocent III. three Years after. The Order of Sylveſtrines, who followed the Rule of Saint Benedict, founded in the Year 1231. at Monteſano by Sylveſter Guzolini, who from a Canon became an Hermite, and drew a great many into his Society. The Order of St. Mary of Mercy, founded by Peter Nolaſcus at Barcelona in the Year 1223. under the Authority of James I. King of Arragon, and by the Advice of Raymond of Pennafort, and approv'd by Gregory IX. in the Year 1235. The Order of Servites, which began at Florence in the Year 1233. was approv'd by Alexander IV. and Benedict XI. The Order of Celeſtines, founded by Peter of Moron, who afterwards was Pope under the Name of Celeſtin V. and ſolemnly approv'd of his Order by a Bull dated Auguſt 28. in the Year 1294. which was confirmed by Benedict IX. in the Year 1304. The Order of the Valley of Scholars, founded in France by William, Richard, Everard, and Manaſſes, Doctors of Divinity in Paris, and by Frederick Doctor of Law, who retired into the Dioceſs of Langres, in the Year 1219. with thirty ſeven Scholars, who followed the Rule of the Regular Canons of St. Victor, and had ſome particular Conſtitutions, which are to be met with in the eighth Tome of the Spicilegium, by Father Luke Dachery: This Order was approved by Honorius III. in the Year 1218. There were many other Orders, whoſe Number grew ſo great, that Gregory X. was obliged in the general Council of Lyons, held 1274. to prohibit the founding of new Ones, to aboliſh all that had been founded ſince the fourth general Lateran Council, without the Approbation of the Holy See, and even to order, that the Monaſteries of ſuch as had been confirmed by the Pope, but had not wherewith to ſubſiſt, ſhould admit no more Novices, nor make any more Progreſs. However, he excepts the Dominican and Franciſcan Friars, and as to the Carmelites and the Auguſtine Hermites, whoſe Inſtitution he ſaid, had preceeded the General Lateran Council of the Year 1215. he orders, that they ſhould remain in the ſame State wherein they were till the Holy See ſhould provide otherwiſe. Notwithſtanding this Prohibition, about the latter End of this Century, there roſe up the Frerots, Begards, Beguines, and other Sorts of Religious, who were ſuppreſs'd in the next Century.

The Errors of the Waldenſes or Vaudois.

The Order of Saint Mary of Mercy.

The Servites.

The Celeſtines.

The Order of the Valley of Scholars.

The End of the Hiſtory of the Thirteenth Century.

An Hiſtorical Account of the Controverſies in Religion, and of other Eccleſiaſtical Affairs in the Fourteenth Century.

CHAP. I.

Of the Differences between Philip the Fair, King of France, and Boniface VIII. as well during his Papacy, and his Succeſſor Benedict IX. as in the Vacancy of the Holy See, and in the Beginning of the Papacy of Clement V.

The Election of Benedictus Cajetanus named Boniface 8.

Benedictus Cajetanus, a Native of the City of Anagnia, [in the Campaign di Roma] was choſen Pope December 24. A. D. 1294. after the voluntary Reſignation of Celeſtine V. and aſſumed the Name of Boniface VIII. He immediately after his Elevation to the Papal Dignity, entertained a Deſign of rooting entirely the Gibeline-Party out of Italy, and ſo make himſelf abſolutely Supreme as well in Temporal as Spiritual Affairs over all the Kingdoms of Chriſtendom. And of this he gave plain Intimations, not only in the Accommodation, which he purpoſed to make between Philip the Fair King of France, and Edward II. King of England, by his own Authority; but alſo in receiving the Appeal of Guy Earl of Flanders, made to him againſt the ſaid King of France: And to that end, ſending his Legate the Biſhop of Meaux to that King, to require him to give Satisfaction to the Earl of Flanders, and in caſe he refuſed, to ſummon him to appear before the Pope, that the Difference between them might be decided before his Tribunal. Philip the Fair, being highly offended at theſe Proceedings, told the Legate, that it belonged not to the Pope to concern himſelf with the temporal Affairs of Princes and ſovereign Lords; That he had a Court of his own to adminiſter Juſtice to his Subjects and Homagers, and that he would acknowledge none his Superior, but God only. The Legate departed without effecting any thing; but the Pope in the Year 1296. publiſhed a Bull, wherein, having complained, that Kings exacted from the Clergy, Subſidies, Tithes and other Impoſts, which the Clergy payed them, without Leave from the Holy See; He forbids all the Clergy to pay any thing out of their Eſtates to the Laity, or to give their Conſent to any Impoſition, without Permiſſion from the Pope. And all Emperors, Kings, Princes, or other Lords and Judges, to exact nothing of them upon Pain of Excommunication, and Interdict. This Bull concerned the King of France more than any other, becauſe he had levied Money upon the Clergy, to defray the Charge of the War; whereupon this Prince put out a Declaration on the 17*th* of Auguſt, the ſame Year, whereby he prohibited the carrying of any Silver coined or uncoined, out of his Kingdom; or any Strangers to remain there. The Pope thereupon ſent him a very ſharp Bull, in which he ſets forth, that this general Prohibition is prejudicial to his Subjects; and if he had a Deſign to extend it to Eccleſiaſtical

The Beginning of the Quarrel between the King of France & the Pope, about the Earl of Flanders.

The Bull of Boniface, forbidding to levy any Tax upon the Clergy.

A Prohibition of the King, to carry Money out of the Kingdom.

The Differences between Philip the Fair and Boniface VIII.

ſiaſtical Perſons, it is a Raſhneſs, which he ſtyles Folly, and that deſerves Excommunication; and if he had been induced to ſet out this Edict upon Occation of the Ordinance made lately in favour of the Liberty of the Clergy, it was an ill Pretence, because his Decree contained no new Conſtitution, but only confirmed what had been formerly ordained by Canonical Decrees, under new Penalties, and that he did not therein abſolutely forbid the Clergy to grant any Aid to the King for the Defence and Neceſſity of the State, but to do it without ſpecial Leave from the Holy See; and that, upon Conſideration of the intolerable Exactions, which the King's Officers had made upon the Clergy in his Kingdom: Moreover, that the Holy See had always been, and likewiſe for the time to come ſhould be ready, in the preſſing Neceſſities of the State, to oblige the Clergy of the Kingdom of France, to afford Succour to their King, without ſparing even the Chalices, the Croſſes, and other Sacred Utenſils, if need were, rather than ſuffer ſo great a Kingdom, and ſo dear to the Holy See, to want neceſſary Succours for its Defence; but that at this juncture all Kings and Princes, Neighbours to France, complain'd of his Invaſions, and among others, that the King of the Romans alledges, that the King of France has ſeized on divers Imperial Towns, eſpecially on the County of Burgundy; and the King of England ſays, that he likewiſe keeps from him a Country in Gaſcony; that theſe Princes would very willingly referr themſelves to the Holy See. to whom the Judgment belongs, in regard it is a Sin to detain that which is anothers, and to make an unjuſt War: In fine, the Pope declares, that he would not be underſtood in his Decree to ſpeak of the Impoſitions and Aids, which the Prelates and other Eccleſiaſtical Perſons, owe the King on the account of the Fiefs which they hold, dependant on the Crown. He conjures the King to follow his Advice, and to revoke his Ordinance, being deſirous to uſe all gentle Means with him, before he would make uſe of Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures. He ſent the Biſhop of Viviers to him at the ſame time, that he might repreſent the Thing to him Viva voce, and gave him a Letter of particular Credence, bearing Date the 22d. of the ſame Month.

The Pope's Bull againſt this Prohibition.

The King's Manifeſto againſt the Pope's Bull.

The King ſet forth a Manifeſto, in Anſwer to the Pope's Bull, wherein he obſerves, that before there were any Clergy in France, the King had the Protection of his Kingdom, and Power to make Laws which he judged neceſſary for its Defence; ſo that he could forbid the carrying Money and Arms out of his Kingdom, for fear his Enemies ſhould get ſome Advantage by them, that he had not abſolutely forbid the doing it, but only without his Permiſſion, with a deſign to grant it to the Clergy, in caſe that it brought no Prejudice to the Kingdom; that were it true, that the King detain'd by Violence the Perſons, and Goods of the Clergy, it would be ſurprizing enough, that the Pope ſhould not pronounce him Excommunicate; that the Church is not only compos'd of the Clergy, but alſo of the Laity, and that they are not only the Clergy, but likewiſe the Laity whom Jeſus Chriſt has delivered from the Slavery of Sin, and ſet at Liberty: That the Clergy have in truth particular Privileges, which have been granted to them by the Decrees of Popes, by the Bounty, or at leaſt by the Permiſſion of Secular Princes; but that they ought not to deprive Princes of the Government, and Defence of their Kingdoms, nor of the Things neceſſary to that End: That we muſt give to Cæſar that which is Cæſar's, and that every one, whether Church man, or Laick, who is not willing to contribute to the Neceſſities of the State, is an unprofitable Member which muſt be cut off: That if the Enemy prevail'd, the Clergy would be they, who would ſuffer moſt, and their Goods be moſt liable to the Spoil: That it overthrows the ancient and natural Right, to hinder one from ſuccouring one's ſelf: That it is a ſhame for the Vicar of Jeſus Chriſt to forbid the paying of Tribute to Cæſar, and to thunder out his Cenſures againſt the Clergy, who lend their Aſſiſtance to the King and Kingdom. or rather to themſelves, while they are permitted to beſtow their Riches on Players, and their Friends, and to waſt them in ſuperfluous Expences: That it is unjuſt; that the Church-men enrich'd by the Bounty of Princes, ſhould refuſe them neceſſary Aids for the defence of the State; that this is to aſſiſt the Enemy, to commit Treaſon, and betray the State, to maintain ſuch a Prohibition; As to what concerns the King of England, the War, which he hath with him, ariſes from this, becauſe that Prince would not make his Appearance when ſummoned to do Homage for the Lands, he held of France, his Majeſty was oblig'd to ſeize them, till he had done his Duty; but inſtead of doing it, he had declared War againſt him, and had renounced the Fealty, and Homage, which he owed him for thoſe Lands: And, as to the King of the Romans, that he had offer'd that Prince to referr himſelf, as to the Differences between them, to four Umpires: That he had not taken the County of Burgundy, till after that King had declared War, and bid him publick Defiance. In fine, the Kings his Predeceſſors had been very liberal to the Clergy, who could not, without Ingratitude, refuſe to grant him ſuch Aids; to the end he might be in a Condition to oppoſe his Enemies.

The King was not the only one, that oppoſed this Undertaking of the Pope, the Archbiſhop of Rheimes, and the other Biſhops of his Dioceſs ſent him a Letter, wherein they humbly preſented to him, that the King, the Princes, Barons, and other Lords of the Kingdom, finding his Decree burdenſom and prejudicial to their Rights, had reſolved to ſummon all the French, chiefly ſuch as owed Fealty to the King, of whom almoſt all the Prelates of the Kingdom had taken the Oath of Fidelity, to defend and preſerve the Rights and and Honour of his Majeſty and his Kingdom: That they could not live in quiet, if they were not protected by the King: That if the Clergy did not grant the King, what he demanded, the Church of France, which hitherto had enjoy'd Peace, and Liberty, would be in danger of falling into Trouble, and be toſſed with a Tempeſt which might occaſion its Ruin: Wherefore they beſeech his Holineſs to find out a Way to appeaſe this Diſturbance, and to maintain Peace between the Church and State: That they therewith had ſent to him two Biſhops, to ſet forth more particularly by word of mouth the Danger, to which the Gallican Church is like to be expoſed

The Differences between Philip the Fair and Boniface VIII.

The Letter of the French Prelates.

In the mean time, the Pope ſent two Nuncio's to France, namely Berardus Biſhop of Albania, and Simon Biſhop of Præneſte; to whom he gave order to levy the Money in that Kingdom for the Holy See, to tranſmit it to Italy, and to declare the King, and his Officers Excommunicate, if they oppoſed them in it. He likewiſe ſent by them a Bull, by which he continued the Truce betcen the King of France, the King of England, and the King of the Romans, for the ſpace of two Years longer, under the Pain of Excommunication, to him, that ſhould break it. Theſe two Nuncio's being deſirous to preſent this Bull to King Philip the Fair, before he had read it, he proteſted, that the temporal Government of his Kingdom belonged to him only: That he owned no Perſon above him in it; neither would he ſubmit himſelf therein to any Man whatever, and that his Reſolution was to maintain all his Rights, and defend them againſt all Men: That he meant not to be bound by the Bull, which mentioned the continuance of the Truce; but as to what related to his Soul and ſpiritual Matters, he was ready to ſubmit to the Advice and Command of the Holy See, as far as he ought, and was oblig'd. He demanded of the two Nuncio's an Allowance of this Protection, before the reading of the Bull, for the lengthening of the Truce, the 20. of April, 1297.

An Embaſſy from the Pope for the continuance of the Truce.

On the 31. of July, of the ſame Year, the Pope declar'd by a Bull granted at Orvietum, that he had no Deſign by his firſt Bull, to hinder the free Gifts, which the Biſhops were willing to preſent to the King, or his Lords, nor the Feodal Rights, and other Services due to the King from the Clergy, no more than the caſe of Exigency of State, on which occaſion the King and his Succeſſors have power to oblige the Clergy to grant him a Subſidy, even without conſulting the Pope: And that this Exigency ſhall be declared by the King, and his Succeſſors, if they have attain'd to the Age of one and twenty Years; or in caſe they have not, by the Aſſembly of the States.

The Explication of the Pope's firſt Bull.

Whilſt Boniface ſoften'd Matters with the King of France, he carried them to Extremity againſt the Gibelines, and particularly againſt the Colonni, who were the Heads of the Party. He had then two Cardinals of that Houſe, James Colonni, Cardinal of the Title of St. Mary in viâ latâ, and Peter Colonni, Cardinal by the Title of St. Euſtachius. The Pope accuſed them of robbing the Treaſury of the Church. after the Death of his Predeceſſors, and of diſperſing defamatory Libels againſt him: And on that Account, he cauſed them to be ſummoned the fourth of May, to appear perſonally the ſame Evening before him, and the Conſiſtory of Cardinals. there to hear what he had to alledge againſt them, and to know of them whether he was Pope. On the tenth of May, theſe two Cardinals drew up a Writing, in the Caſtle of Longetia, wherein they declared, that they would not appear to the Summons given them by the Pope, becauſe they believed it was not ſafe for them to repair to the place, were he was; but ſince Benedictus Cajetanus has noted in the cloſe of the Summons, that he would know of them whether he were Pope? They declared to him, that they held him not to be lawful Pope; that they had brought their Accuſation of it to the Cardinals, and demanded, that they would take care of the Welfare of the Church, by examining, whether Benedict were a lawful Pope, having heard it from Perſons of good Credit often ſaid, that there was room to doubt, whether the Renunciation made by Celeſtine V. were lawful and canonical, becauſe God alone being the Beſtower of the Papal Soveraignty, it could not be taken away by any Man; and if Biſhops cannot be depoſed, nor tranſlated, no nor voluntarily reſign their Biſhopricks, but by Authority of the Pope their Superior; by an Argument à fortiori, the Pope who has no Superior, cannot be diveſted, no, not voluntarily, of the Papacy, the Acceptance of which is in a manner a Vow which is ever obliging; and that altho' Celeſtine did renounce the Papacy, the Renunciation that he made was not Valid, becauſe he was engaged to do it by Fraud and Surprize; that in fine, though his

The Proceeding of the Pope againſt the Colonni, and their Condemnation.

The Differences between Philip the Fair and Boniface VIII.

Renunciation might ſtand good, ſeveral things have ſince happened, which had made void the Election of Benedict; that theſe Reaſons had made them of Opinion that he was no Pope; that they inſiſted on it, that a general Council ought to be called, to decide this Queſtion, being ready to ſubmit to their Determination; that in the mean time, they forbid him all the Functions of the Papacy, and appealed, as to all he could do againſt them, or againſt others, to a General Council, to the Holy See; or a future Pope; that they made open Proteſtation of it, and that not being able to have this Proteſtation ſignified to him, for fear he ſhould arreſt thoſe that ſhould ſignifie it to him; according as he had threatned them, they would publiſh it to the whole World. In Concluſion they exhorted all Chriſtians to procure the aſſembling of a General Council, and to withdraw themſelves from the Obedience of Benedict, till a General Council ſhall have decided this Matter. This Act was paſſed in the Preſence of an Apoſtolick Notary of Præneſte, and divers Witneſſes, the greateſt Part whereof were Frenchmen.

The Pope proceeding againſt the Colonni, &c.

The ſame Day Boniface publiſhed a thundring Bull againſt the Colonni, wherein, after having at large recounted the Miſchiefs which that Houſe had done to the Holy See, and complained, that the two Cardinals Colonni would not cauſe to be yielded up, by Stephen Colonni their Nephew, the City of Præneſte, and the Caſtles he poſſeſſed, with a Deſign to imploy them in favour of Frederick the King of Sicily, an Enemy of the Church, he depoſeth theſe two Cardinals, declares them to have forfeited all their Benefices, and incapable to enjoy any Eccleſiaſtical Dignity, no not ſo much as any Benefice ſcituate an Hundred Miles from the City of Rome, and excommunicates not only them, but all others, that ſhall acknowledge them to be Cardinals, or admit them to aſſiſt at the Election of a Pope. He deprives for ever John and Odo Sons of John Colonni, the Brother of Cardinal James, and all his Poſterity of all Benefices, declares them uncapable to be promoted to a Cardinalſhip, or the Papacy, or to enjoy any Benefice even to the fourth Generation; Orders, That theſe two Cardinals ſhall appear within ten Days before the Conſiſtory; and in default thereof, he deprives them of all their Goods, moveable and immoveable. The Publication of this Bull was followed by a Cruſade, which the Pope ſet on foot to make War upon the Colonni; by Means whereof, he ſpoiled them of their Eſtates, took their Places and their Caſtles, and drave them out of Italy. Sciarra Colonni, one of the Heads of this Family, being withdrawn from Præneſte, was there beſieged, and for Fear of falling into the Pope's Hands, eſcaped by Night with his Nephews, and retired to the Woods, where he remained a long time conceal'd and wandring, till he fell into the Hands of Pirates, who put him in Fetters; from which Philip the Fair reſcued him. Stephen Colonni, and others fled into France, where they were well received by the King: This very much diſpleaſed the Pope. But that which made the Pope, and the King of France fall out downright, was the Judgment, which the former gave, between the King, the Earl of Flanders, and the King of England; by which he ordained, that Philip the Fair ſhould reſtore to the Earl his Daughter (whom he kept Priſoner ſince the Year 1296.) to marry her, as he pleaſed, as alſo ſome Lands he had taken from him; and that he ſhould go into the Eaſt to make War upon the Infidels. The Pope diſpatch'd a Bull of this Judgment, and put it into the Hands of the Engliſh Ambaſſador, who carried it to Paris: But when it was read in the Preſence of the King, of Charles Earl of Valois his Brother, of Robert Earl of Artois, and the Earl of Evreux; the Earl of Artois ſnatched away the Bull in a Rage, and threw it into the Fire, ſwearing, that it ſhould not be ſo, and the Pope ſhould not revenge himſelf at the Coſt of the Kingdom. The King proteſted, that he would not put in Execution what the Pope had decreed; but as ſoon as the Truce was expired, he would begin the War afreſh.

The Pope's Bull in favour of the Earl of Flanders.

The Appointment of a Jubilee by Boniface.

In the Year 1300. Boniface publiſhed a Jubilee, in which he granted plenary Indulgences to all who ſhould viſit the Churches of St. Peter and St. Paul, at Rome; decreeing, that the ſame thing ſhould be renewed every Hundred Years. The opening of the Jubilee drew a great Concourſe of People to Rome; and Boniface to make the ſovereign Authority which he pretended to have over the Temporality, to be owned, appeared at the Ceremony, one while in his pontifical Habit, and another in Imperial Robes, and took for his Motto, Ecce duo gladii.

Boniface quarrels anew with the King.

The King not willing to quarrel with the Pope downright, ſent to him the ſame Year William of Nogaret, Baron of Calviſſon, in Quality of an Ambaſſador, to give him Advice of the Alliance he had made with the Emperor, who on his Part likewiſe ſent him an Ambaſſador. The Pope had no great Regard to the one or the other, blamed the Election of the Emperor, and threatned him, that he would croſs it if he did not give him Tuſcany, ſaid many diſobliging things of the King, and did all he could to break off the Alliance between the two Princes. Nogaret, who underſtood the ill Deſigns of the Pope, upbraided him therewith to his Face, which exaſperated his Spirit, and made him yet more averſe than before to the King's Intereſt.

Boniface propoſed to the Chriſtian Princes a Cruſado to go into the Eaſt againſt the Infidels. He ſent Bernard Saiſſet, Biſhop of Pamiez, (a Biſhoprick he had erected in the Year 1296. in ſpite of the King) with Orders, not only to ſet forward this Expedition with Philip the Fair, but likewiſe to demand the Enlargement of the Earl of Flanders, and his Children. The King refuſing to hearken to theſe Propoſals, the Biſhop forgot the Reſpect he owed the King, telling him, that he held nothing of his Majeſty, but that he owed all to the Pope, whoſe Subject he was, both as to ſpiritual and temporal Concerns, threatned to interdict the Kingdom, and maintain'd the Pope's temporal Power over ſovereign Princes. The King offended at this Procedure, cauſed this Biſhop to be accuſed of divers Monopolies which he had exacted, and of Rebellion; and order'd him to be cited before the Parliament; where appearing, he was ſent to Priſon.

The Differences between Philip the Fair and Boniface VIII.

The Biſhop of Pamiez Envoy to the King, gives ill Language, and is arreſted.

Boniface enraged at this Impriſonment, in the Month of February, in the Year 1301. ſent James Norman, Archdeacon of Narbonne, to the King, to order him to ſet this Biſhop at Liberty: The which the King did, putting him nevertheleſs under the keeping of the Archbiſhop of Narbonne, his Metropolitan, to puniſh him for his Raſhneſs, according to the Rules of the Canon. Boniface not content herewith, required that the King ſhould ſet him at full Liberty, and give him a Grant of all his Goods.

A Bull againſt the King's Privileges.

After that, by a Bull of the 4*th* of December, in the ſame Year, he ſuſpended the Favours and Privileges he had granted to the King of France and his Succeſſors, and to his Counſellors, Clergy, or Laity, and particularly, thoſe he had granted for the Relief of the State; and decreed, that the Clergy, without his Conſent, ſhould not pay the King what he demanded under the Title of Tenths, or Aid, though he had conſented to it, and had given Time, till the 1*ſt*. of November, in the Year following, to make Report of the Privileges to the Holy See, to the end they might be examined.

A Bull of the Sovereignty of the Pope, and againſt the Rights of the King.

Two Days after he ſet forth another Bull, wherein he declares, that God had eſtabliſhed him over Kings and Kingdoms, to pluck up, to deſtroy, to ſcatter, to build; that the King of France ought not to think, he has no Superior, and is not ſubject to the Pope; that he who is of that Opinion, is a Fool and an Infidel. He therein diſcourſes with the King about the Sums of Money which he exacted of his Subjects: He therein complains that he had fill'd the Benefices and Prebends vacant in the Court of Rome, without the Pope's Leave; that he had ſeized on the Goods of the Clergy; that he vexed them with ſeveral Grievances; particularly the Church of Lyons, though it be out of the Bounds of his Kingdom; by receiving the Revenues of the Cathedral Churches during the Vacancy, which he falſly calls a Right belonging to the Crown. He orders the Prelates, Chapters of Churches, and Doctors of Divinity in the Kingdom to attend him, in order to provide for the Reformation of the Realm. He inveighs againſt the King's evil Counſellors, and exhorts this Prince to undertake the Holy War. By another Bull of the ſame Date, directed to the Prelates, Chapters of Cathedrals, and other Doctors of the Realm, he writes to them, that not being ignorant of the Oppreſſions which the Clergy ſuffer from the Kings, his Officers, Earls or Barons, he has taken up a Reſolution, after he had communicated it to the Cardinals, to ſummon them to Rome: He orders them to appear there on the firſt of November following, with Powers and Inſtructions neceſſary, and promiſes them, that Care ſhould be taken for the Preſervation of the Honour and Freedom of the Gallican Church, and the Reformation of the State. He writes the ſame thing to the Abbots in a Bull very like it: But to the end his Bull might make the deeper Impreſſion, he made an Abridgment of it in theſe Words: 'Boniface the Biſhop, a Servant of 'the Servants of God, to Philip King of France: Fear God, 'and keep his Commandments. We will you to know, 'that you are ſubject to us, both in Spirituals and Temporals. 'You have no Right to beſtow Benefices, and Prebends; and 'if the Cuſtody of the Goods of ſome vacant Benefices be'longs to you, you ought to reſerve the Profits to their Suc'ceſſors. If you have beſtowed any Benefices, we declare 'the Donation void, and revoke the actual Poſſeſſion which 'enſued thereon. We declare them Hereticks, who believe 'the contrary. Given at the Palace of Lateran, on the 5*th* 'of December, in the ſeventh Year of our Papacy.

The Aſſembly of the States againſt the Attempts of the Pope.

Theſe Bulls were delivered, and publiſhed in the Kingdom by the Archdeacon of Narbonne. The King to obviate the ill Conſequences which they might have, cauſed the ſhort Bull to be publickly burnt on the 8*th* of February 1302. and called together the three Eſtates of his Kingdom, to adviſe about Ways of Self-preſervation. This Aſſembly was held in the Church of our Lady at Paris, 10*th* of April 1302. The King propoſed there the Pope's Pretenſions to the Temporalities of his Kingdom, and the Summons he had ſent to the Prelates to appear at Rome. Peter Flotte, who ſpake for the King, repreſented to the Aſſembly the pernicious Deſigns of the Pope, the Injuries which the Court of Rome did to the Gallican Church, by her Reſervations, by * Proviſions of Archbiſhopricks, Biſhopricks and other Benefices, which ſhe be-

 Grants before the Death of the preſent Incumbents then call'd, Mandata de providendo, &c Gratiæ expectativæ, by Civilians. Much may be ſeen enacted againſt them in our Statutes eſpecially in the Reign of* Edw. 7.

The Differences between Philip the Fair and Boniface VIII.

bestowed on Strangers that were non-resident, and by other Methods, by which she assumed the Disposal of all Benefices, by Impositions upon the Clergy; by the Right she challenged to take Cognizance and to judge of all Causes. He protested on the King's Behalf, that he owned God only his Superior in Temporals; that it was his Intent before the Arrival of the Nuncio, if there were Occasion, to regulate the Behaviour of his Officers towards the the Clergy; but that since he had superseded the doing it, for Fear the Pope should take Advantage by it, and believe it to be done at his Instance, and by his Order. The King demanded the Opinion of the Assembly upon all these Points, and chiefly about his sovereign Jurisdiction in Temporals. The Nobility, having withdrawn a while to deliberate, answer'd by the Earl of Artois, That they thanked his Majesty for the good Will he had to maintain the Rights and Honour of his State, and declared, that they were ready to expose their Lives and Fortunes in its Defence; and though his Majesty would suffer, or pass by these Attempts, they would oppose it; and said, that they owned no other Superior, but the King. The Clergy was unwilling suddenly to give their Answer, and desired Time to deliberate more fully; but the King pressing them to speak their Mind, the Prelates declared, That they believed themselves bound to defend the King, and the Freedom of the Kingdom, and that some of them were engaged thereto by Oath, and others by Duty. Nevertheless they besought the King to permit them to attend the Pope, who had sent them a Summons; but the King refused it, by the Advice of the Nobility. The third Estate was of the same Opinion with the Nobles.

The Answer of the King and States to the Pope.

This Assembly being broke up, the King sent the Pope a short Answer, like his abridged Bull, in these Terms: 'Philip by the Grace of GOD, King of France, to Boniface, who stiles himself Supream Bishop, little or no 'Greeting. May your great Extravagance know, That 'we are not subject to any Person whatsoever, in Things 'Temporal; that the bestowing of vacant Churches and 'Prebends, does of Regal Right belong to us; that we 'can appropriate the Fruits of them to our selves; that 'the Grants we have made, or shall make for the Time 'to come, are valid; that we will maintain powerfully 'those that are in Possession thereof, and we declare them 'Fools, and senseless, that think the contrary.' The Dukes, Earls, and Barons of France, wrote to the Cardinals the same Day, 'That though they desired to maintain the ancient Union, which ever had been between the 'Holy See, and the Realm of France, yet they could not 'suffer the Attempts which Boniface made upon the King, 'and Kingdom.' They send them Word, what was resolved in the Assembly of the States; prove that the King is not subject to the Pope, in Temporals; and that the Pope has no Right to send for the Prelates of the Kingdom, nor undertake to reform it; they represent the Prejudice, the Prelates going out of the Realm would cause to the State; upbraid Boniface, that he has taken great Sums of Money for the Grants of Ecclesiastical Dignities; that he had filled the Benefices, with Persons of no Merit; that he bestowed Benefices, the Grant of which belonged to the King. They besought the Cardinals to hinder the Consequences of this Undertaking, that the Church may continue in Peace. The Prelates wrote a little after the same things to Boniface, informed him what passed in the Assembly; the Complaints the King there made; in what Manner the Nobility there spake; how that being asked, they desired Time to consult, with Desire to appease his Majesty, and to establish the Union between him and the Holy See; but that being obliged to answer upon the Spot, that they might not be looked on as Enemies to the State, they had declared, they thought themselves bound to assist the King, and preserve his Person, his Honour, his Liberty, his Rights, and those of his Kingdom, as well by the Oath of Allegiance, which some of them had taken to the King upon account of their Fiefs, as by the Duty of faithful Subjects; they added, that they had besought his Majesty to permit them to go to Rome, whither his Holiness had cited them; but that the King and the Lords had forbid them: They earnestly besought the Pope to apply a Remedy to the Mischiefs that would necessarily ensue, if the Dissention, which is begun between him and the King, continued; and prayed him to re-establish the Union, and revoke the Summons he had caused to be given them by his Nuncio. The third Estate wrote likewise a Letter to the Cardinals to the same Effect.

The Replies of the Pope and Cardinals to the King and States.

The Pope's Answer to the Prelates contain'd nothing, but Complaints against the Assembly, which the King had caused to be held at Paris, and principally against Peter Flotte, whom he calls, Belial semividens corpore, & mente totaliter excæcatus, and Reproaches against them that had not taken his Part. He affirms, That the Doctrine delivered in this Assembly is Schismatical, because it tends to the Establishment of two supreme Heads; and that the Design of those Persons who composed this Assembly, was to separate the Gallican Church from the Union of the Church universal, and to erect a See against the Vicar of Jesus Christ. In the Conclusion, he exhorts the Prelates to do their Duty, and to obey him, despising temporal Riches, and the Threats of secular Judges. The Cardinals answered the Nobility, That the Pope had never pretended that the King ought to be subject to him in Temporals, or to hold his Kingdom of him: And that the Archdeacon of Narbonne had not insinuated it, neither by Word of Mouth, nor in Writing, and therefore the Proposal made by Peter Flatte was without Ground; that the Pope had sent for the Prelates and Doctors of France to consult with them, as with Persons who could not be suspected by the King; that 'twas no new thing for the Holy See to assemble provincial and general Councils; that the Pope had favoured the King, in not calling a general Council, where there would appear Prelates of other Kingdoms, which are not well affected to that of France; that if the Letter were considered, which he wrote to the King, 'tis so far from being a Ground of Complaint, that there is Reason to thank him for his paternal Care of the King and Kingdom, to procure their Quiet, and discharge the Clergy and People from Taxes; that if the Pope had burthen'd the Church of France, it was in favour of the King, in allowing him to levy the tenth Part of the Church-Revenues for several Years; that the Benefices and Ecclesiastical Dignities which he had granted within the Kingdom, he had given with Regard to the King; that he had likewise granted him several Dispensations; that he had filled the Archbishopricks or Bishopricks of France, with no Strangers, except the Archbishop of Bourges and the Bishop of Arras, who were not suspected by the King, and whose Merit was well known; that as to the Canonries he had confer'd them on Natives of the Realm, and chosen Persons worthy to supply them, and that for one Stranger, there were in them an hundred French; In fine, they complain, that the Prelates had not given to Boniface the Title of Supreme Bishop in their Letter, and had not used the Terms of Respect, which were usually given him. This Letter of the Cardinals is dated the 26*th* of June, in the Year 1302. They wrote the same Day another Letter to the third Estate, containing much the same Things, but shorter. The same Things likewise are to be found in three Letters of three Cardinals, directed to Robert Duke of Burgundy, who had written to them to find out Ways how to remove this Disturbance, on Condition the Pope would revoke the Suspension of the Privileges, and the Citation of the Prelates, and other Ecclesiastical Persons to Rome. They answer'd him about this Proposition, that the King ought to put himself in a Posture to receive these Favours of the Pope; that he should first make him Satisfaction by acknowledging he had done amiss. The same Year the Pope held a Consistory, wherein Cardinal Porto spake boldly for the Authority of the Pope over the Temporalities of Kings. Boniface did the like, and spake several things against the King, concluding, that he could depose him, and persisted in his Resolution to force the Prelates to come to Rome. The King on the other Side forbad them to depart, or carry any Gold or Silver out of his Kingdom, and caused the Estates of those to be seized, who were gone out of the Kingdom without his Leave.

The Differences between Philip the Fair and Boniface VIII.

Treatises against the Pope's Claim.

While the Potentates thus disputed their Rights, the King's Officers and the Divines endeavoured for their Parts to maintain the Rights of the Kingdom, and the Truth. We have among others, a Writing of one Peter Bosco, the King's Advocate at Constance, against the short Bull of Boniface, wherein he maintains that the Pope's Claim is Heretical. We have besides another Treatise more at large, where the Question concerning the King's Sovereignty in Temporals is discussed pro and con, and decided in favour of the King, by very solid Reasons, and by Quotations out of the Scripture, and the Fathers.

William Nogaret's Petition against the Pope.

In the Year 1302. the King foreseeing, that the Pope would push Matters farther, and desiring to prevent it, received the Accusation of William Nogaret against the Pope, contain'd in a Petition of his to the King, which he presented to him in the Louvre, in the Presence of divers Prelates and Lords, the 12*th* of March. He therein sets forth, that Boniface is no lawful Pope, because he was chosen during the Life of Celestine, whom he deceived and seduced, and in fine, caused to be put to Death; and that his Intrusion could not be rectified by a new Consent of the Cardinals, it being null in its Beginning. He there says, That it is the King's Part to make use of the Authority which God had put into his Hands, to oppose this Usurper of the Holy See. He propounds afterwards four Heads of the Accusation against him. 1. That he is no Pope; but that he holds the Holy See unjustly. 2. That he is an apparent Heretick. 3. That he is guilty of notorious Simony. 4. That he is guilty of several open Crimes, in which he is harden'd, viz. The Robbing of Churches, Tyranny, Blasphemy, Extortion, tortion, &c. He declares, that he is ready to make good all theſe things in a General Council, which he demands to be held, and in the mean time, that Boniface be impriſoned, and that one be ſubſtituted to govern the Church, until there be a Pope choſen; and adds, that he addreſſes himſelf to the King for this. 1. Becauſe of his Religion. 2. Becauſe of his Dignity Royal, which engages him to extirpate all Criminals. 3. Becauſe of the Oath he has taken to defend the Churches of his Kingdom, which this ravening Wolf tears in Pieces. 4. Becauſe he is the Patron, and Protector of the Churches. 5. Becauſe he ought to follow the Footſteps of his Anceſtors, in delivering the Roman Church from the Oppreſſion ſhe lies under.

The Differences between Philip the Fair and Boniface VIII.

The Publication of the Bull, Unam Sanctam.

The Pope for his Part publiſhed on the 16*th* of November, his famous Decretal, Unam Sanctam, wherein he declares, That the Church, which is one, has two Swords, one Spiritual and the other Temporal; that the Temporal is ſubject to the Spiritual; and that none can deny this Truth, without admitting of two Supreme Heads, with the Manichees. The King having received the News of what paſſed in the Court of Rome, ſummoned the firſt of December, a new Aſſembly of his Prelates, repeated the Prohibitions made to all his Subjects, neither to depart the Kingdom, nor to carry out of his Dominions, Gold or Silver, Arms, Horſes, &c. and wrote to the Pope by the Biſhop of Auxerre, that he ſhould proſecute none of his Clergy for Non-appearance; but that he ſhould blame him who hindered it.

Propoſals of Cardinal Lemoine Nuncio in France.

The Pope ſent into France John Lemoine, Cardinal of the Title of St. Marcellinus, and St. Peter, to treat with the King upon theſe Points in Difference, and charged him to propound to him the following Articles. 1. To revoke the Prohibition made to the Prelates of going to Rome. 2. To own that the Pope has ſovereign Power to diſpoſe of Benefices vacant in Curiâ, or otherwiſe; and that no Lay-Perſon has Right to confer them without his Leave. 3. That the Pope has Power to ſend Legates, and Nuncio's into all Places, without asking Leave of any Perſon. 4. That the Supreme Adminiſtration of the Churche's Revenues belongs to the Pope, who alone has Right to diſpoſe thereof, and require a Part of them. 5. That neither the King, nor other Princes have any Right to ſeize, or poſſeſs themſelves of the Goods and Rights of the Church, nor to accuſe the Clergy before them for perſonal Actions, nor for real, which are not held of them in Fief. 6. To ſend a ſpecial Proctor to Rome, to clear himſelf for burning of his Holineſs's Bull, to make him Satisfaction, and to hear the Pope's Reſolution, which is to revoke all the Privileges granted by the Holy See to the Kings of France. 7. Not to abuſe the Guardianſhip of Cathedral Churches that are vacant by a Right called abuſively, Regal, to hinder any Waſte or Wrong to the Revenues of Churches, and to reſerve all the Fruits to ſucceeding Prelates, except the reaſonable Charges of the keeping them. 8. To reſtore to the Clergy the ſpiritual Sword, and permit them to make uſe of it, notwithſtanding all Privileges pretended by the King and his Officers. 9. To let him underſtand, that the Change of the Coin, which he hath now twice practiſed, ruins his State, and he is bound to Reſtitution. The 10. and 11. To confeſs, that the City of Lyons is no Part of his Kingdom, and to reſtore to the Church of that City, and its Archbiſhop, the Lands which belong to them by abſolute Right. 12. To ſignifie to the King, that he ſatisfie the Holy See about all theſe Articles, within a certain Time; if not, that he will take order therein, by proceeding againſt him Spiritually and Temporally.

The King's Anſwer to the Articles propounded by the Nuncio.

The King made Anſwer to theſe Articles: To the firſt, That the Prohibition he had made was not upon the account of the Clergy, nor to injure the Church of Rome; but with reſpect to the Rebellion of the Flemings, and to provide againſt any Conſpiracy which might be made in his Territories: That his Intent was not to hinder his Subjects from going to Rome, and returning thence, and that he will give Orders, that the Goods of the Biſhops offending, which he had cauſed to be ſeized, ſhall be reſtored. To the ſecond, That the granting of Benefices belonged to him, and that he enjoyed it but as St. Lewis and his Predeceſſors had done, Time out of Mind. To the third, that he hindred not the Pope's Nuncio's and Legates from coming into his Kingdom, if they were not ſuſpected by him, or if he had not ſome juſt Reaſon to do it. To the fourth and fifth, That he deſigned to do nothing, but what is juſtified by Right and Cuſtom, and if his Officers exceed their Commiſſion, he is ready to puniſh them. To the ſixth, That the Bull was not burnt in Contempt; but the Biſhop of Laon, and the Sheriffs of that City, having a Suit depending before the Parliament, and the Biſhop having procured a Bull, the Sheriffs complain'd of a Deſign to remove the Buſineſs into another Court, whereupon the Parties were agreed not to make uſe of the Bull, and burnt it as uſeleſs. To the ſeventh, That he pretended to innovate nothing, as to the Regale, or Right of Patronage, but he enjoyed it as his Predeceſſors had done, without Waſte or Abuſe, and if his Officers committed any, he would take order about it. To the eighth, That he hinders not the Church-men from uſing the Spiritual Sword, in ſuch Caſes as belong to them. To the ninth, That he made a Change in the Coin upon Neceſſity, and to be in a Condition to defend the Kingdom, as his Predeceſſors had done on like Occaſions, and that he had already eas'd the Complaints of his Subjects, as to any ill Conſequence that might attend it. To the tenth and eleventh, That he pities the Archbiſhop of Lyons, and his Church, for what they had ſuffered on the account of the Differences they have had with the People of that City, and for what the Archbiſhop has ſuffer'd for refuſing to take the Oath of Fidelity to his Majeſty; but 'tis the Archbiſhop's Fault; nevertheleſs he is ready to debate this Matter, and to make it appear clearly, that the City of Lyons is Part of his Kingdom, and that he is not willing in any ways to invade the Rights of the Church. In fine, in Anſwer to the laſt, he declares, That his Intent is, to preſerve and increaſe the Union, which ever was between his Predeceſſors and the Holy See, intreats the Pope to proſecute the ſame Deſign, and not to croſs him in the Enjoyment of his Liberties, Franchiſes, and Privileges; adding, That if his Holineſs be not ſatisfied with the Anſwers, he is ready to ſubmit herein to the Judgment of the Earls of Britain and Burgundy, whom even the Pope himſelf offered to take for Mediators.

The Differences between Philip the Fair and Boniface VIII.

Bulls againſt the King.

The Pope was not at all ſatisfied with theſe Anſwers, and not only ſhewed his Reſentment by the Letters he wrote the 13*th* of April, to the Earl of Alanſon, the Biſhop of Auxerre, and Cardinal of St. Marcellinus; but he again commands this latter, to give a freſh Summons to the Prelates of the Realm, to appear at Rome within three Months, and ſent him a Bull, wherein he declared, that the King had incurred the Penalty of Excommunication, ordered the Nuncio to ſignify it to him, to declare all thoſe Prelates, and others of the Clergy excommunicate, who ſhould celebrate or adminiſter the Sacraments to him, or in his Preſence; and to cite his Confeſſor to appear within three Months, before his Holineſs. The Nuncio having received theſe Bulls by the Hand of Nicholas de Benefracto, gave out Copies of them; but this no ſooner came to the Knowledge of the King, but he gave Order to arreſt thoſe that diſperſed them; the Nuncio not thinking his Perſon in Safety, withdrew: The Archdeacon of Conſtance, and Benefracto were arreſted at Troyes, and the King renewed the Order he had given and after ſuperſeded, to ſeize the Goods of the Clergy who were out of the Kingdom.

The Aſſembly of the States in Louvre.

On the 13*th* of June, was held in the Caſtle of the Louvre, an Aſſembly of the Prelates and Nobility, in preſence of the King; in which Lewis Earl of Evreux, Guy Earl of St. Paul, John Earl of Dreux, and William du Pleſſis, made Complaint againſt Boniface, accuſed him of Hereſy, and divers other Crimes, which they engaged to prove by Oath upon the Evangeliſts in a full general Council, and beſought the King, as Protector and Defender of the Church, to call one. The Prelates judging this Affair to be of great Importance, demanded Time to deliberate on it. On the Morrow, the Aſſembly yet ſitting, William du Pleſſis read the Heads of the Accuſation, which he offer'd againſt the Pope; namely, That he was an Heretick; that he did not believe the Immortality of the Soul, nor an eternal Life; that he doubted the Reality of our Lord's Body in the Euchariſt, and ſhewed it no Reſpect; that he affirmed Fornication to be no Sin: That he approved of the Book of Arnoldus de Villa-nova, condemned by the Biſhop of Paris, and burnt: That he had cauſed Images to be ſet up in Churches, to be adored: That he was a Sorcerer, and Simoniack: That he maintain'd the Pope could not commit Simony: That he forced the Prieſts to reveal Confeſſions; That he eat Fleſh at all Times: That he debaſed the Order of Cardinals, and ſome Orders of Monks: That he was a ſworn Enemy of France, and that he had a Deſign to deſtroy the Kingdom: That he had cauſed Celeſtine, his Predeceſſor, to die in Priſon: That he had nulled the Marriage of ſeveral Perſons, and had made the Nuns, without any Ground, to leave their Convents. After he had read theſe Accuſations, he proteſted, 'twas not out of any Hatred to Boniface, that he produced theſe Crimes, but for the Good of the Church; and declared, he was ready to prove them in a general Council, which he deſired to be called; and becauſe he fear'd, that Boniface would thunder againſt him, he appealed to the next Council, next Pope, or to the Holy See, adhering to the Allegations inſinuated by Peter Nogaret, and demanded an Act of his Declaration. The King ſaid, That he conſented to the calling of a Council, that he would thereto contribute his whole Power, deſiring the Prelates to joyn with him; and to avoid the Proſecutions of the Pope, he appealed, as to all he might be able to do, to the next Council, or Pope. The Prelates likewiſe own'd, that the calling of a Council was neceſſary, and adhered to the Appeal of the King unto the the next Council. In pursuit of the Requests of this Assembly, the King wrote to all the Cities, Churches, and Communities of his Kingdom, that he might gain their Consent to the calling of a Council, and to the Appeal to be made to the next Council; and in a little time after, the Clergy, the Nobility, the Commons, the Chapters, the Universities, the Secular Orders and the Regular, even the Mendicants (except that of the Cistercians) and several single Prelates of the Realms of France and Navarre, sign'd Acts in Form of their Consent and their Appeal. The King gave Order for the calling of a Council, and gave Notice to the Kings and Princes of Europe, of his Resolution. The Pope on the other Hand sent out his thundering Bulls against the King, and all that adhered to his Appeal, interdicts the Universities and other Societies, deprives the Chapters of their Right of Election, complains loudly of what passed in the Assembly, opposes the calling of a General Council, and threatens to proceed against the King, notwithstanding his Appeal.

The Differences between Philip the Fair and Boniface VIII.

The Pope taken by Nogaret at Anagni.

Nogaret was then in Italy, where he received the Resolution of the Assembly held in the Louvre, with Order to publish it, and signify it to the Pope, who was withdrawn to Anagnia, where he caused, on our Lady's Birth-day, to be published a Bull, whereby he excommunicated the King of France; and released his Subjects from their Oath of Allegiance. He went to Anagnia, attended by Sciarra Colonni, Renaldus de Supino, and three hundred Horse, and some Foot; and having gained some of the Inhabitants of Anagnia by Money, he entred the City the 8*th* of September, with his Troops, carrying the Standard of France, and crying, Let Pope Boniface perish, but let the King of France live; Muoia Papa Bonifacio, è viva il Ré di Francia. Their Design was to go directly to the Pope's Palace, but having been attacked by the Marquis Cajetan his Nephew, in passing before his Palace, they were obliged to force his Palace, and the Houses of those who had embraced the Pope's Party. Sciarra Colonni attacked the Castle where the Pope was, took it, seized Boniface, and rifled his Treasury. Nogaret twitted the Pope with what he had done in France, challenged him to call a Council; Sciarra Colonni would oblige him to renounce the Papacy; but Boniface having made him Answer, that he would sooner lose his Life, Sciarra struck him on the Face with his Gantlet, and had killed him, if Nogaret had not interpos'd. The Pope thus deserted by all his Friends, and in the Hands of his most cruel Enemies, raised the Compassion of the Citizens of Anagnia, who declared for him, and set him at Liberty. He was conducted by his own Order to a publick Place, spake to the People, pardon'd those of the City, except such as had plunder'd the Treasures of the Church; declared, that he would be reconciled to the King of France, and the Colonni, and that he would pardon them, and even Nogaret himself. Nevertheless he soon left this City, and went to Rome, attended with some Troops. He arrived there five Weeks after his being taken, and died with Grief and Melancholy, the 12*th* of October 1303. in the ninth Year of his Papacy. This was the End of this Pope, who had, whatever his Enemies may say, great Endowments, and a great deal of Wit; but Ambition, and an Itch to exercise an Authority which belonged not to him, did cast him headlong into inevitable Mischiefs, never to be escaped by any that attempt to usurp the Rights which appertain to such Princes, as are in a Condition to defend them.

The Pope's Deliverance and his Death.

The Letters of Boniface VIII.

This Pope caused to be composed and published a new Body of Decretals, Intituled, Sextus, divided into five Books, containing some Decretals of his Predecessors, from the Time of Gregory the ninth, and many of those which he made in his own Pontificate. This Collection was not only rejected in France, but there was even a Time when no Body durst make use of it, or quote it. Rainaldus, Bzovius, and Waddingus have inserted divers of his Letters, and Decrees into their Annals, and there are some of them likewise in the Registers of the Bulls.

The Election of Benedict XI.

Ten Days after the Death of Boniface VIII. on the 22*d* of October, in the Year 1303. Nicholas the Cardinal, Bishop of Ostia, Native of Trevisi, who was of the Order of the Friars Preachers, was chosen Pope, and took the Name of Benedict XI. He was a Man of good Morals, and of a very Holy Life. Soon after his Advancement, Peter of Peredo, Prior of la Chesa, whom the King had sent into Italy, after the Death of Boniface, presented to him a large Memoir, wherein he demanded the holding of a General Council, and propounded several Heads of Accusation and Complaint, which the King and Kingdom made against Boniface. Nogaret signified likewise, that he would continue his Prosecution; but Benedict having desired him by the Archbishop of Toulouse, to proceed no further till he received fresh Orders from the King; assuring him, that he would remove this Scandal, and re-establish the Union between the Church of Rome, and the King of France, he yielded to this Request, and returned into France,

The Accusation of Boniface before Benedict XI.

to report this News, and advised the King to send Ambassadors to the Pope, furnished with sufficient Power to treat of this Accommodation. He was joyned with the other Ambassadors, who were Bernard Lord of Mercœuil, William du Plessis, and Peter de Belleperche; but the Pope would never treat with him. His Holiness, who earnestly desired Peace, began with absolving the King from the Censures he had incurred, by a Bull of the 4*th* of April, 1304. By another of the 17*th* of the same Month, he revoked the Reservation which Boniface the eighth had made to provide for all the Cathedral and Regular Churches in the Kingdom: And by a third of the 13*th* of May, in the same Year; he also gave Absolution to all Prelates, Lords and other Officers, who had hinder'd the King's Subjects from going to Rome, and even those who had a Hand in the taking of Boniface, except William Nogaret. He made void likewise all the Sentences, and Bulls of Boniface, by which he revoked the Privileges granted to the King of France, and his Officers, re-established the Universities; and in fine, to extinguish entirely the whole Matter of Difference, he revoked by other Bulls the Sentence given by Boniface, against the Families of the Colonni, and Montenigro, and all their Adherents, re-establish'd them to their former Condition, excepting to the Dignities of Cardinal, Benefices, Goods confiscate, and the Capacity of being advanced to the Papacy. Notwithstanding all these Revocations, the King's Agents insisted upon the calling of a Council, and William Nogaret desired to be cleared, or absolved at any Rate. But the Pope was so far from doing it, that being at Perusa, he published on the 7*th* of June, a thundring Bull, wherein he declares Nogaret excommunicate*, with all those who had assisted at the taking of Boniface, and summons them to appear before him, to receive Judgment; otherwise he declares, that he shall proceed against them according to Law. This was the last Bull of † Benedict, for he died at Perusa the 8*th* of July following. He left behind him divers Letters, whereof some are mentioned by the Writers of the Annals [of the Church.]

The Differences between Philip the Fair and Boniface VIII.

Revocation of the Bulls of Boniface VIII. against France, and the Colonni.

* Excommunication of Nogaret and his Assistants in taking of Boniface.

† Death & Letters of Benedict XI.

After his Death the Holy See remained void for the Space of three Months; the Cardinals assembled at Perusa, not coming to an Agreement about the Choice, by reason of the Contests of two Factions, of which the one was for France, the other for Boniface. Nogaret believing this Vacancy favour'd him with an Opportunity to do something towards his Justification, passed two Acts the 7*th* of September, before the Official of Paris; one by which he sets himself against the Partisans, and Adherents of Pope Boniface, and appeals to the next Council, to the Church, and to the next Pope, to hinder the Cardinals electing for Pope any of that Party, who are excommunicated by the Canons; the other contains his Protestations and his Excuses, and a Declaration he makes, that all he said against Boniface is true; that he is well inform'd of it, and though he demand Absolution ad Cautelam, he does not believe he is in any manner bound by this Pope. Then he renews his old Accusations framed against Boniface, and recites a History of all that pass'd, as well under this Pope, as under Benedict his Successor; offers to justifie his Innocence before a general Council, and even before the Holy See, provided, he may be heard, and be assured of the Safety of his Person; because he cannot otherwise venture thither. There are besides three other Acts of Nogaret of the same Nature, and the Letters of Attorney, which he gave to Bertrand d' Aguassa, to prosecute his Business in his Name, before the Holy See, and to demand safe Conduct, that he might accuse the Memory of Boniface, and justifie himself from the robbing the Church-Treasure, which was laid to him, and demand Absolution in case it were necessary. The French and the Colonni did likewise make Request to the King, that the Process against Boniface might be hastened. These latter making use of the Opportunity, procured a Re-establishment in their Estates and Dignities, by a Decree of the People of Rome, who condemned Peter Cajetan, Boniface his Nephew, to give Peter and James Colonni an hundred thousand ‡ Florins of Gold, or Lands of the same Value, to recompence them for the Losses they had sustained; made void and null all that had passed against them, and ordered Poncellus Ursi to restore to the People of Rome the Town of Nepi, which Sciarra Colonni had given them.

The Petitions of Nogaret and the French, against the Memory of Boniface.

‡ An ancient golden Coin anciently currant in France, worth 2 s. Sterling.

The Cardinals of the two Factions beginning to be weary of being confined to the Conclave, Cardinal du Prat Chief of the French Party, conferred with Cardinal Francis Cajetan, represented to him, that they did great Injury to the Church by this Delay; and demanded, if he had not some Expedient to bring Matters to an Agreement. Cardinal Cajetan found out one; That the Italian Party should chuse three Ultramontane Archbishops, and the other should chuse out of the Three, One, whom they pleased, forty Days after. Cardinal du Prat having accepted of this Proposal, Cardinal Cajetan named the three Archbishops; the first of which was Bertrand Got, who had been heretofore Bishop of Comminges, and was then Archbishop of Bourdeaux,

The Election of Clement V.

The Differences between Philip the Fair and Boniface VIII.

nux, born a Subject of the King of England at Villandreau in Bajadis, and the King's Enemy. Du Prat forthwith gave Advice hereof to Philip the Fair, who wrote preſently to this Archbiſhop, and ordered him to meet him in a Wood near to St. John d' Angeli, where he declared to him, that 'twas in his Power to make him Pope, and that he would do it with a Proviſo, that he would promiſe to do him Six Favours, which he ſhould demand of him. The Archbiſhop threw himſelf at his Feet, and ſaid to him, 'Sir, Now I 'know that you love me, and that you render me Good for 'Evil, do you but command, and I will obey:' The King raiſed him up, embraced him, and ſaid thus to him, 'The firſt is to reconcile me throughly with the Holy 'Church, and to pardon me the Miſchief I may have done 'in cauſing Pope Boniface to be arreſted. The ſecond is, 'to reſtore me to the Communion of the Church, and 'them that aſſiſted me. The third, to grant me all the 'Tithes of my Kingdom for five Years, to make good the 'Charge I have been at in my War with Flanders. The 'fourth, to blot out the Memory of Pope Boniface. The 'fifth, to reſtore to the Dignity of Cardinals, the two Co-'lonni's. As for the ſixth, I reſerve my ſelf, ſays the King, 'to declare it to you, in convenient Time and Place, in 'regard it muſt be very ſecret.' The Archbiſhop promiſed all theſe Things with an Oath, by the Body of JESUS CHRIST, and gave him his Brother, and two of his Nephews for Hoſtages: The King on his Part ſwore, That he would cauſe him to be choſen Pope. They parted, after they had ſaid theſe Words; and the King wrote preſently to the Cardinals of his Party, that they ſhould chuſe the Archbiſhop of Bourdeaux. The Thing was done with ſo much Diligence, that the Anſwer was returned to Perugia in five Weeks. As ſoon as it arrived, they proceeded to the Election, and Bertrand Got was choſen Pope, according to the Agreement made the 5th. of June 1305. He accepted the Popedom gladly, was named Clement V. and was inveſted in the Month of Auguſt at Lyons, whither the Cardinals came to meet him. The King, his Brother Charles of Valois, and a great Number of Princes and Lords of France aſſiſted at this Ceremony. The King having for ſome Paces held the Reins of the Pope's Mule, reſign'd them to his Brother Charles, and the Duke of Britain, to mount on Horſeback, and ride by the Side of the Holy Father. In the Cavalcade an old Wall loaden with a Throng of People fell down, cruſhed to Death John Duke of Britainy, and a Brother of the Pope's, dangerouſly wounded the King's Brother, and ſlightly the King himſelf, and beat off the Pope's Mitre.

The Revocation of Boniface's Bulls by Clem. V.

The firſt thing which Clement did, was to confirm the Abſolution that Benedict XI. had given to the King; to revoke the Bull of Boniface, touching the Subſidies to be demanded from the Clergy, and all that followed thereupon; and to declare, that the Bull Unam Sanctam ſhould do no Prejudice to the King or Kingdom of France; and that all things ſhould remain in the ſame Poſture they were in before that Bull. In fine, he re-eſtabliſhed the Cardinals Colonni in their Dignities, and thus acquitted him of four of the Articles, he had promiſed to the King. It was more difficult to ſatisfy him in the fifth, which concerned the Memory of Pope Boniface. The King obſerving, that Clement did nothing in that Point, ſpake with him about it at Poictiers, in the Year 1307. and preſſed him to proceed againſt the Memory of Boniface. This Propoſal gave the Pope much Trouble, and to ſhift off the Performance of it, he anſwer'd by Advice of Cardinal Prat, that this Buſineſs required the Meeting of a general Council, which he ever ſince deſign'd to call. Nevertheleſs being ſolicited by the King, and his Creatures, to ſet this Affair on foot, he heard ſome Witneſſes, ſummon'd the Accuſers, Part whereof appeared, and among others Nogaret and du Pleſſis. The firſt boldly maintained his Accuſation againſt Boniface, and undertook to make it good. Cardinal Francis Cajetan defended his Uncle's Memory: Divers Writings there were on both Sides, and the King daily preſſed the Concluſion of this Affair; on the contrary, the Defenders of Boniface put off Judgment as much as poſſible. The Pope conſidering the Importance of this Affair, uſed his utmoſt Endeavour to pacify the King, and to ſpin out the Time; and to bring it to Effect, he wrote to the Earl of Anjou, in a Manner to cauſe the King his Brother to ſubmit, touching this Diſpute, to what ſhould be decreed by the Church and the Pope. The King was ſometime before he could reſolve; but at laſt being preſſed by the great Ones of the Kingdom, he declared by his Letters Patents, given at Fontainbleau, in the Month of February 1310. that he left the Judgment of this Affair to the Pope and a Council: Lewis Earl of Evreux, and Guy Earl of St. Paul, did the like. The Pope continued to carry on the Proceſs, received Petitions, Writings, Memoirs, and Deeds, named the Cardinals to examine the Proceedings, cauſed to be made thereof a tedious verbal Proceſs, which contained all that had been ſaid on both Sides, from the 16th. of March 1310. till toward the Cloſe of the ſaid Year. It contained likewiſe the Informations of fourteen Witneſſes, who ſwore horrid Crimes of Impiety, Sodomy, and Uncleanneſs, againſt Boniface. At laſt the Pope, to rid himſelf of this Affair, gave out a Bull the 17th of April, in the Year 1311. wherein he revoked all the Sentences, Decrees, and Declarations of Boniface, which were not inſerted in the ſixth Book of the Decretals, ſo far forth as they imported any Prejudice to the Honour, Rights and Liberties of the King of France, the Kingdom, and his Subjects, except thoſe two Extravagants, Unam Sanctam, and Kem non novam, which were to ſtand according to the Modifications heretofore made by his Holineſs. He annuls likewiſe all the Revocations and Suſpenſions of Privileges, Excommunications, Interdicts, Deprivations, Depoſitions, and all other Proceſſes of Deed or Right, made as well by Boniface as Benedict his Succeſſor, ſince All Saints Day, in the Year 1300. as well againſt the King, as his Children, his Brothers, and his Subjects, even againſt Informers and Accuſers, by reaſon of any Informations, Appeals, Demands of a General Council, Blaſphemies, ill Language, taking the Perſon, invading the Houſe of Boniface, and other Parts of the Difference the King had with this Pope, he aboliſh'd the Spot of Infamy and the Mark of Reproach that might, in theſe Caſes, ſtick upon the King, his Poſterity, on the Accuſers, Prelates, Barons, or others; diſcharges them from all Condemnations, ſets them to Rights, and reſtores them to their ancient State; ordains, that the Sentences, Suſpenſions, and other Acts made againſt them, ſhould be raſed out of the Regiſters of the Church of Rome, but all this without prejudicing the principal Cauſe, and the Proſecution which might be made thereupon: He declares nevertheleſs, that he compriſes not in this Abolition and Remiſſion, William Nogaret, nor Sciarra Colonni, and ſome others which he names. As for Nogaret, who had demanded to be abſolved ad cautelam, the Pope grants it to him, upon Condition he would undertake ſome Pilgrimage, and upon the firſt Opportunity go into the Holy Land with Horſe and Arms, there for ever to remain, at leaſt till the Pope permit him to return. By another Bull of the ſame Date, he declares, That the King, nor his Succeſſors ſhall not in any ways be moleſted, nor involved in the Proſecution, that ſhall be made in the Affair of Boniface. By another Bull he extends the Abſolution mentioned in the preceding Bull to the Inhabitants of Anagnia, except ſuch as he has named: And by the laſt, he not only excludes Nogaret; but alſo ſome other Lords and Prelates of the Kingdom of France, from the Favour granted by his Bull.

The preparing of the Proceſs againſt the Memory of Boniface VIII.

The Revocation of Boniface's Bulls by Clem. V.

The general Council was opened at Vienne in Dauphine, in the Month of October, in the Year 1311. King Philip came thither the Year following in Mid-Lent, with a great Company of Princes and Lords, and was preſent at the opening of the ſecond Seſſion. The Affair of Boniface was there brought into Debate, as 'twas promiſed the King, but he had therein no Satisfaction; for it was voted, that Boniface had ever been a good Catholick, and that there was no Proof of his being an Heretick; there was no Mention made of other Crimes, whereof he was accuſed, and which had been ſworn by the Witneſſes. The Reaſons of his Juſtification were alledged by Cardinal Richard of Sienne, Dr. at Law; by the Cardinal John of Namure, Doctor of Divinity, and by Cardinal Gentil, Doctor and Canoniſt. There appeared alſo two Knights of Catalonia, who maintained, that Boniface was a good Catholick, by a Challenge to the Combat, which was not accepted by any Body. The Pope and the Cardinals, to content the King, made a Decree, importing, that the King nor his Succeſſors ſhould never be diſturbed, nor call'd to account for what had been done againſt Pope Boniface. Thus ended the Conteſt, which laſted for many Years, between the King of France and the Holy ſee, about the Differences of Philip the Fair, and Pope Boniface.

The Judgment of the General Council at Vienne, about the Affair of Boniface.

CHAP.

CHAP. II.

The Hiſtory of the Condemnation of the Templars.

The Hiſtory of the Condemnation of the Templars.

THE Affair of Boniface was not quite finiſhed, when Philip the Fair undertook another, which he brought to Effect more ſucceſsfully, and with greater Eaſe; this was againſt the Order of the Templars, which he was reſolved wholly to extirpate. This Order was eſtabliſhed, as we have ſaid, in the Year 1118. by Hugo de Paganis, Jeoffry of St. Omer, and ſeven other Knights, who made a Vow between the Hands of the Patriarch of Jeruſalem, to live according to the Rule of the Canons Regular. They were appointed to guard the Roads, and to defend Pilgrims that went to Jeruſalem. Baldwin II. King of Jeruſalem, gave them for ſome time only a Houſe near the Temple; from whence they took the Name of Templars. The Council of Troyes held in the Year 1118. approved of their Inſtitution, gave them a Rule, and order'd their Habit they were to wear for the Time to come, ſhould be white. Eugenius III. added hereto a red Croſs, and ordered, that the Knights and the Friars ſhould wear it on their Cloak. In the Beginning they were poor, and few in Number; but by little and little they multiplied, grew very rich, and ſpread over all Chriſtendom, where they had an infinite Number of Houſes, and vaſt Riches. Their Wealth made them proud and inſolent: They ſhook off the Yoke of Obedience, which they owed the Patriarch of Jeruſalem, exempted themſelves from the Juriſdiction of the Ordinaries, and from paying of Tithes, and their Power carried them out to do ſeveral unjuſt Enterprizes, and render'd them formidable to Princes and Kings. While they reſided at Jeruſalem, they imployed their Strength againſt the Infidels: This City being taken by Saladin in the Year 1187. they retreated to St. John of Acre, and after that to a Caſtle near Cæſarea; from thence they continued to make War upon the Infidels, but they were almoſt all ſlain at the Sacking of the City of Acre or Acon, in the Year 1191. There remained of them but Ten, who withdrew to the Iſle of Cyprus; from whence they made Inroads upon the Saracens. They poſſeſſed themſelves of the Iſland of Tortoſa, from whence the Sultan of Babylon expell'd them. They equipped a Fleet in Sicily, with which they over-run all the Coaſts of Greece, which they plunder'd and ranſack'd, invaded Thrace, took Theſſalonica, laid waſte the Helleſpont and Peleponeſus, took Athens, where they ſlew Robert de Brenne, who commanded there; inſomuch, that abuſing their Strength and Power, they turn'd thoſe Arms againſt the Chriſtians, which they ought to have imployed only againſt the Infidels. They no longer made War from a Principle of Devotion, as did their Predeceſſors, but to enrich themſelves, and often times engaged the Saracens to make Incurſions upon the Chriſtians, to make themſelves neceſſary, and to draw great Sums of Money from Chriſtian Princes, not being able to endure any other, but themſelves ſhould engage in this War. They had no ſooner forſaken their Duty, but they fell into Diſorders and Outrages, which Licence and Impunity increaſed, and puſhed on to a ſtrange Exceſs. They remained a long Time concealed, but were at laſt diſcovered by two Knights, condemned for their Crimes; the one, the Prior of Montfaulcon of the Province of Thoulouſe, an Apoſtate condemned by the great Maſter of the Order, Brother to Squinus of Forian, put in Priſon for his Crimes; the other named Noffo-Dei, a Florentine, condemned to rigorous Puniſhments by the Provoſt of Paris. Theſe two Criminals took a Reſolution to reſcue themſelves out of the Miſery wherein they were, or elſe to involve their whole Order in the ſame Infamy, to diſcover the hidden Diſorders of their Brethren. King Philip the Fair, who hated the Templars, and ſought Occaſion to do them a Diſpleaſure, ordered that theſe two Informers ſhould be examined, and their Depoſitions taken. They declared Things ſo ſtrange, and Crimes ſo heinous, that the King hardly believed them. Nevertheleſs, he would have the Matter ſearched to the Bottom, and know the Truth: But in regard this Affair concerned an Order ſpread through all Chriſtendom, he diſcourſed of it with Pope Clement the fifth, when he aſſiſted at his Coronation, and alſo had it ſpoken of to him at Poictiers, by his Ambaſſadors. The Pope could not believe the Crimes charged on them to be true, they were ſo very incredible, and appeared impoſſible. The great Maſter of the Temple, and many Templars of divers Countries, whoſe Concern it was to juſtify their Order, beſought him to inform himſelf of theſe Accuſations, ſubmitting to the moſt ſevere Puniſhments, if they were found guilty of what was charged on them. The Pope let the King underſtand it, by his Bull of the 23d of Auguſt, in the Year 1306. in which he ſends him Word, that in a few Days he ſhould go to Poictiers, and there begin to make Inquiſition concerning this Order; praying the King to tranſmit to him the Informations he had already taken.

The Hiſtory of the Condemnation of the Templars.

Nevertheleſs the King fearing, leſt this Buſineſs being diſcovered might cauſe Diſturbance in the Kingdom, the Order of the Templars being ſo very powerful in France, ſent Letters to all the Judges of his Kingdom, with a Command to arreſt all the Templars on the ſame Day; and that the Matter might be kept the more ſecret, they had Orders not to open the Letters, till the Evening before the Day 'twas to be put in Execution. This was punctually obſerved, and all the Templars throughout the Kingdom ſaw themſelves arreſted and clapt into Priſon, the 5th of October, in the Year 1307. if we may credit the Hiſtorians. But there are Bulls of the Pope, dated in the ſecond Year of his Papacy, which ended in the Month of June 1305. and by Conſequence before October 1307. which ſuppoſe the Templars already arreſted: Which might make it be thought, that that Accident ought rather to be referred to the Year 1306. than to that of 1307. if all the Hiſtorians of that Time did not with one Conſent relate it done in the Year 1307. and Clement V. himſelf in a Bull dated the 11th of July, in the third Year of his Popedom. Wherefore it is moſt probable, that there is ſome Miſtake in the Dates of Clement's Letters. The great Maſter of the Order named James Molay, of the City of Beſanſon, who was preſent in the Temple of Paris, was arreſted among the reſt; the King poſſeſs'd himſelf of the Temple, and cauſed the Eſtates of the Templars to be ſeized. On the Morrow after the King aſſembled the Univerſity, and cauſed it to be told them by Peter of Nogaret, who was the principal Actor in this Affair, what were the Reaſons which had induced him to cauſe the Templars to be arreſted, and the heinous Crimes whereof they ſtood accuſed. The Pope took the Proceeding of the King ill, and ſent him a Bull dated the 27th of October, in the ſecond Year of his Papacy, complaining, that he had cauſed the Templars, Subjects of the Roman Church to be impriſoned abſque medio, and had ſeized their Eſtates, though it belonged not to the ſecular Powers to judge Eccleſiaſtical Perſons. He adds, that he has ſo much greater Reaſon to complain of this Proceeding, for that he had given him Intimation, that he was getting Information againſt them, and ſending to him two Cardinals [Berengarius Cardinal of the Title of the Saints, Nerea and Aquileia, and Stephen, Cardinal of the Title of St. Ciriaca] to treat with him about this Affair, that he might put into their Hands the Priſoners, and their Effects.

The Templars arreſted, and their Eſtates ſeized.

The Informers againſt the Templars.

While theſe things were tranſacting, the King gave a Commiſſion to William Paris, of the Order of the Friars Preachers, Inquiſitor for the Pope in France, to make ready the Proceſs againſt all the Templars, and order'd all the Lords of the Kingdom, and his Officers, to arreſt all the Templars they could light on, and thereupon to refer the Judgment and Cogniſance to the Eccleſiaſtical Judges.

Informations againſt the Templars.

The deteſtable Crimes, whereof they were accuſed, were, 1. that they obliged all thoſe that entred into this Order, at the time of their Admiſſion, to abjure Jeſus Chriſt, and to ſpit three times upon a Crucifix. 2. That they obliged them, to kiſs him that admitted them, on the Mouth, on the Navel, and on the extream Part of the Back. 3. That they forbad them to converſe carnally with any Woman; but allowed them to commit Sodomy with their Brethren of the Society. 4. That they made them worſhip a Silver and Gilt wooden Head, with a great Beard; which they likewiſe expoſed to be adored in their General Aſſemblies. William Paris examined upon theſe Interrogatories an Hundred and

The Crimes they be charged with.

The Hiſtory of the Condemnation of the Templars.

Templars in the Month of November, in the Year 1307. touching theſe Pranks. The three firſt Heads were confeſſed by almoſt all that were impeached. The fourth was owned to be true by ſome, but the others ſaid, they knew nothing of it. There were in this great Number of Examinants, but three, who ſaid, they had never ſeen any ill in the Order, and that they had taken Notice of nothing therein, but what was of good Repute. James Molay, the great Maſter of the Order, Hugh Perraut, and Guy Brother of Dauphin de Vienno is, who were the moſt conſiderable Perſons among the Templars, were heard to this Information, and confeſſed one Part of theſe Deeds. One of the Examinants, which was Jeffery of Gonneville, who had been received in England, declared, that at his Admiſſion, having refuſed to abjure Jeſus Chriſt, the Governor ſwore to him, that it could not hurt him; that it was the Cuſtom of the Order, which had been introduced by a wicked great Maſter, who having been taken Priſoner by a Sultan, had not been ſet at Liberty, but on Condition he would introduce this Cuſtom into the Order; that others ſaid, this had been brought up by Roncelin, great Maſter of the Order, others by Thomas Beraldus, a great Maſter likewiſe of the Order; and others, in fine, that it was in Imitation of St. Peter, who denied Jeſus Chriſt thrice. The greater Part of the Examinants teſtified, they did not this but with Regret, that they had confeſſed and repented of it.

There were ſeveral other Inquiſitions, taken in divers Places; to wit, one of an hundred and eleven Templars, by the ſame William Paris at Troyes, who agreed in all the Articles, except the Adoration: Another taken at Bigorre, by Bertrand a' Agaſſa, Preſident of that City, who allowed hearing to five Templars: Another of thirteen Templars at Caen, by the Monks, who received a Commiſſion for this Purpoſe, from William Paris: One of theſe thirteen denied the Articles; but being put to the Queſtion, he confeſſed them: Another of ſeven Templars taken at Cahors, by John a' Arreblay: Another of ten Templars taken at Pont de l' Arche, by the Bailiff of Roan, and others: In fine, that, which was taken the ſame Year at Carcaſſonne, wherein ſeven Templars were examined, who confeſſed the Articles, and thereto added remarkable Circumſtances; among others John de Caſſanhas Maſter to the Houſe of Nogaredae near Pamiez, who declared, that when he was admitted into the Order, they ſent to him two Knights, who demanded of him, whether he would enter into it? who having anſwered, 'twas his Intention; they told him, that it was a great Undertaking, and that their Rules were hard to be obſerved, and he ſaw nothing, but the outſide; that perſiſting in his Reſolution, they admitted him; that he fell on his Knees before the Maſter, aſſiſted with about ten Brethren of the Order, who held a Book in his Hand, and asked him what he craved? and that having made Anſwer, he deſired to enter into the Order, he made him put his Hand upon the Book, which he held, and ſwear that he had no Incumbrance of Debts, Marriage, or any other ſervile Obligation whatever; that next to this, he ſaid to him, you muſt promiſe to God and us, that you will live without Property, keep Chaſtity, and obſerve the Uſages and Cuſtoms of the Order, and that you believe in God the Creator; that he is dead, and ſhall not die; the ſame, which he ſwore. He after that cloathed himſelf with a Cloak, whilſt a Prieſt read the Pſalm, Ecce quam bonum, &c. That this being done, the Maſter kiſſed him on the Mouth, and next to that lay down on the Bench, whereon he ſat; that he kiſſed the Maſter about the Fundament, upon his Garments, and the ſame being ſet, the other Brethren kiſſed him on the Navel: That after this, the Maſter pluckt out of a Box a Copper Image of a humane Shape, placed it on a Cheſt, and ſaid; Sirs, behold a Friend of God, who ſpeaks to him, when he will; give him Thanks for that he hath brought you unto the Dignity you have ſo much deſired, and hath accompliſhed all your Wiſhes; that forthwith they worſhipped this Image three times, falling on their Knees, and they produced a Crucifix, to ſhew, that they renounced it, and ſpat thereon; that the Maſter gave him a ſmall Girdle of Cord, and gave him leave, when he felt any Provocations of the Fleſh, to make Uſe of his Brethren; that this being finiſhed, he was conducted to another Place inveſted with the Habit of the Order, and brought back to the Maſter, who inſtructed him how he muſt behave himſelf at Church, in the War and at Table: Another of the Templars added to theſe Particulars, that the Maſter ſhewing the Image, kiſſed it, ſaying, Yalla, which is a Saracen Word. It is related in the Hiſtory of Provence, that one of the Commiſſioners deputed by the King about Beaucaire, named Odoardus des Moulins, wrote to his Majeſty, how he had arreſted five and forty Templars, whereof there were five Knights, and one Prieſt; who being examined, they all agreed as to the Denial of JESUS CHRIST, the Permiſſion of Sodomy, and the ſhameful Kiſſing: That as to the Image, they ſaid, that they never worſhipped it, but once at a Provincial Chapter held at Montpellier; that the Prieſt added, how he that did admit him, had enjoined him never to pronounce the Words us'd at the Conſecration of the Hoſt; the which he had obſerved in his diſtribution of it to the Brothers of the Society, but not as to that, which he ſhewed to the People, though he had been commanded not to conſecrate it. Some Authors accuſe them further of other Crimes; as of burning the Body of thoſe who died firm in their Idolatry, and of giving their Aſhes to be ſwallowed down by Novice-Templars; of roaſting the Children of the Women they had abuſed, to rub their Image in the Greaſe that dripped from them, and to cover it all over with the Skin of a Man; but theſe Accuſations were not proved by their Interrogatories. The greateſt Part of theſe Inquiſitions were taken at the end of the Year 1307. and the beginning of the Year 1308.

The Hiſtory of the Condemnation of the Templars.

The Pope forbids the Ordinaries and the Inquiſitor to meddle with the Affair of the Templars.

The Pope, to put a ſtop to theſe Proceedings, which he thought intrenched upon his Authority; forbad the Archbiſhops, Biſhops and Inquiſitors of France to intermeddle herein, and ordered the Cauſe to be heard before himſelf: The King hereupon ſignified to him his Reſentment, and repreſented to him, that he was amazed, that his Holineſs ſhew'd ſo great Coldneſs in the Proſecution of this Affair; that 'twas, as if he conſented to the Crimes of the Impeached, and would ſhew them a way to defend themſelves; that he ought rather to ſtir up the Prelates, and Ordinaries of Places to do their Duty in the Extirpation of this Order; that they could better ſearch out this Matter in their Dioceſes, than Strangers; that 'tis a great Injuſtice to take from the Biſhops without Reaſon, the Adminiſtration wherewith God hath entruſted them, and the Merit of defending the Faith; that neither the King, nor they could endure it; that the Suſpenſion of the Inquiſitor's Power gave Hopes to the Templars to find Favour in the Pope's Court, and to ſpin out the time. The King, who deſired to diſpatch it out of hand, propoſed it to the Divinity-Faculty at Paris, to be ſatisfied, whether he could not order Proceſs againſt the Templars before Secular Judges. They anſwered him by their Reſolve 25 March, in the Year 1308. Shewing, 1. That the Authority of a Secular Judge cannot extend ſo far as to proceed againſt any one for the Crime of Hereſie, if it be not required by the Church, and ſhe hath not reſign'd up the Criminal to him; nevertheleſs, in caſe of Neceſſity and where there is Danger, the Secular Judge may order Hereticks to be arreſted; but with a Reſolution to reſign them into the Power of the Church. 2. That thoſe who are liſted for the Defence of the Faith, and have made Profeſſion of a Religion eſtabliſhed by the Church, ought to paſs among the Religious, and enjoy the Benefit of Exemption. 3. That their Eſtates ought to be reſerved to be employed to the Ends for which they were conferred on them. This Reſolve diſcovered the Wiſdom and Steadineſs of the Divinity-Faculty of Paris, which ſeeks not to pleaſe the King by agreeable Anſwers, and conform to his Deſigns, but explains to him the Truth ſincerely without any Evaſion or Diſguiſe.

The Anſwer of the Divinity-Faculty at Paris.

The Pope himſelf examines the Templars.

The King, that he might take juſt Meaſures, reſolv'd to go himſelf to Poictiers, and before he repaired thither, he appointed at Tours, a Meeting of the Deputies of the Cities of the Kingdom by Letters Patents ſent to the Bailiffs on the 25th. of March, in the Year 1308. But in Concluſion, having no way to do it otherwiſe, he reſigned into the Hands of two Cardinals ſent to him by the Pope, ſome of the principal Templars, and ordered them to be conveyed to Poictiers, where the Pope was, to the End he might know the Truth from their own Mouth. The Pope having examined them in Preſence of the two Cardinals, who had been ſent to the King, and of three others; they confeſs'd the Crimes, whereof they were accuſed, and perſiſted in their Teſtimony. He underſtood likewiſe the ſame things from one of his Domeſticks, a Knight of this Order, who confeſſed ingenuouſly all the Evil which was committed among them. The Pope being by this convinced of the Neceſſity of proſecuting this Affair, by a Bull directed to the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, and to the Inquiſitors of the Kingdom, dated the 5th. of July, in the Year 1308. he took off the Suſpenſion of their Power, and permitted them to proceed in their Dioceſſes againſt the Templars, even to the Sentence, which ſhould be pronounced in their Provincial Councils, reſerving nevertheleſs to himſelf, and the Holy See the Proceſs againſt the Great Maſter of the Temple, and againſt the Maſters and Heads of that Order in France, the Lands beyond the Seas, Normandy, Poictou, and Provence. He took Care of the Keeping and Preſervation of their Eſtates by four other Bulls of the ſame Month, willing, that they ſhould be reſerved to the ſame End for which they had been given; that is to ſay, for the Relief of the Holy Land, without prejudicing the Rights, which the King, and the other Lords might have to them; that to this Effect he would name two Adminiſtrators-General to make up the Account with them, who ſhould be named on the Kings Behalf; and that the Money ſhould be employed for the Relief of the Holy Land, according to the Appointment of the Pope. The King conſented to this Buſineſs, and named Adminiſtrators on his Part: As to the Perſons of the Templars, the Pope commiſſioned Peter Capella Cardinal, Biſhop of Præneſte, that they ſhould be put into his Cuſtody and joined to the Ordinaries, to prepare the Proceſs againſt

The Pope permits the carrying on the Proceſs againſt the Templars.

The History of the Condemnation of the Templars.

the Templars, two Canons of each Church, and two Grey Friars. The King represented to him, that he meant not that what he had done in this Affair should be prejudicial to his Rights, and the Pope consented thereto in one of his Letters.

Inquisitions taken by three Cardinals at Chinon.

The Pope whether it where, that he had no entire Confidence in the Inquisitors of France, or rather, that he was willing to testifie, he had done nothing in this Affair, but with great Precaution, deputed three Cardinals, Berengarius, Stephen, and Landulphus, to understand from the Prisoners themselves, whether the Examinations taken by the Inquisitors were true. The King made the principal Prisoners to be removed to Chinon, where they were again examined by the Cardinals, and they persisted in the Confession they made at Paris, among others the Great Master of the Order, Hugh Perraut and the Master of Cyprus; these three last and divers others prayed Absolution, and received it. The Cardinals made Entries of all this, on the 15th. of August, in the Year 1308. and gave the King to understand, that they intreated him to shew the Templars some Favour, on Consideration they had acknowledged, what they had done; but both the Pope and the King had a Design wholly to break this Order. Whereupon the former, upon the Information of these Cardinals, in the close of the Month of August, in the Year 1308. directed several Bulls to the Archbishops, and Bishops of Christendom, wherein after the Recital of what had been already discovered of the Templars Exploits; he orders them to make ready their Process, and sends them likewise the very Articles, on which they were to be examined. The King on his Part held an Assembly at Tours, where were present the Deputies of the Archbishops, Bishops, Lords, and Commonalty of the Towns, furnished with Letters of Attorney, giving them Power to appear before the King and the Pope, there to treat of this Affair. After the Meeting of this Assembly, the King acccompanied with one Part of the Deputies, went to meet the Pope at Poictiers, and having conferr'd with him, they agreed upon the Articles following: That the Templars should be kept in Custody by the King's Authority, at the Request of the Pope and the Prelates; that the Prelates might judge the Templars in their respective Dioceses, except some few, whose Judgement was reserved to the Pope. That in case of putting down the Order, their Wealth should be employed for the Relief of the Holy Land, and that no other Use might be made thereof: That the Estates of the Templars should be put into the Hands of the Administrators nam'd by the Pope; in the mean while the Pope ordered, that all the Templars should be arrested, and put into the Hands of the Inquisitors, and named by his Bull dated the 11*th*. of August, of the third Year of his Papacy (which must fall in the Year of our Lord 1307. if the Years of his Papacy be counted from the 5*th* of June 1305. but according to the Authors of that Age, in the Year 1308.) the Archbishop of Narbonne, the Bishops of Bayeux, Mande and Limoges, with four other Clergymen of the second Order; to make Process against the whole Order of the Templars in any of the Towns in the Province of Sens. These Commissioners met at Paris, in the Month of November, of the Year 1309. to hear the Depositions of the Witnesses, and the Answers of the Accused. James Molay, Great Master of the Order being conven'd before them, they asked him, if he would defend his Order: He made Answer, that his Order having been approved of, and honour'd with divers Privileges by the Holy See, had no need of a Defender; that he was surprized, they would so suddenly abolish a considerable Order, since the Sentence of Deposition against Fredrick had been deferred for two and thirty Years: that he was not wise enough to undertake this Defence, but he would do what he could; that he had been a Captive, neither had he a Sous to defray the Charge; he demanded, that they would allow him Counsel, and some Assistance; he desired, that, to know the Truth of what concern'd his Order, they would take not only his Deposition, and those of his Order; but likewise the Testimonies of all the Kings in the Earth, of the Princes, Barons, Earls, and also of the Prelates. The Commissioners advised him to have a care what he adventur'd on, after the Deposition he himself had given against his Order; and told him, that in a Plea of Heresie, and of what concerned the Faith, they proceeded singly, and without Assistance of Counsel or Advocate. The Commissioners hereupon caused their Commission to be read to him; and when they came to the Place, where Mention was made of the Points, which, 'twas said he had confest, he appear'd amazed, made the sign of the Cross, and said, that if the Commissioners were of another Quality, he knew what he would say to them; and as to their Reply, that they were not in Condition to accept a Challenge, he return'd, that that was not his Meaning, but he prayed God to use his Slanderers in the same Manner, as the Turks and Saracens used Impostors, whose Heads they cut off, or cleaved them asunder. The Commissioners told him, that the Church judged Heneticks, and delivered up the Obstinate to the Secular Power. He withdrew, and having conferr'd with a certain Lord, he asked time till Fryday, which was granted him; and appearing on that day, and being demanded, if he would defend his Order, he said, he was poor and wanted Skill, but had understood in one of the Bulls read to him, that the Pope had reserved the Judgment of him, and some other Masters of the Order to himself; so that he could do nothing at present but declare, he was ready to appear before the Pope; and entreated them to bring it about, that his Holiness might admit him to his Presence. The Commissioners shewed to him, that they were not entrusted with the Judgment of particular Persons, but that of the Order, and that he had Liberty to speak, if he would offer any thing to hinder their insisting upon the making this Matter ready for a Hearing: He said, No; but he demanded of them only to behave themselves with Justice and Fidelity: as for the rest he thought himself obliged to lay before them, for Discharge of his Conscience, three Things on the Behalf of his Order. The first, That he believed, there were no Churches, except Cathedrals, which had better Ornaments, more Reliques, or where they performed divine Service better, than in those of his Order. The second, That no Religious Order was more charitable, than theirs, in regard they had a general Rule in all their Houses, of giving Alms three times a Week to all that presented themselves to receive it. The third, That he knew no Order, nor Nation, which expos'd their Lives more freely for the Defence of the Faith against the Enemies of the Christian Religion, and which was more fear'd by the Infidels. The Commissioners told him, that this was to no purpose without Faith; He replied, that was true; but that he believed in God, in a Trinity of Persons, and all that which is of Faith; that he was persuaded, there was but one God, one Faith, one Baptism, one Church; and that, when the Soul shall be separated from the Body, we shall know the Good and the Bad, and that every one shall know the Truth of what passes at present. Nogaret affirmed to him, that their Order had obeyed Sultan Saladin, and that this Tyrant had upbraided them with the Vice of Sodomy, He excused the Agreement he made with Saladin, from the Necessity they were in, to preserve the Towns and Castles, which they could not have defended, if they had not compounded with him.

Bulls against the Templars.

Judges deputed to Proceed against the Order of the Templars.

An Inquest taken by the Commissioners of the Pope.

A great many other Templars of several Provinces in the Kingdom, being after this by the King's Order at Paris brought before the Commissioners, the Articles were read to them, upon which they were impeached and about which they were examined. Threescore and fourteen maintained the Innocence of their Order, and declared they were ready to defend it, and named Peter of Bononia, for their Proctor, publickly averring, that all those shameful, foul, unreasonable, detestable and horrid Articles, upon which they were impeach'd, were so many Falsities, Lyes, and Slanders, forged by their Enemies, and attested by false Witnesses; that their Order was pure, without Stain, and free from all Crimes; they demanded their Liberty to be in a Condition to defend it, and leave to go in Person to a general Council; they answered to the Depositions of their Brethren, who had confessed these Crimes, that it was a Confession, which fear of Death and Torments had extorted from them, or that they had done it, to save themselves, being corrupted by Intreaties, or Promises. In fine, they intreated, that Justice might be done them, and they delivered from the Oppression they lay under. Bononia, by Virtue of this Power, with nine other Templars presented a Memorial, in which he declares as well for himself, and these eight Knights, as for the rest, they are ready as well in the general as in particular to defend themselves in a General Council, or any where else, when they shall be set at Liberty; they protest, that whatever any of their Brethren have said against their Order, ought not to hurt nor prejudice them; they desired that the Brethren of their Order, who had quitted their Habit, should be put in Prison: That when any of their Brotherhood shall be examined, no Lay Man be present; they say, it is strange more Credit should be given to the false Depositions of some few, extorted by Fear, or surprized by Promises, than to those of so many Martyrs, who suffer with Constancy, Torments and Imprisonment; They add, that out of the Kingdom of France, none of the Templars had said any such thing of their Order; which makes it plain, that those who have deposed these Things in France, have been constrained by Force, or wrought upon by Money; that in Defence of their Order they say plainly, it is founded on Charity and Brotherly Love, in honour of the Virgin Mary, and to defend the Holy Church, and the Christian Faith, and to destroy the Enemies of the Cross principally in the Holy Land; that their Religion is pure, and without Spot, before God; that the Rules and the Discipline of it are, and ever have been most exactly observed; that it hath been approved, and honoured with many Privileges by the Holy See; that those, who enter into it, make four principal Vows, of Poverty, of Obedience, of Chastity and of Warfare, to conquer, or to preserve the Holy Land; that they are admitted with a Kiss of Peace; that the Habit is delivered to them together with a Croſs, which they always carry in honour of Jeſus Chriſt crucified; that they are inſtructed in their Rule, and the Cuſtoms, which they obſerve by the Church of Rome, and the Holy Fathers; that ſuch is the Ceremony of the Profeſſion, which is obſerved, and hath always been generally obſerved through their whole Order; that the heinous and abominable things charged on them are Lyes invented by Apoſtates from their Order, expell'd for their Crimes, who have been ſuborned by others, and have deceived the King and the Pope: That many of thoſe who have confeſſed through Fear of Torments, are ready to retract, if they had Freedom to ſpeak the Truth, and did not fear being burnt for contradicting their Oaths. One of theſe eight Templars added, that all the Depoſitions made againſt them are void, becauſe that by ſpecial Privilege none of their Number ought to anſwer, unleſs before the Pope, and that no one can renounce that Privilege: That particular Perſons ought not to be admitted to give Teſtimony againſt their Order; and that thoſe who had been ſworn, were forc'd to ſpeak what they knew not. The Commiſſioners replied, that it was not in their Power to ſet them at Liberty, becauſe it was not they, who had put them in Priſon; but they were the Pope's Priſoners, in whoſe Hand were the Revenues of their Order; that they had been very much traduced; that in Reſpect to the Privileges, which they alledged, they took not Place in Point of Hereſie; that for themſelves they had no other Charge, but to enquire into Matters of Fact, comprehended in the Memorial ſent them by the Pope. So the Commiſſioners began their Inquiſition, notwithſtanding the Declarations of theſe Templars, who moreover gave in another Memorial, in which they ſet forth, that they had obſerved no judicial Form in making ready their Proceſs, that ſeveral Violences had been exerciſed upon them, they had been arreſted, put in Priſon, their Eſtates had been ſeized without any Reaſon, they had been compelled by Force of Torture, or by Promiſes, or by Rewards to ſwear falſe things againſt their Order; that all the reaſonable Preſumptions were on their Side. 1. Becauſe it was not to be believed, that any Body ſhould have been ſo much a Fool as to engage, or continue in an Order ſo abominable. And, 2. Becauſe their Order was made up of People of Quality, of good Morals, who would never have ſuffered theſe Diſorders: They demanded a Copy of their Commiſſion, the Articles of their Impeachment, and the Names of the Witneſſes which had ſworn, or of thoſe that deſigned to ſwear hereafter; that they would diſtinguiſh them, that had already been ſworn, from thoſe that were yet to make Oath; that they ſhould be made to depoſe, they would ſpeak the Truth; and that they would ſuborn no Perſon; that Inquiry might be made into the Manner, how ſome of their Brethren came to their End, and the Reaſon why ſome of them declined to appear; that among others, it may be known of Friar Adam of Valencour, who had deſerted their Order, to be enter'd in that of the Carthuſians, and after that came back to it again, whether what was reported of their Order, were true.

The Hiſtory of the Condemnation of the Templars.

A Provincial Council held at Paris, againſt the Templars, in the Year 1310.

While the Pope's Commiſſioners were informing themſelves againſt the whole Order, the Archbiſhop of Sens held a provincial Council at Paris, in the Month of May in the Year 1310. wherein he undertook to proceed againſt the particular Members. The Knights engaged in the Defence of their Order in general, ſet forth that it was not juſt, while the Pope's Commiſſioners were taking their Inqueſt, the Archbiſhop of Sens ſhould attempt to make out their Proceſs: That they appealed from all this Archbiſhop could do; and that if in bar of this Appeal, any Execution were brought againſt them, 'twere an Injuſtice: That they would put themſelves under the Protection of the Pope: That they prayed the Commiſſioners to forbid the Archbiſhop of Sens, and other Biſhops of the Realm, to proceed againſt any Templar, and that they would give them leave to ſignifie this Appeal to the Archbiſhop of Sens, and to make it publick. The ſame Evening they preſented another Writing directed to the Archbiſhop of Sens, containing their Appeal. The Commiſſioners made Anſwer, that the Matter which was handled by the Archbiſhop of Sens, and his Suffragans in their Council, was far different from that which they treated of: That they were likewiſe deputed by the Holy See, and that they had no Authority over them; and hereupon they did not believe, they could oblige them to delay the making out Proceſs againſt the particular Members of the Order; nevertheleſs, they ſhould debate it more fully. The Commiſſioners went on with their Inqueſt, and heard two hundred and one and thirty Witneſſes, who took their Oaths againſt the Order, from the Cloſe of the Year 1309. to the Month of June in the Year 1310. The greater Part confeſſed the Facts, whereof their Order ſtood accuſed; but ſome denied them, and others, after their Confeſſion, retracted, and ſaid, they had not ſworn thoſe things, but for fear of Puniſhment, or becauſe they had perceived, they did deſign to burn ſuch of their Fellows as had aſſerted the Innocence of their Order. But before the Inquiſition of the Commiſſioners was finiſhed, the provincial Council of Sens pronounced ſeveral Judgments upon particular Men of this Order: Some were abſolved, others condemned to certain Penances, and afterwards releaſed: Some confined more cloſely, or condemned to perpetual Impriſonment, and nine and fifty, who perſiſted in the diſowning of what they had confeſſed, were degraded as relapſed, and delivered up to the ſecular Power, and condemned to be burnt; which was accordingly put in Execution without the Gate of St. Anthony, in the Month of May in the Year 1610. Theſe poor Wretches declared to the laſt Moment, that they were innocent. They dug up the ſame Year the Body of John de Turreio, who had been Treaſurer of the Temple, to burn his Bones.

The Hiſtory of the Condemnation of the Templars.

The Execution of the Templars at Paris.

Proſecutions of the Templars in ſeveral Kingdoms.

They proceeded likewiſe in other Kingdoms againſt the Templars, in purſuance of the Pope's Bulls. In Italy the Archbiſhop of Ravenna cauſed thoſe of his Dioceſs to be arreſted, and got Information againſt them. After that, he aſſembled a Council of his Province, wherein he made Report of the Charge he had againſt them, and asked, whether they ought to be put to the Rack: It was concluded in the Negative, though the Inquiſitors maintained, that Hereticks ought to be put to it; it was demanded, whether they ſhould be ſent back to the Pope; they ſaid, No; ſeeing a general Council was ſuddenly to be called; that they ought to be abſolved, or clear themſelves. On the next Day, the Biſhops being met, declared, that the innocent ought to be diſmiſſed with Abſolution, and the guilty puniſhed according to the Law; that the Order ought to be kept up, if the greater part were ſound and innocent. The Examinations taken by the Archbiſhops of Piſa and Florence, and other Perſons commiſſioned by the Pope, to inquire in Lombardy and Tuſcany, were leſs favourable to the Templars; for the Witneſſes depos'd, that they had ſeen, heard, and had Knowledge of the horrid and deteſtable Crimes, of which they were accuſed. James II. King of Arragon, having received a Letter from the King of France againſt the Templars, charged the Biſhops of Valentia and Saragoſa, and the Inquiſitor General of his Kingdom, to get Information againſt them; and Notice being given him that the Templars retreated to their ſtrong Forts, he caus'd all to be arreſted, that he could light on, and prepared to force the others in their Caſtles, while the Inquiſitor General, who had cited them to Valentia, made ready their Proceſs. The Knights of this Kingdom writ to the Pope, that they were falſely accuſed; that their Innocence was known to all the World; that they were ſo far from denying Jeſus Chriſt, that there were now a great Number of their Brethren in the Hands of the Infidels; who choſe rather to continue in Captivity, and ſuffer divers Torments, than renounce the Faith: That if ſome had confeſs'd abominable Crimes, they ought to be puniſhed; but that it was not juſt, the whole Order, or the Innocent ſhould ſuffer: They beſought the Pope to grant them his Protection, declaring, that they ſubmitted to his Judgment, and that waiting for his Anſwer, they were retired to their Fortreſſes. The King of Arragon took ſeveral of their Caſtles, and the Pope commiſſioned the Biſhop of Valentia to proceed upon them, who were taken. In Caſtille King Ferdinand IV. cauſed all the Templars to be arreſted, and took Informations againſt them, by the Archbiſhops of Compoſtella and Toledo, and by the Inquiſitor Aimerick. Their Eſtates were ſeized, and the Biſhops appointed Guardians. The Matter having been debated in the provincial Councils, the Templars were declared innocent, and nevertheleſs ſent back to the Pope. In England they were all arreſted the ſame Day, examined in an Aſſembly held at London, which laſted for two Months, and they there confeſſed the Crimes whereof they were accuſed. The Pope ſent a Commiſſioner into Germany, to examine thoſe of that Country, and exhorted the Princes and Prelates of that Country, to proſecute the Templars; but it appears not that they did any thing againſt them. He gave Order alſo to arreſt them in the Iſle of Cyprus, but Almericus, Lord of Tyre, and Governor of the Kingdom, ſent him Word, that he could not put that Order in Execution, becauſe the Templars had taken Arms upon the Notice they had of it: That nevertheleſs ten of the Chief came and reſigned themſelves into his Hands, and had promiſed to obey. In Provence, Charles II. King of Sicily, and Earl of Provence arreſted them all the 24th of January, in the Year 1308. and ſeized their Eſtates. They were condemned to Death, and executed, their perſonal Eſtates divided betwixt the Pope and the Earl, and the Real kept for the Hoſpitallers.

The Pope's Judgment in the Council of Vienne, againſt the Templars.

The time of the general Council, which the Pope had appointed, drawing near, King Philip the Fair, wrote to the Pope in the Beginning of the Year 1311. that ſince the Templars appear to be charged ſo fully by the Informations, they ought to be rooted out by the Judgment of the future Council. He beſought his Holineſs to order it ſo, that their Goods might be employed in ſome new Expedition, or rather be transferred to ſome military Order already eſtabliſhed for the Relief of the Holy Land. The Pope agreed to this Propoſal, by his Bull of the Month of March, in the ſame Year.

The Hiſtory of the Condemnation of the Templars.

In fine, the General Council of Vienna being aſſembled, and the firſt Seſſion held the 16*th* of October, in the Year 1311. the firſt thing, that the Pope propoſed, was the Affair of the Templars. There were divers Opinions about them. Some were of the Mind, that they ought to be heard before they aboliſhed the Order; others on the contrary were of Opinion, that it ought to be no longer deferred; and that if it were, it would be a great Scandal to the Church, after the enormous Crimes, of which they ſtood convict. William Durantus, Biſhop of Menda, was of this Opinion, and delivered a Memorial to the Pope to prove it. On Wedneſday in the Holy Week, in the Year following, which was the 19*th* of March, the Pope held a particular Aſſembly of Cardinals and Prelates, in which the Deſtruction of the Order of the Templars was reſolved on. The Bull of it was publiſhed in the following Seſſion, held the 22*d*. of May 1312. at which the King was preſent. The Subſtance of it was this; that the Templars being convicted of a great Number of Crimes, he decreed the aboliſhing of them, with the Approbation of the Council, not in Form of a definitive Sentence, becauſe it could not in Rigour of Juſtice be carried ſo far, according to the Informations and the Proceſs which had been made, but in Form of Proviſion, or an Apoſtolical Direction, and that he forbid any whomſoever to enter into that Order for the future, and to take, or wear their Habit, on pain of Excommunication ipſo facto. That all their Eſtates ſhould remain in the Diſpoſal of the Holy See; and that from this preſent time, after mature Deliberation, and by the Advice of the Prelates of the Council, he did unite them for ever to the Order of St. John of Jeruſalem, as well Moveables, as Immoveables, together with all their Rights, and their Privileges, excepting nevertheleſs the Goods which they had in the Kingdoms of Caſtille, Arragon, Portugal, and Majorca, which ſhall not be given to the Hoſpitallers, and yet reſerved to the Diſpoſal of the Holy See. In fine, he enjoyns, under pain of Excommunication, all Perſons of what Degree ſoever, even Kings themſelves, who have any thing in poſſeſſion belonging to the Templars, to return it into the Hands of the Hoſpitallers, within one Month after the Publication of this Bull. And to that End, the Pope commiſſioned the Biſhop of Nevers, the Abbot of St. German des Prez, and the Dean of Chartres, to put the Knights of the Hoſpital into Poſſeſſion of the Goods which the Templars had in France; and gave out ſeveral other Bulls upon this Subject. The Judgment upon the Proceſſes of particular Members of the Order were ſent away to the provincial Councils, and it was decreed, that thoſe who were found guilty, ſhould be ſeverely puniſhed, and that Penſions ſhould be aſſigned to the Innocent, out of the Goods of the Order. As to the great Maſter, the Brother of the Dauphin, and ſome others, whom the Pope had reſerved to his own Judgment, he ſent Cardinals to Paris, to declare what he would have done on their ſcore. Theſe Cardinals order'd a Scaffold to be erected before the great Gate of the Church of our Lady, in the Month of March, in the Year 1313. and having cauſed the Great Maſter, the Brother of the Dauphin, Hugh Perrault, and another Knight to be fetched, they read to them the Sentence of the Pope, by which they were depoſed and condemned to perpetual Impriſonment. The great Maſter, and the Dauphin's Brother, upon hearing this Judgment, declared, that what they had ſworn againſt their Order, was falſe; that they had done it at the Inſtance of the Pope and the King, and that they were ready to die in Defence of this Truth. The Cardinals delivered them up to the Provoſt of Paris; and the News thereof being carried to the King, he preſently called his Council together, in which it was reſolved, that in the Evening the great Maſter, and the Brother of the Dauphin, ſhould be burnt at the Point of the Iſle of the Palace, between the King's Garden and the Auguſtine Friars; which was performed accordingly. Theſe Wretches endur'd the Puniſhment with Reſolution, and perſiſted unto the laſt to aſſert their own Innocence and that of their Order: This made many believe that they died innocent. The two others, which ſaid nothing, had their Lives ſaved.

The Execution of the Great Maſter & another Templar at Paris.

The uſe of the Templars Eſtates in ſeveral Kingdoms.

This was the End of the Order of Templars, which was aboliſhed in all the Countries of Chriſtendom, except Germany; where they ſtopt the Publication of the Bull, and procured Abſolution in a provincial Council. The Knights Hoſpitallers in France were put in Poſſeſſion of their Immoveables, but they were obliged to leave to the King two Thirds of their moveable Goods, for the Expence he had been at in the Proſecution of the Templars, according to the Agreement made between King Lewis Hutin, and the great Maſter of the Hoſpital, on the 14th. of February, in the Year 1315. In Arragon, the Pope, at the Inſtance of King James, annexed the Eſtates of the Templars to thoſe of that Order of Calatrava, which was made an Order ſeparate and independent from that of Caſtille, of the ſame Name, having a great Maſter reſident in Arragon, and depending on the Order of Ciſtercians. The King of Arragon detain'd nevertheleſs ſeventeen ſtrong Forts, which had belonged to the Templars. Ferdinand IV. King of Caſtile, would not comply with the Sentence of the Pope, which join'd the Templars Eſtates to the Order of St. John of the Hoſpital, but laid to the ancient Inheritance of the Crown, the Towns, Lands, and other Goods, which they had in his Eſtate. Dionyſius King of Portugal, by Advice of the Pope, inſtituted in his Kingdom, an Order of Knights of Chriſt, which was approved by Pope John XXII. and founded out of the Goods of the Templars, whoſe principal Employment was to make War upon the Moors. In England, it was reſolved in a Parliament held in the Year 1324. that the Eſtates of the Templars ſhould be united to the Order of Hoſpitallers; which gave Occaſion to ſome Engliſh of that Order, to think they were diſcharged from their Vows, and at Liberty to marry, which the Biſhops of England oppoſed.

The Hiſtory of the Condemnation of the Templars.

Arguments which may be alledged for the Juſtification of the Templars.

It is one of the famous Queſtions in Hiſtory, to wit, whether the Templars were guilty of all the Crimes whereof they were accuſed, and juſtly condemned; or, whether they were imputed to them falſely, and whether they were not compelled by the Violence of Torments and Fear, to confeſs things which they had not done, to grow rich by their Spoils, and ſeize on their Effects, as ſome Hiſtorians have aſſerted. It may be alledged in their Defence, 1. That the Informers were two Wretches, condemned for their Crimes, no way worthy of Credit, who thought of this Project, to reſcue themſelves from the Puniſhment, to which they were condemned, 2. That the Crimes whereof they ſtand accuſed, are ſo horrid and execrable, and at the ſame time ſo extraordinary, that they muſt, if guilty, have loſt not only all Senſe of Honour and Religion, but alſo Modeſty, common Senſe, and Underſtanding. Now is it credible, that a vaſt Number of Men of all Nations and Degrees, ſpread throughout all Chriſtendom, ſhould all fall into ſo horrid an Exceſs of Wickedneſs and Extravagance; and that neither Religion, nor Shame, nor Fear of Diſcovery, nor any Diſtaſte, which any of the Order might have taken, ſhould induce none of them to reveal their Actions? This Silence is ſtrange, if the thing be true: A Silence, which laſted for almoſt an Hundred Years, which was obſerved religiouſly by all thoſe of the Order. During this time many Malecontents left the Order; how could it poſſibly be, that not one of them, to juſtify his Deſertion, ſhould offer for a Reaſon, the Diſorders he had there met with? How could an infinite Number of People, who preſented themſelves to be admitted with a good Intent, and not being yet corrupted, reſolve at their Admittance to make ſo damnable a Profeſſion, and therein perſevere? 3. That they confeſſed not theſe Crimes, but for fear of Torments, wherewith they were threatned, and in Hopes, which were given them, of being well uſed, and likewiſe rewarded for their Confeſſion: That ſuch as refuſed to own them, were put to the Rack, that Torments might force from their Mouths the Confeſſion of what was falſe: That notwithſtanding there were ſome, who would never ſwear againſt their Order, and honourably aſſerted their Innocence: That the greater Part of thoſe, who were cowardly enough to yield to Fear, or be wrought on by Promiſes, had recanted, and perſiſted in that Recantation to their Death, ever proteſting, that they had been impoſed upon, or that they had ſpoken falſely, and that theſe Confeſſions were extorted from them by Threats or Promiſes, or by Violence: That they had ſhewn as much Conſtancy in this Retractation, as they had teſtified Weakneſs and Change from their former Depoſition: In fine, that they choſe rather to be burnt alive, and going to Execution they declared aloud, that they died innocent; the time, which the Fear of Hell, and the Judgment of God, before whom they muſt appear, forces the Truth from the Heart and Tongue of the moſt Wicked. 4. That there were found no other Witneſſes againſt them than themſelves: That 'twas only in France, where they were conſtrained to confeſs theſe Crimes: That every where beſides, whatever Proſecution was made againſt them, they were not found guilty of theſe Crimes, neither did they they confeſs them. 5. That their Judges were Parties; that Philip the Fair had a Mind to this for a long time, accuſing them of raiſing and fomenting Sedition againſt him: That he was the particular Enemy of the great Maſter: That he owed them Money: That he deſired to enrich himſelf with their Spoils, as it came to paſs: That he engaged himſelf in the Proſecution of this Affair, with Zeal and Partiality: That he practiſed unheard of Cruelties on the accuſed: That the Pope was unwilling at the firſt to enter on this Buſineſs, as being acquainted with the Injuſtice of it; but that at the laſt he ſuffered himſelf to be prevailed with by the Importunity of the King of France, and the Offers he made him to leave the Diſpoſal of the Templars Poſſeſſions to his Holineſs: That in fine, the Pope, the King of France, and other Princes found the Deſtruction of this Order would turn to Account, and made Advantage of their Eſtates in whole or in Part. 6. That the Proceedings againſt them were irregular, and againſt the Forms preſcribed by the Law: That at the firſt they were arreſted upon ſlight Suſpicions, by the Authority of the King, and without having conſulted the Pope, unto whom alone it belonged to judge them, becauſe of their Privileges: That the firſt Examinations were taken either by the King's Officers, or by the Inquiſitor: That their Proceedings were not againſt the whole Order: That they were not ſummon'd, nor their Proceſs prepared according to Form: That the Pope acknowledged all theſe things, in declaring, that he could not of Right give a definitive Sentence againſt this Order, according to the Inqueſt, and the Method wherein the Proceſs was prepared: Non per modum definitivæ Sententiæ, cum eam ſuper hoc ſecundum inquiſitiones & proceſſus ſuper his habitos non poſſumus ferre de jure. That he condemn'd them nevertheleſs, and abrogated their Order, by way of Proviſion, as if the utter aboliſhing of an Order could be decreed by Proviſion, when it was acknowledged, it could not be decreed of right.

The Hiſtory of the Condemnation of the Templars.

The Reaſons which prove the Juſtice of aboliſhing the Order of Templars.

It may be anſwered to theſe Arguments, that in Matters of Fact, we are not to make uſe of Conjectures, and Reaſonings againſt the Depoſitions and Confeſſions themſelves of the Criminals, upon which they were legally condemned: That we have the Interrogatories of a vaſt Number of Templars, who have acknowledged the Crimes whereof they were accuſed, That it matters not, who are the Informers, provided that in the Sequel the Fact be evident: That the Crimes whereof they are accuſed, are in good earneſt very heinous; but Men that give themſelves over to their Paſſions and Luſts, are capable of all of them, and there is no Diſord er ſo ſtrange, into which they may not fall: That thoſe, whereof the Templars are accuſed, are of two Sorts, Impieties, and a Kind of Idolatry, and the Vice of Sodomy; that the Commerce which they had with the Saracens, might engage them in the former, which is the more extraordinary, and that Debauchery hurried them to the ſecond: That theſe Diſorders had been a long time kept ſecret, becauſe all the Members were concerned to conceal them: That 'twas the Order gave them their Settlement and Fortune, and that they could not accuſe it without undoing themſelves, and accuſing themſelves of ſhameful Crimes; beſides, that 'twas dangerous to bring about their Ears an Order ſo powerful, on which they had their Dependance: Which was likewiſe the Reaſon, why thoſe, who had deſerted the Order, made no Diſcovery: That ſome had revealed theſe filthy Acts to particular Perſons; who did not dare to mention them: That many of them who had confeſſed theſe Crimes, had done it voluntarily, and without Conſtraint: That they all agreed in their Depoſitions; but that ſome had not ſworn to all the Articles, becauſe they had Knowledge but of Part, which proves their Sincerity: That they all ſpeak of Circumſtances ſo particular, that it is hard to imagine they ſhould be invented: That the greateſt Part ſtuck to their Depoſitions: That ſuch as had retracted, did it not, till they ſaw they muſt undergo the Puniſhment their Fault deſerved, and to cover their Diſgrace: That ſince they kept theſe Diſorders very ſecret, and diſcovered them not, but to thoſe of their Order, it is not to be wondered at, if the principal Witneſſes were ſuch as were accuſed: That tho' they prepared not their Proceſs in Form in other Kingdoms; yet for all that, there was Proof enough found againſt them to pull down their Order: That King Philip the Fair acted not in this Matter, but upon a Principle of Juſtice: That he had not ordered them to be arreſted ſo ſuddenly, but becauſe it was to be feared, leſt, ſince they were powerful, if they had Notice of the Deſign, they ſhould have made an Inſurrection in the Kingdom: That he had cauſed an Inquiſition upon them to be taken for his own Juſtification, and thereupon left the Judgment to the Pope, into whoſe Hands he reſigned them: That he enriched not himſelf with their Eſtates, but always offered they ſhould be employed for the Good of the Holy Land: That he conſented to the Incorporation of them into the Order of the Hoſpitallers, and had reſtored them to it without any Deceit, retaining only what he was obliged to expend in ſuing out the Proceſs: That the Proceedings, and Examinations taken againſt them, were ſufficient to prove the Irregularities of the Order in general: That it was neceſſary to aboliſh it, and there was no Remedy to be applied otherwiſe, though poſſibly according to the Formalities of Law, there muſt have been another Manner of Proceeding, in order to the giving a definitive Sentence: Yet this hindered not, but that by way of Proviſion, that is to ſay, of Diſcipline, Equity and Juſtice, the Order might be wholly aboliſhed, and their Eſtates given to an Order, which ought to put them to the Uſe to which they were deſigned. Theſe Reaſons are ſufficient to maintain the Judgment given by the Pope in the Council of Vienna, againſt the Order of the Templars, and to juſtify the Behaviour of Philip the Fair, in this Matter.

CHAP.

CHAP. III.

An History of the Popes, who had their Residence at Avignon, from Clement V. to the Death of Gregory XI. and of what Remarkable Things happened in the Empire, Italy, and in the Church, under their Pontificates. And among other Things, what Quarrels Lewis of Bavaria had with those Popes. The Contests between the Grey-Friars, and Pope John XXII. And about the Question concerning the Happiness of Souls, moved by that Pope.

An History of the Popes, who had their Residence at Avignon, from Clement V. to the Death of Gregory XI, &c.

AFTER the Death of Clement the V. Three and twenty Cardinals, which were at Carpentras, where that Pope held his Court, entred into the Conclave, and remained there from May to July 22*d*. in the Year 1314. but could not fix upon the Election of a Pope. The Italian Cardinals were very desirous to have a Pope of their Nation, who might have his Residence at Rome, and the Gascoignes were for a Frenchman, who might reside on this side the Alps. The Italians propounded the Cardinal of Præneste, who had been before a Bishop of Aix, and wrote for him to the King; but he was not at all liked by the French. These Contests lasted so long, that the People gathering together under the Conduct of Bertrandus, and Raimondus Gott, the Nephews of the deceased Pope, and coming armed to the Conclave, demanded, that the Italian Cardinals should be delivered to them, and crying out, That they would have a Pope, set fire on the Conclave. The Cardinals hereupon made their Escape and were dispersed, and it was a very hard thing to get them together again after this Accident; for the Cardinals of Gascoigne were eager that the Conclave should be held at Carpentras, where Pope Clement V. died, or at least at Avignon; but the Italian Cardinals thinking it not safe or consistent with their Liberty to meet in those Cities, were importunate it should be at Rome. They had perhaps both proceeded to a separate Election, which would have caused a Schism, if Philip the Fair had not written to them to dissuade them from it, by proposing to them the City of Lyons, as a proper Place for an Election, which could not be suspected by either Party. The Cardinals nevertheless could not agree upon a Meeting, till after the Death of Philip the Fair, which happened November 29. 1314. and in the Reign of Lewis Hutin, who succeeded him, Philip that King's Brother, Earl of Poictiers, was sent to procure the Cardinals to meet, and to proceed to an Election of a Pope. He caused them to meet at Lyons, and having had several Conferences with them, without bringing them to an Agreement, he sent them on a certain Day to the House of the Friars-Preachers at Lyons; and having exhorted them to come to an Agreement about the Election of the Pope, he withdrew, and left them shut up in the House, having given order, that they should not be let out, till they had chosen a Pope. In the mean time, he received the News of the Death of Lewis Hutin, which happen'd June 5. 1316. who having left his Wife Clemence great with Child, he was forced to return on a sudden to the Court of France, without recalling the Orders which he had given. Lastly, The Cardinals forty Days after they had been shut up, upon August 17. chose James d' Osa, or Ensa. a Native of Cahors, who had been Bishop of Frejus and after of Avignon, and was then Cardinal Bishop of Porto. Some Authors write, that the Cardinals having put it in his Power to choose a Pope, he chose himself; but this is not certain, and it was never objected to him by his Adversaries, but on the other Side, the Historians of the Time agree, that he was chosen by the Votes of the Cardinals. Some Authors report, That he had sworn that he would not ride upon any Horse or Mule, that did not carry him to Rome; but this also is a Story without ground. This Pope after his Election took the Name of John XXII. was crowned at Lyons, Sept. 25. and immediately went from thence to take up his Residence at Avignon, where he arrived, Octob. 2. Queen Clemence was brought to Bed of a Son, Novemb. 15. who dying eight Days after, Philip was crowned, Jan. 6. 1317. Some Time after that, Pope John XXII. was arrived at Avignon, he discovered that Hugh Giraldi, Bishop of Cahors, had contrived to poison him, and was guilty of divers other Crimes. He thereupon had him examined before the Cardinals, caused him to be formally degraded, and condemned to perpetual Imprisonment in April, the same Year, and having delivered him to the Secular Power, he was condemned to be flea'd, drawn through the City, and burned; which Sentence was executed upon him in August, of the same Year.

The Election of Pope John XXII.

An History of the Popes, who had their Residence at Avignon, from Clement V. to the Death of Gregory XI, &c.

At the same Time John XXII. endeavoured to make a new Archbishoprick and several Bishopricks in France. The Diocese of Tholouse was of a great Extent, and very considerable for its Revenue. Clement V. had some Thoughts to make it a Province, and John XXII. being resolved to put his Design in Execution, made Tholouse a Metropolis, taking it from the Jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Narbonne, and preferred John de Cominges, who had been Bishop of Magalona---to be Archbishop of it, having deprived Hugh de Pressac, Pope Clement V's. Nephew of that Bishoprick. He divided the Dioceses of Tholouse into six Bishopricks, and placed their Sees in six small Cities, viz. Montalbanum, which was before partly in the Dioceses of Cahors, S. Papoul, Rieux, Lombez, Lavaur and Maripoix, to which he added the Bishoprick of Pamiez, then newly erected. He also created two new Bishopricks in the Archbishoprick of Narbonne, viz. Alet and S. Pons. He took away Castres from the Dioceses of Albi to make a Bishoprick of it, Toul from that of Limoges, Surlac from that of Perigueux, S. Flour from that of Clermont, Vabres from that of Rhodes, and made two of that of Poictiers, Maillezais and Luson. He also erected several Colleges in the Province of Tholouse, and in the Dioceses of Albi. In the following Year he divided the Province of Tarragon into two Parts, made Saragosa a Metropolis, and subjected the five Suffragans of Tarragon to it. Some say he also made a Bishoprick of the Abby of Mont Cassin; but we find before his Pontificate Bishops of that Title.

Pope John erects new Archbishopricks and Bishopricks.

The State of the Empire, and Italy.

While John XXII. lived in Peace at Avignon, Italy was disturbed with the Factions of the Guelphs and Gibelines, who continually made war one against the other, and put the City of Rome into strange Confusion. The Emperors of Germany had no Authority almost in Italy. Apulia and all the Kingdom of Naples were under the Dominion of Robert the Son of Charles II. King of Sicily, who maintained the Party of the Guelphs against the Gibelines. The Empire was then under Contest between Lewis Duke of Bavaria, and Frederick Duke of Austria; for after the Death of Albert Duke of Austria, who was slain in the Year 1308. by one of his Nephews, Henry Earl of Luxemburg was chosen Emperor, and his Election was confirmed by Clement V. who had favoured him privately, by breaking his Word with Philip the Fair, who would have had his Brother Charles de Valois chosen Emperor. Henry, who was the seventh Emperor of that Name, spent the Year 1311. in Italy, to appease the Troubles of that Country, and to cause himself to be crowned Emperor, as he had promis'd the Pope; he required the People of Florence and Aretium,---that they would entertain him and his Army, but they refused; yet he kept on his March, seized on Milan, where he was crowned, brought the greatest Part of the Cities of Italy into Subjection to him, marched directly to Rome, where he was received in spite of the contrary Faction, and was crowned there by the Cardinals. Notwithstanding the Opposition of Clement V. and took an Oath of the People of Rome; but presuming to impose a Tribute upon them they revolted, and by the Assistance of Robert King of Apulia, constrained Henry to retire to Tivoli; from whence he went to Pisa, where he began the Quarrel with King Robert, against whom he declared War, and departing from thence to go into Apulia with his Troops to invade that Kingdom, he fell sick by the Way, August 15. at the Castle of Bencovent, where he died the 24*th* of the

An Hiſtory of the Popes, who had their Reſidence at Avignon, from Clement V. to the Death of Gregory XI, &c.

ſame Month. being poiſoned, as our Hiſtorians relate, by a Dominican Friar called Peter de Chaſteau-Renaud, who gave him a poiſoned Hoſt. Nevertheleſs, the Dominicans obtained a Letter ſeveral Years after, dated May 17. 1346. from John King of Bohemia; in which that Prince declares, That the Reports, which have been ſpread abroad againſt theſe Monks, were falſe and groundleſs.

Two Emperors elected in Germany.

The Electors of Germany being aſſembled at Franckfort in the Year 1314. were divided in their Choice of an Emperor to ſucceed him: The Archbiſhop of Mentz, and Treves, John King of Bohemia, and Wolemarus Marquiſs of Brandenburg, gave their Votes for Lewis Duke of Bavaria; but the Biſhop of Colen, and Rodolphus of Bavaria, Count Palatine, gave their Votes for Frederick Duke of Auſtria. Lewis was crown'd at Aix la Chapelle, by the Archbiſhop of Mentz; and Frederick at Bonne, by the Archbiſhop of Colen. The Cities of Germany took part, ſome with Lewis, and others with Frederick. The firſt was acknowledged by the Cities of the Lower Rhine, as far as Strasburg, and by the Cities of Suabia; and the other by the Cities of the Higher Rhine, and Switzers. Lewis of Bavaria apply'd himſelf to Pope John XXII. to have his Election confirmed as the only lawful one, ſince he had the greateſt Number of Votes; but the Pope refuſed to do it, not only becauſe 'twas conteſted, but becauſe he had attempted to do ſome Things, which he affirmed to be above his Power; whereupon he declared the Empire vacant, and that the Adminiſtration of Affairs belonged to the Holy See; and upon that Account depoſed the Governors and Deputies, which the Emperor had ſet up in Italy: This was the beginning of the Quarrel between John XXII and Lewis of Bavaria: Theſe two Competitors for the Empire, made War againſt each other, while Italy was troubled with the Factions of the Guelphs and Gibelines. Matthew Viſcount of Milan being in League with the Gibelines, beſieged Genoa. The Genoeſes having put themſelves under the Protection of Pope John XXII. and Robert King of Apulia; this laſt came to relieve them, and the Pope thundered out Excommunications againſt Matthew, and invited Philip of Valois to ſuccour Genoa; but that Prince being retired without doing any thing, the Pope publiſhed a Cruſado againſt Matthew, and begged of Frederick Duke of Auſtria to furniſh him with ſome Troops, promiſing him to confirm his Election to the Empire, and make his Brother Archbiſhop of Mentz. Frederick allured by theſe Promiſes ſent his Brother Henry with three hundred Men into Lombardy, who ſhould joyn themſelves with the Soldiers of the Croſs; but Matthew having humbly ſhewed him, that he acted contrary to the Intereſts of the Empire, becauſe if King Robert and the Church got the Poſſeſſion of the City of Milan, they would make themſelves Maſters of all Tuſcany, he recalled his Brother. The Pope thereupon clapped up a League between Robert King of Apulia, and Frederick King of Sicily, upon Condition, that the City Rhegio, and whatever Frederick had conquered in Calabria, ſhould be put into the Hands of his Holineſs; which he had no ſooner gotten, but he delivered them to Robert. This provoked Frederick ſo much, that he broke the League, which brought on him the Pope's Diſpleaſure; but he eſcaped the Dint of it, by giving his Kingdom to his Son Peter.

The Wars in Germany, between the two Emperors.

While theſe Things paſſed in Italy, Germany was involved in Wars, but at length Lewis of Bavaria, in September 1323. defeated the Army of Frederick Duke of Auſtria, and took him Priſoner, with his Brother Henry. Their third Brother Leopold appealed to the Pope, who pronounced the Sentence of Excommunication againſt Lewis of Bavaria; by which he commands him to renounce his Election within three Months, and to appear before him in Perſon to juſtifie himſelf againſt an Accuſation brought againſt him, that he was a Favourer of Hereticks, Schiſmaticks, and other Rebels againſt the Church; forbids all Chriſtians to own him, as Emperor, and declares all ſuch as favoured him, if they were of the Clergy, ſuſpended from their Offices and Benefices, and if Lay-men, excommunicate. Lewis of Bavaria appealed from this Judgment to a general Council, which he reſolved to call, or to the next Pope lawfully choſen, and accuſes John XXII. to be the Cauſe of the Troubles of Germany and Italy, to overturn the Church and Empire, to invade the Rights of Princes, to rob the Church, and laſtly, to teach an heretical Doctrine concerning the Poverty of JESUS CHRIST, and his Apoſtles. A Copy of this Appeal dated in the Year 1324. is publiſhed by Mr. Baluſius, among the ancient Acts, which he joined to the Lives of the Popes of Avignon, Lewis of Bavaria at the ſame Time ſent Ambaſſadors to Rome to juſtifie himſelf, promiſing, that he would be kind to the Church; but the Pope would not give over the Proſecution, but excommunicated Lewis of Bavaria, and condemned him as an Heretick. Lewis appealed again from all theſe Proceedings. Italy ſuffered much by this Diviſion between the Empire and the Church. The Pope invites into Tuſcany Charles the Son of Robert, King of Apulia, who made himſelf Maſter of Florence, and publiſhing Plenary Indulgences, raiſed Soldiers, which he ſent into Italy againſt the Gibelines, and particularly againſt Galeaſius and his Brethren, Viſcounts of Milan, who ſucceeded to their Father, who died excommunicated. Theſe Troops were defeated, and the Pope obliged to fly to the King of France, to raiſe a Tax upon the Clergy of that Realm, to keep the War ſtill on Foot; which the King granted him, upon Condition, that he might receive the Tenths for himſelf the two next Years. The Tax which the Pope impoſed, was unreaſonable, being almoſt the Value of the whole Revenue of all their Benefices. Galeaſius and the Gibelines on their Part, prayed Lewis of Bavaria to come into Italy. The Senators and the People of the City of Rome, ſent Ambaſſadors to the Pope to beg of him to come, and reſide at Rome, and threatned him, if he did not, that they would in due Time and Place provide another Pope for the Holy See and Church. The Pope having excuſed himſelf, they ſent to Lewis of Bavaria, to pray him to come to Rome. This Prince promiſed them, and ſent away their Ambaſſadors very well ſatisfied, and called the Princes of the Empire together at Spire, to conſult about that Voyage. Here it was reſolved on, and in the Year 1327. Lewis of Bavaria paſſed the Alps with a Body of Horſe, and arrived at Trent, where he held a Meeting of the Deputies of the Cities of Lombardy, and then he went to Milan, where he was crowned. The Pope renewed his Excommunication, againſt Lewis of Bavaria, and condemned him as an Heretick and an excommunicate Perſon; and after he had ſummoned him once more, he declared, That he had forfeited all his Goods, moveable and immoveable, his Rights, Eſtates, and Juriſdictions, which he poſſeſſed. Lewis of Bavaria did not yet deſiſt from advancing his Intereſts in Italy, and having gotten a conſiderable Sum of Galeaſius and the Viſcounts, whom he deprived of the Government of Milan, he made himſelf Maſter of the greateſt Part of the Cities of Italy, went to Rome, was received by the Clergy and Senators, who came to meet him and was crowned Emperor there, Jan. 17. 1328. by the Order of the Clergy and the People of Rome, and by the Hands of Cardinal Steven Colonni.

An Hiſtory of the Popes, who had their Reſidence at Avignon, from Clement V. to the Death of Gregory XI, &c.

Nicholas V. Anti-Pope.

Sometime after the Coronation of Lewis of Bavaria, the Romans conſulted to chooſe a Pope who ſhould make his Reſidence at Rome; grounding their Fact upon this Pretence, That when a Pope being required by the People of Rome, would not, or did delay to come to the Holy See, the Power and Right of chooſing another Pope was devolved upon the Canon of St. Peter and St. John of the Lateran. Lewis of Bavaria conſented freely to this Election, and to effect it, depoſed John XXII. by a ſolemn Edict, dated April 28. and made a Law, that the Pope, which ſhall be choſen by the Conſent of the Emperor and People of Rome, ſhall reſide at Rome only, ſhall not go above three Days Journey from it, nor ſtay above three Months in the Year from it, and if he be longer abſent, and being required three Times, does not return, he ſhall be deprived of his Papal Dignity. In purſuance of the People's Requeſt, and with the Emperor's Conſent, they proceeded to the Election of another Pope, and choſe Peter Rainalluci of Corbario, a City of the Dioceſs of Riatino, a Monk of the Order of the Friars Preachers, Apoſtolick Penitentiary in Rome, who was reputed of for his great Sanctity. He was crowned, May 12. 1328. placed according to the Cuſtom upon the Chair of St. Peter, and named Nicholas V. He immediately created ſeveral Cardinals, but all of them almoſt Friars Mendicants, and of the Gibeline Faction; he crowned the Emperor a ſecond Time, and confirmed the Judgment which he had given againſt John XXII. who on his Part proceeded againſt this Anti-Pope and his Adherents. Peter de Corbario tarried at Rome as long as Lewis of Bavaria continued there, but went from thence with him, and came to Piſa, where he kept his Court, till he became odious to the Inhabitants there, which obliged him to conceal himſelf, and at length to withdraw himſelf to the Caſtle of Count Boniface, who delivered him in Auguſt 1330. into the Hands of the Archbiſhop of Piſa, and William Biſhop of Lucca, who cauſed him to be carried to Avignon; where he humbly confeſſed his Fault before the Pope and Conſiſtory, on the 25*th* of the ſame Month, and acknowledged, that Lewis of Bavaria was an Heretick, and that it went againſt him to acknowledge him for Emperor; That he had ſuffered himſelf to be choſen and conſecrated Anti-Pope; That he had created Cardinals and made Bulls; That he had approved of the Doctrine of Michael de Ceſena, General of the Order of Grey-Friars, conſented to the Depoſition of John XXII. perſecuted, depoſed, interdicted and excommunicated thoſe who were of his Party, diſpoſed of the Goods of the Church of Rome, &c. promiſed and ſwore to obey the Pope, and deſired Abſolution. The Pope granted his Deſire, with reſervation servation of imposing Penance on him, and caused him to be strictly guarded in a Chamber of his Palace; where he died three Years after, in his pious and penitential Sentiments.

The Death of John XXII.

The Departure of Lewis of Bavaria, was followed with new Troubles in Italy; John King of Bohemia, being invited thither, seized upon several Cities, which held Intelligence with the Pope. The Romans sent to Lewis of Bavaria to pray him to return, but his Affairs kept him in Germany; and in the midst of these Matters Pope John XXII. died at Avignon, Decemb. 24. 1334. in the 19*th* Year of his Papacy.

The Contest of the Grey-Friars about their Habit.

But now to return to the Affairs of the Church, which happened under this Pope; the Course of which we have interrupted to relate the Transaction of the Empire: We will begin with the History of the Contest, which he had with the Grey-Friars all his Papacy. Some Persons of that Order had for a long Time differed about the Sense, and Practice of some Things, or Points belonging to their Rule, and particularly about the Form of their Habits. Some would wear an Hood and short Gown, strait, and of very course Stuff; and called themselves, Spiritual Brethren. Others, who called themselves, The Brethren of the Community; wore a loose Garb, long, and of finer Stuff. The Popes used their Endeavour to regulate and decide these Differences among these Monks, and to that end, ordered them to refer the Controversie of their Habits to their Superiors, and to submit to the Form and Manner that they prescribe. Nicholas IV. and Clement V. put out some Bulls upon this Subject; But the Spiritual Brethren being intent upon the Practice, would not desist from it, separated themselves from the Community, made a Body by themselves, and betook themselves into Languedoc, where the Convents of Beziers, Narbonne, and some other Cities, were made up of these Spiritual Brethren. Pope John XXII. to extinguish this Schism in the first Year of his Pontificate, summoned the Brethren of this Faction, who sent their Deputies to Avignon, of whom the Chief was Bernard Delitiosi de Montpelier. The Contest was debated before the Pope, who gave Judgment in favour of the Brethren of the Community by his Bull, Quorundam, in which he leaves it in the Power of the Superiors to determine of what Length and Largeness, Courseness or Fineness, Form or Figure the Habits of the Grey-Friars should be, as well as to their Hood, as Gown; and thereupon orders them to follow the Will of their General, their Provincials, and Guardians; as also declares, That they may have Granaries and Cellars, and keep their Corn and Wine, if their Superiors judge it convenient, leaving the ordering of them to the Guardian, and grave Persons of every Convent, and enjoyning all the Grey-Friars to leave their short and ill shapen Habit, and conform themselves to the Usage of the Brethren of the Community. This Sentence did but enrage the Spirituals, and confirm them in their Obstinacy. They set themselves to preach arrogantly, that they ought not to obey any Superior, who should order them, who professed the Rule of St. Francis, to leave their short and strait Habit to assume the Habit of the Community contrary to their Rule, and consequently to the Gospel and to the Faith, because their Rule made use of the Gospel; That to oppose this Practice, and to oblige those who wore the short Habit to leave it, and to persecute them, was contrary to the Truth of the Gospel and the Faith; That the Pope had no Power to make such a Constitution, as that called Quorundam; That they ought neither to obey him, nor their Superiors, as to the Contents of that Constitution; because it was contrary to the Counsel of JESUS CHRIST, and their Rule, which the Pope could not destroy. The Pope gave a Commission to Friar Michael, Inquisitor in Provence and Languedoc, to proceed against these stubborn Friars. This Commission is dated November 1317. This Inquisitor, according to his Commission, prosecuted four Grey-Friars, named John Barani of Tholouse, Deodate de S. Michael, and William Sauton Priests, and Poncius Roche a Deacon, and some others, who being arrested, maintained, That Pope John XXII. had no Power to make these Declarations, which he had published in his Decretal, called Quorundam, concerning the Habit and Manner of Living of the Grey-Friars; because such Declarations were contrary to the Rule of St. Francis, and derogated from the perfect Poverty, that JESUS CHRIST and his Apostles had practised. These four Grey-Friars being questioned, obstinately persisted in that Opinion. Notwithstanding the Requests of the Inquisitor, and Bishop of Marseilles; insomuch, that the Inquisitor having taken Advice of several Divines, who declared the Doctrine of these Grey-Friars to be Heretical, being assisted by the Bishop of Marseilles, and several other Persons of Ecclesiastical Dignity, condemned them as Hereticks, degraded them from their Orders, and delivered them to the Secular Power, which condemned them to be burnt, and the Sentence was executed upon them at Marseilles. A Fifth, who had asserted the same Doctrine as the others, but declared his Repentance for it, was degraded, and condemned to be kept immured the rest of his Life, and to wear two yellow Crosses; the one on his Breast, and the other on his Back. These Punishments were not sufficient to repress the boldness of these Monks, so obstinate were they: They gave themselves greater Liberty to declaim with more Violence against the Pope, and publickly preached, That he was the Mystical Antichrist, or the Fore-runner of Antichrist; That the Church of Rome was the Synagogue of Satan; That they ought not to obey John XXII. nor look upon him as Pope; That the Grey-Friars who were burnt were true Martyrs, and that they were ready to suffer the same Punishment; and some of them were such Fools, as to go and offer themselves to the Stake. Bernard Delitiosi, who was, as is above said, the Chief of the Deputies sent by the Grey-Friars of Languedoc to Pope John XXII. was apprehended a little after his Arrival at Avignon, upon the Information of the Inquisitors of his Country, who accused him for a Design to procure the Death of Pope Benedict XI. Clement's Predecessor, for soliciting the Towns of Carcassone and Alby to revolt, for encouraging the People of the latter of these Cities against the Inquisitors, and for forcing open the Prisons of the Inquisition. The King's Guards demanded him of the Pope, and prayed him to appoint him Judges in partibus. His Holiness committed him to the Archbishop of Narbonne, and the Bishops of Pamiez, and St. Papoul, the last of whom, having been informed against the accused Person, and finding him guilty of the Crimes laid to his Charge, except the first, they degraded him and condemned him to end his Days in Prison loaded with Irons, and to eat nothing but Bread and Water. This Sentence was passed on him by these two Bishops, and three others, which they had called to their Assistance, Decemb. 8. 1319. It was executed, and the Pope allowed the Commissioners to mitigate the Punishment, as to the Eating, and Chains, if they saw convenient, and that Friar Bernard were not able to bear them: But the King's Proctor appealed, à minimâ, from the Judgment of the Commissioners, and the Pope by a Brief dated at Avignon, February 1320. ordered that it should be executed in its full Rigour, and condemned him to die in Prison, loaden with Chains. We are indebted to Mr. Balusius for these Monuments of Antiquity, of which we have spoken, and which he hath published in the first Tome of his Miscellanies.

The Dispute of the Grey-Friars about the Property of the Things they spent.

In 1322. there rose another Dispute among the Grey-Friars, in which almost all the Order engaged themselves against the Decision of John XXII. The Grey-Friars affirm, That according to their Rule, they make a Vow, not to have any Thing either in Property or in Common, and consequently, that they have no Dominion or Property in any Thing, but only a Right to use those Things that are necessary, by a simple Usage de facto, and that the Property and Dominion of all they have belongs to the Church of Rome; That it was in this absolute Abjuration of all Property, that the Perfection of the Evangelical Life consisted, which JESUS CHRIST and his Apostles lived, who had nothing either in Property or in Common; and that they ought to practise this Depth of Poverty, to follow the Counsel of the Gospel, and observe the Rule of St. Francis. Gregory IX. had declared in the Year 1230. that according to the Rule of St. Francis, the Grey-Friars ought not to have any Property, either in Common, or by themselves; but only the Use of their Goods, Books, and other Moveables. That they could not sell them or alienate them any manner of way, unless the Cardinal-Protector of the Order gave a Power to the General or Provincials. Innocent IV. declared in 1245. That the Propriety of those Things, of which the Grey-Friars had the Use allowed them, belonged to the Holy See. Nicholas III. in his Decretal, Exiit, qui seminat, determines, That to renounce a Property in all Things, as well in particular as in common, is meritorious and holy; and that JESUS CHRIST, who hath shewed us the Way of Perfection, hath taught it by his Words, and confirmed it by his Example, That the first Founders of the Church Militant practised it, and declared those excommunicated, who were of a contrary Opinion. Martin IV. who succeeded him, declared also, That the Grey-Friars had no right of Property, nor Dominion over the Things, as well moveable as immoveable, which they used. This Judgment was confirmed by Nicholas IV. in the Year 1298. and by the Decretal of Clement V. which begins with Exivi, in which having compared the Order of Grey-Friars to a Paradise upon Earth, and recommended the Life, which their Rule prescribes them, as conformable to that of JESUS CHRIST, He explains several Articles of their Rule, which were something ambiguous; and among other Things, he declares concerning their Poverty, That the Vow which they take to renounce all Property, ought to be understood as well in particular, as in common. That the Property of all Things given to them belongs to the Holy See, and that they have nothing, but a mere use de facto, which extends also to every Thing that is necessary for Life.

An History of the Popes, who had their Residence at Avignon, from Clement V. to the Death of Gregory XI, &c.

In this State and Condition were Things, when John XXII. was raised to the Papacy, and the Grey-Friars were persuaded, that they had no Property, or Dominion in the Things they had the Use of; no, not in those Things, which perish in the Use, as Meat and Drink; They also protested in a general Chapter held at Perusia; That they would practise this Poverty in the literal Sense, and conform to the Determination of Nicholas IV. upon that Subject. John XXII. who was a subtile Pope, could not endure that that Order which he did not love, should have the Honour of renouncing all Propriety; which neither rendred them poorer, nor gave the Holy See any Property, which could be of Profit to it. He considered, that the Property of Things which perished in the Use, was not distinguished from the Use it self. As for Example: It is undeniable, that he that eats and drinks, must have a Property in those Things he eats and drinks actually, and in that Case the Property can't be separated from the Use; and consequently, that if the Vow of the Rule of St. Francis were to have no Dominion, the Grey-Friars are obliged not to eat, but to die with Hunger, to uphold their Practice, or break it, that they might live; That the Poverty, of which the Grey-Friars bragged, was a mere Cheat, since that their Renunciation of Property, was such a Chimæra as made them no whit the poorer, that their Intention was no other, than theirs, who have the Advantage of those Things they use; That the Property and Dominion which they attributed to the Church of Rome, was more Charge than Profit, since nothing was got by it; That JESUS CHRIST, and his Apostles, never dreamed of this Poverty; and that it was an Error and Heresie to maintain, that JESUS CHRIST had no Right nor Property in the Things which he used. On these Grounds he published two Decrees: In the First, which is the Extravagant, Ad Conditorem, dated at Avignon, Dec. 7, having observed that it belongs to those who have a Right to make Canons, to revoke or change them, which they have made, either themselves, or their Predecessors, when it happens that they do more hurt than good; and that the absolute Renunciation of Property in common, or particular by the Grey-Friars, built upon the Constitutions of his Predecessors, who grant them only the mere Use de facto of the Things, which they use, reserving the Property to the Church of Rome, is neither profitable to themselves, nor the Church; and besides, in Things which perish in the Use, the Property or Dominion can't be separated from the Use, since they are destroy'd by the very Use. He declares, That the Church of Rome hath no Property by Virtue of the Constitutions of his Predecessors in any Thing given the Grey-Friars for their Use, and consumed by them, but yet retains a spiritual Dominion of Direction over their Order, besides the common Dominion which it hath over all the Goods of the Church, and over the Houses, Churches, Chappels, Books, Ornaments, and other Goods, which belong to the Grey-Friars, which do not perish in the Use. In his second Decretal, Cum inter nonnullos, which is dated the 12*th* of the same Month, he declares, 1. That it is an erroneous and heretical Proposition, to assert, That it is Heresie to deny that JESUS CHRIST and his Apostles had nothing in Common or in Proper. 2. That for the Future, it shall be an Error and an Heresie to maintain positively, that JESUS CHRIST and his Apostles had no Right to enjoy the Things they used, to sell, or give them, or to make use of them to obtain another Thing. The Pope did well to publish these Constitutions, but yet they did not convince the Grey-Friars of their Error; yea, several of them obstinately maintained, that they had no Property in those Things which they consumed, and accused the Pope of Error and Heresie. Lewis of Bavaria was not backward to take upon him their Defence, and to make use of this Pretence to accuse the Pope of Heresie in his Act of Appeal, which he published in 1324. wherein he confuted the Decretals, Ad Conditorem, and cum inter nonnullos, accusing them of Blasphemy, Error and Heresie, and proves the contrary Doctrine by the Rule of St. Francis, the Authority of the Popes; John's Predecessors holding, That that Practice is conformable to the Life that JESUS CHRIST and his Apostles lived; and that the Wound, and Scars of St. Francis were as a Seal, which no leaden Bull of a mortal Man can deface. The Pope for the Defence of this Article, published November 10. of the same Year, the Decretal, Quia quorundam mentes, against those, who had opposed his two Former; in which, after he has explained the Constitutions of his Predecessors, and stated the Question clearly, he declares them Hereticks and Rebels to the Church, who shall maintain Positions contrary to those, which he hath laid down in his former Constitutions.

An History of the Popes, who had their Residence at Avignon, from Clement V. to the Death of Gregory XI, &c.

In the Year 1325. he condemned the Postills of Petrus John Oliva, a Grey-Friar of great Repute, of Serignan in the Diocess of Beziers, upon the Revelations; from whence the Grey-Friars took the Principles of their Doctrine, and the Things, which they asserted against the Pope and the Church of Rome; for this Monk to magnifie his own Order, contrived to distinguish the sixth Estate of the Church, beginning with the Time of St. Francis, who was the Head of it, and the Angel foretold in the Revelation, the Estate, which should continue, till the Time of Antichrist. That as heretofore the Synagogue was rejected to settle another Church, in like Manner a corrupted Church, which was the Whore of Babylon, shall be rejected to give Place to a Church more perfect, animated by the Holy Spirit, and illuminated by a new Light; That this last should be opposed by a carnal Church; but yet it should flourish in spite of all Opposition and Persecutions. These are the principal Heads of the Notions which Petrus John Oliva propounds in his Comment upon the Revelation, which were condemned by twelve Doctors of Divinity, appointed thereto by Nicholas Cardinal Bishop of Ostium, to whom the Pope had given a Commission for the proceeding in this Affair; whose doctrinal Advice is related by Mr. Baluzius in the first Tome of his Miscellanies. This Author composed divers other Treatises, and among others, a Treatise of Poverty, in which he maintains, that an absolute Renunciation of all Property, both in particular and common, is the chief Perfection of the Gospel: He was also accused to have broached some Errors condemned in the Council of Vienna, viz. That Infants do not receive any Grace or Virtue by Baptism; That the Soul is not the Form of the Body; That the Divine Essence begets, and is begotten; That the Side of JESUS CHRIST was open before his Death. Pope John XXII. having examined his Postill, and having taken the Judgment of the Doctors, contained in several Propositions picked out of that Work, and with the Mitigations which they judged that they deserved, condemned the Work and the Author, in the Month of February 1325. and likewise defaced his Memory, by causing his Bones to be taken out of the Ground and burnt, for he was dead before his Papacy, and as some say, before the Pontificate of Clement V. The Grey-Friars made several Apologies for him, and asserted, that he was wrongfully accused, and that the Propositions taken out of his Work, and condemned, had a clear different Sense, if considered, with what goes before and follows. Some of them also gave it out, that he had done several Miracles after his Death. Lastly, The Concern which the Grey-Friars have for this Friar Oliva, is so great even to our Time, that Sixtus IV. was zealous to justifie his Memory, and having examined his Works, declared, That they contained nothing expresly contrary to the Catholick Faith, and which could not be taken in a good Sense.

The Condemnation of the Errors of Petrus Oliva.

The Sentence of Deposition, which Lewis of Bavaria published in 1328. against John XXII. is principally grounded upon the Errors and Heresies, which he pretends, that Pope had delivered in his three Decretals against the Grey-Friars. He sums them up under eight Heads: 1. That in Things which perish in the Usage, the Property is not distinguished from the Use. 2. That there is not a mere simple Use of those Things that perish in the Usage, but instead of using them, they abuse them. 3. That a Renunciation of Property is no Perfection, and does not make him a whit the poorer, who makes Profession of it. 4. That it is an Heresie to deny that JESUS CHRIST and his Apostles had nothing in proper, and had no Right to sell, or give those Things they had. 5. That an Use de facto, is not just, if there be not a Right of Usage. 6. That to call in doubt, whether JESUS CHRIST commanded his Apostles, when he sent them out to preach, to carry no Money with them. 7. To doubt, whether the Key of Knowledge be in the Catholick Church. 8. To teach, that one Pope can revoke those Decisions and Constitutions of his Predecessors, which relate to Faith and Manners. These Propositions are confuted at large, and and treated on as Heresies in that Sentence of Deposition. The Pope, that he might defend himself, and put an end to this Question, sent for Friar Michael de Cesena, General of the Order of Grey-Friars to Avignon, and commanded him upon Penalty of Disobedience, to write an Explication of their Rule as touching the Vow of Poverty, agreeable to his Decretals, being persuaded that the Grey-Friars would rather submit to the Judgment of their General than his; but the General would not obey him, but answered the Pope proudly. Nevertheless, he desired eight Days Consideration, and in the mean Time fled with two other Grey-Friars to Marseilles. The Pope sent after him to seize him, but he was embarked to sail into Italy, whither he was going to Lewis of Bavaria, and the Antipope John de Corbario. John XXII. proceeded against Michael de Cesena, deposed him, and ordered the Grey-Friars to choose another General.

The Dispute between the Emperor and Pope, concerning the Property of the Things spent by the Grey-Friars.

This

An History of the Popes, who had their Residence at Avignon, from Clement V. to the Death of Gregory XI, &c.

This Pope had another Contest of greater Consequence, concerning the Time when the Beatifick Vision of God is granted to those who die in a State of Religion? In a Sermon which he preached the third Sunday in Advent, 1329. he maintained, That the Blessed should not see the Trinity before the Day of Judgment. He taught the same Doctrine in another Sermon which he preach'd on the Feast of All-Saints, 1331. which he caused to be transcribed, and he gave out several Copies of it. Lastly, in a third Sermon, which he preach'd on the Eve of Epiphany in 1332. he asserted, That till the Day of Judgment the Souls of the Saints were under the Altar, and did not see the Holy Trinity, but only the Humanity of Jesus Christ. This Opinion offended several Persons, and moved the Divines of the contrary Judgment. A White-Friar named Thomas de Wallis, had the Boldness to preach the contrary Doctrine at Avignon, by which he incensed the Pope so much, that he put him in Prison, and caused him to be fed with Bread and Water only. Durandus à S. Portiano, of the Order of Friars Preachers, and Bishop of Meaux, made a Treatise against that Opinion, which much disturbed the Pope's Mind, whereupon he summoned him before him, and examined his Work. The Cardinals, and other Divines of his Court, who were before offended at his Opinion, remained silent for fear, or out of Respect to the Pope, and some also embraced and maintained that Opinion; but the Doctors of Paris openly disapproved it, and made a great Noise about it. The Pope after this sent two Legates to Paris, viz. Gerhard, Minister-General of the Grey-Friars, and another Monk of the Order of Preaching Friars, to treat of a Peace between the Kings of England and Scotland, and charged them to insinuate their Opinion to the Doctors of Paris. The first of them attempting to teach it publickly at Paris in a Meeting of the Students, caused a great Disturbance; so that his Companion had much a-do to appease them. King Philip of Valois was much troubled at the Offence, and false Doctrine which that Monk had taught; and the latter went to his Majesty to pacifie him. The King fearing lest he should perplex himself with the Theological Question, answer'd him, That he would not discourse him, but in the Presence of some Divines; and having summoned ten of the most able Doctors of Paris, of whom four were Grey-Friars, he asked them in the Presence of this Minister, What was their Judgment concerning the Doctrine which he had taught? They all condemned it as false and heretical; but they could not agree about it. A few Days after, the King caused all the Doctors of Divinity, Bishops and Abbots about Paris to meet in the Castle of St. Vincent, and invited this Minister thither, and propounded two Questions in French to them. I. Whether the Souls of the Saints see the Face of God as soon as they are dead? II. Whether the Vision, which they have presently after their Death, shall cease at the Day of Judgment, and another come in stead of it? They all answered affirmatively to the first Question. And to the Second, they said, That the Vision that the Saints have presently after Death, shall not cease at the Day of Judgment, but remain for ever; but some of them said, that it shall be more perfect after the Day of Judgment: The Minister consented to the Opinion of these last, at least in Appearance. The King desired a Certificate of what was thus concluded by this Assembly, which they composed, and was sealed with the Seals of 29 Divines then present. They wrote about it to the Pope, and the King wrote to him also himself, that he thought it safest to follow the Judgment of the Doctors of Divinity of Paris who knew better, what ought to be held and believed in Matters of Faith, than Civilians, or other Divines, who knew little of Divinity; That he would punish those that taught the contrary, threatning him (if we may believe Cardinal Peter d' Ailly) to burn him, if he did not retract. The King also published by Mistake the Judgment of the Faculty. The Pope in his Answers to the King, complains, That his Majesty fixed on the Affirmative so positively, and prays him not to rush upon Things with so much Passion, assuring him, that he had no Design fully to determine that Question, but to debate it, and search out the Truth. He wrote to the University to allow the Batchelors of Divinity to defend either of the Opinions, and caused his Divines to collect such Passages as might be alledged Pro & Con, to put things in a way to the Decision of it. The Faculty of Divinity would not endure that Delay, but stuck close to their Doctrine. Lastly, When John XXII. had resolved to determine this Question in a Consistory, which he appointed to meet, December 2. 1334. he fell sick and retracted, as some say, just at the Point of Death, his Opinion by an authentick Declaration, in which he owns, That Souls separated from the Body, which are purged from their Sins, are in the Kingdom of Heaven, and in Paradise with JESUS CHRIST, in the Company of Angels. That they see God Face to Face, and the Divine Essence, as clearly as the State and Condition of a Soul separated from the Body will permit; That he recanted all that he had said, preach'd or written against this Doctrine. This Declaration is dated December 3. 1334. a few Moments before his Death, and related by Peter Italamtals, a Canon Regular of the Order of Præmonstratensis in the Life of this Pope.

The Question of the Happiness of the Saints after Death debated by John XXII.

John XXII. in the second Year of his Pontificate, October 21. published the Decretals of his Predecessor Clement V. made in the Council of Vienna, or a little before, and after that Council, which Clement V. had already digested in his Life-time, which make up the five Books of Clementines, which are in the Body of Civil Law, and joyned 20. others of his Constitutions to it, which he calls Extravagants; to which five other Books of Common Extravagants have been added, among which are several Decretals of Boniface VIII. Benedict XI. and John XXII. In one of his Constitutions, He abrogates the Society of the Fraticelli, Beghardi, or Beghinæ, which had spread themselves in all Places. They were a kind of Monks or Nuns, who made a Vow of Poverty and Beggary, and assumed a particular Habit and Way of Living, but entred into no Order, lived a free kind of Life, and taught many dangerous Maxims contrary to the Doctrine of the Church, concerning the Sacraments and Obedience due to Superiors. Nevertheless, he declares in a private Letter written to the Bishop of Strasburg, that he did not intend to include in that Constitution those pious Women, who had made a Vow of Chastity, and remained with their Parents, or in Societies, practising the Humility and Obedience that is due to their Pastors, and giving Examples of Virtue and Piety. This Letter is published in the second Tome of the Works of the Popes of Avignon, put out by Mr. Baluzius, with the Sentence by which that Pope declared the Marriage between Charles the Fair, King of France, and Queen Blanch to be void, and several other Letters of his, and Pope Clement V's. his Predecessor. There are also several of them in the Annalists, and divers Bulls in the Bullary. John XXII. was ingenious, active, crafty, of a good Life, studious, and vers'd in the Sciences, but chiefly in the Canon Law.

The Letters of John XXII.

The Election of Benedict XII.

The Holy See after his Death was not long vacant, for Benedict the XIIth. was chosen, December 16. and crown'd the 20*th* of the same Month, in the Church of the Friars-Preachers at Avignon. He was called before James Fourniter, a Native of Savardun, in the County of Foix, which was a Castle of the Diocess of Pamiez, and since of that of Rieux. He had in his Youth been a Monk in the Abby of Balbone, of the Order of Cistertians in the Diocess of Mirepoix, from whence he came to Paris to follow his Studies, where he commenced Doctor of Divinity. Then he was made Abbot of the Monastery of Fontfroidus, afterward Bishop of Pamiez, then of Mirepoix, and lastly, nominated a Cardinal-Priest of the Title of St. Priscus, by John XXII. in December 1327. He had a Design to settle his Residence in Italy, and chose Bononia for his Seat, but having caused the Inhabitants to be tryed, whether he should be welcome there, found, that that People, which had expelled the Legate of his Predecessor, would not entertain him; which made him take up the Resolution of abiding at Avignon, and build himself a Palace there; although the People of Rome sent Ambassadors to him, to beg of him to come and reside in their City.

The Determination of the Question of the Happiness of the Soul, by Benedict XII.

At his Entrance upon the Papacy, he found two Affairs in the Church that wanted Regulation, viz. 1. The Question concerning the Happiness of the Souls of the Righteous, after they are separated from the Body; which had been much debated a little before the Death of his Predecessor. 2. The Second was the Difference of the Church of Rome with Lewis of Bavaria. To prepare Mens Minds for the Decision of the First, he preached a Sermon on that Subject, upon the Purification, in the Year 1335. in which he maintained, that the Souls of the Just, which were absolutely pure, did enjoy the Beatifick Vision of God before the Day of Judgment. Two Days after he held a Consistory, to which he summoned such as had maintained the contrary Opinion in his Predecessors Time; and that he might proceed circumspectly in the Determination of that Point of Doctrine, he assembled many able Doctors of Divinity, and with them examined that Question, as oft as he had Leisure, in the Year 1335. which he passed at Pont de Sorgue: And at length the Matter being fully ordered, he made his Constitution, Feb. 22. of the following Year, in which he determines, That the Souls of the Saints that died before our Lord's Passion, as also of the Apostles, Confessors, Martyrs, Virgins, and other baptized Christians which are pure, when they are separated from their Bodies, or are united with it, as also the Souls of Infants, which die after Baptism, before they have the use of Reason, are in Heaven and Paradise with JESUS CHRIST, and the Angels, immediately after the Separation from the Body, or after their Purification, and enjoy the intuitive and immediate Vision of the Divine Essence, without the Mediation of any Object; because he discovers himself nakedly, clearly, and openly to them; and consequently, they are happy, and enjoy eternal Rest; but on the contrary, the Souls of those that die in mortal Sin, descend actually right down into hell, where they suffer the Pains of the damned; That nevertheless, all Men shall rise and appear before the Tribunal of JESUS CHRIST, to receive every one in their Body, Reward or Punishment for what they have done; and declares all those Hereticks, that obstinately maintain any one of the contrary Articles.

An History of the Popes, who had their Residence at Avignon, from Clement V. to the Death of Gregory XI, &c.

Benedict XII. Confirms the Judgment of his Predecessors, against Lewis of Bavaria and the Grey-Friars.

As to the Contest of the Pope with Lewis of Bavaria, Benedict XII. before he would engage in the Contest with that Prince, which his Predecessor had begun, exhorted him to return his Duty and Obedience to the Church. Lewis of Bavaria sent two Ambassadors to him in 1335. to desire Absolution; which Benedict seemed ready to grant him, if the Ambassadors of the King of France, and Apulia, and the Cardinals had not deterred him from it; insomuch, that the Ambassadors of Lewis returned without doing any thing. In the next Year he sent other Ambassadors in the Name of the Princes of the Empire, to desire it again. The Pope received them kindly, and told them, that he wished he could do it; but he feared the King of France. Upon this Answer Lewis of Bavaria address'd himself to that King, and sent his Ambassadors in 1337. to pray him to joyn with him, that he might obtain Reconciliation. The King of France sent his Ambassadors to the Pope, with those of Lewis of Bavaria, to demand Absolution. The Pope hearing that, answer'd, That it being a Matter of Consequence, he would consider of it; and that he was not obliged to treat Lewis of Bavaria, as an Heretick, or Catholick at the King of France's Pleasure, and when he had delayed them a long Time, he would give Lewis's Ambassadors no other Answer than this, That their Master did not truly repent. Thus this Business hung, and Benedict would not recede any thing from what his Predecessors had done against that Prince. When these Ambassadors were returned into Germany, Lewis of Bavaria held a Synod at Francfort, in August 1338. in which he made a solemn Protestation against the Proceedings of John XXII. which he proved before them to be null and void.

Benedict also maintained what John XXII. had decided against the Grey-Friars concerning Poverty, and we know, that in his Papacy, a Grey-Friar named Francis de Pistorio, was condemned to be burnt at Venice, for maintaining, contrary the Decision of John XXII. That JESUS CHRIST and his Apostles had nothing of their own.

Orders made by Benedict XII. and his Death.

He made, during his Papacy, several excellent Rules for the Reformation of the Church. He revoked all the Commendams of Cathedral Churches and Abbies, granted by his Predecessors to all Persons whatsoever, except Cardinals and Patriarchs. He compelled all Bishops to reside in their Churches, forbad plurality of Benefices, made void all Favours Expectant which were not agreeable to the Rules of the Civil Law, he deprived all Persons unworthy of their Benefices, and carefully put in fit Persons, where he had Power; he abolished the use of several Dispensations, remedied many Abuses and clancular Dealings, made use of in gaining Bulls, employ'd rightly the Revenues of the Church of Rome, by giving Alms, and bestowing Charity on the Poor during the Famine. He took great Pains to unite the Christian Princes, and did all he could to procure Peace with all Kings. He revoked the Tax of Tenths, which his Predecessor had granted to Philip King of France, for his Voyage into the Holy Land; because that Prince could not go through with his Design. He shewed his Zeal to Justice by causing those Officers to be punished severely, who had deliver'd the Ambassadors of Edward King of England, which were come to Avignon to the King of France: He made a Reformation among the Black-Monks, as well as Cistertians, who lived loosely; he appointed Persons of Merit and Learning to visit their Monasteries, that they might inform him of such Abuses as ought to be amended, and made Constitutions for the Reformation of them. He had also made several Rules for the Friars Mendicants, if he had not been prevented by Death. He only ordered, that such Monks, as were in his Court without any Permission obtain'd, should return to the Monasteries, and forbad them leaving their Order to go over to the Cistertians or Cluniacks, without the express Permission of the Pope. Lastly, That Pope lived in a Way suitable to so great a Bishop, keeping close to his Duty, being zealous for Religion, and for the Discipline and Reformation of the Church, virtuous, charitable, free from Ambition and worldly Interests. He did not (as several other Popes have done) raise his Nephews and Relations to the great Offices and Dignities of the Church, nor enrich them with the Goods of the Church; or by impoverishing private Men. He preferred but one of his Relations, whom he made Archbishop of Arles for his Merit, which he did not do without some Difficulty, at the earnest Request of the Cardinals. He married but one of his Neices, whom he bestowed upon a Merchant, refusing several great Lords, who offered themselves, as being above her Quality. This is the Relation which all the Historians of his Time give of his Piety and Virtue, who are more to be relyed on than some modern Authors; who will have him to have been a Man of a disorderly Conversation. He did at Avignon, April 25. 1342. which was the eighth Year of his Papacy.

An History of the Popes, who had their Residence at Avignon, from Clement V. to the Death of Gregory XI, &c.

This Pope composed several Works. Rainaldus has published his Opuscula, or small Tracts concerning the Poverty of JESUS CHRIST, and his Apostles, and about the Vision of God. There is a more considerable Treatise of this Pope's in the Vatican Library, upon the last of these Subjects. He also made a large Commentary upon the Gospel of St. Matthew, which is yet in M. S. in Mr. Colbert's Library, with three other Treatises against Ockham. Most of his Letters and Bulls are extant in the Annalists, and Register of Bulls.

The Works of Benedict XII.

The Election of Clement VI.

Clement VI. was chosen Pope, May 7. 1342. and crowned the 9*th*. of the same Month. He was called before Petrus Rogerius, born in the Castle of Maumont, in the Diocess of Limoges. He was a Monk of the Abby of Casa-Dei in Auvergne; and having taken his Degrees in Divinity, he went to the Court of John XXII. at Avignon. This Pope gave him the Abby of Fescamp, and made him afterward Bishop of Arras. He received as much Favour at the Court of France, as Avignon; for there he was admitted into the Council of that King, who had a particular Respect for him, insomuch, that he was translated from the Bishoprick of Arras, to the Archbishoprick of Sens, and in the next Year to that of Rouen; and lastly, was raised to the Dignity of a Cardinal, of the Title of St. Nereus, and Achilleus by Benedict XII.

Rules made by Clement, about the Affairs of Italy.

The first Thing that he did after his rise to the Papal Dignity, was to send his Legates to make way for a Peace between the Kings of France and England. He sent also a Cardinal-Legate into Italy, to appease the Troubles and Wars which were in that Country. Robert King of Apulia died about that Time, and his Kingdom fell to Jane his Daughter, then an Infant, who was married to Andrew King of Hungary. The Pope took upon him the Government of that Realm, till that Prince came to take Possession of it, which he was scarce come to do, but he was slain by Treachery. The Romans sent to the Pope 18 of their principal Citizens, to desire three Things of him. I. To make the Senators, Governor, and other Magistrates of their City Friends, who presented themselves to him as Petrus Rogerius, and not as Clement VI. who was Pope for his Life only. II. To come, and make his Residence at Rome. III. That since the Life of Man is so short, that few lived to an hundred Years, to which Age Boniface VIII. had annexed a Plenary Indulgence for those who visited the Church of St. Peter and Paul at Rome, he would please to reduce that Time to the fiftieth Year. The Pope granted the first and last of their Demands, for he reconciled the Magistrates presented to him, upon Condition, that it should be no Prejudice to his Rights, and brought the Jubilee to the 50*th*. Year, appointing, That every 50*th* Year there should be a Jubilee; but for the second he put it off, by declaring, That the Design, which he had of coming to Rome, he could not put in Execution for the present, and he could not tell them when he should be able to do it.

Lewis of Bavaria excommunicated anew by Clement.

Lewis of Bavaria used all his Endeavours in this Papacy to be reconciled to the Church, and prayed the King of France to intercede for him. This Prince told him, That he must submit himself, and humbly beg Absolution. The Ambassadors of Lewis desired such a Form, as the Pope would accept; but they gave him such an intolerably severe one, that he would not subscribe it, when he was in Prison; for it signified, that he gave Power to Humbertus the Dauphin's Uncle, to the Provosts of Augsburg and Bamberg, and to Henry his Arch-Chancellor, to confess all the Errors and Heresies that he was accused of, to make a Renunciation of the Empire with a Promise never to resume it, but by the Pope's Consent, and to put his Children and Goods into the Hands of his Holiness. They annexed also other Clauses, which concerned the Empire. These Ambassadors approved of this Proposal; but when it was presented to Lewis, and seen in the Assembly held at Francfort in September, 1344. it was declared contrary to the Interests of the Empire, and the Assembly refused to permit that Lewis of Bavaria should sign it; and sent their Ambassadors to the Pope and Cardinals, to persuade them not to require it. The Pope seeing himself deceived, renewed his Process against Lewis of Bavaria, condemns him in his Excommunication, and deposes him entirely; and orders the Electors of the Empire to proceed to the Election of another King of the Romans, to whom he might give the Title of Emperor, unless the Holy See should provide one. At the same Time he deposed Henry Archbishop of Mayence, and nominated in his Place Gerlacke, the Count of Nassau's Brother; who going into Germany, joyned himself to the Electors of Cologne, Treves, Dukes of Saxony, King of Bohemia, and some other Princes of the Empire, who being assembled at the end of August at Rens, chose Charles of Moravia, the Son of the King of Bohemia, Emperor; his Election was solemnly confirmed by the Pope, and the War began between the two Competitors in Germany, but it soon ended by the Death of Lewis of Bavaria, which happened October 11. 1347. After his Death, Charles got Possession of the greatest Part of the Cities of the Empire; but Henry the old Archbishop of Mentz, the Marques of Brandenburg, the Count Palatine of the Rhine, and the Duke of Saxony, resolved to choose another Emperor, and offered the Empire first to Edward the Third King of England, and after to Frederick Marques of Misnia, but both of them having refused it, they chose Gontherius Count of Thuringia, who died the same Year, and left Charles the peaceable Possession of the Empire.

and

The Attempt of Nicholas Laurentius in Rome.

While the Princes of Germany were contending for the Empire, a Roman named Nicholas Laurentius, took upon him the Title of Tribune Augustus, the Deliverer of the City of Rome, and Defender of Italy. He made himself Master of Rome, seized upon the Capitol, and made a League with the greatest Part of the People of Italy. He wrote to the Pope, That if he did not come to Rome within a Year, he would have another Pope chosen, and stirred up Lewis and Charles the Competitors for the Empire, and the Electors to appear before the Magistrates of the People of Rome, declaring, that the City of Rome was the Seat of the Empire; That it belonged to him, and that the Empire ought to be in Italy, and not in Germany. This Enterprize fell almost immediately; for this pretended Deliverer being constrained by the contrary Faction to fly from Rome, and having the Boldness to go in Disguise to Charles's Court, he was known, arrested there, and carried from thence to Avignon, where he was put into the Pope's Hands, who cast him into Prison; but he escaped out of it, as some say, and returned to Rome, where he was killed.

The Death of Clement VI.

Clement VI. died December 6 1352. in the 11*th*. Year of his Papacy. This Pope had a great deal of Learning, and a fine Wit, to which he had joyned a bountiful Disposition, much Meekness, Affability and Liberality. He loved Peace, and took a great deal of Pains to unite the Christian Princes, without siding with any Party. In the Year 1344. he put forward an Expedition against the Turks, of which the Dauphin was Captain; but it had no good Effect. He laboured to unite the Greek Church, and accomplished it among the Armenians. He made the Church of Prague in Bohemia into an Archbishoprick in the Year 1344. and made a Constitution in 1350. concerning the Conclave, by which he allows all the Cardinals to have in the Conclave, every one two Clergymen to wait on them, their several Lodgings, and a Dessert. A little before his Death he made a Declaration, by which he revoked all that he had delivered, either in Disputation, Teaching or Preaching, or otherwise against the Catholick Truths, and against Faith and good Manners. A Protestation, which his Successors Innocent VI. Urban V. and Gregory XI. also made at the Point of Death. Several Letters of Clement VI. are found among the Annalists [Bzovius ad an. 1342. and Waddingus Tom. 3. ad an. 1342.] There is an Epistle of his against the Whipping-Monks in the 11*th*. Tome of the Councils, and Mr. Baluzius hath published several, sent to the Kings of France and Arragon in the ancient Acts, which he hath joyned to the Lives of the Popes of Avignon.

The Election and Actions of Innocent VI.

Innocent VI. was chosen in the Room of Clement VI. December 18. and crowned the 23*d*. or 30*th*. of the same Month. He was called before Stephanus Albertus, and was a Native of Mont near Pampadour, in the Diocess of Limoges. He had been before Grand Seneschal of Tholouse, and after was made Bishop of Noyon in 1338. and translated to the Bishoprick of Clermont in 1340. Clement VI. raised him to the Dignity of a Cardinal of the Title of St. John and St. Paul, and made him Bishop of Ostia, and Grand Penitentiary. He began as soon as he was made Pope, to revoke the Reservations and Commendams of Benefices, which his Predecessor had two easily granted, and took all the Care he could to fill the Dignities of the Church with Persons eminent for Virtue and Knowledge. He sent into Italy, Giles Alvarez, a Spanish Cardinal of the Title of St. Clement, to resume the Castles and Cities that belonged to the Church of Rome, of which several small Lords had made themselves Masters. This Legate found in all Italy, only the Castles of Montefiascone and Montefalco willing to receive him; but a little after, he put the Pope in Possession of a part of his Dominion. The City of Rome was troubled with some Stirs by Francis Baroncellus, who took upon him the Title of Tribune, but the Pope set up Nicholas Laurentius, whom he delivered out of Prison on purpose. He destroyed Baroncellus, and was himself slain a little Time after. Under the Papacy of this Pope, Charles King of the Romans went to Rome by the Consent of his Holiness, and was crowned Emperor in 1355. by the Cardinals Petrus Bertrandus and Giles Alvarez, after he had taken an Oath, that he would not stay in Rome nor Italy; Lewis Marques of Brandenburg, Son of Lewis of Bavaria, was absolved of the Censures, which he had incurred by maintaining his Father's Party. Innocent VI. maintained the Decrees of his Predecessors against the Grey-Friars, which rebelled against the Holy See, and burnt two of them at Avignon in 1353. because they obstinately maintained their Opinion concerning the Poverty of JESUS CHRIST; and imprisoned one named John Roquetaillade of S. Flour, because he took upon him to prophesie, and foretold, that Wars should increase; That the Earth should be desolate; That the Clergy should be abused and despoiled of their Goods, and after this Time of Affliction is passed, there shall come an Angel, the Deputy of JESUS CHRIST, who shall bring the Clergy to live after the ancient Way of the Apostles, shall convert the Jews and Turks, and purifie the whole Earth. Innocent VI. ordered also his Inquisitor in Germany to banish all the Begards and Beguines, and condemned an Heresie risen in England, concerning Original Sin, and the Merit of good Works. This Pope died, Sept. 12. 1362.

His Writings.

A Register of his Letters is preserved in the Vatican Library, several of which are published by Rainaldus, Bzovius and Waddingus, in their Annals.

The Election of Urban, and his Actions.

October 28. following, the Cardinals being assembled in the Conclave, chose William Grimoardus, a Native of Grisac in the Diocess of Menda, Doctor of Law, and Abbot of S. Victor at Marseilles, who assumed the Name of Urban V. and was consecrated and crowned Pope at Avignon, Nov. 6. After he had had a Conference at Avignon, in the Year 1365. with the Emperor Charles, he took up a Resolution to go to Rome, to set in order the Affairs of Italy; and accordingly departed from Avignon the last Day of April, 1367. and taking Ship at Marseilles, May 20. he arrived four Days after in Italy. Having stayed some Time at Viterbo, He made his Entry into Rome, Octob. 6. and was there received with great Joy by the Romans. He had the Honour to receive two Emperors there, viz. Charles the Emperor of Germany, who came in 1368. with an Army to bring the People and Cities of Italy into Obedience to the Pope, and Joannes Palæologus Emperor of the Greeks, who came to Rome the next Year; and united himself to the Roman Church. Urban having put the Affairs of Italy in order, resolved to return to Avignon, under a Pretence of endeavouring to make a Peace between the Kings of France and England. He left Italy, Sept. 5. 1370. came the 16*th*. of the same Month to Marseilles, and the 24*th*. to Avignon; where he died, December 19. of the same Year.

His Character and Works.

This Pope had several great Accomplishments, and was very noble, very zealous to do his Duty, and a Lover of Justice. He erected divers stately Buildings, reformed many Abuses in the Court of Rome, punished irregular Clergymen very severely, prosecuted Usurers, and Persons guilty of Simony, and such as used unlawful Trades, forbad Plurality of Benefices, favoured Learning, established several publick Universities, and entertained 1000. Students at his own Charge: He was liberal and charitable to the Poor; made a good Use of the Revenues of the Church; forbad Ecclesiastical Immunities and Privileges; and preferred only two of his Relations to Ecclesiastical Dignities, because they were worthy of them. His Constitution against Plurality of Benefices is in the 11*th*. Tome of the Councils. The Annalists [Bzovius ad an. 1365. and Waddingus ad an. 1363.] have published several of his Letters, [and there is a Volume of them in the Vatican Library.]

The Election of Gregory XI.

After the Death of Urban, the Cardinals chose Petrus Rogerius, Nephew to Clement VI. being about forty Years old. He was a Native of Maumont, in the Diocess of Limoges. He took the Name of Gregory XI. and was consecrated and crowned at Avignon, Jan. 4. 1371. Italy was afflicted with Wars under the Pontificate of this Pope, and the Florentines revolted, and drew away Bononia, and several other Cities. After the Pope had thundred out his Excommunications, he published a Croisado, and levyed an Army against them; which he sent into Italy under the Command of the Cardinal of Geneva; And lastly, resolved to go and make his Residence in Italy, and fix his See at Rome. Some affirm, That he did this by the Persuasion of Baldus the Lawyer, who had been his Master. Others say, That it was done upon the Reflection of a Bishop, who was reproved by him for Non-residence; Others say, That he did it by the Advice of St. Catherine of Sienna. However that be, he left Avignon without the Knowledge of the French, Sept. 13. 1376. being accompanied with all the Cardinals, except five, who would stay there, and made his Entrance into Rome, Jan. 7. in the next Year.

An Hiſtory of the Popes, who had their Reſidence at Avignon, from Clement V. to the Death of Gregory XI, &c.

His Arrival did not at all alter the State of Affairs, the Revolt continued, the Romans themſelves would not ſubmit to him, and kept up their Magiſtrates. Their Governor invaded Viterbo, and ſome other Cities belonging to the Patrimony of St. Peter, which obliged Gregory to retire to Anagnia, under a Pretence of avoiding the Heat of the Weather. He returned to Rome in November, and having accommodated things with the Governor of Rome, he treated with the Florentines, and the other Revolters about a Peace. During the time of this Negociation, Gregory died March 27. 1378. Gerſon ſays, That this Pope made a Declaration when he died, in which he exhorted all preſent not to believe the Viſions of private Perſons; becauſe he had himſelf been deceived by the Advice of one of theſe Enthuſiaſts, and upon that Account had like to have created a dangerous Schiſm in the Church, but that he foreſaw the ill Conſequence of it. This he ſaid with a Reſpect to the Advice, which Catharine of Sienna had given him to go to Rome. However that be, the Death of Gregory made a Way to a Schiſm; of which we ſhall ſpeak in the following Chapter. The greateſt Part of the Letters of this Pope are publiſhed by Waddingus, [in his Annal. Minor. ad an. 1371.] and by Bzovius [in his Annales ad an. 1372.]

An Hiſtory of the Popes, who had their Reſidence at Avignon, from Clement V. to the Death of Gregory XI, &c.

CHAP. IV.

The Hiſtory of the Schiſm of the Popes of Rome and Avignon, and of what paſſed in Chriſtendom on that Account, till the Council held at Piſa.

The Hiſtory of the Schiſm of the Popes of Rome, &c.

The Election of Urban VI. made by Force.

Gregory the XIth. being dead at Rome, the Romans were deſirous to take this Opportunity of reſettling the Pope's Court in their City, by promoting the Choice of a Roman, or at leaſt of an Italian. There were at that time ſixteen Cardinals at Rome, four Italians; which were Peter of Corſinis a Florentine, Biſhop of Porto, ſtyled Cardinal of Florence, Simon of Broſſiana, a Milaneſe Cardinal-prieſt of the Title of St. John and St. Paul, Francis of Thebaldeſchis, Cardinal-prieſt of the Title of St. Sabina, commonly called the Cardinal of St. Peter, James des Urſini, a Roman, Cardinal-deacon of the Title of St. George, and twelve Ultramontanes, i.e. of the Nations beyond the Alps; to wit, the Cardinals John of Groſſo, a Limoſin Biſhop of Præneſte, called Cardinal of Limoges, Robert of Geneva, Cardinal-prieſt of the Title of the twelve Apoſtles, Gerard du Puy Abbot of Marmoutier, Cardinal-prieſt of the Title of St. Clement, Peter Flandrini, Cardinal-prieſt of the Title of St. Euſtace, William of Aigreſeüille, Cardinal-prieſt of St. Stephen in Monte Cœlio, Bertrand Larger of Glandeva, Cardinal-prieſt of the Title of St. Cecily, Hugo of Montelais of Nantes, of the Title of the four Crowns, Guy of Maleſicco, Cardinal-prieſt of the Title of the Holy-croſs in Jeruſalem, ſtyled Cardinal of Poictiers, Peter of Sortenac, Cardinal-prieſt of the Title of St. Laurence, nam'd of Viviers, William Noellet, Cardinal deacon of the Title of the St. Angelo, Peter of Vergne, Cardinal-deacon of the Title of St. Maria in viâ latâ, and Peter de la Lune, Cardinal-deacon under the Title of St. Mary in Coſmedin. Theſe latter being much more in Number, than the Italians, there was ſmall Liklihood they would chooſe an Italian; wherefore the Romans were reſolved to obtain by Force, what they could not bring about, if they left things to go on in their ordinary Channel. They began with demanding it of the Cardinals, even before they entred the Conclave; giving them to underſtand, that unleſs they yielded to them, it ſhould be the worſe for them. The Cardinals being urged to ſpeak poſitively, made Anſwer, that they could not diſcourſe of the Election of a Pope out of the Conclave; and when they were met there, they would do what they judged moſt conducible to the Good of the Church; moreover, they deſired them to make no ſuch Demands as were joyned with Threatnings, and which occaſioned them to fear ſome Violence; declaring, that if they offer'd any, to compel them in their Choice; he that ſhould be choſen, would not be legitimate Pope, but an Intruder. The Romans, whoſe Intereſt it was, not to let ſlip this Opportunity, perſiſted in their firſt Demands; and for fear the Cardinals ſhould quite Rome, they ſet a Guard at the Gates and Avenues of the City, expelled thence the Nobility and the principal Citizens, and admitted a great Number of People out of the Country, whom they ordered to arm, that they might controul the Election. The Obſequies of the deceaſed Pope being ended, on the 5th of April, the Cardinals prepared to go into the Conclave, though with Regret, and diſcontented, under the Apprehenſion of what might happen; proteſting, that in caſe they were obliged to chooſe an Italian, they ſhould not acknowledge him for Pope. They entred on the 7th into the Conclave, the Guard whereof was committed to the Biſhop of Marſeilles; but the Officers of the Romans alſo went in, and departed not thence, till they had made diligent Search in all the Lodgings, and poſſeſs'd themſelves of the Gate, while the Conclave was ſurrounded with an innumerable Company of People, which cried, We will have a Roman Pope; Romano lo volemo lo Papa, Romano lo volemo. When it was repreſented to them, that theſe tumultuary Cries were unbecoming; they made two Officers enter the Conclave, and declared to the Cardinals, that if they choſe not a Roman Pope, they were in Danger of their Lives. The Cardinals having given them the ſame Anſwer as they gave before, that the Election of a Pope ought to be made with Freedom; they continued the ſame Threats, and withdrew in the Evening, after the Cardinals had told them, that on the Morrow, when they had ſaid one Maſs of the Holy Ghoſt, they would act according as he ſhould inſpire them. The People, who were not contented with this Anſwer, continued to cry all Night long, Romano lo volemo lo Papa, O almanco almanco Italiano, è ſe non lo fanno tutti quanti queſti Cardinali è Franceſi ſaranno tagliati a pezze. One of the Cardinals to appeaſe them, told them out at the Window of the Conclave, that to Morrow they ſhould be ſatisfied. On the next Day, the 8th of April, the People being again gathered together in greater Numbers at the Sound of the Alarm-Bell of St. Peter's Clock, came with greater Fury to the Conclave, threatning to break down the Gate. The Cardinals having notice of it from the Biſhop of Marſeilles, ſent the Cardinal de Aigreſeüille to ſpeak to the People, whom he could bring to no other Terms, but that they ſhould make Choice of a Roman, or an Italian, if they deſired to ſave their Lives. The Cardinal d' Aigreſeüille, having reported this to the Conclave, they deputed Cardinal Florentin, Dean of the ſacred College, to go and promiſe the People, they ſhould have Satisfaction. The Cardinal would not accept this Commiſſion, firſt, becauſe he judged it contrary to the Freedom they ought to have, and for Fear of being killed by the Romans, if they fail'd in the Performance of this Promiſe. The Cardinal d' Aigreſeüille, Dean of the Cardinal-prieſts, having taken him by the Hand, together with James des Urſini, Dean of the Cardinal-deacons, led him to the Gate of the Conclave; where they promiſed the People, that they were upon chooſing an Italian Cardinal. Being returned, they choſe in a Hurry Bartholomew Pregnano, Archbiſhop of Bari, not deſigning this Election ſhould ſtand: For the Ultramontanes had a Mind to a Pope which was no Italian, and the Italians were deſirous, that one of their Number ſhould be advanced to this Dignity, and not a Man who was not of the ſacred College. There was likewiſe ſome, who declared, That they made this Election againſt their Judgment, to avoid the Danger they were in, and with an Intention, that he whom they choſe, ſhould not be Pope. The Cardinal Florentin gave his Vote for the Cardinal of St. Peter, and James des Urſini refuſed to give his Voice. The Report being afterwards ſpread abroad, that the Archbiſhop of Bari was choſen Pope; the People miſtaking him for John of Bar a Frenchman, Chamberlain to the deceaſed Pope, began again their Tumults. The Cardinal of St. Peter having appear'd at the Window, ſome ſaid, It is the Cardinal of St. Peter, the common People ſuppoſing he had been choſen Pope, began to cry, Viva, viva Santo Pietro, and went away of that Opinion. But ſome time after, perceiving they did not open the Conclave, they returned with greater Violence, broke open the Gates of the Conclave, ſeized the Cardinals, plunder'd their Goods, demanding without Intermiſſion a Roman Pope, and ſome of the Domeſticks of the Cardinals having ſaid to them, Have you not the Cardinal of St. Peter, they took him, and arrayed him in pontifical Robes, placed him on the Altar, and worſhipped him, though he cried out, that he was not Pope,

The Hiſtory of the Schiſm of the Popes of Rome, &c.

The Hiſtory of the Schiſm of the Popes of Rome, &c.

Pope, neither would he be. The Cardinals eſcaped with great Difficulty. Some were ſtopt, and rudely handled; others were forced to diſguiſe themſelves: Some retreated to their Houſes, and others left the City, or betook themſelves to the Caſtle of St. Angelo. On the Morrow, the Archbiſhop of Bari choſen in the forementioned Manner, deſigned to be proclaimed; but ſeeing himſelf deſerted by the Cardinals, who would not own him, he told the Magiſtrates of Rome, they had done nothing, unleſs they re-aſſembled the Cardinals, to the Intent they might proclaim his Election, and put him in Poſſeſſion of the Holy See. The Magiſtrates having put this Order in Execution, they cauſed twelve or thirteen to meet, who proclaimed the Archbiſhop of Bari Pope, under the Name of Urban VI. cloathed him in the pontifical Habit, and gave him Poſſeſſion of the Holy See. On the 17th. of the ſame Month, which was Eaſter-day, he was crowned in Preſence of Cardinal des Urſini.

The Beginning of the Papacy of Urban VI.

Urban the VIth. was a Neapolitan: He had formerly been Archbiſhop of Otranto, from whence he was newly tranſlated to that of Bari, by Gregory XI. who alſo gave him Charge of the Apoſtolick Court of Chancery, in the Abſence of Cardinal de Pampelune, who remained at Avignon: He paſſed for an able Doctor of the Canon Law, and had the Repute of an humble, devout, honeſt Man, an Enemy to Simony, regular in his Morals, ſtudious, a Lover of Juſtice. The Cardinals caſt an Eye upon him, fancying, that he would not make an Advantage of this Election, thus carried on by Force; nevertheleſs it is apparent, that he had labour'd under-hand for this Dignity, and the News of his Election was no ſooner brought him, but he looked on himſelf as Pope, and gave Order to the Magiſtrates of Rome, to oblige the Cardinals to come together, to the end he might be acknowledged, and placed on the Throne. The next Day after his Coronation, the Cardinals who were at Rome, wrote to thoſe of Avignon, that they had choſen for Pope the Archbiſhop of Bari. We have their Letter in the tenth Tome of the Spicilegium; but at the ſame time the Cardinal d' Aigrefeüille, and ſome others, ſent private Notice to the King of Frante, and other Chriſtian Princes, that this Election was not valid, and they deſigned not, that Urban ſhould be owned as Pope. Nevertheleſs, whether out of Fear or Diſſimulation, they owned him at Rome, and obeyed him in Appearance: Perhaps likewiſe they would have practiſed nothing againſt him, and had left him in quiet Poſſeſſion of the Holy See, if he had treated them with Mildneſs; but Urban, who was naturally ſevere, would oblige the Prelates to reſide at their Benefices, reproved ſharply the Behaviour of the Cardinals, in a Speech he made in the Conſiſtory, a Fortnight after Eaſter, upbraided ſome in particular with their Carriage, which diſobliged them, and put them upon a Reſolution of chooſing a new Pope. Urban further drew upon himſelf the Anger of Otho Duke of Brunſwick, who had married Jane Queen of Sicily, after the Death of the Prince of Tarentum. This Queen at the firſt rejoyced very much at the Election of Urban, born her Subject; but Urban treated the Duke of Brunſwick with Diſdain, and refuſing to accept the Conditions of the Peace, which that Prince had negotiated by Order of Gregory XI. with the People of Tuſcany and Liguria, he loſt a Defender, which he had need of, conſidering the Poſture of his Affairs. He committed alſo another Fault, in taking from the Roaſtings the Government of the Caſtle of St. Angelo, of which they were in poſſeſſion, and which they refuſed to ſurrender to him; but on the contrary, declared againſt him. The thirteen Ultramontane Cardinals being diſſatisfied, withdrew from Rome one after another, in the Month of May, under pretence of avoiding the exceſſive Heat of the Summer, and reſorted to Anagnia. Urban then ſeeing himſelf deſerted, and plainly foreſeeing their Deſign, did all he could to oblige them to return; and that he might deal more kindly with them, he went as far as Tivoli, where the Italian and Ultramontane Cardinals held divers Conferences, and propoſed the calling of a Council, to prevent the Schiſm which was then hatching; but not being able to agree on the place, nor the Conditions, things remained in the ſame poſture. The Duke of Brunſwick was willing to intereſt himſelf in bringing Matters to an Agreement, and had effected it, if Urban would have conſented to the Marriage of Mary, the Heireſs of the Kingdom of Sicily beyond the Pharos, to the Marqueſs of Montferrat, his Kinſman; but this Pope, who had a Deſign this Kingdom ſhould fall to his Nephew Francis Pregnano, would not hearken to that Propoſition; and this made a perfect Quarrel between him and Otho, who no longer would intereſt himſelf in his Affairs, but forſook him, though without withdrawing from his Obedience. The Cardinals at Anagnia, before the doing any thing to provide for their Safety, cauſed the Lord Bernard de la Salle, with his Troops, to approach unto Viterbo, for to guard the ſacred College; the Romans attempting to way-lay them, as they marched by near Rome, were defeated, and the Troops arrived at Anagnia. When the Cardinals ſaw they were ſecure, they began to intimate unto Urban, that he had not been lawfully choſen, but by Force, as he himſelf very well knew; and by Conſequence he was an Intruder, and obliged to reſign the Popedom. Urban made Proteſtations to the contrary, and wrote a Letter to the Cardinals in the Name of all Chriſtians, wherein he aſſerts his Election to be Canonical, and exhorts the Earl of Fondi not to afford his Protection to thoſe revolted Cardinals. Wherefore the Cardinals ſeeing no Likelihood of his voluntary relinquiſhing the Papacy, on the ſecond Day of Auguſt, made a Declaration, in which they recite after what Manner the Archbiſhop of Bari was choſen, ſet forth, that he ought not to be acknowledged, as lawful Pope; and proteſt againſt whatever they have have done, and written about this Election. On the 9th. of the ſame Month, after having celebrated one Maſs of the Holy Ghoſt, they made an Award, wherein they declare, that the Archbiſhop of Bari ought to be looked on as excommunicate, an Uſurper, and a Tyrant. They made known this Sentence to the Kings, to the Univerſity of Paris, and to all Chriſtians. Urban perceiving there was no Hopes of an Accommodation, returned to Rome, where he made nine and twenty Cardinals. The old French Cardinals withdrew to Fondi, to proceed to the Choice of a new Pope. But that it might be leſs liable to Diſpute, they believed they ought to call thither the three Italian Cardinals, which remained (for the Cardinal of St. Peter was dead ſome Days before) Theſe three Cardinals, who had ſtood as Neuters, were retired to a Caſtle belonging to Cardinal Urſini. The Ultramontanes aſſured each of them in particular, that if he would come to them at Fondi, they would order it ſo, that he ſhould be choſen Pope: With theſe Hopes, they all departed and came to Fondi. Upon their Arrival, the Cardinals entred the Conclave on the 20th of September, and proceeded to the Election of a Pope. The Cardinal of Limoges gave his Voice firſt, becauſe the Cardinal of Florence, who was Dean of the ſacred College, had excuſed himſelf from giving the firſt Vote; he ſaid, That ſince the French were for a French Pope, and the Italians for an Italian, he judged it convenient to nominate one, which was neither French nor Italian; and thereupon he gave his Vote for Robert Cardinal of Geneva, by Nation a German, and would chooſe him for ſupreme Biſhop: All the Cardinals, except the three Italians, gave him their Votes: He took the Name of Clement VII. and was crowned on the 21ſt. of the ſame Month. He was Brother to Amedéus Earl of Geneva, had been Biſhop of Teroüane, and afterwards of Cambray, and made Cardinal by Gregory XIth. though not above thirty ſix Years of Age: He was quick, eloquent, active, fit for Buſineſs and Labour: Theſe Qualifications contributed to the Choice they made of his Perſon, but more, the Nobility of his Birth, whereby he was of Kin, and allied to the moſt potent Princes of Chriſtendom; which gave the Cardinals who choſe him, Ground to hope he would be owned without Difficulty, and that his Competitor Vrban would be forſaken by all the World; but God permitted not Matters to go thus; for Chriſtendom was divided, divers Kingdoms continued under the Obedience of Urban, and others acknowledged Clement; this cauſed a bloody Schiſm in the Church. Urban was in Poſſeſſion of Rome, but the Caſtle of St. Angelo was firm to Clement, and very much gall'd the Romans, who beſieged it, took it in Concluſion, and in part demoliſh'd it. Almoſt all the Cities of Tuſcany and Lombardy alſo owned Urban: Germany and Bohemia ſtuck to his Party; for that being at Tivoli, he had confirmed the Election of Wenceſlaus King of Bohemia, Son to the Emperor Charles, choſen King of the Romans in the Year 1376, Though his Predeceſſor Gregory XI. made a Scruple to approve it. Lewis King of Hungary likewiſe own'd him; and theſe two Princes ſent Ambaſſadors to Clement, and to the Cardinals, to repreſent that they ought to acknowledge Urban as legitimate Pope, and deſiſt from their Pretenſions: Clement having ill received them, provoked theſe two Princes, and confirmed them in the Reſolution to take Urban's Part: Poland, Pruſſia, Denmark, Swedland, and Norway, followed the Example of Germany. In England, the Envoys of the two Competitors having been heard in a Parliament held at Glouceſter, in the Beginning of the Reign of Richard the ſecond; the Election of Urban was approved, and that of Clement rejected. The Earl of Flanders, though a near Kinſman to Clement, yet ſo far declared againſt him, that he would not ſee the Cardinal, who was ſent to him on his behalf. Clement was acknowledged by France and Scotland, by the Dukes of Lorrain and Bar, by the Earls of Savoy and Geneva, and by Jane Queen of Naples; which yet hinder'd not many of her Subjects from adhering to the Party of Urban. He ſent Legates into all Parts to ſhew his Right. Cardinal de Groſſo was diſpatched to France, Cardinal Aigrefeüille to Germany and

The Hiſtory of the Schiſm of the Popes of Rome, &c.

The Cardinals withdraw to make another Election.

The Election of Clement VII.

The Diviſion of Chriſtian Princes on account of the two Popes elected.

The Hiſtory of the Schiſm of the Popes of Rome, &c.

Bohemia, Cardinal de Maleſicco into England and Flanders, and Cardinal Peter da Luxe to Spain, Portugal, and Navarre. He finding that Spain had declared for Urban, left not the place, but tarrying there, gained ſo much Ground by his Cunning, and Intrigues, that at length Clement was there acknowledged. This Pope, to re-inſtate the Cardinals, whom he had ſent as his Legates, nominated ſix of them in the Month of December, in the Year 1678. whereof two had been already named by Urban, and had refuſed to accept that Dignity. The Cardinal d' Aigreſeüille, Legate in Germany, found Winceſlaus, who ſucceeded his Father, who died that Year, altogether in the Intereſt of Urban, and could do nothing in favour of Clement. In France, King Charles V. who was a very wiſe and prudent Prince, that he might do nothing haſtily in a Buſineſs of this Conſequence, ſent ſome Perſons of his Privy Council unto the Cardinals, to know how Matters went, and to take an Oath of them, what they thought in their Conſcience of theſe two Elections. The Cardinals after having ſworn by the Body of JESUS CHRIST, proteſted, that they had been conſtrain'd by Violence to pretend the Election of the Archbiſhop of Bari, and that he, whom they had ſince choſen, was the true Pope. The King not as yet ſatisfied with this Declaration, was deſirous to diſcourſe ſome of the Cardinals, and having obliged them to come to the Caſtle of Vincent, together with the Prelates, and the Doctors of Divinity; the Matter being put in Debate, and maturely examined, it was at laſt concluded, that only the Election of Clement was valid, and that the King ought to acknowledge him; the which he did, and gave Intimation of it to all Chriſtian Princes his Allies.

Clement VII. retires to Avignon.

Nevertheleſs Clement left Fondi, and withdrew to the Caſtle of Spelongue near to Cajeta, from whence he went to Naples with the Cardinals; but the Neapolitans not being able to endure him, he bethought himſelf of going to Avignon, where he arrived in the Month of June in the Year 1379. His Departure wholly ruin'd his Affairs in Italy. The Caſtle of St. Angelo ſurrender'd, and what Succours he was able to afford to thoſe of his Party, were overborn by the Urbaniſts, who were the ſtronger. Urban joined the ſpiritual Arms to the temporal, to ſubdue them, and order'd Proceſs to be made againſt Queen Jane, the Earl of Fondi, the Urſini, and the other Favourers of Clement; and declared them to have forfeited their Eſtates, their Lands, their Goods, and their Dignities, and to be uncapable to enjoy them. He declared likewiſe Clement the Antipope, and his Cardinals Schiſmaticks, and deprived them of all Kinds of Dignities and Benefices. Clement on his part made uſe of the ſame Weapons againſt Urban, his Cardinals and Adherents. Theſe reciprocal Condemnations cauſed great Diſorders through all Chriſtendom, each of the two having their Partiſans, who made War one upon another, and endeavoured to deprive each other of the Benefices and Dignities obtain'd from the Pope, whom they acknowleded; inſomuch, that the Benefices were for a Booty, and ſeized by ſuch as found themſelves the ſtrongeſt: The Popes beſtowed them on thoſe that ſued for them, though undeſerving, and being not yet of Age, only to enlarge the Number of their Creatures, or elſe they ſold them to ſupply their Wants. Impunity reigned every where; there was no ſuch thing as Order or Obedience, and the Church was in a dreadful Confuſion.

Wars in Italy, between Lewis Duke of Anjou, & Charles de Duras.

Italy was the Part of the World which ſuffered the moſt; becauſe this was the Place where the Partiſans of the two Popes had moſt Liberty. Urban, to make himſelf ſole Maſter, and to put in Execution the Judgment he had given againſt Queen Jane, gave away her Kingdom to Charles Duke of Duras, a Kinſman of the Queen's, and called him out of Hungary, where he then was, to come and take the Poſſeſſion: When he had arrived at Rome, he crowned him King of Sicily, after he had obliged him to give the Dutchies of Capua and Melphi to him, and divers other Earldoms to his Nephew Francis Pregnano, ſirnamed Butillo. But becauſe this Prince wanted Money to undertake an Enterprize ſo conſiderable, as was the Conqueſt of the Kingdom of Sicily, the Pope pawn'd the Goods of the Churches in the City of Rome, and ſold the Chalices, Croſſes, and the other Ornaments, to make up a round Sum, which he gave him. Queen Jane to ſet up a Power capable to ſupport her againſt the Attempts of Urban, made a Gift of her Eſtates to Lewis Duke of Anjou, and exhorted him to come ſpeedily to her Relief. Nevertheleſs, Charles of Duras, with ſome Troops, entred the Kingdom of Naples, made himſelf Maſter of that City, ſurprized Otho the Husband of Jane by Treachery, and took him Priſoner; and at laſt having ſtorm'd Chaſteau-neuf, whither the Queen was retired, with her Siſter Mary, he made her Priſoner of War, and ſome time after order'd her to be ſtrangled. Clement on his part importun'd the Duke of Anjou to paſs into Italy; the which at length he reſolved, and parted from France with a conſiderable Army, in the Year 1382. to conquer the Kingdom of Sicily; he marched croſs Lombardy, and inſtead of going directly to Rome, to ſeize the Perſon of Urban, he paſſed into the Kingdom of Naples; and with the Aſſiſtance of two German Commanders, whom he found in this Country, he made himſelf Maſter of ſeveral Towns in Apulia; whilſt that Charles, who tarried at Naples, fortified the Places that were left him, and lengthned out the War, that he might waſte the Duke of Anjou's Army. He ſucceeded in that Deſign. This Prince's Troops were ſo weaken'd by Scarcity and Sickneſs, that they could undertake nothing: His Money fell ſhort, and at laſt he died, either by a Diſeaſe, or by Poiſon, on the 20th. of September, in the Year 1384. at Bari.

The Hiſtory of the Schiſm of the Popes of Rome, &c.

Urban arreſted by Charles de Durac, and forced to retire to Genoa.

Urban ſome time before had paſſed into the Kingdom of Naples, either to prevent an Agreement between Charles, and the Duke of Anjou, or to put his Nephew in poſſeſſion of the Dutchies of Capua and Melphi. Charles went to receive him near Averſa, and a while after cauſed him to be arreſted, and brought to Naples into the New Caſtle, where he permitted him to give Audiences, and kept him under Confinement: But the Cardinals being employed to make up this Breach, Charles asked the Pope's Pardon, and allowed him Liberty to go forth of the Caſtle, and to abide near the Cathedral Church. Sometime after, the Wantonneſs of Urban's Nephew, who deflowered a Nun, led him to renew the Quarrel Charles had with the Pope; becauſe Charles was obliged to bring him to Puniſhment for this Crime. But the Pope upheld his Nephew, ſtopt the Execution of the Sentence, and obliged Charles to give his Nephew Seventy thouſand Florins, for the Revenues of his Dutchies, together with the Caſtle of Luceria, whither he retired with part of his Court, reſolving there to paſs the Winter, in hopes that he ſhould ſoon make himſelf Maſter of Naples; for he deſigned to revenge himſelf for the Injury Charles had done him, and to deprive him of his Kingdom, truſting to the Correſpondence he had with ſome Neapolitans. On the other Side, Cardinal Reatino, and ſome others in Naples, combined againſt him, and put out a Manifeſto, importing, That if the Pope neglected the Government, or were not fit for it, or adhered too much to his own Senſe, and would rule abſolutely, without adviſing with the Cardinals, they had Right to nominate Overſeers, by whoſe Counſel all things ſhould be managed. Urban having had notice of this Project, order'd ſix of theſe Cardinals to be arreſted, and created hereupon divers others, either Germans or Neapolitans. Theſe ſix Cardinals were put into Dungeons, loaded with Chains, and often examined by the Rack. Charles incenſed with theſe Attempts of Urban, who had begun to proceed againſt him, beſieged the Caſtle of Luceria; but Urban eſcaped with his Followers, carrying along with him the Cardinals Priſoners, and having reached to a Sea-port, embarked in the Gallies of Genoa; he ſailed to Palermo, and from thence to Genoa, where he put to Death five of the arreſted Cardinals, having granted the Cardinal of St. Cecily his Life, at the Requeſt of Richard King of England, after degrading him, and depriving him of all his Benefices and Dignities. Theſe Cruelties alienated the Minds of many from the Affection they had to Urban; two of his Cardinals, the one named Pileus de Prato, Archbiſhop of Ravenna, and the other, Galeo de Petra-mala withdrew to Clement, who received them, and confirmed them in their Dignities.

Clement owned by the Kings of Caſtile and Arragon, attempts to raiſe Money in France.

While theſe things paſſed in Italy, Clement made himſelf to be owned by the Kings of Caſtile and Arragon, who having, at the Inſtance of the King of France, made Inquiry at Avignon, concerning the Elections of the two Competitors, underſtood that of Urban to be void, becauſe made by Force, and on the contrary, that of Clement to be legitimate and canonical; but becauſe he wanted Money to ſupport his Dignity, and could raiſe it no where but in France, he ſent the Abbot of St. Nicaſius of Rheims, to levy Half the Revenues of the Benefices. The Clergy could not bear this Exaction, the Univerſity of Paris complained thereof to the King, who ſent for the Abbot of St. Nicaſius, order'd him to depart the Kingdom, ſtopped all the Revenues of the Benefices, to be imployed one Third upon Reparations, another Third to defray incident Charges, and the Remainder for the Subſiſtence of the Clergy: He likewiſe deputed Arnold of Corbie, firſt Preſident of Paris, to go to Avignon; there to lay open the Injuſtice of this Demand; ſo that Clement and his Cardinals were forced to be content without this Supply.

The Death of Charles Duras and Urban VI.

In the Year 1385. Charles of Duras being gone into Hungary, to be proclaimed King, as next Heir to the Crown; he was there murdered in the Month of January, in the Year following. At the ſame time Otho eſcaped out of Priſon, and came to Sicily, from whence he paſſed into Apulia, and made himſelf Maſter of Naples; having driven out Margaret the Relict of Charles Duras, who made her Eſcape with her two Children to Cajeta.

Urban

The History of the Schism of the Popes of Rome, &c.

Urban went from Genoa to Perusia, where he tarried a full Year. The Germans proposed to him an Agreement with Clement, but he would not hearken thereto; some time after, he took up a Resolution to return into Sicily, and being on the Way thither, his Mule fell down and wounded him desperately. He caused himself to be carried to Tivoli, with a Design to proceed on his Journey; but being in no Condition to do it, he was conveyed to Rome, where he died, in the Month of October, in the Year 1389.

The Election of Boniface IX. by the Roman Cardinals.

The Death of this Pope rendred the Peace of the Church more easy to be brought about, if the Cardinals in Italy would have forborn to make another Election; but on the contrary, being met in the Conclave presently after the Death of Urban, they chose on the second of November, Cardinal Peter de Thomacellis, a Neapolitan, who called himself Boniface IX. and was acknowledged by those, who had obeyed Urban. Boniface augmented the Revenues considerably, and the temporal Authority of Popes, and heaped together great Riches in the time of his Papacy, If we may credit Thierri of Niem, a contemporary Author, one of his Domesticks; he made a publick Merchandize of Benefices at the Beginning of his Popedom, and afterwards willing to palliate it, he, the first, settled the Annates, that is to say, the Right of receiving the first Year's Revenues of Bishopricks and Abbies which became vacant, and the Dates for all Sorts of Benefices void by Death, which he granted to different Persons at the same Time for Money; he revoked all Grants of Reversions, to make new ones, invented particular Clauses of Provisions, which annull'd all the former; he granted all Sorts of Dispensations and Pardons for Money: His Court was full of apostate Monks, whom he made his Officers, or provided of Imployments and Benefices. For Money he gave Licence to the Friars-mendicants, to quit their Order and Convent, and to enjoy Benefices. He fully settled the sovereign and immediate Dominion of the Popes over the City of Rome: He reduced Perusia, Viterbo, Montefiasco, and several other Towns and Castles, under the Power of the Popes; rebuilt the Castle of St. Angelo, and restored the Capitol. He imposed many Tributes and Taxes, and had a Troop of regular Guards. He re-instated some Cardinals, whom his Predecessor had degraded, and among others the Cardinal of St. Cecily. The Cardinal Pileus de Prato, who had deserted his Predecessor, and went to Clement, came to wait on him, and was nick-named, The Cardinal with three Caps. He crowned the King of Sicily, Ladislaus Son of Charles Duras, after he had given Absolution both to him, and his Mother and Sister, from the Censures thunder'd out against him by Urban.

Lewis Duke of Anjou, crowned King of Sicily, by Clement.

Clement on the other Side, crowned King of Sicily, Lewis the Duke of Anjou, in the Presence of Charles VI. who was come to Avignon, to give his Holiness a Visit, and proceeded against Boniface, as an Usurper of the Holy See. Lewis Duke of Anjou, newly crowned, marched with a good Number of Troops into the Kingdom of Naples, was received into that City; and after having secured the principal Places of the Country, he returned to Provence. Upon his Departure, Ladislaus entring the Kingdom with a powerful Army, led by Alberic Barbiane, expelled thence all such as took part with the Duke of Anjou.

The Advice of the University for taking away the Schism.

The University of Paris, highly concerned at these Disorders, occasioned by the Schism, and the Attempts which Pope Clement made upon the Liberties of the Gallican Church, petitioned the King, that he would apply some Remedy to these Evils. A while after, two Monks of the Order of Carthusians, going to Rome to wait on Boniface, exhorted him so vehemently to Peace, that they drew from him a Letter directed to the King, wherein he encourages his Majesty to set about the Work, offering on his part to contribute thereto. Clement having notice of this Negotiation, was forthwith for the arresting of these two Carthusians; but the King having taken them into his Protection, he pretended likewise he was for Peace, and ordered publick Prayers to be made upon this Occasion. He sent at the same time into France, Cardinal Peter de la Lune. He was no sooner arrived there, but the University began afresh their earnest Suit to the King for the Peace of the Church; to which his Majesty declared the means ought to be sought out. For this purpose, a Meeting of the University was appointed, wherein they gave their Opinions by way of Scrutiny, and the greater Part was of this Judgment, that the Methods of yielding, and Arbitration would be the surest to put an End to the Differences between the two Popes. The University having made known his Resolution to the Cardinal-Legate, he answered them roughly; and forbid them for the time to come to use any the like Discourses. The Pope to appease them, desired the King to send to him Peter d' Ailly, and Giles des Champs, Doctors of Divinity, of great Repute; but they refused to go to him. The Legate engaged the Duke of Berry in the Interests of Clement; he declared against the University, and put a Stop to their Prosecutions: They had Recourse to the Duke of Burgundy, who procured them Audience from the King, to whom they presented a Letter; wherein they most humbly besought him to consider seriously of the Peace of the Church; representing to him, that the University had thought of three principal Means of compassing it; first, the Way of Cession, that each of the Competitors should recede from all Right. A second, the Way of Arbitration, whereby they should refer their Right to Persons nominated by themselves, or others, who might absolutely decide their Differences. The third is, the calling of a general Council; declaring, that if either of the Competitors accepted not of one of these three Expedients, he should be looked on as a Promoter of Schism. And as to what might be demanded touching the last Article, which gives Authority to a general Council; the University answers, that it is the Consent of all the Faithful, and the Words of JESUS CHRIST in the Gospel, whereby he promises to them, who shall meet together in his Name, the Assistance of his Holy Spirit. The King attended by several Princes, the Patriarch of Alexandria, and a great Number of other Prelates, received this Letter, heard it read, commanded it should be translated into French, and told the University, he would answer them in a little time; but Peter de la Lune prevailed so much, by his Credit, that the King alter'd his Resolution; insomuch, that when they returned, the Chancellor was ordered to tell them from the King, That his Majesty had no further Intention to pursue this Affair; and gave them a Prohibition to make any mention of it, upon pain of Disobedience. The University dissatisfied, gave the Chancellor to understand in presence of the Legate, who went back again soon after, That they would leave off their Exercises, and Preaching: They wrote at the same time to Clement, what they had resolved in their Convocation, touching the Union of the Church. The Pope having received this Letter, was therewith very much offended, and would send no Answer by the Messenger of the University. The Cardinals met together, without the Pope's Leave, who sent to them, and upbraided them therewith. They answer'd him, that they had seen, and examined the Letter of the University, and that one of the three Ways which they proposed, ought of Necessity to be chosen, if he aim'd at the Union of the Church. Clement conceived so great a Grief at these Proposals, that he fell sick, and died of an Apoplexy on the 16th. of September, in the Year 1394. By his Death ended the Male Line of the Earls of Geneva; which had never before happened in that Family. Imbert de Villars, Son of Clement's Sister, succeeded in the Earldom of Geneva.

The History of the Schism of the Popes of Rome, &c.

The Death of Clement VII.

The Election of Benedict XII. at Avignon, in spite of the King of France.

As soon as the King of France was informed of the Death of Clement, he called his Council together, who gave it as their Opinion, that it was fit for the Good of the Church, the King should write to the College of Cardinals, to supersede the Election, till they understood his Mind by a special Ambassador. The King of Arragon wrote to the same Effect. The University of Paris took this Opportunity to beseech the King to interpose for putting off the Election, till it were agreed on, what Method might be taken to settle Union; to call an Assembly of the most famous Universities in his Kingdom, and the Magistrates of Cities, to provide for it; to write to Boniface then at Rome, and to the Chief of his Party, to oblige them to accept these Methods of Union, and to give Leave to the University to write to other Universities. The King yielded to their Requests, and signified to them that he was displeased with the Intermission of their publick Lectures and Sermons, and order'd them to begin them again; which was done accordingly. The same Day the King called his Council together, in which it was resolved, that two Ambassadors should be sent to Avignon. Nevertheless, the Cardinals met to proceed to the Choice of a Pope, and entred into the Conclave, to the Number of One and twenty, on the twenty sixth of September: They received the King's first Letter before the Election; but suspecting, what were the Contents, they resolved not to open it till the Choice were over. Nevertheless, before they entred upon it, they drew an Instrument, which they all subscribed; whereby they promised and swore, that they would all use their Endeavours for Union; and that whoever of them were chosen Pope, should procure it, by all Kinds of Ways, even by that of Cession, or Resignation; if it were judged most convenient by the major Part of the Cardinals. After this Protestation, they chose on the 28th of the same Month, Peter de la Lune, Native of Arragon, Cardinal-Deacon of the Title of St. Mary in Cosmedin, Pope, who was named Benedict XII. or XIII. ordain'd Priest by by the Cardinal of Præneſte on the 3*d.* of October, and crown'd by the Biſhop of Oſtia, on the 11*th.* of the ſame Month. He was no ſooner advanced to this Dignity, but he took a Reſolution to keep it, and acted as one that would continue always Pope. Nevertheleſs, to ſhew that he deſired Peace, he ſent to the King of France, the Biſhop of Avignon and Peter Plan, to acquaint him with his Election, and to add, that he accepted the Papacy very unwillingly, and that he was ready to procure the Peace of the Church, by all Methods which ſhould be judged reaſonable. The Univerſity ſent Deputies to him to exhort him to Union; to whom he made Anſwer, That he was as ready to reſign, as he was to put off his Cope; which he immediately pull'd off. He made the ſame Anſwer to Peter d' Ailly, Envoy from the King; ſo that in all likelihood, it would not be his Fault if the Schiſm were not ſoon ended.

The Hiſtory of the Schiſm of the Popes of Rome, &c.

The Aſſembly of the Prelates of France, which were for the way of Ceſſion.

Charles the VI. appointed a Meeting of the Prelates of his Kingdom. It was there concluded unanimouſly, that the Reſignation of the two Antagoniſts was the beſt Expedient, utterly to aboliſh the Schiſm; and to effect this, the King ſent to Benedict an honourable Embaſſy, conſiſting of his Uncles, John Duke of Berry, and Philip Duke of Burgundy, and his Brother Lewis Duke of Orleans, accompanied with the Biſhops of Senlis, Poictiers, and Arras, and ſeveral Lords, to whom it was given in Charge to demand this Reſignation, as the moſt proper Way to ſettle the Peace of the Church. Benedict received them with due Reſpect; but anſwer'd not their Propoſal, but in general Terms, and offered himſelf another Expedient, which was, that the two Competitors ſhould come to a ſafe Place, near the Kingdom of France, under Protection of the King; and there the two Colleges of Cardinals being aſſembled ſhould ſearch into Ways of Accommodation. The Ambaſſadors rejected this Offer, and inſiſted upon yielding up their Right. All the Cardinals, except Cardinal de Pampelune, were for the Ceſſion. The Pope ſtood firm, and after ſeveral Conferences, ſet out a Bull, by which he declared his Reſolution to meet his Adverſary, and his College in an unintereſted Place, to find out a Way of Accommodation; and in caſe this could not be done, he was ready to embrace all reputable and juſt Ways to terminate this Difference, provided God and the Church be not therewith offended. The Ambaſſadors not ſatisfied with this Anſwer, had a Meeting in the Convent of the Cordeliers, or Grey-Friars at Avignon, where eighteen Cardinals met the Delegates of the Univerſity of Paris, who all declared for the Ceſſion. The Cardinals exhorted Benedict thereto; but he perſiſted in his Reſolution, and forbad them to ſign the Inſtrument, which the French Ambaſſadors had preſented, or to hearken to any other Propoſal, than what he had made. The Ambaſſadors and Cardinals made him yet freſh Petitions, to bring him over to this Way of yielding; but 'twas all to no Purpoſe, and the Ambaſſadors went away without obtaining it. The King zealouſly deſiring to procure the Union of the Church, was not diſcouraged by this Refuſal, and reſolved according to the Advice of the Univerſity, to ſend Ambaſſadors to other Chriſtian Kings and Princes, that they would joyn with him to procure a Union. The Univerſity very hot in this Quarrel, publiſhed an Act of Appeal concerning all which might be tranſacted by Benedict and his Adherents, to the next only, true and univerſal Pope, or to the Apoſtolick Holy See. Benedict ſet forth a Bull againſt this Act; notwithſtanding which, the Univerſity renewed their Appeal, and anſwer'd to Benedict's Bull, that many Popes had been rejected, or depoſed; that Popes have corrected one the other, and revoked the Decrees of their Predeceſſors, as Clement V. had revoked the Decretal of Boniface VIII. againſt which the King, the Lords and Prelates of the Kingdom had likewiſe brought an Appeal. This ſecond Act of Appeal being come to the Cogniſance of Benedict, he publiſhed a new Bull; wherein he excommunicated all ſuch as ſhould appeal from him or his Succeſſors. The Univerſity continuing their Proſecution, met at Mathunins, and declared afreſh the Way by Ceſſion to be the beſt. Seventeen Cardinals wrote likewiſe to the King, that they approved of this Expedient. While theſe Things paſſed in France, the Ambaſſadors, whom the King had diſpatched to all the Courts of Chriſtendom, perſuaded the greater part of the Princes, that the Way taken in France,

An Act of Appeal by the Univerſity.

A Subſtraction from the Obedience of both the Contenders delared and publiſh'd in France.

to put an end to the Schiſm, was the beſt and the ſureſt; ſo that they joyned their earneſt Deſires to thoſe of the King of France, to oblige the two Competitors to conſent to it.

The Univerſity finding Benedict to remain obſtinate in his Opinion, propoſed to the King, the withdrawing of Obedience. The King after he had waited a while, aſſembled the Prelates and Univerſities of this Kingdom to conſult upon this Matter. The Meeting was held the 22*d.* of May, in the Year 1398. The King falling ſick, could not be preſent; but the Dukes of Berry, Burgundy, Orleans and Bourbon; in whoſe Preſence the Patriarch of Alexandria recounted the Story of the Schiſm from its beginning, ſhewed, that Benedict had ſworn before his Election, that he would do his utmoſt for Peace, coming even up to the Way of Ceſſion: He ſet forth all the King had done to procure the Peace of the Church, and the Oppoſition made by Benedict. He declared, That the Way of Ceſſion had been approved, not only by the King of France, but moreover, by the Kings of Hungary, Bohemia, England, Arragon, Caſtile, Navarre and Sicily; and concluded, That it was the Intention of the King to purſue this Way, and to procure Union by this Means. The Biſhop of Maſcon, ſeconded by ſix Doctors, ſpake there for Benedict. The Queſtion was debated for eight Hours, and the Aſſembly adjourn'd to the Month of July. The Opinions were divided; ſome gave it for a general Subſtraction, others for a particular, in what concern'd the Donation of Benefices. Some maintain'd, That ſuch as obeyed Boniface, ought to do the ſame on his Account. The Princes propounded yet once more to give Benedict Notice, before they came to this Extremity. The Archbiſhop of Tours, the Biſhop of Puy, and the Univerſity of Tholouſe were againſt the Subſtraction; which nevertheleſs was followed by the greater Number. The King being recovered, made the Opinions to be counted up to him, and judged they ought to comply with the major Part, and gave Order to the Chancellor to publiſh the Subſtraction. The Chancellor made Report of the King's Reſolution to the Aſſembly, and declared, That they ſhould wholly withdraw themſelves from the Obedience of Benedict, till he accepted the Way of Ceſſion; nevertheleſs, that it was not the King's Intent, the Gallican Church ſhould be deprived of her ancient Liberties. The Sunday following, there was a ſolemn Proceſſion to St. Genevieve, where the Subſtraction was publiſhed by Giles de Champs, who then preached; after that, the Chancellor ordered Letters of Subſtraction, dated the 27*th* of July, wherein the King, after having laid open his earneſt Endeavours to purchaſe the Peace of the Church, and the Refuſal of Benedict to perform his Oath, he declares, That he ordered not the Subſtraction, till he had communicated it to the Chriſtian Princes, who had agreed to the Way of Ceſſion; That the King of Caſtile, likewiſe had already put it in Execution; That this Proceeding was neither extraordinary, nor without Precedent; That many Clergymen for leſs Cauſe, had renounced Communion with Anaſtaſius; That Guy Archbiſhop of Vienna, who was after Calixtus II. with his Prelates of the Council of Vienna, had reſolved to withdraw their Obedience from Pope Paſchal II. That for greater Reaſon under the preſent Circumſtances, where there was a notorious Scandal, a Schiſm formed and fomented by the Ambition of two Competitors, it was ſeaſonable to apply this Remedy. Upon this Ground he declares, That himſelf, the Church, the Clergy, and the People of his Kingdom, do wholly withdraw from the Obedience of Benedict, and his Adverſary, of whom he ſaid nothing, becauſe he never had obeyed him; and enjoins his Subjects not to obey him, nor pay any thing to him, Orders, that henceforward Benefices, which are elective, ſhall be ſupplied by way of Election, and others by the Gift of the Ordinaries, to whom the filling of them up does of right belong. And as to the Benefices held by the Adherents, or Partiſans of the Competitors, the Ordinaries ſhould hold them in Commendam, till they can be canonically provided for.

The Hiſtory of the Schiſm of the Popes of Rome, &c.

i. e. Withdrawing Obedience to the Pope.

The ſame Day the King wrote to the Cardinals, to inform them what he had done, and to exhort them to joyn with him in the Execution of this good Work. He likewiſe publiſhed other Letters, wherein he declared, That he intended not during this Subſtraction, to enrich himſelf with the Advantages, Profits, and other Dues which the Popes, or their Officers, are accuſtomed to take; he diſcharged the Collectors of them, and ordered, That the Elections, Demands, and Grants of Benefices, ſhould be gratuitous, and without Charge. He enjoined the Apoſtolick Notaries to ſet down the Dates of Acts, which ſhould paſs for the Future, in theſe Words, Ab electione Domini Benedicti ultimo in Papam electi anno, &c. and not, Anno Pontificatus Domini noſtri Papæ, &c. The Abby of St. Denys becoming vacant at this Time, the Monks aſſembled by the King's Leave, choſe Philip de Villette, whoſe Election was confirmed by the Biſhop of Paris, and the ſame Thing was practiſed in other elective Benefices. The Kings of Caſtile and Navarre, the Queen of Sicily, and many other Princes, and free Towns followed the Example of France, and decreed likewiſe the Subſtraction, and eighteen Cardinals alſo made an Act of the like Subſtraction. Benedict not being able to make them alter their Reſolution by his Cenſures, deſign'd to order them to be arreſted; they withdrew to Villa-nova in the King's Dominions, and called Mareſchal Boucicaut to their Aſſiſtance, who beſieged ed Benedict in his Caſtle of Avignon. The Brother of Benedict defended himſelf valiantly, and at length the Siege was raiſed by a Treaty, and the Priſoners on both Sides releaſed. The Cardinals of Poictiers, Tury, and Saluces came to wait on the King, to deſire him in the Name of the ſacred College, to ſeize into his Hands the Perſon of Benedict, to cauſe that the Princes under the Obedience of Boniface, might likewiſe make a Subſtraction, and a General Council be held: They beſought him alſo to adviſe the King of Arragon, not to afford any Succour nor retreat to Benedict, to maintain them in their Rights, to order their Penſions to be paid them, to ſecure to their Followers the Benefices promiſed them before the Subſtraction, not to diſpoſe of the Dignities, which ſhould become vacant till one only Pope were choſen, and to reſerve the Revenues of them for defraying the Charges, which muſt ariſe in the Proſecution of the Union. The Chancellor gave Anſwer to the Cardinals, That the King had reſolved to hold an Aſſembly, on the 20*th.* of February, wherein he would take Advice about their Demands: But there was no further Mention made of them; and the King very backward in arreſting Benedict, ordered Mareſchal Baucicaut, not to proſecute the War againſt him; and only to take care, that he went not out of Avignon, with the Treaſure of the Church. Nevertheleſs, Cardinal Pampelune, and another named Boniface, who remained faithful to Benedict, deſigning to make their Eſcape in Diſguiſe, were arreſted by Baucicaut, who put them into ſuch a harſh Priſon, that one of them died there, and the other, after having ſuffered very much, was forced to pay a great Ranſom.

The Hiſtory of the Schiſm of the Popes of Rome, &c.

Though the King had ordered his Troops to withdraw, Benedict was under a continual Diſtruſt of the Cardinals, and the Inhabitants of Avignon; which made him reſolve to promiſe the King's Ambaſſadors, that in caſe the Uſurper (Boniface) ſhould reſign, die, or be expell'd, he would reſign; that they might proceed to the Choice of a third Perſon, on Condition the King would put a ſtop to the Actions of thoſe of Avignon, and the Cardinals, promiſing he would diſarm his Party: He further engaged to be preſent at the Aſſembly to be held for the Union of the Church, in caſe the King would grant him his Protection for an hundred Perſons of his Retinue, and furniſh them with Neceſſaries, not hereby at all to prejudice the Subſtraction, which he had publiſhed. When Benedict had ſworn to obſerve theſe Articles, the Ambaſſadors of the King delivered to him the Patent, by which he took him under his Protection, and put him into the Cuſtody of the Archbiſhop of Narbonne, the Preſidents of Beauvais and Provence, and two other Lords, and obliged the Cardinals, and People of Avignon, to promiſe, that they would make no Manner of Attempt upon either the Perſon, or Goods of Benedict. upon Condition he would diſarm, and order the Gariſon that was in the City to march out. Benedict not thinking thoſe named for his Guard ſtrong enough to defend him; demanded, That the King would conſent to give him the Duke of Orleans: But his Majeſty judged it not fit to ſend his Brother ſo far off, and permitted him only to name the Guards under his Authority, to defend the Perſon of Benedict. The King foreſeeing that, the Year following, which was the Year 1400. the Jubilee might draw many of his Subjects to Rome, who would carry Money thither, forbad them to go, and confirmed the Decree of Subſtraction, and the voiding all Grants of Benefices in Reverſion.

The Subſtraction taken off on certain Conditions

The Princes of Germany, and the King of Arragon, agreed not to the Subſtraction, nor to the Way of Ceſſion; and in France it ſelf the Duke of Orleans diſapproved it; and maintain'd ſtrongly againſt the Dukes of Berry and Burgundy, that the Schiſm was more tolerable, than to have no Pope at all; and that it was great Injuſtice to keep Benedict in Confinement. The Univerſity of Paris preached up the contrary; but that of Tholouſe was of the ſame Opinion with the Duke of Orleans, and declared themſelves to the King againſt the Subſtraction. The Ambaſſadors of Caſtile complain'd of the Reſtraint of Benedict, and the Subſtraction; and the Biſhop of S. Pons ſpake of it to the King with freedom. The Cardinals altered their Judgment about the Subſtraction, and bethought themſelves of being reconciled to Benedict. Lewis of Anjou King of Sicily, declared likewiſe for him, ſwore Obedience to him, and promiſed him his Aſſiſtance. In fine, Benedict found Means to eſcape from the Caſtle of Avignon, and ſet himſelf at Liberty; after which he reconciled himſelf to the Cardinals, reduced the People of Avignon to Obedience, and at laſt ſent to the King of France, the Cardinals of Poictiers and Saluces, to put him upon revoking the Subſtraction. They had Audience of the King on the 15*th.* of May 1403. in which the Cardinal of Poictiers being Spokeſman, repreſented to the King, That the Subſtraction had brought no good to the Church; That the Cardinals had cloſed with it, only for Peace ſake, and having found it of no uſe, they were reunited to their Head; That his Majeſty ought to do the ſame upon the Aſſurance, that Benedict gives way for all Things to be done, which the King and his Council ſhould judge fit. The King made Anſwer, That he was about calling the Biſhops of his Kingdom, to conclude, what is to be done. The Agents of the Univerſities of Orleans, Angers, Montpellier and Tholouſe, were of the Cardinals Mind; and ſaid, That they never had approved of the Subſtraction. That of Paris was divided by the Contentions of the great Lords who were of different Parties. Cardinal Turi, Cramault Patriarch of Alexandria, and ſome Biſhops, who took Part with the Dukes of Berry and Burgundy, oppoſed the Diſannulling of the Subſtraction. The others ſiding with the Duke of Orleans, purſued with heat the Reſtitution of Obedience. This Prince to effect it, aſſembled on the 28*th.* of May, the Prelates and the Univerſity in the Hoſpital of St. Paul, where the King reſided, and having collected their Votes in the Abſence of the Dukes of Berry and Burgundy; he found, that thoſe, who were for the Reſtitution of Obedience, were the major Part: He went forthwith together with ſome Prelates to inform the King thereof, and engaged him to declare himſelf of this Opinion, and to ſwear an intire Reſtitution of Obedience to Benedict. The Dukes of Berry and Burgundy, were at firſt diſſatisfied with what had paſſed; but the former of the two next Day came over, having ſeen the Articles, which the Duke of Orleans promiſed the Pope ſhould perform: To effect this Reſtitution of Obedience with ſome kind of Order, on the 30*th.* of the ſame Month, he contrived an Aſſembly of the Prelates, and other Clergymen in the Manſion-Houſe of the Duke of Berry, where the Chancellor, in Preſence of the Dukes of Berry and Burgundy, laid open what had paſſed, the Reſolution which the King had taken, and the Articles which Monſieur the Duke of Orleans had undertaken to oblige Benedict to comply with; which were, 1. To conſent to a Ceſſion, in caſe his Adverſary did the ſame, happened to die, or were expelled. 2. To revoke all he had done againſt the Way of Ceſſion, and the Proceſſes made upon Occaſion of the Subſtraction. 3. To confirm all the Grants and Promotions made during the Subſtraction. 4. To call a General Council for the Peace of the Church, and the moderating the Impoſitions which the Court of Rome levies upon the Gallican Church, according to the Judgment of Perſons, whom the King ſhall ſend thither for that Purpoſe. The Chancellor demanded of the Aſſembly, if there were any Thing elſe to be added? The greater Part declared, They were ready to obey what the King had determined: Some few ſaid, They would firſt conſult with the Biſhops of their Provinces. Thereupon the King ſent to the Princes to come to him, and enjoined them to follow him to the Church of our Lady; whither he went accompanied with the Princes, and a great Number of Prelates and Deputies. He there heard Maſs ſaid by the Biſhop of Præneſte, and a Sermon preached by Peter d' Ailly, Biſhop of Cambray, who publiſhed by his Order, the Reſtitution of Obedience to Benedict; and the Articles which the Duke of Orleans promiſed he ſhould perform. The King the ſame Day ſign'd certain Letters Patents, by which he enjoyned all his Subjects to obey Benedict the XIIth. as they were wont to do preceding Popes; but theſe Letters were not regiſtred in Parliament, till the Month of June, in the Year following. The Univerſity being met, after ſome Debates, reſolved at laſt to do, as the King deſired, on Condition Benedict ſhould perform what he promiſed; but there lay the Difficulty, to make Benedict agree to it. Ambaſſadors were diſpatched to him for that Purpoſe, to whom he gave no poſitive Anſwer; and the Duke of Orleans himſelf going to him, was a long Time without being able to obtain any Thing of him; Inſomuch, that the King was forced on the 19*th.* of December, to ſet forth a Declaration, wherein he ordered all ſuch as had been provided of Benefices in his Kingdom during the Subſtraction, ſhould be maintain'd in Poſſeſſion without paying any Impoſition.

Propoſals of Union made to Boniface.

Nevertheleſs, Benedict, willing to make it appear that he was well inclined to the Peace of the Church, ſent to Rome in the Year 1404. the Biſhop of St. Pons, and other Ambaſſadors unto Boniface, to propoſe an Interview, together with their Cardinals, in a Place to be agreed on; to the Intent they might conſult of Means of Union, and procuring the Peace of the Church. The Cardinals of Boniface were very much inclined to hearken to this Propoſal; but Boniface received it with Diſdain, and anſwer'd theſe Ambaſſadors, That their Maſter was an Anti-Pope, with whom he would not treat. The Ambaſſadors, offended with this foul Language, which he gave them, told him, That their Maſter was no Simoniſt; thereby inſinuating the ſhameful Traffick Boniface made of Benefices. This Reply incenſed him, and he commanded them to depart from Rome; and theſe Ambaſſadors having made Anſwer, That they had a Paſſport, whoſe Date was not as yet expired, Boniface was enraged to that Degree, that he fell ſick, and died in three Days after, on the firſt of October. The Captain of the Caſtle of St. Angelo, a Kinſman to Boniface, arreſted the Ambaſſadors of Benedict, and ſuffered them not to depart, but at the Entreaty of the Cardinals, and upon the Payment of a great Ranſom, Theſe Ambaſſadors before they departed, conjured the Cardinals to forbear an Election, aſſuring them, that if they did it, they ſhould quickly hear good News from their Maſter, and that the Peace of the Church might eaſily be re-eſtabliſhed; but theſe Cardinals, without regarding their Demand, entred into the Conclave to chooſe a Succeſſor to Boniface, and on the 12*th*. of October, in the Year 1404. choſe Coſmatus Melioratus of Sulmo, Cardinal-Prieſt of the Title of the Holy Croſs of Jeruſalem, having taken an Oath, That whoever of them were elected Pope, he ſhould yield up the Papacy, to attain to a Union, in caſe that Peter de la Lune likewiſe renounced his Right. The new Pope took the Name of Innocent VII. He was very much croſſed in the beginning of his Papacy, by the Faction of the Gibelines, which were at Rome, who were deſirous to re-eſtabliſh the Freedom of their City, and reſtore the Government of it to Magiſtrates nominated by the People, as it had been practiſed, before they yielded it up to Boniface. The Guelphs on the contrary, maintained, That it was more advantageous for the People to be governed by the Church, than by the Citizens. This Quarrel occaſioned a Civil War in Rome. The Gibelines drew to their aid Ladiſlaus King of Apulia; who willing to make Advantage of this Opportunity, called upon the Pope to ſurrender the Temporal Dominion of the City of Rome, together with the Caſtles and Fortifications, to the Roman People. Innocent, to bring him over to his Side, gave him the Government of Campania, and made him Umpire of his Quarrel with the Gibelines; who ordered it ſo, that the Gibelines were put in Poſſeſſion of the Capitol, and the Government of the City yielded to the Magiſtrates, who were to be nominated by the Pope, to whom he reſerved the Bridges and the Gates, whereof he was in Poſſeſſion. After this Agreement, Innocent was crowned. The Peace laſted not long, for the Magiſtrates who governed the City of Rome, ſecretly encouraged by Ladiſlaus, who had a Mind to make himſelf Maſter of this City, made divers Attempts againſt the Pope contrary to the Treaty. The Nephew of Innocent, named Lewis Melioratus, to revenge himſelf, ſurrounded them one Day as they went out of Rome; and having taken them, put them to Death. This barbarous Action cauſed a general Revolt of the People, which obliged the Pope, the Cardinals and the whole Court forthwith to leave Rome, and eſcape to Viterbo. Ladiſlaus on his Part, preſently ſent an Earl to ſeize the ſupream Power of Rome; but the Romans would not ſuffer it, took up Arms to defend their Liberty, beſieged the Capitol, and in a ſhort Time drove out the Partiſans of this King, recalled Innocent, and received him gladly.

The Hiſtory of the Schiſm of the Popes of Rome, &c.

The Death of Boniface.

The Election of Innocent VI. at Rome, and his Actions.

Projects of Union between the two Adverſaries.

While theſe Things were acting in Italy, Benedict pretended continually to deſire Union, and offered, in order to obtain it, to go into Italy. He granted in ſhew to the King, the Propoſitions which the Duke of Orleans had made for him, who brought back Bulls in Manner and Form, which implied the Confirmation of them, in Conſequence of which, the King in the Month of June 1405. publiſhed a Declaration, whereby he confirmed afreſh the Reſtitution of the Obedience, and revoked his Patents of the 19*th*. of December, of the preceding Year: He alſo ſent to Benedict the Archbiſhop of Auſche, and the Archdeacon of Paris to aſſure him, in his Name, and the Name of the Queen, and the Dauphin his Son, of his Friendſhip. Some time after, Benedict took up a Reſolution to go to Genoa; but to enable him for this Journey, he levied the tenth Penny on the Revenues of the Gallican Church, and on the other Churches under his Obedience. The Univerſity of Paris zealouſly oppoſed him in it, and it alone was exempted. The King nevertheleſs, by his Letters Patents, of the 28*th*. of February, in the Year 1405. forbid the Payment of Firſt-fruits and other Impoſitions, which the Officers of Benedict levied in the Kingdom. Innocent on his part wrote into France, that it was not his Fault, that the Peace of the Church is not ſettled; that his Predeceſſor and he had never rejected the Way of Ceſſion; but that the Ambaſſadors of Benedict had never offered it. Ambaſſadors were ſent to him, who found him well enough inclined to Peace; nevertheleſs, Benedict paſſed into Italy, and came to Genoa, from whence he ſent Cardinal Challant Legate into France, to contradict the Deſign of the Princes, who had reſolved upon the Way of Ceſſion.

The Univerſity perceiving that Benedict acted not ſincerely for the Union, demanded the Subſtraction afreſh; that the Letter of thoſe of Tholouſe ſhould be condemned as injurious, and that the Gallican Church be delivered from the Exactions introduced by the Court of Rome. This Affair was referred to the Parliament of Paris, which by an Ordinance of the 17*th*. of July, 1406. condemned the Letter of the Univerſity of Tholouſe; and by a Second of the 11*th*. of September, the ſame Year, ordained, That for the Time to come, the Gallican Church ſhould be exempted from all Aids, Tenths, Procuration-Fees and other Inventions brought in by the Court of Rome. As to what concerned the Subſtraction, the Affair was put off to the Aſſembly of the Prelates of the Realm, which was called about Martlemas. Twelve Divines, and Canoniſts were named to defend the Right of the Pope, and as many on the Side of the Univerſity, to ſhew the Neceſſity of the Subſtraction: They diſputed a long Time Pro and Con before the Dauphin, the Princes, and the Lords of the Council. Several Queſtions were diſcuſſed there with heat, touching the Power and Attempts of Popes; and in fine, after many Debates, it was reſolved in the Council, That it was neceſſary to call a General Council, to reform the Church, as well in her Head, as her Members; and yet in the mean Time they would order a Subſtraction from the Obedience of Peter de la Lune, called Benedict; That the Church of France ſhould be reſtored to her ancient Liberties; and that for ſupplying of Benefices, it ſhould be done in the ſame Method, as during the Subſtraction, This was decreed on the 21*ſt*. of December, in the Year 1406.

The Hiſtory of the Schiſm of the Popes of Rome, &c.

The Univerſity procures the Subſtraction to be renewed.

At the ſame Time came the News of the Death of Innocent VII. who departed at Rome, the 6*th*. of November. The Cardinals under his Obedience, who were then preſent at Rome, to the Number of Fourteen, debated whether they ſhould proceed to, or put off the Election of a new Pope; but at laſt they concluded to chooſe one, upon Condition that he ſhould renounce the Papacy, as ſoon as his Adverſary ſhould do the like. The Ambaſſador of the Republick of Florence exhorted them to delay it: But they made Anſwer, That they could not do it, but that they would make him ſenſible who ſhould be choſen, that he had rather the Quality of a Proctor, to lay down the Papacy, than that of Supream Biſhop. And, indeed, they all ſigned an Inſtrument by which they obliged themſelves, that whoſoever of them ſhould be choſen, ſhould reſign the Papacy abſolutely and ſincerely, provided the Anti-Pope did the ſame Thing on his Part, and that the Anti-Cardinals would proceed in Conjunction with them, to the Choice of a new lawful Pope, and that ſoon after the Election, he ſhould write to the King of the Romans, to the Anti-Pope, and his College, to the King of France, and to other Princes, and People of Chriſtendom, that he was ready to recede for Peace ſake; and in the mean Time, while Endeavours were uſing to promote this Union, he would create no Cardinals. After they had ſigned this Writing, they choſe a Venetian called Angelus de Corario; who took the Name of Gregory XII. He wrote a civil Letter to Benedict, to exhort him to put an end to the Schiſm, by renouncing the Papacy, as he was ready to do on his part, to the Intent the Cardinals of the two Colleges, might with common Conſent chooſe a lawful Pope, ſignifying to him at the ſame Time, that he ſhould make no Cardinals, unleſs it were to equal the Number of thoſe of his College, on Condition he would not make any on his part. He wrote likewiſe to the ſame Effect unto all Chriſtian Princes. Benedict about the end of January, in the Year 1407. writ a very civil Anſwer to Gregory's Letter, wherein he ſignified to him his no leſs Deſire to procure Union and Peace; but before the making of a Ceſſion, he wiſhed, that the two Colleges might meet in one Place, to the end they might put in their Hands the Inſtrument of Renunciation. He promiſed him in Concluſion, to obſerve the Condition he had preſcribed him, to make no Cardinals. Gregory ſolemnly renewed his Promiſe on the Day of his Coronation, and ſent three Ambaſſadors to Benedict, namely, Anthony his Nephew, whom he made Biſhop of Bononia; Guilin Biſhop of Todi his Treaſurer, who was a Norman; and Anthony de Butrio, a Bononian Doctor of Law, to treat of the Method to put in Execution the propoſed Union: They agreed, That the two Antagoniſts ſhould meet in the Month of September, at Savona, with the Cardinals of both Colleges, to end this Buſineſs about Michaelmas; and they drew up a Form of a Treaty conſiſting of ſundry Articles.

The Death of Innocent VII. and Election of Gregory XII.

Propoſals of Peace between Gregory and Benedict.

The King of France ſends Ambaſſadors to procure the Peace of the Church.

While theſe Things were tranſacting between the two contending Popes, the King of France, having confirmed the Reſolution of the Aſſembly, ſettled the Elections, voided the Grants of Reverſions, the reſerved Rents, the Fees of Procuration, Firſt-fruits, and other Impoſitions of the Court of Rome, publiſhed on the 12*th.* of January, in the Year 1407. Letters Patents of Obedience to neither of the Competitors, if they yielded not up before Aſcenſion-Day; which were confirmed by a Declaration of the 18*th* of February, in the ſame Year. He nominated at the ſame Time ſeveral Perſons of Note, as well Laymen, as Churchmen, to attend Gregory and Benedict, and obliged them to make Peace. They conferred with the Ambaſſadors of Gregory at Aix, and having found them inclined to the Ceſſion; they went after that to Benedict, who made them an Harangue in Publick, wherein he promiſed to give up; but being preſſed to engage for the doing of it by a Bull, he refuſed it; ſo that the Ambaſſadors went away diſſatisfied, without making nevertheleſs any mention of the Subſtraction; ſome of them tarried at Marſeilles, others went unto Gregory to Rome, and ſome returned to the King, to make Report to him of what had paſſed. Nevertheleſs, the Ambaſſadors of Gregory being come to Paris, imparted to the King the good Intentions of their Maſter; and declared it ſhould not be his Fault, if the Union were not ſuddenly concluded. The King defray'd their Charges, during their ſtay at Paris, received them kindly, and diſmiſſed them with Letters to Gregory, and to the Cardinals at Rome, to exhort them to continue firm in their good Reſolution. The Genoeſes and thoſe of Savona, ſent Deputies to Gregory, to give him all manner of Aſſurance, and to congratulate him upon the future Union. The Ambaſſadors of France arrived at Rome on the 5*th.* of July; but they found Gregory had altered his Mind by the Counſels of Ladiſlaus, and his Nephew, who diverted him from the Ceſſion for their private Intereſts; and ſo ſeeking to evade it, he anſwered the Ambaſſadors of France, That whatever Deſire he had to finiſh the Union, he could not poſſibly repair to Savona; becauſe he thought it not a ſafe Place, and he had no Gallies to convey him thither, the Venetians having denied to lend him any; and that he was not able to travel thither by Land. The Ambaſſadors offered to furniſh him with Gallies from Genoa, and all manner of Aſſurance of Safety; and declared, That it was not the King's Deſign to tranſfer the See to Avignon, but only to procure the Peace of the Church. They had many Conferences with Gregory upon this Subject, but they could not bring him to a Reſolution of going to Savona; and all that he promiſed them was, that he would go to Petra-Santa, where he would confer face to face with Benedict. The Ambaſſadors not able to draw any other Anſwer from Gregory, came to Genoa; from whence on the 22*d.* of Auguſt, they wrote a Letter full of Reflections, and went next to Marſeilles, where they related to Benedict what they had done. He would not conſent to change the Place of Interview, and to make it appear it was not his Fault, that the Treaty went not on, he repaired to Savona.

The History of the Schism of the Popes of Rome, &c.

Gregory and Benedict ſhift of the Ceſſion.

Some Time after the Departure of the Ambaſſadors of France, the City of Rome feared to be ſurprized by the Colonni, and the Followers of Ladiſlaus, who held Correſpondence with Gregory: But Paul Urſini having defeated them, and taken the Heads of the Conſpiracy Priſoners, Gregory, who was retired to the Caſtle of St. Angelo, teſtified his Joy for it, and rewarded Paul Urſini, by enlarging the Term of Time in his Poſſeſſion of the Earldom of Narni, which was given him for a certain Space by Innocent VII. After this, Gregory left Rome to go to Viterbo, giving it out, that he took this Journey to conclude the Union. When he was arrived at Viterbo, the Cardinals preſſed him to repair to Savona, to procure the Union; and becauſe he ſeemed to be detained only upon the Score of his three Nephews, whom he had a Mind to prefer, they conſented he ſhould give them the lands of the Church, and reſerve for himſelf the Patriarchſhip of Conſtantinople, the Archbiſhoprick of York in England, and two other Biſhopricks in the State of Venice. Notwithſtanding they had granted him theſe Advantages, he ſtill was very backward to go to Savona, whither Benedict and his Cardinals were already come, and tarried ſome Time at Sienna, to which Place he went, upon his leaving Viterbo; from thence he went next to Lucca. The Ambaſſadors of the Chriſtian Princes, and the Deputies of the People of Italy importuned Gregory and Benedict to agree at length upon a Place of Interview. They wrote likewiſe to and fro to one another, and propounded divers Places, and divers Expedients; but agreed upon nothing, having in truth no Deſign either of them to quit the Papacy, whatever Teſtimony they gave, that they would do it; but that which utterly daſhed all Hopes of a Union, was the Entrance of Ladiſlaus into the City of Rome, of which he made himſelf Maſter on the 23*th.* of April, 1408. This News very much rejoiced Gregory and his Nephews; and Ladiſlaus ſent word to his Ambaſſadors, who were with the Pope, to let his Holineſs know, that he was unwilling the Union ſhould go forward, unleſs he were there in Perſon for the maintaining of his Rights. Gregory finding himſelf back'd by Ladiſlaus, no longer obſerved any means, and nominated four new Cardinals, whereof two were his Nephews. The Cardinals incenſed at the Actions of Gregory, deſerted him: John Cardinal of Liege, a Norman, was the firſt that left him: His Goods were ſoon plundered by the Pope's Nephews: The other Cardinals followed his Example, and by degrees the Pope was left alone with his four Cardinals, in ſpite of the Prohibitions which he made the Cardinals not to leave him, and the Cenſures, he pronounced againſt them, to which they oppoſed Writings, whereby they rendered his Conduct odious.

The Hiſtory of the Schiſm of the Popes of Rome, &c.

The Cardinals withdrawing from Gregory.

The firſt Act which they made, being come to Piſa, was an Act of Appeal the 15*th.* of May, from the three Orders which Gregory had made at Lucca. 1. Not to depart that City without his Leave. 2. Not to meet together. 3. Not to have any Communication with the Ambaſſadors of Peter de la Lune, or the French. They make appear the Injuſtice of theſe Decrees, and appeal from them to a Pope better informed, to JESUS CHRIST, to a General Council, and to the next Pope. On the Day after, they directed a Circular Letter, to the Princes and Prelates of Chriſtendom; wherein they ſet forth, That having obſerved Gregory to evade the Union, that he would have made an Attempt upon their Perſons, that he had forbid them to have any Communication with the Ambaſſadors of Peter de la Lune, and the King of France, and in fine, that he had created Cardinals; they withdrew on the 11*th.* of the Month from the City of Lucca, and were come to Piſa, with Deſign to promote the Union of the Church, and exhort them to agree to their Deſign.

The Cardinals Act of Appeal.

The Proceedings of Gregory againſt the Cardinals that withdrew.

Gregory on his Part, ordered Proceedings by Cardinal Anthony his Nephew, and his Chamberlain, whom he made a Commiſſioner on that behalf againſt the Cardinals, the other Prelates and Officers of the Court of Rome, who were at Piſa, who publiſhed two Mandates, the one on the 17*th.* of May, the other the 16*th.* of June, by which he ordered, That all ſuch, as returned not to Lucca by a Time prefixed, ſhould be deprived of all their Dignities, and Benefices: Which Puniſhment he declared, they had incurred, by his Sentence pronounced on the third of July, and poſted up the Day following. The Cardinals and Officers of the Court of Rome appealed from theſe Proceedings, and declared by an Act made at Legborn the firſt of July, That it was Neceſſary to withdraw from the Obedience of Gregory; That all his Adherents and Favourers carried on the Schiſm; That all the Warrants and Grants, and in general whatever he had done as Pope, is of no Validity; That they would cauſe it ſo to be declared by the future Pope; That they prayed and exhorted all the Prelates, and other Clergymen, or Tenants of the Church of Rome, to pay in no Money to him, or into the Apoſtolick Chamber, promiſing Recompence to ſuch as ſhall, or have been deprived of their Benefices or Offices, for withdrawing from the Obedience of Gregory.

Benedict's affronting Bulls ſent to the King of France.

While all theſe Matters paſſed in Italy, the King of France, to reduce Benedict, ſent to him in the beginning of the Year two Ambaſſadors, John de Chateaumorant, and John de Tourſay, to declare to him, That if on Aſcenſion-Day next, the Union were not re-eſtabliſhed in the Church, that neither he, nor his Clergy, nor any of his Subjects ſhould obey either him, or his Adverſary; but would ſtand Neuters. Benedict was extreamly troubled at this Meſſage, and gave in Anſwer to the Ambaſſadors, That he ſhould let the King know his Mind by the Perſons, which he ſhould ſend to him: And indeed, in a little Time after, he ſent two Couriers to the King, who arrived at Paris on the 14*th.* of May, and preſented to his Majeſty a Bull written at Porto-Venere the 18*th.* of April; by which he declared to him, That if he put in Execution the Neutrality he had projected, he would not only incurr the Penalties of the Law; but alſo thoſe mentioned in the Bull, which he ſent to him, to acquit himſelf of his Duty towards God. This latter Bull was dated the 19*th.* of May, in the preceding Year, and it prohibited all Chriſtian People to authorize or approve the Subſtraction, or to appeal in any Manner from the Decrees of the Pope, under Pain of Excommunication, of Interdiction, of Deprivation of Dignities and Benefices, and likewiſe, as to the Laity, of their Goods and Eſtates. The Couriers, who brought theſe Bulls, delivered them to the King faſt ſealed, and withdrew before they were opened. The King having called to him the Princes, made them be broke open in their Preſence; and after they had been read, it was deliberated by the ſpace of three Days, what was hereupon to be done. On Monday 21*ſt.* of the ſame Month, the King ſent for the Princes, the Lords, the Parliament, the Prelates and the Univerſity, heard the Harangue, which was made in the Preſence of the People by John Courtecuiſſe Doctor of Divinity, who having taken for his Text theſe Words, Convertetur dolor ejus in caput ejus, &c. declaimed againſt the Conduct of Benedict, and ſhewed, that his Bulls were unjuſt, and that they deſerved to be condemned and torn to pieces, ſeeing

The Proceedings againſt Benedict and his Bulls.

The History of the Schism of the Popes of Rome, &c.

they tended to perpetuate the Schism, to vilify the Authority of the King, and to divest him of his Power. He accused Peter de la Lune to have said, That although all Christendom should be of Opinion for the Cession, he would not change his Resolution, and to have threatned France with great Misery, in case of the Substraction. He maintained next, That Peter de la Lune was a Schismatick and a Heretick; that he deserved not only to be deprived of the Papacy, but likewise to be dispossessed of all Ecclesiastical Dignities; That he ought not to be called Pope any more, nor be obeyed; That all the Gifts and Grants, which he had passed since the third of May, of the preceding Year, were actually void, and that they ought to be proceeded against, who upheld, or assisted him in France, as against Persons guilty of Treason. When John de Cortecuisse had ended his Discourse, another Person of the University made five Demands of the King, and his Council, for the Good of the Church, the Preservation of the Peace of the Kingdom, and the Honour of the Crown. The first, that there be Examination had touching these Bulls, and that all those be arrested, who shall be found to have supported or entertained the Followers of Peter de la Lune, or taken his part, as there are many in the Kingdom, whom the University would name to the King in time and place. The second, that the King would receive no Letter from Peter de la Lune. The third, that it would please the King to injoyn the University to preach the Truth of this Doctrine through his whole Kingdom. The fourth, that the Bishop of St. Flour be recalled from his Embassy, and that the Dean of St. German of Auxerre and of St. Lupus, be punished. The fifth, that the Letter in Form of a Bull be torn, as giving a Wound to the Faith, and being injurious, seditious, and offensive to his Royal Majesty. The King approved of the Demands of the University, ordered the Dean of St. German of Auxerre to be arrested immediately, took the Bull, and sent it to his Chancellor. The Chancellor caused it to be torn into three Pieces; whereof one was given to the King, the other to the Princes and the Council, and the third to the Clergymen, who pulled it to pieces. The next Day the King sent Order to Marischal Boucicaut, who was at Genoa, to seize, by any means, the Person of Peter de la Lune; recalled the Bishop of St. Flour, whom he had sent to the King of Spain to persuade him to the Neutrality; because some had written to him, that instead of following his Instructions, he had acted contrary: He sent for the Archbishop of Rheims, the Bishop of Cambray (Peter d'Ailly) and several others, who were taxed with adhering to Peter de la Lune; but they obeyed not, fearing to be put in Prison: Some were arrested, viz. the Bishop of Gap, the Abbot of St. Denys, some Canons of Paris, and other Persons, who were kept Prisoners in the Louvre, as guilty of High Treason, for having had Cognisance of these Bulls, and not discovering it to the King. They made search for the two Couriers, that brought them; one of them a Castilian, was taken about Lyons; and the other named Sancus Lupus, an Arragonian, was arrested in the Church of St. Clairvaux; and both of them being brought back to Paris, they acquitted some that were accused, affirming positively, that they knew nothing of the Contents of those Bulls; nevertheless the Commissioners, who were Members of the University, left not off the Pursuit of the Process, and kept them long in Prison.

The Publication of the Neutrality in France.

After this, the King caused the Neutrality to be published; that is to say, the Substraction of Obedience to the two adverse Popes, wrote to the Christian Princes, and sent them Ambassadors to exhort them to take this Method, which was accepted by the Germans, Hungarians, and Bohemians. The King wrote likewise on the twenty second of May, to the Cardinals on Gregory's Side, to meet together with those of Benedict's, in order to cure the Schism, and the University of Paris wrote a very eloquent Letter to one and t'other, wherein they are exhorted to procure Peace to the Church; by choosing one absolute Pope by common Consent. This Letter bears Date the twenty ninth of May. The two Colleges answered the King and the University, that they had taken up this Resolution before the Receipt of their Letters; and that they were assembled to put it in Execution. Their Letter is dated from Leghorn on the last of June. Nevertheless, the King on the eighteenth of the same Month, by his Letters Patents published to all his Subjects his Commands, that they should not regard any Bulls, or Letters sent by Benedict, since the Date of the injurious Bulls, to present, receive or perform them.

Gregory and Benedict appoint Councils, and the Cardinals likewise do it at Pisa.

The two contending Popes then found themselves very much intangled; Gregory desirous to lay the Faults on Benedict, wrote a circular Letter to all the Faithful, on the 20th of June, to insinuate, that it was not his Fault, but Benedict's, that the Union was not settled. Also to elude the Design of the Cardinals, he called a Council at Aquileia, by his Letters of the 24 of July; and having passed the Winter at Sienna, and Arminum, where he created some Cardinals, he came to this City about Easter, in the following Year, and there held a Kind of a Council, made up of a very small Number of Prelates. Benedict seeing himself deserted by the French, took a Resolution to retreat to the Kingdom of Arragon, and left Porto-Venere in the Beginning of June, having written a Letter to Gregory, wherein he protested it was not his Fault that the Union was concluded; from whence he proceeded to Perpignan, and assembled a Council of the Prelates of Spain and Catalonia, who owned him, and declared him the true Catholick Vicar of JESUS CHRIST, who had never been a Schismatick or Heretick; commended the Design he had to procure an Union, even by the Way of Cession, yet not excluding other Methods; besought him to extend the Promise of Cession to the Case, that his Adversary should be deposed, and to send Ambassadors to the Cardinals, who were at Pisa, to find out Means of procuring the Union. Benedict was accompanied only by four Cardinals, eight or nine others deserted him, and went to Leghorn or Pisa, to find the Cardinals of Gregory, and consulted with them to assemble a Council of such as were subject to both Popes, in a free place, to procure Peace to the Church. At last they pitched on Pisa, which was granted them by the Florentines; where they declared a Council to be held at the Feast of the Annunciation, the Year following The Cardinals of the two Colleges assembled the Prelates of their respective Parties thither, and cited to the Council the two Competitors.

The History of the Schism of the Popes of Rome, &c.

An Assembly of the Prelates of France, which made Rules for the time of the Neutrality

Nevertheless, the King of France call'd together the Prelates of his Kingdom, in the Chappel of his Palace at Paris, to order the Manner in which the Church of France should be governed during the Neutrality. The Archbishop of Sens presided in this Assembly, which continued from the 11th of the Month of August, until the 5th of November, and therein they made the following Rules; 1. That the Absolution from Excommunications, reserved of Right to the Pope, shall be given by the Penitentiary of the Holy Apostolick See; and in case there be any Difficulty, where-by they cannot have Recourse to him, then by the Ordinary. 2. That as to Dispensations for Disorders, which the Penitentiary has Power to grant, Application shall be made to him; or, if that cannot be done, to the Bishop. 3. That for Dispensations with Impediments of Marriage, an Address shall be made to the Penitentiary, or to a provincial Council. 4. That the Elections of Bishops shall be confirmed by the Metropolitans; or in case the Holy See of the Metropolis be vacant, by the Chapter of the Metropolitan-Church, and the Election of Archbishops, by the Primates, or by a Council of the Bishops of the Province, to whom it belongs to consecrate the Archbishops, on condition nevertheless that he shall not take the Pall, if there be found no Person, who hath a Right to give it him: And that the Elections of Abbots of Monasteries, even the Exempt, shall be confirmed by the ordinaries, who shall likewise give the Benediction to them that are elected. 5. That the Dispensations hitherto granted by Peter de la Lune shall be available, and may be put in Execution. 6. That the Metropolitans shall every Year assemble a Council of the Bishops of their Province, wherein they shall all be obliged to assist, and tarry there for a Month; that the Monks of the Order of St. Benedict, and Canons Regulars shall likewise hold Provincial Chapters every Year. 7. That in all Appeals, there shall be observed the Degrees of Jurisdiction; and if the Suit be commenced before the Archbishop, Appeal shall be made to the Provincial Council, which shall nominate Commissioners, from whose Judgment Appeal may again be made to the Council, which may again appoint other Commissioners, to give a definitive Sentence; so that nevertheless the three Sentences may agree: That in case of Appeal, in Expectance, till the Provincial Council meets, the Dean of the Bishops shall have Power to give the excommunicate Absolution ad Cautelam; that all Appeals and Causes, which were brought to the Apostolick Holy See, may be referred to a Provincial Council, and determined by Commissioners of their Appointment, and the Affairs of the Order of Cluniacks by their general Chapter; and that no Notice be taken of any Appeals made to the Court of Rome, during the Neutrality: That nevertheless, the Sentences given at the Court of Rome before the publishing of the Neutrality, may be executed within a Month. 8. That all Proceedings in the Judgment of Matters shall be according to the Direction of the common Law, and not according to the Rules of Chancery; nevertheless, the Judgment of Ecclesiastical Causes may not be referred to a secular Court. 9. That Elections, Gifts, Presentations, Nominations to Benefices, shall be made by such as of right they belong to; that the University shall keep a Record of all such as are presented to Benefices, wherein shall not be comprised those worth four hundred Livres a Year; unless they have annexed some Title, or Dignity. 10. That all the Revenues of Benefices in France, possessed by those, who who are in the Service of Peter de la Lune, shall be seized and put into the King's Hands, to be imployed in the Prosecution of the Union. This Assembly confirmed the Election of Lewis d' Harcourt, to the Archbishoprick of Roan, made by the Chapter of that Church, and the Change made by the Bishops of Tharbes and Treguier; and declared the Grant which Benedict had made of the Archbishoprick of Ausche, to one of his Creatures, void. It was laid in Conclusion of these Rules which they made, saving the Rights of the Crown, and the Liberties of the Gallican Church; saving likewise the Respect due to the Apostolick Holy See, and to the next lawful Pope, Clave non errante. There were nevertheless some Prelates, who disapproved them, and Guy de Roye, Archbishop of Rheims had the Confidence to write to the Bishops of the Assembly, that the Neutrality they had published, was Nonsense; protested, that he would not admit it, that he believed what the Council had done without the Authority of the Holy See, could be of no Force; and he advised them to meet at the Council, which Peter de la Lune was to hold at Perpignan. The Prelates of the Assembly were highly incensed with this Writing, and the University obtained an Order of the King to fetch this Prelate; but he would not obey it, alledging, That as first Peer of France, he owned no Judge above him but the King. The University likewise obtain'd of the King, that Peter d' Ailly Bishop of Cambray, who had sided with Benedict, should be arrested and brought to Paris, by the Earl of St. Pol: But this Prelate prevented that Compulsion, by getting a Protection of the King, and referring his Cause to the Court.

The Punishments of Benedict's Couriers.

While the Assembly was sitting, Sancus Lupus and the Courier of Benedict who had been arrested, having been convicted of bringing the abusive Bulls to the King and State, were condemned on the 20th of August, by the Commissioners, and in execution of the Sentence, being attired with Paper-Mitres, and Coats of black Cloth, on which were painted the Arms of Benedict, reversed; together with Libels, implying that they were Counterfeits sent from a Traitor, were conducted in this Equipage on a Dung-cart from the Louvre to the Palace, accompanied with such, as had been accused of favouring them; and there they were mounted on a Scaffold, where they served for a Shew to the People. On the next Day, they were brought again in the same Posture, to the Church-porch of our Lady, where one of the Commissioners of the Order of the Mathurins, Doctor in Divinity, made an Harangue full of Affronts and Reproaches against Peter de la Lune, and these Wretches; declared, that Sancus Lupus was condemned to perpetual Imprisonment; and the Courier to remain in Prison three Years. He added, that some others accus'd were also condemned. But that was not so, and the same Day, the Queen and Duke of Guyenne caused them to be yielded up to the Bishop of Paris, to whom they referred the Cognisance of what concerned the Schism, and to the Court of Parliament the Crime of High Treason. The Bishop of Paris kept them in Custody for a Month, after which he discharged the Canons; and in a little time, the Queen and Princes made Demand of the others, and set them at Liberty. Thus you see, what passed in France concerning the Schism, to the Time of holding a Council at Pisa; whereof we shall treat in the following Century.

CHAP. V.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors that flourished in the fourteenth Age.

THE Authors which flourished in the West in the fourteenth Age, having composed Works of the same Nature, and written in the same Manner, that the Authors of the foregoing Age did, I will not repeat the Censures here, which I have already passed upon them; but will only set down some particular Remarks, which concern the Authors of this Age.

Three Ages of Schoolmen.

The Learning of the Schools is commonly divided into three Ages. The first, is from Abaelardus to Albertus Magnus, the Master of Thomas Aquinas. The second, from Albertus to Durandus à Sancto Porciano, who died in the Year 1333. The third and last, from Durandus to Gabriel Piel, who died A. D. 1495. The famous Divines of the first Age were, Peter Lombard, Robert Pullein, or Pullus, Petrus Pictavienſis, Hugo de Sancto Victore, Raymundus de Pennaforti, Wilhelmus Parisiensis. In the second Age the School-Learning was not yet reduced to an Art, but they followed the Aristotelian Philosophy, according to the Method of the Followers of Averrhoes. In this Age Albertus Magnus, a Monk of the Order of the Friars-Preachers, and Alexander Hales, of the Order of the Grey-Friars; and after them Thomas Aquinas and Scotus, were the Heads of the two Sects of Schoolmen; who divided all the Schools among them. For after the Monks of these two Orders became the most eminent in the Universities, and taught Divinity with greater Diligence and Applause than the secular Priests, who applied themselves closer to the Civil and Canon Law, than School-Divinity; their Manner of Teaching, and their Opinions were established and settled there in a little Time. This gave rise to two Parties or Sects in the Schools; the one followed St. Thomas, and the other Scotus. But some few there were, who endeavoured to make a third Party, and reviving the Method of the Nominals, opposed those Divines, who were the Followers of Averrhoes, or the Realists. Ockam was one of the Heads of this Party. Raymundus Lullus invented a new Way of Arguing, but it was so obscure, so extraordinary, and full of Difficulties, that he had but few Followers. Durandus à Sancto Porciano, Bishop of Meaux, was the first that would not tye himself to follow the Principles of any other, but took from both, what he thought best, and so broached many new Opinions. Since his Time, the Divines have taken a greater Liberty, and made several Systems for themselves.

The Study of the Law.

The Study of the Law became more exact in this, than in the former Age. Many excellent Wits applied themselves to it, and made great Progress in it; and although they accepted the Decretals of the Popes for Law, yet they began to examine them more nearly, and to bring them to common Right. The Debates about the Civil and Ecclesiastical Power, which were much agitated in this Age, gave Occasion to search into these Matters, and we must own, that there were many excellent and very learn'd Treatises written upon that Subject; which are a clear Proof, that the Knowledge and Value of Antiquity was not quite lost in this Age.

As to the Sermons, Commentaries upon Holy Scripture and History, there was no Alteration in this Age from the former; but the Study of Human Learning, Tongues, and Poetry began to be revived, and came to a great Perfection in the next Age; and at length induced the Divines to apply themselves to the Study of Antiquity. These Reflections being premised, I shall give you a List of the Divines, Canonists, Historians, Writers of Books of Devotion, and other Ecclesiastical Authors, who flourished in the fourteenth Age of the Church in a Chronological Order.

Dinus de Mugello.

Dinus de Mugello, [or Mugellanus] so called from Mugellum, a Town in the Territories of Florence, Professor of Law in the University of Bononia, was invited to Rome by Boniface VIII. to compose the sixth Book of the Decretals, with a Promise of making him a Cardinal; but being disappointed of his Expectation, he died of Melancholy, as is said, in the Year 1303. He wrote several Books of Civil Law, and a Commentary upon the Rules of the Canon Law, which has been printed at Colen, An. 1569, 1594. [and with some Additions by Nicholas Boerius] 1617. [8]

Engelbert.

Engelbertus, a German, Abbot of Admont in Styria, flourished at the End of the Thirteenth, and in the Beginning of the fourteenth Age. There is a Treatise of his printed at Basil, Anno 1553. and put into the twenty fifth Tome of the last Part of the Bibliotheca Patrum, Concerning [the Rise] Progress and End of the Roman Empire, and an Heroick Poem, containing an Encomium of Rodolph of Hapsburg, [the German Emperor] made [at his Coronation] Anno 1273. which is also found in most of the Collections of the German Historians. Trithemius makes mention of some Sermons written by this Author, and a Treatise of Virtues and Vices. Possevine also attributes to him several Books of Divinity, viz. A Commentary upon the Psalm, Beati Immaculati: Some Treatises upon the Articles of our Faith. Of the Body of Jesus Christ; Of the Passion of our Lord, and the Mystery of the Cross; Of Grace, Salvation, and Justice; Of Damnation; Of Free-will; Of the Chief Good; Of Providence; Of the Miracles of Jesus Christ; Of the State of the Dead. Upon the Gospel, in principio; and several other Philo-

The Lives and Writings of the Authors which flouriſhed in the Fourteenth Century.

ſophical Tracts which were preſerved in M. S. in the Monaſtery of Admont. He adds, That there is at Vienna, a Tract in M. S. of the ſame Author, Of the Inſtruction of a Chriſtian Prince.

Jacobus Cajetanus.

Jacobus Cajetanus, Nephew of Pope Boniface the VIII. who was made a Cardinal, Anno 1295. wrote a Book concerning the Jubilee every 100*th*. Year. It was publiſhed by Roſeus with Notes, and printed in the 13*th*. Tome of the Bibliotheca Patrum, of the Cologne Edition.

Stephanus de Salagnac.

Stephanus de Salagnac, a Monk of the Order of the Preaching-Friars of the Convent of Limoges; wrote, as is credible, at the end of the former Age, or beginning of this. A Treatiſe in Honour of his own Order; alledging four Things, wherein God had made them principally Eminent, viz. 1. For a good and learned Head. 2. For an illuſtrious and noble Family. 3. For an honourable Name. And 4. For a particular Profeſſion.

Andreas Novo-caſtrenſis.

Andreas Novo-Caſtrenſis, or Andrew of Newcaſtle, an Engliſhman, and Dominican-Friar, Doctor of Divinity, flouriſhed in the beginning of this Age. He hath compoſed a Comment upon the firſt Book of the Sentences, printed at Paris, 1514. Bale [Cent. 10. p. 44.] attributes to him a Commentary upon Boethius's Book, De Conſolatione Philoſophiæ, or, The Comfort of Philoſophy.

Rainerius Piſanus.

Rainerius Piſanus, or de Piſâ, a Divine and Lawyer of the ſame Order, compoſed a Book which is intituled, Pantheologia, or a Theological Dictionary; in which all Heads of Divinity are diſpoſed and treated on in an Alphabetical Order. Jacobus Florentinus, a Minorite or Grey-Friar, hath added ſeveral Things to this Work, and cauſed it to be printed at Nuremburg in 1473. He alſo printed in the ſame Manner at Venice in 1486. at Lyons in 1519. at Breſſe in 1580. and ſince, it hath been printed at Paris, with the Additions of Father Nicholas, a White-Friar.

William de Nangis

William de Nangis, or de Nangiaco, a Monk of S. Denys [at Paris] hath compoſed a Chronicle from the beginning of the World to the Year 1301. But becauſe the greateſt Part of that Work was copied from other Authors; Father Luke Dacherius in the 11*th*. Tome of his Spicilegium hath printed it no further, than to the Year 1113. where he begins his Continuations, which he hath made out of Sigebert of Gemblours, as far as the Year 1301. adding ſomething more out of two other Authors; the one as far as 1340. and the other to 1348. This Author hath alſo written a Chronicle of the Kings of France, the Lives of S. Lewis, and Philip the Hardy; which are alſo found in the Collections of the French Hiſtorians, put out by Pithœus and Du-Cheſne.

Thomas Wicke.

Thomas Wicke, a Canon Regular of S. Auguſtine, of the Abby of Oſney in England; who flouriſhed in the Reign of Edward I. hath a Chronicle of the Hiſtory of England, from the Coming of William the Conqueror, in 1066. to the Death of Edward I. in 1304. This Work is found in the laſt Collection of the Engliſh Hiſtorians, printed at Oxford in 1687. He alſo wrote a Tract of the Abbots of Oſney from the Foundation of that Abby, which was in 1129. to the Year 1290.

Henry Stero.

Henry Stero, a German, and a Benedictin Monk of the Abby of Altaich, compoſed certain Annals from the firſt Year of the Emperor Frederick Barberoſſa, which was in the Year of Chriſt 1152. to the Election of the Emperor Rodolphus in the Year 1273. and the Hiſtory of the Emperors Rodolphus of Habſpurg, Adolphus of Naſſau, and Albert of Auſtria, from the Year 1273. to the Year 1305. which was carried on by two German Monks. Theſe Works are found among the German Writers put out by Freherus, and the more large Annals in the firſt Tome of Caniſius's Antiquities.

Eberardus a Monk.

Eberardus, a Monk of the ſame Monaſtery, and Archdeacon of Ratisbone, hath continued theſe Annals of Stero as far as 1305. taking almoſt all he has writ out of the ſame Author. This Work is in the firſt Tome of Caniſius's Collection.

Joannes de Joinville.

Joannes de Joinville Governor of Champaigne, is the Author of the Life of S. Lewis, whom he accompanied in his Expedition to the Holy Land. It hath been printed ſeveral times in French; but the beſt Edition, is that put out by the Learned Mr. Du-Cange, printed by Cramoiſy, Anno 1668. Joinville lived till about 1310.

Siffridus, a Prieſt of Miſnia.

Siffridus, a Prieſt of Miſnia in Saxony, is a different Perſon from him, though of the ſame Name, who was of the Order of the Friars-Preachers, and who flouriſhed at the End of the fifteenth Age. This of whom we are now ſpeaking, lived in the beginning of the fourteenth Age. He compoſed a Chronicle from the beginning of the World to the Year 1307. But Georgius Fabricius who firſt publiſhed it at the End of his Hiſtory of Saxony, printed at Leipſick 1569. and at Jena 1598. hath pared off all the Years, which preceded 1457. It is found in the ſame Manner printed among the German Hiſtorians, put out by Piſtorius.

Haito, a Præmonſtratenſis.

Haito or Aito, a Prince of the Family of the Kings of Armenia, after he had made War with the Infidels, entred the Order of the Præmonſtratenſes about the Year 1290. and profeſſed in a Monaſtery of that Order in the Iſle of Cyprus, as he himſelf tells us in his Hiſtory of his Voyage into the Holy Land; which he wrote in French in the Year 1307. and was tranſlated into Latin by Nicholas Fulke, and printed at Haguenau 1529. at Baſil among the Hiſtorians of the New World in 1532, and 1555. and at Helmſtadt 1585. in the ſecond Part of the Authors of the Hiſtory of Jeruſalem, printed by Reineccius, [and in Italian at Venice, 1553.]

The Lives and Writings of the Authors which flouriſhed in the Fourteenth Century.

John the Monk, a Cardinal.

John the Monk, ſirnamed Deſcrauchet, a Native of Creſſy near Abbeville, a learned Canoniſt, was raiſed to the Dignity of a Cardinal-Prieſt of the Title of S. Marcellinus, and S. Peter, in the Year 1294. He founded a College of his own Name at Paris in the Year 1302. He was appointed Legate by Pope Boniface, in the Conteſt he had with Philip the Fair. He died at Avignon the 22*d*. of Auguſt, 1313. He is the Author of the Apparatus, or Commentary upon the 6*th*. Book of the Decretals printed at Paris 1535. and at Venice 1586. with the Additions of Probus.

William of Paris, a Dominican.

William Paris, of the Order of Friars-Preachers, who was conſtituted Inquiſitor in France by Clement V. and who drew up the Proceſs againſt the Templars, is the Author of the Dialogues upon the ſeven Sacraments, printed at Leipſick in 1512. at Lyons in 1567. under the Name of William Biſhop of Paris, and a Poſtill upon the Epiſtles and Goſpels of the Year, printed at Paris in 1509. and at Strasburg in 1513. and 1521.

John of Paris, a Dominican.

The two Dominicans called Joannes Pariſienſis, both Doctors and Profeſſors of Divinity of the Faculty in Paris, muſt be diſtinguiſhed. The former lived in the thirteenth Age, about the Year 1220. He was ſirnamed Pungens Aſinum, the Aſs-pricker, and is mentioned by Joannes de Salagnac, ſpeaking of the Authors of his Order, who lived before the Time of S. Thomas. He founded two Chappels to S. Euſtathius, and is meant in an Information made in 1221. as the Records of thoſe Times make it evident. It is undoubtedly he that compoſed the Commentary upon the Sentences, of which Trithemius ſpeaks. The other John of Paris was not a Licentiate in Divinity, till 1304. when he brought himſelf into a great deal of Trouble, by aſſerting, That Tranſubſtantiation was not a Point of Faith, and that the Real Preſence of the Body of Chriſt in the Sacrament might be explained after another Manner, viz. By ſuppoſing, that the Bread being united with the Word, mediante corpore Chriſti, becomes the Body of Chriſt, or that the Change be made after ſome other Manner. This new Doctrine, which had never been taught in the Schools of Paris before, made a great Noiſe, and was oppoſed by three other Divines, who maintained, That Tranſubſtantiation was an Article of Faith, according to the Decretal in the Chapter, Firmiter. John of Paris nevertheleſs maintained his Opinion with great Reſolution; and not only wrote a Book to prove it, but defended it ſeveral Times before many Doctors, and Batchelors of Divinity; and more particularly, before William of Orillac Biſhop of Paris, who having examined that Doctrine, and taken Advice with Giles of Rome, Archbiſhop of Bourges, Bertrandus Biſhop of Orleans, William Biſhop of Amiens, and ſeveral other Doctors, enjoined Silence to Friar John of Paris, under the Penalty of Excommunication, and ſtrictly forbid him to teach or preach any more in Paris. John of Paris appealed from this Sentence to the Court of Rome, and went to Pope Clement V. then at Bourdeaux, who appointed him Judges; but he died before the Matter was decided upon S. Maurice's Day [Jan. 15.] 1306. The Book which John of Paris wrote about Tranſubſtantiation, was Intituled, The Determination of Friar John of Paris, Preacher of the Manner, how the Body of Jeſus Chriſt is in the Sacrament of the Altar [different from that, which hath been commonly held in the Church.] 'Tis nothing elſe, but the very ſame Explication of his Opinion, which he delivers to the Aſſembly of the Doctors of Divinity above-mentioned. It was found in M. S. in the Library of S. Victor, and has been often quoted about that Point by the Authors of the Reformed Religion. It hath lately been publiſhed by Mr. D' Allix entire [with a large and learned Preface] and printed at London in 1686. There is a Treatiſe concerning the Regal, and Pupal Power, printed at Paris in the Year 1506. and in the Collection of Goldaſtus's [Monarchia S. Rom. Imp. Tom. 2. p. 107.] which bears the Name of John of Paris. It was written upon the Account of the Difference between Pope Boniface VIII. and Philip the Fair. This Author obſerves in his Preface, that they, who ſeek to avoid one Error, often fall into another; and thereupon brings an Example from the Controverſie, which was between the Monks and Seculars, concerning Confeſſion, and the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments; The one, ſaith he, aſſerted, That the Monks ought not to meddle with them at all, becauſe they renounced all Secular Affairs: The other ſaid, That they properly belonged to them by by their Order. The Truth lies in the middle between these two Errors, which is, that it is not altogether unfit that they should do it, although they have no Right to it upon the Account of their order. And much the same the thing happens in this Question about the Spiritual and Temporal Power, concerning which there are contrary Errors. The first of them is the Error of the Waldenses, who hold, that Clergymen ought not to have any Power or Temporal Estates; the other is something like the Opinion of Herod, who thought that Jesus Christ was born to be an Earthly King; so these Men suppose, that the Pope as Pope, hath a Power in Temporal Things above Kings. The true Opinion lies between these two Errors, and is this; that the Successors of the Apostles may exercise a Temporal Jurisdiction, and enjoy Temporal Estates by the Allowance and Grant of Princes; but it does not belong to them as the Vicars of Jesus Christ, and Successors of the Apostles. To prove this Proposition, he shews, 1. That the Regal Power is founded upon the Law of Nature, and Law of Nations. 2. That the Priesthood is a Spiritual Power given by Jesus Christ to his Church, to administer Sacraments. 3. That 'tis not necessary, that all the Kings upon Earth should depend upon one Person only, as all the Ministers of the Church upon one Head. 4. That the Regal Power was erected before the Priesthood in Time; but the Priesthood is before the Regal Power in Dignity. 5. That the Pope has not the sole Jurisdiction over the Churches Revenues, but they belong to Bodies, and Societies, which possess them; and that the Pope cannot dispose of them as he pleaseth, nor deprive the Owners of them without a just Cause; that he may much less dispose of the Goods of Laymen, but only in case of urgent Necessity to use censures to oblige them to assist and help the Poor, or the Church in their Needs. 6. That he hath no Jurisdiction over the Temporal Goods of Laymen, nor any Secular Power; because Jesus Christ as Head of the Church had none himself, nor did give any to his Apostles; but all the Power, that he has given to the Church, is purely Spiritual; yea, even that which belongs to the exterior Ecclesiastical Court, which may concern it self only in Spiritual Causes; that the Pope may indeed excommunicate an Heretick King, and inflict Ecclesiastical Censures on him, but cannot depose him. He answers all the Objections that may be made to this Doctrine, and at last shews, that the Pope may be judged, and may either resign, or be deposed

Besides these Treatises of John of Paris, Mr. Baluzius assures us, that there are in the Library of Mr. Colbert, Cod. 3725. three Sermons preached by this Monk at Paris; the one in Advent, the other on the Second Sunday in Lent, and the Third on the First Sunday after Easter. Some Englishmen also tell us, that there is in the Library at Oxford, a MS. which contains a Treatise, which proves the Truth of the Christian Religion from the Testimony of the Heathens, and some other Treatises about the Confessions of Monks. Some also attribute to him a Book, intituled, The Correction of the Doctrine of St. Thomas, against William de la Mere; printed under the Name of Ægidius Romanus, or de Columna. It is credible, that he did compose a Book of that Title; but there is no reason to believe it that which is printed in the Name of Ægidius.

John of Paris a Canon-Regular.

About the same time flourished John of Paris, an Englishman and Canon-Regular of St. Victor at Paris, who composed an History, Intituled, Historical Memoirs, or the Flowers of History to the Year 1322, which is found in a MS. in the Library of St. Victor, and in some Libraries in England, [particularly in Bennet-College Library.] Mr. Duchesne hath published some Fragments of it in the first Tome of the French Historians, [and Mireus has put several parts of it into his Chronicon,] Thomas Joyce Cardinal.

Thomas Joisius, or Joyce, an Englishman, a Monk of the Orde rof Friars-Preachers, and a Scholar of Albertus Magnus, Confessor and Counsellor of State to King Edward, and at last promoted to be a Cardinal by the Title of S. Sabina, in the Year 1305. by Pope Clement V. died at Grenoble Decemb. 1310. as he was going in an Embassy to the Emperor Henry. We have observed in the last Age, that there are several Commentaries upon Holy Scripture, printed under the Name of St. Thomas, which belong to this Author: Besides this, there is a Work printed under his own Name, Intituled, Opus Aureum, a Golden Work upon seven Psalms [C. 27.] at Venice in 1611. and a Commentary upon St. Augustine, De Civitate Dei, or the City of God, printed at Thoulouse 1488. Some other Commentaries upon the Holy Scripture, and other Treatises, are found with his Name in the Libraries [of New-College, Cod. 90. Magdalen-College, Cod. 47. Merton, Cod. 200. and Exeter-College, Cod. 25. in Oxford; and Pembroke Hall, Cod. 46. Peter-House, Cod. 87. & 99. and the Publick Library, Cod. 179. at Cambridge] in England.

Joannes de S. Geminiano, a Monk.

Joannes de St. Geminiano, a Monk of the Order of the Friars Preachers, flourished in the beginning of this Age and gave himself particularly to Morality and Preaching. His chief Work is, the Summ of Examples and Comparisons, printed at Venice in 1577, and 1582. at Antwerp in 1583, and 1599. at Lyons in 1585. and at Cologne 1670. He also composed some Funeral Sermons, printed at Lyons in 1510. and at Paris in 1511. and some Sermons upon Lent, printed at Venice in 1584. and at Cologne in 1612. [Altamura in his Biblioth. Prædicat. reckons up other Writings of his.]

The Lives and Writings of the Authors which flourished in the Fourteenth Century.

Jacobus de Benedictis, a Native of Todi [in Italy] of a good Family, being entred into the Order of St. Francis, propounded it as a Design to himself to pass for a Fool and Madman in the Eyes of Men, and make himself despised; which he brought to pass, by delivering several strange Revelations, and by publickly reproving the Life of Pope Boniface, who put him in Prison in the City of Præneste, where he died in the Year 1306. He cannot be accounted an Ecclesiastical Writer, but upon the Account of some Hymns both in Verse and Prose, which he composed in a very uncouth Stile, divided into seven Books, which have been published by Francis Fresatus a Grey-Friar, who caused them to be printed at Rome in 1558. and since at Venice 1617. Some attribute to him a Piece of Prose beginning with these Words, Stabat mater dolorosa, and another Hymn, De contemptu Mundi; which begins thus, Cur mundus militat sub vana gloria. Raderus hath inserted some Sentences, and wholesom Admonitions attributed to this Author in his Viridarium Sanctorum.

Jacobus de Benedictis a Franciscan

Justus, a Cistertian.

Justus, an Abbot of the Cistertian Order, who flourished in the beginning of this Age, is the Author of a Sermon pronounced in an Assembly of his own Order, printed by it self at Paris, and in the 14th. Tome of the Bibliotheca Patrum, put out at Cologne.

Joannes Duns Scotus, a Grey-Friar.

Joannes Duns, sirnamed Scotus, and called commonly Doctor Subtilis, or the subtle Doctor, was the Author of a new Sect of Schoolmen, and taught Principles different from those of St. Thomas; which were followed by the Divines of the Order of Grey-Friars, of which he was himself. It is disputed, whether he was an Englishman, Scotchman, or Irishman. They, who hold him to have been an Englishman, say, he was of Dunston in Northumberland; but they, who make him an Irishman, lay the place of his Nativity at Down, a City in Ulster in Ireland; and they, who will have him a Scotchman, make him a Native of Duns, a Village eight miles distant from the Confines of England. He entred very young into the Convent of the Grey-Friars at Newcastle in England, and attended his Studies at Oxford, where he taught Divinity afterward. He went into France in the beginning of the Fourteenth Age, and read Lectures at Paris after he had taken his Degrees. Some have written, that he there maintained the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin Mary in a publick Conference; and that he defended it so strongly, that the University of Paris being convinced of it, made an Order, that all her Members should maintain that Doctrine, and engaged them by Oath so to do. But this is a false Story; for it is evident that the Decree of the University, was not made till the Year 1496. after the Meeting of the Council of Basil; and besides, Scotus did not propound the Opinion of the Immaculate Conception, as the certain Doctrine of his time; but with some doubt about it. For after he hath put the Question in his third Distinction upon the thirteenth Book of the Sentences, viz. Qu. 1. Whether the Virgin was conceived without Original Sin? He answers in three Propositions; 1. That God could have caused her to be born without Original Sin. 2. That he could have caused, that she should not continue in Original Sin one Moment. 3. That he could have caused, that she should have remained in it for some time; and then in the last instant of that time have purified her from it. After he has proved these three Propositions, he concludes, that none but God can know, which of these three Things are possible to be done; that it seems nevertheless most probable to him, that that which is most perfect be attributed to the Virgin; provided, that it be not contrary to the Authority of the Church, nor Holy Scripture. In this manner did Scotus propound his Sentiments of the Immaculate Conception: From Paris he went to Cologne, where he died a little after of the Falling Sickness, or rather of an Apoplexy, Nov. 8. 1308. in the 43d. Year of his Age, according to some, but 34 according to others. What some write concerning him, that he was buried in a Fit of the Falling Sickness, and being recovered and come to himself, had turned himself in his Grave, is a Fable that hath no likelihood; as Waddingus hath proved, who hath published his Life and Works, and printed them in twelve Volumes at Lyons, in 1639.

His Works in Twelve Volumes.

The first Tome contains the Life of Scotus, and the Testimonies of Eminent Men about his Works; his Speculative Grammar, which some falsly attributed to Albert of Saxony; a Monk of the Order of St. Augustine; His large Questions upon all Logick, with the Commentaries of Mau- rice de Porto, Archbishop of Tuam, which were before printed at Venice, in 1512. and 1600.

The second Tome contains his Commentaries upon the eight Books of Aristotle's Physicks, with the Notes of Franscis de Pitigianis of Aretium [in Italy] which had been printed before at Venice, in 1504. and 1597. and after at Lyons [1597.] Lucas Waddingus proves, that they are not Scotus's. There are in the same Tome some imperfect Questions upon Aristotle's Books de Anima. With the Notes of Hugh Cavell, Archbishop of Armagh.

The third Tome contains divers Treatises of Philosophy.

The fourth Tome has his Commentaries upon Aristotle's Physicks, with his Metaphysical Conclusions and Questions.

The six following Tomes contain his Commentaries upon the four Books of the Sentences, which he made at Oxford; with the Notes of Cavell, Lichet, Poncius, and Hiquæus. These Books had been printed before at Venice in 1516. and 1597. at Antwerp in 1620. and elsewhere.

The eleventh Tome contains four Books called, Reportata Parisiensia; which are an Abridgment made at Paris of his larger Comment, with the Notes of Cavell and Waddingus; who observes that this Work is much inferior to the former Stile and Doctrine. It hath been printed by it self at Paris in 1519. and 1600., and at Venice in 1597.

The last Tome contains his Quodlibetical Questions, with the Notes of Cavell and Lichet, which had been before printed at Paris in 1519.

Tritbemius makes mention of some Sermons of Scotus's upon Time and upon the Saints, a Commentary upon the Gospels and Epistles of St. Paul, with some other Treatises. Bale also attributes to him a Commentary upon Genesis, a Treatise of the Perfection of the Monks, in which this Question is treated of, whether the Condition of Prelates ought to be preferred before the State of Monks [but time must bring them forth to light, with many others Works, which lie yet undiscovered.]

Raimundus Lullus

The famous Raimundus Lullus, descended of a Noble Family in Catalonia, was born in the Isle of Majorca, in the Year 1236. He spent the first part of his Life in the Court of [James] King of that Isle, and did not retire from the World, till he was forty years old, to enter (which is hardly credible) into the Order of Grey-Friars. From that time he began to study with so great Diligence, that in a little time he made a great Progress in the Oriental Tongues, and Liberal Sciences. He found out afterward a new Method of arguing, and did all he could to get a Permission to teach at Rome; but not obtaining it of Pope Honorius IV. he resolved to put in Execution a Design, which he had of a long time conceived, to convert the Mahometans. Being therefore arrived according to this Resolution at Tunis, he had a Conference there with the Sarazens, in which he was in great danger of losing his Life, and had not been saved, but upon Condition that he should depart out of Africa; and if ever he returned should be put to Death. He then came to Naples, where he taught his Method till the Year 1290. when he went again to Rome, to get leave to teach in that City; but Boniface VIII. who was then in the Holy See denied him. From thence he went to Genoa, where he composed several Works; and passing from thence through Majorca, he came to Paris, where he taught his Art: Then he returned to Majorca, where he had frequent Disputations against the Sarazens, Jacobites and Nestorians. Then he returned to Genoa and Paris, to confirm his Disciples in his Doctrine, and again desired a Permission of Pope Clement V. to teach at Rome, and being again refused, he returned into Africk, where he was put in Prison; but being delivered from thence at the Intreaty of the People of Genoa, he landed at Pisa, having lost all his Books in his Voyage by a Shipwreck. He then set himself to preach up the Holy War, and having gathered a good Summ of Money in Italy for that end, he came to Pope Clement V. at Avignon; but not meeting with a kind Reception from him, he returned to Paris, where he taught, till the Council of Vienna, to which he went, and was earnest with them to establish Colleges in all places, where he had taught the Oriental Tongues, to unite all the Military Orders of Monks into one, to undertake the Holy War, and to condemn the Writings of Averrhoes; but these Propositions were not regarded by the Council. The rest of his Life is very fabulous. Some say, that after he had travelled into France and Spain, and sailed into England [to sollicit those Kings to undertake the Holy War] where he exercised Chymistry; he returned into Majorca, from whence he again passed into Africa, and was imprisoned there by the Sarazens; who treated him so ill, that he died of his Blows, as he returned in a Genoa Ship, June 19. 1315. in the 80th. Year of his Age.

The Knowledge and Learning of Raimundus Lullus was as extraordinary, as his Life. He found a Secret, by ranging certain general Terms under different Heads in a Method, which he had contrived, to make such an Hotchpotch Language fit to talk of all manner of Things, and yet the Hearers shall understand nothing particularly by it; So that after a Man has heard a Lullist talk a long time upon any matter, he is no wiser, nor learned, than he was before. They, that will take the Pains to learn this Method, may read his Introduction, which is the first of his Works; and his Cabala, which is his second; in which he explains himself in a brief manner. He has written also his Principles of Philosophy, which are nothing else but Logick, accommodated to his Method; his Rhetorick; his great Art, which contains an Application of his Method to all sorts of Subjects; his Book of the Articles of Faith, in which he proves Religion by Reason: These Works are printed with some Commentaries of the Lullists at Strasburg in 1651. but there are a great Number of other Works written by this Author, printed severally in divers places; and among others, the Philosophy of Love; which is one of his principal Works, composed in 1298. and printed at Paris in 1516. A Treatise of Substance and Accident, in which he undertakes to prove the Trinity by Reason; composed in the Year 1313. and printed at Valentia in Spain in 1520. A Tract of the Nativity of Jesus Christ, composed in 1310. and printed at Paris 1499. His Treatise [called Blanquerna, or] of the five States of Men, viz. Married, Monks, Prelates, Cardinals, and Popes; printed at Valentia in Spanish, in 1521. A Treatise of Prayers, Meditations, and Contemplations; or, Of the Lover and Loved, printed at Paris in 1505. The Praise of the Virgin, or the Art of Inventions; printed at Paris in 1499. with his Book for the Clergy, and his Treatise intituled, the Phantastick; in which he makes a Defence for himself, and confutes the Title, which some had given him of a Phantastical Person, written in 1311. His Book of Proverbs, printed at Paris in 1516. A Commentary upon the first Chapter of the Gospel of St. John, printed at Amiens in 1511. A Disputation, which he had with [Homerius] a Sarazen, in 1308. printed at Valentia in 1510. The Disputation of five learned Men, written in the Year 1294. printed at the same place in 1520. His Questions upon the four Books of the Sentences composed in 1298. printed at Lyons 1491. and at Palermo in 1507. with the Questions of Mr. Thomas d' Arras resolved according to Art. A Treatise of the Immaculate Conception, printed at Brussels. The Tree of Knowledge, printed at Lyons in 1514. and 1515. and several other Philosophical Works printed at other places. For as for those Treatises, Of the Invocation of Dæmons, Of the Secrets of Nature, and other Books of Chymistry, printed in several places, they are very wicked Books, which are none of Raimundus Lullus's, but of Raimundus de Tarraga, a converted Jew; which contain in them many Errors, and manifest Follies. Out of the Works of Raimundus Lullus, Nicholas Eymericus hath extracted an hundred erroneous Propositions, which he presented to Pope Gregory XI. that they might be condemned, with all his Works: That Pope caused them to be examined, and at last condemned; but Peter King of Arragon wrote to his Holiness to revoke his Sentence; and desired him by a Letter dated Jan. 7. 1377. to send the Examination of the Books of Raimundus Lullus immediately; but it had no effect. As to the Errors which are imputed to him by Eymericus, we must own, that several of the Propositions which he hath recited, may be defended; but some of them are unsufferable, that the Method of Raimundus Lullus, and his Way of reasoning, is no way helpful to the Knowledge of things; and that by his Principles, an Error may be maintained as well as the Truth.

John of Friburg, Bishop of Osma.

John of Friburg, sirnamed Runsick, a Monk of the Order of the Friars-Preachers, and Bishop of Osma in Hungary, the most able Preacher of his time, and so Pathetick, that having preach'd at Colen against Usury, he made the People drive out all the Usurers of the Town. He flourished in the beginning of this Age, and died in the Year 1314. after he had left his Bishoprick, and was retired into a Convent of his own Order. He made a Summ for Preachers, printed at Rutlingia in 1487. A grand Summ for Confessors, divided into four Parts, printed at Lyons in 1518. A Gloss upon the Summs of Raimundus de Pennaforti, which is joined with the Impression of the former Summ [at Rome] in 1603. The Authors of the Bibliotheca Prædicatorum [i. e. the Collection of the Author of the Order of the Friars-Preachers] makes mention of a Commentary of this Author upon the Books of the Sentences, and Glosses upon the Decrees [and some other of his Writings, but they are none of them publick.]

Ægidius Romanus, Archbishop of Bourges.

Ægidius Romanus, or Giles of Rome, of the House of Colonni, a Monk of the Order of the Hermites of St. Augustine, Studied at Paris under Thomas Aquinas; whose Doctrines he always held and defended. He was made the Master of Philip the Fair, and taught Philosophy and Divinity in the University of Paris. In the Year 1292. he was constituted General of his Order, and and promoted in the Year 1294. by Pope Boniface to the Archbishoprick of Bourges, by the consent of Philip the Fair. Some say he was made a Cardinal in 1315. but it is a false Opinion. He died Decemb. 22. 1316. He had made several Books in Philosophy and Divinity, which got him the Name of Doctor Fundatissimus, [the most well-grounded Doctor.] The Books of his, which are in Print, are, A Question about the Ecclesiastical and Temporal Powers, composed in 1304. upon the Occasion of the Difference between King Philip the Fair, and Pope Boniface, containing six Articles; in which he shews, 1. That God hath established both those Powers. 2. That they are distinct and several. 3. That God, in re-establishing the Spiritual Power, hath not given him any Temporal Dominion. 4. That the Temporal Power is not subject to the Spiritual, but only in Spiritual Causes. 5. That the King of France holds his Kingdom of none but God, and has no other Superior. He next answers the Objections brought against this Doctrine. This Treatise is in the second Tome of Goldastus's Monarchia, p. 95. The Defence of St. Thomas's Books against the Correctory of William de la Mare, printed at Venice in 1601. and 1624. A Treatise upon the four Books of the Sentences, printed at Basil in 1513. A Commentary upon the first Book of the Sentences, printed at Venice in 1571. Some Questions upon the second Book of the Sentences, printed in the same City in 1581. Certain Questions upon the third Book of the Sentences, printed at Rome in 1623. A Treatise of the Being, Essence, Knowledge and Motion of Angels, printed at Venice in 1598. A Tract of Original Sin, printed at Oxford in 1479. A Treatise of the Subject of Divinity, and some other small Tracts, printed at Venice in 1501. A Comment upon the six Days Work of the Creation, printed at Venice in 1521. Three Books of the Government of Princes, made in Favour of Philip the Fair, printed at Rome 1482. and at Venice 1598. Bellarmine makes also mention of these following Treatises, written by the same Author, as if they were printed. Nineteen Lectures upon the Song of Songs. A Commentary upon the Epistle to the Romans. An Exposition upon the Chapters, Firmiter, & Marthæ. A Treatise of the Body of Jesus Christ, or certain Theorems upon the Sacrament of the Altar. A Treatise of the Distinction of the Articles of Faith. A Writing of the Renunciation of the Pope. Another Writing composed upon the Occasion of a Clerk not worthily promoted to the Office of a Subdeacon. A Question, viz. Whether Kings can dispose of the Goods of their Kingdoms: A Treatise against Persons exempt: A Writing concerning the Influence of God upon the Blessed; Another of the Praises of Divine Wisdom. A Treatise of the Defect of the Evil of Fault. A Tract of Predestination, Of Prescience, Paradise, and Hell. There is also mention made of all these Works by Trithemius; and besides of a Commentary upon the Epistles of St. Paul, A Treatise of the Office of the Mass, an Abridgment of Divinity, and divers Sermons [but we have not come to the sight of any of them.] I pass over his Philosophical Tracts, both printed and MSS. which are very numerous; for he commented upon all the Books of Aristotle, and several other Books. The Works upon the Lord's Prayer, and the Angel's Salutation [of Mary] belong not to Giles of Rome, but some other Author.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors which flourish'd in the Fourteenth Century.

William Durant.

Gulielmus Durantus, or William Durant, the Nephew of the famous Canonist Durantus, Bishop of Menda, of whom we have spoken in the last Age, was Archdeacon to his Uncle, and succeeded him in his Bishoprick in 1296. and governed that Church, till 1328. Being summoned to the Council of Vienna in 1310. by Pope Clement, he composed an excellent Treatise of the Manner of celebrating a General Council, divided into three Parts, in which he hath collected and disposed under several Titles, a great number of Rules out of Councils and Fathers, to reform the Abuses and Disorders of all sorts of States and Conditions, and particularly the Popes and Court of Rome, Prelates, Clergy, and Monks. Philip Probus, a Lawyer of Bourges, caused this Work to be printed at Paris in 1545. and dedicated it to Pope Paul III. to the Cardinals, Bishops, and Abbots, and other Christians, who were to meet in the Council of Trent, as very useful to those, that would endeavour a Reformation of Manners among Christians. It hath been since printed at Paris in 1535. and lastly, in a Collection of several Works of the same Nature; which heretofore Mr. Faure, a Doctor of the Faculty of Divinity in Paris, caused to be printed there by Clousier, in 1671.

Victor Porchet.

The Time is not certainly known, when Victor Porchet de Salvaticis, a Carthusian of Genoa flourished; but 'tis probable, it was about 1315. He composed a Treatise, intitled, A Conquest for the Defence of the Christian Religion against the Jews, printed at Paris 1520. by the Care of Augustine Justinian Bishop of Nebio in Corsica. He shews a great deal of Jewish Learning and Reading of their Books in it. He has made use of a Book written by Raimundus Martin, called, Pugio Fidei, i. e. The Sword of Faith; out of which he owns, that he hath transcribed much of what he has written in that Work.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors which flourish'd in the Fourteenth Century.

Malachias, a Grey-Friar, a Divine of Oxford, and Preacher to Edward II. King of England; was in very great Reputation at the Beginning of this Age. We have a Treatise of Piety written by him, and printed in 1518. by Henry Stevens, named, Of the Poison of Mortal Sins, and their Cure.

Malachias.

William le Mair.

William le Mair, or Gulielmus Major, a Penitentiary and afterwards Bishop of Angers, governed the Church of that City from 1290. to 1314. in which Year he died. He wrote an History of what passed in his Church, while he was Bishop, published by Mr. Luke Dacherius in the tenth Tome of his Spicilegium, p. 247. and has made a Collection of the Synodal Orders and Decrees of his Predecessor Nicholas Gelant and of his own, made in the Synods held twice a Year, viz. at the Feast of Pentecost, and on St. Luke's Day, from the Year 1271. to 1314. in which there are many remarkable things concerning Discipline; which are also published by Father Dacherius, in the 11th. Tome of his Spicilegium, p. 201.

William de Mangagot.

William de Mandagot, or Gulielmus Mandagotus, born of the illustrious Family of Lodeve, Archdeacon of Nismes, and Provost of Tholouse; was made Archbishop of Embrun by Boniface VIII. in 1295. from whence he was translated to Aix, and at last made Cardinal-Bishop of Præneste by Clement V. in 1311. after whose Death the Italian Cardinals intended to make him Pope. He composed the sixth Book of the Decretals, and made a Treatise of the Election of Prelates, printed at Colen in 1573. and in other places. He died at Avignon in November 1321.

Berengarius de Fredol.

Berengarius de Fredol, Canon, and after Chanter of St Nazarus, Abbot of St. Aphrodisius of Beziers, and afterward made Bishop of that City in 1298. a famous Canonist, composed the sixth Book of the Decretals with Richard Siennensis, and Gulielmus de Mandagot. He hath dedicated an Explication in an Alphabetical Order, upon the Summ of Cardinal Ostiensis, to which he gave the Title of Oculus, which was printed with that Summ at Basil. He wrote also a Treatise about Excommunication and Interdiction, which is found in MS. in the Library of Mr. Colbert, Cod. 249. and 3345. He was appointed Cardinal-Priest by the Title of the S.S. Nereus and Achilles by Clement the Vth. and in the Year 1309. he was made Cardinal-Bishop of Frescati, and died in 1323. June 10. He had a Nephew, who was made Bishop of Beziers in 1309. and made Cardinal-Priest in the room of his Uncle, and afterward Cardinal-Bishop of Porto, in the Year 1317.

Jacobus de Termes.

Jacobus de Termes, Abbot of Charlieu, an Abby of Cistertians in the Diocess of Senlis, composed in the Year 1311. during the Sitting of the General Council of Vienna, a Work against those, who opposed the Exemptions and Privileges of the Monks, and chiefly against Giles of Rome, Archbishop of Bourges. This Treatise is printed in the fourth Tome of the Bibliotheca Cistertiorum [i. e. the Collection of the Writers of the Cistertian Order] p. 261.

Antonius Andreas.

Antonius Andreas, a Grey-Friar of Arragon, and Scholar of Scotus, flourished from the beginning of this Age to the Year 1320. He composed a Commentary upon the Books of the Sentences, printed at Venice in 1578. and 1584. A Book about the Principles of Gilbert Porritanus, printed at the same place in 1512, and 1517. divers Comments upon the Books of Aristotle and Boethius, printed at the same Place in 1480. 1509. and 1517.

Harvæus Natalis.

Harvæus Natalis, a Britain in France, and a Friar-Preacher, of whom he was the fourteenth general made in 1318. hath composed a Comment upon the four Books of the Sentences, printed at Venice in 1405. and at Paris in 1647. Four great quodlibetical Questions printed at the same place in 1513. A Treatise about the Pope's Authority printed at Paris, with his Commentary on the Sentences in 1647. and an Apology against those who opposed the Order of the Friars-Preachers, and reproached them that they did not lead an Apostolical Life, printed at Venice in 1516. He died at Narbonne [Aug 10.] in the Year 1323.

Ptolemæus Lucensis.

Ptolemæus Lucensis, a Monk of the Order of the Friars-Preachers, a Scholar of St. Thomas Aquinas, and Confessor to John XXII. was made Bishop of Torcello in 1321. hath composed Annals from the Year 1060. to 1303. and a Chronicon of the Popes and Emperors. These two Works were printed at Lyons in 1619. There is found in several Libraries an Ecclesiastical History of this Author, divided into 24 Books to the Year 1303. which is sometimes quoted by Rainaldus.

Philip.

Philip, an Abbot of the Cistertian Monks, and afterward made Bishop of Aichstat in the Year 1305. died in the Year 1322. He wrote the Life of St. Walpurgis, Abbess of Hildesheim, at the desire of Anne Queen of Hungary, gaby, the Emperor Albert's Daughter. He took it out of the Collections of Wolfarus. It is in the fourth Tome of the Collections of Caniſius. He hath alſo compoſed an Hiſtory of the Patrons and Biſhops of Aichſtat, publiſhed by Gretſer, and printed at Ingoldſtadt, in the Year 1617.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors which flouriſh'd in the Fourteenth Century.

Hugo Pratenſis, ſive de Prato Florido born at Pratum, a Town near Florence, a Dominican Monk, died in the Year 1322. He was one of the moſt famous Preachers of his Time. His Sunday Sermons upon the Goſpels and the Epiſtles for the whole Year, and upon the Feſtivals of the Saints, have been printed at Lyons in 1528. and thoſe of Lent, at Venice in 1578. and 1584. [8.]

Hugo Pratenſis.

Johannes de Neapoli, or John of Naples, a Friar-Preacher, flouriſhed in the Beginning of this Age, and died about the Year 1323. He taught ſome time at Paris, and there are printed at Naples 42 Queſtions of Philoſophy and Divinity, which he explained at Paris. His other Works, which are a Commentary upon the Sentences, his quodlibetical Queſtions, and his Sermons [are mentioned by Altamura in Bibl. Prædic. but] were never printed.

John of Naples.

Petrus Aureolus, a Native of Verberie upon Oiſe, a Grey-Friar, after he had taught Divinity for a time at Paris, was made Archbiſhop of Aix in 1321. The Year of his Death is not known, but ſome believe, that Jacobus de Concos ſucceeded him the next Year; and if that be true, 'tis not like, that he lived long. We have the Comment of this Author upon the four Books of the Sentences, of which the firſt Book was printed at Rome in 1596. and the three other with his quodlibetical Queſtions in 1605. He alſo made an Abridgment of all the Bible, according to the Literal Senſe, printed at Venice in 1507. and 1571. at Strasburg in 1514. at Paris in 1565. and 1585. This Author alſo hath ſome Sermons upon the Immaculate Conception, printed at Tholouſe in 1514. He compoſed alſo ſeveral others upon the whole Year, which are not yet made publick, no more than his Writings, intitled, The Diſtinctions of the Roſe, and his Treatiſe of Poverty, and the poor uſe of Things, which is ſaid to be in MS. in the Monaſtery of the Grey-Friars at Seez. He is commonly ſirnamed, Doctor facundus, The Eloquent Doctor.

Petrus Aureolus.

Nicholas Triveth, or Trivet, the Son of Sir Thomas Trivet of Norfolk, was brought up at London, among the Dominicans, and entred into their Order. He received the Drs. Cape at Oxford, and went to Paris, where he compleated his Studies. Being returned to London, he was made Prior of the Dominicans in that City, where he died in 1328. being 70 Years of Age, in great Reputation for his Holineſs. F. Dacherus in the eighth Tome of his Spicilegium, has publiſhed a Chronicle of this Author from 1136. to 1307. In every Year he obſerves the Years of the Popes, Emperors of the Weſt, Kings of France and England, and relates the Accidents at large, particularly thoſe that related to the Hiſtory of England, and his own Order. There is alſo another Work of this Author printed at Tholouſe in 1488. and at Venice in 1489. which is a Commentary upon the Books of St. Auſtine, De Civitate Dei. Divers MS. Treatiſes of this Author are found in the Libraries in England; and among others, an Hiſtory of the Acts of the Emperors, Apoſtles, and Kings [in Magdalen-College Library at Oxford, Cod 138.] A Commentary upon the Book of Boethius de Conſolatione, [in the publick Library at Cambridge, Cod. 236.] Flowers upon the Rule of St. Auguſtine [in the Lumleian Library, Cod. 291.] and a Treatiſe upon the Maſs [in Merton College Library in Oxford, Cod. 147. No. 1. and in the Archbiſhop of Canterbury's Library at Lambeth, and elſewhere.]

Nicholas Trivet.

Auguſtinus Triumphus, of Ancona, an Hermite of the Order of St. Auguſtine, flouriſhed from the Year 1274. when he was preſent at the Council of Lyons, to 1328. when he died at Naples, April 2. in the 85th Year of his Age. He compoſed a Summ concerning the Eccleſiaſtical Authority, dedicated to Pope John XXII. and printed at Augsburg in 1473. and at Rome in 1479. and 1582. He firſt began a Book, called, Milleloquium, out of the Writings of St. Auguſtine, which was after finiſhed by Bartholomew Urbinus. Some attribute to him certain Commentaries upon the Lord's-Prayer, the Angelical Salutation, and the Magnificat, printed [at Rome] in 1590. and 1592. which ſome impute to Steuchus de Eugubio: But Trithemius makes mention of the laſt of theſe Commentaries in his Catalogue of the Works of Auguſtine of Ancona, and of certain Commentaries of the ſame Author, upon Ezekiel, upon the New Teſtament, upon the four Books of the Sentences, a Book of quodlibetical Queſtions, a Treatiſe of the Spirit againſt the Greeks, a Work upon the Entrance into the Land of Promiſe, A Treatiſe of the X. Strings, and a Book of the Powers of the Soul; Sermons upon all the Sundays in the Year, and the Saints Days. But we have none of theſe Works: They are kept cloſe in ſome Libraries [viz. at Ancona, and in the Vatican.]

Auguſtinus Triumphus.

Albert of Padua, an Auguſtine Hermite, the Scholar of Ægidius Romanus, and a Dr. of Paris, died in that City in the Year 1323. or 1328. He compoſed a Commentary upon the Books of the Sentences; and others upon the Pentateuch, Goſpels, and St. Paul's Epiſtles, which are kept in MS. at Padua. His Sermons only are printed at Paris in 1544. and 1550. and at Venice in 1584. and his Explication of the Goſpels upon all the Sundays of the Year at Venice in 1476.

Albert of Padua.

Joannes Baſſolis, a Grey-Friar, a Scholar of Scotus's, commonly called Doctor Ordinatiſſimus, the moſt Orderly Doctor, flouriſhed about the Year 1420. and taught at Rheims and Mechlen. He has a Comment upon the four Books of the Sentences printed at Paris in 1517. [where alſo ſome Miſcellanies of his in Philoſophy and Phyſick were alſo printed; when he died is not known.]

Joannes Baſſolis.

Jacobus de Lauſanna, a Monk of the Order of the Friars-Preachers, a Dr. of Paris, and after the Provincial of his Order, is the Author of a great Work of Morality, divided into twelve Books, and printed at Limoges in 1528. and of ſeveral Sermons, which are alſo printed. The Time and Quality of this Author are not very certain. Some have written, that he was a Licentiate at Paris in the Year 1317. others make him Biſhop of Lauſanna, about 1320. but there is no Certainty of it, for it is more probable, that he took his Name from Lauſanna, becauſe he was born in that City.

Jacobus de Lauſanna.

Henry de Carret, a Grey-Friar, made in the Year 1300. Biſhop of Lucca, by Boniface VIII. and driven from his Biſhoprick in the Year 1326. by Lewis of Bavaria, hath compoſed a Treatiſe upon the Prophet Ezekiel; which is in MS. in Mr. Colbert's Library.

Henry de Carret.

Dominicus Grenerius, a Doctor of Paris, a Preaching-Friar, Apoſtolick-Penitentiary, was made Mr. of the Holy Palace by Pope John XXII. in the Year 1326. and promoted the ſame Year by the ſame Pope to the Biſhoprick of Pamiez, hath made Poſtills upon all the hiſtorical Books of the Bible; which are found in the Library of Mr. Colbert, Cod. 114, 115, 116, 117, 118. He lived till after the Year 1342.

Dominicus Grenerius.

Petrus Alvernienſis, or Peter of Auvergne, a Canon of the Church of Paris, compoſed a Summ of quodlibetical Queſtions about 1320. 'Tis in Mr. Colbert's Library, Cod. 963.

Peter of Auvergne

Vitalis è Furnò, a Native of Bazas [in Guienne] a Grey-Friar, was employ'd by Pope Clement V. to examine the Errors of John Oliva, and made Cardinal of the Title of St. Martin in 1312. John XXII. gave him the Title of the Biſhoprick of Albania, after the Death of the Cardinal of Aux, which happened in 1320. He maintained in the Conſiſtory in the Year 1322. againſt the Judgment of the Pope, That it was not Heretical to aſſert, That neither Jeſus Chriſt, nor his Apoſtles had nothing of their own, but lived in Common, and was ſo bold as to declare, that it was an Hereſie to hold the contrary; but the Pope being very much enraged againſt him, he begged pardon, and retracted his Aſſertion. He died 1327. He hath left us a Book, called, Speculum Morale, or a Moral Look-glaſs upon the Scripture; which puts a Myſtical Senſe upon almoſt all Paſſages both of the Old and New Teſtament. This Work was compoſed by this Author in 1305. and printed at Lyons in 1513. and at Venice in 1514. and 1600. where alſo the Comments of this Author upon the Proverbs of Solomon, upon the Four Goſpels, and the Revelation are printed. The Treatiſe upon the Preſervation of Health, and the Cures of Diſeaſes, printed in his Name at Mayence in 1531. belong to an Author of greater Antiquity, who lived in the time of Bela King of Hungary, of whom he ſpeaks; as Mr. Baluzius has already obſerved. They, who have written of the Authors of the Order of St. Francis, do make mention of ſome other Works of this Author in MS. and among others, his Commentaries upon the Sentences, which are ſaid to be in the Vatican Library.

Vitalis è Furnò

Marinus Sanutus, or Sanudo, ſirnamed Torſellus, from an Inſtrument ſo called, of which he was the Inventor, a Native of Rivoalti, a Town under the States of Venice, after he had ſpent his Youth in an Expedition to the Holy Land, compoſed a Work to which he gave the Title, The Secrets of the Faithful of the Croſs, in which he undertakes to preſcribe a Way, how the Chriſtians may recover the Holy Land, divided into three Books. In the firſt Book he ſhews, That the way to weaken the Infidels, is to hold no Trade nor Commerce with them. In the ſecond he ſhews, How they muſt be attacked, in what Places, and with what Forces. In the third, he gives an Hiſtory of the Holy Land, and the Expedition of the Chriſtians thither; that he may inſtruct them in ſuch Methods, as may ſucceed in the Conqueſt of it, by avoiding the Faults of the one, and imitating the Conduct of the other. Sanutus preſented this Work in the year 1312. to Pope John XXII. with Geographical Tables, and dedicated it to the Kings of France, England and Sicily, exhorting them to undertake the Conqueſt of the Holy Land. He hath alſo written ſeveral Letters upon the ſame Subject to the Princes, Cardinals and Prelates, which are printed at the End of his Work, publiſhed by Bogarſius in his Collection, intitled, Geſta Dei per Francos, The Acts of God done by the French, printed at Hanover in 1611.

Marinus Sanutus.

Alexander

Alexander de S. Elpidio.

Alexander de S. Elpidio, a City of Italy near Rome, was chosen in 1312. General of the Order of Augustine-Hermites, and made in the Year 1225. Archbishop of Ravenna, composed by the Order of Pope John XXII. a Treatise about the Jurisdiction of the Empire, and Authority of the Pope, divided into two Books, and printed at Lyons in 1498. and at Ariminum in 1624. It is said, That there are some MS. Treatises of the same Author; and among others, a Treatise of Evangelical Poverty and the Unity of the Church [with some Commentaries upon Aristotle's Works, preserved in the Library of the Augustine-Friars at Bononia, by Josephus Pamphilius, in Chron Erem. p. 46.]

Alvarus Pelagius.

Alvarus Pelagius, a Native of Galicia in Spain, Dr. of Law in the University of Bononia, entred into the Order of Grey-Friars in 1304. when he had studied Divinity at Pisa, and afterwards at Paris under Joannes Scotus. He was made by Pope John XXII. about the Year 1330. Apostolick Penitentiary, and afterwards honoured with the Dignity of Bishop of Coronna in Achaia: and lastly, made Bishop of Silves in Portugal. He defended John XXII. against Michael de Cæsenas. We have an excellent Treatise composed by him, called, Planctus Ecclesiæ [i. e. The Churches Complaints] dedicated to Petrus Gomesius General of his own Order, which he finished at Compostella in 1340. and has been printed at Ulm in 1474. at Lyons in 1517. and at Venice in 1560. A Summ of Divinity printed at Ulm in 1474. A MS. Treatise, which is found in the Vatican Library, and in Mr. Colbert's Cod. 2071. intitled, Collyrium Fidei contra Hæreses, [i. e. A Salve to preserve the Faith against Heresies.] A long Discourse of the Vision of Souls made before Pope John XXII. in which he defends the Judgment of that Pope. It is in MS. in the Library of the Grey-Friars at Toledo. Trithemius makes mention of a Treatise of this Author, intitled, The Mirror of Kings, and an Apology divided into four Books. The Treatise of Alvarus Pelagius, De planctu Ecclesiæ, is divided into two Books. In the first, he treats of the State of the Church, its Foundation, Jurisdiction, Power, and Sanctity; the Pope and Cardinals Authority. In it he maintains as well the Temporal, as Spiritual Soveraignty of the Pope; That none can appeal from his Judgment; that he has none that can judge him upon Earth; that he has two Swords; that he is above Emperors and Kings, and may depose them. He also in it treats of the Pope's dispensing Power, the Authority of his Legates, Ecclesiastical Censures, and the Power of Bishops, Duty of Kings, Qualities of the Church, and particularly its Unity; Of Schism and Schismaticks. The second Book contains many passionate Declamations against the Disorders and Unrulinesse of the Members of the Church of all Degrees, and the Means to remedy them. In it he also treats of the Obligation of Bishops to Residence, of Simony, of such Faults as the Popes may be guilty of, of their Obligations and Duties; as also of the Cardinals, Patriarchs and Bishops. He describes the Vices into which they commonly fall, and spares not the Abbots and Monks. From the Clergy he passes to the Laity; and having run through all Estates and Employments, Conditions, Ages and Sexes, he discovers their Sins, to which they are subject, and opposes the Errors of the Begards. In it also he debates the Question about the Poverty of Jesus Christ and his Apostles, and endeavours to reconcile the Decretal, Exiit, with the Opinion of John XXII. and proves, that it is not Heretical to assert that Jesus Christ and his Apostles had not any Dominion either in common, or particular to themselves, nor any Property, nor any Right of Use, but the more actual Usage of them. Upon this Subject he enlarges with respect to the Franciscans, and the Questions debated in Pope John XXII's Time, but defends his Constitutions notwithstanding; affirming, That it belongs to the Pope to explain the Rule. He after speaks of the other Virtues of the Monks; as their Obedience, Humility, Charity, Silence, and the opposite Vices, and ends this Work with an Explication of the seven Gifts of the Holy Spirit.

William Ockam.

William Ockam, born in a Village of the same Name in the County of Surrey, in England, a Grey-Friar, and sirnam'd, The Singular Doctor; was the Head, or Leader of the Sect of School-men, called, Nominals, because they did not multiply Things according to the Difference of their Names; but attempted to know, and explain the Proprieties of Terms. He flourished in the University of Paris in the Beginning of this Age, and made a Work of the Ecclesiastical and Secular Power, in the Defence of Philip the Fair, against Boniface VIII. He after fell in with a Party of his own Order, who maintained that Jesus Christ had nothing in Proper nor in Common, and was one of the great Adversaries of John XXII. who condemned him to Silence under the Penalty of Excommunication; but in the Issue, he declared himself openly for the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria, and for the Antipope Petrus Corbarius, and wrote against John XXII. who excommunicated him in 1330. whereupon he left France and went to Lewis of Bavaria, who received him favourably. He finished his Life in that Court, and wrote always in his Defence, It is said, that he used to speak to the Emperor thus, O Prince, defend me with thy Sword, and I will defend thee with my Pen. He died at Munick [April 10] 1347.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors which flourished in the Fourteenth Age.

His Works were never collected into one Body, but printed severally. They are of three Sorts: 1. Works of Philosophy. 2. Treatises of School-Divinity. 3. Books of Controversie. His Philosophical Books are, his Exposition upon Logick, printed at Bononia in 1496. A Summ of Logick printed at Venice in 1532. His Questions upon the eight Books of Aristotle's Physicks, printed at Strasburg in 1491. and 1506. His Natural Philosophy, or an Abridgment of a Summ taken out of the Books of Physick, printed at Venice in 1606. and at Rome in 1637. His Works of School-Divinity, are his Questions upon the four Books of Sentences, printed at Lyons in 1495. his Centiloquium, containing the whole Science of speculative Divinity in a hundred Conclusions, printed in the next Year in the same Place. A Commentary upon the first Book of the Sentences, printed in 1483. Seven quodlibetical Questions, with a Treatise upon the Sacrament of the Altar, or of the Body of Jesus Christ, printed at Paris in 1487. and 1513. at Strasburg in 1491. and at Venice in 1516. [and at Paris 1487. and 1513.]

His Books of Controversie against the Popes Boniface VIII. and John XXII. are put together by Goldastus into his Collection, intitled, Monarchia. The first is about the Ecclesiastical and Secular Power, in the form of a Dialogue between a Soldier and a Clergyman; in it he confutes the pretended Claim of Pope Boniface VIII. to a Superiority over the Temporal Affairs of Kings. This Treatise was printed before at Paris in 1598. The second is a Treatise, containing a Resolution to eight Questions about the Ecclesiastical and Secular Power. In it he discusses these following Questions, 1. Whether the Supream Spiritual Power and the Supream Temporal Power may meet in the same Subject, and whether the Pope hath them both? He recites the Reasons and Answers on both sides, and at last concludes, That although both these Powers may meet in the same Man, yet it is not at all fit, that they should meet in him; and that the Pope hath only a Spiritual Jurisdiction. 2. Whether the Lay-Power hath any Thing proper to it, which is immediately derived from God, and whether it depends on the Pope? He treats of this Question in the same Manner as the former, and gives us to understand, that the true Opinion is this, That Kings depend immediately on God, and not on the Pope, as far as concerns their Temporal Power. 3. Whether the Pope, and the Church of Rome have by the Appointment of Jesus Christ, a Power to give a Temporal Jurisdiction to the Emperor and Kings, and whether they hold it from him? He recites the Reasons on both sides; but manifestly shews what Opinion he was of. 4. Whether the Election of a King of the Romans, or of the Emperor, entitles to a Supream Power, and whether it depends upon the Ceremony of Unction used at the Coronation. He treats of the Distinction between the King of the Romans, and the Emperor, of the Right of Charles the Great to the Empire, and of the Right of his Successors, as well to the Empire, as Kingdom of France, of the Right of Election; and concludes, that the Electors in Choosing a King of the Romans, which he looks upon, as not differing from the Emperor, confer on him a Right to govern the Empire. 5. Whether in those Kingdoms, where there is a Succession established, the Unction performed by the Clergy, gives any Temporal Authority? 6. Whether Kings are subject to them that crown them? 7. Whether a King, who shall suffer himself to be crowned by any other Bishop, than him, to whom it belongs of Right, loses his Title of King, and his Regal Authority? 8. Whether the Canonical Election of the Princes Electors gives the King of the Romans a Right to any other than the Hereditary Countries. He treats of all these Questions after such a Manner, that though he does not plainly lay down his own Judgment, yet he shews where the Truth lies. In the End of his Treatise, he relates the Errors, of which John XXII. was accused, as well concerning the Poverty of Jesus Christ and his Apostles, as about the Vision of God. His third Work is a large Treatise in the Form of a Dialogue, divided into several Books, in which he examines the Questions controverted in his time, between John XXII. and his Adversaries in the same Method, as in his former Treatise. In the first Book he inquires, whether it belongs to Divines, or Canonists to judge of Heresies and Catholick Truths. In the second he lays down, what is Heresie, and what Catholick Truth. In it also he treats of several curious Questions concerning the Principles of Faith, and the Condemnation of Heresies by Councils and Popes. In the third he examines, who are Judges of Heresies, and shews, that none but such as are obstinate in their Error are to be treated as Hereticks; and so adds, what are the Conditions necessary to repute a Man an Heretick. In the fourth Book also he treats of the same Question, and preſcribes the Means to convince a Man of Obſtinacy. In the fifth he ſhews, who may fall into Hereſie, and particularly, whither the Pope or College of Cardinals may err; In it alſo he treats of the Primacy of the Church of Rome, and of the Infallibility of a General Council, and of the whole Church. In the ſixth he treats of the Puniſhment of Hereticks, and particularly of a Pope, who is either ſuſpected or convicted of Hereſie; the Method of proceeding againſt him, the Judges which he may have upon Earth, and the Penalties which may be inflicted on him. He alſo conſiders, what ſhare Lay-Princes have in the Deciſions and Executions of ſuch Judgments as concern the Faith. In the ſeventh he treats of ſuch as give Credit to Hereticks, who defend and protect them, and particularly of ſuch as follow an Heretical Pope; who obey him, and maintain his Heretical Doctrines and communicate with him. After he has explained theſe Queſtions in the firſt Part of this Dialogue, he oppoſes in the ſecond the pretended Hereſie of John XXII. concerning the Viſion of God, and confutes the Reaſons brought to excuſe him. The third Part is divided into two Treatiſes. The firſt is about the Authority of the Pope, and the ſecond about that of the Emperor. In the firſt Book he inquires, how far the Pope's Power extends it ſelf, and whether he hath any temporal Authority. In the ſecond he examines, whether it be convenient for all Chriſtians to be ſubject to one Head, and the State of the Church to be Monarchial. Whether there may be ſeveral ſupream Biſhops, or independent Patriarchs. In the third Book he inquires what that Authority is, to which Men muſt yield a Belief under pain of Damnation. In it he handles many curious Queſtions concerning the Authority of Scripture, General Councils, Popes and Fathers in Matters of Faith. In the fourth, he diſcourſes of the Supremacy of St. Peter, viz. Whether Jeſus Chriſt made him the Head and Prince of the Apoſtles, and whether he had Power over them. It is eaſie to diſcern, that he is for the Affirmative.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors which flouriſhed in the Fourteenth Age.

In his ſecond Treatiſe, which is concerning the Power of the Emperor, he examines in the firſt Book, Whether it is convenient that all the World ſhould be ſubject to one Prince; how far the Authority of the Emperor extends; whether it depends upon the Pope, or God only; whether the Empire may be tranſlated, divided, or ſeparated. In the ſecond he treats of the Emperor's Authority in Things temporal; declares the Difference between the ſpiritual Power of the Pope, and that of the Emperor; and ſhews, how far the Power of this latter extends. In the laſt Books, he diſcourſes of the Emperor's Power over the Perſons of Churchmen, and Revenues of the Church; He inquires, whether the Right of chooſing a Pope belongs to him, or the Romans; whether theſe laſt may incroach upon him, if the Emperor be the Pope's Judge, and have Authority over him. He had promiſed in the Preface to the third Part of that Work, ſeven other Treatiſes; The firſt concerning the Behaviour of John XXII. whether he died an Heretick, or orthodox Perſon. The ſecond, of the Life of Lewis of Bavaria, to ſhew, whether he were a lawful Emperor or no. The third of the Carriage of Benedict XII. whom ſeveral acknowledged to be Pope. The fourth of the Life of Friar Michael Ceſena. The fifth of the Behaviour of Friar Gerard Odonis, whom ſome reputed the lawful General of the Grey-Friars. The ſixth of the Demeanour of William Ockam. And the laſt, of the Conduct of the Princes, Biſhops, and other Chriſtians, who had adhered to, favoured and maintained thoſe of whom he had ſpoken. Theſe Treatiſes, 'tis not certain, whether they were ever finiſhed by Ockam, or whether they are loſt.

But we have two treatiſes more of this Author's againſt John XXII. The one intitled, An Abridgment of the Errors of Pope John XXII. as well in reſpect to the Poverty of Jeſus Chriſt, and his Apoſtles, as about the Viſion of God, the Trinity, and Power of God, in which he anſwers the Reaſons brought to excuſe that Pope, and accuſes Benedict XII to have been a Favourer of the Hereſies of John XXII. and to have broached a new one, in forbidding that when any Queſtion is brought to the Pope, to chooſe either the negative or the affirmative Part, before the Pope has decided it. The other is a large Work, intitled, Ninety Days; becauſe he ſpent ſo much time in compoſing it; in which he confutes word by word the four Decretals of John XXII. Quia vir reprobus, Ad conditorum, Cùm inter, and Quia quorundam.

Laſtly, There is alſo another Treatiſe of Ockam's compoſed upon the Occaſion of the Divorce of Margaret Dutcheſs of Carinthia, and the Son of the King of Bohemia; in which he explains the Right of the Emperor and Princes in Matrimonial Cauſes. All theſe Books of Controverſie are found, as we have obſerved in the firſt and ſecond Tome of the Monarchy of Goldaſtus, and have been printed ſeverally at Lyons in 1496. There is in the Library of M. Colbert, a MS. Treatiſe of Ockam's againſt Benedict XII. divided into ſeven Books; and a Letter to the General Chapter of the Grey-Friars met in 1334. at Aſſiſi.

Marſilius Patavinus, or Marſilius of Padua, ſirnamed Menandrinus a famous Lawyer of his time, ſtoutly defended the Party of the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria againſt the Pope; and about the Year 1324. compoſed a large Work upon that Subject, intitled, A Defender of the Peace againſt the Juriſdiction uſurped by the Pope of Rome, dedicated to the Emperor; It is divided into three Parts. In the firſt he ſettles the civil and temporal Authority and Juriſdiction, its Extant and Bounds. In the ſecond he ſhews the Nature of the Eccleſiaſtical Power, what is its Extent, and what are the Effects of it, and how it differs from the civil Authority. In it he maintains, that the Church, properly ſpeaking, hath no compulſive Authority or Juriſdiction; that all the Apoſtles were equal in Power; that all Biſhops and Eccleſiaſtical Miniſters have their Power immediately from God; that all Biſhops have Power to decide Matters of Faith; that a General Council is the ſupream Judge of the Church, and that the Government of the Church belongs to that; that the Biſhop of Rome is not the Head of other Biſhops, nor has any Primacy above them; that he is the firſt in a Council, and has Power to execute its Rules and Decrees. In it he alſo ſhews, wherein the Popes have exceeded their Authority and Power, as well in ſpiritual as temporal Things, and anſwers the Objections that may be made againſt that Doctrine, and the Paſſages of the Fathers uſually againſt it. In the laſt Part he draws 42 Concluſions from the Principles laid down in the two former Books, of which theſe are ſome of the principal: 1. That only the Doctrine contained in the Divine, and Canonical Scripture, or that which is deduced from thence by the Interpretation of a General Council is true, and neceſſary to believe in order to Salvation. 2. That General Councils only can ſettle ſuch Articles of Faith, as oblige us to believe them as neceſſary to Salvation. 3. That the Goſpel does not appoint to compel Men by Mulcts, and temporal Puniſhments to obſerve the Commandments of the Law of God. 5. That no mortal Man can diſpenſe with the Commands of the Goſpel; and nothing but a General Council can forbid what the Goſpel permits. 7. That the Popes cannot condemn to any ſecular or temporal Puniſhment. 14, and 15. That Biſhops, as Biſhops, have not any compulſive Juriſdiction; but it belongs to Princes only. 16. That Biſhops can't execute their Excommunications, or Interdicts, but by the Authority of the Magiſtrates. 17. That all Biſhops are equal by Divine Right. 18. That Biſhops may excommunicate the Biſhop of Rome, as well as he excommunicate them. 19. That they cannot give a Diſpenſation to celebrate ſuch Marriages as are forbidden by the Law of God, and it belongs to Princes to diſpenſe with ſuch as are forbidden by human Laws, to legitimate Children, and make them capable not only to inherit, but to be promoted to Eccleſiaſtical Orders. 23. That it belongs to Princes to beſtow Eccleſiaſtical Offices and Benefices. 27. That Magiſtrates for the publick Good, may make uſe of the ſuperfluous Revenues of the Church. 29. That it belongs to them to allow, or hinder the erecting of Colleges, or Monaſteries. 30. That it belongs to them only to puniſh Hereticks with temporal Puniſhments. 32. That a General Council can erect a Metropolis only. 33. That it belongs to Princes to call a General Council. 34, 35, and 36. That none but a General Council, or a Prince, can appoint Faſts, or new Days of Abſtinence, canonize Saints, or make Rules of general Diſcipline. 38. That Evangelical Perfection requires a Poverty, which conſiſteth in having no Moveables, and enjoying Goods without Dominion, and without a Deſign of defending them, or recovering them before a ſecular Judge. 39. That Maintenance and Proviſion is due to Biſhops and Miniſters of the Goſpel; but Men are not obliged to pay them Tithes if they have a Subſiſtence otherwiſe. 41. That it belongs only to a Prince, or a General Council to raiſe or depoſe the Biſhop of Rome. Theſe Concluſions plainly demonſtrate, that Marſilius deſigning to defend the Rights of the Empire againſt the Attempts of the Popes, fell into the oppoſite Extream, and that he rather wrote as a Lawyer, than as a Divine; although in the ſecond Part he quotes many excellent Paſſages of the Fathers, Councils, and Eccleſiaſtical Writers.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors which flouriſhed in the Fourteenth Age. Marſilius Patavinus.

The ſame Author compoſed another Treatiſe after the former, concerning the Tranſlation of the Empire, in which he gives us an Hiſtory of the ancient State of the Roman Empire, the Tranſlation of the Greek Empire to the French, and of the French to the Germans, and of the Inſtitution of Electors, and a Conſultation about the Divorce of Jane, the King of Bohemia's Daughter, and Margaret Dutcheſs of Carinthia; in which he proves the Right of a Prince about Marriages. Theſe three Treatiſes are inſerted in the ſecond Tome of Goldaſtus's Monarchy, and the firſt was printed by it ſelf at Baſil in 1522. and at Francfort in 1612. John XXII condemned this Treatiſe by an expreſs Decree recited in Raynaldus. He was alſo oppoſed by Alvarus Pelagius in his Book, De Planctu Eccleſiæ, by Alexander de S. Elpidio, by Peter de Palude, and by Cardinal Turrecremata.

The

The same Question concerning the supream Power of Kings, was also debated in France under Charles V. and the Pretences by which the Popes endeavoured to raise themselves above the temporal Jurisdiction of Kings, mightily opposed. Several other Treatises were made to defend the Soveraignty of Princes, and to prove that the Pope's Power did not extend to temporal Things. We have two considerable ones of them still extant.

Radulphus de Prælles.

The first is Radulphus de Prælles, a Counsellor, and Master of Requests to the French King; who composed a Treatise in Latin, and afterward translated it into French by the said King's Order. The other is a large Treatise in Latin, composed also by the Order of the same Prince, intitled, Somnium Viridarij [or the Dream of the Orchard] in the Form of a Dialogue between a Clergyman and a Soldier. The Author of it conceals himself under the Name of Philotheus Achillinus, a Counsellor of the King; But some attribute it to Philip Mazerius, or De Mazeriis, a Soldier, who was heretofore a Chancellor of the Kindom of Cyprus, and after Secretary to Pope Gregory XI. and last of all put himself into the Service of Charles V. from which he retired into the Monastery of Cælestines at Paris, where he died. These two Treatises are in the first Tome of the Monarchy of Goldastus. The other was printed in French at Paris in 1491. and in Latin 1503. and with the Imprimatur of the Parliament in 1516. Raaulphus de Prælles composed another Treatise, intitled, Rex Pacificus, of which he makes mention, and translated the Books of St. Austine, De Civitate Dei, into French, printed at Abbeville in 1486. and at Paris in 1531.

Philip Mazerius.

The Soldier Mazerius wrote also the Life of St. Thomas, or Petrus Thomasius, Archbishop of Crete, published by Bollandus on Jan. 29.

Ubertinus de Casalis.

Ubertinus de Casalis, a Grey-Friar, was one of the Chief of the Spiritual Part of the Monks against the Community, and maintained before Clement V. the Writings of Petrus Oliva. He also composed several Books in defence of that Party before and after the Council of Vienna, of which one of them begins with these Words, Sanctitati Apostolicæ, i. e. To the Apostolick Holiness; and the other with these Words, Super tribus sceleribus, i. e. Concerning three Wickednesses; and the last, which he composed since the Council of Vienna, with these Words, Nè imposterum, i. e. Lest for the future. He defended himself before Pope Clement V. and obtained a Bull of Absolution. But he was accused anew by Friar Bonagratia, under the Papacy of John XXII. who assigned him for his Judge, William Cardinal-Bishop of St. Sabina, to whom the Friar presented a Writing in 1321. against the Behaviour and Writings of Ubertinus de Casalis; in which he quotes the Writings, of which we have spoken. In the Year 1322. Ubertinus being asked his Opinion by the Pope concerning the Poverty of Jesus Christ; he answered in Writing, That Jesus Christ, and his Apostles as Heads of the Church, had Goods to distribute to the Poor, and Ministers of the Church; but if they be considered as private Persons, who attained and practised a Perfection in Religion, we must distinguish the two Ways of having any thing; the one civil and worldly, by which they had a Right to defend what they had, and recover it from any that had taken it; the other civil and natural, by a Right of common Charity; that Jesus Christ and his Apostles had nothing in the first Sense, but in the second they had all things necessary for Life: This Answer being read in the Consistory, was approved by the Pope; and Ubertinus de Casalis defended it again in 1330. These two Treatises are published by Mr. Baluzius, in the first Tome of his Miscellanies. There are two other Books attributed to Ubertinus, the one intitled, The Tree of a crucified Life, printed at Venice in 1485. and the other, The seven Estates of the Church; printed in the same place, 1516.

Michael Cæsenas.

Michael Cæsenas, who was chosen General of the Grey-Friars in 1316. undertook a Defence of the Opinion of the Divines of his Order concerning the Poverty of Jesus Christ, against John XXII. and caused it to be determined in a General Chapter held 1322. at Paris; that neither Jesus Christ, nor his Apostles had any thing in Proper. But maintaining the same Doctrine obstinately before the Pope at Avignon in 1327. he was arrested and put in Prison; but while he was proceeding further against him, he escaped, and appealed from all that John XXII. had done, or should do against him, and published his Appeal at Perusa; but notwithstanding this Appeal, the Pope published a Bull against him, by which he deposes him, and orders a General Chapter to be called by Bertrandus de la Tour, the Vicar-General of that Order, which was held at Paris; and in it the Deposition of Michael de Cesenas, he was approved and confirmed. In the Year 1331. he caused another Chapter to be held about the same Subject, at Perpignan, to choose another General, and to reject the common Opinion of that Order concerning the Poverty of Jesus Christ. Michael Cæsenas wrote a Treatise, which he addressed to this Assembly to turn them from that Resolution; in which he accuses John XXII. of twelve Errors. He also sent another Treatise to all the Monks of his Order, to engage them to maintain his Opinion; and presented a Petition to the Emperor, and the Princes of the Empire, against John XXII. in which he delivers and confutes the twelve Errors, of which he accused that Pope. These three Treatises are published in the second Tome of Goldastus's Monarchy. Michael flying to the Protection of the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria, valued not the Pope's Curses, but kept the Title of General of the Grey-Friars till the Day of his Death; which happened at Munick in 1343.

John of Gaunt.

Joannes de Janduno, or John of Gaunt, so called from his native Country; was one of the Divines, who were of the Party of Lewis of Bavaria. He composed a Treatise of the Ecclesiastical Power. Goldastus at first believed, that that was the Treatise which bore this Title, An Information of the Nullity of the Processes made by John XXII. against the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria, composed in 1338. which he therefore published under his Name in the first Tome of his Collection; but he has since owned, as he declares in his Preface, that it is a different Work. He also observes, that Marsilius Ficinus hath published a Commentary of John of Gaunt, upon the Sentences, and some quodlibetical Questions; but we cannot find that Edition. We have only several philosophical Commentaries of that Author, printed in several places.

Bernardus Guido.

Bernardus Guido, a Native of Limoges, was born in 1260. and entred into the Order of Friars-Preachers in 1280. and after he had been Prior of the Abbies of Albi, Carcassonne, Castres, and Limoges, was appointed Inquisitor against the Albigenses in 1305. and Procurator-General of his Order in 1312. Four Years after he was sent into Italy by John XXII. and received as a Reward for his Labour in 1323. the Bishoprick of Tuy in Gallicia; from whence he was translated in the following Year to the Bishoprick of Lodeve. He died Dec. 13. 1331. He composed several Works; of which these are in the Library of Mr. Colbert, viz. A Catalogue of the Roman Popes, Roman Emperors, Bishops of Toulouse and Limoges, and Earls of Toulouse; A Chronicle, or Genealogy of the Kings of France; a Description of the Gauls; a Book of the Names of the Apostles; another of the Names of the Disciples; the Names of the Saints of the Dioceses of Limoges; a Book of the Foundation of the Monks of Grandmont; another of the Monks of Artigia, and a third of the Foundation of the Monastery of St. Augustine of Limoges; a Treatise of the Times and Years of the Councils, and several Tracts of the Articles of Faith, and Sacraments of the Church; on the Ten Commandments, original Sin, the Office of the Mass, and of the Accidents that may happen in the Celebration of it; a part of his Sanctorale, or the Mirror of Saints. There are five other Treatises in the Library of the Friar-Preachers at Toulouse, viz. A Treatise of the Advantages of the Blessed; two Volumes of Sermons, and a Work intitled, The Practice of the Office of an Inquisitor. He also continued, and augmented the Book of Stephen de Salagnac's History of the Establishment of the Order of Friars-Preachers; the Mirror of Popes, Emperors, and Kings of France, to the Year 1322. dedicated to Pope John XXII. which is in the Library of the Friars-Preachers at Avignon. Such of these Works as have been printed, are as follow; two Lives of Clement V. and two other Lives of John XXII. published by Mr. Bosquet, and Mr. Baluzius in his Collection of the Lives of the Popes of Avignon; the Life of St. Fulcran, printed by Bollandus, Feb. 13. The Life of St. Glodesindis by Surius, July 25. An History of the Monks of Grandmont, and the Monastery of St. Austine at Limoges to the Year 1313. by Father Labbé in his Bibliotheca. The Epistle Dedicatory, and Preface to his Mirror of Saints by the same Person, and the Acts of the Earls of Thoulouse, by Catellus.

Guido de Terrena de Perpiniano.

Guido de Terrena de Perpiniano, a Native of Rousillon, a Doctor of Paris, and a Carmelite, was made General of his Order in 1318. and afterward appointed Inquisitor-General by Pope John XXII. who made him Bishop of Majorca in 1321. from whence he was translated to the Bishoprick of Elne. He died Aug. 21. 1342. He composed a Sum of Heresies with the Confutation of them, dedicated to Gosselin Cardinal-Bishop of Albania, printed at Paris in 1528. and at Cologne in 1631. with an Harmony of the Four Evangelists. There is in the French King's Library a Commentary of this Author upon Gratian's Decrees, and a Treatise of the Perfection of Life, in Mr. Colbert's; where he treats of the Poverty of Jesus Christ, and his Apostles. He made this Treatise at Paris. Mr. Baluzius hath published the Synodal Decrees of this Bishop, in the Appendix of his Work, intitled, Marcha Hispanica, p. 1454.

Terrena de Arnoldus.

There is another Terrena, named Arnoldus, who is thought to be the Nephew of the former, of whom we have spoken. He was a Doctor of Law, and Sacrist of Perpignan, who flourished about the End of this Age, and wrote about the Year 1373 a Treatise of the Mass and Canonical Hours, and Theological Questions, which he compiled at Avignon; which Works are found in MS. in Mr. Colbert's Library.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors which flouriſhed in the Fourteenth Age.

Franciſcus Mayronius, born at Digne in Provence, a Grey-Friar, a Scholar of Scotus, being Batchelor of Divinity in the Univerſity of Paris, firſt introduced by his Example, an Act in the Sorbonne, which is held from Morning to Night in the Schools of the Sorbonne by one Reſpondent without any Preſident, and without Interruption. There he received the Doctor's Cap in 1323. and died at Placentia in 1325. His Comments upon the four Books of the Sentences, and ſome other Treatiſes of School-Divinity, have been printed at Venice, in 1517, 1520, 1556, and 1567. His Sermons upon Lent, and the Saints Days, were printed in the ſame City in 1491, and 1493. and at Baſil in 1598. The following Treatiſes of the Poverty of Jeſus Chriſt, and his Apoſtles, of the Cardinal Virtues and Vices, Of the Articles of Faith, Of Baptiſm, Of Humility, Of Indulgences, Of the Body of Jeſus Chriſt, Of the Angels, Of Prayers for the Dead, Of Penances, Of Faſting, Of the laſt Judgment, Of the ſeven Gifts of the Holy Spirit, Upon the Lord's Prayer, and the Magnificat, were printed at Baſil in 1498. He has an Explication upon the Ten Commandments, which is printed at Paris in 1619. Theological Truths upon S. Auſtin, and the City of God, printed at Toloufe in 1488. and at Venice in 1489. His Commentaries upon the Predicaments, upon the Categories, and upon Ariſtotle's Books of Phyſicks, were printed at Venice in 1517. and ſome other Works, yet in MS. are in ſeveral Libraries, [as that of Mr. Waddingus, and the Grey-Friars at Leige.]

Bertrandus de Turre.

Bertrandus de Turre, a Grey-Friar of the Dioceſs of Cobors, and General-Miniſter of the Province of Aquitaine, was made Archbiſhop of Salerne in 1319, and in the following Year the Cardinal-Prieſt of S. Vitalis by John XXII. and laſtly, Biſhop of Freſcati. He was appointed in 1328 Vicar, or Adminiſtrator-General of the Order of Grey Friars, and approved of the Depoſition of Michael de Caſenas in the Aſſembly of the General Chapter of that Order held at Paris in 1329. He died in 1314. He compoſed ſeveral Sermons, which are in ſeveral Libraries; two Volumes of them are in the Library of Cardinal de Bouillon, and three in that of the Sorbonne. His Sermons upon the Epiſtles of the Year were printed at Strasburg, in 1501.

Durandus à S. Porciano.

Durandus de S. Porciano, a Village in the Dioceſs of Clermont in Auvergne, of the Order of Friars-Preachers, a Doctor of Paris, flouriſhed in that Univerſity from 1313. when he was Licentiate, to 1318. when he was made Biſhop of Puy or Annecy by the Pope; from whence he was tranſlated in 1326. to the Biſhoprick of Meaux, which he governed to 1333. in which he is ſaid to have died. His chief Work is a Treatiſe of Divinity upon the four Books of the Sentences, which he began when he was very young, and finiſhed a little before his Death, as he himſelf tells us: In them he departs much from the Opinions of S. Thomas and Scotus, and taught ſeveral Doctrines very particular, and bold; which gave him the Name of the Moſt reſolute Doctor. This Commentary was printed at Venice in 1561. ſeveral times, and at Lyons in 1595. He alſo compoſed a Treatiſe about the Eccleſiaſtical Power upon the Occaſion of the Queſtion, which was diſputed upon that Subject in France in 1329. between the Biſhops and Peter de Cuguires; of whom Peter Bertrandus makes mention upon the ſixth Book of the Decretals, which was printed at Paris in 1506. He alſo compoſed a Treatiſe againſt the Opinion of John XXII. about the State of Souls, but we have it not; as alſo an Inſtruction for his Clergy, and ſome Sermons.

Odericus de Port Naon.

Odericus de Port-Naon in Friuli, a Grey-Friar, after he had travelled a long time in the Eaſt, and preached the Goſpel in Aſia and the Indies, compoſed a Relation of the Wonders of the Eaſtern Tartars, which is in MS. in ſome Libraries in England, and a ſhort Chronicle from the Beginning of the World to the Papacy of John XXII. Some Sermons and Letters.

Guido.

Guido, Abbot of S. Denys in France, flouriſhed about the Year 1320. and was Abbot of that Abby between Giles de Pontoiſe, who died in 1325. and Walter de Pontoiſe, who ſucceeded him in 1333. He made ſome Notes upon Uſuardus's Martyrology, which is in MS. in the Library of S. Victor.

William of Nottingham.

William of Nottingham, a Canon and Chanter of the Church of York, and after a Franciſcan Monk, flouriſhed in England about 1320, and died Octob. 5. 1336. None of his Works are printed, but there are ſeveral of them in the Libraries of England; and among others ſome Queſtions upon the four Goſpels, Reflections upon all the Goſpels of the Year, Queſtions upon the Lord's Prayer, and a Treatiſe againſt the Errors of Pelagius.

William Mount.

William Mount, an Engliſhman, Canon of Lincoln, flouriſhed in 1330. and compoſed ſeveral Works, which are in MS. in the Engliſh Libraries. Theſe are the Titles of ſome of them, which are publiſhed; Collections with a Paraphraſe upon the Pſalms, the Mirrour of Penance, A Summ for Paſtors, Theological Diſtinctions, Sermons, A Numeral, A Similitudinary, and a Treatiſe of Tropes.

Philip de Montcalier in Piedmont, became a Monk in the Convent of Grey-Friars at Tholouſe, and was after Divinity-Lecturer at Padua. He compoſed in 1330. a Poſtill upon all the Goſpels of the Year, and Sermons for the whole Year. The Abridgment of his Sermons drawn up Janſelmus de Canova, Keeper of the Convent of Cordeliers at Cuma, was printed at Lyons in 1510. and 1515. This Author lived to 1350. or thereabouts.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors which flouriſhed in the Fourteenth Age.

Philip de Montcalier.

Aſteſanus.

Aſteſanus, ſo called from the Village of Aſt in Piedmont, where he was born, a Grey-Friar, is the Author a Summ of Caſes of Conſcience, divided into eight Books; which was printed at Nuremburg in 1482. by the Care of Beliatus and Gometius, and ſince at Venice in 1519. from whence Antonius Auguſtinus hath taken his Penitentiary Canons printed at Venice in 1484. This Author lived to the Year 1330. There is another Aſteſanus of the ſame Order, who flouriſhed ſome time after, whom Waddingus believes to be the Author of ſome Commentaries upon the Books of the Sentences, upon the Revelation, and ſome Sermons, which are not printed.

Nicholas de Lyra

Nicholas de Lyrâ, a Town of the Dioceſs of Eureux, was born of Jewiſh Parents, who taught him the Hebrew Tongue; but being converted, he became a Monk in the Monaſtery of Grey-Friars at Verneuill in 1291. and having ſtayed ſome time there, he went to Paris, where he read Lectures ſeveral Years upon the Holy Scripture in the great Convent of Cordeliers at Paris, where he died Octob. 23. 1340. He made uſe of the Learning, which he had gotten when he was a Jew, to explain the Holy Scripture literally, and made Poſtills upon all the Holy Books. He began this Work in 1293. and ended it in 1330. In them he ſhews a great deal of Jewiſh Learning, and makes a very good uſe of the Comments of the Rabbies; and among others, of Rabbi Solomon, Iſaac, or Jarchi. The firſt Edition of this Work was put out at Rome, under the Papacy of Sixtus IV. in 1471. by the Care of John D' Alena. It has been ſince printed at Baſil in 1508. and at Lyons in 1529. But the moſt perfect Edition is that of Francis Feuardentius, John Dadreus, and James de Cuilly at Lyons in 1590. which they put out after they had compared it with the MSS. It is printed ſince in the Bible with Gloſſes, at Doway in 1517. at Antwerp in 1634 and in the great Bible of Father Le Haye in 1660. He hath alſo compoſed ſome moral Comments upon the Holy Scripture, which were printed at Venice in 1516. and in 1588. Large Poſtills or Explications upon the Goſpels of all the Sundays in the Year. We have alſo a Treatiſe of his concerning the Perſon that adminiſters, and him that receives the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, which has been printed in Germany without Date, with a Work of S. Thomas upon the ſame Subject. A Diſputation againſt the Jews, printed at Venice, with his Commentaries; A Book againſt a Jew, who made uſe of the New Teſtament to oppoſe the Doctrine of Jeſus Chriſt; printed with the Edition of his Poſtills in 1529. Waddingus attributes to him a Writing of the Life and Actions of S. Francis; but becauſe no other Authors mention it, I believe it is not his. Tritbemius makes mention of his Sermons, and we meet with ſome large Commentaries upon the Holy Scriptures, in Libraries, which bear his Name. Some Authors ſay, that he made ſome Comments upon the Books of the Sentences, ſome Quodlibetical Queſtions, a Treatiſe upon the Beatifick Viſion, an Expoſition upon the Ten Commandments, and ſome other Works.

Peter Bertrandus.

Petrus Bertrandus, a Native of Annonay in Vivarois, the Son of Matthæus Bertrand, and Agnes the Empreſs; after he had profeſſed the Civil Law with great Reputation in the Univerſities of Avignon, Orleans and Paris, was made in 1320. the Chancellor of Joanna Queen of France and Dutcheſs of Burgundy, who made him Executor of her Will; and a little time after was made Biſhop of Nevers, from whence he was tranſlated in 1325. to the Biſhoprick of Autun. The Conference that he had in 1329. with Peter de Cuguieres, in which he defended the Rights of the Church in the preſence of Philip de Valois, King of France; got him Abundance of Reputation. He was made Cardinal of the Title of S. Clement in 1331. by John XXII. through the recommendation of the King and Queen of France. He founded the College of Autun at Paris in 1241 and died June 24. 1349. in the Priory of Monſault, which he had built near Avignon.

He reduc'd into writing the Acts of the Conference held in 1329. in the King's Preſence between the Biſhops of the Realm, the Chief of whom was Roger, then nominated to the Archbiſhoprick of Sens and Peter de Cuguieres, the King's Advocate; who ſpoke for the King's Officers, and Judges, about the Extent of the Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Juriſdiction. The Occaſion of this Conference, were the Complaints, which the Prelates, Officials, and all the Clergy made againſt the Judges and King's Officers, and againſt the Barons, pretending that they encroached upon their Juriſdiction. The King to ſupport them, and maintain

The Lives and Writings of the Authors which flourished in the Fourteenth Age.

tain a good Intelligence among all his Subjects, as well Eccleſiaſtick as Civil, gave a Command by his Letters dated Sept. 1. as well to the Prelates as Barons of the Kingdom to meet at Paris upon the Octaves of the Feaſt of S. Andrew, to propoſe whatever they had to alledge againſt one another, that they might live orderly for the future. The Archbiſhops of Bourges, Auſche, Rouen and Sens met accordingly, together with the Biſhops of Beauvais, Chalons, Laon, Paris, Noyon, Chartres, Coutances, Angiers, Poictiers, Meaux, Cambray, S. Flour, S. Brieu, Chalon upon Saone, and Autun. The King being come alſo thither with his Council and ſome Barons, Peter de Cuguieres, Knight, and Councellor of State ſpoke for the Rights of the King, taking for his Text theſe Words, Render to Cæſar the Things that are Cæſar's and to God the Things that are Gods; from whence he proved two Things: 1. That due Honour and Reverence ought to be paid to the King. 2. That the Spiritual Authority ought to be ſeparated from the Temporal, of which the former belongs to the Prelates, and the latter to the King and his Lords; which he proved by ſeveral Reaſons drawn from Fact and Right; and in the End concludes, that the Biſhops ought to be contented with the Spiritual Power, and the King ought to protect them in Matters, which are ſubject to him. This Diſcourſe being finiſhed, he ſaid in French, that the Intention of the King, was to put himſelf in Poſſeſſion of the Temporal Power; and preſented ſeveral Articles containing the Grievances, and Attempts, which he affirmed to be done by the Prelates and Clergy of the Realm of France or their Officers, againſt the Temporal Juriſdiction of the King, Barons, and other Lords. The greateſt Part of theſe Articles reſpect the Encroachments which the Eccleſiaſtical Judges had made upon Civil Juſtice, in taking upon them the Cognizance of Civil and Real Cauſes under divers Pretences, and preſuming to forbid the Lay-Judges. The Prelates deſired time to conſider before they gave their Anſwer, and obtained till Friday following, when Roger the Archbiſhop of Sens Elect carried Word to the King, who was at the Caſtle of S. Vincent, and after he had proteſted, that what he was about to ſay, was not with an intention to ſubmit himſelf to the Judgment of the King; but only to inſtruct his Majeſty and the Conſcience of his Attendants, he took for his Text theſe Words of the firſt Epiſtle of S. Peter, Fear God, Honour the King; and ſhewed from them, that Fear and Love was due unto to God, which engage Men to give liberally to him, to honour him reverently, and give him all his Dues. Secondly, that all Men are oblig'd to obey their Prelates, and that the Kings of France, who had honour'd them more than other Princes, have been always moſt happy. Thirdly, that we muſt render to God, what is really his, and in this Point he oppoſed what Peter de Cugnieres had ſaid of the two Juriſdictions, maintaining, that though they were diſtinguiſhed, yet they were compatible, and might be united in one Subject; that the Temporal Power is ſubject to the Spiritual; that the Clergy have both; which he endeavours to prove by the Old Teſtament and New, by Natural, Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Law, by Cuſtom, and by the Privileges granted by the Kings of France to the Clergy of his Realm.

Upon the ſecond Part of the Text, Honour the King, he ſaid, that truly to honour the King, was to adviſe him not to attempt any Thing againſt his Conſcience, and that would bring a general Odium upon himſelf by engaging him to make void what his Predeceſſors had done. Secondly, that it was not to honour him to put him upon any Thing, that would leſſen his Power by perſuading him, that his Predeceſſors had no Power or Right to grant thoſe Privileges. Thirdly, It was not to honour the King, to adviſe him to do any Thing contrary to his Reputation, Conſcience, or Oath which he had taken to preſerve the Privileges and Liberties of the Church. He concludes with a Supplication to the King, that it would pleaſe the King to confirm their Juſt and Cononical Privileges, to recall the Attempts made to the contrary at their Complaint and Requeſt, and to preſerve the Church of France in its Franchiſes, Liberties, and Cuſtoms. And as to the Articles propoſed, ſome of them they were obliged to maintain; becauſe otherwiſe they ſhould loſe and weaken all their Eccleſiaſtical Power: But the others contained nothing but certain Abuſes, which they could not believe their Officers had been guilty of, and which they would neither approve, nor tolerate.

The next Friday, which was Dec. 29. the King being in his Palace, with his Counſellors and Barons, Peter Bertrandus, Biſhop of Autun, delivered his Speech, having taken for his Text theſe Words in Geneſis, Let not the Lord be angry, if I ſpeak; and theſe other Words of Scripture, Lord, thou art our preſent Refuge. And having proved, That it is the Duty of Kings to be the Protectors of the Church; he anſwers Peter de Cugnieres, yet with a Proteſtation, that he did it only to inſtruct the King, and not to anſwer as in Judgment. He maintains, that the Juriſdiction in Civil Cauſes belongs to the Clergy by Divine and Human Right, and that Kings had beſtowed that Privilege on the Church, and the rather, becauſe the Church had granted Kings ſeveral Spiritual Revenues. Then he anſwers to the Articles propounded, and ſays, that they are of three Sorts; ſome concerned the perpetual Rights of the Church, and belong to it by Right and Cuſtom, which it juſtly uſed, and they were ready to defend it. Others contained ſeveral Abuſes and Errors, which they would not endure, and were ready to correct, if they were really uſed. The laſt Sort were partly juſt and partly unjuſt. Then he makes ſome Remarks upon the 66 Articles propounded by Peter Cuguieres, and maintains the greateſt part of them. Laſtly, the Biſhop preſented a Petition, in which they requeſted a Confirmation of their Privileges, and a Revocation of all that had been done and attempted to the contrary.

The Aſſembly being met on the 8th. day at the Caſtle of S. Vincents before the King, Peter de Cuguieres anſwer'd the Biſhops in the Name of his Majeſty, in a Diſcourſe which had for the Text theſe Words of Jeſus Chriſt, I give you Peace, I am with you, fear not; and told the Biſhops, that the King's Intention was not to deprive the Church or Biſhops of the Rights and Privileges, which they could claim by Right, or any reaſonable Cuſtom; but he proved that they had no Right to judge in Civil Cauſes; and in the Concluſion adds in the Name of the King, that if any one would inform the King of the Cuſtom and Uſe, he was ready to hearken to them. Bertrand reply'd, and ſays in his Reply, that the King's Anſwer was very general, and prayed his Majeſty to explain himſelf further. He was anſwer'd in the King's Name, that his Intention was not to oppoſe the Cuſtoms of the Church which were made appear by good Authority. The next Sunday, the Biſhops being come to the King at the Caſtle of S. Vincents, the Archbiſhop of Bourges ſaid to them, that the King had declared, that they ſhould fear nothing, for they ſhould loſe nothing during his Reign; but he would maintain them in all their Rights and Cuſtoms. The King owned that he had made ſuch a Declaration, and the Biſhops thanked him by the Mouth of the Archbiſhop of Sens, who humbly repreſented to his Majeſty, that he had publiſhed many things prejudicial to the Juriſdiction of the Clergy, which they prayed his Majeſty to revoke. The King anſwered them himſelf, that they were not done by his Order, and that he would not ratifie them. The Archbiſhop of Sens added, that the Biſhops would reform ſome Abuſes, which the Laity had complained of, provided, that the King and others would be content. Laſtly, he beſought his Majeſty to comfort them with a clear Anſwer. Peter de Cugnieres anſwered, that the King was reſolved ſo to do, provided, that the Biſhops would correct and reform whatever he deſired, and that the King would give them time to do it till Chriſtmaſs; but if they did not in that time work the Reformation agreed on, he would uſe ſuch a Remedy himſelf, as ſhould be approved of by God, and the People; and with this Anſwer he ſent away the Biſhops, but they were not ſatisfied with it. Some affirm, that the Clergy continued their Enterprizes, and thereupon he put out an Edict in Favour of the Secular Judges: But however that be, it is certain, that from that time, the Clergy loſt the Temporal Juriſdiction, which they exerciſed, and which they had extended ſo far, that they determined almoſt all Cauſes upon the Account of Sin, or Swearing; as you may ſee in the Articles propounded and maintained by the Prelates in that Conference. The falſe Opinion, defended then by the Biſhops, was at that time abandoned. That the Temporal Juriſdiction belonged by Divine Right to the Clergy.

Bertrandus made alſo another Treatiſe upon this Subject, Intituled, Of the Original, and Uſe of Juriſdictions, or of the Spiritual and Temporal Power; in which he handles, and determines theſe following Queſtions: I. Whether the Secular Power, by which the People is governed, as to their Temporal Rights, is from God. II. Whether there ought to be any other Power, or Juriſdiction for the good of the People. III. Whether theſe two Powers may meet in One Perſon. IV. Whether Spiritual Power is ſuperior to the Temporal, or the Temporal to the Spiritual. He anſwers the firſt Queſtion thus; that the Power of governing the People, cometh from God, as to the Right, but not as to the obtaining, or uſe of it; becauſe it is by the Law, and according to the Order of God, that there is any ſuch Power; but as to the manner of coming to it, it is not by Divine Right, but is often unjuſt, and Kings do alſo abuſe their Power. As to the Second, he ſays, that beſides the Secular Power, whoſe end is the moral and civil Good; there is a Spiritual and Eccleſiaſtical Power to govern the People, in order to Everlaſting Life. As to the Third, it is evident that theſe two Powers may meet in the ſame Subject, and that they did actually meet in the Prieſts of the Old and New Law; but the Difficulty is to know whether the Eccleſiaſtical Power or Juriſdiction extends it ſelf to that which belongs to the Temporal Juriſdiction, of which ſort are the perſonal and mixt Actions of the Laiety, either in its own Nature, or by Uſage, or by Cuſtom; that the Eccleſiaſtical Power in its own Nature extends it ſelf over all Perſons, which are ſubject to it as Chriſtians; that the Pope hath this Juriſdiction over all Chriſtians and other Prelates in their Dioceſſes, in ſuch ſort nevertheleſs, that the Pope may exempt certain Perſons from it; and that it extends alſo to all perſonal Actions, as far, as they may be ſinful, and conſequently, that Eccleſiaſtical Judges may take Cogniſance of them, as well as Lay. Nevertheleſs, although the Church hath this Right, yet it hath not always made uſe of it, either to avoid Scandal, or to prevent Mens Thoughts, that it ſeeks its own Intereſt; or laſtly, becauſe of the Oppoſition of Tyrants. But in France ever ſince the Kings have become Chriſtians, it hath always peaceably enjoyed that Right; that as to Cauſes real, the Church hath determined them by Cuſtom, or a Privilege granted by Princes. His Anſwer to the laſt Queſtion is, That the Spiritual ought to rule over the Temporal, alledging for his Proof Pope Boniface's Decretal Unam Sanctam: And laſtly, endeavours to anſwer ſome Objections which are brought againſt it. All the falſe Reaſonings which are in that Treatiſe proceed from hence, that the Author diſtinguiſhes well between the two Powers, but does not determine in what Manner each Juriſdiction ought to act, its Power, and End. It is true, that all Men as Chriſtians are ſubject to a Spiritual Juriſdiction; and that all their Actions, as they are Virtues or Vices, are to be regulated, and ordered by the Spiritual Power; but it is not true, that it therefore can exerciſe a Temporal Juriſdiction over all Men and their Actions, nor force them by Temporal Puniſhments, or a Deprivation of their Eſtates. It can only uſe Threats and Puniſhments purely Spiritual, inſtruct Men, admoniſh them, injoyn them, and forbid them under the Pain of Excommunication, Depoſition, &c. and not under the Penalty of Deprivation of Goods, Corporal Puniſhments, &c. and conſequently it hath not a Juriſdiction to decide Controverſies in relation to Things temporal, and it doth not belong to it to judge in Foro exteriori. The firſt of theſe Treatiſes of Bertrandus, hath been printed alone at Paris in 1495. and is found alſo in the ſecond Tome of Goldaſtus's Monarchies; the others among the Treatiſes of Law, printed at Venice in 1584. They are both in the laſt Bibliotheca Patrum, printed at Lyons, Tome 26.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors which flouriſhed in the Fourteenth Age.

William de Rubiou.

William de Rubion, a Grey-Friar, hath compoſed ſome Diſputations upon the Sentences; printed at Paris in 1518. Some hold, that he flouriſhed about the Year 1333.

Guy de Montrocher.

Guy de Montrocher, a French Divine, hath compoſed an Inſtruction for Curates about 1333. dedicated to Raymund Biſhop of Valence, printed at Venice in 1491. and a Treatiſe of the Manner of celebrating the Maſs, printed at the ſame place in 1570.

Monaldus.

Monaldus, a Grey-Friar, is the Author of a Summ of Caſes of Conſcience, called Golden; printed at Lyons in 1518. He muſt not be confounded with two others of the ſame Name, one of whom was martyr'd March 22. 1288. by the Sarazens at Arzenga; and the other was Archbiſhop of Beneventum, who died Decemb. 11. about the Beginning of the Age. This, of whom we are ſpeaking, was not Archbiſhop of Beneventum, and died Novemb. 9. 1332. Trithemius ſays, That he alſo compoſed ſome Queſtions upon the Books of the Sentences, and ſome Sermons, which are in MS. in the Vatican Library.

Ludolphus

Ludolphus or Landolphus the Saxon, after he had paſſed almoſt thirty Years in the Order of Friars-Preachers, became a Carthuſian, in the Monaſtery of Cologne, and was afterward made a Carthuſian Prior at Strasburg about 1330. He compoſed the Life of Jeſus Chriſt out of the Four Evangeliſts, and other Eccleſiaſtical Authors, with Commentaries and Prayers upon every Chapter, which have been printed at Strasburg in 1483. at Paris in 1509. at Venice in 1536, 1564, 1572, 1578. and with the Lives of St. Anne, St. Joachim, and the Virgin at Paris in 1589. He alſo has made a Commentary upon the Pſalms, according to the ſpiritual Senſe taken out of St. Jerome, St. Auſtine, Peter Lombard, and Caſſiodorus, printed at Paris in 1506. and 1528. at Venice in 1521. and at Lyons 1540.

William de Montledun.

William de Montledun, Abbot of Monſtierneuf in Poictiers, a famous Lawyer in his time, flouriſhed in the Univerſity of Toulouſe in the Papacy of Benedict XII. and compoſed divers Books of Canon Law; a Sacramentary, which is in MS. in Mr. Colbert's Library, Cod. 349. Lectures upon the ſixth Book of the Decretals, cited by Ruſæus and Probus, and augmented by Blaiſus, the Golden Doctor of Toulouſe, which are in the Library of the Cathedral Church at Cambray; an Apparatus to the Conſtitutions of Clement V. cited by Ruſæus and Anfrerius, which are in the Libraries of the Monaſteries of St. Sergius and St. Albinus at Angers, and an Apparatus upon the Extravagants of John XXII. cited alſo by Ruſæus and Probus, which is in the Library of the Monaſtery of St. Albinus at Angers, and Mr. Colbert, as alſo his Treatiſe upon the Clementines, which has been printed ſeveral times in the Repetitions of the Canon Law; a Treatiſe of Cardinals cited by Ægidius Magiſter, which is obſerved by Mr. Baluzius in his Addition to Chap 4. of the ſixth Book of the Concord of Mr. de Marca, and in his Notes upon the Lives of the Popes at Avignon.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors which flouriſhed in the Fourteenth Age.

Simon Boraſton an Engliſhman, who flouriſhed about 1336. compoſed ſeveral Works, which are found in the Libraries in England, and among others, Of the Unity and Order of the Church, A Work of the Order of Judgment, and ſome other Treatiſes of Philoſophy.

Simon Boraſton.

Bartholomæus de St. Concordia, a Native of Piſa [a City in Italy.] a Preaching-Friar, compoſed about the Year 1338. a Summ of Caſes of Conſcience, printed with his Sermons upon Lent at Lyons 1519. We muſt not confound him with Bartholomæus Urbin, a Scholar of Auguſtine Tryumphus, an Hermite of the Order of St. Auſtine, who was made Biſhop of Urbin in 1343. and died in 1350. after he had finiſhed the Milleloquium, begun by Auguſtine Tryumphus, printed at Lyons in 1555. and compoſed the Milleloquium of St. Ambroſe, printed at Lyons alſo at the ſame time. This laſt was written for the Pope againſt Lewis of Bavaria, and the Auguſtins at Rome have a Treatiſe of his in MS. againſt the Errors diſcovered in the the time of Lewis Duke of Bavaria: He alſo compoſed ſome ſpiritual Treatiſes, as a Writing upon the four Gifts; two Books of the Spiritual War; an Explication upon the Goſpels of Lent, and an Abridgment of the Book of Ægidius Romanus, about the Government of Princes. We muſt diſtinguiſh him alſo from Bartholomew Albicius a Native of Piſa alſo, a Grey-Friar, who flouriſhed about 1380. and wrote a Work of the Conformity of St. Francis with our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, printed at Milan in 1510. and ſix Books of the Life and Praiſes of the Virgin Mary, or the Conformity of the Virgin with Jeſus Chriſt, printed at Venice in 1596. Several Sermons upon Lent, are alſo attributed unto him, printed in ſeveral places. This laſt died Dec. 10. 1401.

William de Baldenſel.

William de Baldenſel, or Boldeſele, or de Boldenſleve, a German Knight, wrote an Hiſtory of his Voyage into the Holy Land, at the Intreaty of Cardinal Taleran, who cauſed it to be made upon the Occaſion of the Cruſade, which was made that Year. This Work is in the fifth Tome of the Antiquities of Caniſius.

Arnoldus Ceſcomes.

Arnoldus Ceſcomes, Archbiſhop of Terragon, wrote about the ſame time (viz. in 1337.) two Letters; the one to Pope Benedict XII. and the other to John Biſhop of Porto, to deſire Aſſiſtance againſt the Sarazens of Spain, which are publiſhed by Mr. Baluzius, in the ſecond Tome of his Miſcellanies.

Daniel de Treviſi.

Daniel de Treviſi, a Grey-Friar, after he had made ſeveral Voyages, and ſtayed ſome time in the Kingdom of Armenia, was ſent by Leo King of that Country to Benedict XII. in 1338. and compoſed for the Juſtification of the Armenians, a Treatiſe intitled, The Anſwer of Daniel de Treviſi, of the Order of Grey-Friars, and Ambaſſador of Leo King of the Armenians in the time of Benedict XII. which is in MS. in Mr. Colbert's Library, Cod. 1653.

Henry de Urimaria.

Henry de Urimaria, a Native of Thuringia, of the Order of the Hermits of St. Auguſtine, flouriſhed about 1340. He joined a moſt devout Piety with a continual Study, and compoſed ſeveral Works of Science and Piety, the Commentaries, or Additions to the Books of the Sentences, printed at Cologne in 1513. are of the firſt ſort; the Treatiſe upon the four Inſtincts, printed at Venice in 1498. under the Name of another Author, is of the ſecond ſort; as alſo his Sermons upon the Paſſion of Jeſus Chriſt, and the Saints, printed at Haguenau in 1513. and at Paris with the former Treatiſe in 1514. There are ſeveral other Works of Piety of that Author which have not yet been publiſhed.

Robert Cowton.

Robert Cowton, an Engliſhman and a Grey-Friar, flouriſhed about the ſame time, and compoſed a Commentary and an Abridgment upon the four Books of the Sentences, which are in ſome Libraries in England.

Durandus de Champagne.

Durandus de Champagne, a Grey-Friar, Confeſſor to the Queen of France and Navarre, flouriſhed alſo about the ſame time, and compoſed a Summ of Confeſſions, or a Directory for Confeſſors divided into four Parts, which is in the Library of Mr. Colbert, Cod. 451.

Clement de Florence.

Clement de Florence of the Order of Servites, a Divine of Paris, which flouriſhed about the Year 1340. wrote upon the Pſalms, and compoſed a Golden-Chain, upon all the Epiſtles of St. Paul, which are in MS. in the Library of the Great Duke of Tuſcany, and Concordances dedicated to Annebald Cardinal, the Protector of his Order, which are in the Library of the Servites at Florence. He died in the 78*th.* Year of his Age, after he had gone through divers Offices in his Order.

Lupoldus de Bamberg.

Lupoldus de Bamberg, a Lawyer, the Scholar of John Andreas de Bologne, has compoſed two Works full of Learning; the one dedicated to Rodulphus Duke of Saxony, concerning the Zeal and Fervour of the ancient German Emperors towards the Religion of Jeſus Chriſt, and the Miniſters

Ministers of the Church, in which he produces Abundance of Examples of French Kings and German Emperors, upon that Subject. The other is a Treatise of the Rights of the Empire, dedicated to Baldwin Archbishop of Treves, printed at Strasburg in 1508. These two Treatises have been printed at Paris in 1540. at Cologne in 1564. at Basil in 1497. and 1566. and at Strasburg in 1603. and 1609. This Author flourished about the Year 1340.

Walter Burley.

Walter Burley, an Englishman, whom some assure us to have been a Grey-Friar, and others a secular Priest, studied under Scotus at Oxford, and at Paris; but followed not his Doctrines. He was the Master of Edward III. King of England, and died about 1340. His Commentary upon the Books of the Sentences, was never printed; but only several Commentaries upon the Books of Aristotle, which have been printed alone in several Places, and a Book of the Lives of the Philosophers, printed in 1472. but very full of Faults; as Vossius has observed.

John Canon.

John Canon, an Englishman and a Grey-Friar, after he had finished the first course of his Studies at Oxford, came to Paris to hear the Lectures of Scotus; where having received a Doctor's Cap, he returned to Oxford, where he taught till he died, which was in about 1340. He composed a Comment upon the Mr. of the Sentences; Some Lectures and Questions, and a Treatise upon the eight Books of Aristotle's Physicks, printed at Venice in 1492.

Peter de Palude.

Peter de Palude, [or Paludanus] the Son of Gerhard Varembonius, a Lord in Bresse, of the Order of the Friars-Preachers, a Licentiate in 1314. in the University of Paris, flourished in that University, and was nominated Patriarch of Jerusalem in 1330. He made a Voyage into the East in 1331. and being returned preached a Crusade. He died at Paris, Jan. ult. 1341. He composed a large Commentary upon the four Books of the Sentences, of which that part which is upon the third and fourth Books was printed at Paris in 1514. and 1517. and since in 1530. Sermons for all the Year printed at Antwerp in 1571. at Venice in 1584. and at Colen in 1608. A Treatise of the immediate Cause of the Ecclesiastical Power, printed at Paris in 1506. in which he treats of the Power of St. Peter, the Apostles, Disciples, Popes, Bishops and Curates. His MS. Commentary upon the first and second Book of the Sentences, was fal'n into the Hands of Damianus Zenarius, a Printer at Venice, who had a Design to publish it, but never brought it to pass. There are in the Convent of Jacobins in Paris, some Comments of this Author upon all the Books of the Scripture, and in the Library of Mr. Colbert, Cod. 566. A Treatise upon the Poverty of Jesus Christ, and his Apostles, against Michael de Cæsena. It is said also, that there is a Treatise printed by this Author to prove, that the Friars-Preachers may have Goods and Revenues. It is observed by the Continuator of the Chronicon of William de Nangis, that in the Year 1331. Peter de Palude, and some other Doctors were of Opinion, that a Friar-Preacher, who knew by Confession, the Story of the Forgery of certain Letters produced by Robert d' Artois, to prove his Right to that County, might do it without sinning; yea, he was obliged to discover it, because that Story was not the Sin, which made part of the Confession; and his Opinion was followed by all the Doctors that were present, although it was not the common Opinion.

Francis Petrarch.

Francis Petrarch, born July 20. 1304. at Arezzo, of a Father a Native of Florence, but banished his Country: He was brought up at Ancisa till he was 18 Years old, when he returned with his Parents to Pisa, and from thence was brought to Avignon. He studied Grammar, Rhetorick and Philosophy at Carpentras, and Civil Law at Montpellier and Bononia. Having tasted of Law, because he was not to be of that Profession, he left it, when he was 22 Years of Age; and having taken a Journey into Italy and France, he retreated into the Valley of Clausa, near Avignon; where he gave himself up wholly to the Study of human Learning, Oratory, History and Poetry; and arrived at such Perfection in them, that his Fame being spread far, he was invited to Rome, where he was crowned with Laurels in 1343. He was the first that recovered the ancient Love of human Learning, and revived it in Europe, which had lain buried a long time, and caused Men to return from that Barbarism, which had reigned till then by inspiring many with a Desire to imitate him. About the End of his Life he was made a Canon of Padua, and died near that City, July 14. 1374.

It is not upon the Account of his Eloquence, or pieces of Poetry, or Works of profane Learning, which he made in great Numbers, that we put him among Ecclesiastical Writers; but because he composed several Books of Morality, in which he establishes the Principles and Maxims of Religion, viz. Two Books of the Remedies of both Fortunes, which are full of Christian Morality; two Books about a solitary Life, in which he relates several Examples of Christian Monks; two Books of the Leisure of Monks, in which he commends the holy Quiet of Religious Persons; two Books of the Contempt of the World, full of excellent Morality; A Paraphrase upon the seven Penitential Psalms; to which we may joyn a Treatise against Covetousness, and some others. There are also several Letters of his which concern the Affairs of the Church of his time, in which he treats of some Points of Christian Morality. He speaks very freely against the Popes at Avignon, and against the Disorders of the Court of Rome. The Works of Petrarch have been printed at Basil in 1554. and in 1581.

John Bacon.

John Bacon, or Baconthorp, so called from a Village in Norfolk in England, a Carmelite; having accomplished his Studies at Oxford, came to Paris, where he took his Degrees; and returning into his Country, was made Provincial of his Order in 1329. Four Years after he made a Voyage to Rome; he died at London in 1346. This Monk was a famous Averrhoist. He composed a Comment, or some Questions upon the Sentences printed at Milan in 1510, and 1511. at Cremona, in 1518. at Paris and Venice. An Abridgment of the Life of Jesus Christ, and some quodlibetical Questions printed at Venice in 1527. He also composed a Treatise upon the Rule of the Carmelites, an Abridgment of the History and Rights of that Order; Some Comments upon St. Austine, De Civitate Dei, and the Trinity, and upon a Treatise of St. Anselm, intitled, Why God was made Man; a Treatise against the Jews; a Treatise of Poverty; some Commentaries upon all the Scripture; a Treatise of the Beatifick Vision against John XXII. and several Sermons.

John Becanus.

John Becanus, a Canon of Utrecht, hath composed a Chronicon of the Bishops of Utrecht, and Earls of Holland, from St. Wilbrod to the Year 1346. This Chronicon has been continued to 1524 by William Hedanus, Canon of Harlem; printed at Francker in 1612. and at Utrecht in 1634.

Simon Fidatus.

Simon Fidatus de * Cassia, an Hermit of St. Austine, Founder of the Monastery of St. Catharine of Nuns of his own Order at Florence, died Feb. 11. 1348. He was famous for his Devotion, and in great Reputation for his Spiritual-mindedness, and having a Gift of Prophecy. He made a considerable Work about the Actions of Jesus Christ, divided into five Books, dedicated to a Lawyer named Thomas de Corsinis, printed at Colen in 1540. A Book of Virginity, printed at Basil in 1517. Trithemius makes mention of these following Treatises of this Author, A Book of the Christian Doctrine, A Treatise of Patience, An Explication of the Creed, The Mirror of the Cross, The Discipline of the Monks called Spiritual, and some Letters.

* A Village near Rome

Joannes Andreæ.

Joannes Andreæ, [not Joannes Andreas, as some style him] the most famous Lawyer of his time, was a Native of Mugello [in Italy.] He taught 45 Years in the University of Bononia, and died in that City, July 7. 1348. These Works of his are extant; Novels or Commentaries upon the five Books of Decretals, printed at Venice in 1581. two Commentaries upon the sixth Book; One of them he made when he was young, called, His Apparatus; the other, when he was older, called, A Novel; The first is in the Body of Law, the other is printed with his Novel upon the Decretals. His Glosses upon the Clementines, printed at Lyons in 1572. His Additions to the Mirror of William Durandus. A Tree of Consanguinity, Affinity, and Propinquity, as well spiritual as legal, printed at Basil in 1517. Some Feudal Questions, as also upon Marriage, and Interdicts, printed at Venice in 1584. A Summ about Affiances, Marriage, and Degrees of Consanguinity, printed in Vol. VI. of Tractatus Tractatuum.

Robert Holkot.

Robert Holkot, a Native of Northampton in England, a Preaching-Friar, flourished in the University of Oxford before the Year 1349. in which he died of the Plague, after he had began his Lectures upon Ecclesiastes. His printed Works are these, A Commentary upon the four Books of the Sentences, printed at Lyons in 1497, 1510, and in 1518. two hundred and thirteen Lectures upon the Book of Wisdom, which are attributed in several MSS. to Arnoldus d' Alna, a Cistertian, printed at Spires in 1483. at Ruthlingen in 1489. and at Venice in 1509, and 1586. his moral Histories for the Use of Preachers, with a Table of St. Thomas upon the Gospels and Epistles of all the Year, printed at Venice in 1505. and at Paris in 1510. his Lectures upon the Canticles, and upon the seven first Chapters of Ecclesiasticus, printed at Venice in 1509. a Treatise about the Imputation of Sin, and four other Questions, printed at Lyons in 1497, and in 1518. A Commentary also upon the Proverbs of Solomon is attributed to him, printed at Paris in 1515. but it belongs rather to Thomas Gualensis. There are some other Works of Holkot's in MS. in the Libraries at Cambridge, as his quodlibetical Questions [in Pembroke-Hall] Sermons and Allegories [in Peter-House.]

Richard Hampole.

Richard Hampole, born in Yorkshire in England, an Augustine Monk, died Sept. 29. 1349. has composed several Treatises of Piety. Some of them were printed at Cologne, and are extant in the 26th Tome of the Bibliotheca Patrum. A Treatise of the Amendment of a Sinner, an Explication of the Lord's Prayer, another of the Apostles and Athanasius's Creed; The Praise of the Name of Jesus, a Treatise of the Embraces of the Love of God, an Expoſition upon theſe Words of the Canticles of Solomon, The Daughters will love the affectionately, in which he alſo treats of the Love of God. Theſe Treatiſes are full of the Spirit, and very affecting. He alſo compoſed ſeveral other ſpiritual Commentaries upon the Holy Scripture, as the Pſalms, Job, Lamentations of Jeremiah; a Treatiſe intitled, The Sting of Conſcience, Scala Mundi, A Book of the Contempt of the World. The Commendation of Chaſtity, and ſome other Treatiſes, which are found in the Libraries of England [as the Cotton, Archbiſhop of Canterbury's at Lambeth, and Bodleian.]

The Lives and Writings of the Authors which flouriſhed in the Fourteenth Age.

Joannes Honſemius.

Joannes Honſemius, or Hoxemius, a Dutchman, a Canon of the Church of Liege, made a Continuation of the Hiſtory of the Biſhops of Liege, compoſed by Ægidius Aureæ Vallis from 1247. to 1348. It is printed in the Collection [of Hiſtorians upon the ſame Subject put out] by [Joannes] Chapeavillus [and printed at Liege in 1613.]

Gerardus Odonis.

Gerardus Odonis, a Native of Rovergne [in France] a Grey-Friar, was choſen General of that Order in 1329. in the place of Michael de Cæſena, and after preferred to the Dignity of Archbiſhop of Antioch by John XXII. he died at Catana in 1349. He compoſed a Comment upon the ten Books of Ariſtotle's Morals, printed at Venice in 1500. The Office of the Marks of St. Francis is attributed to him. There is in the Covent of Cordeliers at Mirepoix [in Languedoc] a MS. Treatiſe of the Figures of the Bible, which bears his Name, and in the Vatican Library a Comment upon the Books of the Sentences, two philoſophical Queſtions, and ſome Commentaries upon ſeveral Books of Scripture [as Waddingus teſtifies in his Biblioth. Frat. Min. p. 145.]

Jacobus Folquier.

Jacobus Folquier, an Hermite of St. Auſtine, a Doctor, and Reader of Divinity at Toulouſe, dedicated in 1345. to Clement VI. a Work intitled, Viridarium Gregorianum, or Allegories upon all the Books of Scripture which are found in MS. in the Library of the Great Auguſtines at Paris.

Bernardus

Bernardus, Abbot of Mont-Caſſin, who flouriſhed about 1347. compoſed a Book, intitled, The Mirror of the Monks of the Order of St. Benedict, printed at Paris in 1507. A Commentary upon the Rule of St. Benedict, which is found in MS. in ſome Libraries. Trithemius alſo mentions, a Book of Regular Precepts and Sermons for his Monks.

Thomas Bradwardin.

Thomas Bradwardin an Engliſhman, of the Order of Grey-Friars, Chancellor of the Univerſity of Oxford, Confeſſor to Edward III. was choſen Archbiſhop of Canterbury in 1348. by a Chapter of that Church, two ſeveral times; for the King of England and the Pope, having preferred John Ufford the firſt time before him, he was not conſecrated; but this laſt dying a little time after, he was choſen a ſecond time, and his Election being confirmed by the Pope, and approved by the King, he was conſecrated at Avignon by Cardinal Bertrandus; but he died within forty Days after his Ordination, and before he had taken Poſſeſſion of his Archbiſhoprick.

This Author, ſirnamed the profound Doctor, compoſed a large Work intitled, The Cauſe of God, and the Truth of Cauſes againſt Pelagius, publiſhed by Sir H. Savil, and printed at London in 1618. in which he ſtrongly maintains the Principles of St. Auguſtine and St. Thomas, concerning the Operation and Power of God over the Actions of his Creatures. Some attribute to him alſo a Treatiſe of Geometry and Arithmetick, viz. a Treatiſe of Proportions, printed at Venice in 1505. A Treatiſe of ſpeculative Arithmetick, printed at Paris in 1502. and a Treatiſe of Geometry, printed at Paris in 1512. and 1530.

Bradwardin in his Work [De Cauſſâ Dei, &c.] does not only treat of Liberty and Predeſtination, but alſo of the Exiſtence of God; his Perfections, Eternity, Immutability, Immenſity and other Attributes, particularly his Knowledge, Power and Will. He ſhews that God preſerves all Beings that he hath created; that he doth all things immediately, that are done by his Creatures; that his Will is effectual, invincible, and immutable; that all that he wills, infallibly comes to paſs; that the things which he knows are not the Cauſe of his Knowledge, but his Will. He explains in what Senſe God wills, or wills not Sin. He proves the Neceſſity of Grace againſt Pelagius, and ſhews that it is gratis given, and that Man deſerves not the firſt Grace; that it is the immediate Cauſe of all good Actions, and principally of Repentance. He holds Predeſtination to be gratuitous, and rejects the middle Knowledge. Theſe are the chief Points he treats of in his firſt Book. His ſecond Book is upon Free-will: He affirms, that it conſiſts not in being able to will, or not will the ſame thing, but in a Power of willing freely all that we ought to chooſe, and willing all that we ought not to chooſe. He ſhews that no ſecond Cauſe can neceſſitate the Will, but that the Free-will cannot conquer Temptations without the ſpecial Aſſiſtance of God, which is nothing elſe, but his invincible Will; that without this Help, no Man can avoid Sin; that Perſeverance is the Effect of Grace: Laſtly, he explains the Co-operation of Man's Will with God's. He affirms, that God hinders not Liberty, though he cauſes a kind of Neceſſity. He treats of ſeveral Kinds of Neceſſity and Contingence, and recites ſeveral Opinions of Philoſophers and Divines about the Contingency of things, which he numbers as far as 33. and concludes, that all future things happen by one kind of Neceſſity, with relation to ſuperior Cauſes, which agrees nevertheleſs with Liberty; but that it is not abſolute, natural, violent, or forced. He concludes his Works with a brief Recital of the Errors which he hath oppoſed, and the Truths he hath eſtabliſhed, which he hath reduced to 36 Propoſitions.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors which flouriſhed in the Fourteenth Age.

Albericus de Roſate.

Albericus de Roſate, or Roxiati, born in Bergamo, a Lawyer, flouriſhed about 1350. He hath compoſed a Commentary upon the ſixth Book of the Decretals, printed in the Collection of the Treatiſes of famous Lawyers made at Venice in 1584. A Dictionary of the Civil and Canon Law, printed at Venice in 1573. and 1601. and ſome other Treatiſes of Civil Law.

Petrus de Paternis.

Petrus de Paternis, an Hermite of the Order of St. Auguſtine, flouriſhed about 1350. and wrote a Work of the Neceſſity and Sufficiency of the human Life, which is found in MS. in Mr. Colbert's Library, Cod. 1517. with a Treatiſe againſt the Jews, Cod. 978.

Petrus de Clara Valle.

Petrus de Clara Valle, writ ſeveral little Works about the Reformation of Manners; and among others, an Epiſtle in the Name of Jeſus Chriſt to Pope Innocent VI. dated 1353. A Letter from Lucifer to the Worldlings, dated 1351. and a Treatiſe of the Power of the Pope, which are in MS. in Mr. Colbert's Library, Cod. 1502.

Richard Fitz-Ralph.

Richard Fitz-Ralph, that is to ſay, the Son of Ralph, born at Dundalke in Ireland: He was firſt Archdeacon of Lichfield, then Chancellor of Oxford, about 1333. and afterwards raiſed to the Dignity of Archbiſhop of Armagh, in 1347. He made War with the Begging-Friars; and not only preached againſt them in England, but when they complained of him to the Pope, he went himſelf on purpoſe to Avignon in 1357. to maintain what he had aſſerted, and to demand of Pope Innocent VI. a Revocation of their Privileges, and to complain of the Attempts they made upon the Rights of Biſhops and Cures. The Pope minded him, and appointed Commiſſioners; but he died December 16. 1360. before he had finiſhed this Buſineſs. An ancient Author who wrote the Life of Innocent VI. obſerves, That the Begging-Friars rejoyced much at his Death, and that they rather ſung a Gaudeamus, than a Requiem at it.

He wrote two Treatiſes againſt the Begging-Friars; the one intitled, A Defence of the Curates againſt the Mendicants; and the other, Of ſuch as are to hear Confeſſions, De audientia Confeſſionum; this laſt is in MS. only, the firſt is in the Collection of Goldaſtus, and has been printed ſeveral times at Paris, viz. in 1496, 1525, and 1623. from a MS. of the Library of St. Victor. We have alſo a Summ of this Authors againſt the Errors of the Arminians, printed at Paris in 1511. and in 1612. and four Sermons in Praiſe of the Virgin, preached at London in 1356. printed with the former Work. His other Sermons and Summ upon the Sentences are in MS. in England. Some ſay, he has tranſlated the Bible into the Iriſh Tongue.

His Treatiſe for the Defence of Curates, is nothing but a Diſcourſe which he made before the Conſiſtory of the Pope and Cardinals at Avignon, Nov. 8. 1357. which has for the Text theſe Words of St. John Chap. 7. Judge not according to appearance, but judge righteous Judgment. He proteſts in the Beginning, that he had no Intention to deliver any thing againſt the Doctrine of the Church, nor did deſire the Deſtruction of the Begging-Friars; but only their Settlement in their ancient Purity. Then he relates the Subject and Occaſion of the Conteſt he had with them in the Manner following. He ſays, That being at London, he met with ſome Doctors who diſputed among themſelves about the begging Condition of Jeſus Chriſt and his Apoſtles; and being invited to preach upon that Subject, he had laid down nine Concluſions in ſeven or eight Sermons; which had given occaſion to the Begging-Friars to bring a frivolous Accuſation againſt him. The firſt of theſe Concluſions was this, That Jeſus Chriſt was poor in his Life, becauſe he was born in it; not that he loved, or choſe Poverty. The ſecond was, That Jeſus Chriſt never voluntarily begged. The third, that he never taught Men to beg voluntarily. The fourth, that he taught the contrary. The fifth, that no Man ought to make a Vow always to live in a voluntary Poverty. The ſixth, that the Rule of the Grey-Friars does not oblige them to a voluntary Poverty. The ſeventh, that the Bull of Alexander IV. who condemned the Books of the Doctors of Paris, is not contrary to any of theſe Concluſions. The eighth, that we ought rather to confeſs in our Pariſh-Churches, than in the Chappels of the Begging-Friars. The ninth, that it is better to confeſs to the Biſhop, than Monks. He begins his Apology with theſe two laſt Propoſitions, and proves them by Principles of Law. In it he ſhews, that according to the Canon, Omnis utriuſq; Sexus, all Chriſtians are obliged to confeſs their Sins once in a Year to their own Curate; that the pretended Privileges of the Begging-Friars are Abuſes, contrary to their Inſtitution and Ruſe, and are more prejudicial to them than advantageous. Then he proves his other Concluſions concerning Begging. This Diſcourſe is followed with a Memoir, which he preſented to the four Cardinals, to anſwer the Reaſons which the Begging-Friars alledged to juſtifie their Opinion concerning Begging, and another Writing preſented to the ſame Cardinals, againſt the Abuſes committed by the Begging-Friars in their Preaching, Confeſſions, Celebration of their Prayers, &c.

Sins

Robert Conway.

Goldaſtus hath joined to his Defence of Curates, an Anſwer made by Roger Chonoe, or Robert Conway, a Grey-Friar, who lived at the ſame time, concerning Confeſſions made to Begging-Friars. The ſame Author alſo confuted him in his Opinion about Poverty in three Queſtions; which Waddingus ſaw in MS. He died at London in 1360. His Work doth not equal Richard's either in Solidity, or Eloquence.

Mr. Baluzius hath alſo two Treatiſes, MSS. of Richard's, the one of Begging and the Privileges of Friars, and the other, A Reply to the Work of Robert Conway. In the firſt he takes notice, that he had already compoſed ſeven Books of the Poverty of our Saviour; and in the ſecond he mentions an Anſwer to the Book of Father John de Terinis. He alſo obſerves in the Continuation of Radulphus of Cheſter, that he had alſo compoſed ſeveral good Sermons.

Gregorius Ariminenſis.

Gregorius Ariminenſis, or de Arimino, an Hermit of St. Auſtine, of which Order he was choſen General May 24. 1357. flouriſhed in the Univerſity of Paris. He hath left a Commentary upon the firſt and ſecond Book of the Sentences, printed at Valence in 1500. at Venice in 1503. Additions to that Work, printed at Venice in 1522. Commentaries upon the Epiſtles of St. Paul, and upon the Canonical Epiſtle of St. James, with a Book about Uſury, printed at Ariminum in 1522. He died in 1358. at Vienna in Auſtria. Authors ſay, that he alſo made Sermons upon the whole Year.

Thomas de Strasburg.

Thomas de Strasburg, an Hermit of St. Auſtine, was choſen their General in 1345. and died at Vienna in Auſtria in 1357. He is the Author of a Commentary upon the four Books of the Maſter of the Sentences, printed at Strasburg in 1490. and at Venice in 1564. and at Geneva in 1585. Trithemius alſo relates, That this Author made a Book upon the Conſtitutions of his Order. There was another Thomas de Strasburg, a Friar-Preacher, who flouriſhed about the End of the 15th Century, who compoſed ſome Sermons, Meditations, Letters and Queſtions, which ſome attribute to the former.

Adam Goddam.

Adam Goddam, or Wodham, an Engliſhman, a Grey-Friar, who is ordinarily called, Anglicus, flouriſhed in England from 1330. and died 1358. He compoſed a Commentary upon the Books of the Sentences, printed at Paris in 1512.

Ralph Higden.

Radulphus, or Ralph Higden, or Hikeden, a Benedictine Monk of Cheſter, is the Author of a large hiſtorical Work, intitled, Polycronicon, from the Creation of the World to the Year 1357. which was tranſlated into Engliſh in 1397. by John de Treviſi, and continued in Latin by John Malverne, a Monk of Winchеſter, who alſo compoſed a Treatiſe of Viſions about the Year 1342. There are Abundance of MSS. of the Original of this Polychronicon in the Libraries of England, and a Verſion printed in 1482. by William Caxton the firſt Printer in England, with a Continuation to 1460. Higden alſo compoſed ſome Theological Diſtinctions, The Mirror of Curates, a Commentary upon Job and the Canticles, and ſome Sermons. He died in 1363. having lived a Monaſtick Life 64 Years.

Joannes Thaulerus

Joannes Thaulerus, a German, a Dominican of Cologne, was one of the famouſeſt Preachers of his Time; Surius has tranſlated his Sermons into Latin, and cauſed them to be printed at Cologne in 1548. with ſome other ſmall Treatiſes of Piety gathered from the Writings of Thauler, and ſome others. They have been alſo printed in the ſame City in 1572. and 1603. This Author died in 1361. May 17. There is a great deal of Piety in his Works.

Petrus Bercherius

Petrus Bercherius, a Native of Poictiers, a Benedictine Monk, and Prior of St. Eligius at Paris, died there in 1362. He compoſed a moral Dictionary of all the Bible, which contains the principal Words of the Bible, with moral Reflections on them. His moral Reductory of the Bible, in which he rehearſes all the Hiſtories in a moral Senſe, and his moral Inductory divided into three Parts, have been printed at Paris in 1521. in four Volumes (which is the beſt Edition) at Baſil the ſame Year, at Venice in 1583. and 1589. in three Volumes, and at Cologne in 1620. alſo in three Volumes.

Barnard Dapifer.

Bernardus Dapifer, a Monk of Melch in Auſtria, wrote about 1360. the Hiſtory of St. Gotholinus, publiſhed by Lambecius in Tome II. of his Biblioth. Vindob. p. 618.

Joannes Calderinus

Joannes Calderinus, a Lawyer of Bononia, the Scholar and adopted Son of Joannes Andreæ, flouriſhed about 1360. and has left us divers Works of Civil and Canon Law, and among others, his Commentaries upon the Decretals, which were never printed. A Treatiſe of Eccleſiaſtical Interdicts printed at Venice in 1584. A Table of all the Paſſages of Scripture, cited in the Decretals printed in 1481. at Spires. His Councils printed at Lyons in 1536. and at Venice in 1582. and his Repetitions of Civil Law, printed at Lyons in 1587.

Bartholomew de Glanvil.

Bartholomew de Glanvil, an Engliſhman, of the Family of the Earls of Suffolk, a Grey-Friar, applied himſelf to ſearch after, and diſcover the Morals hidden under the outward Appearance of natural Things, of which he compoſed a large Work divided into nineteen Books; The firſt is, of God; the ſecond, of Angels and Devils; the third, of the Soul; the fourth, of the Body; and the reſt of the other Creatures: And ſome Perſon hath added a twentieth, of Accidents; as Numbers, Meaſures, Weights, Sounds, &c. A Treatiſe of the Properties of Bees. This Work hath been printed at Nuremberg in 1492. at Strasburg in 1505. and at Paris in 1574. under the Title of Allegories, and Tropes upon the Old and New Teſtament. We have ſome Sermons printed under the Name of this Author at Strasburg in 1495. He flouriſhed about the Year 1360.

Alphonſus Vargas.

Alphonſus Vargas, a Native of Toledo, an Hermit of the Order of St. Auſtine, after he had profeſſed Philoſophy and Divinity in the Univerſity of Paris ten Years, was made Biſhop of Badajos, and then of Oſma; and laſtly, Archbiſhop of Seville, where he died Decem. 26. 1366. as ſome relate; but Octob. 13. 1359. as others. He compoſed a Commentary upon the firſt Book of the Sentences, printed at Venice in 1490. and ſome Queſtions upon the three Books of Ariſtotle, De Animâ. [i. e. Of the Soul] printed at Venice in 1566 and at Vincentia in 1608.

Matthew de Craco-via.

Matthew, or Matthias de Cracovia, a Pole, Profeſſor of Divinity at Prague, and a Friend of St. Bridget's, flouriſhed about 1370. Trithemius attributes theſe following Works to him; A Treatiſe of Predeſtination, by way of Dialogue between Father and Son, which he intitles, A Rationale of the Divine Works; a Treatiſe of Contracts, a Work about the Celebration of the Maſs, and ſome Letters. There is in a College-Library at Cambridge in England, a Treatiſe of this Author's, intitled, The Conflict between Reaſon and Conſcience about receiving the Body of Jeſus Chriſt, or abſtaining from it.

Gallus.

Gallus, a German, a Ciſtertian Monk, and Abbot of the Monaſtery of Konigſaal near Prague, compoſed a Book, which he calls, Pomegranade, in the Form of a Dialogue between Father and Son, for the Inſtruction of his Monks. It is divided into three Books: In the firſt of which, he treats of the State of the Beginners; in the ſecond, of the State of Improvers; and in the third, of the State of the Perfect: A Work full of Ingenuity, and of great Uſe for Monks, as Trithemius hath obſerved. It was printed in Germany in 1481. Trithemius ſays, he compoſed ſome Sermons for the uſe of his Monks. He flouriſhed about the Year 1370.

Henry.

Henry, or Henricus, a German Monk of Rebdorfe, hath compoſed certain Annals, which contain the Hiſtory of the Emperors, Adolphus, Albert I. Frederick III. Lewis of Bavaria, and Charles IV. from the Year 1295. to the Year 1372. they are publiſhed by Marquardus Freherus, in his Collection of German Hiſtorians, printed at Francfort in 1600. Tom. I. p. 411.

Hugolinus Malebranchius.

Hugolinus Malebranchius, an Hermit of St. Auguſtine, a Doctor of Paris, and the Succeſſor of Gregorius Ariminenſis in his Divinity Chair, was choſen General of his Order in 1368. made Biſhop of Ariminum by Urban V. in 1370. and laſt of all dignified with the Title of Patriarch of Conſtantinople, has compoſed Commentaries upon the Books of the Sentences, a Treatiſe of the Trinity, and another of the Communication of Idioms; which are yet in MS. in the Libraries of the Auguſtine Friars at Bononia and Cremona. He was alive in the Year 1372.

Thomas Stubbs.

Thomas Stobæus, or Stubbs, an Engliſhman of Yorkſhire, a Preaching Friar, wrote the Lives, or a Chronicle of the Archbiſhops of York, from the Foundation of that See to the Year 1373. This Chronicle was printed at London in 1652. with other Engliſh Hiſtorians. The Authors, that ſpeak of him, attribute to him ſeveral Books of Divinity, which have never yet been publiſhed.

S. Bridget.

St. Bridget, a Princeſs of the Family of the Kings of Sweden, the Wife of Wulfo, Prince of Nericia, after ſhe had had ſeven Children by her Husband, engaged him to become a Ciſtertian Monk, in the Monaſtery of Alvaſtra, where he died a little after. Then ſhe inſtituted the Order of St. Saviour, and gave it a Rule, as if ſhe had received it from Jeſus Chriſt himſelf. She undertook to go into the Holy Land, and after ſhe had travelled there ſome Years, ſhe came to die at Rome, July 23. 1373. She was canonized by Boniface IX. in 1391. and her Canonization was confirmed by the Council of Conſtance. This Sainteſs was famous for her Revelations, which are reduced into eight Books; beſides ſeveral which are added ſince to that Collection. She wrote ſome Sermons, one about the Excellency of the Virgin Mary dictated by an Angel, and four others, which ſhe aſſures us, were revealed to her, as her Rule was; which ſhe affirmed to be dictated to her by the Mouth of Jeſus Chriſt. Theſe Works are printed at Lubeck in 1492. at Nuremberg in 1521. at Rome in 1557. and 1628. at Antwerp in 1611. at Colen in 1628. and at Munick in 1680.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors which flouriſhed in the Fourteenth Age.

S. Katharine of Sienna.

At the ſame time flouriſhed St. Katharine of Sienna, who is not leſs famous for her Revelations, than St. Bridget; ſhe was born in 1347. vowed Virginity at eight Years old, and a little time after took the Habit of a Dominican. She was very ingenious, wrote very well, and was very charitable and zealous. She adviſed Gregory XI. to return to Rome, followed him thither, remained after his Death under the Obedience of Urban VI. and died April 30. 1380. She was canonized by Pius II. in 1461. She wrote ſeveral Letters in Italian to the Pope, to the Cardinals, Kings and Princes, which are gathered into one Volume containing 364 Letters, and are printed in Italian at Venice in 1506, 1548, and 1584. and tranſlated into French at Paris in 1644. There are alſo ſix Treatiſes of hers in form of a Dialogue, concerning the Providence of God, printed at Ingoldſtadt in 1583. at Colen 1601. and at Venice in 1611. a Diſcourſe upon the Annunciation of the Virgin, and ſome others tranſlated into Latin by Raymundus de Vineis, a Dominican Monk of Capua, her Confeſſor, printed at Ingolſtadt in 1583. and a Treatiſe tranſlated, or compoſed by the ſame Perſon, intitled, The Divine Doctrine delivered by the Eternal Father ſpeaking to the Spirit, printed at Colen in 1553.

N. B. The Revelations of St. Bridget and St. Katharine, tho' admir'd by the Church of Rome, are Enthuſiaſtick and meer Dotages.

Matthew Florilegus.

Matthæus Florilegus, a Benedictine Monk of Weſtminſter, flouriſhed about 1377. He compoſed certain Annals from the Beginning of the World to the Year 1307. which he names, The Flowers of Hiſtory, printed at London in 1567. and at Francfort in 1601. He copies out Matthew Paris only in his firſt Part; Bale ſays, That he continued his Annals to the Year 1377. and compoſed the Chronicles of the Monaſteries of Weſtminſter and St Edmond's-Bury.

Albert de Strasburg.

Albertus de Strasburg, or de Argentina, made Ambaſſador by the Biſhop of that City, to go to the Pope at Avignon, made a Chronicle from the Empire of Rodolphus of Habſperg to the Death of Charles IV. i. e. from 1270. to the Year 1378. Cuſpinian publiſhed a part of it, printed at Baſil in 1553. and in 1569. but Urſtiſius ſince has put it out entire in his Collection of German Hiſtorians printed at Francfort in 1585. Tom. 2. p. 97. This Author alſo wrote the Life of Bartholdus de Bucheke, Biſhop of Strasburg and Spires, from the Year 1328. to the Year 1353. publiſhed by Urſtiſius, and printed by it ſelf at Baſil in 1553. and in 1566.

John Schadland.

Joannes Schadland, a German of the Order of the Friars-Preachers, firſt Biſhop of Culme in Poland, then of Hildeſheim, and laſtly, as ſome ſay, of Wormes; died in 1377. He compoſed a Treatiſe of the Eſtate of the Cardinals, which is in MS. in Mr. Colbert's Library, Cod. 289. He made that Work at the Deſire of Petrus de Prato, and began to compoſe it, when that Cardinal died; he intitles it, Culmenſis, becauſe (as he renders the reaſon) the State of the Cardinals may be called Culmenſis à Culmine, i. e. From the Top of Dignity and Virtue; and the Cardinals may be called Culmenſes, from their Sublimity of Virtue; and the Writer was Culmenſis Epiſcopus, i. e. Biſhop of Culmi: He had been Inquiſitor of the Faith in Germany, as he ſays, in ſeveral places. He tells us in that Work, That in that time he had burnt ſeveral Hereticks, which aſſerted, That the Church of Rome had loſt the Keys of St. Peter, ſince it poſſeſſed great worldly Revenues; that the Popes and Cardinals were covetous, ambitious and voluptuous, to whom Jeſus Chriſt had not committed the Church his Spouſe; but to the truly Poor, full of Humility, and Contemners of this World, among whom the Church reſides. He alſo compoſed a Treatiſe of the Dignity and State of Biſhops.

Nicholas Oreſmius.

Nicholas Oreſmius, or Oreſme, a Norman, a Doctor of Divinity of the Faculty of Paris, and of the School of Navarre, of which he was made Governor in 1356. and choſe by King John Maſter for his Son; who was after Charles V. ſirnamed the Wiſe. He was appointed Treaſurer of the holy Chappel in 1361. and afterwards Dean of the Chapter at Roan, and then left his Government of Navarre. He was ſent in 1363. to Urban V. and made a Diſcourſe before the Pope and his Cardinals; in which he ſpeaks boldly againſt the Irregularities of the Court of Rome. This Book is printed in a Book put out by Fl. Illyricus, intitled, A Catalogue of the Witneſſes of the Truth; and is publiſhed alone by Geſner, in the Edition of Wittemberg in 1604. He alſo made another Diſcourſe about the Change of Money, in which he declaims againſt thoſe Princes that coin Money, which is not full Weight; and ſhews that Princes have not a Power to change the Money when they pleaſe, and ſet what Value they pleaſe upon it. This Treatiſe is printed in Tom. IX. of the Bibliotheca Patrum, at Paris in 1589. and in the twenty ſixth of the laſt Edition. He tranſlated the Bible in French, by the Order of Charles V. and compoſed ſeveral other Tranſlations of prophane Authors [as Ariſtotle's Ethicks and Politicks; ſome Parts of Tully, and Petrarch's Book, De Remediis utriuſq; fortunæ.] There are ſeveral other Works of this Author in MS. in the Libraries of Navarre, Mr. Colbert, and others; among which are 115 Sermons. A Treatiſe of the Communication of Idioms; of the Affirmation, De omni, in reſpect to Divinity; three Treatiſes againſt Judiciary Aſtrology; the Art of Preaching; a Treatiſe of Antichriſt, and his Miniſters, and the Signs which ſhall foreſhew him; a Writing againſt the Begging-Friars; and ſeveral other Treatiſes of Philoſophy, of which we may ſee a Catalogue in the Hiſtory of Navarre, put out by Mr. Launoy, Tom. II. p. 455, &c. Oreſmius was Biſhop of Liſieux in 1377. and died ſeven Years after in 1384. He was buried in his Cathedral Church on the Left-ſide of the Choir.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors which flouriſhed in the Fourteenth Age.

Robert Gervais.

Robert Gervais, born in the Dioceſs of Niſmes, a Friar-Preacher, was made Biſhop of Senes by Urban V. in 1369. hath compoſed in 1388. a Treatiſe of Schiſm againſt John de Lignano and Baldus, who defended Bartholemew de Bari, which is in MS. in Mr. Colbert's Library, Cod 2761. and another Treatiſe, intitled, The Royal Mirror; publiſhed about the Beginning of the Reign of Charles VI. which is in MS. in the ſame Library.

Jordanus Saxo.

Jordanus Saxo, or de Saxonia, ſirnamed Quedlinburgenſis, an Hermit of St. Auguſtine, flouriſhed about the Middle this Age, and died in 1380. He wrote a Summ of Sermons for all the Sundays in the Year, printed at Strasburg in 1483. and Sermons for all the Saints Days, printed at Paris in 1521. He alſo wrote a Treatiſe of the Four Communions, neceſſary for them that profeſs a Monaſtick Life, and a Collection of divers Pieces for the Hermits of St. Auguſtine, viz. Twenty two Sermons for the Friars Hermits, attributed to St. Auguſtine, and ſome others. The Rules of the ſame Saints, and the Life of St. Monica, taken out of his Works. Theſe two Treatiſes are in MS. in the Library of the great Auguſtines at Paris. Some alſo attribute to Jordanus, a Chronicle of the Tranſlation of the Roman Empire to the Germans, printed at Baſil in 1559. Trithemius makes mention of a Commentary of this Author's upon the Revelation, and an Apology for his Order.

Philip Caballolas.

Philip Caballolas, of Cavaillon in Provence, Canon, Archdeacon, Provoſt, and laſtly, Biſhop of that City in 1334. made Chancellor to Joanna Queen of Sicily, by her Husband Robert, in 1343. and after ſent upon ſeveral Embaſſages, honoured with the Dignity of Patriarch of Jeruſalem in 1366. and charged with the Care of the Biſhoprick of Marſeilles the ſame Year, appointed Legate to the Pope at Avignon the following Year; and laſtly, created Cardinal-Prieſt of the Title of St. Peter and St. Marcellinus, Sept. 22. by Urban V. the ſame Year, and privileged in 1370. with the Tittle of St. Sabina, died in 1382. Aug. 27. There are in the Library of St. Victor, two Books of the Life and Miracles of St. Mary Magdalene, which bear the Name of this Cardinal.

Gerhardus Groot.

Gerhardus Magnus, or Groot, of the City of Deventer, ſtudied Divinity at Paris, and obtained a Cap at the Age of eighteen Years, returning into his Country, he was made Canon of Utrecht and Aix-la-Chapelle; but he left his Benefices to eſtabliſh at Deventer the Clerks, or Friars of the Community for the Inſtruction of Youth. He died Auguſt 20. 1384. in the 44th Year of his Age. He compoſed divers ſmall Tracts, of which there are only three printed among the Works of Thomas à Kempis; which are, A Declaration of the manner of Preaching with Truth; ſome Concluſions and Propoſitions. Of the Study of the Holy Scriptures. His other ſmall Works are found in the Libraries in Flanders. Albertus Miræus gives us this Catalogue of them. Some Treatiſes of Contracts and Uſury; of the Inſtruction of Novices; of the Reward of a Paſtor's Labour; the Inconveniences of Marriage; De Focariis, againſt the Encompaſſing of Utrecht; Of Poverty; of the four ſorts of things, which are fit Subjects of Meditation; of Detraction; ſome Sermons upon the Nativity of our Saviour, on the Sunday, called Dominica in Ramis, or Palm-Sunday, and on other Subjects; a Letter about Schiſm, and ſome others; of Simony; of Benefices with Cure; of the Company and Exerciſes of the Devout; of the Agreement of the Evangeliſts about the Paſſion of our Saviour; A Commentary upon the Leſſons read at the Burial of the Dead; A Treatiſe of Compunction, and the Inſtruction of Scholars. 'Tis to be hoped, that theſe Works will be ſhortly publiſhed.

Petrus de Natalibus.

Petrus de Natalibus, Biſhop of Jeſol in the Province of Grado, has compoſed a Catalogue of Saints to May 26. 1382. printed at Strasburg 1502. [at Lyons 1542. Dr. Cave places this Author in 1470. and ſays, he brings down his Catalogue of Saints to 1482. which if true, our Author is under a Miſtake.]

Joannes

The Lives and Writings of the Authors which flourished in the Fourteenth Age.

Joannes Ruysbrokius.

Joannes Ruysbrokius, or de Rusbroek, a Village upon the River Senna, between Brussels and Hall, a Priest of Brussels, and first Prior of the Monastery of Canons-Regular of Wavre in the Forest of Soigni, was one of the most eminent Monks of his time, and upon that Account sirnamed, The Divine, or Contemplative Doctor: He died Dec. 2. 1381. in the 88th Year of his Age. He composed in Dutch several mystical Works, which are translated into Latin by Surius, who caused them to be printed at Colen in 1552. and 1609. The Titles of them are as follow: The Summ of a Spiritual Life; The Mirror of Eternal Salvation; A Commentary upon the Tabernacle of Moses, and all its Parts; A Treatise of the Cardinal Virtues; A little Book of Faith and the last Judgment; A Treatise of the four Temptations; Of the Works of the seven Vigils; Of the Spiritual School; Of the seven Degrees of Love; three Books of the Spiritual Marriage; Of the Perfection of the Sons of God; The Reign of the Lovers of God; A Treatise of Contemplation; and seven Letters of Piety; two Spiritual Songs; Samuel, or of deep Contemplation; A short Prayer. The Treatise of Spiritual Marriages has been opposed by Gerson, because in it Ruysbrokius says, that the Soul, which contemplates God fully, becomes one with God himself; Gerson thought this Doctrine erroneous and condemned in Amaury; John de Schonawe undertook the Defence of Ruisbroek, and made an Apology for him; and Gerson afterward asserts, that he can't be excused, because he has said in another place, That the Creature shall never lose its Essence; but he maintains that the Words he cited out of the third part, are apt not only to lead the simple, but more understanding Persons into Error, and he observes that Contemplative Persons are very apt to advance Errors and it is not fit that they should either teach or write without much Precaution, and unless their Works be examined by learned Men; for otherwise their Books are full ordinarily of Falsities, and corrupt Explications, which often mislead the simple.

Philip de Leyde.

Philip de Leyde, or de Leydis an Hollander, made Doctor of Law at Orleans, and Professor at Paris, was afterward Canon of S. Mary de Conde, and lastly, Canon and Grand-Vicar of Utrecht, where he died June 8. 1386. He wrote a Treatise of the Care of a Commonwealth, and the Lot of Sovereigns, published by Joannes Severinus, and printed at Leyden in 1516. He also composed some Lectures upon the third Book of the Decretals.

Bonaventure.

Bonaventure of Padua, an Hermit of S. Augustine, a Doctor of Paris, and chosen General of his Order in 1377. was made Cardinal-Priest of the Title of S. Cecilia, by Urban VI. in September in the next Year. Francis Carrara Governor of Padua, caused him to be murdered in Rome in 1388. The Mirror of the Virgin Mary, printed at Augsburg in 1476. is attributed to him; As also a Commentary upon the four Books of the Sentences, and some Meditations upon the Life of Jesus Christ; which some say are printed in Germany. Some say, that he composed a Commentary upon the Canonical Epistles of S. James and S. John. Trithemius attributes to him no more, than some Sermons for the Year, and upon the Saints Days.

John de Bourg.

John de Bourg, or Joannes de Burgo, an Englishman, Chancellor of the University of Cambridge, and Rector of the Town of Collingham in Nottinghamshire, composed in 1385. a Treatise, Intitled, the Apple of the Eye, for Priests; in which he treats of the Administration of Sacraments, the Ten Commandments, and other Ecclesiastical Offices, printed at Paris in 1510. at Strasburg in 1514. and at Roan in 1516.

Philip Riborr.

Philip Ribott, a Spaniard of Catalonia, a Carmelite of Gironne, was Provincial of his Order in 1368. and died in 1391. He composed a Work, Intituled, A Looking-Glass for the Carmelites, divided into ten Books, in which he treats of the Beginning, Progress, Privileges, and History of his own Order, which was printed at Venice in 1507. and at Antwerp in 1680. He also wrote a Treatise of the famous Men of his Order, and some Sermons.

Jacobus de Teramo.

Jacobus de Teramo in Abruzzo, [a Province in Italy] Canon of the same Church, and Archdeacon of Aversa, composed about the Year 1390. a Commentary upon the Sentences, and a Book upon the Redemption of Mankind, Intituled, the Consolation of Sinners; These two Works are only in MS. in the Libraries of England. Trithemius also observes, that this Author also wrote upon the Clementines.

Guido. d'Eureux.

Guido d'Eureux, a Friar-Preacher, composed in 1390. some Sermons, and a Rule for Merchants; which Works are found in MS. in some Libraries.

Aug. d'Ascoli.

Augustinus d'Ascoli, an Hermit of S. Augustine, flourished about the End of this Year in the University of Padua, and made some Sermons, which are yet preserved in MS. in the Libraries of the Augustin-Monks at Bononia, Padua, and Cremona.

Henry Boich.

Henry Boich, Dr. of Law in the Diocess of S. Paul of Leon in Britain, flourished at the End of this Age, and composed a Commentary upon the five Books of the Decretals, upon the sixth, and upon the Clementines, printed at Venice in 1576. and are in MS. in the Library at the Cathedral Church at Cambray.

The Lives and Writings of the Authors which flourished in the Fourteenth Age.

Simon de Cremona, an Hermit of S. Augustine, flourished and preached a long time at Venice, in the latter End of this Age. He composed some Commentaries upon the Mr. of Sentences; A Treatise of the Indulgence of Assisi; and several Sermons. These Works are in MS. in the Libraries of the Augustin-Friars in Italy, with a Postill upon the Gospels of the Year, printed at Ruthlingen in 1484. He died in 1400.

Simon de Cremona.

Peter Quesnel.

